METHODOLOGY

Methodology is experiential, process-based: It involves active participation. All along there is an interactive integration between theory and practice.

The ways of working are a varied set including practical exercises, interaction in different types of groups, moments of reflection and discernment and integration spaces.

The on-going experience of the participants in their congregations is the basis for learning and reflection. Knowing that members of international councils are usually extremely busy, the programme aims to support them in better developing the service they are called upon to offer.

WHAT SOME PARTICIPANTS IN THE 2021 PROGRAMME SAY

I will surely recommend this programme because it equips one to face the work as Superior General or as Councillor. It is a very good process to help discern and deal with our fellow members. We never stop learning new things!

For me it was very powerful...and the staff is a beautiful example of how to work together with respect. Also, because the goals of the programme were achieved. There are really many things important to recommend :)

I would highly recommend the ILDP to other general leadership teams. The modules covered a broad range of relevant topics and we received a variety of tools that will be helpful both now and in the future. The programme helped our team to see where we were on the right track as well as areas we need to work on. What was important is that we all experienced the programme together, and so came away with a common understanding and a desire to grow as a team as well as a "common language" to talk about different issues. Interacting with members of other general councils was also a gift. It allowed us to see that we all have similar struggles, but also to learn from each other.

I would recommend the programme because I have seen how it has helped our team. Personally, I have grown, and our team too is growing. Some issues that were bringing tensions among us were clarified and were resolved as we followed the session and participated in the mutual sharing in the group and in plenary sessions.

I would recommend this programme for the open-mindedness it creates in our understanding of leadership. Not only does it offer us a new way of understanding ourselves in our service, but it also offers us tools with which to experience the power of this new way of looking at things. I think it is a very good opportunity to get to know ourselves within the councils and to propose a new style of team and work. I would also recommend it for the richness of the groups we meet. Learning from each other, accompanying each other in the process of searching for new paths, showing solidarity in our vulnerability... This is a great gift that the programme also gives us.

The programme is a great help in becoming aware of our service in the General Government and how we can take it on with joy and serenity, enabling us to be more effective in what we do and to become more contemplative.
