7. If someone entitled to vote is absent when the voting is taking place, this will not in any way invalidate the vote.
8. One may count the votes where people are sitting when a majority of votes is clearly indicated; nevertheless, each one has the right to call for a secret ballot if he deems it necessary.
9. When the debate is taking place, the Chapter members will endeavour to proceed calmly, without bias, avoiding sharp, insensitive disagreement and any words not in keeping with religious decorum, and the respect and considerateness which is to be mutually expected.
10. At the end of each general session, the day and time of the next session will be announced as well as the content and sequence of the issues to be dealt with.

III. Conclusion

1. When the Chapter is over, all will go to the Oratory for the Te Deum in thanksgiving, intoned by the president, followed by an appropriate prayer verse. Next there's Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.
2. The secretaries will take note of all the decisions which have been taken and which will then be forwarded to the Holy See.

D 18910108

Undated; likely the first day of the Chapter

Most Holy Father,

The Very Reverend Superior General and the gathered members of the General Chapter of the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, Issoudun, France, by decree dated December 18, 1890, from the Very Reverend Jules Chevalier, founder and Superior General of the said Society, having as aim the text of the Constitutions to be submitted for the Sacred Congregation's definite approval super statu episcoporum et regularium.

Very Reverend Father Jules Chevalier, Founder and Superior General.

Reverend Fathers:

Charles Piperon, First Assistant;
Victor Jouët, Assistant and Procurator General in Rome;
John-Baptiste Guyot, Assistant;
Albert Delaporte, Assistant;
Bishop Couppé, Titular Bishop of Léro and Vicar Apostolic of New Pomerania; François Morisseau, Secretary General;
François-Xavier Maillard, General Bursar;
Célestin Ramot, Superior of the Watertown house, USA;
Xavier Klotz, Superior of the Tilburg house, Holland;
Pierre-Marie Tréand, Superior of the Glastonbury house, England;
Théophile Reyn, Superior of the Antwerp house;
Léopold Hartzler, Superior of the Salzburg house, Austria; humbly prostrate at the feet of Your Holiness present to you what follows:

1. From September 1883 to May 3, 1889, the powers of the Very Reverend Father General were those conferred on him by the General Chapter of 1869, renewed by Apostolic Indult in September 1881 and September 1882 for the course of one year, neither being renewed by General Chapter or by Indult of the Holy See until May 3, 1889. Since this last date, no meeting of the General Council has taken place to revalidate admissions to Novitiate or Religious Profession if they were invalid.
2. In 1889, on May 3, an Indult from the Holy See prolonged Fr. General's powers for a further year, and a similar Indult was granted for 12 years on May 13, 1890. As far as the 1890 application is concerned, two of Father General's Assistants cannot recall if they were consulted about it, although their names appear on the request. As far as that for 1890 is concerned, signed by the Assistants, several members of the Chapter are doubtful about the validity of the motives put forward with regard to the impossibility of having a Chapter since these same considerations still hold at the present time, and yet a Chapter has been called. Then the holding of a Chapter became impossible because of the absence of two of its requisite members on a special mission to Quito in Ecuador. Moreover, this latter Indult was not sent to the Cardinal Protector, Monaco la Valleta, to whom the Sacred Congregation granted the faculty of prolonging Reverend Father General's powers.

3. It has happened more than once that subjects have been accepted either in the novitiate or for profession with the approval of the Superior General, but without the assent of the Assistants, these being, given the problems of the day, the expulsion of religious from France, the dearth of subjects in the Congregation, all being at a distance, and with or without an apostolic indult for the Reverend Fr. Superior General to take charge as Superior in different communities. Our Constitutions state, however, that the authority to accept either for the novitiate or for profession, appertains to the Superior General with the assent of his Assistants.
4. Fr. General, with the approval of his Assistants, has delegated the power of admission to novitiate and profession to different Superiors abroad. Now our Constitutions state that the power to admit to novitiate or profession can, with the agreement of the Assistants, be delegated by the Superior General to Provincials, and that Provinces should, servatis servandis (all things considered), act in keeping with the approval of their councillors (assistants) when accepting anybody for the novitiate and for profession.
5. On a number of occasions, novices, having met the requirements of the year's probation laid down by the Council of Trent, made their vows outside the novitiate house. However, in keeping with certain answers provided by the Sacred Congregation, it appears to be the general law (procedure) that religious profession cannot, under pain of nullity for the vows, take place in a community other than that of the novitiate.
6. In a number of novitiates the Father Masters have not been of the age laid down by the Constitutions; they do not have, as it happens, any indult or rescript from the Holy See.
7. Bishop Couppé, MSC, having been elevated to episcopal dignity, in keeping with what is common law, is no longer within the jurisdiction of the Superior General or of Chapters.
8. Finally, several Novice Masters in our Novitiate have on a number of occasions admitted candidates to the Novitiate who were not yet in possession of their testimonial letters.

From these observations the following doubts arise:

1. Three members of the Chapter made their vows from 1883 to 1889:
     Bishop Couppé on August 26, 1884;
     Fr. Reyn in October, 1884;
     Fr. Delaporte on February 2, 1886.

Have these members the right to be here at the General Chapter enjoying a deliberative role?

2. Fr. Delaporte in his role as Assistant to the Very Rev. Fr. Superior General has taken part in the deliberations of the said Superior General's Council when calling the present Chapter and naming its members. Has the decree calling for the Chapter, and the naming of its members, any validity?
3. Have the aforementioned Novice Masters incurred the pain of indictment from the decree Romani Pontificis of the Sacred Congregation, and are they not deprived of active and passive voice, and their responsibilities as well in the Society?
4. Can Bishop Couppé, despite being titular Bishop and Vicar Apostolic, sit as a member of the Chapter with a deliberative voice?
5. Can the authority of the Very Reverend Father Superior General, as obtained in the circumstances described in number 2 above, be considered legitimate, and under this heading does the decree convoking this present Chapter have any validity?
6. Are the professions described in numbers 1,2,3,4,5,6 above valid?

Since the members gathered for the General Chapter in Issoudun are for the most part Superiors of Communities whose presence is needed in the houses for which they are responsible, and, in consequence, cannot wait on there for the answers to the enquiries which will be given by the Sacred Congregation, they, accordingly, in all humility beg Your Holiness to release from censures those who would have incurred them, validate and approve that which needs to be validated and approved in the above-mentioned issues, as in other-like circumstances which might, perhaps, be so pertinent, granting the Chapter members the right to be there, to take part in the discussions and voting, so acting as if no irregularity had been demonstrated or discovered either in the calling or make-up of this Chapter.

In the light of the foregoing, all the following signed:

The reasons favouring a Superior (General) for life in a male community.

- I. The Church's government itself; the Pope's is a life-time appointment, also Bishops and Parish Priests.
- II. All the male Congregations founded after the Council of Trent have, generally speaking, Superiors for life, such as the Jesuits, the Vincentians, Redemptorists, Passionists, Eudists, Picpus Fathers, Marists, Oblates of Mary Immaculate, the Priests of the Holy Cross, those of Blessed (now St.) Grignon de Montfort, the Assumptionists, Salesians, Oblates of St. Francis de Sales d'Annecy, Troy, the Holy Ghost Fathers, the Sulpicians, the Foreign Missionaries, the Blessed Sacrament Fathers, the Mercy Fathers, etc., etc.
- III.
  1. A life-long Superior has more prestige among his own and, in the view of strangers, exercises greater influence, his authority better respected.
  2. He can have a more accurate and deeper awareness of the Congregation's needs, of the undertakings in which it is engaged, and the religious members it comprises, especially when they are somewhat placed everywhere.
  3. There is time to bring to fruition the worthwhile, even necessary, undertakings involving the Society.
  4. Having a Superior for life one avoids over a long period of time mischievous ambition, scheming groups who are often outrageous or damaging, lasting intrigues to which the prospect of an election of a stated moment can give rise.
  5. A Superior who is not elected for life, and keen to have himself re-elected, will manipulate some and flatter others, close his eyes to abuses, offer unacceptable concessions (favours). And if not re-elected, he will criticize the way in which his successor has been appointed, blame his administration, create his own supporters, and stir up an unhealthy attitude. His successor, in turn, will not, very likely, follow in the steps of him whom he has replaced, putting aside, perhaps, what the other has done, introduce innovations and make changes since, alas, it is rare, very rare, for things not to be so, being a proven fact of experience since human nature is so weak. Hence come complaints and a bad attitude on the part of the supporters of the former régime.

The arguments of those opposed to a life-Superior.

- I. A Superior for life, it is being said, can abuse the great authority with which he is invested either by acting against justice or charity.
  1. Against justice, by making use of the Society's assets to enrich his own (relatives), and receiving presents or gifts, and proceeding to provide unacceptable largesse.
  2. By acting contrary to the charity which he owes to himself in the first instance, abusing his independence by giving himself over to his own tastes, whims, even to his inclinations, thereby giving rise to scandals which redound on the whole Society.
  3. Acting out of keeping with charitableness towards the confrères by being interventionist, nursing certain ill-feelings or enmities, thereby becoming something of a despot.
- II. To all the foregoing my reply is that a Superior General for life has:
  1. his vows of poverty, obedience and chastity by which he is strongly bound;
  2. he has the common and particular regulations;
  3. there are the Assistants who have responsibility for the administration;
  4. his adviser, provided to him by the Chapter, in the person of his first Assistant;

5. recourse to the Holy See; and

6. his dismissal, and even exclusion, from the Society if such a course of action came to be required.

All things considered before God, then, the advantages of having a Superior for life outweigh so much more any disadvantages. For the rest, it is best that it should be so since the vast majority of Congregations founded in particular over the last 3 centuries have Superiors for life.

To the members of the first MSC General Chapter.

Lecture given on or about January 15, 1891, during the General Chapter, and following on, logically, from article 1854 above.

I

In principle, I accept that the centre of Congregations spread, or meant to spread, about the whole world should be in Rome. I agree also that the centre of our Society should by preference be transferred to Rome if it ever happens that in the course of events or unforeseen circumstances it became imperative to move it elsewhere. But I maintain that for the present it should stay where God has placed it, and for the following reasons:

The Lord was free to have the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart founded elsewhere than France and Issoudun. If He has chosen France and Issoudun, He must have had his reasons. Now it is our duty to respect this, so long as the wish is not manifested for it to be elsewhere through a commanding set of circumstances bringing all indecisiveness to an end, and entailing general acceptance of such a kind that one can really and truly say to oneself: Digitus Dei est hic (the finger of God is here).

We have unchallengeable indications, certain signs, if one is not to think of them as miraculous in affect, that God wanted our foundation to be in Issoudun. This fact is undeniable, the documents there to prove it. I would, moreover, go on to say that we can be assured that He still wants us to be in Issoudun if one is to judge by the abundant graces which have not ended and which each day He continues to bestow on us, our work and the Society if we are to judge by the devotion, and the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart whose cradle is at Issoudun. Is it not our Society which from its beginnings has, here in Issoudun, given rise to this wonderful work (the devotion) which has spread about the whole world and looks towards Issoudun?

To move the Mother House from this town would for the time being constitute a virtual calamity, a real disaster from the point of view of our influence, and our financial resources so needed today when facing up to all our expenses, the many needs of the different houses and their deficits. Where does one have recourse in extremely parlous circumstances? To Issoudun, because the France that is generous, which knows that there is to be found the centre of all our undertakings, sends its money to Issoudun. At the present time when we are still building ourselves up, when the majority of our houses have debts weighing on them, let the centre of our Society be placed in Rome and one would see what the generosity of the Italians would be like! One would not find in this respect anything other than a bitter and horribly delusory experience.

II

I hear it being said about me: "The issue is sufficiently clarified: let us vote straightaway to have the centre of the Society in Rome so that this decision of the Chapter can be inserted in the new Constitutions whose definitive approval we are requesting since there will not be time later. Next we can get an Indult for the present Superior who is the Congregation's founder, to remain in Issoudun until his death."

1. I reply that the present Superior loves his Congregation too well to go along with residence in Issoudun if the best interests of the Society demanded that its centre be moved to Rome, or even to the ends of the earth. I reply that the Superior could die any day, and then transferring the Society's centre could take place immediately. One would have to be blind not to see that the consequences of this action would be disastrous from every point of view.

My answer to that would be that in taking such a significant decision one must be absolutely certain that Providence so demands it, and up to now the contrary has proved to be the case. What's Rome and Italy at the present moment? A revolutionary hot-bed! The active centre of Freemasonry! What kind of Government is there? One that is ungodly, pillaging, contemptuous of every right, only fixated on what it can confiscate, a government twenty times worse than that of France, which itself is of no great consequence either. A government which is trying to get rid of the Pope and will most likely drive him away, short of a miracle, at the slightest opportunity. And now at this moment, on the eve of a such-like cataclysm, it's being proposed that we should transfer our headquarters to Rome, something which would prove to be an act of folly, striking a mortal blow at the Congregation...

III

2. Against this it is being said that if one embarks on this course, two or three of our houses, set up abroad, are threatening to cut themselves off from Issoudun. I reply that you have a proposal there which is a little too premature.

Separation from the mother house does not take place that easily. There has to be serious, convincing reasons needing to be examined and approved by Rome. But what, then, are these reasons? One forgets that it is the mother house which founded Tilburg, Antwerp, Salzburg, and she has natural rights in justice with respect to these houses. It is she who brought together, reared, nourished, taught all those who are part of these houses, she who placed them in her name in different countries to carry out her work and contribute to her prosperity. No, it's not enough to act from discontent inspired in its very nature by false patriotism, a hankering for independence, and find therein canonical arguments.

I reply in addition that the General Council of the Society has been thinking for quite sometime of setting up several Provinces, given that the Congregation has undergone a certain advancement, but this is not to assuage certain individuals who are discontented since this would be weakness, but rather because the best interests of the Society demand it. The request to make into Provinces our houses which have been set up abroad has already been addressed to Rome. If, then, as I hope, this request is given a favourable hearing, our distant houses will have rightful status as these Provinces will have their own autonomy, as guaranteed by the common law and the Constitutions. What more does one want? Before broaching an issue of such importance as the transfer of the seat of the Superior General to Rome, let the Chapter await then the results which will follow from the setting up of these new Provinces. And if, after some years' experience, it becomes clear that this extreme measure must be undertaken, I shall myself be the first to propose it to a new Chapter because then we shall be acting wisely and maturely.

3. It is again being pointed out that this decision about transferring to Rome should be taken straightaway because it needs to be put into the Constitutions, the final approval of which is being asked for. I reply that there is nothing at all about it of a Constitutional issue since the Chapter, if it considered it appropriate, could always return to this issue. It would be in any event an innovation since in the Constitutions of other Congregations I see nothing at all like ours, not even among the Jesuits or Redemptorists; St. Alphonsus, when drawing up his Constitutions, was not in the least concerned with this secondary issue. The resolution of the issue is to be left to the passage of time. It was not until the Pontificate of Pius IX that the General Chapter of the (Redemptorist) Congregation asked that the headquarters should be in Rome, and it was not until a decree dated October 2, 1857 that this matter was finally settled. The Redemptorists, therefore, went for more than a century without settling in Rome, even though their Congregation was Italian.

Again we are told that life Superiorship will not be voted for if the centre (of the Society) is not moved to Rome. I reply that there is no link between these two issues, being, for the fact of the matter, separate and independent. The decision about moving the headquarters can be shelved until the need for it is felt, whereas life-long Superiorship is an issue of primary importance and should be part of the Constitutions.

NB: Despite all these compelling reasons the Chapter, influenced by I know not what foolhardiness of spirit or partiality, voted by a majority of two to move the headquarters of the Society to Rome.

With the profound conviction that this decision is not the right one, and that the Chapter has harmfully used the power given to it in the first instance to damage rather than build up (1 Cor. 13), I feel that I must protest and appeal to Rome against it.

Issoudun, January 20, 1891

Personal and Confidential

Most Eminent Protector,

On the occasion of the definitive approval of our Constitutions, the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars has replied that, as the new text differs too much from the first one, I must have the Chapter meeting again to make a choice between the latest and the former Constitutions, and on accepting the former with some changes, the approval we are looking for will be immediately granted. Unanimously the Chapter is adopting the former Constitutions in the circumstances as indicated.

Since my authority as Superior General expired in May 1890, our good Procurator General, Fr. Jouët, at the time a Visitor delegate in Ecuador, thought of asking the Sacred Congregation for the matter to be held over, giving as one of the reasons the impossibility of bringing together immediately the Chapter. The four Assistants signed this petition, and the Sacred Congregation renewed my authority for 12 years. Several members of the present Chapter expressed their doubts, wrongly stating that the reasons put forward by Fr. Jouët were not valid, although Your Eminence had approved the genuine validity of these proposals. I would add two more valid reasons:

1. the need to have these powers renewed;
and
2. the real impossibility of bringing the Chapter together at this time in the absence of two members whose presence would be necessary, that is to say the Father Secretary General, provisionally at Guayaquil, and the Procurator General (Jouët) then Visitor to Ecuador.

With that there arose other doubts, like that about the legitimacy of this Chapter's coming together, the validity of accepting several individuals to the novitiate and for profession, etc. etc.

Since with regard to all these doubts which have been raised, Fr. Jouët, our Procurator General, whose devotedness to every undertaking you know as well as myself, and who has rendered so many outstanding services to the Society, is best fitted than anyone else, and certainly more than the two Chapter delegates, to provide the required explanations, I make bold to ask Your Eminence to be kind enough to send him a telegram asking him to come to Rome immediately. I would also ask you to get in touch with Fr. Piperon, first Assistant General of the Society, an experienced religious, a man of piety, Master of Novices, in the Society right from its beginning, and someone in whom you can have confidence.

If the Holy Father judges it to be right that the present Chapter should either break up or continue, I would ask Your Eminence to appeal to His Holiness that either in continuing with this Chapter or in setting up a new one, he would be good enough to name as presiding Apostolic Delegate His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges, or his brother and coadjutor, the Bishop of Sinope, in the event that he (the Archbishop) is unable to do so. I would also make bold to ask Your Eminence if in the troubled times we are experiencing, and the evolutionary crisis to which Italy and Rome is being subjected, the present Chapter could decide, as is its intention, that the centre of our Congregation should not be transferred to Rome, and requesting that this decision should be inserted in our Constitutions. This matter, so it seems to me, is premature and unwise for the time being.

Please accept, most Eminent Protector, my deepest regards as I have the honour to be Your Eminence's most humble, devoted, servant and son in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC,
Sup.Gen.

Jouët added:

Fr. Jouët offers all good wishes to His Eminence, and would like him to ask Rome to provide all the needed answers to the issues raised by the Issoudun Chapter.

The signature which he has added to the request of those at the Chapter is followed by an important point of reservation to which he would draw Your Eminence's attention. May it please Your Eminence to bless your humble and devoted son in N.S.

Victor Jouët, MisduSC.

To Father John-Baptiste Guyot, MSC, Vichy.

B 18910128

Uncertain date, January 1891

Reverend Fr. Guyot,

Sadly, my friend, how quickly you seem to forget the past! Do you recall, then, what you said about the present Superior of the Paris house, and what you repeatedly said to me that if he were allowed to continue being in charge of finances and looking after economies as he saw fit, he would create a bottomless pit just like the ... house (the house's name is not given)? His writing talents do not endow him for all that with a feeling for orderliness or economies which are indeed foreign to his nature. Do not be led to believe that it is for pleasure that I concern myself with an issue which is so important for the Society's future. I would also like to supervise the running of Antwerp and Tilburg where there is so much superfluous expense. As for Fr. Vaudon, what he has said to you is no more than poking fun. Let him make clear, then, how I have irked him in his local administration. It's he himself who asked for the removal of Fr. Batard and Fr. Pierre from the school (for the locals as distinct from the Petite Oeuvre) and for Fr. Lanctin from the Petite Oeuvre. It is he also who asked that the cook and his nephews should be dismissed, who asked for Fr. Maillard as Bursar, for Brother Mégrét to come and help, and Brothers for the kitchen. At this moment is it my fault if problems have arisen?

Was it I who forbade him to change the butcher, and have groceries, which he greatly liked, brought from Paris, etc., etc? And when I hear him say that I made him feel sick, I am as taken aback as I was when they wrote to me from Tilburg to say that my refusal to sanction the construction work was the cause of Fr. Hartzler's illness.

Meanwhile, Father, there is another reason for our woes which you yourself would appear to be unaware of. Allow me to make you aware of it. It's yourself. I identify the reason for this in the inadequate direction of the Saint Gérard novitiate which you give over to inexperienced and inadequate people under the pretext that the sedentary life was harmful to your health, and that you needed to go and preach outside, elsewhere, such-wise that up to the time of our being expelled, the formation there (at Saint Gérard) was lacking (deficient): our young men left to themselves for most of the time, without serious guidance and lacking supervision within the house and on walks outside the house. On your return, hearing about the escapades of several individuals, you gave yourself over to wild raging which only made the students laugh among themselves, and that attitude of mocking criticism continued to flourish (among the students). The authentic religious life was neither taught or put into practice, while today these novices have become individuals, some of whom are Superiors, others directors of important undertakings, and involved with administration. Let us not be in the least surprised by the problems which are cropping up and the lack of religious spirit to which we can testify; it couldn't be otherwise.

A second reason for concern arises from the excessive consideration you give to, and focus on, your health when you are there at Passy. At the Sacred Heart (Issoudun) when you come there everyone is amused and critical of you, asking what are we giving rise to when an Assistant (General) believes everything is allowed to him? So it comes about that it is taken for granted in the Society that in order to come by your good-will one must talk as you do, give the impression of being anxious about your health, be concerned with your slightest needs, and anticipate all your wishes. That's how, generally speaking, you are seen in all the houses you visit. Rid yourself of those who flatter and are obsequious to you and then tear you to pieces when they are in the company of others. I could let you have names which would surprise you.

Another view of you has taken shape among the less religious: it comes to this, that you have a dislike for my Administration. From this comes their contention that you accept approvingly their grievances, and that you would know how to make their grievances felt and get satisfaction for them.

You have another side to you which doesn't pass unnoticed among the confrères, your conceitedness: there's the "I" which you always push to the front, your trenchant, authoritarian tone of voice, the imbalances in your judgments, your contradictory assessments relative to the impressions you are experiencing, the self-projection of yourself, and the wish to make your own ideas prevail. Father, this, the above, is how you are judged by those who have any dealings with you. Let us beat our breasts then for all the inadequacies which affect us. Let us agreeably reach an understanding about doing better for the future. Let us be united and bring all our committed impact towards consolidating the work which has been asked of us, and which promises a wonderful future. It is time to be at one and understand each other in the reconciling peace of the Sacred Heart and thereby we shall merit heaven.

J. Chevalier.

Issoudun, January 28, 1891

The original of this letter is in the Vatican's secret archives.

Dear Father Guyot,

I am most indebted to you for your comments, and, as well, those of Fr. Jouët, to whom I passed them on. I very much hope to profit from them through the grace of the Sacred Heart since I so keenly wish to correct myself, and I am sure that the same will hold for Fr. Jouët. As regards your complimentary remarks, only God can appraise their worth, and in no way do I doubt their sincerity. But they will involuntarily call to mind in the present circumstances those flowers which cover the corpses of victims so that they can be immolated with all the greater impunity.

1. Do not think, Father, that the drawbacks which you point out in your memorandum are only the legacy of our little Congregation; this would be an error. Older Communities which have been founded also had to overcome problems as serious, if not more so, as ours, being aghast before issues equally profound, filling gaps equally problematic, bandaging wounds equally bloody.

Living in our midst and aware of what is happening in our Institute you engage yourself in trying to find out our drawbacks which, I grant, are considerable, but do not try to persuade yourself that we are an exception to the general rule which would be on the one hand to ignore the weakness of our frail humanity, and on the other the drawbacks of all kinds which necessarily characterize all new foundations. Oh! If you only read the secret files of every Congregation in its beginnings you would be taken aback and reassured at one and the same time noting that ours was not the most rocked, so much so that you would be led to thank the divine Heart of Jesus.

No, no, anyone who didn't have to found a Society in the unrewarding, exceptionally difficult circumstances in which we found ourselves, without support, influence, resources, and experiencing on all sides opposition, will never understand the struggles, the concerns, fearful prospects, disappointments, anxieties, the tears, exhaustion, journeys, privations, the pleas to heaven, before clearing away an unamenable piece of ground and then begin to lay down the foundations of our Congregation with inconsistent materials, defective for the most part, and which had to be cast aside later.

Once the first foundations were made in the midst of inextricable problems, we had to think about the material side of things, building houses and churches, going on from there to look for financial support to meet expenses and provide each one for the present and future with daily bread.

2. It is all too easy for those confrères who had no involvement in these undertakings to cast stones at those who are exhausted, burnt out after 35 years, those who have lived through sacrifices and privations to build up this undertaking of the Sacred Heart, look for recruits, provide them with a residence, feed and clothe them, educate them in knowledge and virtue. Today, when these young men should be ready to provide us with the means of consolidating and perfecting our dear Congregation to which they owe so much, they proceed instead to criticize us for not making their ideals a reality, threatening us that they will take their grievances to higher authority, and even threatening a schism if we do not accept their proposals. In effect, isn't this the distressing spectacle with which we have been presented at the beginning of this Chapter?

The sessions had scarcely begun when some protested against the day's retreat which I proposed to them in order to draw down heaven's blessings on the proceedings. This initial response indicated to me that the spirit of God was not in them. This quickly became a conviction with me on noticing the hostile attitude taken against Bishop Couppé when, nonchalantly, the legitimacy of his presence and right to be at the Chapter were raised, as well as the validity of certain Council decrees, etc. The opening session had scarcely begun when one individual read an emphatic protest which was out of order; another raised doubts, presented, shall I say, as certain, with the assurance of expert knowledge, that such and such was subject to interdict, that these professions were invalid, and this novitiate was unconstitutional, etc. Against my own and Fr. Jouët's indignant protestation, he (unnamed) arrogantly replied that the Chapter, that's to say himself and some others, was all powerful and he had the right and the duty to ask each one to account for himself. Who spoke like this? All of them were young priests without any great experience, having at best only some few years of priesthood behind them, named just recently Superiors and who, in a spirit of good-will and charity, we called to the Chapter. But what astonished me and took me aback was the sight of you, Fr. Guyot, you, a wise and judicious man, placing yourself, together with dear Fr. Delaporte, at the head of the opposition, making yourself the mouthpiece of these disaffected young men who arrived there with a programme already worked out, a campaign plan fully organized, raining red balls on the former Administration which they wanted to get rid of. That's to say, Fr. Jouët and myself. Nobody, nobody was mistaken about this. It was even mentioned to me that they had already set out beforehand the posts which some of them would undertake (in a new Administration).

Forgetful of the real aim of this Chapter which Rome had approved of, that is to say the three principal issues with regard to our Constitutions, how did the opponents receive my remarks on this issue? By a general protest which implies a prejudiced response.

Oh, Father, I would have understood, and it was in this respect that I called most wholeheartedly for a general Chapter, if everyone brought to it in a spirit of justice, good-will, peace and charity, his observations about shortcomings, the weak aspects of our Administration, the dangers one foresees, the reforms to be undertaken, trying to satisfy people, etc. All coming together in the love of the Sacred Heart would be listened to like children engaging with their father in order to take efficacious measures to provide the sought-for remedies in face of the evils from which we suffer, binding up our wounds as a family. There would be no distancing (cold-shouldering) from anyone; all hearts would have experienced solace, leaving this meeting both strengthened and forestalled against the return of such-like protests.

3. You refer, Father, to a number of reasons for our problems, among others the multiplicity of our houses and their lack of adequate personnel. I fully agree with you about this since we are somewhat too pressurized. We all need to say our very own 'mea culpa' like others elsewhere. Our excuse in the eyes of our confrères would, perhaps, be associated with the circumstances which had an impact on us. Let us calmly look at the history of our foundations. That at Rome became imperative. Our Watertown undertaking, was it not forced on us? Hearing the revolutionary storm grinding closer, we were all unanimous about the need to assure ourselves a refuge in America. The expulsions came about: Issoudun, Chezal-Benoît, Arles, Saint Gérard, were abandoned, and it was then and there that we all agreed to move the Petite Oeuvre and novitiate to Holland. Tilburg became too small, and the confrères there sought a foundation in Antwerp in the best interests of our undertakings. You yourself gave all this your full support, and likewise for the Paris foundation. England's turn came next. We decided that another refuge in this country given to freedom (as distinct from France) would not go amiss, particularly so when 40,000 francs (about 132,440 euros) had been placed at our disposal for this house. This house has prospered and as you say it's one of those which offers the greatest guarantee (of success).

See here in extenso Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, for a more tempered verdict, and, in particular Tréand's criticism from within the place: "We were the laughing stock of the diocese for coming to such an unlikely place where there was absolutely nothing to ensure the success of an educational establishment"; "a hole of a place without a future"; op.cit. p139, 140.

Then there's Spain. We all thought that a foundation in Southern Europe would be very helpful in the case of those in weakened health, and I found 30 or 40,000 francs for this undertaking, something which took away any indecisiveness. Some years later Canet-de-Mar was offered to us and I refused because I saw more disadvantages than advantages. Don Fernando returned to his proposal, offering us his property for virtually nothing. You went there to see the place and you came back to us full of enthusiasm about it, already planning great possibilities because of its situation and climate.

Quito came next. Fr. Jouët, meeting by chance the city's archbishop, heard his plans and proposals for a foundation which I put before the Council. Fr. Morisseau became enthusiastic and spoke out: "At the right time, here is an undertaking which we cannot refuse." The Council approved by a majority, and then proceeded to discuss the conditions of the contract. You yourself were so supportive of this undertaking that you were very keen to go there as Superior, asking for Fr. Klotz to go along with you. You then changed your mind because of the state of your health. This house (in Quito) has caused us concern and anxiety, it is true, but nobody could have foreseen this, and when the Council took the decision to uphold the Society's honour in these countries and revindicate our rights against the Saint Quentin Fathers, you were the first to propose Fr. Jouët as better placed than anyone else to succeed in this delicate and difficult undertaking.

There remains Salzburg! Where did the idea of a German foundation come from? Antwerp? Tilburg? It was at that time that Fathers Balzer and Ilge went on an exploratory trip to Berlin, considering that it would be very advantageous for the Society's work to have a house in these countries so full of possibilities for the future. Not being able to succeed, they proceeded to Bavaria accompanied by Fr. Barral; following the advice given them they stopped in Salzburg. The fantastic and exaggerated reports which boosted us coming from these countries, the resources to which we could have access there, the great advantages which, thereby, could arise for our undertakings, all of this forced our hand, and the Council agreed to this foundation.

Then there are our missions to the pagans. You are aware of the problems I faced in accepting them. My letter to the Holy Father served no purpose. The Holy See insisted, and conscious in this instance of the designs of Providence, we were willing to accept. You protested to Rome, it's true, but Rome, despite that, told us to go ahead. Today nobody regrets that we accepted these missions which have become a source of blessing for our Society.

4. Another reason for concern, so you say, are the debts weighing heavily on certain of the Congregation's houses... Who contracted these debts? I only see Antwerp, Tilburg and Salzburg who can so plead. Whose fault is it? You know that I am not here to do nothing. These houses, in any event, hope to meet their debts in a short while. You know that I am not at all in favour of incurring debts. My actions prove it. The coffers of the mother house prove it also. You will come across few communities which, on taking on so many undertakings, will have so flourishing a financial situation such as we enjoy.

5. You identify the new regulations as the reason for the unease. After 30 years' experience, I had noticed that our former rules were inadequate, needed to be improved in order to be made uniform, avoiding, thereby, confusion and, especially, arbitrariness, which had already become obvious in a number of our houses. That's why I felt it was my duty, before I died, to undertake this important task. I thereby surrounded myself with the better directories from the religious societies founded in recent times, taking the essentials from these regulations in order to shape our own. I submitted the proofs not only to the Assistants, but to all the Superiors of our houses asking them to look at them and send me their comments. I took all those which comprised a unanimous majority into account while allowing for disagreement. I believed that by so doing I was rendering a signal service to our Society and meriting the appreciation of its members by presenting them with the opportunity to have a more serious religious life-style better identified with our purpose. I was indebted to the divine Heart of Jesus for having made it possible for me to carry out this work, and then I came to know that an anonymous protest against me had been addressed to Rome. By whom? You know well that I would have understood it if someone openly had said what he wanted to say, and then, by common agreement, we would have introduced all the needed changes in the explanation I provided had it not been found sufficiently satisfying. This way of acting on the part of my good confrères, on this evidence, proved to me that there was lacking a proper religious spirit because of the evil attitude which motivated them. Yes indeed! What's going on at the moment only justifies all the more my presentiment. I do believe, Father, that if you had used your influence on them instead of making yourself a mouth-piece for their complaints, you would have quietened them down and made them go back to work, and the problem would not be of the proportions which it has become at the present moment.

6. The reason which explains all this, which you rightly add, is to be found in the lack of religious life among us. Yes, it's true, and it's up to us to find an efficacious means of combating this drawback which has been with us for a long time, and because of which I thought it necessary to re-shape our Rules and emphasize, effectively, the spirit of the order, through regularity, discipline, obedience, prayer, mortification, without which there would be no serious community life. But if one wants to soften the Rule in order to accommodate it to human nature, you will see for yourself within a few years what our Society will be like from the religious point of view.

7. It is, moreover, true that love of prayer is not held in honour throughout the Society, the reason for which is the lack of a spirit of faith, an attenuated belief in our Lord's tabernacle presence, an imperfect religious formation, excessive undertakings, and too precipitate an involvement of our young men either in teaching or on other such-like occupations. Let us not be discouraged but, rather, work altogether to remedy this state of affairs. We can deal with things much better today when we have moved away from the serious problems which arose when we began. In a few more years we shall have as many personnel as we would wish for.

8. You add, as well, Father, that the main reason for our problems, is to be identified with Fr. Jouët's way of acting. First of all, one must make a three-fold distinction: the Procurator, the Superior, the Religious.

What can be said against him as Procurator? Nothing, absolutely nothing. Over a considerable length of time you would not find anyone else with his qualities in this respect. He has always succeeded with the Society's undertakings which have been confided to him. It's to him we owe it that we were able to wrest the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association from the hands of the Scalsi and, in having set up a Universal Archconfraternity with its centre in our Church, ourselves as perpetual directors. It is to him we owe our Apostolic Vicars, the Sydney Procure, the mission seminary in Antwerp, the regard in which we are held in Rome, and the good-will we are favoured with on the part of the Holy See, and the Cardinals with whom he is acquainted.

As Superior, his role has been more problematic. Too overwhelmed with work, without doubt he was forced to neglect and go inadequately about certain things. He had to concern himself with building construction, keeping accounts, being guest to visitors, the Procure, being asked to do things by so many people, looking after a house without sufficient staff, also inexperienced, as well as scholastics who were often lacking in discipline, over-bearing, demanding, lacking, for the most part, in religious spirit. Besides, he had to deal with the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association, the editing of the Annals, the Petite Oeuvre and the bursarship, etc., etc. He was, obviously, weighed down by this work; one has then to keep in mind his role in all this.

As a religious, what can one bring against him? His piety excites the admiration of everyone, a spirit of faith inspires all his actions, his is a blind obedience, his devotedness is absolute to the point of sacrificing himself. Character-wise he is kind, gentle, easy to get on with, intelligent, without airs, mortified, a lover of poverty, self-forgetful, never in pursuit of his ease. You will find in our Society few religious encapsulating in themselves so unusual a combination of qualities. He is not without his drawbacks, but nobody is perfect! What deeply disturbs me is the sight of all that unjust unleashing which becomes mounted against Fr. Jouët who only acts for the well-being of our Society, never counting the cost in commitment and sacrifice, and the sight of so much ingratitude with regard to him. Let me know, who has worked more towards a successful outcome for our undertakings? Is it not he who has provided the thrust to the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association and the Petite Oeuvre itself, founded the Annals and found 16,000 subscribers for it, all of which it seems is being forgotten today? Is it not he who by his journeys, so highly regarded, preaching, writings, has, more than anyone else, gained the support and the financial resources from which we benefit? Isn't it he who by his tireless zeal, his undertakings and his know-how (savoir-faire) set up our marvellous pilgrimages? Isn't it he who saved us from what could have been the destruction of the Antwerp house when the indiscretion of the young priests, so focused against him, had so seriously compromised matters that the Archbishop of Malines wanted to get rid of us? It was he, my friend, who, while still laid up, went there to plead our case in a truly desperate situation, and finished up by succeeding. Isn't it thanks to Fr. Jouët that Fr. Delaporte, rejected by his Congregation, was so easily able to enter our Society which he tried to turn upside down, making his final vows outside the shadow of any novitiate, something which is a great, unfortunate drawback, and there you have this same man, together with so many others, forgetting at this very moment the benefits availed of (through Jouët), turning against him to whom they owe everything... and all this because, with good reason, one questions their administration and wishes it to be submitted to supervision in order to avoid disaster.

9. Then there's myself, also, who is one of the reasons for the problems under which our Society suffers. In this, however, I do not contradict you, Father, since I acknowledge all the drawbacks which you point out to me, and many more besides, I am quite sure that if I had been what I should be, that is to say a saint, we would not have to regret so many failures, or be pained by so much that is upsetting. I would have attracted greater blessings on our undertakings and on our kind confrères, all of whom would have no other concern than that of perfection. I bow humbly before God, praying him to pardon me for the past, and grant me the grace to make me what I should be for the future. I have no reason, then, to put forward an excuse. Nevertheless, I cannot let it be said that one has not always seen in me that unique concern to please God by seeking out his glory; I protest since God knows that I never had any other purpose in what I was doing than to bring about His glory and the well-being of people. I would have liked to die a hundred times than to do whatever it might be out of human motivation. I insist that I have never sought other than the Kingdom of God and His justice, and that is why, undoubtedly, the rest is, besides, given to us. You say, as well, Father, that one does not find in me that close union with God or frequency and recollection at the foot of the tabernacle. It is true that my life is far from being contemplative, but, tell me, who is to know how I spend my nights after 11pm when I wake up over the past 20 years at 4.30am? Who, again, can know what my interior feelings are during the long hours I pass in the church morning and evening?

You add that another reason for unease arises from my shackling of local Superiors in their general administration. You can only be referring to Fathers Delaporte and Vaudon who have complained to you about this. Indeed! How quickly you forget the past! Do you not recall, then, what was said to us about the present Superior of our Paris house, mainly that if allowed to continue looking after the finances and economic administration of the house he would quickly create as at the Mercy an economic quagmire. His abilities as a writer do not provide him with a spirit of orderliness and economy, both of which are foreign to his nature. Do not allow yourself to believe that it gives me pleasure being involved in these issues, so important nonetheless for the future of our Society, I would also like to oversee the Antwerp, Tilburg and Salzburg administrations where there are so many superfluous expenses being incurred, particularly so as regards the first two named.

As for Fr. Vaudon, what he has deigned to say to you is something of a joke. Let him be specific, then, as to what way I have offended him in his role as local Superior, even if for all that I would have the right to do so if I had noted any abuses. It's he himself who insisted on the withdrawals of Fr. Batard, Father Pierre from the school (for lay pupils, not the Petite Oeuvre), Fr. Lanctin from the Petite Oeuvre, and of Fr. Lavialle if it had been possible. It's he himself who asked for the cook and his nephews to be replaced by brothers, and, besides, he asked for Fr. Maillard as bursar and Fr. Mégret to help him, and afterwards he wanted nothing else. He should have advantageously foreseen that serious problems would come about from all these changes. I never forbade him to change the butcher, or to bring from Paris the groceries to which he was partial, to use a woman as a daily help, and the sisters to teach the brothers how to cook, etc. And when I hear it said that I made him ill, I am just as much astonished as I was when Fr. Peeters wrote to me from Tilburg saying that my refusal to approve their building was the reason for Fr. Hartzler's illness.

10. And now, Father, there is another reason for our problems which you do not seem to be aware of; allow me to bring it to your attention. It's yourself.

1. In the first place I identify it with the faulty direction of the Saint Gérard Novitiate which you have, contrary to my wishes, left in the hands of inexperienced and incapable people under the pretext that sedentary life was damaging to your health and you needed to preach outside, such-wise that over many years, until we were expelled, this training of such capital importance was lacking. Our young men were, for the greater part of the time, left to themselves, without serious guidance, being neither supervised in the house or on walks. On your return, coming to hear by chance of the escapades involving some of them, you became incensed with anger which only led to laughter; critical attitudes, mockery and indiscipline continued to hold sway. Serious religious life was neither taught or put into practice. Think about how many are left of all those who went through this novitiate. And as for some of those who have remained, how highly regarded are they as religious? We can see them in action! Several are wobbling in their vocation, project a wrong attitude, becoming an embarrassment for the Congregation. Forced by necessity, we have had to make use of some either as Superiors or in charge of important undertakings, others as teachers or in administration. Let us not be that amazed then, Father, by the problems which face us, and the lack of a religious spirit which is verifiable to us.

2. A second issue also arises as a result of the exaggerated concern which you devote to your health. While you were at Passy you would not believe how all our young men were in stitches laughing at you! At the Sacred Heart when you visited there, or in our other houses, when you showed yourself to be very exacting about food, we were being critically judged, and it was being commonly remarked: why worry when an Assistant is under the impression that everything is permitted him? Yes, indeed, it is taken for granted in the Society that in order to be favoured with your good-will, one must say what you say, show concern about your health, be attentive to your every need and anticipate your wishes. There you have, generally speaking, the manner or style in which you are judged in all the houses you visit. Beware the flattery of those who are obsequious to you in your presence, and who tear you to pieces when with others. I could provide you with names which would greatly surprise you. Another viewpoint has come to the fore among the less fervent religious, which is that you are unsympathetic to my administration. From this comes their being convinced that you are likely to accept approvingly their complaints, vindicate and satisfy their grievances.

3. You have another drawback which hasn't passed unnoticed among the confrères: it's your conceit; the 'my' emphasis you continually bring to the fore, your trenchant and authoritarian tone, the imbalance in your judgment, your contradictory assessments following on the impression to which you are exposed, your self-concern and self-pursuit, and the need to make your views prevail. This is how, Father, you are judged by those confrères who have dealings with you. This is, obviously, wrong and I would be the first to reprimand those who take it upon themselves to talk like that about an Assistant, and it is precisely because of that I inserted a special item in the Rules about this issue, but it is, nevertheless, a good thing for you to know how you are regarded.

Let us all then beat our breasts acknowledging all the drawbacks which bedevil us. Let us come to an understanding about doing better for the future. Let us be united and bring all our dedicated contributions to the work confided to us. It is time to bring ourselves together in the reconciling peace of the Sacred Heart, and we shall, thereby, have merited Heaven.

Signed: J. Chevalier.

From the final day of Chapter, 1891

Chapter Resolutions:

(It is erroneous to say that the 18th number has been retracted and without effect.)

1. The 4 Assistants were named who had been in office up to 1891. Fr. Píperon is first Assistant.
2. The Chapter agreed that the Superior General, given the present circumstances, should remain parish priest of Issoudun, but that he will give over each day, except Sunday, at least an hour of his schedule to the needs of the Sacred Heart house.
3. In the present circumstances, the Assistants and Procurator General, Fr. Jouët, may deal with other responsibilities outside of Issoudun. In the case of important issues, Fr. General may call them together for a meeting, as is stated in their personal requirements, session VI.
4. The canonical visitations called for have been made as soon as it became possible. America, the same year.
5. The Chapter took the decision that the Superior General was the Superior of the Mother House, and that whoever replaced him would take the name of First Minister, he undertaking nothing of any importance without the advice of the Very Reverend Father (General). It was agreed that the upkeep of the house would be met by the contributions set down by the General Council.
6. A postulancy of about a month was agreed on. This is what is normally done.
7. It was decided that the Novitiate should be as near to the Mother House as it possibly can be.
8. It was agreed that the Scholasticate should not be permanently at the Mother House.
9. It was agreed that the Scholastics should have a common room.
10. The General Council, having taken note of an excessive amount of medicine in rooms, decided in session 18 to return to the previous system.
11. The eve of our 4 great feast days should be more subdued (in terms of festivity), but this proposal could not be carried given the protestations against it.
12. One will commend our dead to the prayers of the communities associated with us. (This will be done through our Annals.)
13. An anniversary service was agreed for each religious in the month of his death.
14. The necrology should be mounted in the Sacristy.

15. The recommendation which deals with the trousseau to be provided for members leaving a house has always been adhered to by the Mother House.
16. The issue of a three-key safe in each house (session 21).
17. The book which Fr. General put together, called "Regular Discipline", was approved by the General Chapter (session 21).

Council Meeting, February 3, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Jouët, Morisseau.

Request of a seminarian to become a lay brother.

1. A student at the Bourges Major Seminary, who hasn't the requisite intellectual ability to cope with ecclesiastical studies, has asked to enter the Society as a lay brother. He is accepted on trial in order to find out if he can satisfyingly meet the requirements.

Fr. Guyot's replacement by Fr. Maillard.

2. Fr. Guyot, having tendered in writing his resignation as Assistant (General), Fr. Maillard was elected as his replacement, confirmation of which would be sought from the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

Protest against taking away the Chapter Acts.

3. The Council next criticized Fr. Klotz's removal of the Chapter Acts, he being Chapter Secretary, doing so without the Superior General's permission.
4. The proposal for a foundation in Hammonton, USA, was rejected because the advantages accruing from such a foundation are very questionable, and in any event the men needed are not available.
5. Having considered the request of the Watertown Fathers to build a new church on land already acquired, it was thought best not to accede to their request because it would be more convenient, if the occasion arose, to move from this house to a more favourable situation.
6. Fr. Ramot, for whom it has been arranged that he should go to Chezal-Benoît if it is to his liking, does not need to return to Watertown. Fr. Derichemont will replace him as Superior.
7. Quite serious issues have arisen in Sydney, which will be discussed with Bishop Couppé.
8. Fr. Roussel who has remained in Guayaquil will be recalled to the Mother House where he will be given an appointment.

L 18910203

Issoudun, February 3, 1891

Your Grace,

Thanking Your Grace for the very wise and paternal advice you so kindly gave me yesterday, I hope to send you today a complete copy of the Chapter's Acts.

To my great surprise, and that of my three Assistants, Fathers Piperon, Jouët and Morisseau, I came to hear this morning that Fr. Klotz abrogated to himself the right to take them (the Acts) away with him to make, so it seems, a copy of them, and forward them directly to Rome, as is indicated in the enclosed copy of the letter sent on to us by Fr. Guyot tendering his resignation. I consider it my duty to protest, together with my Council, against this action, all the more so since the decree relevant to the Chapter's dissolution formally enjoins on the Superior General of the Society, and no-one else, to send the said Acts as soon as possible to the Sacred Congregation. Following such irregular behaviour, in which several other members of the Chapter were involved, I would humbly ask Your Grace to be kind enough to indicate what procedural process I should engage upon with regard to Rome. It seems to me that it is my duty to advise straightaway the Sacred Congregation and our Cardinal Protector. Immediately following on the resignation of Fr. Guyot, the three other Assistants and myself came together to elect by secret ballot a fourth member of the Council. The result, by three votes to one, fell on Fr. Maillard who is our Bursar General. I am very happy with his appointment and I shall have it made known to Rome so that the Sacred Congregation can give its approval, and everything becomes regularized.

I am pleased to let you have Fr. Guyot's comments, and my reply to him.

Please accept, Your Grace, my deepest regards together with which I have the honour to be Your Grace's most obedient servant and son in C.J.

Council Meeting, February 4, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Jouët, Morisseau.

1. The decision was taken to make Fr. Klotz accountable for taking off with the Acts of the Chapter.

Regulations dealing with the sharing out of revenue at the Sydney Procure.

2. Bishop Couppé spoke (at the meeting) about the Sydney Procure, and following his observations what follows was laid down about the use of revenues from this Procure over and above what is needed for its own maintenance. Accordingly, each year a quarter of its intake will be placed aside in order to help meet the special requirements of the Missions. The remainder will be distributed ex aequo by way of two fifteenths to each of the two Apostolic Vicariates, and a fifteenth only for the Apostolic Prefecture. The reserve left over, if not used, will become capital, and at the beginning of the fifth year, the assets will be distributed to the two Apostolic Vicariates, two fifteenths to each one, and one fifteenth only to the Apostolic Prefecture.

Hospitality for missionaries passing through Sydney.

Missionaries passing through Sydney will be given free hospitality for 15 days at the Procure; if they are staying longer they will be financially supported by the Vicariate to which they belong when en route.

The responsibility for the Procure.

The Procure is in direct dependence on the Mother House. Fr. Maillard has been chosen as head of the Missions, financially understood, at the Mother House.

Fr. Gressin accepted for perpetual vows.

February 4, 1891

Your Grace,

I received on Thursday, January 29, last, through the intermediary of Fr. Jouët, our dedicated Procurator General in Rome, the decree already sent to our worthy Archbishop of Bourges, His Grace Joseph Marchal, and in which Your Eminence, acting in the name of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, asked me to bring the Chapter to an end, to forward its Acts to you, and to request of all its members that they return to their posts, while the business of the Society would continue to be looked after as in the past so long as the Sacred Congregation had not otherwise decided.

On the following morning at nine o'clock, in a general meeting, I myself made known to all participants the main thrust of this decree. Its reading provoked protests, which Your Eminence will find echoed in the final discussion. Fathers Guyot and Klotz put in writing their resignation, the former an Assistant to the Superior General, the latter Superior of the Tilburg (Dutch) house.

The members have now returned to their respective communities.

I would have sent on to you today, Your Eminence, all the Acts and interventions of the Chapter, of which I was having one copy made for our archives, if I hadn't heard this very morning itself, to my own great amazement and that of the other members of the Council, that Fr. Klotz, one of the Chapter's secretaries, without my permission, took the Acts away with him to Tilburg to have a copy made of them. I do not know if he will send these documents directly to Rome or whether he will return them to us. I have already written to him protesting, together with my Council, against an action which is totally out of order. While waiting to become better informed with regard to the missing Acts, I cannot delay any longer in thanking you for your kindness in meeting Fathers Piperon and Klotz, delegates at the Chapter, and Father Jouët, sent in my name and in that of the Archbishop of Bourges, to provide Your Grace with the necessary explanations with regard to disagreements and questions brought up at the Chapter. My first letter of January 20 ended by saying that "...If the Holy Father thought it opportune that the Chapter either break up or continue, I would ask Your Eminence to appeal to His Holiness that in the event of the Chapter continuing or the calling of a new one, he would ask His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges to preside over the Chapter as Apostolic Delegate, or his brother and coadjutor, the Bishop of Sinope, in the event that the Archbishop was unable to do so." This issue is of today effectively settled by the decree dissolving the Chapter, and the Archbishop, as always, having given his fatherly support and the appreciated contribution of his advice that everything should proceed according to the requisite procedures, there only remains for us now to request from His Excellency a delegate.

Fr. Nicolas Bovy, a later Assistant General) wrote about the immediate foregoing: "This is how the piece finishes and of which page three is missing. The contribution is entirely the work of Fr. Jouët! Nevertheless Fr. Chevalier does entirely endorse the text; beginning from the 4th paragraph he changes things in the following manner (Ib. N. Bovy).

While waiting to be better informed about the (Chapter) Acts which have been taken away I must not delay in thanking Your Eminence for all the concern you have so kindly shown to our dear Congregation. Following the break up of the Chapter feelings ran very high. In order to restore order and tranquility we only envisage one remedy: that of having another Chapter as soon as possible presided over by a delegate within the conditions which the Sacred Congregation will consider appropriate.

The greater number at the Chapter, having strongly criticized Fr. Jouët, did not want him in Rome when the issues of the Chapter were being discussed. Since he has important business demanding his presence in Rome at the present time, he is immediately setting off, but such-wise he will leave the city when the Chapter documents will reach the Sacred Congregation. (Fr. Chevalier crosses out four times the last line. N. Bovy.)

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome, sent in the name of the Council, signed by F. Morisseau.

Issoudun, February 4, 1891

Request to Fr. Jouët to ask for on the Council's behalf:

1. An indult for a new Assistant.
2. A completely positive resolution to all the irregularities and doubts brought up at the Chapter.
3. A document from the Sacred Congregation setting out the real aim of this latest Chapter.
4. The definitive approval, as soon as possible, of our former Constitutions which have already been submitted to approval.
5. A new Indult on behalf of Fr. Jouët, Procurator General of the Society, and also Fr. General's Assistant.
6. Approval of a portable altar for Fr. General.
7. Permission to delegate Novice Masters the authority to admit to the Novitiate and to Profession with the consent of their Council.

Council Meeting, February 5, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General, Fathers Jouët, Morisseau, Maillard.

Letter from Father General to Cardinal Monaco about the closing of the Chapter.

1. The Superior General presented a letter which he wrote to Cardinal Monaco, the Congregation's Protector, informing him that the decree of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars had been put into effect, dissolving the Society's Chapter, and asking to be excused for not forwarding immediately the Chapter Acts because one of the Secretaries, Fr. Klotz, had on his own initiative, and without any permission to do so, taken the Acts away in order to make a copy himself and send them on himself to the Sacred Congregation.

While protesting against this improper behaviour, it has also to be said that the ending of the Chapter in these circumstances has had a painful impact on most of the Chapter delegates, two of whom handed in their resignations, one an Assistant General the other a local Superior, and a general sense of upset is to be feared within the Society for which one sees no other outcome than an imminent calling of a new Chapter to go ahead with, and finish, the work of that which has been dissolved.

Various Indults to be sought in Rome.

2. It was then resolved:

1. to ask the Rome Curia, as quickly as possible, for a complete resolution of whatever irregularities were noted in the Chapter documents;
2. to approve the election of a new Assistant General by Indult, and the role of another Assistant, Fr. Jouët, the Procurator General, who doesn't reside permanently with Fr. General;
3. to ask the Cardinal Protector (Monaco) to have the Constitutions approved as quickly as possible;
4. to ask if the Chapter brought together to deal with the Constitutions might have also another purpose. A written reply is requested;
5. permission to be sought for the General Council to delegate Novice Masters with the authority to admit candidates to the Novitiate without testimonial letters when Bishops have not replied for over a month on being requested.

Permission for Father General to have a portable altar.

Issoudun, February 11, 1891

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I was worried about your journey. Thanks for your kind letter. I hope you will succeed in your discussions. Fr. Klotz, to whom by means of Fr. Morisseau I expressed my amazement that he took away the Chapter Acts, sent me a telegram just now asking for permission to come to Issoudun because, so he says, he needs to talk to me. I replied in the affirmative. I shall keep you informed. I do well believe that the unfortunate Fr. Ramot is not the only one writing to Rome. Anyway, let them get on with it. The well-being of the Congregation will, quite clearly, prevail thanks to the Sacred Heart and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart despite this storm of events, as unfair as it is baffling, inopportune, and unforeseen. Rome, I very much hope, will see that justice is done to us, re-establishing order through the definitive approval of our Constitutions. This approval, which was opportune, has now become a necessity, and Chapters should take place as seldom as possible(!). If the Secretary of the Congregation thinks that my presence is needed in Rome at this time, let me know and I shall go straightaway.

Cheerio, my friend.

Euge serve bone et fidelis! (Well done, good and faithful servant.)

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

1. I am forwarding the list of preachers as given in the Paris religious weekly. You will note that the Saint Quentins haven't given up the title of Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.
2. A thought has occurred to me: might not Fr. Klotz, who took away the Chapter Acts, as well as all those who co-operated and consented to this removal, be deprived of active and passive voice at a future Chapter? They would indeed have well merited this punishment, and we would, therefore, be well rid of them. Discuss this, then, with the Sacred Congregation. I would not be disappointed if they were barred from a new Chapter since all the opposition, so I believe, were involved in the plotting. J.C.

Council Meeting, February 12, 1891

In attendance: The Superior General; Fathers Morisseau and Maillard.

Dismissal of Fr. Burnet as Bursar.

The Superior General read a letter from Fr. Burnet resigning as Bursar at the Paris house, and a letter from Fr. Delaporte in which he says that he has asked Fr. Merg to take over Fr. Burnet's responsibilities, except as Bursar which he is taking on himself.

Proposal to replace Fr. Burnet.

The Council came to the conclusion that the Rev. Father (Delaporte) should not take on two postings, that of Superior and Bursar, and since Fr. Merg didn't offer enough assurance to be made Bursar, it seemed appropriate to appoint Fr. Miniot as Bursar, but permitting him to call on Fr. Merg for help if needed.

Council Meeting, February 16, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

The removal of the Tilburg Novitiate to Chezal-Benoît. The Superior General, having stated that Fr. Klotz had gone to Rome and did not intend to act any longer as Superior, thought it necessary to find a replacement for him. This role required special qualities because of the novitiate, and there was nobody there (in Tilburg) who was competent to be Novice Master. The decision was then taken to move the Tilburg Novitiate and join it with that of Chezal-Benoît, whereupon it was agreed that work should begin as soon as possible to make that house ready to receive the novices coming from Holland.

Names proposed as a replacement for Fr. Klotz as Superior.

The names of Fathers Meyer and Vandel were put forward, and eventually Fr. Vandel was the one agreed on since his absence from Antwerp would mean less of a gap to fill than would be the case with Fr. Meyer. It was also the view, if things might be so arranged, that Fr. Offermans could be moved to Tilburg for some time to put the accounts in order.

Fr. Maillard appointed to look after the financial accounts at the Sacred Heart.

The decision was taken, following the departure of Brother Mègret, Assistant Bursar at the Sacred Heart, for Chezal-Benoît, that Fr. Maillard should continue to look after the financial accounts in that house.

Issoudun, February 17, 1891

Dear Father,

Fr. Morisseau will no doubt have already written to you about the issues raised by you in the letter sent to me on the 12th of this month, since up to now I didn't feel it necessary to do so myself, but following some reflection and out of consideration for your Uncle of saintly and blessed memory (J.M. Vandel, greatly mentioned in earlier Chevalier correspondence, died Issoudun April 26, 1877), in memory, I say, of this dearly loved Father whom I admired and loved so much, I decided that I also would write to you.

But if you may so allow me, I shall hold on to the role you associate with me in your letter, that is to say one who is accused before a judge. Although I am not required to give an account of my actions to anyone other than God and my own conscience, I commit myself, although not excusing myself before you, to providing you with some explanations which will, perhaps, change somewhat your way of looking at things in relation to me. I shall follow, if you will so permit me, in their order, all the accusatory headings in your letter to me.

1. You mention that "you are not surprised but badly affected by the unfortunate developments from which our beloved Society could not extricate itself, and that the crisis which it is passing through is not an unforeseen event, but quite simply the inevitable, foreseeable impact, of a regrettable state of affairs already obvious for quite some time". You were aware, then, Father, of this calamitous situation, and also those confrères with whom you shared your views? Why, then, did you not as an obedient, devoted, son, make known to your Father at an opportune time this unhealthy state of affairs, and he would take it upon himself to seek out with you the reasons and provide a satisfying solution? Should not this silence on your part, as well as from those who are presently criticizing me, weigh on them and everyone else with a heavy responsibility? You add, Fr., that "there isn't a saint who wouldn't reproach himself for all the drawbacks which he comes across in his undertaking". Be good enough, then, to let me know all the drawbacks which you are aware of. I myself am very much aware of some; I don't know if you are referring to them, but I can assure you that one of the things I regret most bitterly is that of being forced by the circumstances to appoint in some of our houses, and our most important undertakings, religious who did not as yet have enough experience, and hadn't enough time to perfect themselves more fully in the religious life and in taking charge. I didn't keep sufficiently in mind those words of St. Paul: "Non neophytum ne insuperbiam elatus." (He should not be a new convert in case pride might turn his head, 1 Timothy, 3,6.) Today I am suffering from the consequences of this mistake, and the regrets I have about it make me hope that the good Lord will forgive me.

3. (2 is omitted) You say that sacrifices have to be made, then, on both one side and the other, and that I would not refuse what God asks of me. Oh! Most certainly so, but be good enough, I ask you, to let me know what you have in mind; you will not find me putting up any resistance, my obedience being as forthcoming as it will be a pleasure.

4. You, moreover, add that "...it's on my head all the criticisms fall, that I am the one who is made responsible for all the problems, and that it's myself who is being got at through Fr. Jouët". A thousand thanks, Fr., you are at least quite frank about this. Yes, like you I had so understood matters, but all the Chapter Fathers, following my humble presentation, stated, confirmed, that there was nothing intended, that I personally remained apart from these discussions and that I enjoyed the esteem and confidence of all my members. I now see that it was nothing like that, since you very much want to say to me, Father, that "my word no longer inspires confidence... and that unity can only be brought about on the level of frankness". What can one believe then? It seems, therefore, that a joke was played out at the Chapter! I deplore most wholeheartedly what those responsible for this dramatic turn have brought about, and the veils of which you pull aside. God who judges minds and hearts will justly judge!

5. You go on to say, Father, that I cannot refuse to have confidence in those religious who are the brightest, the most committed, the best thought of in our Congregation. The Lord knows that I appreciate all our worthy religious and have great confidence in them all, but is this a reason for withdrawing my regard and good-will from those who do not at all think like those you mention? It appears, then, Father, that you have not thought through the consequences of your sentence as so written, since if you were to reflect rightly on it you would see for yourself that you make an openly outrageous judgment on other priests of the Society. And, by the same token, let me know if there is anybody who has shown himself to be more committed to our Society than Fr. Piperon, and I may well add also Fr. Jouët, since, despite the complaints which can be levelled at him, it is not any less true, and I myself can strongly vouch for it, that his commitment knows no bounds. But nowadays all one hears is that he must be challenged, and whatever I might say in his defence will in no way be accepted by the prejudiced. I leave Fr. Jouët's name aside, then, but tell me, Father, whom you can find, once again, in our Society who is more pious, well thought of and more dedicated than Fr. Piperon? Who ever has shown dedication comparable to that of Bishops Navarre, Couppé and Verjus, Fr. Bontemps? No, no, Father, we are not in any way giving ourselves over to exaggeration; do not let prejudice blind us and we shall assess issues more healthily, not being drawn to place in the shadow true commitment in order to vaunt people who have yet to prove themselves. I am aware, since you told me so, that my word does not inspire you with confidence, but if you know as I do the history of our Society and its members, I could keep my silence, and the facts would entail speaking out and letting it be known what I want, through charity, to keep quiet about. I am certain that this unvarnished account would very much change your assessment and lead to the displacement of a great number of illusions in your thinking.

6. I am grateful to you, Father, for bringing to my attention that I have there in the Chapter a Superior to whom I owe obedience because for me as for the Society he is in God's place and that of the holy Church. Be at ease, Father, I shall accept submissively and most loyally his decision when Rome, a higher authority than all the Chapters, will have approved them. And rest assured that I shall not be appealing from a Rome ill-informed to a better informed Rome. I would like it if everybody could say the same.

7. Dear Father, I would not really like to get away from my function as accused to take on that of one who accuses, but at the very least allow me to put some questions to you, a doctor, and who, in consequence, should easily know how to answer a question. I make claim on your understanding, and, speaking confidentially to you, I ask you, good Fr. Vandel, if in good faith you believe that a Chapter drawing on one or two majority votes, and which, on the eve of its coming together, refused the Superior General, who had asked for it, a day's retreat to petition for enlightenment from the Holy Spirit, a Chapter at which one sharply reproached, if not indeed insolently, the older religious, who otherwise sacrificed themselves for the well-being of the Society, of betraying their responsibilities; and that a Chapter which on issues of the most compelling importance separates itself completely from its president, the Superior and founder of the Society, and which, despite his well motivated reasoning, his fatherly advice and, finally, appeals, stubbornly went ahead on a course of action which would only court disaster. Tell me, Father, do you really believe that such a Chapter actually takes the place of God and the Church? At the very least it seems to me that one cannot deny to the founder of the Society, who has done so much for it, the right to protest against a decision which he considers premature, unconstitutional, and having disastrous consequences for the Congregation. Rome will deliberate on this, and if a decision is made in favour of the Chapter, I shall accept it without reservations, and no arrière-pensée (regrets).

You end your letter, Father, begging me to take the necessary measures to remedy the problem. Once again, I would be pleased to have your views about the means to be so employed! For myself, I have come to the conclusion that there is only one thing to do: call a new Chapter as soon as possible. I accordingly wrote to Rome the day after my return from Bourges, and, besides, I insisted that Fr. Jouët should not be in Rome when the Chapter Acts arrived there in order to avoid anything suspicious. What more could I do? I wanted to send the Chapter Acts with my letter until I came to know that, without informing me, Fr. Klotz had taken them away with him. Oh indeed! If a member of the minority group, and particularly so Fr. Jouët or myself, had acted like this, don't you think that there would be quite enough of complaints, protests, anathemas, levelled against us? For myself, I leave it to Rome to pass judgment on this issue.

Another issue, one still more serious, Father, is Fr. Tréand's letter telling you that the Archbishop of Bourges didn't want this Chapter to take place. I either badly explained myself to Fr. Tréand when reporting my meeting with Archbishop Marchal, or he (Tréand) misunderstood me, but the fact remains that he told you the exact opposite of the truth and, consequently, it follows from a misunderstood conversation that you all together, without reflecting on it, sent a memorandum to Rome to make the Sacred Congregation become officially aware of what was already an unfortunate issue, but which will become more so on becoming public, which will certainly be the case. Consider then, as between us, Father, and speaking quite frankly, if all this provides evidence of sincere and genuine concern for the Society? Without this indiscretion, which cannot, I hope, be identified with me or my Council, my appeal, so I am convinced, would have complete success, and after Easter there would be a new Chapter where everything would be dealt with in family. As long as everything is conjectural, which is the way things are now, one cannot give an answer about anything. I am well aware that my accusers will not hesitate to say that the reason for all these problems is due to the Chapter's break-up, and since it is thought that I was the one who asked for it, I am being made responsible for the whole problem. Clearly under such an impression, you wrote your letter. And really this is not true. I did not ask for the Chapter's dissolution even if, as I do believe, I had the right to do so, given all that took place at it. Yet again I say that I did not do so and, consequently, I cannot in conscience take upon myself responsibility for what is happening, and will, eventually, happen later.

Let us together pray before the divine Heart of Jesus, Our Lady and St. Joseph, that all will work out for the best, and that our Society will survive this trial like St. John once did from his cauldron, stronger and more appealing than ever.

Fr. Nicolas Bovy, it would appear, here adds in conclusion: Fr. (Chevalier) somewhat changed his letter, and ends by asking Fr. Vandel to make every effort to get the others to withdraw their complaints sent on to the Sacred Congregation, and that they ask for a new Chapter to be held.

Dear Father,

Fr. General has asked me to inform you that in the absence of Brother Mégret, and Fr. Compte's inadequacy to be bursar at the Sacred Heart house, he has requested Fr. Maillard to take on this role once again, releasing Fr. Compte from his responsibility, and making use of Brother Cochard, a new arrival in Issoudun, in looking after the material needs of the house.

I would like to think that you are completely over your flu and have courageously begun your Lenten services. We have here to preach at Saint Cyr a young parish priest from nearby Saint Valentin (a village 7 kilometres away from Issoudun, having about 430 inhabitants at this time). He has a good voice and will one day be a good preacher. Fr. Hériault has a bout of flu and spent yesterday in bed. He is improved today. As for myself, I have a bout of flu and am in bed since yesterday.

Please accept my good wishes and regards in SSmo Corde Jesu.

Issoudun, February 18, 1891

Dear Father,

Yes, the devil is unchained against us. We must await on many trials and troubles... But be confident; the Sacred Heart is always there. The Sacred Congregation, which is fair and impartial, will look to the truth of the matter and conclude that I only want that which it will decide. But what appears evident to me is that 6 Chapter members out of 7, since Fr. Morisseau was on our side with regard to the main issues, cannot make their views prevail following on all the trouble they caused. These opposing confrères are moving heaven and earth to recruit supporters for their case. Fr. Lanctin has written to me to say that the Antwerp Fathers have been informed about everything that went on at the Chapter despite the secrecy everyone was asked to keep. Isn't such an act of indiscretion outrageous? It only goes to prove the ill-wishing spirit motivating these confrères. Their heads are always high in the air. Everyone is looking for a Chapter after Easter, presided over by the Apostolic Delegate, according to the conditions which the Sacred Congregation will deem to be proper, and being totally convinced that this is the only way to right the problem.

Write this to the Archbishop of Bourges letting him know what he must do in our favour, His Grace being completely available to write in whatever way you let him know; he is aware of all that's going on.

Fr. Klotz is gone to Rome on his own initiative; he asked me for a letter, but I refused. I don't know how he will be seen (looked upon) there, and nor the reception he will get. He has not left, obviously, without the support and advice of those opposing us, and those good confrères have placed themselves in a very suspect situation.

Nothing can any longer guarantee the Chapter Acts. We are going to deal with the main changes you mention. We have already given consideration to this. Our thinking was to send Fr. Klotz to Salzburg, Fr. Vandel (Jules) to Tilburg with Fr. Offermans, and appoint Fr. Meyer provisional Superior at Antwerp. Tomorrow I shall send you on a number of letters from Antwerp which you could make use of. Don't worry, Father, we have right on our side. Let us close our ranks and battle together under the protection of the Sacred Heart, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart. Let me have all the information you can put together, every day if possible. On my side I shall keep you informed about everything.

Issoudun, February 20, 1891

Dear Father,

Our Very Reverend Father Superior General has asked me to inform you that it was not his intention to hurt you when handing over for sometime the bursary at the Sacred Heart to Father Maillard. This was done following the Council's considerations which deemed this decision to be opportune. It is not permanent (something which I omitted to mention in my last letter). The reason for it is the maintenance of order with regard to material matters in the house while you are away, and in particular putting together a general inventory of everything which is part of the house. Following your return you will be free to take charge of the house, together with Fr. Compte, as before.

Rev. Father (General) is taken aback by what you said to him about Fr. Maillard. That he acted without consulting you and your Council despite your continuous protests, both verbal and written, and that he changed everything and got on people's nerves, etc. Fr. (General) asks you to be good enough to specify the facts which you consider are attributable to Fr. Maillard so that the problem can be solved and, if possible, prevent any repetition.

I express the most sincere wish that your bout of influenza will soon be over and done with, making it possible for you to give yourself once more with all your commitment to your apostolic endeavours. We have all here been knocked out by the same virus, Fr. Hériault keeping to his bed for several days. He who writes to you had to keep to his room for three full days.

You have, so you say, only a sprinkling of an audience, but you should not be disappointed in that; generally speaking, at the beginning of Lent, people are slow to stir themselves. I am sure that in time your audience will grow and you will not be without the opportunity to do a great lot of good in the parish of St. Nicholas where, as I well know, the Sacred Heart of Jesus is the recipient of very special adoration. We pray wholeheartedly to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart that she be supportive of you before this divine Heart and obtain for you that abundance of grace which characterizes apostles.

With my respectful and warm good wishes, your supportive confrere in Ssmo Corde Jesu.

J.F. Morisseau, MSC.

Fr. Chevalier adds:

Dear Father Vaudon,

Do not take after certain Superiors who, without always having recourse to the Superior General, are presupposed to think that the Council would not act by majority for the common good. To make it (the Council) responsible for these initiatives when sometimes it would be opposed creates a bad attitude, undermining authority. Did you really have, my friend, to complain to Fr. Delaporte that I involved myself in your role as local Superior, by taking it upon myself to open certain confrères' letters at the Sacred Heart, and to Fr. Guyot, for encroaching on your rights by attempting, effectively, to control the Sacred Heart house? Undoubtedly, the intention was to call me to order and have me told off by the Chapter. Fr. Delaporte, being, as you well know, indiscreet, didn't pass over the opportunity, and Fr. Guyot, very indignantly, went so far as to complain to me that my way of dealing with you was such that it had made you ill, and that there was no need to look elsewhere to explain your illness and, besides, the role of local Superior at the Sacred Heart was an impossible one because of myself. These gentlemen have, undoubtedly, moved beyond your own viewpoint, but it would, just the same, have been much more appropriate and prudent to deal directly with me yourself. I still continue to ask myself what I did which gave rise to these complaints.

Like some worthy fathers, you perhaps look upon certain members of the Chapter as being more credit-worthy at the present moment than the Superior General himself whose authority is not being acknowledged any longer. If Fathers Guyot and Delaporte, who shared their confidences with you, had been wise and cautious, moved by the Spirit of God, they would not have made you aware of the seeming crisis which is rocking our little Society, because secrecy should be maintained as regards all our discussions, and that storm to which you refer will, I hope, lead to the restoration of order right down to the roots, cutting off, perhaps, some dead branches and shaking off some bad fruit. Be good enough, my friend, to keep silent as regards anything confidentially shared with you about the Chapter.

Let us pray and the Sacred Heart will bless us!

Wholly yours in C.J.

Fr. Jouët has written to me to say that the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars takes a very serious view of the appropriation of the Chapter's Acts and their being taken off by Fr. Klotz to Tilburg. There has been no change of teachers at Chezal-Benoît. Fr. Cochrane, following a bout of extreme exhaustion, has been coughing up blood, and has come to Issoudun in order to rest and take care of himself, feeling a little better already; after a fortnight or so he will return to duty. In the meantime I have sent another of our confrères, Auguste Mégret, a deacon, to replace him.

I share Your Grace's viewpoint about that which he kindly brings to my notice so that any kind of disagreement can be forestalled. Again, many thanks, Your Grace, for all your kindness. We continue to pray for the speedy restoration of your health.

Issoudun, February 21, 1891

Dear Father Jouët,

1. It ends like this, then, the sad escapade of the pathetic Fr. Klotz. They have, themselves, become caught up in their own intrigues. This is, normally, the outcome of all intrigue, all outrageous injustice. God does not favour intrigue, hatred, lying, a divisive attitude. Fair-minded Rome will judge on what side moderation lies, also right, justice, truth. Remain confident! This storm has cut down the tree of our little Society, but resulting in the consolidation of its roots, ridding it of its dead branches, rotten fruit, and the parasites which suck the sap.

These opponents, motivated by a spirit of pride, and believing themselves to be strong enough, to challenge religious authority, wanted, in the manner of heretics, to appeal to Rome, the latter better advised, they, after the fashion of heretics, not so; they will come to know what (this intervention) it is going to cost them.

2. You request me in Bishop Sepiacchi's name to send you a copy of the Chapter Acts certified as conforming to the original. I cannot help you since, as you are aware, Fr. Klotz surreptitiously took away with him the Chapter Acts under the pretext of having a copy made in Antwerp. He has indeed sent back this copy to me because I insisted on having it. But is it authentic? I haven't been able to confront him about it. Moreover, might not the Acts themselves have been tampered with? Fr. Klotz who wrote (as Secretary) the Acts, with additions between the lines, might he not have added new elements through the co-operation of some in Antwerp? I would like to think not, but I have no proof to the contrary. The way in which these opponents set about this whole business gives rise to complete distrust, and also from the side of the Sacred Congregation. It is, accordingly, quite impossible for me, given the removal of the Acts, to guarantee their current authenticity, including, as well, the copy. I am sending on the copy to you, such as I received it from Fr. Klotz. The Sacred Congregation will judge for itself. I have to say the same about the text to be inserted in our Constitutions. I would like to think that nothing has been changed with reference to the general debates, and you yourself were present. You can judge for yourself. I continue to think that the transfer of our Society's centre to Rome by two majority votes, and given that Fr. Morisseau who voted in favour has told me that it is not at all his wish, cannot be taken into consideration for the reasons I have outlined.

I also say that the decision which lays it down that the scholastics should go to the scholasticate immediately after their novitiate and remain there until ordination to the priesthood, would be better placed in the specific scholasticate regulations rather than in the Constitutions, since this issue necessarily has to admit of some exceptions.

I shall continue to believe that the organizers of this sorry campaign, and those responsible for lifting the Acts of the Chapter, against all laws and regulations, merit severe punishment and should be excluded from a new Chapter.

3. Together with the uncertified copy of the Chapter Acts, I am forwarding to you the letter from the Archbishop of Bourges to whom I gave a copy also.

4. Fr. Piperon leaves for Tilburg on Monday morning to bring the novices to Chezal-Benoît. If you could have a telegram sent to me stating that the Sacred Congregation is in agreement because we have no Novice Master available (for Tilburg), this would carry weight against those opposing it, as well as the Bishop of Bois-le-Duc.

Issoudun, February 22, 1891

Dear Father Reyn,

1. I very much regret what you have to tell me about F. Youlden. I hope that this is not an isolated incident of which he will regretfully repent, and that there will not be subsequent repetitions.

Youlden was a student at Antwerp; he went to Glastonbury for some months in March, 1891, and returned from there to the Chezal-Benoît Scholasticate in August. From there a couple of months later, October 20, 1891, he went to the Canet du Mar College. More problems developed there, however, and he left the Society in October next year on the expiry of his vows.

2. It is true that my wish would be to have at my side a Vicar General before he would succeed me if the Chapter's choice became ratified by Rome, and thereby I would know before my death who was replacing me. It would be greatly comforting for me to see him at work, looking after, wisely and prudently, the Society's affairs. I have been distracted from this proposal.

3. You are very much mistaken in thinking that the administration of the Issoudun parish takes up so much of my time that I neglect my religious (community) interests. I depend entirely on the dedicated confrères who are with me; to them alone falls the care of the parish, and the time I make available calls for no more than some hours now and again, while the Archbishop of Bourges, who is well aware of all the help which the parish provided for us at the time of the expulsions, and could do so again, and in which he shows the keenest interest, will make arrangements with me to let me have, if necessary, an assistant parish priest.

4. Fr. Reyn, I never mentioned taking away Fr. Piperon in my letter to Fr. Vandel. You may read it again, and I never as much thought of you since I did not recall what you said to me about this. I made reference to another priest who was recommended to me, and whose name I could give to you. It is, then, very wrong to think that you consider yourself being got at. I have a better opinion of you than that.

5. I am more than amazed to have you saying that Fr. Piperon harshly criticized my administration when he himself has been part of it for such a long time, and I have myself always followed the decisions of the majority of the assistants on the important issues. Fr. Piperon, like myself, would like to introduce certain reforms and bring a number of abuses to an end. He would hope, since this needs to be done, that these reforms, which I have absolutely called for, would be presented to me, and that together, having been united in peace, unity, love, we would provide the most efficacious remedies for the problems facing us. But when it was taken note of that I was being moved aside, that there was a forceful disengagement from the Superior General and Founder of the Society, that of set purpose his actions were made to look suspect, without accepting any excuse, leaving out of consideration the unfortunate circumstances in which I found myself, and the inextricable problems which I had to face and overcome; when he was witness to the bitter attribution of blame inflicted upon me, the brutal insults levelled at me, then he understood passion was blinding people, God no longer to be found there. In this way he (Piperon) has withdrawn himself, covering up the unwilling nudity of his father which his straying brothers were only too pleased to show off, leaving out of consideration these words of our holy books (sic); "maledictus qui non honorat patrem suum... et qui affligit patrem ignominiosus est" (cursed be he who does not honour his father... and he who injures his father is the most shameful of men).

6. I do not want to engage with you with respect to your comments on Bishop Couppé, since he can answer for himself if he thinks it's pertinent. Observing what was going on, he, perhaps, followed the wise example of Fr. Piperon. As for the issue of the Provinces, the remark you attribute to Bishop Couppé is all the more incorrect for the reason that in my report to the Congregation when sending on the new Constitutions I asked for the setting up of the Northern Province comprising our houses in England, Antwerp, Tilburg, Salzburg; and the Southern Province, Rome, Spain, Quito; the French Province comprising Issoudun, Paris, Vichy, Watertown; and the Oceania Province, Sydney, etc. My report is in Rome, and you can go there to look it up. You can see for yourself, then, how much I have tried to mollify you. Such-like calumnies are very unbecoming.

7. Yes, indeed, my friend, I point out the course to be followed in order to make up for the scandals these opponents have brought about. I do not see any others. I shall accommodate loyally and officially a request for a new Chapter in the circumstances which Rome will judge to be opportune. It's not for me to make known my wishes to Rome, since as an obedient son I shall accept wholeheartedly everything it will decide.

8. You will not overlook the fact that everything which has happened has thrust a sword of sorrow into my heart which God has permitted, sur reventur ex multis cordibus cogitationes. (The hidden thoughts of many will be laid bare. Luke, 2.35) I am happy to stay like Job on the dunghill of humiliation where I have been placed; I shall bless, nevertheless, those responsible for this action as having been in my regard the instruments of divine justice. I shall draw what is worthwhile for me from it, and the Sacred Heart will draw glory. Sooner or later the light will shine through and the activating spirits, presently blind and opposed so unjustly and aggressively to my administration, will come to acknowledge the truth and do me justice. They will see for themselves on what side wrong-doing is to be found, and come to know, too belatedly perhaps, all they owe to me through the grace of God. They will be compelled to accept that alone, left to myself, without support or resources, everyone else would have succumbed under the weight of such a burden were it not for divine help. I leave it to you to judge our Society's history from its foundation, the struggles I had to undergo, the unforeseen problems I had to overcome, etc., and which posterity will judge!

9. As you describe it, my friend, one would think that it was I who should take the blame for everything going wrong. You refer to "really weighty charges" which are included in the memorandum you sent to Rome. Why did you not let me know of them before you wrote them? I could at the very least have provided you with explanations. Be good enough to provide details if you want me to do something about them. Would you be kind enough to send me a copy of your memorandum and I shall be the first to admit my drawbacks and try to get rid of them, since you must be aware that the Sacred Congregation will let me have your accusations and make sure to have my explanations. It would be better not to wait for this moment to arrive. I was far from expecting this level of criticism when you asked me to intervene with the Archbishop of Malines at the time of the opening of your church, and something which threatened the survival of our Antwerp house, and again when you asked me to approve of your memorandum against the Averbode and Saint Quentin priests. Yes, indeed, I was far from expecting what has happened, and you, yourself, also no doubt.

I can indeed say with the Lord: tremseat a me calix iste, non mea voluntas sed tua fiat. (If it is possible let this chalice pass from me, not my will, however, but thine be done.)

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C. Jesu.

Issoudun, February 23, 1891

Dear Father Peeters,

Fr. Klotz before he left for Rome, as you no doubt know, resigned as Superior of Tilburg and as Novice Master. Given that his health was in such a bad state, the Council considered that it should accept both resignations.

Not in a position to leave the novitiate without a Novice Master, and having no-one else to make available at the present time, we asked Rome for advice and we were authorized to bring the 14 Tilburg novices to our Issoudun Novitiate – Chezal-Benoît. Fr. Piperon will go there (to Tilburg) for them. Do not worry, Father Henri; they will be looked after in every possible way like little chickens.

Be good enough, then, to give them the necessary clothes, and books for their use. And since I have been told that you have become a very good preacher, I thought of you as the one to preach the preparatory novena for the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart at Issoudun, May 31. Prepare some good sermons for us.

Cheerio, my friend.
All good wishes in C.J.

To the Bishop of Bois-le-Duc, Holland.

Issoudun, February 23, 1891

My Lord,

Fr. Klotz, Superior of our Tilburg house and director of our novitiate, being over-worked, has given me his resignation, finding it, as he says, impossible to remain any longer in charge of the two undertakings. The Society's Council accepted his pleas and released him from his twofold responsibility. But since we do not have at the present time any other Novice Master to put in his place, we find it necessary to bring the 14 Tilburg novices to our French Novitiate near Issoudun.

Rome, advised about this matter, sanctions this transfer and provides us with all the prerequisite permissions. It is my duty to inform Your Lordship, whom I know to be so well-wishing to us, about this. Accordingly I take occasion, My Lord, to thank you for all the concern with which you favour us, and would ask you to continue in your care for us. I am about to appoint a new Superior for Tilburg to take responsibility for our Apostolic School and the other undertakings which have been set up there. With a plea for your blessing, and with deep appreciation of all your kindness, I have the honour to be Your Lordship's humble and respectful servant and son in Corde Jesu.

J M J

Issoudun, March 1891
Precise date unknown

Most Eminent Protector,

For almost a month there's scarcely a day goes by when I do not get a number of letters from different houses in our Society informing me that very seriously worded memoranda against me and my administration have been forwarded to Rome. Up to now I didn't want to defend myself, being of the view that it would be better to imitate the good Lord's silence before those who accused him; "Jesus autem tacebat" (Jesus, however, remained silent). Nevertheless, having lengthily prayed and reflected before God, having held in abeyance one's natural feelings, and placing in the Heart of Jesus all the pain, sorrow, disappointments I experienced in my own heart when becoming aware that my good-will and commitment were unacknowledged, I thought it would be helpful to present quite simply and in all sincerity to Your Eminence what has happened within the administration of our dear Society since it was founded.

1. On September 8, 1854, the day forever memorable for the proclamation of the dogma of the Immaculate Conception, the Blessed Virgin, granting me a singular grace, made it to be clearly understood that she wanted a religious society to be founded devoted to her cult and that of the Sacred Heart. I, accordingly, began this undertaking without financial resources, or human support, without anything indeed other than my poverty and confidence in God and Our Lady. I have no need to say how difficult things were in the beginning. Everything had to be provided for, as well as trying to provide the financial resources to set up a chapel in honour of the Sacred Heart, Our Lady and St. Joseph, and also a shelter for missionaries, and a place to receive good priests and devoted people who little by little came to share my life and ideals. Only those alone, the latter, could describe all that we had to undergo by way of privations and sacrifices in order to base the work on solid foundations. Yet today a good number of these confrères are caught up with myself in an atmosphere of disapproval. Nonetheless the undertaking progressed until in 1880 the French Government expelled us from our different French houses. We had, therefore, to find places of refuge abroad, and it's from this time that a number of our foundations began (elsewhere).

We believe we acted wisely in preparing the way to make ourselves known everywhere, after our motto about the Sacred Heart: "Amateur unique terrarum Cor Jesu Sacratissimum". (May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved.)

It was also around this time that His Holiness, Leo XIII, gloriously reigning, offered us the Melanesia and Micronesia missions. We hesitated momentarily to accept, but then we proceeded to meet the Sovereign Pontiff's wishes. Such undertakings needed numerous personnel and, unfortunately, our numbers at that time were very restricted. And here, I have to acknowledge, Your Eminence, that, perhaps, we were a little too precipitate. The lack of sufficient personnel obliged us to do three things which I regret:

1. Not having sufficient older priests to take charge of houses, we had to appoint as Superiors religious who were still quite young who had neither enough experience or religious training.
2. We had to ordain to the priesthood a number of our young men who hadn't yet fully completed their study courses.
3. And, in addition, through force of circumstances, several of our men became overburdened when taking on more than one task.

These drawbacks were noticed by us, and we were fully resolved, my Council and myself, to eliminate them, and already after a certain time measures were undertaken to eliminate them insofar as possible and avoid anything like that in the future.

Moreover, after the 1880 expulsions, a number of the assistants had to be put in charge of houses established as a result of this persecution. Indults were on these occasions requested and received from Rome. Nevertheless, this state of affairs left the Superior General more or less without a Council for the normal working-out of the administration and, inevitably, in certain circumstances he was forced to overlook certain irregularities, some defects with regards to regulations, with some issues overlooked. And it was for the purpose of remedying all this that we sent the first request to Rome, at the end of January last, for Your Eminence's attentive consideration. I have for quite some time been so sensitive to the difficulties facing me that on a number of occasions I asked for some assistants to stay with me, but it is in fact those very people who at the present time blame me most bitterly for acting on my own behalf, and who never wanted to live in Issoudun. Nevertheless, despite what is immediately set out above, it is not to be understood that there was no senior administration in the Society, since each year, in fact, I brought together several times my assistants to engage ourselves with the general interests of our Society, and all important decisions were always taken by majority voting.

And now, Your Eminence, there only remains for me to add a few more words. I completely ignore what is said against me and my administration in the memoranda forwarded to Rome. I can also sincerely say that I have acted in good faith with respect to everything I have done, without bias and in keeping with my conscience. Moreover, besides the deficiencies I pointed out above, and which are still regrettable, I find, and it seems to me that I am better qualified than anyone else to say this, that the present circumstances of our little Society are far from being poor or wanting.

Financially our situation is truly flourishing. Only two or three of our houses carry debts, from which they are little by little disengaging themselves rather well. The rest have quite considerable assets, and the value of these properties has appreciably increased... From the moral and disciplinary perspective it has not been other than praiseworthy for us up to now as regards having such a good spirit prevailing in our dear Society. All those confrères of ours who have died, 26 in number, have had a most edifying ending to their lives, all departing in the peace of the Lord, and we have a firm hope that they are enjoying the happiness merited by their virtues.

We have had departures, some indeed leaving after perpetual vows, but accepting that such is the case in all religious congregations I believe I can say that those who left did so more because of their character/personality and their lack of a religious spirit than because of drawbacks which might characterize our Society.

These are the observations which I feel I must bring before Your Eminence in order to put him in a better position to give his verdict as regards the issues he will be called to judge on arising from the communications sent to Your Eminence, or directly to the Sacred Congregation.

Please accept, Your Eminence, this present expression of my regards, and the very deep respect with which I have the honour to be Your Eminence's most humble, obedient son and servant in C.J.

Council Meeting, March 1, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Maillard, Morisseau.

A circular document to make known the General Council's members.

A circular document was drawn up to be sent to the Society's different houses letting them officially know of the confirmation of the General's jurisdiction, and, as well, the replacing of the dismissed Assistant, Fr. Guyot, by Fr. Maillard, together with Fr. Morisseau's undertaking of an Assistant's role once again.

The appointment of Fr. Batard as Bursar General.

Fr. Batard was appointed General Bursar.

Fr. Jouët endorsed this appointment subsequently in a letter dated March 11, 1891.

Fr. Lanctin, Superior of Tilburg.

Fr. Lanctin was appointed Superior of the Tilburg house, replacing Fr. Klotz who was dismissed.

Fr. Klotz, Bursar at Salzburg.

He was appointed Bursar to the Salzburg house.

Fr. Offermans, Bursar at Tilburg.

Fr. Offermans, presently Bursar at Salzburg, is appointed to the same role at Tilburg.

Father van Grinsven, Novice Master at Antwerp.

Fr. Reyn remains provisionally Superior of the Antwerp house, but the novice mastership of the lay brothers becomes the responsibility of Fr. van Grinsven.

Fr. Hartzler, Novice Master at Salzburg.

The same role of Novice Master to the lay brothers at Salzburg is made the responsibility of Fr. Hartzler, Superior of the house, and for whom a dispensation because of age will be requested as soon as possible.

Fr. Meyer, Head of the Chezal-Benoît Petite Oeuvre.

Fr. Meyer in charge of the Antwerp Petite Oeuvre is appointed to the same post at Chezal-Benoît, and will be replaced at Antwerp by Fr. Linckens.

Fr. Kicken replaces Fr. Linckens at Antwerp.

Fr. Kicken, whose presence at Tilburg is less urgently required, is appointed to Antwerp as a replacement for Fr. Linckens who has been appointed to take charge of the Petite Oeuvre.

A new undertaking put forward by Fr. Delaporte turned down.

Fr. Delaporte, Superior of the Paris house, having requested the taking on of a new enterprise called "Work of Jesus' Merciful Heart", was refused permission because it was unanimously accepted that the Society was so stretched by different undertakings that it wasn't appropriate to undertake anything new.

Confidential.
For yourself alone.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

Thank you for the telegrams. Fr. Piperon arrived from Tilburg this morning with just 7 novices. Fathers Reyn, Vandel and Meyer had gone to Tilburg, alerted by I know not whom, ridiculously opposing the removal of the novices, declaring that, in having appealed to Rome, nothing whatsoever could be done so long as the pending issues hadn't been resolved and that, by so acting, we were in contravention of the explicit intention of the Chapter. Fr. Piperon held firm, insisting that he had a duty to fulfil which he would carry out, and it was not for him to take orders from them.

I had already informed in a cordial letter the Bishop of Bois-le-Duc, and His Lordship had understood this to be a quite normal procedure given that the Novice Master (Klotz) had handed in his resignation and couldn't be replaced (in Tilburg).

Of the 7 remaining novices, 4 are laid up with influenza and 3 should be ready to leave this week. I hope that in a short while they will be arriving at Chezal-Benoît. We have had a Council meeting. Here are our appointments: Fr. Klotz is due to go to Salzburg as Bursar and Fr. Offermans will return to Tilburg as Bursar. Fr. Lanctin has been appointed Superior at Tilburg (but will he accept?); he only dreams of Issoudun. Fr. Meyer, who has himself also become involved with the opposition, is about to be changed from Antwerp to Chezal-Benoît to take charge of the Petite Oeuvre, but he and Fr. Vandel will remain in Antwerp for the time being. We are limited to these changes for the present and only later shall we be in a position to consider other changes. All the problems have originated in Antwerp and Tilburg, both places the hearth of the unrest, and if it has reached others whom you know, it's all due to their machinations (at Antwerp and Tilburg). Right up to now they haven't stopped sending memorandum after memorandum to the Sacred Congregation. They are under the impression that we do not give up in our denunciation of them to Rome. Pathetic young men, they are very much mistaken. Their strong distorted feelings, as well as their erroneous presuppositions, will have opened the eyes of the Sacred Congregation who will gather from all that what kind of a vicious spirit motivates them. It's a great grace and blessing of the Heart of Jesus to have discovered their plotting in good time. It would mean an upheaval and melting-down of our Society. You can imagine a brood of snakes hissing about one's feet and making themselves heard. In any event you have been a witness to all this, and the devil has all too obviously manipulated the spirit of these pathetic young men. I hope they will repent of their error and go on to regret the scandal to which they have given rise.

We have appointed Fr. Hartzler Novice Master to the lay brothers while remaining Superior at Salzburg. Since he hasn't the requisite age, would you be kind enough to get an Indult for him as soon as possible? There are professions coming up.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Circular Letter, March 2, 1891

Dear Father,

The aim of this circular letter is to notify the different houses of the Society as to what follows:

1. The confirmation for a further twelve years of Fr. General's authority, by indult dated January 26, 1891.
2. The resignation of Fr. Guyot as Assistant General and his replacement on the Council by Fr. Maillard, already Bursar General; the change ratified by the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, dated February 23, 1891.
3. The take-over by Fr. Morisseau of the roles of Assistant and Secretary General first allotted to him at the September 1879 Chapter which he had ceased to exercise since 1887 when he went provisionally on the Quito mission.
4. The present make-up of the General Council comprises Fathers Piperon, First Assistant, residing at Chezal-Benoît; Fr. Jouët, Procurator General, residing in Rome; and the two above-named Assistants residing at Issoudun. (Morisseau and Maillard.)
5. The appointment of Fr. Batard as Bursar General.

6. The notification that, until the approval and promulgation of the Acts of the latest Chapter, the previous Constitutions and Regulations will continue to be in force.

Take note if one has the August 15, 1872 circular.

Issoudun, March 4, 1891

Dear Fr. Jouët,

The transfer of the Tilburg Novitiate becomes a necessity, and this without taking sides, because the Superior, who doesn't have the requisite age, has handed in his resignation and we have nobody to replace him. Our opponents will not be slow in writing to Rome with a vengeance. It is, however, wholly erroneous. As soon as I received your telegram which stated that the transfer of the novitiate was granted, Fr. Piperon brought the 7 novices, who were free to come, here with him, arriving on Sunday morning at 4 o'clock, seemingly delighted. No more is needed, then, than the approval because it's all a 'fait accompli'. We should be self-congratulatory about it since it's for the Congregation's greater benefit. Fr. Klotz writes and informs those opposed that on his first visit Bishop Sepiacci received the news quite badly, but on his next visit the following day, having come by further clarification about the issue in looking up his memorandum, he accepted the news quite favourably, and even made his excuses. So he says; can this be true? As for Cardinal Monaco, he (Klotz) gives it to be understood that His Eminence has been very paternal in his regard and made no complaints against him (Klotz). Again, can this be true?

I hope you will be made aware of this famous memorandum, and the others which they say are very compelling against us. You will not be short of counter-arguments in replying and reducing them to the nonsensical. The Sacred Congregation which is objective and judges impartially will not be found wanting in being alert as to the side of justice and truth. The more I reflect on the matter the more their behaviour becomes, as I see it, totally unacceptable! They dread that the Sacred Congregation will dismiss from the next Chapter some of the older Chapter members because, no longer having the majority, they would be hampered in their hated and destructive activities directed at everything with which they do not agree. It's truly diabolical. You can see how far a spirit of blindness and madness can take people. One may apply to them what Our Lord said to his executioners: Non enim sciunt quid faciunt (they know not what they do), while believing themselves to be doing God's work. I like to think that you are already at work on your memorandum answering all their lies and exaggerations.

Fr. Klotz is saying that on his return from Rome he has experienced a great deal of the most sympathetic support from his confrères in Tilburg and Antwerp. He is asking all opposing us to remain united while awaiting Rome's verdict which cannot be other than favourable to them. We shall see. I forgot to include in my last dispatch Fr. Reyn's letter and my reply. I am remedying this oversight. I have decided not to reply from now on to the opposition's letters, a pain which can be done without. I am forwarding to you two recent letters from Father Klotz. Following these, I sent him on 600 francs (about 2,040 euros) to cope with his parents' debts, stating that if he remains in the Society, which is what I want, an increase in the contribution to his parents would not present a problem. Have I done the right thing? The priests on the Council think so and approve.

Fr. Delaporte, so it seems, is very worked up. The unfortunate man; what a millstone we have around our necks!

Cheerio, Father.

All good wishes always in C.J.

Issoudun, March 6, 1891

Dear Canon,

Fr. Delaporte, to whom I forwarded your February 28 letter dealing with Madame Mollie's complaints, has replied to me to say that this lady is not telling you the truth. "The truth is," he writes to us, "that from the beginning and right up to the present, I have refused to become involved with financial matters, appropriating to myself the moral supervision of the library which the proprietor asked me to take charge of, and the option of opening my purse, which I did by contributing 15 times. On many other occasions I refused to become involved financially, and when Madame Mollie wanted to take the library on a route of risks and dangers when one was trying to set up a civil group (legally) to allow her to proceed, I refused to have any responsibility whatsoever as regards this venture, which I considered reckless. Nevertheless, out of good-will, I brought on myself a lot of trouble when setting up this Society, and indeed it was I myself, virtually, who found some subscribers. Accordingly, I am not in any way responsible for the losses which Madame Mollie has been willing to undergo. The truth is that if Madame Mollie had drawn Mr. Riant's cheque such as it was, so she claims, this would in fact be contrary to the quite explicit wishes of Mr. Riant, well known to me at that particular time. His purpose in giving Madame Mollie 2,500 francs (about 8,540 euros) - and not 1,000 francs - being that of bringing an end to her grumbling and her threats of blackmail. He was most certainly in no way responsible for anything legally indictable; out of kindness and good-will he made over a total of 2,500 francs, and as well in order to leave us in peace; we have all a right to be left in peace."

Our confrère, Canon, goes on to complain that "before the testimony of a priest whose whole life is blameless, and who in this affair had even very demonstrably shown his kindness and good-will, the word of this woman is favoured and made more of". "It is the third time," he adds, "that this accusation has forced me to appear before the diocesan authorities. Our Lord granted me the grace never to move outside the limits of respect, but the experience was harsh."

"The diocesan promoter was always the priest who argued the case and to whom I stated, 1, that I owed nothing whatsoever (this is the important thing), and 2, that I couldn't offer anything in the way of generosity, having no longer any assets, and yet he found in favour of Madame Mollie and asks you to give her alms. I have nothing to say about this request since the official status of its author forbids me to pass judgment. I have no reason whatever to make it my wish that you accede to her demands. I cannot bring myself to persuade you against so doing."

You will gather, Canon, that in the face of these explanations proffered by my confrère I can in no way whatsoever give way to the unjust demands being made by Madame Mollie. Besides, I make bold to count on your good-will to prevent, insofar as it is in your power, a wholly unmerited persecution of the individual in question.

Please accept, Canon promoter, my deepest regards as I have the honour to be your devoted servant.

Issoudun, March 7, 1891

Dear Father,

Here are the names of the Assistants. Fr. (Piperon) continues as First Assistant, also Fr. Jouët who by way of indult acts in Rome as the Procurator General of the Society, while Fr. Morisseau on his return from Ecuador has again taken over the Assistant's role which Fr. Delaporte, provisionally, had undertaken. With Fr. Guyot's resignation, Fr. Maillard has replaced him. The Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars has ratified these changes by a rescript, dated the end of February. The same Congregation has prolonged my office as Superior General for 12 years. Fr. Batard has been appointed General Bursar replacing Fr. Maillard. Be at ease, my friend; I am not taking back anything I gave you with so much pleasure.

On your return we shall set out the responsibilities quite straightforwardly of the local Superiors at the Sacred Heart, such as the Constitutions and Rules lay down for the other houses. The Mother House, in regard to everything which deals with the general works and interests of the Society, continues to remain the General House under the direction of the Major Superiors, and cannot be identified with particular houses.

I am pleased you are rehabilitated in health and that your audience gets bigger by the day.

For the last 15 days my health is somewhat poor and I hope with the help of God that it will soon be improved. I read the Month of St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, by the Dorat professor. There is nothing at all about St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, except in the title. It's a deception, and I am going to write to him about it. When publicizing in our Annals the Month of St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, you would have done better to state and make known in particular the author's name. It's an unfortunate mistake. It would be courting danger to place in our Annals Bishop Couppé's letter as it would draw serious disagreements down on us. Say nothing at all about it.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

In attendance: Fr. General, Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard, Batard.

Decision about Brother Laliaux and military service.

A discussion took place about Brother Laliaux's military service. He will be 26 years at the end of August and cannot continue to be exempt from military service as an ecclesiastical student, all the more so if he is then put forward for the subdiaconate. But since his bishop is not granting him dismissorial letters, and since, besides, it doesn't seem proper to ordain him in virtue of the Society's "titulo mensae communis" because he hasn't made his final profession, and since, moreover, he doesn't provide all the guarantees sought for, he will be given permission to present himself for military service if considered a suitable candidate.

Brother Smet sent to the Scholasticate.

Brother Smet, who has been working at the association's office, but is now no longer needed since the volume of correspondence has eased, will go to Antwerp to continue his studies.

Mr. Berthon accepted in the Novitiate as a Lay Brother.

Mr. Berthon, a former teacher, now ending his military service, has expressed the wish to join our Congregation as a lay brother. On this condition only, he can be accepted in the novitiate.

The setting aside of Fr. Kicken's transfer to Antwerp.

The indisposed Fr. Kicken cannot move to Antwerp where in any event his health would make him redundant; he will remain at Tilburg trying to recover; when he is able to travel, he will come here (Issoudun) and it can be decided if he should go on to Canet (de Mar, Spain).

A decision about Brother Molinos.

Brother Molinos of the Antwerp Scholasticate, asks to go to Spain; one cannot meet with this request. If he persists in asking, he will be allowed to leave the Society.

Your Grace,

I hurried to send on your letter to Bishop Couppé because two days ago he left to visit his family. I am led to believe that he will immediately send a reply to the request you kindly made to him.

Since the arrival of the newcomer novices, Fr. Piperon, greatly overburdened, is neglecting somewhat noticeably both the novitiate and the Petite Oeuvre. In order to give him some support we have thought of bringing from Antwerp one of our confrères, Fr. Meyer, director there of the Petite Oeuvre, a young, pious, intelligent priest (a baccalaurate), who did all his philosophical and theological studies in Rome, and took all his degrees there. I do believe that Your Grace will be pleased with these changes.

I have the honour to be, respectfully, Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Issoudun, March 13, 1891

Dear Father Jouët,

1. I received your letter (a copy) to the Archbishop of Bourges. The Council considered it and thought it was very good. However, there is one issue which isn't clear, being that part where you write that Provincials should be appointed as soon as possible. However, it so happens that appropriately mature, shrewd and truly religious individuals are lacking (numerically) in this respect. If we were to call on one or two of the Assistants (General) we would be returning to the holding of two offices at the same time. You say, I think, that the Chapter cannot be held before the setting up of the Provinces. This is to postpone things indefinitely. If Rome so decides, I shall wholeheartedly comply, but these Chapters bring in their wake problems rather than peace and quiet.

2. Make the definitive approval of our Constitutions a matter of urgency. It is this which is most urgent. A Chapter will not be necessary in order to make known the approval of our Constitutions.

3. Try and do your utmost to obtain as soon as possible the official over-looking (cancellation) of all irregularities, either in the case of Fr. Piperon or as regards those vows which doubts have been raised about, etc., etc.

4. We all approve of the 'thank you' letter sent to Cardinal Monaco by the Archbishop of Bourges. Be good enough to make a rough copy of it, such as you can put it together, and then forward it to me straightaway. Fr. Morisseau keenly regrets his being placed among the opposition. He does indeed appear to have had a change of mind.

5. What are we going to do with Fr. Ramot, who no longer wishes to go back to America? I have thought about sending him to Glastonbury as Superior, replacing Fr. Tréand who would be going to Sydney as Superior. Is this your own view? Bishop Navarre, once more laid up, has returned to Sydney to recover his health. He continually asks for Fr. Tréand. Fr. Merg, therefore, cannot any longer stay in Sydney; it would, perhaps, be best to send him either to Glastonbury or Watertown. What do you think about this?

Fr. Meyer is here and somewhat exhausted; he is on the way to Chezal-Benoît; this young man always seems very worked up. He tells me that Fathers Védère and Benedetti share a discontent about yourself. Try through your kindness and good relations to lead these two priests towards better viewpoints. Share your confidence in them, set up, according to the Constitutions, Council meetings in the house and make them part of it. It would be a way of getting their support in making them share your administration. It is absolutely imperative that you regain their confidence, and make the scholastics benefit from a paternal administration which is full of concern. The storm so unfairly stirred up will end, I hope, by calming itself down.

So much trouble has come out of Antwerp, and particularly so from Fr. Vandel who has been the principal moving force in the conspiracy. If we could take him out of Antwerp and send him, in the month of October, either to Issoudun or the Chezal-Benoît scholasticate, I believe that we would work much better at quietening things down. We shall give this further thought. It is absolutely imperative to play down the importance of the Antwerp and Tilburg Petite Oeuvres and boost that of Issoudun. We all share your views on this, and there's real danger here. Let us pray about this.

Cheerio, my friend; take good care of your health and look after yourself.

Your Grace,

Fr. Meyer, whom we have appointed to the Chezal-Benoît Petite Oeuvre, is overcome by scruples which he simply submits for Your Grace's consideration. He has shown his letter to me, to which I replied saying that I was amazed that such a level-headed man was held up by problems of this nature, and that there was no need for him to be preoccupied by these issues, and that he should align himself on the administration's side, identifying himself with the Congregation's concerns, and that for the rest he could be exempted from confession and direction of the rhetoricians who are the responsibility of Fr. Piperon, and that, in consequence, he will have nothing at all to do with decisions affecting our young men's vocations, thereby leaving his conscience at ease. He tells me that he will do everything Your Grace advises.

I sent a telegram to Bishop Couppe communicating your concerns. He wrote to me this morning that he would carry out the ordination in Bourges tomorrow.

Please accept my deepest regards in C.J.

Issoudun, March 15, 1891

My Dear Lord and Father,

I am pleased to have had your good news and also about dear Fathers Hubert and Janet and the good brothers who accompanied them. Bishop Navarre did much the best thing by going to Sydney to recover his precious health. We pray particularly for him, yourself, all your good missionaries, the dear sisters and the natives. I hope that Fr. Toublanc has got over his bad attack of fever. Convey our good wishes to dear Sister Ange on her recovery and ask her to pray for me; also Sisters Liguori, Madeleine, Claire, etc. I don't forget them.

Sister Ange is Virgine Ode from Montauban, born April 8, 1860, one of the second group of sisters to leave for New Guinea. She fell gravely ill while the Inawi mission was being set up and, contrary to all expectations, recovered. She sadly didn't survive a second attack of malaria, dying at Inawi on September 15, 1895. Sister Liguori, Nathalie Debroux, born May 15, 1862, of Overijse, Belgium, was also one of the second group to leave for New Guinea, leading the first lot of sisters to arrive in Yule Island, August 1, 1887. She came to Europe in 1908 for the first General Chapter, and, likewise, for the third in 1921, when she was elected to the General Council. She died at Rums, Belgium, December 18, 1945.

I hope that I can send Fr. Tréand to Sydney, but we have no-one to replace him in England. Let us hope and pray that everything can be arranged as soon as possible.

I believe, Fr. (sic), that if you were to come on a visit to France in your own turn you would work more than you think for the success of your mission. I am convinced that you would find a great deal by way of financial resources and, as well, a lot of vocations. Come, I say, and you will not regret it. Discuss it with Bishop Navarre; he will approve of it very wholeheartedly. Bring us some artefacts from New Guinea.

Cheerio my dear Father and Lordship.

Loan of 12,500 francs from Mrs. Munster.

Fr. Superior read a letter from Mrs. Munster, London, in which this lady requests through her son John, that 12,500 francs be made available at 5% from a sum of 15,000 francs, equally at 5% interest. Issoudun, March 17, 1891

Dear Father Jouët,

1. I am forwarding you 300 francs (about 1,020 euros) to cover your expenses.
2. I believe that at the moment of writing Fr. Klotz should be in Salzburg as bursar, and Fr. Offermans in Tilburg, he, likewise, bursar.
3. Yes, it's Fr. Lanctin who is replacing Fr. Klotz as Superior at Tilburg. He has agreed.

There is no para 4.

5. Yes, the rescript transferring the novitiate came on schedule; you should have been informed about it.
6. Fr. Batard has been appointed General Bursar, residing at Chezal-Benoît where his presence as bursar is required. He comes to Issoudun with Fr. Piperon for Council meetings every 25 days.
6. (Again) Fr. Vaudon continues as local Superior of the Sacred Heart house. Who is there to replace him? We have nobody. It is the same with Fr. Delaporte whom it would be wise to move, but who is there to replace him? If the Sacred Congregation, in an official document, allowed having those as superiors who had not completed a full novitiate in a house of formation, we would have more scope. But is it wise to request something like this? Let's wait until the month of September.
7. Fr. Reyn effectively continues as Superior. After his resignation at the Chapter we didn't do anything further about this issue. But who is there to replace him? The Antwerp house is 40,000 francs (about 136,530 euros) in debt and it's Fr. Reyn who has been dealing with these financial issues. If he were to be side-lined, would it not be thought he no longer wanted to be involved with the finances and the reduction of this enormous debt, although he is the one who is responsible for all these financial undertakings? I am, then, very much at a loss about all this, and my expectation would be to go both to Antwerp and Tilburg at Easter. If my shaken health allows it, I think this would be a well-worthwhile journey.

8. Our confrères on the Council, following a second reading of your letter to the Archbishop of Bourges, think that there are reservations to be expressed about it. Fr. Morisseau is writing personally to you, so he tells me, to let you know what he thinks about the issue.

9. The Archbishop of Bourges wrote a short note to me this morning in which he also seems to express his reservations.

10. Our confrères think that you should try to get the sought after 'legal overlooking' (canon law – sanatio) made available to us as soon as possible, according to the measures set out by you, and as well the definitive approval of our Constitutions, with the 2 or 3 main changes sought, or else without any changes if the Sacred Congregation considers it more appropriate. Then they (the Council members) are of the view that it will be necessary to call a new Chapter as soon as the new Constitutions are approved, and which cannot any longer be altered, requesting the Sacred Congregation to set out itself the way in which this Chapter should be held, the issues to be treated there, and to make it known what members should be excluded. Fr. Delaporte, for example, is someone who has not done his novitiate and his profession is of a doubtful nature; also, perhaps, Fathers Reyn and Klotz, who are in doubt about their profession. If this were to be the thinking of the Sacred Congregation, the ground would greatly need to be clarified. We might, perhaps, call on Bishop Verjus, representing New Guinea, and Fr. Merg from Sydney to attend this Chapter, also Fr. François Barral from Quito and, if possible, Fr. Bontemps from the Gilbert Islands, as well as Fathers Carrière and Casas. I do not think the two latter would constitute nasty opposition.

11. Bishop Navarre is demanding all the time that Fr. Tréand become the Superior in Sydney. If it is your view also, do you think that we might replace him at Glastonbury with either Fr. Ramot or Fr. Chétail?

12. Fr. Meyer is at Chezal-Benoît. Antwerp is very unhappy about this change, but it was necessary.

Meyer is the future General; for a brief résumé and assessment of his life, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late.

Cheerio, Father.

Return Mr. Hamel's letter to me with your suggestions.

Dear Father Jouët,

Here's a quite important letter which has just reached me. I hasten to let you have it; return it to me with your comments. I immediately replied to Mr. Hamel, the president (of his organization), thanking him most warmly for his proposal and for his regard for our little Society, accepting wholeheartedly his proposal and his choice of you, if Rome approves and you are willing to accept. I informed him that, in the event of your acceptance and Rome's approval, you could not put yourself at the disposal of the Propagation of the Faith for at least 3 or 4 months, perhaps longer, because, as Procurator General of our Society, your presence would be needed in Rome to obtain the definitive approval of our Constitutions which we have been seeking for quite some time, as well as the resolution of other important matters confided to you. You could not, consequently, deal with an undertaking in the United States until you had concluded pending issues involving our Society.

Hamel wanted the Society to develop and organize its promotion in the USA, giving the qualities which excited his interest as being those of "well-regarded religious, truly apostolic, as well as being intelligent, active, zealous".

This would, perhaps, be the moment to urge the Sacred Congregation to provide us with the petitions requested as quickly as possible, and approve straightaway our cherished Constitutions, as well as a Superior (General) for life. Both for my part and yours, these two issues are of capital importance for the well-being of our Society. The Chapter will come afterwards.

Fr. Chevalier had come to regret the delays involving his Procurator in Rome while at the same time reacting positively before the situation created by the Chapter in January before its postponement. He now encourages Jouët to obtain the necessary documents, the validation of any irregularities in recent years, the final approval of the Constitutions, both of which will be granted this year, 1891. As for the Chapter, planned for August 1892, it was postponed to February 1893.

You will set out your proposal, that the Sacred Congregation itself will determine how many members should make up the Chapter, and the questions to be dealt with under the presiding Apostolic Delegate. You, as you must understand, must be present at this Chapter, even if you had to come from the ends of the earth.

Fr. Chevalier would insist that Fr. Jouët in his role as Procurator should be present at the 1893 Chapter. But he would be made exempt through the intervention of the Bourges auxiliary Bishop, Auguste Marchal, the Archbishop's brother.

If you think you should accept Mr. Hamel's appreciated and advantageous offer, you will continue to keep your post and title of Procurator General in our Society, Fr. Védère, if you think it appropriate, being your Assistant, and he would receive instructions from you. I believe that this mission in the USA, taken on by us, would seriously set us up in America and make us greatly influential among the bishops. It would, thereupon, be easy for us to make a choice of the more important city where we would most like to be, thereby able to get ourselves away from the hole that is Watertown. What do you think?

This was already the hope of Fr. Ramot who had succeeded Durin in Watertown, and who, in order to get away, attempted a foundation in Hammonton, New Jersey.

If you accept, Cardinal Simeoni needs to favour you with a good recommendatory letter to the USA bishops. This is a prerequisite. There are, as you wish, Fathers Ramot, Grom, O'Mahony available.

Ramot, following the 1891 Chapter, couldn't proceed with the Hammonton foundation when he found himself in Glastonbury as Superior. Grom remained at Hammonton until December 1891 when he returned to Watertown where the third-mentioned C. O'Mahony was teaching.

If our Cardinal Protector approves of your appointment, also Cardinals Parocchi and Simeoni, the Pope will exempt you from residence (in Rome) over a period of time.

I am sharing this letter with the Assistants and Bishop Couppé who will all find this proposal a great honour accorded to our Society, as well as offering great advantages in every respect without any risk involved on our part. Do you think so yourself? You know that your opinion carries great weight with me.

If we consider that we can accept the proposal, and Rome approves, the Council of the Propagation of the Faith will be very pleased and will wait until such time as you can be free. But again, I repeat, I am adamant about your not leaving Rome before you obtain the documents releasing from irregularities and, as well, the definitive approval of our Constitutions, since otherwise everything will be called into question.

Cheerio, my friend, more than ever good wishes to you as always in C.J.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. Tomorrow, March 25, it will be 10 years since I informed Pope Leo XIII that we would accept the Oceania mission. This will be an anniversary to celebrate in our Annals.
2. It will also be 25 years tomorrow since the Petite Oeuvre was founded, or, if you wish, thought about, at Amélie-les-Bains, with Fr. Vandel. That's another anniversary, therefore.
3. It's also 25 years since our Annals began. It would be appropriate if you were to write a nice article celebrating our (its) silver jubilees. Are you thinking of doing so? It would be for the next issue. For this occasion you must vindicate for our Society the lovely title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Do not miss out on this.
4. Here's a letter from Fr. Klotz. How must I go about replying to him?
5. We shall be putting in order all the indulgences granted to us. Accordingly, send on the originals to me, or copies, of what you have received about having to offer at one franc (about 3.40 euro) all the mass intentions we receive, whatever the honorarium may be. This document is quite important and needs to be kept on file. If you have mislaid it, get it renewed straightaway, as it's absolutely imperative to put our mass offerings in order. We have on another occasion received an indulgence to reduce offerings to 1.25 francs (about 4.25 euros), by way of advantage to our confrères forcibly expelled from our apostolic schools, our missions and other good works of ours, un-activated for a year now, which you might see about getting reduced to 1 franc, as for example with the Lourdes' priests and others also. It is more necessary than ever now to have this document renewed to our advantage.

Cheerio, dear Fr. Jouët,
Wholly yours in C.J.

I got your letter yesterday with reference to the group letter of thanks being forwarded to our esteemed Cardinal Protector. Fr. Morisseau will be writing to you about this. You are already aware of his views. Let me have a copy of the letter you are thinking of forwarding to Cardinal Monaco. I shall present it to the Archbishop of Bourges on Easter Monday. His Grace

Issoudun, March 30, 1891

Dear Father Jouët,

I telegraphed you yesterday to accept the month of Mary at Marseilles (preaching), if your concerns which are pending at the Sacred Congregation do not suffer as a result. I fear that your being away for more than a month might be seriously prejudicial to us, since our opponents would know that you are no longer in Rome and accordingly would be sending on fresh memoranda in order to achieve their aim. They are capable of anything. They intrigue among themselves in order to achieve their purposes. I have become aware of correspondence between Fathers Klotz, Morisseau and Ramot. (This is for you alone, and in the strictest secrecy.) Here are the principal parts: Letter to Fr. Morisseau: "Reverend Father Chevalier is responsible for the Constitutions and doesn't want to adhere to them even after the Chapter, that is to say even after the scarcely disguised complaints directed at Fr. Jouët who alone is believed to be responsible. Notice how the Reverend Fr. General again has recourse to indults for no other reason, and need, than avoidance of the Chapter and elections which would be unpleasantly awkward for him, as well as for those who might lose their positions. What are we to do? We no longer have any confidence in those who are our leaders. We don't even know if we are religious. What are we going to do? Our major Superiors describe us as the opposition, their adversaries. Their whole credibility is identified with the authority which they identify with themselves and goes against the Constitutional rights and our good will which has been able to bend beneath blows which it would be difficult to justify. It is quite impossible that we involve our young men and those coming to us in a Society of this nature, etc."

In another letter dated some days ago, he blames Fr. Morisseau for attempting to get the Antwerp priests to hold back their bitterness at the Chapter and make themselves submissive. "No," he counters. "It's the people who exercise authority who should give way and not us; it would be weakness, otherwise... As far as I am concerned, never!"

Letter from Fr. Klotz to Fr. Ramot: He congratulates him on his demeanour at the Sacred Heart where he was present, assuring him that his manner and behaviour will open the eyes of his Superiors. "As far as we are concerned," he says, "we are not the opposition, but rather the oppressed! We want our campaign to succeed because it is just. Must all of us, thereby, lose our responsibilities! Can you imagine Fr. Morisseau advising his Antwerp confrères to hold back on their eagerness? But, as it happens, our liveliness is nothing in comparison with that of the major Superiors and their supporters who have played an unforgivable trump card on us in having the Chapter brought to an end and postponed. Any retracting should come from the side of the Superiors and not from us. Since the Chapter, we have acted quite openly in addressing ourselves to Rome, whereas those who have acted against us to the limits of what is possible will not desist from this course until the day they cannot do anything further, either because of a lack of personnel or a veto from Rome. Indeed, if they had sufficient personnel to call on, they would have changed all the Superiors who are in opposition. If we have nothing to retract," he adds, "we cannot, at the same time, remain inactive. I have been told that you must write to me letting me know the new positions to be taken up in order to be more assured of victory. I am fully armed from head to foot and I am waiting on your advice either to disarm or prepare for a new battle. Do not delay in keeping me abreast of things. One day lost could be fatal for us as it was when Fr. Piperon caused me to lose out by going to Chezal-Benoît, making it possible for Fr. Jouët to have the Chapter dissolved. Be good enough, then, to let me have your suggestions as soon as possible."

From all of this I draw the conclusion that Fr. Klotz is the prime mover in this opposition, and the principal activist in all these intrigues, whom I believe to be eaten up by pride and ambition, self-dangling the prospect of becoming Superior General. In another of his letters, he again writes: "To everyone's amazement I was sent to Salzburg to look after the cows and the pigsties, having been Superior there. I hope the new Chapter will do me justice." This pathetic priest has the make-up of a heretic or a heretical sect's leader. Following our most recent acts of kindness to him and his family to whom I forwarded 600 francs (about 2,045 euros) to pay a debt, must I put up with such disreputable behaviour and so much hate? It reminds me of the outrageous behaviour of Mario and de Stefano, companions of St. Joseph Casalanctius, founder of the Pius schools, who was thrown out of his Generalate, and his Congregation broken up. It's all there in the reading. Mr. Tunion David (difficult to decipher in original text) has translated the life, and makes mention of these facts.

I have seriously thought of writing the history of the Chapter which was called off, demonstrating that right from the beginning of the Chapter, he (Klotz) projected himself as the real Superior, taking no notice of the Superior and Founder of the Society, his presiding over events, or the proposals he put forward, contradicting him (Chevalier) in everything, drawing up orders of the day, setting out regulations, programmes, independently of him, disregarding him as if he wasn't there, and of a mind to change and shake up everything from top to bottom. Based on this false premiss, the Chapter becomes sovereignly independent and can do what it likes.

I propose, however, to compare the Chapter to a General Council, with the Pope as its head, and at which nothing can be done or any initiative taken without his approval. It is for the president of the Chapter, when he is the Superior General, to call it, set out its programme, the issues which need to be discussed, guide the discussions, call the meetings when he thinks it appropriate, and bring them to an end if necessary. Otherwise, the Chapter becomes a parliament as we have seen for ourselves.

Meanwhile, if the Superior General dies, the Chapter is convoked according to the Constitutions in order to elect his successor and assistants. It should not deal with any other issues except under the presidency of the new Superior General, and only those he considers it worthwhile to discuss. That's how I understand the situation. Without something of this nature, there's always likely to be plotting, disorder and confusion. Have a copy made, then of the letter sent to Cardinal Monaco as you intended, and send it on to me. Thereafter, I shall send you on the text, with corrections if needed, before forwarding it to the Archbishop of Bourges for his approval.

All you have to say about a fresh Chapter motivated by the same sentiments as the last one is, unfortunately, only too true. That's why I view with trepidation your departure for America before the resolution of these main problems: the remedying of certain legal issues, the approval of the Constitutions, and Generalship for life. They will understand in Rome, and Mr. Hamel as well. Is this your own view also?

If Fr. Tréand is sent to Sydney, Fr. Ramot is prepared to go to Glastonbury, or even to Sydney if Fr. Tréand remains in Glastonbury. What do you think about this? (For Tréand, Glastonbury and Sydney, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late: Glastonbury and Tréand.) If you are going to Marseilles to preach there during Mary's month (May), I would like very much to meet and chat with you.

I can appreciate that you would need a sympathetic companion to accompany you to the USA. I have sent a telegram to Fr. Grom asking him not to leave Hammonton before he is told to do so, since if you go to America you will need some place else other than Watertown because it's too remote from the great centres of population and too cold in winter. You can write to Mr. Hamel when you have had the assessments of Cardinals Monaco and Parocchi, as well as Bishop (Monsignor?) Sepiacci, since we must maintain and enjoy the good-will of these august gentlemen. How do you find Fathers Védère and Benedetti? Are you pleased with them? Are they now well supportive of you? Do you arrange little meetings?

Cheerio, dear Fr. Jouët.
More than ever, good wishes to you in C.J.

*Resumé of a number of letters from Fr. François Klotz, MSC, Salzburg.
Put together by Fr. Chevalier himself.*

I. Letters sent to Fr. Ramot from Salzburg.

First letter, dated the end of March, 1891. He congratulates him (Ramot) for his style and manner at the Sacred Heart. He says that they are the victims and the supporters of the Superior General, their opponents. He places the blame on Fr. Morisseau for attempting to get the Antwerp priests to lessen their aggression... "If we have nothing to go back on," he says, "we cannot for all that remain inactive. I was promised a letter from you setting out the new approaches to be adopted in order to make our victory more assured. I am wholly ready from head to foot, waiting on your signal either to disarm or begin a fresh battle. Do not delay too long in bringing me up to date since a day lost could prove fatal to us. Be kind enough to let me have your comments as soon as possible."

Second letter to the same recipient, Ramot, April 1, 1891.

The Council (Chevalier writes, before introducing Klotz's letter) has appointed Fr. Ramot to the Sydney house and he has agreed, being due to go there shortly. Fr. Klotz has become aware of this, and in his letter begs Ramot not to leave Issoudun. "If you go (there)," he writes, "you are giving the impression that the Superior General and his Council are functioning normally... You make a wrong-doer of yourself and all the rest of us also." Meanwhile (Chevalier writes) Rome, in its decree disbanding the Chapter, approved the previous, current, Administration, ratifying Fr. Maillard as Assistant in place of Fr. Guyot who had resigned. "The important thing," Klotz continues, "is to have an Administration in which one can have confidence... When I was moved from Tilburg to Salzburg, I spoke to my confrères... and took their views into account. Fathers Reyn, Hartzler, Tréand, Guyot and Delaporte seem to be as concerned as yourself about your being exiled. Your departure becomes the burial of the Chapter." Following this letter (from Klotz, as Chevalier writes) Fr. Ramot wrote to me to say that he had a change of mind, and was no longer willing either to go to Sydney or return to America where he had been Superior (Watertown) until the Chapter. He remains, then, in Issoudun.

II. Letters from Fr. Klotz in Salzburg to Fr. Morisseau.

The first letter is dated March 22, 1891.

He informs him that the administration inspires no confidence... that I (Chevalier) am again having recourse to indults in order to avoid another Chapter which would be disadvantageous to me as well as to those who would lose their positions. He, then, ends his letter asking him to send on any news about the situation, and to let his friends know he will do public penance until he is released from it by a new Administration.

Second letter, April 22, 1891.

"In all our statements and letters," he says, "I always express the same expectation; an administration of the Society appointed by the Chapter... This, perhaps, will displease people, but it is the truth, what really should be the case. And we all, so it seems to me, have the duty to work towards getting such an Administration... And, so far as extending the powers of the Superior General are concerned, Rome is gripped, plagued, by the indults' issue. Let us hold on, waiting patiently for a reply. But I see myself as setting forth on perilous terrain." Here's the one who projects himself as a victim, and asks to return in triumph to the Society!

Council Meeting, April 2, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

Father Pierre Barral granted release from his vows.

Father Pierre Barral, on returning from Ecuador where he was dismissed by the Archbishop of Quito, has been staying with his family on vacation for three months with the permission of the Superior General, asks to be given his freedom to undertake some apostolic work in South America where he wants to return, or, failing that, be given permission to request the Holy See for release from his vows. The Council was of the opinion that he could not be given the unlimited freedom he sought and, accordingly, he could request release from his vows.

Fr. Derichemont appointed Superior of Watertown.

A letter from Fr. Derichemont, provisionally in charge of the Watertown house, was read to the meeting, describing the financial straits of that house and requesting a monthly contribution of 100 dollars (500 francs). The present financial straits are accounted for because a lottery which brought in about 7 or 800 dollars up to now, approved of by the civil authorities, was not possible because the postal authorities refused to accept for postage the letters dealing with the lottery. Fr.

(Derichemont) is of the view that if the monthly contribution cannot be granted, it is imperative to have a Superior (at Watertown) who can envisage other ways and means of restoring a balanced budget. The Council's decision was to give Derichemont, himself, the office.

Brother Assunto admitted to perpetual vows.

On the recommendation of Fr. Carrière, Superior of the Canet de Mar house, Brother Assunto was accepted for vows; he carried out to acclaim his teaching duties in the house.

Dear Fr. Barral,

I received your letter and submitted your proposals to the Council members in meeting. All were unanimously agreed that you could not be allowed such unlimited freedom as you were looking for. Fr. Durin, who found himself in a special set of circumstances, set a precedent which cannot normally be followed.

Durin was in charge of the first MSC group which went to Oceania in 1881, and precipitately returned to Europe. He then went to West de Pere, Wisconsin, USA, but did not ask to be released from his vows.

You, therefore, only need to ask for your release from the vows and I shall meet your request.

With all good wishes in C.J., Fr. Pierre Barral.

Dear Sir,

Fr. Delaporte, to whom I sent the letter you kindly wrote to me, neither agrees to the meeting you suggest nor the offer of coming to a mutual understanding which you have so kindly put to him. I regret that he has so made up his mind as well as the tone of his letter which, nevertheless, I believe I should send on to you. Since he calls for an official hearing, the authorities will judge the issue for themselves. I am sorry, Sir, that I have no more to add about this issue.

Copy of a letter from Fr. Klotz to Fr. Ramot.

Issoudun, April 8, 1891

A correct presentation, guaranteed by the undersigned, of a letter from Fr. Klotz to Fr. Ramot, former Superior of the Watertown house, USA, presently, since the Chapter, at Issoudun.

Salzburg (Austria), March 1891

He congratulates him for his demeanour at the Sacred Heart (Issoudun), and assures him that his manner and bearing will open his Superiors' eyes. He hopes with those in opposition, whom he describes as being oppressed, for the triumph of their cause, which is a worthy one, even if they are to lose out in their contention. He harshly blames Fr. Morisseau, Assistant General, who challenged the Antwerp opposition to withdraw their bitter remarks. He excuses himself for undertaking this course of action, asserting that those involved have nothing about which they should feel blameworthy. "But," he goes on, "if we have nothing which we would wish to withdraw, we must not, however, remain inactive. I was promised a letter of yours informing me of the latest approaches to be adopted in order to be made more certain of victory. I am readily armed from head to foot, and I await your advice either about disarming or starting a new course of action. Do not keep me waiting too long before bringing me up to date. A day gone amissing could be fatal for us... be good enough to let me have your thoughts as quickly as possible."

To Cardinal Monaco, Protector.

Issoudun, April 8, 1891

Most Eminent Cardinal Protector,

Since the Chapter was dissolved, something deemed opportune by the Sacred Congregation because it had completed its task, a certain number of confrères, unhappy with such an outcome, obstinately refuse to recognize our authority and are doing their utmost to undermine it. One of the youngest, more given to stirring things up than the others, has placed himself at the head of the opposition, stirs up rebelliousness without any formal regard for our legitimately constituted Administration, such as the accompanying documents make clear. (Res societatis ut antea esse peragendas.) (The Society's business goes on as before.) This last is from the decree breaking up the Chapter. In these circumstances leadership of the Society becomes impossible. We come then, Most Eminent Protector, to ask Your Eminence, as someone aware of all our problems, to be kind enough to map out for us a way forward.

1. In keeping with the enclosed documents, should we expel Fr. Klotz from our Society? If this is your advice, be kind enough to pass on to the Holy Father the enclosed petition.
2. Has the Superior General of the Society, with the approval of his Council, the right, which he thinks he has, to send a subject from one house to another, either to Sydney (Australia) or to America, if he judges it to be worthwhile for the good of the Congregation? And in the event of a formal refusal on the part of the subject, what must he do?
3. Given the present circumstances, faced with a spirit of rebellion which the opposition promotes with each other in their correspondence, such as the enclosed letters indicate, has the Superior General the right to forbid them, in the name of holy obedience, from visiting each other without special permission, or to write to each other, unless the letters are sent first of all to the Superior General who will, on taking note of them, send them on, if he thinks it à propos, to those to whom they are addressed? Be good enough, Cardinal Protector, to let us have at the earliest possible convenience the answers to these queries.

We are happy to take occasion from these circumstances to thank you yet again for the keen interest with which you are kind enough to favour our humble Congregation, which the devil rocks so violently at this moment, and for the highly protective care you so kindly bestow on us.

With our deep acknowledgement and appreciation we offer you, Most Eminent Protector, our humble respects and sincere regards in C.J.

Issoudun, April 10, 1891

Most Honourable Promoter,

Your comments are dictated by wisdom, justice, love of peace. I want Fr. Delaporte to respond to your very kind invitation. I wrote to him again in this vein, but I do not know if he will agree, since once he gets an idea into his head it is not easy to get it out of him. I have to say too, Canon, and quite confidentially, that Fr. Delaporte, only 5 years a member of our Society, does not have in any way the Society's spirit; he has remained within the Congregation of Mercy which he came out of when joining us. We accepted him among us out of kindness.

On becoming aware of his outlook, stubbornness, his lack of order and discipline, I bitterly regret having accepted him among us. And, to be frank with you, I would not be at all displeased if he was cited before a church tribunal for formally refusing to answer your request, to our embarrassment. Be good enough to keep me informed about this issue.

I am respectfully your most humble and devoted servant in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: This is strictly in confidence, except for His Eminence (the Cardinal) if you think it appropriate.

Council Meeting, April 11, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

Measures to be taken about dismissing Fr. Klotz.

The Superior General explained that Fr. Klotz, who had been appointed Bursar at Salzburg, abused his authority and disengaged his confrères from commitment to obedience, as can be gathered from a number of letters which he has written. It's necessary to take initiatives to dismiss him. The Council was in agreement, the issue being submitted to the Cardinal Protector in a proposal... "to have the above-named Father released from his vows".

Brother Régis Rasele dismissed from the Society.

Brother Régis Rasele, having demonstrated remarkable versatility during his three-year vow probation, asked to be sent to America in order to avoid military service, but he had scarcely arrived there when unbecoming behaviour dictated his recall. On his return to France he was called to military service and, therefore, asked the Superior General to give him some money. The Council agreed with his request, informing him at the same time that he was no longer a member of the Congregation. Yet this young man writes again to ask if we would recommend that he do only one year's military service because he is an ecclesiastical student. The Council's decision is that he cannot be granted what he is requesting, given his previous behaviour, and that he should be informed quite frankly that he cannot any longer be considered a member of the Society. If, however, after his three years of military service, he perseveres in his wish to become a member of the Society, he can be once more admitted to the novitiate on condition that he provides good recommendations.

Brother Gregory appointed to the Presbytery.

A lay brother being needed to replace the domestic worker, Michel, who has left, it was agreed to appoint Brother Gregory of the Sacred Heart.

It was, however, Brother Louis who came.

L 18910412A

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, April 12, 1891

Dear Father Jouët,

The writings here enclosed will bring you up to date on the latest intrigues, which it's high time to stop. I suspected they were going on, but I didn't have any certain proof. Noting an exchange of letters between Fathers Klotz and Ramot, also Fr. Morisseau, I laid my hands on the correspondence, and you can see for yourself what it made clear to me about the activities of Fr. Klotz and his supporters. I called a Council meeting, and you can see for yourself what our conclusions are, and which I also shared with the Archbishop of Bourges and his brother, both in approval. If you yourself also approve, sign your name and pass on the document to Cardinal Monaco, having, if you think it appropriate, made a copy of it.

I asked Fr. Ramot, who seemed to me more settled and at ease with himself, if he would like to go to Sydney as Superior. He replied that at the present time he has no objection and would accept any postings offered to him. I don't know who informed Fr. Klotz about Fr. Ramot's availability. Would it be Fr. Ramot himself who wrote about this (the Sydney posting) to Antwerp? Would it be that the news was communicated from within our Council? I do not know or care! The fact is that some days afterwards (following the Council meeting) I opened a letter from Fr. Klotz to Fr. Ramot in which he forbade him (to accept Sydney), etc., etc. You can read the letter and judge for yourself. I kept this letter and did not hand it on to Fr. Ramot, not breathing a word about it to him.

Fr. Hartzer's aunt died in Strasbourg. Fr. Hartzer went there to look after the effects. He took with him Fr. Klotz's letter and posted it there with a note in approval of everything Fr. Klotz wrote in his letter. Fr. Hartzer in a telephone call asked (me) for permission to come to Issoudun to give his mother (Superior General of the Sisters) a summary of the will. I gave him permission. On his arrival, nothing was more urgent for him than to go immediately to Fr. Ramot and give him the contents of Fr. Klotz's letter, which he knew nothing about. Following their meeting, Fr. Ramot wrote the enclosed letter to me withdrawing his offer (to go to Sydney).

Seeing all that had happened, not wishing to be running matters outside of the normal running of the Society, I called a Council meeting and we addressed the two petitions which you can read for yourself, together with all the supportive documents.

The Cardinal Protector of the Sacred Congregation will see for himself on what side justice and right lie. Try and let me have as quickly as possible the Cardinal's replies to the queries I am submitting to him since this shameless opposition must be brought to an end. Yes, indeed! If the Cardinal Protector of the Sacred Congregation, now very much aware of all that has gone on, and seeing clearly through the underhand methods of our opponents, would only write a seriously condemnatory letter to them, enjoining acceptance of legitimately constituted authority, submitting loyally to all its decisions under pain of expulsion, I firmly believe that everyone and everything would return to normality. Even Fr. Klotz's expulsion would not, perhaps, be necessary, at least for the moment, if one is to go by a letter which Fr. Morisseau just now has received from him, and a copy of which I am forwarding to you! Just the same I do not lay great store by these forced conversions.

2. I am not in favour of your absence from Rome during the month of May because of our pressing affairs. At this time the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars could well be taking decisions about us and the Chapter. What do you think yourself?

3. If Rome were to put itself in the Chapter's place, maintaining the Assistants presently in place, and set out on its own authority the changes to be made, this would be the simplest course of all. Or, alternatively, if itself selected the members of the next Chapter, excluding the opposition leaders such as Fathers Guyot, Klotz, Delaporte, Ramot and Reyn, we would be rid of the main awkward opponents. We shall take good time to prepare the questions which we shall be submitting to the Sacred Congregation and everything will quietly go ahead. Try and find out if this is possible. If Cardinal Monaco tells me that I can appoint in the name of obedience, then in the event of refusal we shall send Fr. Ramot to Hammonton (USA) rather than to Sydney, since the latter posting would not, so I believe, be the right one for him, and if this is your view also, I recall that, in putting this proposal to him prior to his last letter, he had this to say to me: "I could never get on with Fr. Jouët if he made Hammonton his base; who will be Superior there? If it's he I could never accommodate myself to his way of running things; if it's myself our viewpoint would never be the same"!!! What can be done in the face of such-like views/prejudices? Let me know your thoughts on this. When you come to Issoudun we shall look at the Fr. Miniot issue. If we get Fr. Genocchi to replace you in Rome, would it be better than having Fr. Miniot? What is your view on this? Our opposition are continually active and do not stop reporting to Rome. They are calling for, so it would seem, a Visitor (assessor) in sympathy with their views, very likely no doubt after the manner of those in opposition to St. Joseph Casalanctius' administration. They tried to win over to their cause Fr. Batard who told me so himself. Isn't it pathetic?

I asked you to get me the indult, or a copy of it, which would allow us to have all our Masses offered at 1 franc (about 3.4 euros) to the advantage of our undertakings. Please send the document on to me; it's necessary to put everything in order.

I thank you appreciatively for your good wishes for the feast (Easter), and that from the whole community, to which you will convey our appreciation. While you are here in Issoudun we need to examine carefully together the position we need to adopt with regard to our Petite Oeuvres abroad (outside France). I think we should curtail their importance, having only in each house the first two or three classes of entrants, cutting down on the numbers. We shall also need to consider if the Antwerp Scholasticate might not be moved to France, only leaving in Antwerp the preparatory years of the Petite Oeuvre and the lay brothers (I mean, that is, their novitiate).

Cheerio, my friend. Thanks a thousand.

Wholly yours ex intimo corde (from the depths of my heart) in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: I have made only one copy of the documents enclosed; it is pointless for you to do so. It would delay too much the handing of this dossier to the Cardinal Protector. It would be best if he were to be given them straightaway.

But would not the feasts of the Ascension and Pentecost be a more favourable time to be received by the Sacred Congregation? In which case, if there's nothing absolutely imperative that I be there earlier, I shall leave on the Monday after Pentecost, May 18. Advise me about all this. I shall place myself at the disposition of the Sacred Congregation. Oh indeed, yes! Remain there, your presence in Rome is absolutely indispensable to me. If before I leave for Rome, you have any information about the expulsion of Fr. Klotz, and the queries I put before His Eminence Cardinal Monaco, let me have it straightaway. Issoudun, April 21, 1891

Reverend Father,

I cannot forbear to thank you most graciously for the good news you have just sent on to Rev. Fr. Superior (Chevalier) as regards perpetual adoration. May the Lord be blessed and yourself also! Tomorrow I shall remember you in a very special manner at the holy altar, asking Our Lady and St. Joseph to obtain for you from the Heart of Jesus a fitting reward for this latest benefit you have obtained for our dear Society. But if I may, dear Father, I would like to say to you that I am not at all in agreement with you on one issue. You write: "Now that I have obtained this favour, my task is over." No, I do not think so. There remain, so I believe, many other things to be done on our behalf in Rome by you, and if I may only mention one, permit me to ask you to get me, if it's possible, the brotherhood of "The Little Tour through Purgatory". The Heart of Jesus, so mercifully disposed to sinners, cannot forget the good souls in Purgatory. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, who frees from hell St. Joseph the innate protector of those unfortunate suffering souls, would not be happy if they didn't see these three devotions completed by a faith that is so dear to all the pious faithful. The rapidity with which the thousands of copies of your little book is being disposed of is a compelling proof that this work meets a need dear to the hearts of the faithful, and I doubt very much if the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart could really say that they have all the devotions which meet their motto if they didn't have this latter devotion.

Accordingly, while thankful to the Sacred Heart and yourself for what has been achieved already, I would appeal to the divine Heart and also yourself, Father, to work towards providing us with a fourth and final Archconfraternity.

According to your kind letters to our respected Superior, the affairs of our dear Society are in good shape, and if we continue to pray well we can shortly, I confidently expect, sing the thanksgiving canticle.

While awaiting this great day, I renew dear Father my appreciable regard for you, together with my deepest appreciation in J.C.

F.X. Maillard, MSC.

I join myself to Fr. Maillard in congratulating you, dear Father, on the success of your negotiations on behalf of our three Archconfraternities and ask you to do the same favour for our "Little Journey to Purgatory" (Petite Tour du Purgatoire).

I hope you will be able to provide the other services mentioned:

1. The definitive approval of our Constitutions in the sense you are aware of.
2. Having a definitive directory which would no longer be at the mercy of a stormy Chapter.
3. A document setting down the requirements of a Chapter at a somewhat future date, the issues to be considered, the members who would have to be excluded.
4. An Indult for our Masses.

The foregoing is of the utmost importance, and your presence in Rome is essential to bring it about.

Cheerio, Father. Send me a reply about the outcome of the queries addressed to Cardinal Monaco since the time has come to send Fr. Ramot from Issoudun to Hammonton, and Fr. Tréand to Sydney where he is being asked for impatiently.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Sent to P. Barral after his Paris operation and prior to his departure for the USA seeking entry to a diocese.

April 22, 1891

I am pleased to say that Fr. Pierre Marie Barral, a member of our Society, the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, for the past eighteen years, has been obliged to leave in order to follow a course of treatment which is incompatible with the religious life. Since it is his wish to give himself to pastoral ministry insofar as his health allows him, I am pleased to commend him warmly, testifying that we cannot but express praise for his zealous intelligence, his devoted committedness and his religious devotedness to our undertakings and to our person.

Council Meeting, April 25, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

Request of Bishop Couppé for a capable priest.

Fr. General made it known that Bishop Couppé has been looking for a competent priest who would be able to help him effectively on the mission. Fr. Roussel, who has returned from Guayaquil, does not offer him enough of a guarantee, and he is looking for, instead, Brother Mégret whom he would ordain to the priesthood, but he hasn't studied enough theology and, consequently, would not meet the Bishop's requirements. Failing the latter, he would accept Fr. Renaud who is still a novice and, consequently, one can see a great problem arising if the novitiate has to be cut short, and an indult requested permitting him to take vows before the legal statutory time. Then the name of Fr. Helfer was put forward, who, given his nationality, would be a very acceptable choice, but he is in charge of the Salzburg Petite Oeuvre and there's nobody to replace him.

Acceptance of Brother Edmond Zwarthoed to three-yearly vows.

Fr. Carrière, Superior at Canet de Mar (Spain), requests admission to three-yearly vows for lay brother Edmond Zwarthoed, whose commitment, piety, devotedness to work are praised by him (Carrière). On his commendation, likewise that of Fr. Piperon, he is accepted for temporary profession, provided his health is not affected by articular rheumatism.

Decision about Brothers Cochard, Meunier, Villoux.

A discussion ensued about Brothers Cochard, Meunier and Villoux who were sent to the Bourges major seminary to revise their studies, benefiting from the two years of service as ecclesiastical students, given recognition as such by the Archbishop. Brother Meunier was declared unfit for military service, Brother Villoux held over, Brother Cochard, however, accepted. He asked to be sent abroad in order to avoid being called up, but this was considered to be too inconvenient and his request could not be granted. It was then discussed as to whether or not these three brothers should be left in the major seminary until the end of the year, and an affirmative conclusion was reached.

Brothers François Lubbers and Julius Flapper dismissed.

Brother François, sent from the Sacred Heart (Issoudun) to Antwerp for health reasons, has been dismissed from the Society, either for health reasons or for attempting to mislead the Superior. Brother Jules, who went on the missions of his own free choice, but was sent away from the New Pomeranian mission because of his difficult personality, has returned to the Antwerp house. While he is behaving properly and Fr. Reyn is willing to keep him, nevertheless because of the bad influence he could have on the brothers in the missions, the unanimous decision was to dismiss him.

Brother Laliaux accepted to the Subdiaconate positis ponendis.

Brother Laliaux, threatened by military service if he is not in sacred orders by the end of his 26th year at the end of August next, requests the Superior General to put him forward for the subdiaconate on the feast of St. Peter (June 29). The Council came to the conclusion that this brother, however much his piety leaves something to be desired, has in himself, otherwise, the requisite qualities for the priesthood, and is of the view that there is reason to go back on the decision taken about him on two previous occasions, but in line with the following conditions: that he is not required to be the support of his family, his mother being a widow, or live with his friends' parish priest; that he provide a satisfactory explanation of the contrast as between what he says himself about being called to orders in his own diocese if he had stayed there, and the statement to the contrary by the Rector of the Arras seminary when he was in touch with Fr. Piperon. In addition, he must before ordination make a retreat of fifteen days at the least.

Request of Juan Garcia Alonso.

Finally the request of the Spanish archpriest to be accepted for the novitiate was considered. Since he is aged 56 and doesn't know any French, it would become impossible for him to follow the novitiate exercises and, accordingly, one cannot accede to his request.

Dear Father,

Fr. Maillard and I read your letter to the Cardinal Prefect of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. We thought it was very good and it's not whether you can, but rather that you should send it to Fr. Jouët who himself will deliver it, being all the more opportune a letter because of the continuing activity of our opponents. Fr. Klotz in one of his letters states that they have challenged in Rome those indults which prolong our powers as Superior General, claiming that these are null and void because the reasons upholding them are false. They are, therefore, requesting new elections for a Superior General and Assistants. Everything then is being called into doubt, holes are being torn in everything. The only good being accomplished is what they are doing and looking for. Pathetic self-blinded characters!

You can write to Bishop Couppé yourself to let him know what you think; this would be best. Send his letter on to the Archbishop and he will be made aware of the issues. Fr. Jouët has written to me saying that it is more convenient that I go to Rome after Pentecost and I shall leave, therefore, on Pentecost Sunday evening. Say nothing about this.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

There follows a letter very likely addressed to Fr. Jouët.

I am forwarding to you a long letter which you will be good enough to read and then forward to the Cardinal Prefect of the Congregation. You will see from Fr. General's letter that he not only approves (of my letter), but also wishes me to send it on. What I wrote came to me on Sunday while I was praying. I thought it might be helpful.

Otherwise, nothing to report from here; all is calm. The new novices who have arrived have settled down well. They had suffered up above. We have got as far as the 16th day of the Great Retreat (30 days), launched out on the wide sea in full sails. Pray for us. Dear Fr. Meyer is fully settled in here, still holding on to some of his prejudices, but he is little by little forgetting his confrères. This quiet life here will do him a lot of good.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Ch. Piperon.

If you find anything in my letter which needs to be re-written, return it immediately to me and I shall change it. Excuse this torn paper; I damaged it clumsily when opening it.

Issoudun, April 28, 1891

Dear Father,

I shall be leaving then on Pentecost Sunday in the afternoon, and, all going well, I should be in Rome on Tuesday. I am saying nothing about this to anybody.

The Archbishop said to me that an appeal should be made requesting the release from vows of Fr. Klotz, and necessitating his signature, and about which you must write to him. Do it without delay.

Besides this petition, there is another for Cardinal Monaco in which I requested, if it be possible in the present circumstances:

1. to send Fr. Ramot to America, and in the name of obedience if he rejects the appointment;
2. to forbid the members of the opposition to write or visit each other without the letters being first submitted to me, or unless they have asked me for permission to see each other, and that in case of refusal to meet these requirements I would forbid them in the name of holy obedience...

The lack of a response to these questions will indicate that the same ill-will continues. Here for your consideration is an extract in a letter from Fr. Klotz to Fr. Morisseau, dated Salzburg, April 22, 1891.

"Dear Father,...

In all our undertakings and in every letter I continually expressed the same expectation: an Administration in keeping with the Constitutions which Fr. Chevalier drew up, an Administration appointed by the Chapter which should meet with other (appointed) members every three years, or be directly appointed by Rome following the resolution of all the problems.

This may well displease, but it is the truth. And all of us, so it seems to me, are duty-bound to work towards the arrival of such an Administration. As far as the issue of prolonging the powers of Father General is concerned, Rome is constrained by the Indults issue. Let us patiently await its reply. But I can see for myself that I am branching off into dangerous territory, and I don't want to cause anyone pain. I hold back... Let me know if you can get letters without their being seen by Fr. Chevalier, since the Constitutions are not clear about this."

Father M. (Morisseau) didn't breathe a word to me about this letter. I don't trust him... According to this latest document, the opposition want a return to the election of the Superior General. One can see what they are getting at: it's to push me aside. Fr. Klotz, so it seems, would lead this escapade if one is to believe Fr. Pierre Barral... The devil, quite obviously, is taking hold of all these unfortunate confrères; I am very upset about all of this.

I am pleased to know that your house, following the explosion, wasn't greatly damaged. The Lord be praised. No details about this incident or its cause.

Cheerio, Father.
All good wishes in C.J.

Council Meeting, May 4, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

Admission to temporary vows of Lay Brothers.

1. Between the last Council meeting and the present one, at a special meeting consisting of Fr. General, Fathers Morisseau and Maillard, following the good report from the Antwerp Superior, the following lay brothers were admitted to temporary vows:

Felix (Jules Lacasse), born at Atton (Meurthe and Moselle), November 12, 1868, entered October 29, 1889, received the habit, March 5, 1890.

Eusèbe (Léon Braun), born at Munster (Alsace), December 23, 1865; entered October 29, 1889; received the habit, March 5, 1890.

Mauritius. Brother Mauritius (B. Alessie), born Amsterdam, August 24, 1854; entered November 28, 1889; received the habit March 5, 1890.

Vitalis. Brother Vitalis (J. Jacobs), born Berchem (Belgium), February 8, 1868; entered November 28, 1889; received the habit, March 5, 1890.

Ambrosius. Brother Ambrosius (H. Libbert), born Saint Hubert (Germany), October 19, 1873; entered December 29, 1889; received the habit March 4, 1890.

Brother Stephanus (J. van de Sande), born Heyst (Heist-op-den-Berg, Belgium); entered December 20, 1889; received the habit March 5, 1890.

Hubert. Brother Hubert (H. Keuters), born Cologne (Prussia), September 23, 1870; arrived from Salzburg where he did his novitiate.

Brothers' Novitiate.

The following were accepted as postulants:

Justinus (Jean Berkens), born Asten, Holland, May 3, 1860.

Augustinus (Willem van Meurs), born Kekerdom, Holland, June 21, 1856.

Eligius (Jan van Adrichem), born Haye, Holland, December 13, 1871.

Mathias (Antonius van den Eijnden), born Veghel, Holland, June 30, 1865.

2. These admissions were approved by Fr. Piperon at Chezal-Benoît on April 28, 1891 and by Fr. Jouët as is clear from a letter posted from Rome, and now read out by Fr. General, but while giving his approval he gave it to be understood that the admissions were not quite in order. According to the information supplied to him by the Secretary of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, admissions to profession should be submitted in Council two months in advance, and have the majority of votes from those present, taking no account of those who are absent (from the Council meeting). The undersigned, acknowledging that the admissions in question have been approved of by Fr. General and Fathers Morisseau and Maillard, are of the view that there is no valid reason to go back on the decisions taken and agreed by all. If, for the rest, these decisions were affected by some irregularities, the legal healing process (sanctio) asked for at the relevant Vatican office would regularize the situation. Meanwhile, one will see to it for the future that admissions will only be considered in properly convened meetings at regular intervals, decisions being arrived at through the majority votes of the members present and, when considered opportune, getting the views of those unable to be present.

The requirement of having admissions in advance. A proposal about this.

3. The requirement to accept for admission two months in advance, strictly speaking, applies only to those who make solemn vows because it is during this period of time, and only at this time, that the novices must dispose of their effects, not being possible to do so after they have made their vow of poverty which, effectively, makes it legally impossible for them to exercise any right or act of ownership without approval, and at the risk, otherwise, of invalidity.

Meanwhile our Constitutions lay it down that the novices, prior to profession, should dispose of the administration, and the interest, and the use of their possessions. For the rest a certain interval is needed, either to take advice from advisers who are not able to be present, or for seeking instructions which one might be in need of to be clear about issues, and thereby able to give one's assent with full knowledge of the issues.

It was agreed that for the future there will be no further admissions at the last moment, but rather with sufficient time to take into consideration the measures here noted immediately above.

Fr. Miniot requested for the Rome house.

4. Fr. Jouët in his letter asked that Fr. Miniot from the Paris house should become his aide in running the Rome house, or that he at least be given to him as a confessor. It was agreed that the Father's departure would not create a great void in the Paris house, although his being changed could create a certain amount of inconvenience in the present circumstances and, besides, Fr. Miniot would not appear to be endowed with the requisite qualities fitting him for the Rome house and, as well, his having to go there would be an admission that no suitable candidate is available for this post and, if there is one, there is no wish to send him.

Conditional acceptance of Fr. Chopin to final profession.

5. Fr. Piperon stated that Fr. Chopin, his assistant (socius) at the novitiate, had not renewed his three-yearly vows on April 12 last. It amazes that he didn't ask to take perpetual vows at the end of the retreat which he recently made at the Sacred Heart house (Issoudun). There is reason to think that he may have been influenced (turned off) by the incidents which were a feature of the last Chapter, and the conclusion was reached that if he is not willing to make perpetual profession he cannot, in consequence, continue in his present responsibility (as socius). If he were spontaneously on his part to ask for profession, the Council, following the favourable assent of Fr. Piperon, would support his request and he would then continue as his socius.

Fathers Linckens and van Grinsven were appointed Counsellors at the Antwerp house.

6. Fr. Maillard reported that the Superior of the Antwerp house finds himself, following Fr. Meyer's departure, reduced to one member only, Fr. Vandel. He puts forward in place of the departed member Fr. Linckens, who is the oldest and most able of the priests in the house, and at the same time Fr. van Grinsven should be added to the Council because he is the lay brothers' Novice Master. The number of local Counsellors not being limited by the Constitutions, the members saw nothing objectionable about the nomination of the two names suggested, and they were appointed to the local Council of the Antwerp house.

Your Grace,

The Sacred Congregation, informed about my trip to Rome, has replied that I can be received beginning Pentecost Monday. I would hope to be away only on the Sunday after Pentecost.

I make bold to ask Your Grace, who is aware of all the problems besetting us, to be kind enough to favour me with a commendatory letter for the Cardinal Prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. Such a letter would be of great support in reaching a favourable outcome in regard to all our problems. The more I perceive the 'sang froid' (bloody-minded) intrigues of the opposition, the more I consider it to be inspired by an evil spirit. The devil, seeing no doubt all the good our little Society has given rise to already, and what it is likely to do in the Church, is at the present moment unleashed against it. Fortunately, Your Grace, you are on hand to come to our defence.

Rome would also like Your Grace to offer your assessment of the Council's decision to expel Fr. Klotz, having regard to the documents made available to us and, as well, the other request to demand, if I may, in the name of obedience, to transfer to other houses members who have refused to go there.

I have the honour to be, Your Grace, with the deepest respect, Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant and son in C.J.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I am forwarding to you the letters of Fathers Piperon and Maillard, together with the Archbishop's seal of approval. His Grace is always very supportive. It was not easy for him to commit himself to this seal of approval. He did not want to put his signature to the request from the Salzburg Novitiate, declaring that it had nothing to do with him! Is my trip (to Rome) looked forward to in anticipation? It has come to my knowledge that the opposition have been making use of the services of Cardinal Mermillod to have their memorandum submitted to the Sacred Congregation. It's he, therefore, who will be their advocate. Try and see him.

Issoudun, May 5, 1891

Your Grace,

I am so sorry to hear that you are suffering a great deal. We shall increase our prayers to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart that your pain will be lessened and that you can quickly recover. I wish to thank Your Grace for the sealed letter of approval which you were pleased to enclose supportively with the letters of Fathers Piperon and Maillard.

I am forwarding to Your Grace a letter I have had from Fr. Jouët, insisting that I take to Rome with me a supportive letter from Your Grace. Take your time about this, Your Grace, since I am not leaving for Rome until the evening of Pentecost Sunday or Monday morning. There is no hurry for the moment. Since this letter will have important consequences, it is best that Your Grace should write it at his own convenience. The opposition, according to what they say and put on record, no longer have any confidence in the present administration, wanting a new one whose members would be chosen from among themselves, the former pushed aside. We have here the nub of the issue. What they blame and identify as being out of order dates in particular from the expulsions (of religious in France), but these younger priests, who were then for the most part on school benches, cannot begin to imagine the disarray brought upon us by the expulsions, being forced to go into exile, etc., etc.

There you have young men who are indebted for everything to the Society and up to now have done little or nothing for it, setting themselves up as censors, citing a lack of care and organization, the wrong procedures on the part of those priests who provided the initiative for everything, and turned grey from being worn out and the deprivations, yet who made the undertakings prosper, founded associations which are to the honour and glory of the Church and Congregation, and which, far from having incurred debts, arrived at healthy finances, besides being esteemed by, and having the support of, the French Hierarchy, and the whole world in a manner of speaking... Isn't all this very annoying? Yes, indeed, Your Grace, your impartiality and fairness make up for such ingratitude, all these lies and exaggerations.

Please accept my most respectful regards in C.J.

Dear Fr. Píperon,

1. Your idea about writing to Cardinal Mermillod was heavenly sent. May I be allowed to add two small additions, one referring to Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop Marchal, and, on the other hand, Fr. Jouët so unfairly criticized by the opponents.

Send off your letter as soon as possible since there isn't much time left. Fr. Maillard, who knows Cardinal Mermillod, is writing a letter which you can enclose with yours. You will send on at the same time the petition about the Salzburg Novitiate which you will sign beforehand. I am grateful to you for your comments which I shall make use of with the Sacred Congregation (during his Rome visit). They are very wise and judicious.

3. (No number 2!) Try to come here during the current week, on Wednesday or Thursday, so that we can see each other before I leave (for Rome). I, for my part, am about to provide a synopsis of the infamous Chapter, with a memorandum setting out carefully all the facts. I shall send it on to you. I am also requesting the Archbishop of Bourges to write from his side to Cardinal Mermillod asking him to be peace-maker. Perhaps you might go from Chezal-Benoît to Bourges to get the Archbishop to endorse your letter to Cardinal Mermillod, if there's time to do so, but you will not be in time because your letters should be posted by tomorrow evening, Monday. I hope, then, that the Archbishop will choose to write to him (Mermillod) directly.

4. Send me on the proofs for the Sacred Heart School if you have had time to revise the corrections.

Wholly yours in C.J.

NB: To avoid any delay, Fr. Maillard is sending his letter directly to Fr. Jouët.

Your Grace,

It is to His Eminence, Cardinal Verga, Prefect of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, that Your Grace should send your letter. I gather that the opposition have sent their varied memoranda to Cardinal Mermillod, requesting that they should then be sent directly to the Sacred Congregation to make their case. His Eminence (Mermillod) has been to Issoudun to preach during our important pilgrimages (September 8); he knows us particularly well, liking and having a regard for our Congregation, as well as our undertakings which he has supported on a number of occasions.

Now Your Grace, and indeed presuming on your kindness to the very limits, you might be so good as to write to Cardinal Mermillod appealing to him to act in concert with our Protector, Cardinal Monaco, who is so committed to us, asking him to calm down these individuals and help us to reach a favourable arrangement, and in consequence of which you would again be favouring us in a very significant and indebted manner.

I place myself at your feet, Your Grace, requesting your fatherly blessing, asking you to accept, together with my profuse thanks, the most respectful good wishes of your devoted child (sic!) in C.J.

Issoudun, May 10, 1891

Copy of the Memorandum submitted to the Holy See.

Since our Society's Chapter which took place in January 1891, I considered it my duty to be silent, placing my confidence in divine Providence which always knows how to draw good from evil. But in face of the increasing attacks levelled by our opponents against our administration, I have decided on the advice of our distinguished Archbishop, who extends to our Society such a very keen interest, to present this memorandum in order to enlighten the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. I can confirm before the Lord that the facts here presented by me express the exact truth of things.

To present the issues in an orderly way I shall relate what took place:

1. before the Chapter;
2. during the Chapter;
3. after the Chapter.

I. Before the Chapter

While a seminarian at the Bourges Major Seminary, I was already drawn to thoughts about a Congregation whose special aim would be that of spreading devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. On the advice of my spiritual directors, I pushed the idea aside as if it were a temptation. Ordained to the priesthood in 1851, following 3 years of ministry in different parishes of the diocese, I was appointed curate in Issoudun on October 8, 1854. There I found helping me one of my former fellow seminarians whom I had already considered as a possible collaborator in this work. I outlined my plan to him, and he agreed with it. Having neither financial means, support, influence, we placed our confidence in Mary, beginning a Novena which was due to end on the very day itself of the proclamation of the dogma of the Immaculate Conception on December 8, 1854. We promised the Holy Virgin that if she heard us we would set about making her known under a name demonstrative of her power over the Heart of Jesus. There you have the beginning of the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. The Novena had scarcely ended when a stranger, who wanted to remain anonymous, offered us beyond all our expectations 20,000 francs (about 78,650 euros) to found a missionary Congregation.

His Eminence Cardinal du Pont, Archbishop of Bourges, seeing in this episode divine intervention, gave us permission to begin our new undertaking. God alone knows all the difficulties we had to face and overcome, the deprivations we had to put up with. A crushing blow lay in wait for us: my confrère was called by the Cardinal to take charge of the Cathedral. I was now alone with Fr. Piperon who had come to join us. Not wishing to be discouraged, we commended ourselves to the Immaculate Virgin whose protection did not fail us. All hell broke loose against us, having to meet a thousand obstacles, but these we were, thanks to Mary, able to surmount.

Following a number of years facing problems and set-backs, some priests began to join us. We then undertook the building of our church and that of our residence at the cost of great sacrifices. We had already called our powerful patroness Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. We set up, under this name, with the approval of the Archbishop of Bourges and the Holy See, a prayer Association for help and success in difficult and desperate situations. This Association, erected into a Universal Archconfraternity associated with our Society, presently numbers more than 20 million Associates throughout the world. It was at this time also we thought about ways of recruiting, setting up apostolic undertakings, markedly blessed by God, on October 8, 1866.

In 1869 we received permission from Pope (now St.) Pius IX for the solemn crowning of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Pilgrims came from everywhere to worship at the Issoudun sanctuary which went on to become a very celebrated centre of pilgrimages. So many unexpected favours were obtained there that at the time of writing we count as many as 490,000 testimonies in our archives. In 1869 Rome granted our little growing Society a congratulatory Brief. In 1874 it was formally approved, and in 1887 our Constitutions were approved 'per modum experimenti' for 10 years.

In November 1880 a shocking experience was visited upon us. By a decree of the French government we were expelled from our houses; we were to witness the closure of our churches; our novices, scholastics, young candidates, dispersed. We had, in consequence, to expatriate ourselves. Many took refuge in the Issoudun presbytery which Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne of Bourges had by wise aforethought, with the Holy See's approval, made over to our Society. We then moved our novitiate and other undertakings to Holland where the estimable Bishop of Bois-le-Duc received us like a father. While all this was happening, the Sovereign Pontiff, Leo XIII, gloriously reigning, aware that we had personnel available, offered us the important Vicariates of Melanesia and Micronesia for evangelization, which had been left for sometime without mission ministry. We obediently accepted, although these difficult missions were obviously beyond our resources. The Lord blessed our acceptance and commitment. These wild lands, watered by the perspiration of our missionaries, have already greatly uplifted us, three of our confrères sealed with the episcopal character. To help them carry out more effectively their apostolate we founded at Issoudun in 1880, with the approval of the Archbishop, a female Congregation called Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and already thirty or so of these valiant women share in these lands the apostolate of our dear missionaries.

It is not hard to understand, then, how much these undertakings have cost us in concern, demands, sacrifices, and worries of all kinds. The expulsions (from France), it has to be said, caused very great concerns for our administration. The Assistants (General), like the others, had to go into exile, and take on, with the approval of the Holy See, the direction of work which we could not lay aside. I was, myself, alone then, so to say, for quite a number of years, in my leadership of the Society, overseeing the requirements of its members and the variety of work spread here and there. Would it not be surprising, then, if some unacceptable practices had not crept in to the administration? This was inevitable. The time for the Constitutions' revision having arrived, I gave thought to its completion; what I added considered to be much too considerable (problematic) in the view of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. I was requested to bring together in a Chapter a miscellany of the old and new (Constitutions) with the declaration that if one settled for the earlier Constitutions and added some slight changes, definitive approval, which was what we wanted so eagerly, would follow immediately, whereas if the more recent Constitutions were favoured, they would have to be submitted to fresh appraisal. The confrères, gathered together, opted unanimously for the former Constitutions.

The general, or particular, regulations which I had set out when we had our first foundation (we at the time had only the one house, that of Issoudun) were, therefore, very incomplete, regrettably so. Accordingly, desirous before my death to put the final stamp on this, my life's work, and aware on the other hand that uncertain issues would be misinterpreted, that discipline would begin to be relaxed, that abuses would become prevalent in our houses abroad, that unexpected, quite un-religious customs might become invasive and rid our Society of its uniform characteristics, the thought came to me of completing the Constitutions for the sake of the general good. I got hold of, specifically for this purpose, the Rules and Directories of the most important Congregations in the modern era, those of the Jesuits, for example, as well as the Redemptorists and some others. Having completed this important undertaking, absolutely needed, I sent on the results to each Assistant, and all Superiors of our houses, even the most distant, requesting them to let me have their views which I would take into account in the definitive text.

In my role as first Superior and Founder, I believed I could send this new Directory to all our houses, asking that its recommendations be put into practice for the common good, and to cut short anything arbitrary. But this Directory was poorly received at our Antwerp house, as well as in the Dutch, Austrian and American houses, where self-satisfied approaches and independent attitudes had already taken over. There ensued much serious discontent which became explosive at the last Chapter. Conscious of the systematic opposition, I immediately wrote to ask that this Directory be followed simply 'per modum experimenti' (as a trial run) until the next Chapter where everyone would make his observations, and whatever was deemed necessary would be withheld or added. This plea was not sufficiently taken into consideration which, as I saw it, was quite legitimate. Another cause for discontent arose from our houses abroad where the Superiors thought they should set up apostolic schools to draw the faithful into collecting funds for these schools. These numerous undertakings needed quite large personnel for teaching, and we could only do something about it by taking some staff out of our only scholasticate in Antwerp.

The young Heads of this scholasticate did not take into consideration the Society's needs, making it obvious that they were quite unhappy and ill-disposed. Moreover, we had noted that our youngsters in the Sacred Heart Petite Oeuvre, greatly conscious of their nationality, had separatist attitudes. The Assistants, brought together for a General Council meeting, and having spoken to the Archbishop of Bourges, decided unanimously last December to bring together the rhetoric year, the second and third years of all our apostolic schools close to France into the one house, that which His Grace Archbishop Marchal kindly wished to place at our disposal. In this way we would achieve two aims: providing a scholasticate with fewer professors needing to be called on, and infusing our youngsters with one and the same spirit. This proposal, despite its wisdom and practicality, drew more feelings of hostility from our Antwerp, Tilburg and Salzburg houses who wanted to hold on to their students. We did leave them all the youngest, up to the third year. There you have, principally, the explanation for the aggressive discontent which these confrères brought with them to the Chapter, and which they tried to share with and thus influence some others at the Chapter.

II. At the Chapter

Having decided to call the Chapter, the General and his Assistants chose those who should participate in keeping with the Constitutions then in vogue, and specifically Superiors presently in office, or members who had been. The number was limited. Fr. Guyot, who recently had visited our Northern houses, finding people very worked up, advised us to call to the Chapter the Superiors of these houses, hoping thereby that this gesture of confidence would draw them towards more amenable attitudes: we did so, but we would come to regret it painfully.

As soon as they arrived in Issoudun, they straightaway launched into criticisms, and made clear their intention to set about reforming everything. I invited all to come together for a day's retreat, asking the Holy Spirit to shed light on our deliberations. They rejected my proposal, stating that such a retreat was only required when appointing the Superior General. They then made use of the time which preceded the Chapter opening to confer and intrigue among themselves.

According to the Roman rescript, the Chapter members were only called to make a choice between the old and the new Constitutions. The meeting had no other aim in mind. The choice once made, my intention then was to put together all the comments made about the Directory and complete them because this was a prerequisite undertaking, and then we would be going our different ways until we came together again to give our Constitutions definitive approval. At this second meeting in Chapter we would, therefore, deal with all the issues affecting the well-being of the Institute. Those priests who had come with a well-focused plan could not bring themselves in any way to share this view; the Chapter, so they insisted, being the principal seat of authority, had the right and duty to consider all the issues which it judged to be opportune, making the major Superiors account, be answerable, for their administration, bring about helpful reforms, etc. Animated by such-like approaches, one can understand what such a Chapter would be like. The Superior General and his Assistants were accused of having broken with the Constitutions, thereby betraying the Society's best interests. Before these unjust and ill-thought out accusations, I made the observation that the 1880 expulsions had caused calamitous problems for the leadership of the Society because, with the dispersal of the Assistants, it could well easily happen that irregularities became prevalent, and issues could have been overlooked with serious consequences, but all of this would have been quite involuntary and unwished for and, therefore, such an abnormal set of circumstances as these had to be taken into account. I myself, indeed, was the first to regret this unhappy state of affairs, my principal wish being to remedy what was wrong by taking all possible measures to deal with the prevalent problems.

These observations, immediately above, so justified in the circumstances, made no impression on these prejudiced individuals. They acted as if there was neither Superiors or anyone in charge of the assembly, bringing to the general debate whatever issues they wanted considered without submitting them in advance to the president of the Chapter. I was forced to object when certain issues which seemed to me to be very contentious and premature were brought forward, such as, for example, moving the centre (seat) of the Society to Rome, etc. We were, then, faced with indescribable scenes, recourse to violence and threats. Fr. Jouët, our Procurator General in Rome, who over 25 years had devoted himself to the Society's best interests with commitment beyond all praise, became the recipient of complaints which were as unsubstantiated as they were unmerited. Fr. Piperon, whose wisdom, piety, devotedness are respected by all covering the 34 years he has been with the Society, was also unfairly treated because he had placed himself on the side of authority. Disrespecting his age, his abilities, the services rendered, the young priests threw in his face these outrageous words: "You are nothing but an ignorant and incapable lackey."

Then, taking matters to the extreme, the opposition raised doubts about all the administration's undertakings, the validity of religious professions, etc. They decided to suspend the Chapter, and go and submit all their problems to the Holy See. They appointed two delegates to represent them: Fr. Piperon, Assistant(!), and Fr. Klotz, as secretary. Fr. Jouët, on the advice of the Archbishop of Bourges, would go to Rome at the same time to defend himself, and provide, if needed, explanations. The Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, having heard the statements of both sides, concluded that the Chapter had completed its purpose and, therefore, brought it to a close, forwarding to me the decree bringing it to an end and requesting me to forward its Acts. On hearing this, the opponents cried treachery and began the creation of a situation more violent and painful than anything hitherto experienced. Fr. Guyot communicated in writing his resignation as Assistant (General) and Fr. Klotz his own as Superior and Novice Master at Tilburg. Having been given responsibility to send the Acts of the Chapter to Rome, I went to put them together and found, to my utter amazement, that the Chapter Secretary, Fr. Klotz, had taken them off with him to Holland, leaving behind no copy, acting, no doubt, in concert with the disaffected. Then, on his own initiative, he himself took them off to Rome unbeknown to the Superior General. I hold back from passing judgment on such behaviour which the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars is aware of.

III. Following the Chapter

The opponents, numbering seven or eight, looking upon the dissolution of the Chapter as an outrage in face of their dignity, got together in a meeting and brought out, in a fit of pique, a protest which they forwarded to Rome. Despite my forbidding each one to mention in their houses what went on at the Chapter, they found nothing more important to do than to bring their confrères up to date on all the problems so that they too could share their discontent. Since Tilburg no longer had a Novice Master, because Fr. Klotz had resigned and there was no-one to replace him, it was decided, having consulted the Archbishop, to transfer the novitiate to Chezal-Benoît in the Archdiocese of Bourges. The Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars agreed with the decision and the esteemed Bishop of Bois-de-Duc (Holland) readily approved also. Fr. Piperon, First Assistant, formerly Superior at Tilburg, and Novice Master there also, went there (to Tilburg) to bring twelve youngsters, all French-speaking, to Chezal-Benoît. While all this was going on, Fr. Klotz suddenly appeared in Rome where he needed, so he said, to spend two or three months to look after the outcome of the issues being pursued by the opposing party (to Chevalier). He made it his business to counsel by telegram his Antwerp supporters to go immediately to Tilburg and try to stop the transfer of the novices to France. Despite the violent procedures to which they resorted, their efforts were in vain, and they then proceeded to draw up a new protest which would be forwarded to the Holy See.

The Council, having agreed that Fr. Klotz should be dismissed, and also of the view that his continuing presence at Tilburg was quite impossible, appointed him as Bursar in Salzburg, an appointment he had sought on another occasion. This change only added to his discontent, however, as well as his confrères'. He charged the administration with being both unjust and vengeful. He then proceeded to set up a quite active correspondence with his supporters, calling upon them not to give way on anything and stay as much opposed as ever. I have here before me some of this correspondence where the facts cited above are clearly set out.

In the decree dissolving the Chapter, it was stated that the administration of the Institute would be carried out as before, so long as the Sacred Congregation did not say anything to the contrary. "Has meas letteras statim ac accipies notas facies omnibus Capituli sociis ut quisque sciat, quod usque Sac. Cong. Ep. et Reg. aliter, decreverit res Societatis, ut antea peragendas." Now it so happens that the Society's interests in Australia necessitate the appointment of a new Superior in Sydney. We have Fr. Ramot in mind who himself also stepped down as Superior in Watertown (USA), following his acceptance of the opposition's views, but he agreed with our proposal (to go to Sydney). Fr. Klotz, however, hearing about it, wrote to him and encouraged him not to go to Australia because, in the present circumstances he said, his duty was to remain in Issoudun and provide information about the activities of the administration.

Faced with such-like a revolt, the Council, having been supportively encouraged by His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges, notified Fr. Klotz of his dismissal from the Society, following which he wrote a letter of regret, promising better things for the future. He had been given the opportunity to mend his ways but, sadly, he hadn't changed at all. Strengthened by his freedom up to now, Fr. Klotz became the opposing group's leader, never letting up in his criticism of the administration, making every possible effort to alienate people. Denigrating our actions and refusing to acknowledge our authority, he, nevertheless, was not at all hesitant in calling upon our good-will in coming to the aid of his impoverished parents, asking quite recently for an increase in their yearly support from 300 francs (about 1,200 euros) to 800 (about 2,730 euros), as well as meeting a debt totalling some hundreds of francs which they had contracted. Hoping to win him over by kindness, we acceded to his wishes, and yet his response to our good-will took the form of intrigue and embitterment. This is something which pains me greatly, this ingratitude of our young opponents. I am aware that Fathers Hartzer and Klotz in Salzburg, Fathers Lanctin, Offermans and Peeters in Tilburg, Fathers Vandael, Reyn and Meyer in Antwerp, have signed, with other young priests, a petition, or rather a memorandum, against our administration. Well then, who are these young religious? They are youngsters from our apostolic schools, poor youngsters brought together by us when twelve years old whom we nurtured, fed and clothed thereafter at the cost of very great sacrifices. And today, how are they acknowledging all these favours and benefits? By being unsettling and insubordinate. Isn't it a case of asserting with the prophet: "Filiis enutrivit et exaltavi: ipsi autem spreverunt me." (Those sons I nurtured and brought up, now themselves reflect negatively upon me.)

What do these ungrateful sons accuse us of? Of not having always abided by the Constitutions, particularly so since 1880 to the present time, and of having acted improperly. They forget the unhappy times we have been passing through, with the expulsions dismissing us to the four corners of the earth. Not having as yet sufficient numbers well trained, nor leadership personnel in any numbers, we had to leave each other (in France), take flight and seek refuge abroad. While we were struggling and trying to cope with persecution and problems of all sorts, where were those who today are putting the blame on us? On the benches of our apostolic schools or in our scholasticates, without concerns, worries or cares. We laboured day and night on their behalf, going on lengthy and painstaking journeys, seeking financial support to meet their needs, and there now you have these same youngsters, on becoming priests, profiting from our endeavours to turn against us. In place of overlooking the irregularities which find an explanation in these circumstances cited, they are up in arms, tearing to pieces the womb which bore them!!! "Si inimicus maledixisset mihi, sustinuissem utique." (If my enemy turned against me, this I could accept.) Not so, however; these are young men we have taken in, accepted at our table, sharing with them bread and friendship. God be praised that only a small number embody these attitudes. In other houses, elsewhere, people stay calm and are happy in heart if one is to judge by the confidence they place in us and the warm regards they have for us.

Our opponents again forget that it was during the persecutory period, which still continues, that we founded the houses which are home to them and provide them with their daily sustenance. Moreover, we accepted, at the wish of the Holy See, the difficult Oceania mission which today promises such wonderful expectations, where forty of our colleagues give of themselves so heroically, and since we founded the Congregation of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Religious, now blossoming more and more, they have already provided more than 30 sisters who share the demanding work of our intrepid missionaries among the natives. The disgruntled forget that we set up the Rome house as well as all those in and outside France, and that we also began, with the Holy See's approval, the worthy and successful Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart now spread throughout the entire world, and counting as many as 20 million associates. They forget too that this work, from which so much that is wonderful comes about, provides us with the necessary requirements to look after our members, also providing for our undertakings the resources which they are in need of.

Bringing this presentation to an end, I would sincerely hope that the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars will calm people down, unite us, give rise to the onset of unity and peace within our dear Society of the Sacred Heart which contains so many characteristics of prosperity. It will continue, then, to grow and do well in the sight of, and with the blessings of, the Apostolic See.

J. Chevalier,
Supp of the SC Missionaries.

The Archbishop of Bourges, having carefully read Fr. Chevalier's memorandum, respectfully requests His Eminence the Cardinal Prefect to look upon the memorandum as being worthy of the most serious consideration. The facts are exactly as expressed and very fairly set out. The personnel involved, and their behaviour, are judiciously set out, nothing that is essential being overlooked, all that is a prerequisite to make a satisfying judgment. The Archbishop of Bourges believes that such a decision is both urgent and needed. The Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart is undergoing a crisis whose prolongation would be very damaging. Effectively, at the same time as it involves action on the part of authority, there are consequences entailed for the religious spirit. The Sacred Congregation's decision will cut short the evil at source and, if it thinks it necessary, will cause to disappear from the body that member which compromises its well-being.

Dear Father,

I am forwarding to you a letter from Fr. Piperon for Cardinal Monaco. Read it before you pass it on to him. You should also have received one from him for Cardinal Mermillod and, as well, one from Fr. Maillard for Cardinal Mermillod. I have set out a memorandum for the Sacred Congregation. Here are the three headings:

1. Before the Chapter
2. During the Chapter
3. After the Chapter

I hope to send it on to you by Friday or Saturday. You will look it over and you will put in or take out whatever you judge apposite. I would very much like our Cardinal Protector, the Cardinal Vicar and the Sacred Congregation to have this memorandum before my arrival in Rome. I expect to arrive on the Tuesday morning following Pentecost Sunday unless there are unforeseen problems.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I said nothing about this trip to anyone other than Fathers Piperon and Maillard.

Once more, the memorandum (Article 1911 above) to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars is produced, but this time, unlike Article 1912, it is complete and exactly as Article 1911 given in full above.

Council Meeting, May 13, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

Proposal for a College (secondary school) at the Sacred Heart (Issoudun).

1. Fr. Vaudon, Superior at the Sacred Heart (Issoudun), proposes that a secondary school be set up there and, having come to the meeting to present his proposal, he proceeded to offer arguments in favour of his proposal: the advantage to be gained by bringing together the Petite Oeuvre's group of boys with pupils not involved with the Society, while at the same time keeping a sufficient number of externs, day boys, who would form a school grouping with the boys in the school who lived there, whereas, otherwise, these outside pupils will go to a communal college where they would fulfil all the promises made made by this Council's administration. The Council members referred to the expenses which would be incurred by setting up this proposal, and in particular the need for personnel to be set apart for these students as distinct from those of the Petite Oeuvre. There was agreement about the opportuneness and the virtual need for such an initiative, while acknowledging that the necessary staff were not available. A final decision was postponed in the hope that the decisions shortly to be reached in Rome would enlighten matters before reaching a decision. One would then be in a more favourable position to consider what personnel might be available.

Disengagement from the Quito mission and the decision not to undertake a foundation in Medellin.

2. The Quito issue was then debated. The detailed memoranda drawn up by Fathers Barral and Perriot with reference to the basilica prove beyond doubt that this undertaking is not possible and should be given up. In any event the contract which could affect us expires in February, 1892, and negotiations will be entered into with the Archbishop to repatriate our confrères as soon as possible, and they will, if possible, make every effort before their departure to assure the future of the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in Quito. Fr. François Barral sought permission to set up another foundation at Medellin in Colombia, helped by Fr. Roussel, but it was agreed that at the present time such an undertaking was not feasible. The two priests, nonetheless, could visit the place to take stock of the situation and, as well, foster devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in the country. Nevertheless, they could not stay there indefinitely and should return in due course at a date to be fixed.

Called to Orders and Tonsure

3. Admission to Orders. If Brothers Cochard, Meunier and Villoux, studying at the major seminary, are called to the tonsurate by the directors, this is approved of.

Fr. Lanctin, Superior at Tilburg, has put forward for minor orders Brothers Nieuwenhuis, Neyens, Okhuijzen, Nijsters and Wemmers, and the Council approved provided their intellectual ability is satisfactory. As for Brother van der Aa, put forward for the subdiaconate, since it is well known that he is deficient in studies, he will have to be seriously tested by the Superior and Director of the scholasticate, and they will take responsibility as regards meeting his request, and judging as to whether or not he has the capability to acquire sufficient knowledge to carry out sacred ministry satisfactorily later.

Admission to profession and the habit at Salzburg.

4. On the recommendation of Fr. Hartzler, Superior at Salzburg, Brothers Max Mandl, Johann Seitz, Henri Gründl, Joseph Eickenger, Jacques Hanse, were admitted to temporal profession. They had done their novitiate with Fr. Offermans who found them quite satisfactory. Then Brothers Jacques Robel, Charles Heiffer, Hermann Müller, Joseph Wadenskorfer were given the habit. The formalities set out in the last Council meeting were not observed because these brothers had made their request quite some time ago, and there had been some irregularity in their acceptance which will be lifted by the regulatory procedures which are awaited from Rome. Otherwise, it must be made known to Novice Masters that from now on they must send on requests for admission to profession two months in advance; as for postulants requesting the habit, the Directors will communicate their requests as soon as they themselves have been informed. The requests for acceptance will need to be accompanied at all times by summarized details about the family, the age, quality, abilities, health of the individuals, and observations should also be forwarded following the first and second three months of the novitiate.

Dear Father,

I am sending on to you the memorandum to which I referred. You may make a copy of it for yourself before handing it on. I hope the Sacred Heart, Our Lady and St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, will come to our aid.

I share at this moment more than ever your view and that of Fr. Piperon about the pernicious mentality of our opponents, and, consequently, a Chapter, even within a few years, would be detrimental to the Society and its future. If there are reforms to be undertaken, changes to be made in the General Council, let it be the Sacred Congregation which regulates everything. For the rest we shall return to all this next Tuesday.

Your Grace,

I do not know how to express my gratitude to you for all your kindness. If we ever succeed in gaining victory, as we very much hope, it is to Your Grace we owe it all. If I am favoured with an audience, it will be truly a blessing for me. I shall not let the occasion go by without passing on myself your letters to the Sovereign Pontiff. The seal, Your Grace, which you have been good enough to attach to the end of my memorandum is just perfect.

Again, Your Grace, I go on my knees to beg your blessing on my trip, as I express at the same time my deepest regards and good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, May 16, 1891

Your Grace,

I have received confidentially from Rome a copy of part of the memorandum which our opponents have sent to the Sacred Congregation requesting that the houses in England, Belgium, Holland, Austria be cut off from our Society, and in which they exaggerate and distort the issues. They state, for example, that one of our Assistants, actually in office, Fr. Morisseau, has signed their petition. They, likewise, state that Fathers Delaporte and Guyot are siding with them. I made Fr. Morisseau aware of what is being said about him. He denies this in the enclosed letter.

This letter, Your Grace, is an example of what they claim and their good-will. Fr. Morisseau, thinking that this Rome document was sent on to me by Your Grace, sends his protestation on to you. I am forwarding you a copy, taking the original to Rome. None of my confrères, with the exception of Fathers Piperon, Maillard and Bishop Couppé, know about my trip to Rome, and I shall simply say tomorrow that I am going to be away for a few days.

If Bishop Couppé, whom I haven't seen for 3 weeks, and is staying with us, writes on his own behalf a letter to Rome protesting against the machinations of these opponents, as Fathers Piperon and Maillard have done, it will have an advantageous impact. Since Bishop Couppé is presently in Bourges, I would like to ask Your Grace to convey my request to him, and he will do me the favour of sending on immediately his letter to 32 Sapienza Street, Rome, where I shall arrive on Tuesday morning. In this way the Sacred Congregation will become aware of the unanimity which prevails among all those who are on the side of authority. His (Couppé's) letter will have an impact and make a good impression.

I ask Your Grace's pardon, for presuming so much on your kindness.

I have the honour to be with deepest respect and appreciation Your Grace's most humble and obedient son in C.J.

Issoudun, May 16, 1891

My Lord,

I received the letter which Your Lordship was pleased to write to me. It brings to my knowledge the improper behaviour of Fr. Barral and the many complaints made against him. The good man, having taken badly his removal from Quito, and having set out conditions which we could not accept, then asked to leave the Society, of which he is now no longer a member. As regards the newcomers whom you are looking for, My Lord, it is quite impossible to send you any. And in face of the present difficulties, as well as looking towards the future, we have decided to withdraw from Ecuador on the expiry of our five-year contract made in February 1887, ending, accordingly, in February 1892.

Since I gather that the work on the basilica is suspended, and if our members presently in Quito serve no purpose or are an embarrassment to you, we can recall them sooner (that is before 1892), and Your Grace need only say the word.

However things may be, Your Grace, we are no less grateful for the good-will shown to us by Your Grace, as well as your kindness. It is with regret that we leave Quito, given that it is impossible for us to continue the work which we undertook.

I have the honour to be, respectfully, Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant.

Rome, May 22, 1891

Your Grace,

I arrived in Rome on a bad week as all the Congregations are on holiday until next Monday. I cannot do anything other than get myself ready. I don't know when I shall be having an audience, and I am not even sure of having one because of the little time I have at my disposal. In any event, Your Grace's letters to the Pope will surely be forwarded to him. I have already seen Cardinals Monaco, Parocchi and Simeoni who have been briefed about our problems. They seemed greatly interested in our difficulties, and Cardinal Simeoni mentioned to us that if, contrary to his expectations, the Congregation of Bishops and Religious did not give a favourable reply, he would advise us to come back again, and he as Prefect of Propaganda would intervene on behalf of our missions, requesting a general meeting of the two Congregations, Bishops and Religious, and Propaganda. This is also the proposal of the Cardinal Vicar and Monsignor Jacobini. Their Eminences have read your letter to the Pope and your post-script to my memorandum which they found most pertinent and do not doubt that it will succeed.

Cardinal Monaco, whom we went to see yesterday at his holiday home in Velletri (in the Alban hills south of Rome, about 320 metres above sea level), was charmingly well-disposed, reading Your Grace's letter to the Pope, and my memorandum, in its entirety, seemingly very happy with both presentations. Your Grace's support was tremendously effective in his view. He will meet the Pope next Friday and speak to him about our issues so that a prompt and favourable answer will soon be forthcoming. Bishop Sepiacci, Secretary of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, has let it be known to us that the two paramount issues which at present are the concern of the Sacred Congregation are the 'putting right' (sanatio) of anything legally improper, and the approval of my powers, all the other issues being no more than secondary and easily dealt with. The Congregation, following a report which I shall be presenting to it, will consider the best way to go about setting anything legally right as judiciously as possible in order to avoid any litigation. If I were asked for my own views about this I would venture to say that the measure which most meets my approval would be that of putting it right in each house whose members need such a process, doing so as well under the presidency of the Bishops, or one of their delegates, thereby avoiding any intriguing among groups, or ill-will. Since 1883 there are 42 priests, 19 scholastics, and two lay brothers, the validity of whose perpetual vows has been placed in doubt. The houses of Issoudun and Chezal-Benoît have 8 priests who fall into this category. We are due to meet Cardinal Verga, Prefect of the Sacred Congregation, tomorrow. I shall ask him to take cognizance of all the documents coming from the opposition (MSC) party in order to provide an answer. I shall find out in what way we will be requesting a separation on the part of our Northern houses. The Cardinals, to whom we have spoken, protest against this schism, stating the Sacred Congregation will never allow it even if our opponents request it.

I am due to meet Cardinal Mermillod today to whom our opponents have written asking his support for their request to separate themselves. His Eminence replied that as he was not a member of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars he could not become involved in this issue. It would appear that Cardinal Mermillod, whom we have known a long time, continues to show a keen interest in our affairs.

I commend to Your Grace's continued interest, good-will, expectations, a favourable conclusion with respect to our concerns. We pray more than ever for the full restoration of your health.

I have the honour to be, most respectfully, Your Grace's most humble servant and son in C.J.

Rome,

Undated, most likely May 23, 1891

Most Eminent Cardinal,

If I have rightly understood Monsignor Sepiacci, two grave issues with regard to us preoccupy the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars at the present time: the legitimacy of vows taken after 1883, and the validity of my powers. It is pointless to observe that all the irregularities which have arisen come from good faith. As for myself, and that which involves the renewal (legitimacy) of my powers, I depended entirely on the advice of my Assistants who, without informing me about it, already asked for their continuation. But an unfortunate set of circumstances made them forget renewing this request from 1883 to 1889. Our Procurator General in Rome, Fr. Jouët, became aware of this lapse and mentioned it to the other Assistants. Acting together they formulated a petition to the Sacred Congregation, making it known that over five years I had been (legally) without authority, and as a result of which I had become bereft of authority, in consequence of which all authority exercised during this period was null and void. The Sacred Congregation, in consequence, was now petitioned to renew these powers, which it did for one year. The impression was given that this rescript made good anything irregular over the recent past. This explains why, in their latest document, there is no longer any mention of these irregularities, and the Sacred Congregation, as well, in its latest Indult granting me powers for 12 years, says nothing about it either.

From what has been presented immediately above, I put forward a basic doubt: is the 'putting right' requested really necessary at the present time?

2. (There has been no number 1!) I presume that the Indults granted after 1883 are null, and the Administrative Acts invalid, the Superior General having at least in everybody's eyes an apparent title of approval, acknowledged without confrontation. Given this hypothesis, is a 'putting right' really necessary?

3. I presume that the 'apparent' title does not offset the nullity of the vows, etc. Could not the Sovereign Pontiff, by virtue of his supreme office, come forward with a 'sanatio in radice' (a legal technical term undoing anything originally at fault, defective)? A third query, suggestion: this recourse would be all the more desirable for the reason that it would avoid problems in the Society, since from 182 religious, priests, scholastics, lay brothers who should renew their vows, there would be 178 of those who would have nothing at all to do with these administrative irregularities. If it is required that they renew their vows all over again, the reason for doing so will have to be made known to them, and, as well, the disaffected from the Chapter will try to gain supporters, and, insofar as they can, prevent confrères from making their vows, following which there would arise great agitation all over the Society, leading to great scandal, the remedy, so I believe, worse than the initial problem itself.

4. If some, dissatisfied with this general restructuring 'in radice' of the issue, were to express the wish to leave the Society, and it would indeed constitute a very small number, might they not be allowed to do so without any problems being created for them?

A Fourth Problem.

The reorganization of the Administration.

1. It is absolutely necessary that the Sacred Congregation should uphold the indult conferring on the Superior General Founder powers over 12 years. This indult was acknowledged by the whole institute in a circular sent from the Generalate at the beginning of February. Accordingly if it was noticed that Rome limited the powers of the Superior General to 2 or 3 years, the standing of the General would be considerably diminished in the eyes of his subjects who might be asking what serious problems he was responsible for to merit such disapproval. Accordingly, his authority would be seriously diminished, whereas in the present circumstances he needs more than ever to be supported and confirmed in office.

2. The Sacred Congregation, apprehensive that the requested endorsements might constitute victory for the adversaries, would not deprive the Superior General of the authority he needs. This concern would appear to have no substance, primarily because the Superior General is innocent with respect to the negligence attributed to him and, secondly, because the majority overlook these problems and express feelings of esteem and high regard with respect to their founder. Thirdly, one can consult in this respect the letters and support documents sent to the Sacred Congregation by the Archbishop of Bourges.

B 18910523A

To Cardinal Verga Isidoro, Prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

No date, address or greeting

If I have rightly understood matters, Your Grace, two serious issues are preoccupying the Sacred Congregation at the present time with regard to our institute;

1. The legitimacy of vows taken after 1883.
2. The validity of the Superior's powers, he being the Society's founder.

1. The Superior wholly depends on his Assistants' anticipatory advice to ask for the renewal of his powers, which is something they have always done. Unfortunately, they were forgetful in making this request to the Sacred Congregation. Fr. Jouët was the first to become aware of this oversight for the years 1883-1889. He was one of the Assistants, and together they wrote to the Sacred Congregation making it become known that over a period of 6 years the Superior General had been left without requisite authority, and by that very fact all exercise of authority during this time was null and void. Asking the Sacred Congregation to be kind enough and renew the powers of the said Superior, doing so for one year, it was understood that the requested rescript would mean that all the previous irregularities would be resolved. It was for this reason that in their latest appeal they no longer mentioned such irregularities, and the Sacred Congregation in its recent indult, approving the Superior General's powers for 12 years, had nothing to say (about the irregularities).

Accordingly, following this presentation of the situation, I have to ask myself if really and truly any new and positive evaluation is required today.

First doubt.

I take it that the indults granted after 1883 are null and the acts of the administration are invalid, although the Superior General had, at least in everybody's eyes, a power universally acknowledged, however dubious. In this hypothesis, is a 'sanatio', still necessary?

Second doubt.

Again I presume that the questionable title (attribution) does not gainsay the nullity of the vows, etc. Could not the Sovereign Pontiff, in virtue of his supreme office, grant a general release (from penalties, whatever)?

Third doubt.

This procedure would be all the more sought-after for the reason that it would avoid problems for the Society, since among the 53 religious who would be renewing their vows only four know about these irregularities. The others know nothing whatsoever about them (the irregularities). If they were to renew their vows, they should be given the reason for doing so. Could not one, then, be apprehensive about a certain agitation in the Society?

Fourth doubt.

Might it not be that on the occasion of our Constitutions' definitive approval, and having a general retreat when all the Society's members in the different houses would be renewing their vows, an anticipatory statement would be made to the effect that if someone did not want to renew his vows, everything would be taken into consideration for him and he could be free once more?

To Cardinal Verga Isidoro, Prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

*No address; no greeting
Undated, possibly end of
May 1891*

I humbly submit to Your Eminence, on the advice of Monsignor Sepiacchi, some simple clarification concerning the two serious issues which particularly engage the Sacred Congregation with regard to us.

Section:

1. The validity of the vows taken after 1883.

2. The approval of the Superior General's powers – the founder of the little Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

1. It is pointless to restate, Your Grace, that all the irregularities which arose were in good faith. The Superior relied as ever on the attentiveness of his Assistants to request renewal of his powers, something they had always done, even without mentioning it to him. An unfortunate set of circumstances which I cannot recall at this moment caused them to overlook this request from the Sacred Congregation from September 1883 until 1889. Fr. Jouët, our Procurator General in Rome, was the first to become aware of what had been overlooked. He alerted the Assistants and together they drew up an appeal to the Sacred Congregation, making it known that over six years the Superior General had lacked authority, and in consequence of which the conclusion could be drawn that all exercise of authority carried out at this time was invalid for this reason. When asking the Sacred Congregation to be kind enough to renew the said Superior General's powers (which it did for one year in 1889), the Assistants were persuaded that the rescript implicitly provided an overlooking of all previous irregularities. It is for this reason, Your Eminence, that in their latest document they no longer refer to these irregularities, and it is for the same reason that they consider the Sacred Congregation makes no further reference to the matters in its recent indult endorsing for 12 years the powers of the Founder-Superior.

1. Following this presentation of the facts, Your Eminence, I ask, with the deepest respect and in total deference, if any new setting to rights is really necessary?

2. I fully agree, if it is the view of the Sacred Congregation, that indults granted after 1883 have no validity, the Acts of the Administration then being invalid. But the Superior had, at least in the eyes of all his subjects, a power taken for granted, acknowledged universally in the Society. Given this hypothesis, I venture to ask if revalidation is still a necessity?

3. If the Sacred Congregation replies that the impaired title does not invalidate the vows and other acts, might not the Sovereign Pontiff, accordingly, in virtue of his absolute power provide a general revalidation in radice?

4. One may counter that the taking of vows is a personal act derived from the subject's free-will and, consequently, a validation becomes, effectively, impossible since it cannot make an individual become bound by religious obligations without the consent of his will. If it were a question of forcing vows on someone who, having never lived in a religious society, knew nothing about its rules and customs, the objection would maintain its validity, but that, so it seems to me, is not the question. It refers to religious who at the end of a serious novitiate freely make their profession and go on, as is our custom, to renew it quite freely each year. Up to now, apart from four or five, nobody is aware of the irregularity of their situation, persevering in their attachment to the Society and fidelity to their holy vocation.

5. The number of religious who have made their perpetual profession since 1883 and who need validation comes to 53, of whom 42 are priests, 9 are scholastics, and 2 are lay brothers. Among the priests: 4 are at the mother house and 4 teach in our college near Issoudun, Bourges Archdiocese, 2 are in our Rome house, 2 in our Spanish house, 1 in that of Paris, 5 in our Quito, Ecuador, house, three in the USA, ten in our Oceania missions, 5 in the Antwerp Scholasticate, 1 in our Salzburg, Austria, house. Accordingly, there are 38 priests from 42 who are in good faith and in no way whatsoever consider taking their freedom (to depart), unless through the indiscretion of certain Chapter members, the notification of these issues may have reached the ears of Rome. In any event, the number would be very small, and it (the issue) wouldn't be enough to stop them from persevering in their vocation. As for the 9 scholastics and the two lay brothers who need to be re-validated, they give no thought to the nullity of their vows or to retaking them.

6. Those who have made temporary profession number 133, of whom one is a priest, with 71 scholastics and 61 lay brothers spread about the Society's different houses.

7. Might not the dispensation in radice which the Holy Father sometimes grants in relation to certain marriages which are null and void, requiring the consent of the couple, offer a form of analogy (comparison) with the request being sought (as described above).

8. As for the way in which the dispensation (release) becomes a fact, in order to calm those involved and give them peace of mind, the Sacred Congregation, whose purpose is to maintain unity, will know well in its wisdom how to suggest an outcome which will appear the most efficacious, to its way of thinking.

Section:

11. Continuation of the Superior's, Founder's, powers.

Hereabouts, Your Eminence, I feel, as is to be expected, somewhat embarrassed as the issue involves me personally. The Lord knows that I was never ambitious for power, and less so than ever today. I have always considered this role as one of great responsibility. The thoughts to which I am about to give expression are only dictated by concern for its well-being, and out of love for our dear Society which has been so harshly spoken of, and to which I have consecrated 37 years of my life. If the Sacred Congregation believes that I should continue in charge as Superior General, unworthy though I acknowledge myself to be, I make bold to ask it, for reasons which in my view are serious, to reinforce its latest indult which confers on the Superior Founder powers for 12 years. Here are the reasons:

a. This indult is known about for the past 4 months throughout the institute through a circular letter. Accordingly, if Rome were to reduce the Superior General's powers to a limit of two or three years, his prestige would be greatly diminished and lessened in the eyes of his subjects, who would be asking what serious indiscretions of his were responsible for this lack of support, following which his authority would be greatly lessened. Whereas, in the present circumstances, he would more than ever be supported and confirmed in office.

b. The Sacred Congregation will be aware that this indult was strongly attacked by the opponents of the Chapter under the pretext that it hadn't been approved by our Cardinal Protector, and even now, despite the official approval (confirmetur) of Cardinal Monaco, the same opposition group presumes to have it annulled. If, as they seem to think, this indult will be withdrawn, and another reducing its powers replaces it, their triumph will be complete as regards this issue, and their bad attitude will continue to be rampant.

c. The Sacred Congregation considers moreover that the requests being sought would be to the advantage of the opposing party, and should not be such as to deprive the Superior General of the authority which he needs. The concern, so it seems to me, is without foundation for the reason that all the Chapter members, myself in the first instance, have asked for sanctions if Rome deems it necessary, and there will neither be a feeling of triumph or disappointment for anybody. And finally the great majority overlook these problems, and everybody knows, or will know, that their Superior-Founder, for whom they express their regard and devotedness, was acting in complete good faith.

III. I presume once more to ask the Sacred Congregation to be kind enough, in the interests of our dear Society, to take into consideration the unanimous vote of the last Chapter petitioning that the Superior General be elected for life, and that Chapter Assemblies should only take place every 9 years, which is common practice in several Congregations, leaving to the Superior General and his Council the option to convene them more often if they judge it opportune.

Written on paper headed:

Archiconfraternità Universale di Nostra Signora del S. Cuore di Gesù Centro Generale, Roma. (Via della Sapienza, 32)

Rome, Thursday May 28, 1891

Your Grace,

Yesterday morning at 10.30 I requested an audience (Papal) and I had it that very evening at 6.30 in the company of Fr. Jouët. The Pope received us for half an hour, being most relaxed and remarkably gracious with us. We had scarcely knelt down before him when he had us sitting up beside him. I handed him Your Grace's letter. Aware that you were laid up, he asked me straightaway for detailed news of you. "Oh, I hope he will soon be better," he said, "as I like him very much, and when he couldn't come to see me, he sent his brother instead (the auxiliary Bishop) who is enormously helpful to him." "Yes." (Chevalier) "And with dedication deserving of the highest praise. Tell your kind Archbishop that I shall pray for him. I am also aware that he is very interested in you and your work. And the work of your Society, in which, as you know, I am greatly interested, how is it getting on?" "Very well, Holy Father, leaving aside some little issues." He answered, "I have seen Cardinal Verga; everything will be put in order; do not worry; stay disciplined and get rid of all the commotion. Where is your novitiate?" "It was in Holland, Your Holiness, but we brought it back to France, near the mother house, in a former Benedictine abbey which Archbishop Marchal was kindly pleased to place at our disposal." "Oh! That's very good; the novitiate should not be too far away from the Superior (General) so that it can assimilate the spirit of the Society: Probate spiritus (evaluate attitudes; 1John, 4,1). Only accept serious vocations, and send away those who are not suitable."

Then His Holiness spoke about our house in Rome and Fr. Jouët in a most supportive way, also about our Oceania missions which are so dear to him, our apostolic undertakings, and his latest encyclical (Aeterni Patris, on philosophy and faith, the need for a return to, and renewal of, Thomism) which he expects will do a lot of good, and then about France whose devotedness he appreciates and its generosity through St. Peter's Pence. "Without it," (Peter's Pence), he said, "I don't know what I would do. As well, I shall be meeting worker pilgrims coming in October. I have to get 2,500 beds ready for them at a cost to me of 50,000 francs (about 170,600 euros). I have no regrets about this."

After a good half-hour had gone by, the Pope continued to chat but, not wishing to invade further his precious time, we went on our knees and asked for a special blessing for Your Grace, for Bishop Auguste (the Archbishop's brother) and all your diocese's undertakings, as well as for ourselves, our Society and all our benefactors. We left our audience uplifted and strengthened.

Tomorrow, Friday, the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars is meeting to bring our issues to a head. We must go away on Sunday, the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart; if the reply we are hoping for is favourable I shall set off for Issoudun.

I ask Your Grace, grateful for all your kindness, to give me your blessing, receiving my most respectful and deepest good wishes in C.J.

Confidential

Your Grace,

The Sacred Congregation, because of all the feasts this week, could not meet, and our concerns, therefore, have not yet been officially considered, while the two consistories of next week will prevent a meeting before Friday. Then the Cardinal-Prefect must see the Pope... I am not being given to expect a definitive answer for 10 or 12 days. It was Monsignor Sepiacchi, Secretary of the Sacred Congregation, with whom I had a meeting of over 2 hours' duration this morning, who so informed me. This meeting was absolutely necessary, clarifying a number of issues. The secretary was very kind and understanding. He supports, in fact, our viewpoint, and once more assured me of a favourable outcome. He set himself as well to the question of (legal) solutions which, given my explanation, no longer seemed as important or as necessary to him.

I made known to him my need to get back to Issoudun either by Friday, the feast of the Sacred Heart, or Sunday, confirmation day. He replied that as far as things were going I could already now return to Issoudun, if I so wished, since the Sacred Congregation was sufficiently informed, and as soon as everything was in order he would write to me officially.

Fr. Jouët thinks that I should stay until the end (the notification of the decision); for myself I would like very much to return. What does Your Grace think? I leave the decision to you.

I have the honour to be, respectfully, Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant and son in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

My confrères continue to be unaware of my trip to Rome.

Recommendations from the Secretary of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

Rome, May 31, 1891

Feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart

Recommendations of Monsignor, the Secretary of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Religious

1. It is not a requirement that the 4 Assistants should always be there with the Superior General, a majority being sufficient. The others could be sent also on special undertakings.
2. The Sacred Congregation declares that it alone, without being influenced in any way, dissolved the Chapter, because it was not called other than to make a choice between the new and the old Constitutions. (The following written in pencil) "It is wholly unjust to identify the break-up of the Chapter with a particular individual among the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart."
3. As of now, and for some time to come, new houses are not to be founded without the requisite personnel, and existing ones are to be strengthened, even if this means closure of one or two with the approval of the Holy See.
4. Not to appoint as Superiors or Directors of undertakings, young priests from the Petite Oeuvre before the age of 35 (and following 10 years of religious profession).
5. Not to allow priests of a younger age to become a majority in the houses of their native countries, or in any other, but rather have them by preference sent to our other houses, and placed together with priests from other countries in our apostolic schools.
6. As long as our Society is not divided into Provinces we have only one sole Novitiate and Scholasticate in France, at or near the Mother House. This is also the recommendation of the Pope who, in a special audience, strongly recommended this. Leo XIII, in addition, expressly told us not to accept other than solid vocations, and send away all those who could not provide the assured guarantees... Probate spiritus, he added; it is better that you have fewer members so long as they are good.

See above, Chevalier's letter to the Archbishop about the Papal audience.

7. If the need of a second Novitiate or Scholasticate arises, it is to be set up in Southern France (the Midi or elsewhere in Europe) other than those which are in the United States.
8. Until a new Chapter, leave at Salzburg, if this house is being kept on, the Novitiate for lay brothers which has been set up there.

9. Complete our Directory with the participation of the Assistants, taking into consideration the observations already made, submitting these officially to a Sacred Congregation consultant as part of an initiative towards the convoking of a new Chapter. The Chapter, at its final session, will appoint a commission for the purpose of examining, together with the President, whatever modifications are needed for the proposed Directory.
10. An Apostolic Vicar from our Society cannot attend as by right the Chapter unless he is appointed by the Council, with the approval of the Holy See, Superior of the Mission.
11. While awaiting the division of the Society into Provinces, the new Chapter will be made up of all Superiors in office, besides those present by right. If a particular house numbered 15 or 20 members, the Council of this house should name someone else as well to represent it together with its local Superior.
12. We must keep our present habit and have it so specified in the Constitutions (until such time, in other circumstances, as a Chapter decides to adopt the habit favoured by Pius IX).
13. Reduce the number of Petite Oeuvres rather than increase them. Too many youngsters must not be taken in; care needs to be taken in selecting them and, as has been done, the first three classes must become one under the same direction so that, thereby, there is a common prevailing spirit and attitude among them.
14. As far as the Chapter is concerned, the members do not have the right to bring up for discussion anything they like; a commission should be set up consisting of 4 or 5 more judicious members to examine with the President issues thought to be worthy of consideration. Any decision in this respect cannot be revoked. Meanwhile, if the Chapter President considers it appropriate that an issue presented in general session by one or more delegates calls for further investigation, he may request the assembly members if they wish to discuss it further or have it handed over to a commission.
15. The President of the Chapter has always the right to allow a participant to voice his opinions, or to refuse someone whom he thinks is abusing his right, even to bring the session to an end, or declare that the Chapter is over if it has concluded its task, or if there is an abuse of the right to come together which has been granted to it.
16. If the Chapter, unanimously or by a large majority, believes in the general interests of the Society, it should add to or take from a particular part of the Constitutions, and the Sacred Congregation approves, whatever is added or left out must be approved of over two subsequent Chapters, following which it will have the authority of the Constitutions.
17. Once the Sacred Congregation has approved of overseas' houses, all members must be available and prepared to go at the request of the Superior General.
18. When the time comes for our Society to be divided into Provinces, the Superior General has always the right, given the Society's greater good, to send a member of one Province to another, having discussed the matter with his Council.

Recommendations from the Monsignor Secretary of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

This article, 1926, reproduces exactly that of Article 1925. It would appear that Monsignor Sepiacci, Secretary of the Congregation, later to be Cardinal, communicated orally to Chevalier and Jouët the findings of the Sacred Congregation, and they in turn committed them to writing. Sepiacci read the document, changing it where he deemed it necessary in order to make sure it perfectly expressed what had been decided at the Congregation's meeting. He did not, however, judge it opportune to add his own signature.

Issoudun, Feast of the Sacred Heart
June 5, 1891

Dear Fr. Klotz,

Having read your last letter, I have nothing more to say than amen (so be it). Everything you did at the Chapter was carried out by you for God's greater glory and the well-being of our Society. Everything on your side was quite in order and perfect. You alone are in the right! You alone have the piety, the knowledge, the virtue and talent, the wisdom that can be shared! Everything has been correct and proper from your side. You are the only one who has the warm regard and esteem of everybody; you alone know how to go about administration, avoid debts and economize.

Reading your correspondence, good Father, one would be led to believe that it is you and your supporters who began everything, organized everything in the Society, found all the necessary resources, and that those who, over 25, 30, 36 years, have spent their lives bringing into being this undertaking, establishing it on solid foundations, and making its future secure, have done little or nothing, and shall I say, have done nothing worthwhile, being of no further use and, consequently, deserving to be cast aside.

In the first place, my friend, you need to know that I was reproved by Rome for allowing discussions to take place about issues other than decisions about old or new Constitutions. It was officially said to me that if I myself had opted for the older Constitutions, there would have been no need to convoke a Chapter, that its convoking would only be necessary if I persisted in looking for new Constitutions. Again I was fully assured that the dissolution of the Chapter was not inspired, prompted, sought-after by anybody, being alone the choice of the Sacred Congregation, as it will take care to say in the official statement to be forwarded to me when this matter is concluded. The Chapter, as is once more emphasized, will not meet until our Constitutions are approved, and in accordance with the requirements which will be set out.

The outcome of our deliberations, and the approval of the Constitutions cannot be held over too long, and were it not for the holidays over Pentecost and the two consistories which have taken place, we would already know what is expected of us. One hopes that everything will be over by the end of this month. Rome has understood that our expulsion (from France) has created problems for our Administration, and that the irregularities to which this gave rise were all in good faith. It appears to have taken into consideration the request by Fr. Jouët for the renewal of our powers and, where it was positively stated that I had remained without (canonical) powers over 5 or 6 years and concerning which the Sacred Congregation's reply, prolonging them for a year, was taken to be an implied ratification of the past (the decisions of those 5 or 6 years endorsed as being valid). The functional title which I held in everybody's eyes up to the Chapter meeting would also seem to have made an impact (on the Congregation). All these recent doubts, concerns, were forwarded to the Consultors for careful scrutiny. The Sacred Congregation declared that, having now been sufficiently informed, it would provide an answer which would satisfy all interested parties, bringing peace and a sense of composure to the Society.

You state, Father, that... "while we believe it was our duty to petition Rome for a complete validation of past irregularities, and that we wanted to take the necessary means to avoid such occurrences in the future, we have been considered insubordinate, opposed, and rebellious.

We ourselves have, like you, complete validation if such is needed. As for taking precautions to meet the future and avoid anything such as this, it is enough that these issues have been noted and taken into consideration by Rome in order to avoid such-like forgetfulness when and if (more) persecution dispersed us to the four corners of the world.

The opposition, or insubmissiveness, if you like, became focused on the President of the Chapter and his supporters when he stated that the role of the Assembly for the time being was not to have a change of Administration, since it wasn't called for, other than to decide as between the new and old Constitutions. The unfair protestations began there and then. I made it clear that a normal Chapter assembly would follow immediately on the approval of the Constitutions, and this could be soon enough. You have all (the opponents) ignored what I said. Nobody other than myself wanted this more, and still wants a general Chapter in which all the concerns of the Society will be dealt with in a mature fashion, with the Chapter using its legitimate rights to appoint the Assistants and deal with all the issues which fall within its competence. There is one thing which you would appear to be forgetting, which is that irregularities arose not only during the administration of Fathers Piperon and Jouët, but also in that of Fathers Guyot and Morisseau, whose capabilities you vaunt so much, their virtues, expertise and wisdom. Before all else one needs to be fair to everybody. You also would appear to ignore that these irregularities arose during the period when we were being expelled (from France), and when the Assistants, not yet having formal procedures to follow, were forced, with Rome's approval, to expatriate themselves in order to avoid the demise of the works being undertaken (scholasticate, Petite Oeuvre, in particular).

And during those unhappy times when we were living through privations and sacrifices, I myself experiencing self torture of spirit to meet our commitments and find the necessary resources, where were you, together with the young priests who shared your sentiments? On the benches of the Petite Oeuvre and the scholasticate without a care or worry for tomorrow, and these are the very same youngsters who became priests whom I have never stopped loving, and even now care for more than myself. And yet they present themselves as harshly censorious and reformers, although I myself want as much as they do, if not more so, the reforms considered necessary for the well-being of our dear Congregation, which in the past could not be brought about and which at the present time we might undertake together without fuss and as a family.

"Against what legitimate authority," you say, "have we rebelled, and who did we advise to refuse to obey according to the Constitutions and canonical regulations?"

You all too quickly forget, my friend, the goings-on at Tilburg when the transfer of the novitiate became necessary as a result of your written resignation, and having no-one (to replace you) in accordance with the conditions laid down in the Constitutions. This transfer (of the novitiate), as you are aware, was approved by a rescript of the Sacred Congregation.

You all too quickly forget your letters to Fr. Morisseau which he brought to my attention, and those to Fr. Ramot in which you informed him that ... you were "armed from head to foot" and were "awaiting his signal either to disarm or set about a new confrontation", and in which you also advised him not to leave Issoudun and, particularly, not to go to Randwick as Superior. You must have known that the Sacred Congregation had decided that the administration of the Society's affairs would continue to be carried out by the same administration as in the past until new arrangements were made. You accuse us of being wholly to blame for ordaining priests who were deficiently educated. You are wrong, since all the priests put forward by us for ordination by the Archbishop of Bourges had done their theological studies, and passed their canonical examinations before the Archbishop himself who publicly eulogised their learning. What more should have been done? Tell me this, is it not you yourself who appealed by letter and telegrams for permission to ordain Helfer and Bley to the priesthood when they hadn't completed their studies, stating that the Archbishop of Salzburg would ordain them without their having to sit an examination? Despite this, you make bold to accuse and criticize us. You say that you should be granted your wish to break away from the womb of the mother who nurtured you. What is the significance of this request which has been signed by all the members of our Northern houses, and elsewhere, asking for the separation of these same houses? What is the meaning of these letters, which I have in my hands, sent to Cardinal Mermillod, asking him to intervene for this purpose with the Holy See? His Eminence replied to me stating that this request for separation at the very moment the Pope was appealing for reunion among the divided Trappists and other Congregations, when the Pope was emphasizing the unity of Catholics among themselves, could create scandal in the Church if it became known. You consider it is contrary to law to have a fourth assistant appointed to replace Fr. Guyot who has resigned in writing. Again you lay the blame on the Sacred Congregation which, by rescript, has approved of Fr. Maillard's appointment (as Assistant) until the meeting of the next Chapter which, once again I repeat, cannot but take place shortly since I myself asked for it to be held as soon as possible.

Bley had already left for New Britain at this time, April 26, 1890; he was killed in a Japanese air-raid at Vunapope, February 14, 1944.

You excuse yourself of being ungrateful, Father, and you whinge about the illegitimacy of the Administration, the validity of whose actions you call in doubt since the Chapter broke up. How, then, does it come about that once more you make a fresh plea to us on behalf of your family, thereby recognizing the legitimacy of this same Administration? One cannot have two weights, two measures (at one and same time).

So the letter abruptly ends, written in Rome before Chevalier returned to Issoudun.

Dear Father,

Thank you for your little note. Since my return I haven't a minute to myself. I had a good journey. Thank you for all your kindness. Keep an eye on things and let me know what's happening. There are doubts about the opportuneness of my trip, but nothing is known about the positive side of things. I didn't use any of your writing paper, only what I brought with me.

My Dear Lord,

I want to thank you for your kind letter and the details which you give me about Fr. Janet's death, and your mission.

Louis Janet, born 1861 at Césarches, was ordained four years previously, June 4, 1887, and left for Oceania on November 3, 1890, arriving at Yule Island on January 16, 1891. He died there just a few months later, April 15, 1891, aged 30.

I hope that towards the end of this year we can send you some new missionaries, sisters, and the aid you so greatly need. Trials are not wanting to you; be confident; the good Lord will bless your undertakings, and your missions will prosper. For the time being do not take on anything which is beyond your resources; I beseech you to take care of your health. Some weeks ago, I wrote a nice letter to Bishop Navarre, always to be admired for his faith and heroism.

Convey my good wishes to kind Fr. Vitale whom I thank for his nice letter, to Fr. Hubert who is so committed and who should be getting along well with you, to the good brothers and sisters. Impress upon them the need to be prudent and avoid any pushing of themselves to extremes.

Issoudun, June 18, 1891

Dear Father,

I received just now your letter and the enclosed decree which brings to an end our problems. The Lord be praised, and blessed be the Sacred Heart and Our Lady!

I haven't yet seen Fr. Píperon about our getting together. I intend to ask him to come immediately. I certainly think that we shall do what you say: you stay on as Procurator, and we shall get by without a fourth assistant until the Chapter, unless Rome demands one straightaway, or unless you yourself think it might be helpful to appoint one straightaway in order to be assured of a supportive voice so that all might go well at the Chapter. If this is the wish of the Sacred Congregation and your own, let me know who we could choose.

Ask Monsignor Sepiacci, who has been so good to us to write to me or have me officially informed, as he promised he would do, that it was neither yourself or myself who was responsible for the dissolution of the Chapter, and that, in the second place, the Chapter was not called for anything other than to choose between the Constitutions. These two points are very important, and will lead the opponents to a more favourable outlook. Try to get these accepted. I am waiting on them before making known the decree, which in the circumstances is a necessity. Be good enough to find out at the same time if we have the right to refuse renewal of vows for certain confrères whom we would not consider as being suitable for our Society, such as Fr. Delaporte and others whom you might bring to my notice.

Cheerio, my friend. I want this letter to be posted this morning.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, June 18, 1891

Your Grace,

I have just now received the Sacred Congregation's decree bringing to an end our concerns. It is the Pope who has decided the whole issue.

1. Leo XIII has ratified all the resolutions of these irregularities which occurred since 1883.
2. He has set down that all those who took vows from that time up to the present should renew them, requesting to do so in writing.
3. He upholds my authority as Superior General for 12 years.
4. The present assistants are confirmed in office by him until the next General Chapter. With regard to the latter, Fr. Jouët informs me that he knows from a reliable source that the General Chapter will take place under Your Grace's watchful eye. May the Lord be praised. He asked me not to divulge this confidence.
5. This General Chapter will not take place until the definitive approval of our Constitutions, which are still being scrutinized. Knowing the great interest you have in us, you have there above, Your Grace, what I hasten to make known to you and requesting your wise advice at the same time about the procedure to be adopted for the renewal of vows.

I have no more time before the post leaves other than to throw myself at your feet, Your Grace, to thank you once again (for everything) and request your fatherly blessing.

Council Meeting, June 20, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Píperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

Acceptance of Brother Martin for Final Profession.

Following the favourable recommendations of Fr. Píperon and Fr. Derichemont, Superior at Watertown, Brother Martin was accepted for final profession, having been expatriated in order to avoid conscription.

Acceptance in the Novitiate, following favourable reports from Fr. Píperon, of Brother Guerrero, a scholastic in minor orders from Quito; Brother Peronin, a lay brother, aged 57, but in good health and notable for his piety and work commitment; since he has already received the Trappist habit, he will not be finally accepted without an Indult from the Holy See; François Moreux, a lay brother, aged 26, well-intentioned, but little adapted for work, and he will not be accepted until he returns from his month's military service; Brother Millot, too young a postulant at 17, is held over.

Don Juan Garcia, turned down because of his age, 58 years and his lack of French at the April 25 Council meeting, has come back again requesting entry to the novitiate. Fathers Casas and Roger, accommodating themselves to his plea, have accepted him for the time being in their Barcelona house in order to make up their minds over a couple of months about what decision to take about him.

The Superior General's Rome Visit and Validations.

The Superior General then made known that he had been asked to go to Rome by the Secretary of the Sacred Congregation to provide an explanation as regards the litigious issues brought to the attention of the Congregation. He then read out the rescript which he had received (from Rome), confirming his authority for the next 12 years and that of his assistants until the next General Chapter, as well as the overlooking of any mistakes made, validating any invalid actions and anything lacking in vows from 1883 to the present date, these vows being of a doubtful nature because of omitting to renew the Superior General's powers between 1883 and 1889. A discussion then followed about the manner in which the above-mentioned rescript should be made known to the Institute's different houses.

Issoudun, June 24, 1891

Dear Father,

You are aware that the expulsions (from France) created problems for our Administration. Our powers had lapsed from 1883 and we forgot to get them renewed, such-wise that the religious professions made between then and now would at the very least be doubtful. Rome, on becoming aware of this irregularity, granted a general resolution of the problem, but making it a condition that those affected who wished to benefit from this concession should, without delay, look for it from me in writing.

You will find here-enclosed this rescript which renews my authority as Superior General for 12 years and ratifies the role of the Assistants until the next Chapter meeting. Read this document to, or have it read by, the community, without commentary, leaving it to each one of your community who made perpetual or temporary profession after 1883 to write directly to me about his intentions as soon as possible, or, anyway within eight days.

Please accept, Father, my best wishes in C.J.

Dear Father,

Bishop Couppé has left for Belgium and Germany. He is not due to return here until the end of August, and is likely to return (to New Guinea) around September 15 since there are only sailings every two months. One priest and four lay brothers, 4 or 5 Sisters of Our Lady (of the Sacred Heart) are due to leave on July 15. He very much hopes to go to the Solomons as soon as possible on his return to New Britain in order to set up missions in those islands. I asked him also to leave on July 15 (with the others), but he told me that it was impossible in view of his visit to Germany. I am disappointed about this.

I am waiting for your letters in order to deal with the release from sanctions because the issue is urgent.

Cheerio, Father.

Do not mention again to the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars our opponents' memorandum and their representative on the issue of a separation (breakdown). Don't wake up the sleeping cat!

Council Meeting, June 29, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

The Procedure for Promulgating the Rescript.

Fr. General made known that the Secretary of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, having been approached about the way the rescript dealing with release from sanctions should be presented, and the delay needed for those who wish to take advantage of this rescript, replied saying that a copy should be forwarded to the Institute's different houses, together with a circular letter relating to the issue, and it would be desirable to allow a period of 8 or 10 days for any request for vow validation to come through. Consequently, one must ignore that part of the circular about an immediate return of the two documents.

There followed the appointment of four lay brothers for Bishop Couppé's mission, Gregory from the Sacred Heart, Jacob from Chezal-Benoît, as well as two more chosen by the Antwerp Fathers.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I am forwarding the official letter dealing with the sanctions to you. The Council has taken the decision that I should leave for Antwerp with Fr. Piperon tomorrow to make known there Rome's decisions, and provide the requisite explanations. Since our scholasticate and lay brothers' novitiate are there situated, the Council members considered that my presence there was necessary. I shall emphasize nothing, leaving them total freedom. From there I shall go on to Tilburg, and keep you informed. On my return I shall send you on the money you need. The Fr. Reyn issue was only a proposal which I wanted to put to you in order to have your view. There is to be no more about it; matters will remain as they are.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I found all our priest confrères in Antwerp, Tilburg also, in the worst possible mood, stating that Rome's resolution of the problem was anything but satisfactory. Those who are in the way of profiting from the resolution of their cases want more time to reflect on it, and I gave them 8 or 10 days to do so. Several would like to postpone their acceptance until the next Chapter. They are convinced, they say, that Rome will meet their wishes. Their lawyer told them so. They hold to the view that the Chapter will consist of the same participants as were there in January. I told them that I couldn't promise anything and that if by 10 days I didn't have their acceptance I would no longer consider them as belonging to the Society. I suspect that they will not persevere in their obstinacy. They are in revolt, both against Rome for not speaking (thinking) as they do and against us. What must I do if they do not come to a favourable change of mind? All the Antwerp scholastics and lay brothers, also those in Tilburg, have fully accepted the solution to the problem (arrived at in Rome). I leave for Glastonbury this morning. I shall keep you informed.

Cheerio, wholly yours in C.J.

In the railway carriage.

PS: When leaving Antwerp, Fr. Reyn said that he received a telegram yesterday from their lawyer stating that the Sacred Congregation had issued a rescript following on ours of June 19, laying it down that a Chapter be shortly held with the same participants as the previous one. He (Reyn) is of the view that the Father General himself already had this rescript on him. Try and see if this assertion has any foundation. As for ourselves, we don't think it has any basis in fact. I end this dictation of Fr. General, and it gives me pleasure to offer you my best wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, July 9, 1891

Dear Fr. Meyer,

I thank you for your letter, and your wish to have all your difficulties over and done with straightaway. The way forward is fully mapped out for us, that of accepting quite openly and without regret the procedure Rome sets out for us. We had recourse to its impartiality no less than to its wisdom. It has announced its verdict; what more do we want? You say to me, Father, that you are concerned that there will be many departures among our young Antwerp priests, if not elsewhere also. Whose fault is that? On whom does responsibility devolve? Did they have any need to get above themselves when exaggerating the problems, spreading their self-righteous ideas, criticizing authority and going on about things which it should be no concern of theirs to know about!

Yes, I do believe that the Sacred Heart of Jesus who is the source of love, centre and unity of hearts, would be displeased with these mischief-makers. May he give them the light and grace to be conscious of all the evil which has come about, and return to a saner outlook! I am willing to receive them kindly, fatherly, forgetting everything that has happened. My greatest wish is to go forward together in the closest unity and friendliness, working to make our Society become more and more developed since we have in our hands the most prized means of bringing this about.

You advise me to convoke a reunion of the Chapter straightaway which would satisfy all. I have already made such a request to Rome and Rome replied that, since our Constitutions were due to be approved in the very near future, I then could immediately call a Chapter in keeping with established procedures. What more do you think I can do? Let's try to wait a little longer and we shall have everything we want. Nobody more than myself wants a Chapter meeting, and you can well believe that. What all must do at this moment is to accept straightaway the resolution of the irregular situation, act in conformity with the religious life and the rest will follow on for us by way of completion and before very long.

To become involved in such a pacifying undertaking makes one more acceptable to Our Lord and the Holy Virgin. What is there to be gained by waiting much longer? One is only adding to the malaise, worsening the situation, pitching oneself into the unknown characterized by a thousand problems which one cannot even foresee.

Pray, Father; I have requested during mass this favour from Our Lady of Prédigeuses (sic, not it would seem 'Our Lady of Favours or Providence'). Help me to obtain this favour and the Sacred Heart will reward you.

Cheerio, Father. Wholly yours in C.J.

*Date uncertain,
likely after July 9, 1891*

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. I have just received your letter with the submissions of Brothers Kuntz, Giovanelli and Nicolo. I await the rest.

Nicholas Nicolo, born February 14, 1869 in Palmira, went on to be Master of Novices and Provincial in Italy, highly regarded for his sweet, humble, nature. He died in Rome on June 6, 1954, aged 85.

2. Antwerp has forwarded the names of those of the priests who officially inform me that they want to wait until the Chapter. The fear that I would ask them to leave Antwerp has very likely weighed on them, as well as Monsignor Sepiacci's reply in respect to their celebrated lawyer. I asked Fr. Reyn for the telegram or letter sent by this lawyer; he sent nothing on to me. I am again asking him by telegram. In his letter accepting the legal validation of what was irregular legally for a period of time, Fr. Reyn informed me that he and his priest colleagues accepted it, but maintained their position otherwise, standing by the complaints they had addressed to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. They continue to be convinced that the rescript which confirms our authority for a further 12 years, keeps the Assistants in office until the next Chapter, endorses validation, is only part of the answer being sought. They await, so they say, another because the Sacred Congregation does not say that this (received) document is a reply to everything, bringing to an end all the difficulties and complaints voiced and expressed by them. I could very well, and in truth, say to them that for me the issue was quite clear, and they no longer had anything left for which they could hope, but they would not believe me. This false expectation draws them together all the time in a spirit of opposition. Their views do not seem to me to be frank and sincere. I fear that their reticence will remain and will be so proved in the future.

I hope that the acceptance of the Tilburg, Salzburg and Chezal-Benoît priests (Audouy and Jullien at the latter place) will arrive. All are acting in this way because they are being ordered to do so. It was a right and proper conspiracy while all the while protesting their good-will towards, and sincere interest in, our Society; they want to be in control and bring everything down.

3. I am pleased that I shall shortly be announcing the definitive approval of our Constitutions. This decree will bring a lot of problems to an end. Send it on to me as soon as you get it. They (the opponents) would be delighted with themselves if the Constitutions were to say that the centre of our Society will be in Rome. It would be a great pity if this is so; I hope not.

4. I am putting into our Annals the article on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which you sent on to me. It's splendid.

Cheerio, Father.

Good wishes to you in C.J.

Council Meeting, July 12, 1891

Indication of a general acceptance of the validation rescript.

1. The results of the validation process were considered, and it is satisfying to note that, apart from a few exceptions, the professed members of the Society who needed it acted on the recommendation.

The transfer of the Vichy property from Fr. Guyot to Fr. Hériault while work is taking place there.

2. The Superior General stated that the work being carried out at the Vichy house will cost about 80,000 francs, of which 40,000 has been spent in the current year, and giving this property quite a considerable value, so much so that the Society will find itself obliged in a future which cannot be far away, given the advanced age of the present proprietor, to pay a rent proportionate to the added value, that is to say a sum estimated to be 7 or 8,000 francs and that it is appropriate at this particular time to transfer the property to a younger confrère at the price the property had the moment work began on it. The new lessee will, accordingly, provide the customary assurance which is expected of all confrères who have responsibility for properties on behalf of the Congregation. The Council approved.

Request from Fr. Klotz for financial support for his parents.

3. Fr. General read a letter in which Fr. Klotz requested a yearly contribution of 800 francs for his parents. The Council, mindful that the Congregation was finding itself overly extended financially by such-like claims which appeared to be increasing, was of the view that it was not appropriate to compromise the future before a Chapter was due to take place and which would be likely to introduce reforms in the Society's financial affairs. It was, accordingly, decided to wait until the Chapter before giving a reply to Fr. Klotz's request and, meanwhile, one would stay with the contribution of 360 francs which Fr. General has made over to him in recent years.

The offer of a minor seminary turned down.

4. A proposal by the Archpriest of Limoux (Aude) in the name of the Bishop of Carcassone, to take charge of the minor seminary in Limoux, with the right to attach an apostolic school to it, was turned down because the Council thought that the lack of personnel would not allow it to be seriously considered however advantageous it might be otherwise.

The admission of a young man as postulant.

5. Following the good recommendation of Fr. Maillard, a young man from Bourges, aged 19, was accepted as a postulant; presenting himself personally, he asked to be admitted as a lay brother.

The Sacred Heart School.

6. Renewed discussion took place about the school, already referred to at the May 13 meeting, with respect to the reasons brought forward at that meeting. The Council agreed to a fresh undertaking being taken at the forthcoming new school year.

Reasons and procedures to be followed with regard to the Petite Oeuvre.

7. Different issues cropped up with respect to the Petite Oeuvre as regards entry, support of the youngsters and their entry to the novitiate.

Restrictions with respect to entry.

a. Admission. The number needs to be curtailed, concentrating the students in a small number of houses provided there is sufficient personnel to take charge and teach. The proposal to increase resources, normally put forward to increase entry on the setting up of Petite Oeuvres, cannot be accepted because of the serious drawbacks which such indirect multiplications would bring about and be quite palpable. The Society would find itself so enveloped by the Petite Oeuvre that it could not involve itself with other ministries in an appropriate way. It could not, virtually, recruit for anything outside this work. By recruiting more or less exclusively for the Petite Oeuvre, the Congregation would be limiting itself to a range much too narrow for the Society, recruitment for which would require a lot of time and money and, as well, it would not always provide solid vocations, either because these vocations are in principle questionable or because they are not looked after by people who are adequately competent. Moreover, the Congregation, through this recruiting process, would find itself weighed down with family financial responsibilities to which we are about to give attention. Accordingly it is a necessity dictated by the future to look seriously for evidence of a vocation, and for a certain commitment from parents and an assurance that later they will not need to call on their son to support, financially, his family. Their proposals to this effect need to be scrutinized, since for the purpose of having their children accepted they readily undertake all the requirements requested of them, but then regret will follow. The most effective promise which one can demand from them would be that of paying a little fee.

Patronage of children.

b. The procedure of assigning to benefactors youngsters whom they look after and with whom they enjoy a special relationship, has the advantage of drawing on and sustaining the interest of the benefactors for their protégés. But all too often this is to the detriment of the undertaking and there is the great let-down for the benefactors themselves when their protégés leave the Petite Oeuvre and come to call upon their charity when going on to enter another institution and follow another vocation. For these reasons the Council decided that for the future it cannot support by name any youngster.

Entry to the novitiate

c. It should be preceded by a process of acceptance which will not conclude without a serious assessment of the candidate and, if it's considered worthwhile, a suitable putting to the test.

Examination. This will concentrate on the individual's ability, the indication of a vocation provided during his visit to the Petite Oeuvre, the moral and financial status of his family, etc.

Test. If it is considered helpful by way of assessing certain doubtful vocations, this testing might take the form of giving the candidate permission to visit his family and passing a certain amount of time there. In as much as it is possible, the journeys would be undertaken, going, coming, at the family's expense.

Questions put aside for further study.

8. The meeting ended by putting back for further discussion certain questions: should the scholasticate be left in Antwerp, or moved to Chezal-Benoît, Barcelona, Rome, the Bourges Major Seminary, or another major seminary?

As for the present Superior of Tilburg, should he be left there?

The common retreat: who will give it? An outside religious, if possible.

To Archbishop Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, July 14, 1891

Your Grace,

I have returned from Belgium, Holland, England, Paris, where I have made known the decree from Rome. All the scholastics and lay brothers have enthusiastically accepted the decree of (vow) validation. Only the Antwerp, Tilburg and Chezal-Benoît priests created problems, wishing to postpone their adhesion until the forthcoming Chapter. The definitive time was laid down, since the Sacred Congregation, on being asked, informed me that I could allow 8 or 10 days for reflection, and that is what I have done in letting it be known to them that if, after this lapse of time (8-10 days), they have not accepted the validation, they will by that very fact become separated from the Institute. Those at Tilburg and Antwerp have replied stating that, while standing by the complaints they addressed to Rome, they will meanwhile go along with the validation, but hoping that the new Chapter will meet their wishes. We shall see.

Rome, which I adverted about all that has gone on, informed me that if those leading the opposition, even if they made their vows before 1883, continued to stir up things, I should make this known to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars which would then decree their expulsion.

I gather that our Constitutions are at last approved in perpetuity (definitively). A copy is being made of the decree and I shall be getting it shortly, making haste to let Your Grace have it. The Salzburg priests and scholastics haven't yet forwarded their acceptance. I shall wait until Sunday for them to do so. I do believe that they will, like the rest of the opposition, get in touch with me as they are all in contact with each other. Rome's reply has greatly disconcerted them; they were expecting something else.

There remains the vexing issue of the scholasticate. In bringing together our Antwerp students and those who have left the Chezal-Benoît Novitiate, we would have 40 or 45. Where are we going to place them? I don't think Chezal-Benoît can hold all of them. If we could have them in Bourges in a house near the major seminary, where they would be following the courses and be looked upon as part of the major seminary, they would have no more than one year of military service. I put this proposal to Your Grace so that its possibility may be looked at. It would, to my mind, be the best solution.

Fr. Jouët writes to me this a.m. that rumour is rife in Rome that the Cardinal Vicar has resigned!!! I am forwarding Your Grace a letter from the Dean of Vatan (a town of 3,000 inhabitants or so about 19 kilometres from Issoudun). If Your Grace believes he should go ahead, the parish can only profit from it.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant and son in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I have been pleased to gather that Your Grace has benefited from the waters (thermal baths). We pray that your health will be fully restored.

Council Meeting, July 19, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

Fixed Amounts for the Sacred Heart and Chezal-Benoît.

1. Fr. Maillard pointed out that the General Bursar, or whoever replaces him, having to provide the funds needed for the maintenance of the Sacred Heart and Chezal-Benoît houses, finds himself obliged to exercise some control over their expenditure, giving rise quite often to friction. For this reason he thinks it would be better to let them have a monthly allocation based on the expense-levels normally incurred in these houses and considered to be requisite given past experience. Of course one makes advantageous use of the contributions made available, and it should follow from this that it will be advantageous to take on the system being proposed. The Council aligned itself with this proposal and set out what follows.

General Proposal.

Beginning with this month, a monthly contribution of 50 francs (or 600 francs per annum) will be allocated to the house of the Sacred Heart and Chezal-Benoît towards each pupil, scholastic, novice or other persons living in the care of the said houses and not offering any service to the house either as teacher, supervisor, worker, etc. Stipends at 2 francs will be made available to priests celebrating the Eucharist in these houses, who will financially benefit, otherwise, from chaplaincy and preaching obligations.

Special Arrangements for the Sacred Heart.

With regard to the Sacred Heart, this house will be indemnified for the vestments provided for the parish, the cost of the material and the work. The same applies for the coal and anything else which is provided by the Sacred Heart for the parish. The house will profit from the produce of the little garden, be responsible for looking after it, pay taxes on the furniture used by the community and on what Fathers Chevalier and Piperon have; the basilica, however, is excepted. Major repairs will be undertaken at the expense of the common purse, but the house is responsible for local repairs. It will also have accruing to it school fees, including the contributions of the non-boarders (the 'externat') and the fees of foreign (non-French) boarders at the Petite Oeuvre. In the case of pilgrimages, community retreats and other occasions during which the Sacred Heart house hosts people from outside, each guest will make a contribution of two francs towards each meal and three francs for a day's sojourn. But the house, however, will give to the common fund any offerings received for the Our Lady association, the Petite Oeuvre, the missions, and in all the Society's undertakings, so that the sharing can be carried out in keeping with the intentions of the donors.

-Benoît.

As regards Chezal-Benoît, the community will benefit from the gardens, land and farms rented from the Archbishop, on condition of paying the rent and taxes and carrying out the requisite repairs. If, however, the revenues cannot meet all these charges, the general bursary will help out.

2. Fr. General remarked at this point that he had taken on himself: 1, a contribution of 10,000 francs towards the renovation of the Vichy house, money which had been given to him at the end of the work carried out on the Sacred Heart park (Issoudun), together with 200 francs for the same purpose as the thousand francs about to be mentioned; 2, for the Rome office (procure) 1,000 francs contributed towards the restoration of the Calvary chapel. The Council acknowledges that these latter sums do not belong to the Congregation and should be put to the use of the undertakings for which they are intended.

A request for missionaries in the Solomon Islands.

3. The Superior General then brought to the Council's attention a letter from the Procurator (Jouët) in Rome asking in Propaganda's name if a sufficient number of personnel might not be sent to Bishop Couppé, Vicar Apostolic of New Pomerania, to evangelize the Solomon Islands, which was a part of his Vicariate and is now being threatened by an invasion of Protestants (sic). The Council, while appreciating the Sacred Congregation's confidence in the Society, very much regrets that it is not possible at this particular time to meet its wishes, unless it judges it more opportune that we should leave the Gilbert Islands, where the situation is very difficult, and make available to Bishop Couppé the two priests and lay brother who are there at the moment.

The lack of available time did not allow for a discussion in depth of issues brought up the preceding day, which will be re-considered when the circumstances demand it.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

Issoudun, July 22, 1891

Yes, indeed, problems follow on each other; this is the way it has been for 30 years. But the Sacred Heart will continue to look after us; of that I am persuaded.

1. I shall pass on to Fr. Vaudon all your observations which seem very appropriate to me. It is absolutely imperative that we come to this understanding. I am upset when I see certain confrères writing and speaking without taking notice of our recommendations. Despite all my vigilance, I cannot always oversee the publication of our Annals nor that of Belgium, I am away too often.

2. If the Sacred Congregation wishes to change the title, St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, it will be unfortunate because of the Archconfraternity set up under this title and the accompanying indulgences; but do try and see to it that the decree does not become public, and is known about only by ourselves. The title of St. Joseph of the Sacred Heart is indeed that which is the most simple, offering less problems. Try and do your best.

3. Look after yourself and do not become ill. I want to impress this upon you.

4. I leave for Salzburg at midday on Sunday accompanied by Fr. Piperon. I am returning on the following Saturday. It would appear that people have become somewhat calmer. The behaviour and duplicity of their advocate has led them to a change of mind...

5. Our mission endeavours are vexing me. If Propaganda wishes to go along with the status quo prevailing for some years now, it would be, perhaps, preferable. From now on we shall make every effort to send some people every year.

Cheerio, my friend.

I have only time to say wholly yours in C.J.

Archbishop of Bourges

Bourges, July 14, 1891

Reverend Father,

I believe that the accompanying letter meets the request made to Bourges by Fr. Vaudon. You will forward it to the person whose name I do not recall and whose address I do not know. Because of the expected closure of the post office, I am in a great hurry, but I remain your obedient and gracious servant in the Lord.

+ Joseph, Archbishop of Bourges.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I have just arrived back from a long trip to find two letters from the Archbishop of Bourges, which I am forwarding to you. One is for Fr. Picard of the Assumption. You will take note that contrary to the pessimistic forebodings of Bishop... (name unclear) our Archbishop is available to all. Send this letter on, then, to Fr. Bailly together with one I myself have written to Fr. Picard. I wholeheartedly authorize you to make a little trip in Normandy. You will give my good wishes to Fr. Jean d'Avranches. Try and boost Fr. Brunet and speak nicely to Fr. Delaporte to look after Fr. Brunet; coming from you it will be all the more pertinent.

Cheerio, my friend.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Tell Fathers Delaporte and Brunet that I shall reply to them tomorrow. Do not stay away too long because of the pilgrimage we have to organize.

Council Meeting, July 25, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

Brothers Oswald Bentley and Zéphirin Peloquin accepted for perpetual vows.

Given the petition sent to the Superior (General) on behalf of the scholastic brothers Oswald Bentley and Zéphirin Peloquin, the temporal profession of the first expiring on May 30 last and on August 15 for the second, and given the good reports and favourable views of Fr. Derichemont, Superior at Watertown, these two brothers are accepted for final profession.

The lay brother Richard Beathy accepted for triennial vows.

Again, on the recommendation of the same Fr. Derichemont, lay brother Richard Beathy, aged just 17, was admitted to temporary (three-year) profession, with the right to hold it over for 6 months if considered necessary because of his youthful age and his inadequate awareness of the religious life's obligations. It was then agreed that Fr. Grom will definitely leave Hammonton, but it has not been decided yet what next appointment he will receive.

Fr. Reyn assured that there will be a Chapter called in the near future.

Fr. General spoke about his trip to Salzburg and also made known that he met Fr. Reyn in Paris who requested him on behalf of his Antwerp confrères that the Chapter be called as soon as possible after the approval of the Constitutions. Fr. Reyn was so assured in writing.

Fr. Klotz asked to request his release from vows.

Fr. Chevalier came across a lot of problems in Salzburg. Fr. Klotz continues in his exaggerated defiance. One is led to think that he should be asked to withdraw from the Society, and there is a canonical reason also involved, the need to help his parents financially. If he doesn't react to this invitation, the issue will be referred to the Sacred Congregation which will deliberate on the matter.

A circular about forthcoming events and notification of the retreat.

Fr. Superior then read a circular which he intended to send to the Society's priests about forthcoming issues and the community retreat which will begin on August 20 under the direction of Fr. Crosbier, S.J.

Fr. Guyot, who is unwell, wants help from a confrère, and Fr. Brunet, who is available at the moment because his community is on holiday, was nominated.

Having read the presentation (from Watertown) a change was made in relation to the Brother Beathy request, his acceptance held over until the personnel arrangements at the Watertown Novitiate are canonically organized.

Council Meeting, August 5, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

The Sacred Congregation's report on the result of the validation process.

The final report of the circular to the institute, referred to in the previous discussion, was read out, and there followed a presentation of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars' verdict on the results arising from the promulgation of the validating rescript.

A request for age dispensation for local Superiors.

The Council then discussed what the new Constitutions set out, requiring all in major office, and even local Superiors, to be aged over thirty-five. It was agreed that the said Sacred Congregation be requested to dispense from this regulation for two three-yearly terms so that one can name, or keep on in office if necessary, Superiors below the age of 35, but not less than 30.

Request to lower mass stipends to 1 franc.

It was also decided that an appeal be made to the Sacred Congregation of the Council to lower mass stipends to 1 franc, and which can be celebrated whatever other stipends are received from the faithful.

There followed the naming of those in particular who should be asked to go on retreat from the Society's different houses.

The offer of a Seminary in England turned down.

A communication from Fr. Tréand, Superior in Glastonbury, England, proposing the foundation of an English Seminary, the Bishop offering (to the Society) its direction, and where a novitiate could be provided, was turned down for lack of personnel, however advantageous such a foundation might be. Fr. Tréand is also presenting eight novices, six of whom are unable to pay any fee and he goes on to say that it is impossible for the house to come by any contribution. The Council was of the view that all these novices, nonetheless, should be accepted, their upkeep to be met from the contributions of the laity.

Discussion then followed about changes to be carried out at the Chezal-Benoît house in order to make part of it a scholasticate for the philosophers. It was decided to go there on a visit on Tuesday the 11th of this month to establish what's best to do.

Issoudun, August 5, 1891

My Dear Fathers,

As I already made known to you, as a result of the expulsions, and much too large a variety of undertakings, and the resultant over-burdening of everyone, several things were out of order and unconsciously overlooked by the administration. Rome, having been informed, and taking into consideration the exceptional circumstances in which we found ourselves, attentis circumstantiis in casu concurrentibus, kindly favoured us with a general legal overlooking which was effectively thoroughly restorative, 'in radice', and as such would have remained within the limits of secrecy except for the Chapter members, if regrettable indiscretions had not occurred. In any event, all wholeheartedly accepted this legal process of overlooking, and it became a great boost for us since in this way we became aware in the most satisfying manner how each one loved our dear Society and was committed to his vocation.

Drawing on this experience, we shall see to it that no mistake will be made in the future and everything will be done according to the Constitutions. For everything to go ahead in an orderly fashion, we need the support and good will of all our dear confrères, particularly the different local Superiors on whom we presume to count. Since some are still unenthusiastic, we hope they will shortly give way, faced with the good will of our administration which has only one aim now: to make up for what has happened in the past and work with renewed conviction for the good of the Institute.

The assistants remaining in office until the next Chapter, before coming to live with the Superior General, will be of immense help in the normal pursuit of good administration.

Fr. Jouët, not now able to fulfil his two roles (Assistant General and Procurator General), will simply be the Society's Procurator to the Holy See. His place as assistant will remain unoccupied until the next Chapter which, on being convoked, would entail the definitive approval of our Constitutions. However, a recent letter informs us of this definitive approval, so long sought after, so impatiently awaited. The Sacred Congregation will have the text copied for its Archives, and will shortly be sending us the decree which I shall hasten to let you have.

Fr. Piperon, First Assistant, is authorized by the same Sacred Congregation to take up residence at Chezal-Benoît as Superior and Novice Master since the distance which is so approximate to Issoudun will make it possible for him to come to our meetings as often as needed.

It is not, perhaps, unhelpful, my dear Fathers, to express a word or two about our last Chapter which led to certain problems and regrettable divisions. I would have to say to you quite frankly that we were all mistaken about the real purpose of this meeting. Thinking that I was doing the right thing, I thought I should bring forward, in the Society's interests, some changes, three of some significance, to the current text of the Constitutions whose definitive approval I had sought. The Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, finding these changes too noteworthy to be approved without being first tried out, made known to me by rescript that, as Founder and first Superior of the Society, I had to make a choice between the old and the new text, and that if I stayed with the earlier text there would be no difficulty in getting definitive approval, but if, on the contrary, I preferred the new version, I would then need to call a Chapter to examine this new text, and afterwards these new Constitutions would be submitted to a new experimental approval over ten years before definitive approval. Faced with this, the Chapter unanimously approved the former Constitutions, and, accordingly, this Chapter itself, keeping to the terms of the rescript, had no further purpose. In Rome, where I was officially called last May, I was rebuked for having called this (Chapter) meeting, which should not have taken place until after definitive approval, and in keeping with the procedure noted in the newly-approved text.

However, this assembly, precipitate though it was, gave rise to something quite positive, since the queries expressed by certain members of this Chapter helped to rid us of the string of irregularities in which we had wound ourselves up in good faith.

Rome, having taken note of our many and varied works, asked us to hold back from too many initiatives given our small numbers. We ourselves had already become conscious of this, and this explains why last year we brought together the upper classes of our Petite Oeuvres in one house in order to lessen the number of personnel involved in teaching. The Sacred Congregation approved of this measure.

As well, in face of the demands from the Archbishop of Quito for new missionaries who would look after his basilica, we made it known to him that we could not meet his wishes, so much so that we would be withdrawing from Ecuador at the end of our contract, that is to say, in the spring of 1892, all our confrères who are presently there. And if it is possible to bring about certain disengagements even now we would be anything but opposed to it.

Now, dear confrères, as all our problems become smoothed out, and with Rome having the last word with its 'over-looking' rescript, re-establishing at the same time the exercise of legitimate authority, let us be united more than ever in supporting and developing our institute since unity gives rise to strength. Given the precious qualities which characterize us, let us look with confidence to the future. Born of the Sacred Heart, under the powerful protection of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, what have we to fear? Are we not their beloved children, chosen disciples? Has not their all powerful and fatherly (sic) protection of our Society been there from its beginnings? Who can specify the maternal kindness of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart? What prodigious favours has she not worked, doing so each day, in our favour! Be confident, therefore! Let us go forward in the most close and friendly togetherness. All of us following faithfully our holy Rule will be rewarded in seeing our dear Congregation's self-affirmation strengthened through sound religious discipline developing and expanding itself more and more for the greater glory of the Sacred Heart and Our Lady, meeting in this way the designs of Providence for it.

In order to reinforce these resolutions and renew ourselves in the religious spirit, I am pleased to inform you that we shall have a general retreat at Issoudun from August 20 to August 28. It will be preached by an esteemed religious from the Society of Jesus. We shall be inviting specially-named confrères from Issoudun, Chezal-Benoît, Paris, Glastonbury, Antwerp, Tilburg, Salzburg, Rome, Canet-de-Mar and Barcelona.

Towards the success of this retreat, each house of the Society will, after morning prayer, say the Veni Creator, followed by the verse and prayer of the Holy Spirit. At night, after perpetual adoration, and the prayer, Jesus Saviour of the world, one will say the morning prayer to which will be added the invocations to the Sacred Heart, Our Lady and St. Joseph.

Please accept, my dear Fathers, this fresh assurance of my best wishes in Sanctissimo Corde Jesu.

Issoudun, August 6, 1891

Most Holy Father,

Jules Chevalier, Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart whose mother house is at Issoudun, and procure at Rome, via della Sapienza 32, humbly prostrate, with his assistants, at the feet of Your Holiness, wishes to make it known that two of his four assistants, confirmed in office until the next General Chapter by a rescript dated June 13 last, do not live in Issoudun with him, as required by the said rescript. One of them, Fr. Píperon, living but a short distance away, 17 kilometres, regularly attends the Council meetings each time he is needed. The other, Fr. Jouët, lives in Rome where he is Procurator General, and he, being unable to fulfil his duties as assistant, has resigned, his resignation accepted. Among 13 local Superiors presently in office, six have not attained the age of 35, a requirement set out in the recently-approved Constitutions, and in addition two of these are Novice Masters, a role for which 35 years is now the requisite age. Since it is impossible for the time being to replace all of these with people of the requisite age, Your Holiness is requested to permit Fr. Píperon to remain as assistant given the present circumstances and to leave until the next Chapter the filling of the assistant's position from which Fr. Jouët has disengaged, as well as validating or renewing as local Superiors and Masters of Novices those under the age of 35 who cannot be conveniently replaced by other people of the requisite age, but who, however, should be aged 30 and have made perpetual vows.

The Archbishop of Bourges considers that the present circumstances of the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Issoudun, as presented by the Superior General, are deserving of a favourable temporary dispensation and, accordingly, he requests the Sovereign Pontiff to offer a favourable response.

Issoudun, August 7, 1891

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. The escapade by good Fr. Durin does not come as a surprise, but it pains me because of the way he has gone about it. I have written to him: read my letter before you send it on to him.
2. I went to Paris and met the Archbishop of Quito. I handed him a copy of my letter in which I informed him that the Society's administration had decided, when our contract ends next spring, to disengage from Sagrario and from the work on the basilica. His Grace appeared to be stunned, telling me in Fr. Píperon's presence that he could not agree to it and would appeal to the Pope. I informed him that the terms of our contract were formal and we could not stay on in Ecuador, given the conditions in which we found ourselves.
3. I am forwarding to you a summary of my visit to our houses in connection with the resolution of the irregularities' issues which you will be kind enough to pass on to the Cardinal.
4. You will be kind enough to forward immediately the approved Constitutions' text; we shall have it printed at Issoudun as soon as possible.
5. Lacking members aged 35 who would become Superiors at this time, we are requesting an indult from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars which would allow us for a period of 6 years to appoint as local Superiors those from among us who are perpetually professed and haven't yet reached 35 years of age, but are considered to be worthy prospects. I think that it would, perhaps, be worthwhile to mention in the indult that they wouldn't be under 30 years of age and would have taken perpetual vows.
6. We are also petitioning for an indult which would allow us to have our masses said for a one franc stipend (roughly 3.41 euros).
7. I am forwarding a letter from Fr. Pierre Barral who asks to be left in Hammonton. Has he petitioned for release from his vows? I don't think so. What should be said in reply to him? (Jouët replied on August 11: No, he has not requested anything such as far as I know... Have you extended the three months' leave of absence you gave him?... Why is so much being made of someone like this who on the evidence doesn't merit it? This is an important issue!)

Cheerio, Father.

To Cardinal Monaco la Valetta Raffaele, Cardinal Protector.

August, 1891

This document is in Piperon's handwriting

Your Eminence,

The fatherly concern you bring to our Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart obliges me to place at your feet an account of what has been done in the institute, following a decree of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, dated June 13 last, and to which you added your signature, 'exequatur' on the 15th of the same month.

This decree, Your Eminence, I received, together with my assistants, with gratifying appreciation and loyal submission. We accepted it in its total amplitude as the one and only way to bring an end to serious friction, and what was legally irregular. This remedy provides an answer for everything. A wholehearted, full, acceptance of what is in it will bring peace and calm to the Congregation, fostering the hope of a fresh expansion of the undertakings.

Having received the decree, I hurriedly send a copy of it to all the Congregation's houses where I could not go and present it myself. I sent with it a copy of a circular letter, of which I enclose a copy. All these letters were sent on June 29 and 30. Our houses in America and Oceania were not able to send us their replies because of the distance. Our priests on the missions will not receive the decree and letter until September.

What follows are the findings for our European houses.

1. Rome. The Rome community is made up of two priests, eleven scholastics and one lay brother who needed to have their vows validated (not the priests); they all requested such most impressively and in very supportive words.
2. Barcelona. This house had only one priest and one scholastic affected by the decree, and both demanded validation.
3. Canet. Canet-de-Mar, likewise in Spain, had a priest, three scholastics, three lay brothers needing validation and all asked for it without any reservations. These three houses, above, remained completely outside the problems experienced elsewhere.
4. Issoudun. On June 29 I brought the decree to the attention of our Issoudun house, making all the necessary explanations. Four priests, two scholastics and eight lay brothers found themselves requiring validation, as well as one of the priests serving in the parish. These confrères, after some reflection, asked for validation.
5. -Benoît. The same day Fr. Piperon, accompanied by Fr. Morisseau, both assistants, went to our Chezal-Benoît house, formerly a Benedictine monastery, not very distant from the mother house, to which, with the approval of His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges, we moved the novitiate last autumn and as well the upper classes of our Petite Oeuvre. Fr. Piperon presented my circular letter and the decree to the community. In this house, four priests, four scholastic teachers and three lay brothers sought validation. That evening, the two assistants, on returning to Issoudun, presented me with the written request for validation from the two priests, the three scholastics, the three lay brothers. Two other priests made their request at the end of the ten-day limit I had allowed for in my circular letter. The fourth scholastic, Guillaume Büning, who had temporary vows only, availed of the circumstance to take his departure. The reasons for his doing so have nothing to do with the problems arising from the Chapter.
6. Paris. On June 30 I left with one of my assistants to make the decree known in our other houses. I only stopped over for a few hours at our Paris house where I read out the decree and my circular letter to the assembled community, providing explanations which were strictly necessary. Only three needed validation, two priests and a brother. One of the priests, the Superior, and a brother gave me their letter of request before I left. The other priest, L. Merg, sent me his at the end of the stated time (10 days).
7. Antwerp. I left from Paris that evening for our Antwerp house, one of those important and animated opposition centres, since it was from here that all, or almost all, the memoranda were forwarded to the Sacred Congregation. Having celebrated the Eucharist I presented a copy of the decree to the Superior, and straightaway, in the presence of my assistant, I provided him with the necessary explanations. The Superior, having read the document, informed us that it was only one part of the Sacred Congregation's reply but, while he was pleased to accept everything it upheld, he was waiting on another (reply) and would like to postpone the validation of vows until the new document arrived. I replied that it was impossible for me to grant the delay he was looking for and that, besides, I was certain that we would not receive any document from the Congregation other than the decree approving our Constitutions, following which the Chapter would be recalled according to the procedure set out for us by the Sacred Congregation itself. Following this meeting with the Superior, I called together all the priests in the house, five, the sixth absent. I said the same to them and they, like the Superior, came up with the same reply, calling for a delay, whereupon I repeated what I had said to the Superior. Thereafter, having bade farewell to the priests, I brought the scholastics together in their study where I read the decree and my circular letter, pointing out that each one was free to ask or not for validation of vows, adding, however, that those who did not wish to have validation would ipso facto cease to belong to the Congregation. All the scholastics handed me their written request before I left; only the priests wanted to avail of the eight-day delay.

After dinner the assistant who accompanied me called the lay brothers together, reading and translating the decree for them, and also the circular letter by the Superior of the house, he being assisted by the priest in charge of the brothers. All the (lay) brothers freely wrote to me asking for their validation request to be granted. Eight days later, I received a request for validation from all the priests in this house, but with certain reservations which were withdrawn when the signatories became definitively convinced that there would be no other rescript forthcoming from the Sacred Congregation, such-wise that today I asked for validation quite simply without any reservations on the part of all who belonged to this house.

8. Tilburg. On the following day, July 2, I went to Tilburg, Holland, where I proceeded to act in the same way as at Antwerp; gathering first all the priests together and the scholastic (student) teachers, my assistant accompanying me. The priests made more or less the same observations as those of Antwerp, asking me to wait longer than the date mentioned in my circular letter to benefit those in the house who needed validation, waiting over, that is, until the next Chapter. Following my reply stating that it was impossible to meet their wishes, they left the room stating that they would think about it over a number of days. As for the scholastics they gave me a positive reply on the day itself. The lay brothers sent me their reply after an eight-day interval. The two priests whose situation came within the conditions envisaged by the decree, sent in their petition at the beginning of the eight days allowed. The same day we returned to Antwerp where we met Bishop Couppé, Vicar Apostolic of New Pomerania (now New Ireland, New Britain) and part of the independent country of Papua, New Guinea, who in the best disposition handed me his own request for validation.

9. Glastonbury. On the following day I left for Glastonbury, County of Somerset, UK, where we have a house. There I found people more calm than at Antwerp and Tilburg. As in the other houses I read the decree and provided the necessary explanations. One priest, five teacher scholastics and four lay brothers needed validation of their vows. All were in favour, handing me before I left their written petition.

10. Unable to go to Salzburg in Austria at this time, which I had visited recently, I had a copy of my circular letter sent there from Antwerp on Thursday, July 2. In this house there is a priest and five scholastic teachers who need validation. All forwarded their request to me some days after becoming aware of the decree.

The above, then, Your Eminence, are the results arising from the promulgation of the June 13 rescript. There still remains quite a lot of tension among many; nevertheless I am persuaded that calm will be restored little by little. As you have gathered from the foregoing report of the situation, there's only one individual who didn't look for vow-validation. As soon as I have a reply from our American and Australian confrères, I shall hasten to let you know the outcome.

Council Meeting, August 11, 1891
-Benoît

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard and Fr. Batard, General Bursar.

The lay brother Charles Burré is not accepted.

The proposal for a foundation put forward by Fr. Tréand is adjourned. Then the request of the fore-mentioned Charles Burré, employed by the St. John of God Brothers in Marseilles, to become a lay brother is turned down. The observations made by the Superior of the house indicate that besides good qualities he greatly lacks steadiness and, accordingly, the Council decided against him. The reports of Fr. Lanctin on 7 Tilburg Petite Oeuvre students due shortly to begin their third year at Chezal-Benoît were then considered, as well as the reports of Mr. Personat and Fr. Meyer on those doing rhetoric this current year and due to enter the novitiate in September. Two of these pupils are of doubtful quality.

Notification from Fr. Jouët of a circular and the recommendation that the new text of the Constitutions should be to hand before a Chapter is called.

The Superior General read Fr. Jouët's letter notifying his acceptance of the last circular which he read to Monsignor Sepiacchi, Secretary of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. He (the latter) had nothing to add other than requesting that the Chapter should not be called before the Constitutions were printed and this should then be forwarded to the different houses of the institute.

A proposal from Fr. Ramot for the speedy Convocation of the Chapter.

A letter to this effect from Fr. Ramot was read, with comments, in which he requested, almost immediately, a Chapter meeting, and to expedite this event he proposed, by way of a petitioned Pontifical indult, to exempt distant Superiors, such as those in our missions and the one in Quito where the house is due to be closed next spring.

The Council, while acknowledging the need to call a Chapter, whether to provide a sense of legitimacy to those who identify peace and unity with its taking place or as guaranteeing what was promised, is of the view, nevertheless, that no initiative can be undertaken towards calling it before the decree approving the text of the Constitutions has arrived, and also not before Rome has made known its position about Superiors younger than 35 years.

The withdrawal of the request put to Fr. Klotz to ask for release from his vows.

Fr. Klotz having forwarded to the Superior a letter of regret and submissiveness in acceptable terms, the Council was of the view that there was no reason to insist on his departure from the Society, and to enjoin upon him to abide faithfully by the promises he made to refrain from any language or action calculated to diminish the confidence of confrères in the administration. Moreover, at his request, he is allowed to return from isolation on condition that he exercises great discretion, avoiding any discussion of our problems with confrères...

Decision taken about temporary or annual help to needy families of confrères.

Occasioned by the request of this Father (Klotz) for financial support for his parents, the Council, having taken note that requests of this nature were increasing, and given the impoverished situation affecting the majority of candidates who have come from the Petite Oeuvre, was of the view that this issue needed to be addressed in a practical nature. According to certain unwritten observations by the Secretary of the Sacred Congregation, it does seem unacceptable, in a religious poverty context, to set out a fixed annual contribution each year in favour of the parents who have sons in the Society, but find themselves in need, but one might favour them while they are in need, partially or completely, with the mass stipends for the Eucharists which their sons will be celebrating, since these offerings are like an alms not taken from the community's direct income. In Rome this is the most common custom among religious when helping needy families. Accordingly, the Council decided that for the future the financial help made available to confrères to meet either the temporary or permanent needs of their families would come from mass stipends, and the amount must not be more than what is on offer from the mass offerings, that is to say 2 francs for each mass.

Financial aid for the families of Fathers Lanctin and Klotz.

If other financial contributions are made beyond the amount stated immediately above, it will only be for temporary and exceptional reasons. Making immediate application of this decision to Fathers Lanctin and Klotz, it was agreed that their mass stipends at 2 francs each mass should be made available for the support of the respective families.

Dear Father,

Issoudun, August 12, 1891

You were kind enough to forward the request of three scholastic brothers for final profession, but you provide no factual details about them. Nevertheless, we need to have some details about them during their three-year training period. Please let us be informed about this. In order to facilitate the presentation of this information, a sheet has been drawn up having in the margins the principal headings under which the information is to be made available. As regards who must, or should, make a retreat, I think Fr. (Chevalier) will say that you must do as you think fit. In face of the problems which you have raised, it is difficult to arrive at a decision.

Please accept, Father, my respectful and devoted good wishes in Sanctissimo Corde Jesu.

J.C. Morisseau, MSC, Secret.

Chevalier adds:

Dear Father,

If you think the retreat will do Fr. Védère good, you can send him on alone and keep the rest. You will arrive yourself later. Thank you for your last letter. I am waiting for the approved Constitutions so that I can print them together with the decree. Get going straightaway on the indults.

Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Circular letter to MSC Superiors.Undated, likely August, 1891

Dear Fathers,

This very day I received the final, definitive, approved text of the Constitutions which I am promptly forwarding to you with a copy of the decree included also, indicating some alterations made to the former text by the Sacred Congregation. I would have liked to send you at the same time a letter convoking the next Chapter, but His Eminence the Cardinal Prefect asked us to wait until the printed copies of the definitively approved Constitutions would be in the hands of the Society's members. We hope that by the end of September this new edition will be ready. During this time we shall ask Rome if it might not be possible to dispense from calling far away Superiors to the Chapter so that a reunion likely to be so helpful to the Society will not be greatly delayed, and one arrives focused on the glory of the Sacred Heart and the well being of our institute. While waiting let us pray for each other and strive to strengthen the lines of charity which unite us.

Please accept, Father, once again, my very best wishes in Corde Jesu.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Changes inserted in the Constitutions:

On page 18, before Chapter V, the following is added:

5. "Vestitus Missionariorum Ssmi Cordis Jesu ille erit qui ab anno 1874 usque adhuc usitatus fuit."

On page 9, line 8, after "quibuscumque ", there is added between two inverted commas: "etiam trans mare".

On page 40, "salva auctoritate capituli generalis" has been replaced by "secundum constitutiones".

On page 41, number 7 is changed by these words only "omnes superiores locales in exercitio".

On the same page the addition at the bottom is left out.

On page 44, these words have been taken out of 3 and 4: "quæ suum proprium nomen jam in angulo designatum habeat".

On page 46, before the paragraph dealing with the assistants, and having stated that local Superiors must have made perpetual vows, these words are added: "aetatisque annorum triginta quinque fuerint".

On page 51, the last word "trienis" is replaced by "sexennius".

On page 52, lines 5 and 6, the words in parenthesis have been left out: "V – annotationem ad p. 41".

The Decree of approval for the Constitutions:

Council Meeting, August 16, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

The candidates Ronsi and Bonaccorsi accepted for the novitiate.

Letters from Fathers Jouët and Védère were read proposing four students from the Rome Petite Oeuvre for the Novitiate. Given the information provided about these four candidates only two, Ronsi and Bonaccorsi, were accepted. The postulant Diadei, who offers to come paying his own expenses, and given the favourable report on him, is accepted, if he hasn't already taken the habit in the Franciscan friary where he has already spent five years.

Novices and students from Chezal-Benoît about whom there are doubts.

A discussion took place about several Chezal-Benoît students whose vocation, health or abilities would appear to be in some doubt, and it has been suggested that they be sent away: Ducloux, Hannigan, Fiate, Denis Mahony, Cornelius O'Mahony. The novice Trauns cannot be considered other than as a lay brother.

There followed a talk by Fr. Lanctin about his mother's financial support by the Congregation. He required financial assistance for his family already on his entry to the Petite Oeuvre, taking the following form: some hundreds of francs at first, increased to 800, and from there to 1,000 and, finally, 1,200. Very much alive to the fact that this financial burden was a heavy demand on the Society, he suggested that he might leave in order to look after his parents financially, but given the Society's need of his services he was persuaded to remain while given the undertaking that the Society would continue indefinitely to contribute the amount mentioned above. It was for this reason he challenged the reduction which followed from the decision taken at the previous meeting. The Council, accepting that this arrangement had been made, is of the view that the contribution must be continued however high it is.

The lay brothers L. Dorfler, A. Eichinger, F. Hasters admitted to temporary profession.

The session ended with the acceptance of the above-named from Salzburg to temporary profession, given the good reports presented by Fr. Hartzler. This acceptance was postponed for quite some time because of the concern that the novitiate for these brothers might be invalid due to the absence of a duly constituted Novice Master, but this situation became positively assessed when on ending, before June 13, it became guaranteed by the validation process. Issoudun, August 22, 1891

Dear Father,

1. We are in the middle of the retreat being preached by the Jesuit Fr. Croibier; everything seems to be going quite well. Fathers Reyn, Vandel, Klotz, Ramot are here for this retreat. Peace would appear to be re-born in people.
2. We intend to send you three or 4 (sic) candidates to study theology in Rome. What do you think?
3. The Council Fathers are of the view that the theology scholasticate should remain at Antwerp in charge of Fr. Vandel. I would prefer to have everything at Chezal-Benoît. But our fathers maintain that to do so would give rise to a lot of discontent, and that it is already quite enough that, besides the novitiate, there is also the philosophy scholasticate at Chezal-Benoît.
4. In order to pacify and boost all the discontented, we cannot afford to postpone a Chapter meeting, something which hasn't occurred for 12 years, and which everybody considers a likely unifying process. One is aware already of the changes made to the Constitutions. The opposition would have liked something else, but in the end they went along with the changes, and the impact has not been unhappy. Everybody is happy to be rid of indecisiveness and uncertainty. The official promulgation of the Constitutions will not be disadvantageous for us, since we know what the main promoters of the opposition group think, and who are at this moment here in Issoudun. The firmness we demonstrated when speaking to them made it clear that they had either to accept the situation or not and that they would have to leave the Society if they weren't satisfied, after which they became more pliant and less demanding, at least to all appearances. Fr. Klotz, seemingly about to leave, wrote a sincere letter of acceptance. Let us hope so!

Now, my friend, it is necessary that we become positively aware, before calling the Chapter, of those who should be at it. Should the Superiors presently in office and who are not 35 years old be part of it, even without recourse to an indult? I think so myself because the law, generally speaking, does not have a retroactive effect; this is also the view of the confrères here. If it is also the opinion of the Sacred Congregation, indults are not required in this instance. Take advice on this and let me know the outcome. If, on the contrary, the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars is of the opposite view, so that this regulation has a retroactive impact, send me its written reply. In any event an indult will be needed because we have nobody to replace these Superiors (under 35). I do not see how in all this our way of acting should be considered as being precipitate or blameworthy. Lex est lex (the law is the law)... One must, however, be accurately aware of what one is ordering or defending!

As for the Superiors who live abroad, distantly, we can call upon those who are rightly, constitutionally, appointed Superiors, such as François Barral in Quito, Derichemont in Watertown and Merg in Sydney; we can summon these by telegram, but once again should we not know beforehand if they can be called since they are not 35 years old, and come under the principle given above about the law not having a retroactive effect, or that an indult be given in advance: this is basic. Our confrères in Thursday, at Volavolo (New Britain) have no Superiors other than the Apostolic Vicars, and could not have others as Superiors since not one of them has the requisite qualities (to be Superior). And since Monsignor Sepiaci informed us that Apostolic Vicars cannot be appointed Superiors, it is, therefore, necessary to be given an indult in order to abide by the regulation. Having Apostolic Vicars coming such distances to the detriment of their missions, which cannot be left at a moment's notice, as well as lacking funds for the journey, would seem to me to be quite impractical, all the more so when this Chapter no longer has significant importance.

There remains Fr. Bontemps who is canonically a Superior and has the requisite age. If I were compelled to have him there, it would be the end of the Chapter. There is no regular contact with him; most of his letters get lost; it is 18 months since I last heard from him. It is, therefore, absolutely imperative that the Sacred Congregation should exempt us from inviting him.

You can see for yourself, Fr., that all these issues need to be clarified before the Chapter is called. Be good enough then to give them close consideration.

Cheerio, my friend. Mr. Caseneuve is here with his sister for the past 4 days; he will not be leaving until Tuesday. We are happy to have him ex toto corde (with total good will).

Issoudun, August 23, 1891

Your Grace,

Our retreat, which began under the Jesuit Fr. Croibier on Wednesday evening, continues until Thursday morning. The Sacred Heart would appear to bless it as those following it seem calm and well disposed.

Fr. Lanctin, to whom we continue to make available the 1,200 francs (about 4,050 euros) in favour of his family, is stationed at Tilburg (Holland). He asks us to give him an appointment which would bring him nearer to his mother and sister who live in Issoudun, making it a condition for his remaining in the Society. We do not want to make any such promise to him, wishing that he, like the others, practice obedience. He will return to his post after the retreat. Would it be your view, Your Grace, to make no further concession to him?

In the programme for the September 8 feast day celebrations we make mention that they will be presided over by Your Grace. We hope and pray that Your Grace's health will place no obstacle in the way. We are hoping that Monsignor de Sinope will also be present. Fr. Garnier has written to me and he hopes to be in Issoudun on September 7 and 8 to revitalize the work he has initiated. I am pleased to ask Your Grace that he be given the necessary faculties.

I am with deep respect Your Grace's humble and obedient son in C.J.

Dear Father,

1. Would the Sacred Congregation see anything inconvenient in the numbers following each other instead of paragraph upon paragraph; this would be better.
2. In our former Constitutions, page 40, article 1, number 2, it is stated with reference to the Superior General: "ad aliud duodecennium iterum atque iterum confirmari poterit". In the copied text you sent on to me there isn't the "atque iterum". Is this a mistake in copying it, or is it something expressly stated? Be good enough to ask about this. The elimination of "atque iterum" has prompted the enclosed letter.

Council Meeting, August 31,
September 1, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

Fr. General read a letter from the Archbishop of Quito in which he argued that the Congregation should continue to take charge of the Ecuador national shrine, the Sacred Heart Basilica, promising to accept all reasonable changes which one would wish to make in the original contract. The Council, asked to consider this matter once again, confirmed its earlier decision to withdraw from Quito as soon as it was conveniently possible.

The separation of the Solomon Islands from the vicariate of New Pomerania.

Fr. General then proceeded to read a letter from Fr. Jouët with the information that the Prefect of the Propaganda Congregation had decided to detach the Solomon Islands from the Vicariate Apostolic of New Pomerania, and the Superior General should, accordingly, together with Bishop Couppé, present a document to Propaganda accepting the division of the New Pomerania Vicariate, something which needs to be done before the departure of Bishop Couppé.

The Canet-de-Mar house: its need to be kept.

Discussion then followed on Canet-de-Mar (Spain) and Fr. Carrière's report was read, he being Superior of the house. The conclusion was reached that it would be impossible to leave the place without seriously compromising the Society's honour, and some numbers should be posted there to strengthen its personnel which presently is quite insufficient. After making a renewal serious this year, one will become more aware about Canet's possibilities and then be in a position to argue for the maintenance of the house or for its abolition.

The financial situation at Canet, although the Council did not come to a decision, needs to be regularized. Some individuals were mentioned who could be sent to Canet. It was agreed that before anything else the financial situation should be brought under control, something which at present is anything but acceptable since the expenses involved have risen to 61,000 francs and haven't been paid off. Interest is being paid at 6%, first of all to Don Fernando, the seller, coming to 30,000 francs, then to Madame Eléonore, interest at 25,000 francs, and another lady's interest at 6,000 francs, both ladies having given Don Fernando the respective sums in order to acquire the property, being therefore regarded as co-owners. Don Fernando in selling to the Society, also Madame Eléonore, had promised to make a will in favour of the Congregation, each disengaging at death from their contribution and happy to accept the annual rent during their life-time. But this will was not fully attested to and, accordingly, the parties involved could revoke it; having family commitments they could well find themselves in a situation where it would be impossible for them to go ahead with their wishes. Accordingly, the situation should be remedied such-wise that the Congregation does not have to pay an excessive interest rate without compensation, while the creditor-owners have the rights freely to dispose of the property which belongs to them. What might be done in their favour, therefore, is to make available to them a more financially viable rent above 6%, and as a result of which the debt contracted by us with regard to this would be cancelled on their death. For example, Don Fernando would presently be offered 2,000 francs rent in place of 1,800.

Definitive disengagement from Hammonton and the return of Fr. Grom to Watertown.

The Council again confirmed its previous decision about Hammonton. This foundation venture is wholly abandoned and Fr. Grom will go to Watertown, whence Fr. Dericheumont can be recalled and made available for the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre.

A decision about Brother Büning.

The scholastic Büning, who wanted to leave the Society and for this reason had not asked for his vows to be validated, had a change of mind during the latest retreat, but as the request came late it was referred to Rome. If he is set on staying he will be sent to the scholasticate.

The postponement of Brother J.M. Cochard's final profession.

He asked for final profession when his temporary vows expired in October, but since Fr. Piperon had some indiscretions and lightheadedness with which to reproach him, it was decided to hold over his request for some months.

A decision relative to the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, and Chezal-Benoît, limiting their freedom to incur expenses and setting forth the formalities to be observed when making use of contributions.

When there is exceptional expense, or inopportune expense (such as buying a cow), incurred by the Sacred Heart house, it is laid down that this house, together with that of Chezal-Benoît, on receiving their allocations from the general bursary, should not set up extraordinary expenses of this kind without the approval of the Superior General. Moreover, it is being laid down that the bursars of these houses should at the beginning of each month send to the general bursar an account of the expenses for the previous month.

Finally, the Council considered the reports made available by Fr. Grinsven about several lay brothers who either wanted to enter the novitiate or make final profession. This report was held over.

Article 1952

Document "to be forwarded to interested Confrères".

Undated, likely September 1891

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Fr. General's, and the Council's, comments on Fr. Delaporte's letter, dated September 4, 1891, and to be forwarded to interested confrères.

I. Before the definitive convocation of the Chapter, Rome, having been advised, set out two conditions:

A. That the result of the vows' validation in the different houses, even those furthest away, be known and that we send the results of this to Rome.

B. That we officially promulgate the approved Constitutions and await their impact on people. We cannot, despite our best expectations, dictate to Rome. It is for us, as obedient children, to accept without complaint whatever Rome sets out for us.

II.

A. As for the fixed age, 35 years, in regard to general ministry and to become a local Superior, it is Rome which decided on this, aware of the reason for doing so, and we cannot do other than accept.

B. If the Chapter, in expectation of the moment when we have Provinces, is made up of Superiors alone, we can only, respectfully, go along with this.

C. We enquired of the Sacred Congregation if Superiors under the age of 35 could remain on as Superiors; we are awaiting a reply. We shall accept what has been approved of and our wish is that our good confrères do the same. Fathers Guyot, Ramot and Klotz were the ones who excluded themselves from participating in the Chapter by handing in their resignations, something they were not asked for. It is, accordingly, not for us to open by way of privilege the Chapter doors to those who willingly locked themselves out. To lay the blame at the General Administration is the equivalent of saying: we do not want order and peace except on our terms!

III. A. The Council had not expected that it would be required to ask for an indult lowering the age provisionally to 30 years from the 35 years required for local Superiors. It is more than a month since we sent a request to this effect and we cannot force the Congregation to meet our wishes. We are waiting on its reply and everyone else must do the same.

B. You say that people will become exasperated if the Chapter is held over for quite sometime. Is it our fault if Rome itself delays it? Nobody more than ourselves wants the Chapter to take place; we have done everything we could to bring it about, and to be candid, when one refers to the confrères' exasperation with Rome's lack of urgency, we cannot understand this mentality coming from religious who have pledged obedience to lawful authority and deference to the Holy See.

IV. A. The criticism levelled at us for adding to the undertakings engaged in at Chezal-Benoît to the detriment of the Northern houses (in Belgium and Holland) where there are "only children" left is all the more without foundation because the bringing together of the three upper classes of our Petite Oeuvres, as well as the setting up of a novitiate at Chezal-Benoît, was unanimously decided at the July 1890 Council meeting attended by Fr. General and Fathers Piperon, Guyot, Delaporte, Assistants.

B. The complaint about having a retreat preached to our youngsters by a Jesuit is also without foundation. Twenty-two years ago dear Fr. Vandel called upon this same priest and he was very good for our youngsters; why would he not do the same today when he is more experienced? Our confrères, in addition, complain vociferously about being overworked, but we do not see anybody about who can be called on for this ministry. Instead of being critical about it, one should see in this procedure a level of discretion.

V. A. The Procurator (Jouët) is being blamed for his failure to prevent the additions made to the Constitutions, something both gratuitous and unmerited because the Congregation didn't consult him and he himself doesn't know the consultor's name who was given responsibility for the revision of the Constitutions.

B. One attributes to the Superior General deplorable, unbecoming, attitudes, out of character with his nature, with regard to the Chapter and the elections. Nobody more than he embodies a conciliatory spirit or desires more keenly peace and unity.

VI. The January 1891 Chapter was not, in Rome's eyes, a valid Chapter, its decisions as well as its expectations not looked upon as valid by the Sacred Congregation which, effectively, took no notice of them. This is the reality; following on the many explanations presented by the Superior General after his return from Rome and the explanations he shared, it more than astonishes that it comes up again.

Issoudun, September 3, 1891

Dear Father,

1. I am forwarding to you on behalf of Bishop Couppé the letter asked for by the Sacred Congregation of Propaganda concerning the dimensions of his diocesan area, with which I myself fully concur.

2. You answer my last letter of August 25 dealing with the numerical order and the "atque iterum", but you say nothing about what preceded it and which I asked about; namely whether:

a. it is yes or no as regards a retroactive effect with regard to Superiors in office who have not reached the age of 35? This is an important and practical question because if there's no longer the right to be Superior, all their decisions are null and void, or else they have to be replaced, and by whom? Or else, an indult is required.

b. I asked if the Apostolic Vicars could be named by indult and would have the right to participate in the Chapter, since we have no-one on our missions who could be Superior of the mission stations.

c. I asked if Fr. Bontemps, isolated in the Oceania islands, without any possibility of being in regular contact, poor like Job, should be required to attend the Chapter, leaving behind him just one priest and lay brothers for more than a year... You can see for yourself that these questions are of the utmost importance and call for a written answer. Our aim never was that of overlooking distant Superiors when calling the Chapter. If that is how you have understood it, you are greatly mistaken. It was not just Fr. Bontemps alone due to his lengthy distance, the lack of contact, etc.

One must find out also, negatively or affirmatively, if Apostolic Vicars can be Superiors in their mission territories because it is public knowledge that none of the confrères who are with them has either the age or ability to be Superiors. What are we to do therefore? From whom can we expect a procedure to be followed if not from the Sacred Congregation?

It is two or three months since I submitted this problem and it remains without a solution all the while, and it is, so it seems to me, a serious issue.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

It never entered my mind to call at the present time a Chapter in accordance with the former, outdated, Constitutions. We want to follow the approved Constitutions, and the Sacred Congregation's decisions which are for us what must be followed. I also think that it is not appropriate that the document which you mention should have it that the forthcoming Chapter should be made up of the same members as before since, 'non expedire', it would solve nothing. It is quite impossible that the Chapter should be made up of the same members because the Constitutions will enjoin the same Superiors to be there, but Fathers Guyot, Klotz and Ramot will be excluded.

Council Meeting, September, 11, 12, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

1. The proceedings of the last meeting were approved of, together with a slight modification concerning the requirements placed on the bursars at the Sacred Heart (Issoudun) and Chezal-Benoît about sending on their financial reports each month.

2. The decision about Canet-de-Mar was reassessed, and it was formally agreed that this establishment should be given up if the 6% undertakings accepted in the light of the promises made by those renting the place are not met. Fr. Dom Fernando had promised to relinquish by affidavit in favour of our Society his portion of the assets which is 30,000 francs in relation to the overall price of the place, increasing to 61,000 francs by way of the 6% interest for the duration of his life. He did not keep his promise, and what is no more than a willed statement, with the possibility of being revoked, does not offer us a secure guarantee. The Council made its wishes known to him, putting to him a proposal about leaving us by attorney's decree his capital of 30,000 francs, but in relation to a monthly rent from us of 2,000 francs replacing the 1,800 francs which we make over to him at present.

Madame Eléonore likewise promised to make over to us her share of the assets which comes to 2,500 francs, on condition that we accept in perpetuity a pupil at the Canet college and celebrate at her intentions, equally in perpetuity, a mass each Sunday and feast day in the chapel of the Virgin of Mercy at Canet. The Council came to the conclusion that these conditions were overly demanding and, in any event, one should not accept perpetual mass obligations. Accordingly, it put the proposal to Madame Eléonore to leave the Congregation, by way of a solicitor's affidavit, her capital of 25,000 francs at an annual rent of 1,500 francs during her life-time. If those selling refuse, against our wishes, to accept these proposals, the Council will be compelled to put the places up for sale and leave.

Brother Büning sent home to his family.

2. The decision was taken that the scholastic Büning, while awaiting our appeal to Rome about the late request for validation, should be sent home in the meantime, until a definite decision is made about him. He left altogether on October 15.

Decision with reference to Fr. Linckens.

Having taken note of two letters from Fr. Linckens which were more than ill-mannered, it was decided that, given his attitude, he should in all honesty be invited to petition for release from his vows.

Decision with regard to Fr. Louis Merg, Paris.

4. Serious irregularity was noted in the life-style of Fr. Louis Merg, Paris, who, for health reasons which appear other than serious, is continuously absenting himself from community exercises such as common prayer, particular examination of conscience. Admonished by Fr. Piperon he replied with an unacceptable letter which was totally self-justifying. Given permission to visit his family last year, without permission he prolonged his stay beyond the allotted 15 days. Following the retreat, he visited his aunt against the wishes of the Superior General and the wishes of his local Superior who had requested him to return by Saturday, October 29, but he did not come back until the following Tuesday. In view of the bad example which is being given by all this unacceptable behaviour, the Council at first expressed the wish that he be expelled from the Society, petitioning him to ask for release from his vows. But on second thoughts it was agreed that this extreme course of action should be postponed and he would be given another posting in the hope that it might make for improvement in his religious life-style. The decision was taken that he should go to Antwerp as a science teacher.

Changes of personnel.

5. There followed an appraisal of the changes to be made among the personnel in the various houses.

1. The Council, aware that on several occasions in order to separate the particular administrative needs of the Sacred Heart mother house from the general administration of the Society, and having provided it with a local Superior, has become conscious of the fact that instead of being a satisfying solution it became continuously a source of contention giving rise to conflicts in the exercise of authority. As a consequence, to remedy this situation, the Superior General will once more take over as Superior of the Sacred Heart house as was the case hitherto. He will live there in as much as his role as parish priest will make it possible for him to do so, having Fr. Maillard as his helper who, together with his role as assistant general, will take on that of special assistant at the Sacred Heart while also continuing to exercise his function as Secretary General of the Association. The office will be moved to the Sacred Heart, and Fr. Pierre will act as assistant bursar under the direction of Fr. Maillard, the general bursar.

Fr. Derichemont, Superior at Watertown, is being recalled to take over the role of head at the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre and the (separate) fee-paying school (the Externat). The present head, Fr. Compte, is appointed science teacher at Chezal-Benoît where he will complete his theological studies under the guidance of Fr. Klotz(!). The teachers at the Sacred Heart will be the following: Fr. Delmas; Brothers Laliaux, Villoux, Meunier, and in addition Brothers Lacan and Allera.

2. Issoudun Parish. To help out as much as possible Fr. General in the course of his work as parish priest, Fr. Godineau is to be called upon, but not yet, as curate.

3. Chezal-Benoît. Fr. Piperon is in overall charge. Fr. Klotz is in charge of the second section of the scholasticate involving philosophy, and will provide lectures in theology to some of the Petite Oeuvre teachers. Fr. Mathieu is the philosophy professor. Mr. Personat is in charge of studies at the Petite Oeuvre and also as regards anything to do with outsiders; Fr. Renard is responsible for religious discipline within the school. The teaching staff are as follows: Rhetoric: Fr. Jullien; second year: Fr. Cochet; third year, Mr. Chenu; sciences: Fr. Compte; history: Fr. Mégret; supervision: Brother Dicks.

4. Antwerp. Fr. Reyn takes over responsibility for the Petite Oeuvre, having as teachers and those responsible for discipline whatever philosophy students he will need. Fr. Vandel remains in charge of the first section of the scholasticate, comprising theology students, and he will also be professor of moral theology with Fr. Suchet professor of dogmatics and Fr. Merg science professor. Fathers Dezpresse and Linckens will be occupied with the office.

5. Tilburg. Fr. Lanctin, the Superior, will take charge of the Petite Oeuvre, Frs. Kicken and Peeters are appointed to the office.

6. Paris. Fr. Vaudon is appointed Superior, replacing Fr. Delaporte who will continue to live in the house, involving himself fully in the activities which up to now engaged his attention. Fr. Vandel will continue as Annals' editor, in which he will be helped by his confrères, getting on behalf of his house an annual contribution of 1,900 francs.

7. Salzburg. Fr. Hartzer remains Superior and teaches fourth year. Fr. Meyer is appointed bursar and takes charge of the lay brother novices.

8. Canet-de-Mar. Fathers Roussel and Benedetti are being made available to Fr. Carrière to run this house.

9. Glastonbury. Fr. Tréand, Superior, is named Visitor to Sydney and will be replaced by Fr. Ramot while he (Tréand) is in Australia. Fr. Audouy has been appointed to the Glastonbury staff.

Issoudun, September 12, 1891

Dear Father,

What you forward to me in the name of a number of confrères is an unacceptable attribution of blame levelled at the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars because of the measures to which it has had recourse, and an insult to the (MSC) administration endorsed and set up by this same Congregation. Nevertheless, we are sending on your letter so that consideration might be given to it and that it can be seen and judged, thereby satisfying the wishes of these worthy confrères. You will be considerate enough then to pass on to those who have charged you to pass on their views the reply which we are making to them through your mediation.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Dear Father,

As you can see for yourself from the latest rescript of the Sacred Congregation, dated September 5 (1891), a copy of which you have had from us, we cannot have a Chapter meeting without the expressed permission of the Sacred Congregation. On the other hand we know that this permission will not be granted until we have received an answer from all our houses with respect to the validating decree, and become aware, in addition, of the impact which the definitively approved Constitutions have had on the members. All this requires time; what can be done in the meantime? We submit ourselves resignedly to Rome's decisions, and pray. To do anything else, casting doubts on the good-will of the present administration, calling in question its activities, would effectively mean working against ourselves, doing the devil's work. Let us all build ourselves up in a spirit of obedience, with that basic complete submissiveness inspired by the Holy Spirit: "Obedite praepositis vestris" (Hebrews 13, 17: Place your hope in those guiding you). It is only at such a cost that we shall become edifying religious models and make secure our Society on solid foundations. Let each one forsake his own personal views and dutifully accept, without cause for blame, the decisions of those in charge, even when they are contrary to our way of thinking.

Accordingly, Fathers, we appeal to you in the name of our most sacred concerns and that of our beloved Congregation to help us, by your good-will and submissiveness, to carry on the work which has been confided to us. Remain convinced that the measures we have undertaken will always have been maturely considered before God, having no other aim than the well-being of the Institute. If you have some good ideas, some happy arrangements, be good enough to share them with us in all simplicity.

Having only a French Province at the moment, all our members must know French and give classes in the French style. When it becomes possible to spread the Society in different Provinces each nationality will have its own characteristics when carrying out the Constitutions. But meanwhile, however, we are compelled, on Rome's recommendation, to act in this way. And by way of meeting its formal wishes we need to get each house which has a Petite Oeuvre to reduce the number of its pupils by not having more than ten for each class, at least for the time being. In this way we are acting according to the spirit and letter of the Constitutions (Ch. 2, art. 4, N.1). If anybody among you, which God forbid, refuses to abide by this true path of obedience, and in conformity with Chapter 111 of our Constitutions and Rome's recommendation, we shall be sadly left with no choice other than that of referring matters to the Sacred Congregation. By way of conclusion, we appeal to you with some urgency about the need to follow faithfully number 15 of our former rules which remains continually pertinent (in vogue).

Please accept, Father, my very good wishes in sacratissimo Corde Jesu.

Circular to all the Society's members.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Sunday, September 13, 1891
Feast of the Holy Name of Mary and the 36th anniversary of the founding of our little Society

Reverend Fathers and dear Brothers,

It is 36 years today since Cardinal du Pont, Archbishop of Bourges, through the intermediary of his Vicar General, officially installed us at Issoudun and blessed our first improvised chapel set up in what had been a stable. It was on this same day, the feast of the Holy Name of Mary, that religious life began for us when the delegate representing His Eminence before a very large gathering gave the first members of our dearly beloved Society the very beautiful and expressive title: Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. December 8, 1854 is the very day we were conceived, September 9 of the following year that of our baptism, the Church blessing our cradling and confirming our name, but this was not enough for her or for us and, accordingly, given the tender feeling she had for us, she went on to bestow further favours on us when definitively approving our Constitutions.

It is then this anniversary, calling to mind so many cherished memories, which we have chosen for the promulgation of these same (newly approved) Constitutions which I am forwarding to you, and they are in complete conformity with the original sent to us by the Sacred Congregation. Receive them with appreciation and love. From the faithful and generous acceptance of the obligations which they set out for us, and the wise advice they provide for us, our personal holiness is determined, as well as that vibrant force which gives rise to the flourishing vitality of our dear Congregation.

United together, inspired in the same way, let us motivate ourselves with renewed vigour to get to the very heart of the spirit which characterizes our vocation. Let us never allow the least infraction of these sacred prescriptions which the Church has decreed to confirm through its definitive approval.

If on occasion faithful adherence to these Constitutions requires painful, demanding, sacrifices, we shall be reminded of the Gospel's words: "The kingdom of heaven requires force, and only those who so act will be victorious." (loose translation). We need to look suspiciously on whatever holds us back from the requisite practise of the Rule, "something I wish you would put before everything else", as Our Lord said to St. (then Blessed) Margaret Mary (Alacoque). Let us remember these heavenly words by way of conforming in the way we live and act. You will not forget, dear Fathers and Brothers, that our former Rules, always upheld from the beginning of our Institute, must henceforth come under the heading of Directory which we shall put together in keeping with the Sacred Congregation's recommendations. It will be presented in its own time, and in keeping with the precise requirements. While waiting we shall continue to use the former Rule which is to hand everywhere.

Moreover, the Sacred Congregation, adding to the chapter on religious discipline, approves the habit which has been in common use from the approval of the Institute up to the present; it is obligatory and all must wear it unless there is a legitimate dispensation not to do so from the Superior General. In those countries where wearing a soutane is forbidden, our confrères must wear the religious habit within their houses.

Please accept, Fathers and Brothers, my best wishes in sanctissimo Corde Jesu.

To Father François Barral, MSC, Quito.

Issoudun, September 15, 1891

Dear Father François Barral,

I received your kind letter with the validations. I am grateful to you and all the confrères. Shortly you will be receiving the finally approved Constitutions. It's a great favour to have this put in our way. I advised the Archbishop of Quito that we would be leaving Ecuador at the end of our contract, that is to say next spring. Begin now your preparations for departure. Sell anything which you cannot bring back with you.

In the event, there were postponements until the definitive departure in 1894.

Daniel, a Paris dealer at rue Bonaparte, 76, requests 3,000 francs (about 10,240 euros) for articles bought from him by Fr. Morisseau; this money has not been paid, and it's absolutely imperative that you find it to meet the debt. The Archbishop for his part is looking for the 2,000 francs (about 6,825 euros) which he gave your brother in order to pay for paper, etc. But your brother paid nothing whatsoever, keeping himself these 2,000 francs, stating that he had bought special books and effects for the Quito basilica with his own family money of more than 2,000 francs. Can this be true?

In any event, your brother Pierre asks you either to sell these articles to the committee or to bring them to him if we want him to give the 2,000 francs requested of him. If Fr. Bouvier is ill, and there's concern about him, you might think of sending him back to France.

I thank Fr. Perriot for his kind letter. Next spring he will return with all the others, and even before that if his presence is no longer needed at the basilica.

Jean-Baptiste Perriot, 1861-1943, had replaced Pierre Barral for the supervision of work on the basilica from September 24, 1890. He left with all the others in 1894.

Cheerio, Father. Regards to everybody.
Good wishes in C.J.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Villa des Lilas (Vichy)
September 16, 1891

Bring a copy of Fr. Delaporte's letter. I haven't one, so bring it with you. J.C.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

Because you wrote to me that you couldn't come to France before the 13th of September, due to a ceremony taking place in your church presided over by several cardinals, but that you could be free thereafter to come to Issoudun, you will understand that, fearing you had already left, I sent a telegram to Fr. Védère asking him to let me know when you would be coming. You then send me a telegram stating that you will come when I need you and that I must take responsibility for your departure! What is so important that it keeps you in Rome? Without doubt it has to be the presence of Bishop Morel (Norel?). Is it still the case that these gentlemen from the Propagation of the Faith continue to think of you in terms of America? I thought the enterprise was postponed for the time being because of difficulties raised against it by the USA bishops.

When do you think you could come to Issoudun? There is much we need to look at together. I shall be returning there on the first of October. Yes, I received the rescript with your letter, thank you; I passed it on to interested confrères. I hope it will cut short a lot of difficulties. Next Monday the Constitutions will be sent, together with a circular letter, to all the confrères. When you receive them you will let me know what you think of my letter and another specific letter which I wrote to all opposed members at the same time. One must get things over and done with so far as these gentlemen are concerned.

Hoping to calm these more worked up people, we invited to the retreat Fathers Reyn, Vandel, Lanctin, Klotz, Merg from Paris, but expressly forbid them to discuss among themselves the problems to which the last Chapter gave rise. I thought that everything had quietened down following the good advice offered by Fr. Croibier, S.J., at the retreat, whereas when passing through Paris several of them (the disgruntled) spoke to dear Fr. Delaporte, and this pathetic man, making himself their mouth-piece, sent me the enclosed letter which I am sending on to you together with our reply to him. Although I did say to him that I would forward his letter to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, you will judge for yourself if it is appropriate to do so; perhaps not! Cardinal Monaco will make up his own mind about it.

You tell me, my friend, that we are contradicting ourselves in the requests made to the Sacred Congregation. I do not believe we are. Virtually all our Society's members want to have a Chapter, for pacification purposes, because there hasn't been one for 12 years. One needs to know if such a Chapter can take place, in what circumstances, and who might be present? The rescript will set things out for us; that's fine. But one must know for certain if the law laying down the age of 35 in the future for Superiors has a retroactive effect. This is of the utmost importance for the requisite validity of the Chapter Acts. In your letter you tell me that you had a reply stating that this law did not have a retroactive effect. That is it, then; we are well and truly held to this, but I would have very much preferred if this reply was given to you in writing.

Another issue about which a reply has not been forthcoming, and is, nonetheless, a pressing one is the following: since in our missions our young confrères haven't the requisite qualities to be Superiors, and this is public knowledge, can Apostolic Vicars, then, be appointed local Superiors? If the answer is in the affirmative, which I do not doubt, an indult is needed, and, consequently, arising from such an indult, there is no Superior either in New Britain or Thursday Island; you can see for yourself how important this issue is. I disengage myself from this responsibility. As well, an indult is likewise required to appoint as Novice Master in Salzburg a priest who is not 35 years of age, and another for the Novice Master at Watertown who is in the same situation since the departure of Fr. Ramot. You can see for yourself how serious and urgent a matter this is.

We have given up on Quito; it's impossible to stay on there. Our confrères will return next spring. We are leaving Hammonton (USA); Fr. Grom is returning to Watertown.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

PS: Fr. Meyer will be sent to Salzburg replacing Fr. Klotz, who will be professor of philosophy with Fr. Mathieu under the direction of Fr. Piperon (at Chezal-Benoît). There will be 40 philosophy students with the two years' students brought together. Antwerp will have no more than a few scholastic theologians, 8 or 10 at most, and this is almost too much given that it's Fr. Vandel.(!)

There you have all the changes, and they will not be well accepted by most of the opposition.

Fr. Delaporte, who is no longer involved in the house (not in charge), will remain in Paris as a member of the community, Fr. Vaudon will replace him as Superior. At the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, it is Fr. Maillard who will be in charge under my direction.

latter part of September, 1891*

Most Holy Father,

Jules Chevalier, Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, whose mother house is at Issoudun, Bourges Archdiocese, and its Procure in Rome, Via Sapienza, 32, humbly prostrate, with his assistants, at the feet of Your Holiness, petitions the following:

1. Since the Constitutions of his Institute recently approved require one to be aged 35 before being eligible to carry out the functions of local Superior or Novice Master, and as it is quite impossible to find anyone of this age acceptably suitable to carry out these charges in the Watertown (USA) and Salzburg (Austria) houses, he would like to ask permission to appoint to the above-mentioned houses Superiors and Novice Masters who are more than 30 years old but less than 35.
2. He also makes it known that our missionaries in Oceania have up to now lived under the jurisdiction of their Lordships the Apostolic Vicars in the absence of individuals sufficiently capable of exercising the role of local Superiors. And respectfully then, in the absence of an adequate local choice, he asks that the Apostolic Vicars be appointed local Superiors also, despite Bishop Verjus' age not being yet 35 years.

May the Lord preserve Your Holiness.

I am forwarding to you a letter from Fr. Bontemps, and you can take out of it whatever would be helpful to you for the Annals. Then be kind enough to return this same letter to me because I want it to be associated with promotion being carried out by Fr. Jouët. My health is reasonably good. I live very much alone; there are still some priests at the villa. Fr. Guyot has gone away to take the mountain air for eight days. To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Vichy, September 22, 1891

Dear Father,

1. I am sorry that Fr. Védère is unwell. Let us pray he will recover quickly.

2. I am asking myself if we should not in conscience require all those in opposition who are at the Chapter, including those who are in charge and share their views, to make a formal retraction in writing with an explicit statement that they will without reservation be submissive to authority. If not, we shall have recourse to appropriate measures. What is your view on this? If you share my view, send me a draft of a letter to be sent to them. It's Fr. Meyer who put this idea into my head. When he came away from his retreat, he approached me and told me he was sorry about his behaviour following the Chapter, having acted out of pride and self-love. I profited from the occasion to give him good advice. I then informed him about his appointment to Salzburg which he accepted without demurring, but I could see that he was expecting something else. Before he left me, finding him still in good spirits, I put it to him that he should put his retraction in writing, but he refused to do so, telling me that it was a serious issue and that he would think about it and get in touch if he thought it appropriate. I now realised that my proposal touched a raw nerve, his change of mind not being as significant as it appeared to be, and, very likely, it is much the same with the others. Those who are schismatics do not change their minds that quickly. It is quite imperative that we make it impossible for them to start out on their open revolt all over again!!! What are we to do?

If it were not a taking of liberties with our Cardinal Protector's good-will, I would venture to ask him through you to write an official document in which he would enjoin on all the opposition, that is to say all (those) who signed the petition in favour of separation (I have been told that there were 22) should wholeheartedly submit, retracting in writing their past behaviour, promising not to behave like this in the future, or otherwise leave the Society which they have so damagingly compromised, and might well do so again. What do you think?

As for the Chapter, they should be told that it's Rome which will decide the date when all the contrary spirits will have in fact returned to normality, and that it will be an apostolic delegate who will preside over it, the new Chapter treating only those issues which will have been set out before it by the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. If things were to come to pass in this way we would have peace and the Sacred Heart would bless us!

No, my friend, I didn't read the article in the Belgian Annals. I am asking Fr. Maillard to send it on to me immediately. If the mutilation of the text is what you say it is, they have acted on their own initiative and are deserving of serious blame, which I shall not fail to bring to their attention. It would, perhaps, be helpful to put the situation to profitable use by withdrawing the exercise of self-autonomy from them, vindicating my directorial rights as it was in the past. In this way I would insist on their submitting to me always the proofs of their Annals before its final printing. Is this also your view of the matter?

When you come to Issoudun, we shall have a serious conversation about assuring our dear Society's future, towards which you and I have worked so much. No, I shall not act precipitately in anything, consulting you always.

Write, then, an article dealing with the blessing of the Church of St. Joachim which you had in mind. I shall have it included in our Annals as the work of a spectator. This will have a good impact.

Cheerio, my friend. Courage and confidence.
 Wholly yours in C.J.

Vichy, September 28, 1891

Dear Father Jouët,

I am amazed that you haven't replied more specifically about our young men going forward for perpetual vows. They have been accepted, leaving to your discretion Brother Laurentis' acceptance.

Laurentis was finally professed in Rome on July 18, 1892, became a priest two years later, March 24, 1894. Due to some indiscretion in Rome, in the latter part of the century, he asked for secularization, but as late as January 1900 he had not found a bishop who would accept him.

I am going back to Issoudun tomorrow and will deal with this issue. Rest assured, my friend, nothing will as yet be decided about the Chapter, which in any event is to be left over for quite some time, and we haven't yet met to act in unison together. But already we have, so I hope, pushed aside some former individuals who continue to be ill-disposed. There's Fr. Delaporte who will no longer be of any consequence. Let us move slowly and give no reason to think that we are in a hurry. Fr. Tréand leaves on the first of November for Sydney as Visitor; we shall leave him down under for as long as we deem it necessary. We sent Fr. Ramot to Glastonbury simply to replace Fr. Tréand in his absence. When you are here in Issoudun we shall consider whatever other changes need to be made.

I am forwarding you a nice letter from Fr. Bontemps. You may pass it on to Propaganda if you think it would be worthwhile. I include with it a letter from Bishop Couppé.

Cheerio, Father.

All good wishes to you in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Bring along all Fr. Delaporte's letters and all the other documentation which might be needed by us.

I forgot to post this letter to you. I am back in Issoudun since Tuesday. I should send you another letter instead of this one!

Accepted for final profession the scholastic Brothers: Okhuijzen, Colté, Bouellat, Van de Wouwer, Bazot, Gotteland, De Boismenu, Calloway, Borman, Lehane, Soucille.

At the request of those involved, and with the recommendation of their local Superiors, the following scholastics were accepted for final profession, their temporary vows expiring on the 4th of October next:

1. Théodore Okhuijzen from the Tilburg house;
2. Brothers Gabriel Colté, Paul Bouellat, Van de Wouwer, Georges Bazot, Louis Gotteland and Alain de Boismenu from the Antwerp house;
3. James Calloway from the Glastonbury house;
4. Frederick Borman and Daniel Lehane from the Watertown house;
5. Jean Soucille from the Sacred Heart, Issoudun.

Brothers Pouvreau and Qoirier taking the place of Brothers Lacan and Alleyra.

The scholastic Brothers Lacan and Alleyra, mentioned above as newly-appointed teachers and responsible for discipline at the Sacred Heart, will be replaced by Brothers Pouvreau and Qoirier. Fr. Roussel recently returned from Guayaquil will take over as Director until Fr. Derichemont returns.

Acceptance of the lay brothers Petrus, Calixtus, Clemens and Jean Baptiste Weber for renewal of vows.

At their own request, and with the positive recommendation of their Superiors, the above-named were accepted for renewal of three-yearly vows.

A request from the Sacred Heart for two lay brothers.

At the suggestion of Fr. Maillard, it was decided to ask Antwerp for a lay brother of a mature age to be doorman at the Sacred Heart (Issoudun), a role which has become more important since the same post was cancelled at the day school (the Externat), and also another brother is needed to help about the house.

Accept as postulants of Fr. Leblanc and Mr. Becker.

On the recommendation of trustworthy people, Fr. Paul Leblanc from Arras Diocese, if he is not needed to support his family, and Mr. Becker from Roermund Diocese, were accepted as postulants.

Following a complaint from Fr. Jouët, about the elimination from the Belgian Annals' French version of an article in the French Annals, classifying Our Lady of the Sacred Heart among the most honoured and revered Madonnas in Rome, the proposal was made and accepted that this publication, presently under Fr. Reyn, should no longer be his responsibility.

Fr. Guyot authorized to finish the work on the chapel's vault.

Finally, Fr. Guyot was given permission to finish the work on the chapel's vault at Villa des Lilas, but keeping within the limits of what was absolutely needed.

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard, Batard.

Dispensation from age for the Superior and Masters of Novices of Watertown and Salzburg.

The Father General read the recently-arrived Indult which permits the Archbishop of Bourges to favour us with the authority to appoint both at Salzburg and Watertown a Novice Master and Superior under the age of 35. As well their Lordships the Apostolic Vicars are appointed as local MSC Superiors of their respective districts.

A letter from Fr. Hartzer.

Fr. Hartzer, Superior of Salzburg, puts forward the need of a replacement for Fr. Helfer in that house to take charge of the Petite Oeuvre which Fr. Hartzer says he cannot do himself as he doesn't know German sufficiently well and he would, besides, be forced to give up responsibility for the scholasticate. The Council regrets that it has no-one available for this posting, and is of the opinion that if Fr. Hartzler has, with the departure of Fr. Helfer, nobody on his staff who might acceptably take charge of the Petite Oeuvre, it might then be best to make the post redundant.

A letter from Fr. Lanctin.

He, Lanctin, for his part is writing to say that his personnel, already lessened by Brother Neyens' departure to continue his studies, is yet further weakened by the departure of Fr. Kicken who is continuously feeling exhausted and needs a more favourable climate. He is, besides, lacking adequate staff and, moreover, he cannot properly by himself alone look after the Petite Oeuvre, because he doesn't know Flemish and all the newly-arrived only speak that language. A priest would be needed if only for confessions. The Council again regrets that there's nobody available. Fr. Lanctin could get help from Fr. Offermans. If, on the other hand, Fr. Kicken could remain in Tilburg, cared for and looked after in keeping with the requirements of his state of health, he could in these circumstances be left there.

Fr. Hériault's presence needed in order to have an inventory.

Fr. Guyot asked for Fr. Hériault in order to make an inventory of the furniture at hotel des Lilas (Vichy). It was, however, decided that Fr. Batard, better suited for this particular work, should be made available to him.

Fr. Ilge authorized to appeal for money with the approval of his Superior.

He wants to make appeals in the different towns and cities of Germany and Austria to diminish the debt which hangs over the Salzburg house, and it was decided that he could do so with the approval of his Superior and in dependence on him, the Superior being kept informed of his plans. He (Ilge) will not enter the areas reserved to the Antwerp house.

The Scholasticate.

1. Class-times. Fr. Klotz proposes 4 hours a day, two in the morning, two in the afternoon, but since he himself says that he cannot give more than one hour's class in the day, problems were raised, and the solution postponed.

2. The classic text-book authors.

Tongiorgi and Zigliara were suggested for philosophy, Ubaldo for scripture, but it was decided to discuss the matter further before coming to a decision.

3. Common programme for scholastics and novices.

The exercises of prayer laid down by regulation for the professed and novices were common to both. The scholastics, however, would not take part in the Stations of the Cross on Thursday evening, prescribed only for the novices.

4. Besides the normal recreation times, fifteen minutes is allowed before morning lectures begin, and another fifteen minutes when lectures end. The afternoon lecture is followed by a half-hour for either recreation or the recitation of the office.

Taking tea. This is not a French custom and it's only acceptable for those who need to take it. (The Irish and English!)

Walks.

The weekly walks are to be taken on Wednesday and Sunday evening. It will be considered if it is acceptable to have an additional walk each month.

Public Confession of Faults.

That of the scholastics will take place at a specified time with Fr. Piperon presiding, or, in his absence, Fr. Klotz; that of the priests and teachers will be presided over by Fr. Piperon, and if he is not present Fr. Batard. The Council will fix the time.

The building of a hall at the Petite Oeuvre.

The youngsters, having no place for recreation when it rains, will have a large hall provided for them near their quarters. The provision of this will be addressed as soon as possible.

Creating privacy for the porter's lodge.

Since the scholastics take recreation in the courtyard in front of the porter's lodge where they can see everything that goes on, the lodge will be isolated by way of a wooden railing.

Toilets for the novices.

Those at the bottom of their staircase will be repaired.

Renovations at the Sacred Heart (Issoudun).

The house needs to be enlarged in the light of present requirements and, as well, keeping in mind the likelihood of setting up there a scholasticate or some other community undertaking. The decision was taken that there was an opportunity to put into effect the wing envisaged by the general plan between the new field and the alleyway which runs by the wall south of the old field, working on the gable end of the already-existing wall. Mr. Tarlier, the architect, is of the view that the building of the bare walls and the roof would cost as much as 80,000 francs, but other expenses will inevitably be called for to meet the costs of the interior; these undertakings could in part be held over if there is no urgent need of the new foundation in its full dimensions. With regard to the 80,000 francs needed for the basic construction, the Superior General expects 50,000 francs would be made available to him through the kind good-will of a number of benefactors, with the Congregation's financial resources seeing to the rest. The map and plans will be drawn up and considered beforehand.

Brother Benedictus lays down conditions for renewal of vows. He is not accepted.

Brother Benedictus in Tilburg, since he was only prepared to renew his vows on condition that he goes to another house, and since such a pre-condition could not be met, it was accordingly decided that on the expiration of his present vows, if still persisting in his demand, he should be asked to leave.

Council Meetings to be held on Wednesdays.

Finally, it was agreed that Council meetings would be held on Wednesdays. Fr. Piperon will come as early as is possible so that a meeting can be held before mid-day and, if necessary, will continue into the afternoon.

Council Meeting, October 12, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

Brother John Pluymakers accepted for renewal of vows.

With the recommendation of Fr. Tréand and other priests who know him, Brother John Pluymakers from the Glastonbury house was accepted for the three-yearly renewal of vows.

Proposal to send two brothers to Bishop Navarre.

The decision was taken to ask Fr. Reyn for a third lay brother in order to send him, together with one of the Issoudun brothers, to Bishop Navarre. They will both leave with Fr. Tréand who will be sailing to Sydney towards the end of this month.

A new posting for Fr. Vaudon.

Fr. Vaudon, recently appointed Superior of the Paris house and unable to accept this posting for a variety of reasons, will continue to live in the Issoudun presbytery and while remaining editor of the Annals he will also teach at Chezal-Benoît.

The examination of regulations concerning the Chezal-Benoît Scholasticate.

Regulations set down for the Chezal-Benoît Scholasticate were looked at and they do not greatly differ from the procedures considered at the previous meeting, and which will be made use of until a more definite presentation is considered for insertion in the Directory. In addition, the project was mooted to send the different houses at the beginning of the year a circular dealing with the principles of the religious life.

Brothers Soucille and Michel remain at the Sacred Heart; Brother Villoud at the office.

Brothers Soucille and Michel will stay on at the Sacred Heart to teach, whereas Brother Villoud, who does not appear to be suited to supervision, will work in the association's office.

Ametur ubique terratum Cor Jesu sacratissimum,

I. Our Society is undergoing a crisis which, I fear, will have a long-term impact, and which I cannot think about without quailing. If the Sacred Heart and Our Lady had not intervened, God knows what abyss we should find ourselves in today. The devil, who is only happy when causing divisions, had set up his plans so well that, reasonably speaking, victory should be on his side. Having violently launched himself at our basilica, and had it closed because it had become the centre of great devotions in modern times destined to save the world, it seemed that he was quite satisfied with himself. He hoped, by these means to halt the advance of the faithfuls' piety, entomb to eternal oblivion the title Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, create a paralysis of inactivity. Without doubt he was focused on discouraging the humble missionaries by causing them to abandon the important work confided to them by chasing them from their houses and throwing them onto the streets. But the Lord, who always knows how to draw good from evil, drew good from this unjust persecution, making the Society better known and providing more opportunities for their zeal.

II. What has been done to bring this about? He made use of some among our young men who were trained by us from their youth with particular care, tenderly supported, enriched with blessings, imbued with our confidence and of whom we had great hopes. Having himself (the devil), in the following of his pride, rebelled against his God and Master to whom he owed everything, he insolently declared, overlooking all the requirements of appropriate acknowledgement: "Non servion" (I am not going to do his bidding). There you have the same rebellious thoughts he sought to stir up in our young confrères. Full of themselves, intoxicated by their superior knowledge, partial to their own well-being, unhappy with certain measures taken by their Superiors in the best interests of the Society and dreaming above all of a dangerous independence, they wished, under the pretext of reforms undertaken, to impose their ideas and thereby cut off the yoke of obedience. In bringing all this about, they made use of the Chapter called for the purposes of deciding between the old and new Constitutions. The assistants, aware of the hostile current of thought found among them for some time, thought it best to have the meeting in the mother house in preference to several other houses which had more entitlement than Issoudun. We hoped in this considerate way to satisfy them (the opponents) and have them arriving with the best of intentions. We were, sadly, greatly mistaken. Immediately on becoming aware of this meeting they drew up their battle plan and made ready their weapon (machine) of war. (Fr. Morisseau's letter.) The battle plans came from the Tilburg, Antwerp and Salzburg houses. Once together at the Sacred Heart (Issoudun), the leaders of this intrigue found a way of getting around some of their confrères and became a majority. Believing themselves to be certain, thereby, of gaining the upper hand, their audacity knew no bounds.

III. Wanting to have a new administration consisting for the most part of young religious, they intended from the beginning to counteract the proposal which drew their ire. They needed, then, to find it at fault. Giving free rein to their perceived discontent (with the status quo), they sought in every way to attain their ends. Taking no account of the interminable problems which normally are characteristic of new foundations, nor of the unforeseen problems involved in recruiting candidates and their training, nor of the expulsions (from France) which caused so much of a problem for us, the exile which we were forced to undergo, as well as the persecution which was continually being stirred up in France, nor the foundations which we were necessarily forced to make outside to provide a safety zone for us, keeping together our young students, novices, scholastics, nor the sacrifices and deprivation of all kinds to which we have been subjected over 37 years, not only to set up our houses and provide the necessary resources for them, but, as well, to set up those undertakings which are the glory of our Institute, instead these confrères did not hesitate to incriminate us when their duty should have been rather that of thanking us, if not indeed blessing us. They blamed us for a number of irregularities which had arisen in good faith, explained and justified, indeed, with reference to the unhappy circumstances we have lived through. It's in this latter manner that Rome judged these circumstances as we shall see in what follows.

IV. The plan which some kept quiet about at first and which ended up being admitted (we have the proof to hand), was none other than to push aside the Superior and Founder of the Society, together with the Procurator General in Rome (Jouët), replacing them with others more to their liking. Whatever they might say to the contrary, they omitted nothing in their attempt to invalidate the indult guaranteeing a further 12 years in charge for the Superior General, and in trying to deprive Fr. Jouët of his post and responsibilities. If one attempts to get to the source of this strange, unacceptable behaviour, one will find it in the secretive dissatisfaction which the young opposition members did not dare to admit. The Superior General in 1886, aware that the Rules he had introduced from the beginning of the Society were incomplete, wanted, before his death, to bring them to completion. This undertaking, so it seemed to him, was all the more urgent because, if foundations were increasing abroad, there was also the onset of abuses, with relaxation in discipline and uniformity beginning to go out of fashion. The publication of this new directory will stir up strong protestations in our Antwerp, Tilburg and Salzburg houses since, without a doubt, it challenges their way of thinking. These protestations will appear all the more unjustified for the reason that the text was submitted beforehand to all the Superiors of our houses, requesting them to come forward with their comments and this would be taken into consideration. This is what took place and it was only after their approval, and that of the assistants, that these new Rules were sent to everyone. Nevertheless, our unhappy youthful members sent an anonymous memorandum to Rome as a protest. Faced with this opposition which was virtually a revolt, the Superior General, although he had the Founder's right to perfect the undertaking entrusted to him, but drawing on his long experience, made it known that he was only presenting this directory 'per modum experimenti' (metaphorically, testing the waters) until the next Chapter which would change it according to its wishes. This decision, both considerate and balanced, received on all sides with respect and satisfaction, was not at all to the liking of the opponents in question who continued to thumb their noses at authority. At this point we have to make an admission.

V. The administration, in order to meet the wishes of one side and the other, was far too much encouraged to open new houses and sanction in each one an apostolate, something which would require available personnel which we didn't have. In order to meet the needs of different Superiors who were looking for teachers, we were forced, very regrettably, to look for these teachers from the Antwerp Scholasticate. As a consequence there were murmurings and bitter complaints on the part of the Superior, the head of the school, his staff; we, however, couldn't do anything else. To offset this unhappy state of affairs which we ourselves greatly regretted, the decision was taken in Council that the three upper classes of our different Petites Oeuvres would be brought together in one of our houses adjacent to Issoudun. And this is what happened in July 1890.

This wise procedure, unanimously agreed on, besides economizing on ten teachers, offered the further advantage of combining, under the same direction, disciplinary procedures and an education system, our youngsters being drawn from different countries. When this plan was put into operation, approved both by Rome and the Archbishop of Bourges, the younger priests became hostile to the Superior General, making him responsible for all this. Their grievances against our Procurator General are no less well founded; having studied in Rome under Fr. Jouët's supervision, they could never forgive him for his behaviour in regard to them, the complaints he felt it necessary with which to reproach them when he felt they merited it: inde irae (hence the anger). Accordingly, they never forsook the opportunity to criticize him among themselves and belittle him to their confrères. Not taking into consideration the difficult situation in which he found himself, the considerable amount of work he undertook, his love for the Society, the dedicated devotedness and tremendous service he rendered to us, they, nevertheless, never stopped criticizing what he was doing administratively and making him a subject of reproach. Overlooking their obligation to give themselves to their studies, they projected themselves as judges who pardon nothing.

VI. One can, then, understand what would be the attitude of these young disaffected people to the forthcoming Chapter about which we wrote above. Their first objective would be to seek out people who could be on their side. And, by strange coincidence, they succeeded in winning over to their cause two or three older priests from whom one would expect more judiciousness and perspicacity, and about whom one might query whether they also might not have taken to heart some resentments which followed from certain events, or from certain measures taken (by authority) to which they took exception. Be that as it may, this coming together became a stormy one right from the beginning. One could already foresee storms. A wise approach did not prevail any longer in the debates; vehemence took its place. The young confrères, anxious to prepare their knowledge, looked upon the assistants as ignorant, accusing them of betraying the best interests of the Congregation, etc., etc. The Superior General, Fr. Piperon, his first assistant, and Fr. Jouët, Procurator, challenged most strongly this uncalled for assertion, Fathers Guyot and Delaporte, the other assistants, kept mysteriously silent. The opposition now sensing themselves to be supported could not be contained, attacking without measure or balance the Procurator General whom they wanted at any cost to see departing from Rome, making the most outrageous remarks against him. Then, hesitating at first to suggest the removal of Father General, several of the group thought about imposing a Vicar (General) to keep him under surveillance.

Wishing to make the (Issoudun) general house nothing more than an ordinary residence, they voted by majority (among themselves) to transfer the headquarters of the Society to Rome. "France," they claimed, "is detested in Belgium, Holland, Austria, England, Germany. If the centre of the Society continues to remain in Issoudun, there will be schism (a breaking up), since the Northern houses with greater personnel, with younger better-educated staff, would want more independence, and the separated branch would not take long to become more flourishing than the trunk from which it will be broken off."

To no avail the Superior General insisted that the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, being but one family, should above and beyond all else live and work for the Society which shaped them and not for or in different nationalities, and that it was Providence itself which had arranged for the Society's centre to be in Issoudun, so that one could not dream of taking it elsewhere without the precise and obvious indications to this effect arranged from on high (heaven). Nothing like that is suggested (as a requirement), he (the Superior General) counters; on the contrary, compelling reasons call for the status quo to remain:

1. Issoudun is the centre and cradle of the huge Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart;
2. it's where the Founder lives; change the (his) residence to Italy and you will deal a mortal blow to this important work and all our other enterprises in France;
3. you will for the most part deprive us of the source of our financial contributions, placing us in such straitened financial circumstances that in the long term we shall not be able to meet our commitments and pay our debts;
4. Rome has become a revolutionary hot-bed; Italy is sitting on a volcano and offers much less security and guarantees than France does. Moreover, what financial resources shall we have in Italy? None...

Accordingly, having impartially-considered the reason, the benefits, the future of our Institute, our material and spiritual interests implacably dictate that the centre of the Society should continue to remain in Issoudun.

These serious considerations made no impression on a people blinded and prejudiced by obsession, demanding that this issue about the seat of authority should be part of the Constitutions, final approval of which is being awaited. At that point the Superior General, attentive to the voice of conscience, forbade further discussion of the issue. Protestations could be heard: "The Chapter is paramount – the opposition asserted – and nobody has the right to limit its deliberations, etc., etc."

Fr. Guyot, Assistant General, endorsed what the opposition was saying, stating in provocative language that Rome would be informed if the General continued to persist with his viewpoint. He, the General, aware that all further debate would lower itself to the scandalous, went no further, together with four or five of his confrères, than to state his reservations and see to it that in the minutes of the meeting the reasons in favour of the status quo should be outlined. The triumphant opposition considered other delicate issues, wishing, contrary to law, to discuss other sensitive issues concerning the Constitutions. Thereafter certain irregular issues were brought up, for example the Superior General's canonical irregularity in the exercise of power over six years from the time of the expulsions in France, the lack of valid vows in the case of some, etc. Since these issues could not be satisfactorily solved, it was agreed that two members of the Chapter should go to Rome to obtain the necessary clarification and the necessarily legally remedial measures if required. The General, aware of the regard in which Fr. Jouët was held by the Congregation, and his expertise, proposed him as one of the delegates, making it clear that he alone better than anyone else could sort out the problems. The opposition reacted strongly against this and entrusted this delicate task to Fr. Piperon and Fr. Klotz, the latter being one of the strongest opponents of the Procurator (Jouët). Surmising that the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars would wish to interview him about this serious issue and that consequently his presence in Rome as soon as possible would be desirable, either to defend himself against the allegations being made or which could be made against him, or to make the case for authority in the Society, Jouët went to the Archbishop of Bourges and asked him what he thought he should do. Archbishop Marchal advised him to leave straightaway, and so he did to the great annoyance of the disaffected.

VII. The Sacred Congregation, having been presented with the queries raised (at the Chapter) wanted to consider them carefully before coming forward later with a response. On becoming aware of the unwholesome spirit which imbued the opposition and the irregular nature of this pretence of a Chapter, it hastened to dissolve it by rescript and enjoined all attending it to return home immediately. This unexpected outcome, which put all plans into abeyance, was like a thunderclap ('a vrai coup de foudre'). Uproar ensued; the sense of exasperation was tangible. There were shouts of betrayal, violent, unexpected language was directed against Fr. Jouët who was accused of trickery, spoken of in the most disrespectful and wholly unmerited fashion, treated like a pariah among men, the lowest of the low. The more balanced and normal members of this group associated themselves with the Superior General in protesting strongly and with a corresponding sense of outrage against the charges being made (against Jouët).

At this point in the proceedings Fr. Guyot, being associated himself with the discontented faction, made a petition to Rome against the Chapter's break-up which was, he said, a body-blow to the dignity of the Chapter members. Fr. Delaporte, former Superior General of the Mercy priests, forced to leave when he was no longer wanted, and then accepted quite recently purely out of good-will on our part as a result of initiatives taken by Fr. Jouët in Rome, was one of the most worked up of all in these discussions. Given the foresight on his part, leaving aside his age, his experience, his specific problems and his status, one would expect such a man either to keep quiet or to align himself on the side of the authorities, who had shown themselves to be more than kind in his regard. But not so. Giving ear to the flattery of some, he made himself the opposition's standard-bearer and encouraged their rebelliousness.

Here are the names of those who sided with authority:

Fr. Piperon, priest assistant; Fr. Jouët, the Society's Procurator General as well as Assistant; Bishop Couppé, Apostolic Vicar of New Britain; and Fr. Maillard, General Bursar.

Those in the opposition party were: Fathers Guyot, Assistant; Delaporte, ex-Assistant; Fr. Morisseau, Assistant; Fr. Reyn, Superior, Antwerp; Fr. Klotz, Superior, Tilburg; Fr. Hartzler, Superior, Salzburg; Fr. Ramot, Superior, Watertown; Fr. Tréand, Superior, Glastonbury.

The opposing stance of Fathers Morisseau, Tréand and Hartzler was moderate. Following these protestations, as much out of place as inconvenient, Fr. Guyot resigned as Assistant, also Fr. Morisseau who, however, withdrew his resignation virtually straightaway. Fr. Klotz resigned as Superior, also Fr. Reyn, but the latter had a change of mind. Before departure, the opposing faction put together a memorandum directed against the administration and its actions, etc., ending with an appeal for the Chapter to continue with the same people present, and stating that this was the only way to compensate for the outrage to which they had been subjected and to bring about peace.

In its rescript breaking-up the Chapter, the Sacred Congregation asked the Superior General to forward immediately to it the Acts of the assembly. How surprised it was then, when it discovered that Fr. Klotz, the Secretary, had stealthily carried off the Acts to Tilburg. The Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, advised about this turn of events, was quite unhappy. Fr. Klotz, without looking for permission, went off himself with the Acts to Rome, having no doubt consulted with a colleague about taking these written texts in his own hand to Rome, and without any supervision exercised in regard to them. In consequence, he was severely censored by the (Rome) authorities and threatened with canonical disciplinary measures, as well as being ordered by the Cardinal Prefect to leave (Rome) immediately, despite his hopes to remain two or three months there and bring his case to a successful end.

VIII. Given these events, the Society's Council, at the instigation also of the opposing factions, asked that the Chapter be called as soon as possible, presided over by the Apostolic Delegate. The petition, although supported by the Archbishop of Bourges, did not get a reply; again the confrères (some) accused Fr. Jouët of intrigue in preventing the Chapter from being called.

Fr. Klotz, before he left Issoudun, resigned his post as Novice Master at Tilburg, stating that in conscience he could not ask our young men to join the Congregation. Having no-one to replace him, the Council decided, after consultations with Rome, to move the novices (from Tilburg) to Chezal-Benoît where there is a house of formation. Fr. Piperon was given responsibility for carrying out this measure and, accordingly, he went to Tilburg where the staff of that house were strongly unwelcoming. On seeing that their efforts and threats were getting them nowhere, they set out a formal protest which was sent to the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars in Rome. Then they, with the support of the Antwerp confrères, worded an appeal requesting that the houses in Europe (Glastonbury), Antwerp, Tilburg, Salzburg be separated from the mother house and become fully independent of it, hawking this document around a number of the houses, and, so they said, having it signed by upwards of twenty members, although several were to retract later.

On bringing the document to Rome, they picked on a lawyer named Rudini, commissioning him to work towards a positive result at the Sacred Congregation's tribunals by every possible means. In order to attain their objective they were not going to hold back from impinging on their vows of obedience and poverty, nor in the face of the resulting scandal, or, indeed, the ruinous impact on the Society.

They would try to get around Cardinal Mermillod, winning him over to their side by destabilising the facts. It was Fr. Vandel, in charge of the Antwerp Scholasticate, who was made responsible for this pathetic undertaking. The distinguished prelate, who likes and has a high regard for our Congregation, made us aware of this request, as well as his own sense of indignation.

The Sacred Congregation, annoyed by all these opposing complaints, ordered the Superior General to come to Rome in order to bring these contentious issues to an end as soon as possible. Having heard his explanations, it took no notice of the opponents' supposed complaints and their insensitive demands, then issuing a decree overlooking all the irregularities which might have occurred, making all vows pronounced since 1883 valid on condition that the interested parties make the request.

In order to avoid problems for the Institute, it was the Sacred Congregation's wish to offer a discreet overlooking of any irregularity to all those who needed it. But the indiscretion of several among the opposition at the Chapter who drew the attention of their confrères to the existence of the problem, despite the promise made to keep quiet about it, forced the Congregation, very much to its regret, to make public the problem's solution. Next the authority of the Superior General was confirmed for a further 12 years, the Assistants ratified in office and approving Fr. Maillard's replacing of Fr. Guyot, who had resigned. These decisions, far from being acceptable to the opposition, made for greater discontent. They would only accept the validation of vows on condition that the Chapter should be called straightaway with the very same members, and that the complaints taken to Rome should have a just and fair outcome. Rome replied stating that its latest decree was the final word and not to expect anything else to follow; and, besides, there would only be an interval of 8 to 10 days for the validation to be accepted without reservations or else face departure from the Society. The Roman lawyer acting on behalf of the opponents behaved in this whole issue with great disloyalty, without integrity, giving it to be understood by the opposing group's leaders that there would be certain victory, going so far as to say that a decree was about to be issued in support of a new Chapter comprising the same delegates and the separation of the Northern houses from the mother house. The Superior General, assured that the contrary was the case, tried in vain to disillusion them. The Sacred Congregation itself, aware of the lawyer's unbecoming activities, stated that he had been lying and deserved to be severely reprimanded.

IX. The opposition party, not willing as yet to lay down its arms, deputized one of themselves, together with the General's First Assistant (Piperon), to ask that a new Chapter be convoked and agreed to in writing, but no longer consisting of the same members (as the previous abortive one), but rather after the procedure laid down in the new Constitutions which they knew were definitively approved, coinciding with their promulgation. The Superior General and his Assistant were willing to make this promise because it would be a way towards pacification and becoming, moreover, amenable to Rome's approval.

A short while afterwards we were in receipt of that text in the Constitutions where it is stated:

1. that each Superior should henceforth be aged 35 (hitherto, one only required final profession);
2. that the Chapter be made up of Superiors in office while waiting on the Society's division into Provinces. Previously only six were chosen, either among current Superiors or among those who had been.

These two changes greatly stirred up the opposing faction, accusing Fr. Jouët in particular of using his influence to have them introduced, but this charge was totally unmerited because our Procurator General was not at all consulted about this either by the official involved, whose name he doesn't even know, nor by the Sacred Congregation. Their (the opponents') displeasure was added to when they became aware that the Congregation was about to send us a document stating:

1. that it would not approve a new Chapter consisting of the same members as the previous one;
2. that if we judge it opportune to call a new Chapter, we must look for authorization beforehand, and it must take place in keeping with the new Constitutions;
3. that on the other hand we must advert to the fact that we cannot call this Chapter before we have taken cognizance of the impact made in all our houses, even the furthest away, of the validation, and, as well, the satisfactory reception of the recently-approved Constitutions which had been sent to all the confrères.

On being notified of these decisions, the opposition was not slow in stating that all this was the work of Fr. Jouët, who had, besides, succeeded in having indefinitely postponed a Chapter which he didn't want himself. How can reasonable religious come to think that the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, made up of distinguished, disinterested, members, could permit itself to be influenced by whomsoever to the detriment of a whole society? Particularly so when one knows that this same Congregation does not give its verdict until it has submitted everything to the Pope who, himself, approves its decisions, having taken all the issues into the most careful consideration.

X. What is about to be stated now is not presumptuousness. On the last visit of the General to Rome, following a prolonged meeting with the Secretary of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, Monsignor Sepiacci and Cardinal Verga, Prefect of the Congregation, he heard from their own mouths the following words: "All your concerns are in the Pope's hands, having reserved to himself their appraisal, and it's he who will provide the answer to the pending, current, problems." Cardinal Monaco, the Society's Protector, spoke in the same vein. Before leaving Rome, Fr. General requested an audience with the Pope. In reply it was stated that Leo XIII had suspended all audiences because of the Consistory about to take place shortly, and that if he (Chevalier) would like to wait for about ten days or so he would very likely be received in audience. "In any event, leave your request with me," said the Master of the Sacred Palace, "and I will pass it on to his Holiness." This was 11am and three hours later he (Chevalier) was handed a message from the Vatican informing him that the Pope would receive him, with Fr. Jouët, Procurator General, at 6pm that evening. (!) The meeting was most intimate, friendly, privileged. Leo XIII had set aside two chairs and, according to received ceremonial, he asked Fr. General to sit in the armchair and Fr. Jouët to sit in the chair. Hesitating before such a kind gesture, the Pope insisted and we had to do as he said. "Well then," he said to Fr. General (if these are not his exact words, this is what he meant), "I know what brings you here. Rest assured; all will work out well for you! I have seen Cardinal Verga and I have given him instructions, about which you will be pleased. You must understand, there are bound to be problems when a Congregation is beginning to grow; the devil is not happy and always creates problems. How many houses have you; where are they; are there many of you?"

The Holy Father seemed happy with the replies. "Have you many novices? Where are they?" "There were many in Holland, but we have brought them near us, close to the mother house where there were already others." "The right thing to do! When an Institute begins, the novitiate should be under the supervision of the Superior General so that he can visit it frequently. I would advise you to form in a challenging way your young men, probate spiritus, and only accept solid vocations, as it's better to have fewer members so long as they are good. Do not look to numbers since, otherwise, you will have troublesome characters who will create problems for your Society. And if you think that someone is not suitable don't hesitate to send him away. Today discipline needs to be more firm than ever, with obedience put into practice by all. Ah! Obedience that's the touchstone. And your young students, where are they?" "At Antwerp, Holy Father." "They should, like your novices, be near you. But you have some in Rome also, at Piazza Navona; one is very happy about this; one gathers that they are getting on very well." Then addressing himself to Fr. Jouët he said: "Your church is well attended, the ceremonies are quite beautiful and the church has become very popular. You are doing well there; continue. Have you finished its restoration; are the paintings completed?" "No, Holy Father." "But why? Are you short of money? But I approved of your appeal for money in France because France is so willing to contribute. Indeed! If I didn't have it (from France) St. Peter's Pence would come to little or nothing."

Then the Pope went on to speak about his latest encyclical, the impact he hoped it would make; he also mentioned the French workers' pilgrimage, the preparations he made to meet them, and the pleasure it gave him. He enquired concernedly about His Grace Archbishop Marchal of Bourges and his brother the Bishop of Sinope, and then he went on to speak highly of our missions among the pagans, and the commitment of our confrères. This audience had already lasted 35 minutes and there was no suggestion that it was about to end. Sensitive about encroaching on the Pope's precious time we got up to leave on our own initiative and prostrating ourselves at his feet we asked his Apostolic blessing for our confrères, our youngsters, our benefactors and the Society's undertakings.

Dear Farther Vaudon,

Since it is not acceptable to you to go to Paris as Superior we do not, quite obviously, want to impose on you this responsibility. I would appeal to you not to mention anything about this decision either to Fr. Delaporte or the confrères. I shall be keeping you at the presbytery (Issoudun) and you will be in charge of the Annals and the Association's office, as you had requested. You may take up again your preaching of retreats and, of course, encourage the enthusiasm of our helpers. Your retreat should be over tomorrow. Before you return to Issoudun, would you be good enough to meet with Fr. Guyot and the widow Madame Raveau to make an inventory of all the villa's furniture so that it can be part of the lease. Fr. Hériault, the owner, will send you an affidavit entitling you to act in his name. The solicitor says that this is acceptable. How advanced is the work on the chapel? Is the roof completed? Mr. Tarlier, the architect, is due to visit Vichy.

Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

I have advised Madame Raveau that you were making an inventory.

Your Grace,

I am requesting Your Grace to approve, according to the prescription of the latest rescript from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, the following appointments, canonical incompatibilities in regard to the dignity of the title-holders or lack of the requisite age notwithstanding:

Bishop Louis André Navarre, Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, residing in Thursday Island;
Bishop Henri Stanislas Verjus, Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, New Guinea;
Bishop Louis Couppé, Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, New Pomerania (New Britain);
Fr. Frédéric Derichemont, Superior and Novice Master, Watertown (USA);
Fr. Eugène Meyer, Novice Master at the Salzburg House, Tyrol, Austria.

Council Meeting, October 21, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard, Jouët, Procurator General visiting Issoudun.

The arguments put forward by Fr. Merg rejected.

1. Fr. Louis Merg, appointed science teacher at Antwerp, asked to stay on in Paris, the main reason so he claims is ill health and the burden of the classes he would be required to give. These reasons were not considered compelling and his appointment remains.

Fr. Ranzoni, Paul Ard and Mathieu Beker admitted to postulancy.

2. A young Italian priest, Fr. Ranzoni Balthasar, on the supportive recommendation of Fr. Jouët, was accepted as a postulant. Then another postulant lay brother, Paul Ard, was accepted on the recommendation of Fr. Maillard. Another lay brother postulant, a gardener at the Sisters (Dames) of the Sacred Heart, Bourges, was mentioned and he is expected on November 12. There was renewed discussion about the postulant Matthieu Beker from Maastricht (Holland) already accepted in principle, but about whom there has been reserved judgment since the reports from the Jesuit College where he studied are good, but those from his parish priest are unfavourable. He himself offers to pay and, meanwhile, there is no good reason why he shouldn't be accepted.

Decision about final vows for the Rome scholastics: Di Luzio, Ruggeri, Nicolo, Laurenti.

3. The four scholastics put forward for final vows by Fr. Jouët were discussed.

A. The position of Luzio Moysé was put back because of the military law he will come under next May. An indult will regularize his situation in the meantime.

B. Ruggeri Egidio has not been accepted as a student because of his health, but he may, as he requests, be accepted as a lay brother and sent to the missions, for which he has the requisite qualities.

C. Nicolas Nicolo, lacking somewhat in health, but otherwise considered favourably, was accepted.

D. Joseph Laurenti was put back for later consideration because of the unsatisfactory report made about him by Fr. Védère.

Among the Rome students three are in poor health, especially Hannigan who will be recalled and replaced by Fr. Helfer and Brother Field.

Acceptance for vows of 26 novices at Chezal-Benoît.

4. On the recommendation of Fr. Piperon, the following 26 novices were accepted for three-yearly profession: Fathers Raynaud and Godineau; the scholastic brothers: Niesten, Henri van Biel, Joseph Reichert, Jacques Schmitz, Antoine de Jong, Louis Vuisters, Guillaume Baeten, Henri-Marie Nollen, A. van Dinter, Ferdinand Dormann, Paul Gutman, Victor de Rijcker, Benoit-Marie Mourgues, Joseph Bouellat, Thomas Callaway, Claude Charneau, Louis Cros, Louis Kopp, Charles Henry, Auguste Bouvier, Frédéric Postalier, Hugues Orlandi, Denis O'Mahony; Brother J.L. Tavers who came to the postulancy with the priesthood in view was only accepted as a lay brother.

The Hammonton foundation given up.

5. Despite the continuing appeals from Fr. Grom to maintain the Hammonton foundation, it was for the third time decided that it should be abandoned because of the lack of personnel to look after it.

Decision about Fr. Barral.

6. Fr. Barral, although he has asked to leave the Society and with whom arrangements had been made, has not, so it seems, as yet asked for dispensation from vows, and the view was taken that this should be requested on his behalf from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars and thereby dismiss him from the Society.

Discussion about the irregular situation of Fr. Durin.

7. Fr. Durin, having lived for 7 or 8 years at least outside the Society, having wholly excluded himself from the jurisdiction of the Superiors, engaged with work which was not approved of by the Council, has placed himself in a situation totally at odds with his religious obligations vis-à-vis the Society, and the Society, likewise, with him. The confrères, no more than outsiders who are aware of the situation, cannot explain how someone professed can maintain that he remains a member of a Congregation from which he is completely cut off and how the same Society could continue to look upon him as a member. He is absolutely incapable of living in community given his lack of judgment, as well as having indicated his absolute dislike of living in community with his Superiors, but now at last he himself has realized his anomalous position, requesting release from his vows. It is ridiculous, in the view of certain Council members, that this circumstance has not been made use of already to rectify this matter, and that he has been given time to withdraw his request. It is imperative that this equivocation should be overcome as quickly as possible and, meanwhile, his name should be removed from the list of personnel which is made public every year.

Issoudun, undated, likely October 23, 1891

Mr. President,

Once again I come to acknowledge and express my appreciation for the keen interest you so willingly bring to our Oceania missions. Sad letters which I am getting from Bishop Navarre compel me to draw your attention to the New Guinea Vicariate. The expenses which they were obliged to undertake, he and his confrères, in order to establish themselves, have exhausted their financial resources. Lacking sufficient nourishment, their vitality is weakened and they have become wracked by fever. One of the most active priests died a few months ago; another is dying; he has been anointed and it's possible he is already dead at this moment. Bishop Navarre himself is seriously laid up with a life-threatening condition. Several other missionaries and three sisters are laid up with fever due to the lack of the necessary medical care which they cannot provide for themselves.

In order to cope with their problems and combat the Protestant catechists who are rife in these lands, we have sent them two missionaries and four Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart who will leave for Marseilles on the third of November.

I presume to ask you, Mr. President, to kindly make available the necessary funds for their journey from France to New Guinea which you had set aside for them and, perhaps, you might add to that sum, given the straitened conditions in which they find themselves; for this I shall be lastingly grateful.

Hoping that you will kindly meet my request, please accept my deepest regards as I have the honour to be your very humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Council Meeting, October 28, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Maillard, Morisseau.

Confirmation by the Archbishop of Bourges of the Vicars Apostolic as local Superiors and Fathers Derichemont and Meyer as Superiors and Novice Masters.

1. The reply from the Archbishop of Bourges, dated October 24, was read out, confirming by virtue of the September 30 indult Bishop Navarre as local Superior of Thursday Island; Bishop Verjus as local Superior in New Guinea; Bishop Couppé as local Superior of New Britain; Fr. Derichemont as Superior and Novice Master at Watertown; Fr. Meyer as Novice Master at Salzburg.

Circular concerning the Constitutions' acceptance.

2. A circular will be sent to local Superiors asking for acceptance of the newly-edited Constitutions recently forwarded, as well as acceptance on the part of all the professed of the changes made by the Sacred Congregation.

The Chezal-Benoît Council's composition.

3. It was decided that Fr. Piperon's Council for the general administration of Chezal-Benoît would consist of Fathers Batard and Chopin as his assistants. The issues of particular interest with regard to the scholasticate and the Petite Oeuvre will be dealt with in specific Council meetings in which there will be consultation and engagement with the relevant directors.

Brothers Boudin and L. Guis accepted for perpetual vows.

4. On the favourable recommendation of Fr. Piperon Brothers François Boudin and Louis Guis were accepted for perpetual profession.

Decision about Brother Van der Aa.

5. Given his advanced age and the need to study in order to go forward to Holy Orders and, on the other hand, only performing the functions of a lay brother at Tilburg, it was decided that he could go to the Antwerp Scholasticate under the care of Fr. Lanctin who is authorized to ask Fr. Reyn for a scholastic to strengthen his teaching personnel because it's too stretched.

Brother Vincent accepted for renewal of vows.

6. On the favourable recommendation of Fr. Lanctin, the lay brother Vincent was accepted for renewal of his three-yearly vows.

G. Durin accepted as a postulant.

7. Georges Durin is accepted as a lay brother postulant, hitherto a clerical novice intended for the scholasticate.

The nature of his role and the powers acceded to Fr. Tréand in Australia.

8. The Council then went on to discuss the assignment given to Fr. Tréand in Australia. It was decided that he should go to Sydney as the Superior General's delegate, enjoying plenipotentiary powers to deal with anything litigious either at the Sydney house, the Procure or any houses in the missions. In Sydney he will have full, exclusive, authority to take charge and lead as long as he remains there, helped by his confrères insofar as he deems it necessary. He will also have full authority to preside over Procure issues, and take whatever measures occur to him to bring to an end and avoid all conflicts between the different houses or missions, safeguarding the rights of each, distributing, as stated at the February 4 meeting, the excess in the Procure revenues which will not be needed for its upkeep, and in the following fashion:

a quarter of that in excess will remain in the 'kitty' to set up a reserve fund to help the missions in extraordinary instances of extreme need; the remainder, the other three-quarters of this reserve sum, will be shared as 2 fiftieths to each Vicariate and as one fiftieth to the apostolic prefecture. Although their Lordships the Apostolic Vicars rank above the priest delegate by their episcopal character and the jurisdiction they enjoy from the Holy See, they must accept his authority as local Superior as regards the administration of their respective houses and the forwarding of accounts as laid down by the Constitutions.

Fr. Tréand's powers will last until they are revoked.

Council Meeting, November 6, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

Joseph Valdambrini.

1. A letter from Fr. Jouët, as well as one from Fr. Védère, was read, in commendation of Joseph Valdambrini, a former pupil at the Rome Petite Oeuvre. This young man, who left the Petite Oeuvre precipitately but who has, otherwise, excellent qualities and recently received his licentiate diploma, requests entry to the novitiate. He was accepted as a postulant. This was counteracted following later evaluation; for a fuller, more lengthy context, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, Vol. 1, p.253-267.

Joseph Oyant

2. Joseph Oyant was accepted for the lay brothers' postulancy, supported by a favourable report from his parish priest, but this acceptance will not be finalized until fuller information is made available.

Release from vows of Fathers Barral and Louis Merg.

3. The decision was taken that Fathers Pierre Barral and Louis Merg should be released from vows. As regards the former, his written request to leave the Society was noted, as well as his refusal to live under the direction of his Superiors. As regards Fr. Merg, there is the evidence of his refusal to go to Antwerp, a posting assigned to him. His difficult character and unhappy attitude necessitated many changes in appointments, about which he moaned, and, besides, there was his continuous irregularity with regard to community exercises in common. The health problems he put forward in self-justification were not acceptable to the majority of Council members.

Jules Chevalier... and his Assistants.

Prostrate...

We state that Fr. Louis Merg, a young priest of the said Congregation (MSC), residing in the Paris house, has shown himself over a number of years to have a difficult character, a bad attitude and little or no regularity (dependability), all of which led to changes of address and employment, which he complained about and which he tried to take advantage of in order to justify his reluctance to obey, especially when asked to become science teacher at the Antwerp house. He pleaded the state of his health, but this was not considered to be a valid, justifying, reason and it was put to him that he should choose between what he had been asked to do and departure from the Congregation; he chose the latter course.

Consequently, and already, with the requisite commendation, he has left in search of a bishop who would accept him. Otherwise, he comes under the jurisdiction of the bishop in his native diocese who, so far as we are aware, has no reason to refuse him.

The appellants are asking Your Grace to be good enough to release him from his vows...

Prostrate...

This is to state that Fr. Pierre Barral, a professed priest of the Congregation, having been sent away from the Quito house by the Archbishop and, greatly smarting as a consequence, has asked for approval to engage himself in apostolic undertakings of his own initiative and responsibility outside the Congregation. He was informed that for such an undertaking he only needed to leave the Society and, thereby, be free to act on his own initiative. He has accepted this proposal and, accordingly, as confirmed by letter, he is going through the process of having himself released from his vows. With the references provided for him, he has set off to look for a posting in the USA. This priest is diffident about asking for release from his vows without any plausible reason, not even that of looking for a bishop since he belongs to his native diocese by right and effectively, having been ordained with dismissorial letters.

The appellant petitions Your Grace to grant him release of vows and break off the link he has with the Society.

These two latter petitions were sent to Jouët, the Procurator, to be used in the final presentation by him to the Sacred Congregation.

States that three students resident in Rome, having been members of the Congregation by their three-year vows which expired on the 4th of October last, are presently unable to be accepted for perpetual vows, as required by the Constitutions, and for reasons having nothing to do with themselves, being by name:

Moyse Diluzio who is about to go on military service for three years;

Egidio Ruggeri, suffering from a heart ailment which is considered serious by the doctor but, nonetheless, it doesn't leave him without hope;

Joseph Laurenti who, in the light of certain delicate duties confided to him, did not merit, as his Superiors saw it, sufficiently satisfactory marks.

Thank you for your kind letter. I am pleased about your novena's success and the interest you have stirred up about our undertakings. Get all the information on the spot about the young final year (rhetoric) candidate and if the reports are good he could come to the novitiate at the moment of his choosing. As for the two Petite Oeuvre youngsters, Fr. Maillard does not recall seeing the dossier and the replies. He will look into the matter and there's no obstacle to their arrival given your recommendations. Look into the health of these youngsters, the situation as regards their families and everything else which is pertinent.

The good Sisters in Gray have written to me requesting that you preach a short retreat to their pupils. I replied in the affirmative, if your health is satisfactory.

I wish to thank Mademoiselle Hélène Chatel and her aunt for their good wishes; give them my regards as well as the parish priest where you are preaching.

I haven't received any inventory from Vichy, and this is holding up the settlement of the matter with Madame Raveau. This delay is unfortunate; write to Fr. Guyot as I do not know his address.

1. You have seen off our dear confrères and good sisters. I await your description of the ceremony for insertion in the Annals. Hurry up! Have you sent Monsignor Morel the names of those departing for mention in the Catholic Missions (magazine). He hasn't referred to Bishop Couppé's departure and his group.

2. Many thanks for your approaches to the Propagation of the Faith. I received the 800 francs towards the expenses of the trip (about 2,730 euros).

3. I am sending some news about Fr. Bontemps on to you which will be of interest to Propaganda. Indeed! It would be disastrous to give up these missions! Fr. Bontemps is truly an apostle, as saintly as he is committed. He deserves to be Vicar Apostolic. Try and so arrange it for him as a surprise. At an opportune moment, I shall try and send him some confrères.

4. The confrères on the Council do not in any way wish to keep Quito, despite government appeals. For this to happen the Sagrario priests would have to insist on staying on there, whereas the contrary is the case. A letter yesterday from Fr. François Barral tells me that their position there is quite impossible; they will return, therefore, in the spring. I hope that some of them will go and join Fr. Bontemps.

5. I am forwarding a little work to you which refers to a Sacred Heart scapular like that of Mount Carmel. Take this seriously as it would be very worthwhile for an institute.

6. I asked you on another occasion to request on my behalf the privilege of celebrating mass in a private oratory, particularly so when I am travelling or away from Issoudun. It's a privilege granted to bishops. Try and get it for me; you will be doing me a great favour.

Cheerio, Father. Wholeheartedly yours in C.J.

L 18911109

To Father Albert Delaporte, MSC, Paris.

Issoudun, November 9, 1891

Dear Fr. Delaporte,

1. I wish to thank you for your acceptance without reserve, your confrères also, of our new Constitutions.

2. The present circumstances in which our Society finds itself are of the most favourable since Rome has given its approval. Whoever has the religious spirit should submit without complaint, 'arrière pensée', or reservations, awaiting calmly and patiently on the Holy See's authorization to have a new Chapter at a time it will judge to be opportune, and according to the circumstances it sets out for us. It's not for us to determine what the law is, but rather accept it.

3. The crisis to which you refer only prevails in two or three of our houses, thankfully, but who stirred things up? Instead of associating with an authority which has always sacrificed itself for what is right, in place of overlooking its unwilling weaknesses, the fatal result of the sad situation created by events, instead of trying to reach a peaceful understanding to improve the situation and bring about, on good terms, the reforms which itself felt were needed, what happened? What demands were made known? To what extremes did not matters go? Rome was flooded with protests, appeals, memoranda! The complainants held back from nothing, not even before a likely legal process, a scandalous schism, the petition invoking your name, and this before the prospect of the Society's collapse at a time when it was just beginning to overcome its problems and strengthen itself.

Rome, not taking sides in the debate, examined impartially the facts and the complaints addressed to it, which it did not take into consideration in any way. It provided in its wisdom legal validation for what had happened in the past and re-endorsed the authority which some wanted to get rid of. What, then, is more legal than what we now have? The present circumstances are in fact normal and cannot, shall not, lead "to the most fearful concerns" other than in blind spirits. It is time for this war of the deaf to come to an end; that those who do not wish to accept, quite candidly and without reservations, the present outcome, draw the conclusion that the doors of the Society are open for them to leave.

We must, at whatever the cost, all walk together hand in hand, heart to heart, accepting without challenge the findings of lawful authority as coming from God Himself, since otherwise we would find ourselves stirring up again the lamentable incidents which we should bury in eternally lasting forgetfulness.

4. As for the new Chapter, it will make its appointments as it considers right and just before the Lord, and if its choice falls upon some who are not of the requisite age called for by the Constitutions, it will request Rome to provide a ratifying indulgence.

5. Tell Fr. Merg to make his own appeal to the bishop of his native diocese for entry to the diocese, and send this request to me also. I shall take note of it and return it to him.

Cheerio, Father.

Proposal for a Marseilles Foundation.

1. A letter, at the beginning of proceedings, was read from the Vicar General of Marseilles, proposing to Fr. Jouët, in the Bishop's name, a foundation which would appear to be advantageous. A letter from Fr. Jouët himself was then read out warmly supporting this proposal. The Council is very appreciative of the Bishop of Marseilles for so kindly thinking of us with regard to this foundation, but it regrets to say that members are already lacking for the greater part of our undertakings, and for this reason we have been advised by the Secretariat of the Sacred Congregation to limit ourselves as much as possible. It (the Council) is of the view, therefore, that a new foundation cannot be undertaken given such a shortage of members. We pay thankful tribute to His Lordship and wholeheartedly regret not alone our inability to accept his offer at the present time, but no less so our inability to promise anything credible for the immediate future.

Approval of special costs at Canet-de-Mar.

2. Fr. Carrière, having requested Fr. General's permission to undertake an expense item not included in the budget, which comes to 500 francs for the repair of a foundation damaged by flood waters, as well as some other urgent repairs, was given permission.

Arrangement for the publication of different Annals outside France.

3. In order to safeguard a common viewpoint and avoid discrepancies, as well as correct teaching and exact historical facts in those Annals published outside France, it was laid down that:

1. all the Annals will appear with the authorization of the Superior General, with each issue having his signature, something which does not exclude providing the address of the local Superior, to whom letters and offerings should be addressed by the subscribers and associates in the different countries;

2. the editors of the Annals in countries outside France must submit to the General before publication articles of some significance from the point of view of doctrine and history;

3. it is acceptable for each one to take from the French Annals or those in other languages what he may find helpful to him, but on condition that its provenance is always scrupulously indicated, and that no changes are made which could be erroneously interpreted.

J.M. Cochard accepted for final vows.

4. Brother J.M. Cochard, who had requested final profession when his temporary vows expired on October 17, and which was postponed because of certain charges with which he was reproached, and also because of the uncertain state of his health, has once more asked to be perpetually professed. His behaviour having been correct, and the Dr. having stated that there was nothing seriously the matter with him which could place an obstacle to his observance of the religious life, his request was accepted.

2. At the request of, and following observations made by, Fr. Jouët, the decision made about these three at the October 21 meeting has been cancelled. All three, by way of indult, face another three years of probation: Ruggeri in the hope that his health can get better; di Luzio because he has to undergo three years of military service; and Laurenti in the hope that his behaviour over the next three years will be more serious and satisfactory than it was in the past three years.

Dear Father,

You may go to Langres and Dijon. Convey my respects to Bishop Oury. Hurry back soon as your absence is very keenly felt.

I am praying for the good curate's vocation.

I don't think the Daughters of Our Lady take in pensioners.

To Father Théophile Reyn, MSC, Antwerp.

Issoudun, November 19, 1891

This letter's first page was written by Fr. Chevalier, the second page by someone else, possibly Fr. Maillard.

Dear Fr. Reyn,

Aware of your good-will and desire to do good, the Council has some observations to put to you. It would like you:

1. when placing an article, letter or grateful acknowledgment from our Annals to make known the source.
2. It would also ask you not to truncate articles which you think you should use, as you have done in the September 15 issue, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in Rome, where you have left out Fr. Jouët's (the author) name, which is to do him an injustice.
3. You should not put your name as Director of the universal archconfraternity at the end of the Annals, but rather that of Fr. Chevalier which is the case everywhere.
4. You should send us your proofs before printing all the articles which relate to the general interests of the Society, such as the Petite Oeuvre's oratory and suchlike in which we have noted serious mistakes... What immediately follows is not legible.

Finally there is an issue raised by Fr. Linckens which we haven't dealt with because we thought it was due to momentary bad humour and would quickly disappear. Not so: we received a little while ago a letter from an Alsace priest, a long-time promoter of our works, in which he complains about a letter written to him from the German office, as a result of which he would be required to send on his contributions to you. He could not, he says, do so, make a change of this kind, because his associates, having always given their contributions to Issoudun, didn't wish to change from doing so. This letter only proves to us that Fr. Linckens persists in his totally erroneous views that offerings from outside France, such as Alsace and Switzerland, should be forwarded to your house. It must be so; so he wrote in a letter to Fr. Maillard. In this respect, let there be action in accordance with what has been laid down, but what, and when, has something been laid down as regards this issue? We never said that the mother house should despoil itself to the advantage of one of the houses it founded. When the Antwerp house was set up we said that we were willing to forsake our Belgian subscribers and give you permission to edit our Annals in the French language, and from this alone we lost in one year 1,000 subscribers. But it is something else to draw the conclusion that Issoudun has so tied its hands that it has no longer the right to promote itself outside France; this is far from being the case. It would be altogether exorbitant. We could not have it so and nor did we have it so. Fr. Linckens' presumption, then, is unacceptable. You do well to ask him to give over this kind of warfare he is waging with the Issoudun office. We are quite prepared to subsidize the Annals and the propaganda literature in German that you send to our supporters, but we cannot, and do not wish to, do more than that. Keep a check on your invoices, then, and mention it in your reports every three months.

The letter ends here, abruptly.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I have sent you a copy of the (Council's) deliberations about the very advantageous proposal by the Bishop of Marseilles and, particularly, his welcoming approach. It's always the lack of personnel which holds us back. Our confrères on the missions are collapsing under the weight of work, and we have nobody, as you know, to send them. It's distressing! The Micronesian mission needs to be strengthened as you can see from dear Fr. Bontemps' letter. It needs at least one or two more priests, and we haven't even one at our disposal. We hope Bishop Robert will long continue to live and that his little seminary, unoccupied now, will still be so when we can take it over. It will be one of our first foundations. Be good enough, then, to write a nice letter thanking His Lordship, as you are so well able to do, and arrange things as best you can.

Cheerio, wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Father,

1. The requested projects are being sent on to you for appraisal, and when you have corrected them return them to us in the form in which they should be presented. You will then go quickly and present them, however incorrect they are, to the official personages. I shall understand if they are not best pleased. Why are you acting in this way?

You know as well as we do Pierre Barral's situation, and that of Fr. Louis Merg, in order to meet officially with a consultor friend who can inform us how best we should act in order to achieve our aims, because we do not know the procedures to follow. It is for you, then, my good friend, as the Society's Procurator, to help and inform us without compromising or damaging ourselves with the Congregations. Send us on, then, the requests as they should be formulated in order to be favourably received.

2. Weary, tossed about as we are, one can easily overlook the postponement of our scholastics' vows at Chezal-Benoît, without incurring the Sacred Congregation's blame at all. You are aware of the pressure on poor Fr. Piperon who very often doesn't know on what side to act.

3. As for Laurenti, at first the decision was taken, given the unsatisfactory report provided by you and Fr. Védère, to send him away if we didn't have the right to prolong his stay for 6 months. You were asked to let us know more about this and you succeeded in getting an adjournment. If presently the renewal of his three-yearly vows is requested, it's for the purpose of getting better marks. I am sending your letter on to you, and you will note that your suggestions have been followed.
4. I am sending you on a letter I have had from Bishop Couppé. It would appear that he wants us to hold on to the Vicariate of Micronesia, which is what you and I want ourselves. You must, therefore, get the promise of this from Propaganda.
5. I do my best, despite our increasing burdens, to supervise the publication of the Annals. It may well happen, however, that something gets by, despite the overseeing of the Archbishop, which isn't correct. Why are you always returning to the Fr. Ramot issue; what do you think we can do about it? One will be on the watch-out for the future.
6. Yes, I wrote to Fr. Reyn about the abbreviated article, but had no reply from him.
7. The personnel in our Society will be printed separately. I am sure that Fr. Morisseau will not have forgotten to mention the Procurator General, resident in Rome.

Cheerio, Father.
Good wishes to you all in C.J.

Issoudun, November 22, 1891

Dear Father,

1. Rome, that is to say the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, before permitting us to call a new Chapter, wants to know how the following were received in all our Europe houses and in those abroad:
the validation offered to all those needing it;
the changes made in our Constitutions definitively approved in perpetuum, because it leaves the doors of the Society open to whomsoever thinks he should not accept them, purely and simply, without ulterior motives and conditions. Since the approval is definitive, a new Chapter does not have to return to these changes.
2. As for "trans mare" (beyond the seas), this has to do with first world countries, "apud fideles". (Sic! It should, perhaps, more correctly be apud infideles.) I refer you to number 16 of the new Constitutions. As regards the mission to the pagans, there has to be acceptance of those involved, whole and entire.
3. The elimination of the words: "capitulum gen vices gerit totius societatis" (the General Chapter represents the whole Society) changes nothing with respect to the rights of the General Chapter. The Sacred Congregation no doubt understood that the remit of the General Chapter was sufficiently stated in number 146 with only the phrase: "ut in eo pertractentur graviora societatis negotia" (where the most important issues of the Society are considered), and then by that other number, 149: "in capitulo quidquid sive ad temporale sive ad spirituale societatis bonum interest tractabitur" (whatever has to do with the spiritual or temporal concerns of the Society).

You have done well, my friend, to call for these explanations which I make haste to forward to you.

Please accept my best good wishes in C.J.

1. I wholeheartedly accept the postponement of the anniversary of the crowning of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart from 1893 to 1894. But shall we be there...? (to see it) Still the good Lord will take care of that.
2. And then there's the Petite Oeuvre Silver Jubilee, and you must already start thinking about that for next year. You are the only one who can arrange these things.
3. I am grateful to you for the indults promulgating one year of temporary vows. We shall have time to consider the quality of the candidates.
4. I regret as much as you do the postponing of a foundation in Marseilles. I cannot impose my will. You are aware that some of our confrères are given to making complaints to Rome. One must, therefore, avoid any complications both for Marseilles and Quito. You know that I am on your side and support you, but what is to be done in face of a majority who have right on their side? Only the Pope can impose his will.

C 18921130b

*Mis-numbered, should be 1891
Undated, likely the end of November*

Dear Fathers and Brothers,

I feel I must share with you the translation of some recent documents from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars presented in Italian and having in mind, particularly, orders in solemn vows, but which, according to the formal statement of the Cardinal Prefect, is equally applicable to Congregations in simple vows whose perpetual vows are to be assimilated with the solemn vows of the major orders and the commitment of the subdiaconate.

The decree makes reference to certain aspects of Italian law dealing with a one-year commitment, something which does not exist in French law. Nevertheless, we also have, besides the three-year commitment, a yearly one for those who enjoy exemption under certain conditions, or who take the licentiate degree in the state universities.

Reading these prescriptions the Superiors and young charges in their care will understand their respective duties which they will commit themselves to observe faithfully, in this way holding on to many vocations which would have diminished in the midst of the dangers arising from military service.

Please accept dear Fathers and Brothers my warm and devoted greetings in SCJ.

J. Chevalier, Superior General.

This circular and the attached decree will be read in all our houses.

PRESCRIPTIONS of the Sacred Congregation relative to religious discipline (N.177-479).

The Sacred Congregation, responsible for regular religious discipline, ever attentive to the well-being of religious bodies, cannot but concern itself with young candidates who are its cherished hope. For this reason, and with the Pope's approval, it confirms the apostolic constitutions published in the past to uphold the rules and regulations working in normal circumstances, and now it provides Superior Generals, with reference to those of their subjects who are subject to military service, the following requirements:

1. For those in the first category who provide no indication of being reformed and adjusted, both solemn profession and acceptance in sacred orders must be postponed until military service is completed after one year, or another if that is the case.
2. It can be advantageous to favour voluntary service lasting one year, in keeping with the resources which each order has at its disposal either to provide part or the totality of the expenses claimed as taxes by the government, and the other expenses necessitated by military service. It will be understood at the same time that these contributions will only be available for young religious of good expectations who are docile and obedient.

3. It is appropriate that before starting on the compulsory one year, or longer, service, those involved should have made a retreat of at least 6 days, and done part of their theological studies (preceded by the normal courses involving other disciplines) so that they are more assured in their religious ideas and more attached to their institute.

4. So that these young religious should persevere more assuredly in their vocation, matching it with their good behaviour, besides the accustomed appropriate advice – recourse to the sacraments insofar as this is possible, reading quality books – there is an obligation on them to meet the ecclesiastics appointed by the local Bishop to look after their spiritual needs. And they, in turn, will not be remiss in providing these conscripts, insofar as this is possible, with the kind of guidance which is worthwhile in the circumstances. In order to facilitate this measure, the Superior Generals will tell their Provincials to make the identities of their subjects known to the aforementioned local Bishops, stating where they are and commending them to their pastoral concern. The Bishops, on the other hand, will inform the Provincials of the identities of those priests to whom the young conscripts should have recourse.

With each change of posting, the young religious are for their part required to inform the Provincial, and make known to him, as far as possible, their situation and life style, demands, concerns. If, while on military service, they are granted some weeks' holiday, they must make use of it to spend at least three days on retreat. It is scarcely necessary to add that in those towns (or cities) where there are houses of the orders, Provincials may nominate one of themselves for the spiritual care of their men who have been conscripted, but there remains, however, the strict obligation to make known to the Ordinary of the place the names of their young religious who are completing military service in their dioceses.

5. Those who follow this military service of a year or longer and persevere in their vocations, as is evidenced by their good behaviour, should be admitted back into their communities, beginning with a retreat. They are not to be admitted to solemn profession or to sacred orders until a period of probation has been undergone which cannot be less than a year's duration, enabling them to demonstrate over this period stability of vocation, and again taking up their studies while remaining in a house of professed members, or in some other house of careful supervision under the guidance of a religious mature in years and proven virtue who will evaluate the individual's suitability and his requisite qualities.

There needs to be still greater supervision with regard to those conscripts who experienced military service over a longer period of time. Testimonial letters from the bishops of those places where they were stationed in excess of three months are required for all of them. The prescriptions of Canon Law, as well, remain in force in the case of those who have fallen short or have incurred penalties; in each instance one must have recourse to pontifical dispensation.

6. The precautionary measures outlined in 4 above will equally apply to those who, following final profession and holy orders, will again be called up for military service over a significant period of time.

7. Financially, if there are particular and exceptional cases not foreseen, the Superior Generals of the orders must have recourse to the Sacred Congregation for appropriate advice and resolution of these complex issues.

The former priest Thomas left the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart in the Spring of 1890. I am pleased by the good report Fr. Personnot (diocesan priest) has given Your Grace about Chezal-Benoît. I can vouch myself for his observations. I went there on the 23rd of last month to receive the vows of 33 novices. I also met while there the scholastics and the Petite Oeuvre youngsters as well as the teachers and I could see for myself the good spirit which pervades the house. It was not before time, Your Grace, to bring together in one grouping all the youngsters from different countries and mould them as one. If Fathers Personnot and Chenu are happy with Chezal-Benoît, I may inform Your Grace that we are very happy with them also. We would be particularly favoured if Your Grace's health made it possible for you to visit this undertaking in the near future which is identified in so many ways with you.

I have the honour to be, most respectfully, Your Grace's most humble and obedient son in C.J.

Dear Fr. Barral,

Many thanks for your kind letter and the enclosed documents. The new Contract which the Archbishop of Quito offers us is acceptable. I shall be putting it before the Council on Wednesday next and I do not doubt that it will be acceptable.

Yes, I agree with you; the allowance for each priest should be raised to 1,000 francs (about 3,210 euros) and it should be laid down that in the event of a serious disagreement between the Archbishop and the priests, the issue should be referred to the Pope who will decide matters. I shall inform you officially as soon as the Council (Chevalier and his Assistants) makes its decision about the new contract. I should like to know if all our Sagrario confrères are in favour of the new contract and if they are willing to stay on in Quito at least for a few more years, since otherwise there will be serious problems in replacing them. Ask them to write to me. It's an attractive mission which has come your way; having experienced all the stress and strain, you are now experiencing a successful outcome.

Yes, we accept the postulant solicitor you are putting forward. If the recommendations are good you may send him on. I shall write to Bishop Ordonez to thank him when the issues have been agreed. I am amazed that you haven't received our letters as I always reply whenever I get yours.

Issoudun, December 6, 1891

Dear Father,

1. I have good news for you. I received just now an official letter from the Archbishop of Quito who is offering us the lineaments of a new contract which could not be more favourable. He is offering us in perpetuity the Sagrario church and presbytery with an income of 1,000 francs (about 3,410 euros) in revenue a year for each priest, and all the intake of the parish, including tithes. The Archbishop is taking responsibility also for our rent in order to avoid any concerns on our part. The church will be cut off from the diocese and we shall not be obliged to give an account to anyone of the debts we are meeting. Fr. François Barral thinks that these debts go beyond 20,000 francs (about 68,250 euros) for one year alone. Our confrères, then, will be quite independent and undertake in the church whatever they decide. The Sagrario church will be provisionally named the national shrine while the basilica is being completed. All the liturgies will be celebrated there as we shall think fit. The national shrine's bulletin will be the medium of our undertakings; we shall only need to inform the committee of the national shrine about the contributions offered for the building of the basilica. We do not have to concern ourselves with the building of the basilica, this being the exclusive concern of the diocesan committee. We shall be merely the spiritual directors of the national shrine.

All our confrères will live in Sagrario. We do not have to concern ourselves with the brothers' chaplaincy which had been too involved and demanding, etc. The aristocracy and the whole population, on hearing that the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart were about to leave Quito, were in uproar and went to see the Archbishop and the President of the Republic to find some way of holding on to us, informing them that they would make representations to the Pope to keep us there, and under no circumstances would they agree to our departure, etc. Here is the explanation for the President's involvement with the Embassy in Rome and the Consulate in Paris. Our young priests in Quito seem to be quite pleased about the new developments, stating that it would be impossible to find better prospects, everything exceeding all that had been hoped for. You can see for yourself, my friend, that the Sacred Heart has drawn good out of evil; your wishes and mine have, then, been realized.

Next Wednesday I shall share all this information and the new contract with the priests on the Council who, I hope, will be pleased and heartily approve of it. Already Fathers Morisseau and Maillard, who know about it, are very favourable. I shall send all the documents on to you towards the end of the week. You will be greatly pleased; it's beyond belief! Since the Sagrario church and presbytery have been made over to us in perpetuity this requires the Pope's approval, something which will add more of a guarantee. You will yourself see to it that this ratification is obtained.

2. As regards the post of Director General of the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, you well know, my friend, that I do not want to associate it personally with myself, but circumstances from the latest Chapter should open our eyes, and we need to think about the future. Can you imagine Fathers Meyer, Klotz or Reyn as Procurator General in Rome and Director General of the Archconfraternity, and what they might not attempt with their separatist ideas? The whole issue would be replete with problems, you will agree. It is, accordingly, in our interest to put forward the name of the Society's Superior General. If it's needed try and get this authorization. Nothing will change in your own situation since you will continue as the Superior General's delegate.

3. What has happened about the request for release from vows of Frs. Pierre Barral and Louis Merg?

4. Can you get authorization for me to say mass no matter where I am as is the case with bishops?

5. Have you given thought to the Sacred Heart scapular?

6. A Quito lawyer, Ignace Novas, has asked to join us as a novice. He is aged 35. He has agreed to pay the fees at Chezal-Benoît and the money for his return (to Quito) if required. It would appear that he is likely to be a good prospect.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J. and a happy Christmas.

Issoudun, December 9, 1891

Dear Father,

1. I am sending on to you the contract proposal of the Archbishop of Quito. You will let me know what you think of it. The Council met today. Fr. Morisseau is not in favour. The very name Sagrario puts him off and the promises being made by Archbishop Ordonez, he claims, are illusory. Fr. Maillard says that we should look for further information. Fr. Piperon wants to think further about it before he says anything, taking away the whole dossier to Chezal-Benoît for that purpose. The translation exactly as that here enclosed.

I shall forward to you when it's sent on to me the explanatory letter of the Archpriest and Fr. Barral's memorandum which is very reassuring since he points out all the advantages of this new contract, and seems keen on our acceptance of it. The Council, accordingly, decided to ask:

a. if His Grace could as from himself hand over to us in perpetuity the Sagrario property and the presbytery;

b. if the Cathedral Chapter would continue as hitherto to use Sagrario for the Holy Week ceremonies (something which we do not want);

c. whether the Archbishop's successor would have the right to terminate the contract or change it at his will?

Be good enough to take advice about these three issues in the first part of the contract. It seems to me that the Pope is likely to approve this contract, and if he does so his successors cannot change anything. If matters remained like this we would have all the guarantees we need and our Council would decide in favour, despite Fr. Morisseau's opposition.

The second issue.

One would like to know if the Archbishop could disengage from controlling rights over the revenues of the fabric both for himself and his successors. The Holy See may be able to clear up this matter.

Article 3.

Can the Archbishop commit his successors to make available each year to each missionary the aforementioned sum?

Articles 4 and 5 accepted.

Article 6.

What is to be understood by the phrase: "if a missionary behaves unbecomingly"? This wording needs to be explained. I think myself that it must mean an action involving public immorality and a challenge to diocesan authority, since otherwise the Archbishop would be doing less than justice to the word "unbecoming". You might also consult the Ecuador Ambassador on these different issues.

Brother Grippa has been accepted for temporary vows. He died at Yule Island, August 13, 1898. Orlandi is being sent on to you straightaway.

Orlandi, a Neapolitan, was born on April 21, 1874 and ordained to the priesthood June 4, 1898. He founded the Omegna Oratory which he looked after for many years. He died in Milan, January 13, 1933.

We have written to Fathers Barral and Merg along the lines you suggested to us. I end my letter here so that it can go off this evening.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, December 10, 1891

Dear Fr. Barral,

I shared yesterday with the Council the plan of the contract which the Archbishop forwarded to you through the intermediary of the Vicar General. This contract quite obviously changes the circumstances under which you are working in Quito and needs to be given serious consideration. Nevertheless, before it reaches a final decision, the Council needs to be quite certain about some sections of the new contract which you will kindly place before His Grace and then provide us with his answers.

Article 1.

1. Can the Archbishop on his own initiative hand over to us in perpetuity the church and presbytery property in Sagrario?

2. Would his successors have the right to terminate this arrangement?

3. Would the Chapter, as in the past, have the freedom to use Sagrario for the Holy Week ceremonies? This would be a binding inconvenience and you would not any longer be in control!

Article 2.

Can the Archbishop disengage both himself and his successors from any financial claims with respect to the undertaking? The reply will have to be in the affirmative... If otherwise, this offer is not what it should be.

Article 3.

Has the Archbishop the authority to commit his successors to abide by the parochial rights and privileges, providing each priest and brother with the monthly allowance mentioned in this part of the agreement? It has to be like this! The amount should be stabilized as the figure you mention, and on condition that, as you say, there are two lay brothers.

Articles 4 and 5 do not give rise to any problems.

Article 6.

The phrase "unbecoming conduct" needs to be made more precise since it is too vague in itself and could give rise to a lot of problems. One is drawn to understand by this an act of public immorality, erroneous doctrine contrary to the teaching of the Church, taking issue with the Holy See or diocesan authority. If the explanations are in keeping with our expectations and we go ahead with this contract, the Pope must ratify it since we cannot accept a parish, particularly so in perpetuity, without a specific authorization from the Holy See. Accordingly, the following must be added to the contract: 1, it is the Pope who will adjudicate in any problems which may arise between the Archbishop and the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart; 2, the contract will be rescinded on one side or the other in the case of an insurmountable issue and without a claim to indemnity, unless the Holy See judges otherwise.

The Council would like, Father, if all your confrères in Quito were to state what they thought of this contract in a personal letter addressed to me and whether or not they want to stay at Sagrario if we do approve this contract.

We would like to know also if the solicitor candidate (for the MSCs) knows enough French to follow the theological course after his novitiate. If the recommendations you have gathered about him are satisfactory, you may send him on to us when he has settled his affairs.

Cheerio, Father; thank the Archbishop for his kindness, also his Vicar General.
Good wishes to you all in C.J.

Dear Father,

I have thought it best to write the enclosed letter to Monsignor Sepiacci and which you will be kind enough to pass on to him.

See to it that in Rome the concerns I shared with you about the Quito project are clarified. I believe that it is only the Pope alone who can authorize this kind of contract involving his successors. We need to have this guarantee.

Cheerio, my friend.

Confidential

Dear Fr. Barral,

I got both your letters enclosing the appeals of the most distinguished ladies and gentlemen in the city of Quito. I could not be more moved and if the result of their request depended on me alone you may be sure that it would be favourable. There are 4 important issues to be considered concerning this matter as I already mentioned to you in my previous letter at the beginning of the month:

1, the new contract; 2, its validity; 3, the approval of the Holy See; 4, its full acceptance by all of you.

1. The new contract is acceptable save for some slight changes which I already wrote about to you.
2. Its validity. Can the Archbishop tie his successors in perpetuity to all the concessions with which he favours us? Can he, likewise, forego the rights of the Cathedral Chapter in relation to Sagrario, presuming that there are such? It is absolutely imperative that we get an answer to these basic questions since, otherwise, we shall only have security (of tenure) during the life-time of the present Archbishop, and that's not enough.
3. The approval of the Holy See. This is absolutely necessary. First of all, if the Archbishop hasn't the right to alienate in perpetuity, only the Pope can confer on him the right to do so in virtue of his supreme power over all the Church's assets. This issue must be clarified and brought up with the Holy See. It is a matter for the Archbishop himself. On the supposition that the Archbishop, by virtue of particular Ecuadorian laws can make such-like concessions in perpetuity, something which I doubt, there would still need to be involvement of the Holy See in the approval of this new contract. Raise all these issues with the Archbishop and let me know the result.
4. The full and complete acceptance of everyone. Discuss it with your confrères, as I mentioned to you the other day, and let each one write expressing his views about the new contract; the contribution we can make to Quito; the advantages which can accrue for our work and our Society, and the advantage it would be for us to stay in Sagrario, not just because of the good work you are accomplishing there, but equally so because of the welcome and support extended to you from all sides, and, of course, the formal pleas to remain expressed so emphatically and spontaneously by the clergy, the government and the people.

It is imperative that all your confrères agree to remain there in Quito at least for some years, since for the present it would not be possible for us to replace even one of them. The unanimous acceptance of all is, then, absolutely necessary. I like to think that no-one will refuse in face of the good you are doing there, as well as the advantages to which it gives rise for our undertakings, the honour of the Society and the triumphant splendour of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Our Lady. Otherwise, it matters little whether we work there or elsewhere!

Meet then with your confrères, one after the other... Strengthen the faint-hearted; encourage those who are hesitating... Meet with them often to give them guidance; sort out their problems if there are any; forewarn them against likely dangers; have them shun them if they exist. Only confide the ministry of women's confessions to the more solid, those who find nothing particularly troublesome about it. As for those who do find it somewhat perilous or who experience scruples or dislike, let them undertake other work which they find more congenial and in keeping with their abilities. Take care that regularity, piety, fervour and devotedness are continually found among you. It is in frequent heart-to-heart guidance and advice, and brotherly surveillance, that you will see all this becoming a reality. I fear that some of your colleagues are apprehensive about, or find danger in, confessions, and wish, because of that, to leave Ecuador (particularly so little Fr. Bouvier – this is very confidential and for you alone). Requests about returning, or the hesitancy of some, could compromise everything.

I see in all this Providence at work and the wishes of the Heart of Jesus that we keep Sagrario, given the unexpectedly good dispositions of the Archbishop and the regard the population has for us. There is every reason for us to stay in Quito and overcome any drawbacks, if the contract can be agreed on the safeguarding conditions I laid out above. Besides, it must also be stipulated that we shall retain the spiritual direction of the basilica in perpetuity.

Cheerio, Father. My thanks to all the signatories of the appeals.
Good wishes in C.J.

Council Meeting, December 23, 1891

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

Brother Calloway put forward for the subdiaconate.

1. Fr. General asked for the Council's views about Fr. Ramot's proposal from Glastonbury of Brother Calloway for the subdiaconate. He has not made his theological studies in a normal manner at the scholasticate, but he has studied Gury's first volume under the guidance of the priests in the house. It was decided that in order to be sure about his knowledge and capabilities to exercise the sacred ministry, the candidate should submit himself to a serious examination from qualified examiners. If successful Fr. General will give his approval, but this presenting of the candidate for the subdiaconate is Fr. Ramot's own conscientious responsibility.

The Annals reduced to 48 pages.

2. As a supplement of 24 pages was added to the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart during the past year, it was queried as to whether or not this additional number of pages should remain during the coming year. Fr. General thinks that it isn't necessary and, in any event, the subscriptions and intake have not increased with respect to the demanding work involved and, besides, Fr. Vaudon, being virtually on his own bringing out the Annals and, as well, finding himself impeded (especially pastorally), the situation would often arise when it was difficult to have enough material for such a large publication. Accordingly, it was decided that the publication should be reduced to 48 pages, beginning with the February issue, and that if there was disappointment expressed against this reduction in size, one reserves the right to reconsider the decision now being taken.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Issoudun, 1892

Dear Father,

We have come to the conclusion that in order to simplify the accounts of the Society in general and in particular, it suffices to require only one general register of intake and outlay instead of monthly accounts required twice a year. In making this change we would hope that it will be ratified in the Constitutions being presented for the Holy See's definitive approval as brought to the attention of all our houses in our 19 March, 1890, circular.

But as you can see for yourselves when reading them, the finally, definitively, approved Constitutions brought no changes to the six-monthly accounts' requirement. It is, therefore, for this reason that we are withdrawing our previous circular and state that the six-monthly account still holds and remains obligatory, as long as it has not been taken out or modified by the competent authorities.

Please accept, Father, my respectful good wishes in Sacratissimo Corde Jesu.

On behalf of the Council.

Council Meeting, January 6, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Maillard, Morisseau, Batard.

The lay brother Bruno requests a year in the novitiate to prepare himself for renewal of his three-yearly vows.

1. The Superior General presented a letter from Bruno, a lay brother in Glastonbury (Henri Peters), expressing his wish to pass another year in the Antwerp Novitiate to prepare for the renewal of his three-yearly vows, due to expire on February 10. Fr. Ramot, his Superior, needing his services, and otherwise having no reason for his request other than satisfying his own devotion, is of the view that there is no reason to meet his request.

Decisions about making canonical visitations.

2. Fr. General proposed that aside from a named, appointed, Visitor, Visitors will be drawn from the General's assistants to visit the Institution's houses. Fathers Piperon and Morisseau will visit the Sacred Heart house (Issoudun). Fathers Piperon and Maillard will make a visitation during the last fortnight in January of the Paris, Antwerp and Tilburg houses. Finally, Fr. General will be accompanied by Fr. Morisseau on the Chezal-Benoît visitation. Visitations of other houses will take place later.

The elderly former brother Régis Rasclé asks for re-entry, but is turned down.

3. Régis Rasclé, having shown a keen interest in returning to the Society, the conclusion was drawn that if he had acted so precipitately when leaving he would need a much longer period of probation before he could be admitted again.

4. A pupil from the Dutch Jesuits' school was put forward for the novitiate. Fr. Piperon will be responsible for the necessary information in this regard.

Fr. Pierre Perriot appointed to the Barcelona house.

5. Fr. Casas in Barcelona has been insisting on having a priest and, the request being well-founded, it was decided that Fr. Pierre should be taken from the bursary and made available to him. Fr. Godinoux, following this change, will take charge of the hospices.

Brothers Franciscus, Emile, Donatus, Pius, Servatius, Jules, Lambertes accepted as postulants at Antwerp.

6. Fr. Von Grinsven gave a favourable report on the above-named postulants. Franciscus, Auguste Müller, who is illegitimate and needs a dispensation which is being sought; Brother Emile, Herman Joschko; Brother Donatus, Wilhelm van der Zanden; Brother Pius, Bernard Smulders; Brother Servatius, Herman Egbers; Brother Jules, Charles de Rop; Brother Paulus Wieners; Brother Lambertus, Charles Zimmer. Brother Laurent, Habert Fischer, was accepted for three-yearly profession; although he has lost one of his legs, which has been replaced by an artificial one, he can render sterling service as he is very intelligent and well educated.

Dear Fr. Barral,

I thank you most warmly for your good wishes and those of all your confrères. I in turn send you my own good wishes which are no less sincere or profuse, and if acceptable to the Sacred Heart all will proceed in keeping with your wishes.

What is the situation as regards the new contract project? Have you had a reply to the queries I put to you? Hurry and send it on together with the assurance of support from all your confrères. I am aware of their devotedness, commitment and loving concern for this Quito undertaking where you have done so much good, and they will not hold back from committing themselves yet further, at least for some more years, to make the undertaking flourish all the more. Praised be the Sacred Heart and Our Lady! Make them reign in all hearts and we shall be entitled to the most cherished blessings. What merits, my friend, will you not be storing up for yourselves in heaven! Oh, how I would love to go and visit you, seeing for myself all the good you are doing, as well as the regard the people have for you! The letters which I have received from some ladies and gentlemen in Quito have greatly touched me. Convey to them in my name my appreciation.

In your letter of January 1 where you send me good wishes, you make no reference whatever to the new contract, nor to the Archbishop's wishes that you should stay on (in Quito). You mention, indeed, your return in February or May. I do not understand this puzzle, since your letter dated December 4 must have been written well before that in which you outline for me the Archbishop of Quito's new proposals.

Cheerio Father.
I bless you all in C.J.

Issoudun, January 9, 1892

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I can understand the significance of the problems which are cropping up in relation to the Solomon Islands. I could want nothing more than for our Society to hold on to this archipelago. But the 4 priests which Propaganda is looking for at the present time must be found somehow or other. I wrote to Fr. Karsseleers in Antwerp and Fr. Raynaud at Chezal-Benoît, who on other occasions asked to go on the missions, to find out if they still have the same interest (in the missions). But is it at all possible, without its being inconvenient, to take them away from their houses? I await their reply. I shall bring up this serious issue at the Council meeting next Thursday.

Fr. Helfer, who is with you, asked me as well if he could go on the missions, but does he still think like this? Ask him on my behalf. Fr. Giovanelli also put the same request to me. Try and find out if he is still of the same outlook. Do you yourself see others in Rome who would be well disposed to go? If it's possible to have your reply by Thursday I shall pass it on to the Council. But who can be put in charge of these young priests? A serious, intelligent and experienced man is needed, since quite clearly this archipelago will become an Apostolic Vicariate.

Judging by the information you make available to me, I believe that the Quito issue will be solved satisfactorily.

Let us pray, pray!

All good wishes now and always in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

18920114X

Council Meeting, January 14, 1892

Those in attendance were not named!

1. As Fr. Piperon, appointed Visitor for the Paris, Antwerp and Tilburg houses, is unable to do so because of the bout of influenza rampant at the Chezal-Benoît college, the visiting of these three houses has been held over.

A postulant from the Coutances minor seminary.

2. The requests of several postulants were considered: one, a rhetorician (final year) from the Coutances minor seminary, wrote a letter of some urgency, and there was another from a young man in Deux-Savres, but the lack of supportive letters made it impossible to do anything. The postulant Emile Sévin, a former soldier without any Latin, was put back. Emile Sévin, a native of the Mayenne, a former soldier, who has worked for the last three years at Issoudun, now aged 27, wishes to be either a priest or brother, but more particularly is drawn to the priesthood even though he has done no Latin, but, besides, Fr. Maillard brought up (at the meeting) certain facts which seem to indicate lightheadedness and a way of acting not calculated to inspire full confidence. Nevertheless, faced with this young man, the biggest obstacle which would appear to prevail in his regard is his lack of Latin. It was agreed that he should take some Latin lessons for a year and then he could be accepted.

The Solomon Islands' issue again considered.

3. This was already discussed at the July 19 and August 31 meetings of last year. Fr. Jouët is insisting that 4 missionaries be made available to Bishop Couppé for work on those islands which will be handed over to the Marists by the Sacred Congregation if they are not taken on (by the MSCs) without delay. The Marists, having first hesitated, now appear to be willing to accept, all the more so when Isabelle Island, watered by the blood of their martyrs, will be included with the rest. Bishop Couppé, however, does not want to give up this mission territory. On the other hand, Fr. Ilge writes that if the islands in question, which are or will become part of Germany's protectorate, are made over to another Congregation, we are likely to lose out on the monopoly of help (financial) set aside for the mission in this country, and something of our prestige, standing, with the German colonial administration.

The impossibility of providing 4 missionaries for these islands.

The Council, while not delaying over these issues, which it is not meant, anyway, to solve, and without allowing itself to be drawn into a situation which we cannot undertake with any hopes of success, confirms again its July 19 position that it is impossible for it to supply the missionaries requested, and that we must in the first place deal with the issues in those missions which we are presently in charge of and which themselves are experiencing a distressing absence of personnel; moreover we must consider the personnel in our novitiates and scholasticates, on which the future of the Society depends. And we are not forgetting the needs of our other houses which are all suffering through lack of sufficient and requisite personnel.

Dear Father,

Issoudun, January 17, 1892

1. I am sorry about your illness and that among several of your confrères also. Take care of yourself and don't do anything rash.

2. I am very saddened by the death of Cardinal Simeoni: he was so close to us!
3. Have you sent on my letter to Cardinal Sepiacci?
4. You can see for yourself from the way our Antwerp confrères have been acting with regard to the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart how dangerous it could be in a given moment if Issoudun, the centre of this work, were to depend totally on the Rome house. This is a very serious issue; let us look to the future. See to it that it is resolved in Issoudun's favour if we want to avoid the most weighty problems.
5. Have you asked for the favours I sought for myself?
6. You can see for yourself that enthusiasm for the missions has greatly waned. Yet at Antwerp Fr. Grinsven, the Novice Master, is very keen on going and Fr. Karsseleers, the bursar, as well, but who will replace them? We have nobody. Fr. Reyn thinks that they are absolutely needed in the house and I can well understand this. It's the same with Fr. Reynaud at Chezal-Benoît and Brother Mégret, who Fr. Piperon says he absolutely needs. Not being able to meet, then, the wishes of Propaganda for the time being, it would be best to leave things as they are in the present status quo for some years instead of handing over the whole archipelago of the Solomon Islands to the Marist Fathers. Let the Bishop be informed in writing about this and the whole matter arranged with him.
7. I am forwarding a letter which I received from Fr. Barral. It is in complete contrast to the memorandum sent to us in which he seemed delighted with the projected new contract. I don't understand the situation any more. I shall make sure not to send the telegram he wanted. I am forwarding as well to you a letter I had from Fr. Perriot which seems to contradict that of Fr. Barral, although the latter would appear to be saying that Fr. Jean-Baptiste agrees with him. Fr. Charles Bouvier writes to Fr. Morisseau informing him that he wants to return to Europe and will make every effort to be recalled by the Council. I though it best not to give this letter (from Perriot) to Fr. Morisseau, or share with the Council Fr. Barral's letter. You are the only one I am sharing it with. What is your view about all this? I answered Fr. Barral and tried to make him see the contradiction in his approach, telling him that having already asked for clarification from Rome and Quito about the proposed contract, we could not, then, take a definitive stance until the reply came back, and he would have to wait patiently in the meantime. What is your view on all of this?
8. I am forwarding a letter from Fr. Bontemps to you in which he requests official recognition from Propaganda; I understand that this is a requirement. Since Fr. Gaillard is going to join him this would, perhaps, be the moment to request the title of Prefect Apostolic for him (Bontemps). It's all the more a requirement when the Propagation of the Faith office in Paris looks upon him as such (Prefect Apostolic) and allots him funds accordingly.

Fr. Tréand has reached Sydney; I am forwarding his letter to you.

Cheerio, Fr. Jouët. Always yours ex intimo corde.

Issoudun, January 17, 1892

Dear Fr. Barral,

Your letter, which I have received just this minute, totally contradicts your earlier memorandum about the new contract in which you seemed to be fully enthusiastic, and your confrères also. What has gone on then? I officially submitted to Rome the contract project asking for clarification about the concerns I also drew to your attention. In reply it was said that the Archbishop had the right to commit successors, but the problem lay with the Quito government. Since, in keeping with the concordat, the President has the right to intervene in the appointment of the Sagrario parish priest, one would like to ascertain if he could disengage himself and his successors from this right in perpetuity. The Ambassador in Rome wrote to President Flores looking for an answer. And it was in the course of all these negotiations which we undertook at your instigation that you have done a volte-face. This cannot be serious. It is only when the answers have been provided and the issues clarified that we shall come to a definite decision. You must learn to wait, then, and not precipitate things. Stay where you are until new instructions come; do not compromise things in any way.

The reasons you put forward for staying in Sagrario are very worthwhile: these are our initiatives which have prospered, the contribution you are making in Quito, the flourishing Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the graves of our dear confrères who offered up their lives so that we might remain in Ecuador in flourishing circumstances, etc., etc. Yes, I have had petitions from gentlemen and ladies which are very supportive and witness to the great good-will they have for us, and the esteem in which we are held.

One may very properly include in the contract the proviso that if later on we find ourselves unable to remain at Sagrario, for reasons which at this moment cannot be foreseen and of which the Holy See will be the arbiter, then the contract would be disengaged from, without any indemnity on one part or the other. Have this declaration immediately above inserted in the envisioned contract.

If it were a question of going to Quito to set ourselves up there, that would be something else. But leaving the place given these new arrangements being presented to us, and given the certain likelihood of doing good there and developing our undertakings in Ecuador, this whole matter calls for considered reflection.

Pass on this letter to your confrères.

Cheerio, Fr. Barral; my good wishes to all.

2. A young man aged 18 was put forward for postulancy; he left the minor seminary when his studies began in order to look after his parents. Dear Fr. Jouët,

I received the memorandum which the Prussian Minister to the Holy See kindly forwarded to me. Be good enough on my behalf to thank His Excellency in a special way for his being so kind to us and for all the Imperial Government has already done for us, and promises still more to do in the future towards the prosperity and development of our missions. As for the Marshall Islands, I cannot see ourselves doing anything better than to continue in contact with the Propaganda Congregation on which we are totally dependent, being sent there by it; we only want to abide by their wishes on this issue.

The Minister (Prussian) accredited to the Holy See will make known to the Cardinal Prefect the reasons put forward in the memorandum and we accept in advance whatever the Holy Father's response will be. I cannot see any arrangement better than this.

On my behalf offer the Minister my best good wishes and regards asking him to continue with his kind concern. As for yourself, my best wishes in C.J.

Dear Father,

I have had your two letters and the enclosed documentation. Many thanks.

1. I am amazed that Fr. Pierre Barral is not being released straightaway from his vows since, according to a recent decision of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, the bishop of his native diocese is required to accept anyone who leaves a Congregation, even with an 'exeat'.

You are aware of Fr. Barral's hot-headedness and temperament, and over one year he can create a lot of mischief. Given his inclination to spend, if he doesn't bring himself to set up his own account, what are we going to do? It seems to me that there is no answer to this problem.

2. Fr. Bontemps has sent a further letter in which he mentions his journey to the Marshall Islands and its success. It is most interesting; I shall send it to you typed in manuscript form so that you can pass it on to Monsignor Persico, who can judge for himself. I believe the time has come to set up an Apostolic Vicariate, or at least a Prefecture in Micronesia. A Vicariate, given the prevailing circumstances, is more preferable in my view. Besides Fr. Gaillard, who has already left for those parts, I think that next September we can send some priests there together with Brothers, and Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart; the Vicariate would be then consolidated.

I am delighted to know that you are fully better. The Lord be praised!

Brother Alois Kaufmann's request.

2. A letter was read involving a request sent directly to the Pope by a lay brother, Alois Kaufmann, of Salzburg, who, unable to enter the Petite Oeuvre due to his advanced age, always cherished the wish to study for the priesthood. He asked the Holy Father to intervene on his behalf, and the petition came back from the Sacred Congregation to Fr. Jouët who then forwarded it to the mother house. The Council came to the conclusion that a precedent should not be created in accepting Kaufmann's request, and that he cannot be accepted for vows (as a lay brother) unless he fully forsakes his wish to be a priest in the Congregation.

Issoudun, February 13, 1892

Dear Fr. Lanctin,

Several of your confrères have written to me complaining about the amount of tobacco (pipe, cigarette) permitted for smoking by the Visitor (Fr. Piperon). Since it's not possible for me to write to each one, I am getting in touch with you and you in turn can speak to the interested parties.

I asked Fr. Piperon to deal as he thought fit with the smoking issue relative to the Antwerp and Tilburg houses. He then brought me up to date about the regulations he judged should be introduced in these houses. What he laid down seemed to me all the more reasonable because he allowed latitude for those who felt the need to smoke even several times a day on condition that they sought my permission, and this permission needed to be renewed each year until you are made into a Province.

In order to provide a satisfactory answer and cut short any difficulties, I delegate to you for the year all my powers, allowing you to decide, in keeping with the requests made to you, what degree of permission you grant relative to the amount of tobacco you consider meets the needs of each one, while remaining assured that no-one will abuse this concession. There are also complaints that Fr. Piperon restricted to six or seven the number of days when the community is allowed to smoke. This is incorrect. If one adds to the 13 feast days indicated in the local superior regulations, this makes 15 times in all, and, then, if you add the days left to the discretion of the local superior, you easily get to 24 in all, that's to say twice a month. It seems to me that this is more than adequate for those who haven't been in the habit of smoking. What do you think? You will see to it, moreover, that those who smoke daily do not do so in public. It occurs to me then that all our confrères should be happy with these observations.

Cheerio, Father; my best wishes in C.J. to you and everybody.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: I am about to let the Sacred Congregation know once more my wish to convene a Chapter as soon as possible during the course of this year. I have received the acceptance of all European and American houses with regard to the validations and (new) Constitutions, leaving only those from Sydney and Oceania which should not, I hope, be long in coming. Thereupon all the conditions requested by the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars will have been met.

Dear Father,

1. I am forwarding the documents you were looking for. The issue is too serious to be left unclarified.
2. As regards Fr. Pierre Barral, I forwarded to him the document you sent on to me from Rome.

Rescript 1777397. Since Barral did not include it in the documentation left with the MSC, through Fr. H. Peeters, it is to be supposed that he kept this rescript for himself.

He didn't give me his address so I shall have to forward this document to Fr. Grom in Watertown who will then send it to him (Barral). I thought he was in New Orleans, but I am not sure about this. In any event, the Archbishop there (New Orleans) has written to me asking for details about him (Barral).

This suggests that Barral spent some time in New Orleans.

3. The Cardinal's discourse marking the Silver Jubilee of the Petite Oeuvre cannot appear in the Annals until April as the March issue is already printed. In this respect do you think, as we had agreed, that you could write the history of the Petite Oeuvre? Take on this undertaking for the Annals; you are the only one who can do this...
4. Might you not also think of doing the same thing for the Association and the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to mark their Silver Jubilees?
5. And dear Fr. Vandel's life; have you given serious thought to it? It is indeed time for it to be done!
6. The Our Lady of the Sacred Heart publication went out of print quickly. Have you given the Roman printer the new corrected edition with the Latin text I left with Fr. Védère on my last visit to Rome? Be good enough to look into this.

Cheerio, Father. Wholly yours in C.J.

To His Grace Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

L 18920213B

Issoudun, February 13, 1892

Your Grace,

Having given serious consideration to the issue which has arisen, here's what I presume to suggest to Your Grace. I made inquiries from my two confrères, Fathers Piperon and Maillard, who have just made a canonical Visitation of Antwerp and Tilburg. They assured me that calm has been restored to all, and not one has refused to renew vows, and all, without exception, accepted the validation (of vows) and the new Constitutions. Nevertheless, they (Piperon and Maillard) took notice of the fact that everyone wanted to see a Chapter convoked as soon as possible, and if it were to be held towards the end of this year, everybody would be happy since they do not want it to be indefinitely postponed, having convinced themselves that Fr. Jouët did not want it to take place, using all his influence and diplomacy to have it put off altogether. They want, in particular, to appoint the Assistants and the Procurator in Rome. Fr. L. (likely Lanctin), when writing to Rome, did not at that time know the two conditions set down by Rome for the convocation of a new Chapter. I have already received the supportive replies from our European and North American houses, while those from Oceania are, I am sure, due to arrive shortly.

Given all these circumstances, it would perhaps be best not to have in mind an Apostolic Visitor who might not be yourself, or the Bishop of Sinope (the Archbishop's brother, his coadjutor) and thereupon the remedy might, very likely, be more of a problem than the issue itself.

Leaving aside Fr. L., and everything suggests he has changed his mind at the present moment if I am to judge by the report of Fathers Piperon and Maillard, nobody is thinking about, or wants, an Apostolic Visit; what is particularly sought at the moment is the convocation of a Chapter. In your reply, Your Grace, might you not suggest, as a way towards pacifying all, the convocation of a Chapter in the near future according to the new Constitutions? It would certainly be granted to us, and at the same time fully please all the confrères. I would request you to suggest that this meeting be presided over by the Apostolic Delegate; Your Grace will, it goes without saying, be designated. As all the Superiors will be part of this Chapter and know the views of their subjects, you can discuss things ex officio with them before going in to the meeting. By this means you will have come to know the direction of their thoughts and the reforms or improvements they are looking for. In this way the purpose of an Apostolic Visit will be more efficiently realized, without unrest and avoiding anything which might get people too greatly worked up. The main problem of concern among the participants at the last Chapter was the inappropriate and unbalanced changes they wanted to bring to the Constitutions, but these, being new, definitively approved and a copy of which I am forwarding to you, can no longer offer any reason for dispute or concern.

I should like, Your Grace, to emphasize that this Chapter be called as soon as possible.

I am, with deepest respect, Your Grace's most humble and obedient son in J.C.

Issoudun, February 16, 1892

Dear Father,

No, I am not at all indifferent, as you seem to think, about the setting up of the social kingdom of the Sacred Heart. Nobody desires it more than I do. You may be fully assured of that! And if time had been available to me I would have written long since a series of articles in our Annals on this important issue which I look upon as one of the most important undertakings of our Congregation. I have many times broached this matter and nobody would, or wanted to, undertake this initiative. Caught up as you were in your work, as well as the newspaper articles and the Antwerp revue, I held back from asking you to take in hand this section of our Annals. Since you could undertake such work, not only have I nothing against it, but I rather wholeheartedly approve your undertaking this work.

To prepare our Associates for the message of the social and universal reign of the Sacred Heart, you would do well to send on to us each month a serious and theological article on the Sacred Heart. For example, to begin with you might establish the inalienable rights of the Sacred Heart over all nations, first as God, then as redeemer and victor. When this viewpoint is convincingly set out, it will be easy for you to prove that Jesus Christ wants to reign over all hearts and that we, for our part, in response to the wishes of Jesus, must work towards setting up this kingdom of his love. The scriptures, the fathers, theology, the writing of St. Margaret Mary (Alacoque) will make available an excess of documents to you.

Once this viewpoint is rightly and commendably set out, you will, in other articles, go on to show that the kingdom of the Sacred Heart must become a reality in: 1, each member of the faithful; 2, every family, boarding school, etc. in every parish, diocese, and from there to every nation; while thereafter society at large by way of federation will achieve it by itself. Then, at that juncture, you can develop effectively the perpetual and universal cult of the Sacred Heart as it is understood by our archconfraternity. We shall be in full spate as regards our mission thrust. There then is the programme I am putting before you and as we understand it at Issoudun. To work, then, Father. Our subscribers, making themselves sensitively accustomed to this teaching, will end up conversant with and appreciative of this programme from the international federation of the Sacred Heart, and your particular publication can, without inconvenience to it, be fused, joined, with our Annals.

Please accept my sincere good wishes in C.J.

A former Don Bosco pupil.

2. A Don Bosco pupil was accepted as a lay brother. He has worked in paper and printing and there is sufficient good recommendation to offset his light-headedness and inconsistency.

Decision about Fr. Lavialle.

3. A number of observations made by Fr. Lavialle about the present Sacred Heart house régime (Issoudun) were considered. It was agreed that, given his character, it is not appropriate for him to be involved in the internal workings of the Petite Oeuvre and the day school, although it was appropriate given his role as official director (head master) of these two undertakings, that he should not be excluded from the normal running of the school and progress in study. It was particularly appropriate that he be kept informed of the number and quality of the teaching staff and students and that he should be invited, and allowed entry, to the examinations.

Proposal for the formation of counsellors at the Sacred Heart.

4. It was proposed that for a more efficient administration of the Sacred Heart house a Council consisting of those representing the General Administration and the particular administration of the house should be set up, its members meeting each month under the presidency of the Superior General, in default of personnel who would be responsible for the immediate guidance of the house.

L 18920222

Issoudun, February 22, 1892

Reverend Father,

Your letter to Fr. Vaudon has been passed on to me and the communication from Fr. Sarachaga which Fr. Vaudon will return to you. I have been asked to offer my views on the whole matter and I accept the invitation, however incompetent I may be in throwing some light on the matter. When the learned doctors speak, those not versed in the issue should stay silent, which they are not always wise enough to do.

Fr. Sarachaga's communication seems obscure to me. I not understand what is meant by "this act of homage" in relation to a Sacred Heart social contract. If we haven't made such an act (gesture), we renew every day our consecration to the Sacred Heart as our Congregation is wholly committed to Him. We preach about him as best we can; our missionaries work under his banner among the pagans. If, despite all this, we do all too little for the glory of the divine Heart, I can accept this without complaining, but again one must bear in mind the arrangement of divine Providence, its wish that we undertake work to glorify this same Heart through the most holy Virgin. If we have done little as from ourselves, it is certain that we have accomplished a great deal through the help of Our Lady who has been the great Sacred Heart missionary when coming before the world under the name of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

We must hope, and bring it about with all our resources, that the reign of the Sacred Heart, which is no other than the reign of God and Jesus Christ our Saviour, will come about and be an affirmed reality in individuals, families, governments and public authorities. Obviously this last is subordinate to two other factors: the Sacred Heart will not have an impact within governments or on governments if He does not make an impact first on individuals and families. One works, then, to bring about His social impact in spreading the devotion among individuals and families, in communities, parishes, dioceses, etc. It is this which we try to bring about as best we can through our works, and of which you are aware. When the opportune moment arrives, and having prepared for it, one can build into these works that which involves society and the social side of things already contained in germ within the devotion.

Fr. Sarachaga is greatly deluding himself as regards the Oblate priests associated with Fr. Matovelle, and the Saint Quentin Sacred Heart priests. Fr. Matovelle, since cutting himself off from the Saint Quentin priests, is left with 4 or 5 priests and some young students, and can it be said that we have here a serious Congregation likely to convert the world? I do not know well enough the Saint Quentin Sacred Heart priests to talk credibly about them, but the way they undertook and carried out their activities in Ecuador makes me doubt very much about them. Fr. Matovelle, whom I know, is certainly an able man, a very distinguished individual, but over-enthusiastic, having with the Jesuit Fr. Prouno created more commotion than commitment. What became of his social contract, the Caenca promise, etc.?

The basilica (Ecuador) has sunk in the water. Politically Ecuador is far from shining brightly; at the last presidential elections there were two political currents converging from a freemason Catholic and a liberal, the latter winning out through the support of the reigning liberal President, Flores. I don't know why the Catholic press persists in praising to the skies their little republic, which had its best days with Garcia Moreno, but which has declined a great deal since then, and wants to make itself more important than it really is by projecting itself above its other sister republics, which in many respects are superior to it. Lately I read in the Universe a tendentious article taken from the Monde, full of inaccuracies in order to promote subscriptions in favour of a railway which will never come to be and which, on the witness of Mr. Flores himself, is an impossibility. Do not expect integrity from this quarter! As for the White Fathers and the Premonstratensians, they are solemnly consecrated to the Sacred Heart, and no more than that. They do what we undertake as a principle, what we solemnly undertake when making our vows and renewing them each year, what we do more simply each day at morning and evening prayer, and in reciting our Sacred Heart invocations at the beginning and end of all our undertakings. Let others do better! Ultinam omnes prophetent, aemulamini charismata meliora (1 Cor. 12, 21). Nevertheless, for all that, our role is attractive enough and not to be under-estimated too much. As regards our Chapter of last year, we have all been deflated both on one side and the other, and it is best to say nothing about it when one can say nothing constructive at the moment. To offer observations on this issue is likely to trouble some people and would only hold us back from realizing our wishes and compromise the success of the negotiations actually pending.

Forgive me, Father, for speaking to you so freely.

All good wishes to you in Sanctissimo Corde Jesu.

J.F. Morisseau, MSC.

Chevalier himself adds to Morisseau's letter:

If the proposal I put to you for our Annals, Father, is not acceptable, ask Fr. Deidier to undertake it on my behalf if it is possible for him to do so. If not, let there be no more casting of stones at us.

1. Thank you for the encyclical which you sent on to me.

Leo XIII's Sollicitudo Rerum on the relationship between French Catholics and the Republic.

2. I have had a reply from Antwerp to my complaint, and it was without any ulterior motive that the editor of the Annals left out what you rightly complained about and it will not happen again. I referred the matter to Fr. Reyn, renewing my complaints, and demanding an explanation. He replied that he hadn't the time in this instance to read the proofs and it was left to Fr. Dezpresse who thought he was doing things properly and who, following my letter, was blamed (by Reyn). Poor Fr. Dezpresse, as you know, lacks judgment and didn't act through any malice when leaving out these sections, promising to be more careful another time. I myself thought I had already informed you about this; pardon me; I am sometimes so preoccupied and rushed off my feet.

3. Brother Laliaux is being called up for military service. He has only one more month before he is called to the colours. Before putting himself forward for the subdiaconate we asked him, and his family who have some property, to place it in writing that in the event of his leaving the Congregation, he would not demand anything in the way of compensation. There you have an explanation of the facts, dictated by necessity. It is the equivalent of a patrimony and I do not believe that there is any irregularity involved.

4. As for your 'Month of the Sacred Heart', when do you think you will publish it? There's time left if we want it to appear by the month of June; our associates are looking for a book like this and yours would meet their wishes and greatly please them. Please answer.

5. And it's high time for Fr. Vandel's life to be published. All his friends who are alive are calling out for it. You have all the documentation. Are you in a position to have it published in the very near future? Please answer.

6. I hope that the terrible project aimed at religious associations which has led to the dismissal of the minister will remain a long time on the files... utinam! (may it be so!).

7. See to it that you obtain the right or privilege for Issoudun to associate with itself all our three archconfraternities. I have made clear to you how necessary it is for the future. Please reply about this.

8. Do you think you can obtain some concessions in favour of the priests associated with us, and, also, for the Sacred Heart Third Order? Please reply about this also.

Cheerio, Father.

Fr. Derichemont at Watertown puts forward the scholastic Royet for profession and the lay brother Beathy; it was stated that these two brothers should themselves ask to be professed and reports should be sent on about their suitability.

The ratification of a proposal to purchase submitted already by Fr. Reyn to the Council.

2. Fr. Reyn, considering that it was an opportune moment to buy a local property, proposed to acquire it on behalf of the house in order to rent it to the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, facilitating thereby the establishment of these religious at Antwerp where they are needed. While the Antwerp community is burdened with considerable debts, although its resources are equally considerable, nevertheless it is to be presumed that it will meet this outlay in a reasonably short amount of time. It is, accordingly, for this reason that Fr. Reyn's proposal was accepted at the previous Council meeting, and now at this one it becomes ratified.

3. The six-monthly accounts of the European houses were presented by the General Bursar. They would appear to be properly set up.

I understand how worthwhile your presence is in New Guinea given the absence of the venerable Archbishop of Cyr but, just the same, I very much regret that you are not returning to Europe at the present time, because you are greatly expected. The interests of your beloved mission could only profit (from your visit) in every way. Do not delay in coming if it is possible for you. I doubt if Fr. Tréand, who is in Sydney, would find it possible to replace you straightaway. Nevertheless, if it's feasible, I would be in favour. See to it in any event that you come to us as soon as possible, accompanied by one or two little natives, since this last is an absolute requirement for the success of your European visit. You would work marvels with them. I hope that divine Providence will lead and help you to make this trip which to me seems so desirable in every respect.

Bring along with you the approval of our confrères, priests and brothers for the new Constitutions and, as well, the acceptance of the validations.

Approval of a wall as part of the Antwerp house enclosure.

2. Since the Antwerp house is no longer closed in on one side following the opening of a new road which claimed this part of the property, Fr. Dear Father,

1. Thank you for your letter and the enclosed decisions granted by the Congregation of Rites. You will take note of the expenses involved and Fr. Védère will include them in the invoices he will be forwarding for the upkeep of the students and the house.

2. The clarifications I sought from you about qualifications (academic) have more to do with the future than the present. Following on the replies made to you, let us say no more about it for the present and leave things as they are.

3. I don't know, my friend, what tensions there are between us! I am not aware of anything. We try to do everything for the best, you and my confrères here in Issoudun. We try to sort out the difficulties, look for explanations in those areas which seem to be obscure, and clear up problems. In what then, may I ask, do you see tension(s). Please take note of the most cordial relations which have always held between yourself and myself! We have had enough problems from the side of the Chapter opponents without stirring up some more gratuitously. Let us keep together more than ever, something which is very much a requirement in face of the difficult times we are passing through.

4. The military requirements are about to stir up more problems for us of a serious nature. The war minister has laid it down that Prefects should arrive unannounced and at intervals in the major seminaries to make certain that all the conscripted students are present. The Archbishop of Bourges requires that all our young men who are called (for service) should be resident in the major seminary. There arises, in consequence, serious concern about our young men's vocations. Besides, we have some novices who are subject to the military law (of conscription). The Archbishop is insisting that they should be in his major seminary. How does this fit in with the novitiate? What are we to do? We are then very distraught and embarrassed.

5. Have you had any news from Quito?

6. And what about the biography of Fr. Vandel?

NB: What do you think of the new, more complete, with Latin texts, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart volume? Should it be left as it is? If in the affirmative, be good enough to look it over. I really don't know where we are heading towards with such a law as this. It is a pity that we cannot have beside the major seminary, if not in the seminary itself, our novitiate and scholasticate. Council Meeting, March 7, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Píperon, Maillard, Morisseau, Fr. Batard, General Bursar.

1. Fr. General read a letter in which Bishop Navarre made known that by virtue of the general delegation he had received (from Chevalier) he accepted the vows of several confrères, even following on the validation rescript. Doubts having been expressed about the validity of the above-mentioned delegation and, consequently, the validity of the vows; the Archbishop now asks what is to be done. The Council is of the view that such a delegation was unconstitutional because acceptance for vows is reserved to it (the Council), and by that very fact is invalid otherwise. The vows taken by virtue of such delegation (that of the Bishop) necessarily involve nullity. In order to sort out matters, the Council accepts for profession those who invalidly renewed their vows, given the conditions laid down below. Bishop Navarre, on receiving the present Conciliar declaration, will notify the interested parties that they must make their profession once more, after which he will forward to us the names and the dates of the renewed vow-taking.

For the future, until the Holy See decides otherwise, when there's renewal of vows or the taking of perpetual vows by a brother or priest on the missions, the Superior or Apostolic Vicar, acting as Superior, will forward the request for approval to the Superior General in sufficient time for the General Council's decision to be made available well beforehand.

Brother Vendelin Eichinger accepted for the novitiate.

2. Given Fr. Meyer's good report as head of the Salzburg novitiate, Vendelin Eichinger, aged 17, was admitted to the habit and postulancy from the 16th of November.

Brother Volkerius Deen was accepted for perpetual vows and Brother Gustave d'Heer for renewal of three-yearly vows.

3. Given the supportive commendation of Fr. Lanctin, Superior at Tilburg, Brother Volkerius Deen, aged 32, was accepted for perpetual vows on finishing his second three-yearly commitment on the 21st of the current month. Gustave d'Heer Pierre was, moreover, admitted to renewal of his three-yearly vows.

Decision on Fr. Linckens' history of the Petite Oeuvre.

4. It was decided, following Fathers Píperon and Maillard's observations on the history of the Petite Oeuvre by Fr. Linckens, published in the Belgium Annals, that the work should not be published in book form because of its inexactitudes and incorrect statements.

Fr. Tréand authorized to acquire land in Sydney.

5. Fr. Tréand, having made it known that the acquisition of ground for construction in Sydney was an urgent issue to be decided without much delay, the Council gave its approval despite the fact that he had not forwarded the plan of the property he wanted to buy, or provided an approximate price for it. But he did expressly and formally lay down that the Sydney house would meet all the expenses involved in the purchase, the mother house or the Society not being required to come to its help financially.

1. There is a surfeit of material for the Annals. Some letters from Fr. Vandel are being shortened, and half the Dutch brother's letter from New Guinea.

2. The Archbishop knows very well that we have nobody to replace Messrs. Personnot and Chenu and the presence of these gentlemen is absolutely necessary for the continuation of our work at Chezal-Benoît.

3. You requested an article from me for the May issue (of the Annals). I shall do as you say, but on condition that you will not request another from me for 10 years. I am thinking of writing about Mary's Kingdom and that of the devil...

I hope you are getting better.

Our good wishes to Their Lordships and the senior curates. I have written to Boulogne about Fr. Druon and to the Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne.

Foundation Trust at Antwerp.

1. Fr. Reyn has been in contact about a foundation trust arising from Madame la Dourairière Chamberline's will, being a funding towards a perpetual service on behalf of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart associates, to be celebrated each year in the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart chapel, Antwerp. Since the Constitutions do not allow us to accept such perpetual foundations, one may advise the parents of the deceased to endow with this foundation some work, hospice or other public amenity which, by way of the benefice being made available to it, would, therefore, undertake each year to send the requisite amount of money for the service in question.

Setting up a civic committee for a property acquired by the Antwerp house.

2. Fr. Reyn, advised by lawyers, recommends setting up a civic society or group as legal owners of the property which he has bought, namely Fathers Reyn, Vandel, Piperon, Maillard. Besides these four, the Society, in keeping with Belgian law, will include those enjoying (benefiting from) interest. The house is intended for the use of the Notre Dame Sisters, two of whom will be named as interest-sharers.

The putting aside of a fifth financial quota for the mother house from mission offerings.

1. At Fr. General's suggestion this question, brought up several times already, was again broached, as to whether or not it was proper that the Issoudun mother house should take a specific quota for itself from contributions intended for the missions which are forwarded by mail. The Council agreed:

1. that the general house had to meet considerable publicity expenses in its undertakings, and the missions profit and benefit according to the quota received;

2. the contributions intended for the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association and the general undertakings of the Congregation are often directed to the benefit of the missions through that same publicity;

3. the mother house meets the greater part of the expenses involved in the education of the Petite Oeuvre students who are destined for the missions;

4. the general expenses of the administration are greatly increased by the varied continuous contact it needs to have with the missionaries or with others as regards the missions;

5. the mother house provides for priests on the missions' mass stipends at 2 francs each, whereas it could well hold on to part of the offerings for its other undertakings in having the masses celebrated at less high a stipend; it holds to the view, however, that, given these considerations, the mother house is entitled to take a portion of these offerings which arrive from its correspondents, without other houses of the Institute, who haven't the same financial responsibilities to meet, being authorized as from this example to do the same thing. As regards amounts, a fifth taken from the above-mentioned contributions would not be considered excessive. Consequently, for the future, 20% will be taken off (mission contributions).

Request by Brother Fillodeau for tonsure and minor orders.

2. The Council, aware that Brother Fillodeau could be called to the colours if he isn't ordained to the subdiaconate, agreed that he could meanwhile receive tonsure and minor orders.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I am about to leave on a visit to our Spanish houses. I hope to be back here on Saturday.

I don't think it's necessary to advise officially beforehand the Archbishop. I leave that to your discretion.

Many thanks for your latest letter and the news you had for me. Look after yourself, and be careful. We prayed earnestly yesterday for the Archbishop whose health is of so much concern to us also. Our young men have done their examinations; three have been put back and one judged to be unsatisfactory.

Cheerio, my friend; greetings to their Lordships.

Dear Fr. Barral,

We find that for the third time Mr. Daniel is writing to us requesting the 3,000 francs owed to him by the Quito house; I wrote about this to you on several occasions. We are quite surprised that you have neither replied or sent the money. The Rev. Fr. Superior (General), therefore, is authorizing the same Mr. Daniel to send you the bill, most likely by telegram, and you will of course pay the bill for this last also (the telegram). He has asked me to let you know about this, which is what I am doing.

My respectful and cordial greetings to all the confrères.
Be assured always of my religious devotedness in Sanctissimo Corde Jesu.

I am still awaiting the resolution of the problems which I put before the Archbishop. I mourn the death of Brother Nicolas.

Issoudun, March 25, 1892

Dear Father,

1. Many thanks for your two letters. The Archbishop's condition makes him forget quite a lot. As soon as I could see I was weighted with problems, I would go straightaway to consult him, even to the smallest details, and all I needed to do, for the most part, was to follow his advice. Both his letters and mine are proof of this.

2. If there have been indiscretions committed at Bourges, whose fault is it? When the letter from Cardinal Verga arrived the Archbishop obliged me to absolute secrecy, even with reference to the assistants, and there it is – his entourage came to know about it and did not keep it to themselves. Silence was a prerequisite, all the more so when as much as three-quarters of the complaints were brought to the attention of the Prefect of the Sacred Congregation last October, that's to say before our Constitutions were promulgated and the measures undertaken by the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. I am persuaded that the discontented of some time ago are no longer now of the same persuasion, and would not make the same protestations today. The Archbishop is as aware as myself that the complaints being made at that time only arose from one individual to the chagrin of his confrères. His Grace knows this individual about whom he thinks the worst, advising me to send him away from our Society two or three years ago. I replied to His Grace this morning, suggesting two choices, one of them yours.

3. It's three years and more since I pressed His Grace to begin initiatives towards our purchasing of Chezal-Benoît, but he always replied that the Government was opposed to it. This again is forgetfulness on his part which is due to his illness.

4. I cannot understand at all why the Archbishop is being informed that we are not helping the diocese's parish priests; given our small numbers we are doing more than might be expected. Reuilly, Lury, Vierzon, Bourges, etc. can speak for themselves about our meeting their needs.

5. I would very much like it also if there was a little more discretion exercised with regard to the Archbishop. Where was the need for Fr. N. to speak of our Society's problems when they are not quite like what he thinks and states and, indeed, asserting that I bring the arbitrary into our administration. If anyone is a slave to the Council's decisions, it's myself. Let's hope and pray, my friend; the Sacred Heart, I hope, will look after us and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will not allow us to become victimized.

Cheerio, Fr. Vaudon.
Wholly yours in C.J.

L 18920325A

To His Grace Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, March 25, 1892

Your Grace,

I am also as embarrassed as Your Grace in replying to your letter which I am honoured to receive. I had understood, together with the assistants, that calling for a Chapter in keeping with the new Constitutions, with all its members being consulted by the Apostolic Delegate, was the only means of bringing about full reconciliation. The Sacred Congregation thinks otherwise. I have no more to say.

Following the acceptance of validation, and given some changes introduced to the Constitutions, things calmed down and peace and harmony appear to prevail at the moment, particularly so when everyone is hoping that a Chapter will take place towards the end of the year; this is information I am receiving from our houses where opposition was strongest.

For the rest, Your Grace, the present problems are being greatly exaggerated. Fr. Lanctin's letter, which stirred up this latest storm, was written before news came about the definitive approval of the Constitutions. Since then, all has been quite calm. If Your Grace, before he replies to Cardinal Verga, wishes to be better informed about the situation, you might, perhaps, invite, one after the other, the Superiors of all our European houses to Bourges and enquire of them sub secreto what measures should be taken to satisfy in general everybody. Following this investigation Your Grace would have the basis of a reply for Rome. If Your Grace would like to meet the assistants, they are at your service, also myself.

Here's another idea which I put to Your Grace. It occurs to me that if the Cardinal Prefect of the Sacred Congregation affirms that things are at present in order and satisfactory, then everyone only needs to accept (agree), while those who do not want to do so would be released from their vows. I am virtually certain myself, however, that not even one would ask to leave the Society.

All this commotion has been stirred up by a certain priest lawyer in Rome named Rudini whom the adversaries (of Chevalier) had chosen to make their case for them and achieve victory. This priest, although well aware that it wasn't in the least likely, always boosted these opponents with the assurance of a complete victory.

Please accept, Your Grace, my most respectful regards in C.J.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, March 26, 1892

Dear Fr. Jouët,

It does seem to me that I always reply to your letters which require from me a personal response.

1. Yes, we did receive your rescript with reference to St. Joseph, model and patron, etc. We shall conform to it completely in accordance with the requisite recommendations. Nothing from now on will be printed carrying the title St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart. Our other houses are being advised about this.

2. Together with Fr. Piperon, I have just finished the canonical visitation of our two Spanish houses. We are quite pleased. The Barcelona house is splendidly renovated, together with its beautiful cloisters. It's a great pity that such a splendid establishment has only two people there when it could easily take 150. France, which is becoming more and more aggressively hostile (to the Church), will perhaps soon compel us to find refuge in Spain.

3. We shall consider, following our next Council meeting (they take place every Wednesday), the full presentation of the facts about Brother Laliaux. Have you finally clarified matters concerning the indult authorizing us to ordain our members "ad titulum mensae communis" (under the right and jurisdiction of a religious community)? Can it apply to all the bishops in those jurisdictions where we have houses, or quite simply to the Archbishop of Bourges only? This is a serious issue since there are canonical penalties involved.

4. Would you consider an article to mark the Annals' Silver Jubilee and, indeed, the Silver Jubilee of the Petite Oeuvre? It is fitting that you should have responsibility for this undertaking and, although I have brought it up with you ten times, you have never replied to me, and nor even when I asked you to write something about the life of Fr. Vandel.

5. You were also asked to request indulgences and privileges for our priestly undertaking, which languishes, and for the Sacred Heart Third Order. You continue to remain silent, yet these issues remain important for the successful outcome of our undertakings. And the Sacred Heart Scapular; what's happening about that?

6. Here's an important issue. Last October Fr. Lanctin wrote confidentially to Cardinal Verga pointing out the problems and issues which wracked the Society. He informed him that being in charge of students as Superior of Tilburg, he could not, in conscience, advise them to make perpetual vows, given what little guarantee the Congregation is offering. He requests then the Cardinal to send an Apostolic Visitor, with the comments likely to be made to him forcing him to take serious measures about restoring confidence, calm and the unity which does not exist at this moment; and, to his way of thinking, the calling of a Chapter, something I do not want, would be the most efficacious procedure to undertake. Cardinal Verga, a month ago, sent Fr. Lanctin's letter to the Archbishop of Bourges, asking him for his advice on the measures to be undertaken. The Archbishop asked me to come and see him and he showed me the complete letter while enjoining on me absolute secrecy. But, unfortunately, the Archbishop himself did not keep quiet about it, speaking to his immediate circle and, outrageously, the issue became known in Bourges. His Grace had me come here and made me aware of what was going on. It's unforgivable! I replied to His Grace:

1. That Fr. Lanctin was an unhappy, imbalanced, individual who should not be taken too seriously!

2. He had written to Rome anticipating the promulgation of the Constitutions and the measures undertaken by the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. Following on that, things had changed for the better, people had calmed down and at the present time Fr. Lanctin would not have written anything like this.

3. In my view, no importance should be given to these complaints and an apostolic investigation would do more harm than good, particularly so if carried out by the local ordinary(ies) or an unsympathetic Visitor.

4. When all the validations and modifications to our Constitutions will have been received, let the Sacred Congregation then decide to have a Chapter meeting called in keeping with the new Constitutions, presided over by the Archbishop (of Bourges) as apostolic delegate, setting out in advance the issues to be addressed, perhaps in this way finding an answer to the problems raised. But in my view it would be best not to take any notice of Fr. Lanctin's complaints, whose behaviour over two or three years ago merited his being sent away from the Society, this being also His Grace's view.

The Archbishop of Bourges in his own reply to Cardinal Verga opted for a Chapter. But at the present moment the Cardinal writes to Your Grace that the Sacred Congregation would much prefer if a Chapter were not called, requesting Your Grace to set out the appropriate measures to restore peace.

Yesterday, the Archbishop forwarded this latest reply to me, asking me what procedures should be suggested by him. His own view was to discuss matters with all the Superiors of our European houses and have them meeting him in Bourges one after the other. I replied that I would follow his advice if he wanted it to be like this, but I still maintained my own view that no attention should be paid to these latest complaints, and the Cardinal should be advised to write stating that the issues were being dealt with by the Sacred Congregation at the present time, and those who did not wish to submit could ask for release from their vows and their request would be granted. Nobody, such is my conviction, would ask to leave.

Let us pray and keep on praying, Father. The Sacred Heart will help us to win out despite all these devilish machinations. He (the devil) is outraged by all the good being accomplished by our Society, especially on the missions.

Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

A problem arising from putting forward Brother Laliaux for the subdiaconate.

1. Having been put forward for the subdiaconate without making perpetual vows, the Procurator (Jouët) wishes to make it known that this is irregular. The Council, being of the view that the Superior (Chevalier) had the right to have this brother ordained, in keeping with the rescript granting him the authority to present for Holy Orders the Congregation's subjects, with the approval of their dioceses of origin, decided to make an appeal to the Holy See presenting clearly the facts as they have occurred, and petitioning for a validation where unconsciously a point of law has been overlooked.

Brother Hubert Simons accepted for renewal of three-yearly vows.

2. Brother Hubert Simons, a native of Quito, requested that his three-year vows, which expire on June 30 of this year, should be renewed, and the Council, following Fr. Barral's, his Superior, supportive recommendation, granted his request.

Those due for ordination should undergo an examination within the Congregation prior to that required by the local bishop.

3. The Council, on coming to know that the Archbishop of Bourges had strongly criticized the lack of knowledge in a number of the Congregation's students when undergoing examination prior to ordination, and effectively coming to the conclusion that several candidates were being put forward for ordination when their studies were interrupted, incomplete and without the requisite solid intellectual formation, decided that for the future those being ordained would not be put forward for the diocesan examination until they had initially satisfied competent priests of their houses of residence, as well as the General Council's approval on having the results of the internal examination submitted to it.

A decision about the Memorare to St. Joseph.

4. On the occasion when the title of St. Joseph, model and friend of the Sacred Heart was about to be replaced by that of St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, the decision was taken that the "Remember St. Joseph" should be recited thrice daily after the "Remember Our Lady" for the intentions commended to the archconfraternities of the Society. It will be left out after the litanies of the Sacred Heart at morning prayer.

Distribution to the missions of excess revenue at the Sydney procure and from offerings made available in Europe.

5. The Council reconsidered the February 4, 1891 decision about the sharing of left-over revenue at the Sydney procure for the Society's (Oceania) missions. The Council, taking into consideration that the Randwick procure (house) in Sydney had been made over to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart in the interest of the missions, reaffirms what had already been laid down, namely that the left-over revenue of the said procure, that is to say what's left over each year when all the expenses have been met, will as a result of the decision now being taken be divided in two:

1, a quarter of what is left over will be held in reserve for special needs of the mission when undergoing financial difficulty; 2, the other three quarters will be shared out as follows: two fifths to each of the missions of New Guinea and New Pomerania (New Britain, New Ireland later), and to the less important Gilbert Islands mission only a fifth.

If a quarter of the reserves is not used during the year, this will become capitalized and after five years the General Council will decide on the use of these capital funds. It was also agreed that the different contributions received in our houses for our missions as such, and centralized at the mother house, should be forwarded to the Sydney procure to be shared, as outlined above, as three quarters of the Sydney procure's excess revenue. Where it happens that a mission can financially suffice of itself without the need for these contributions, advice will be proffered about a new form of sharing.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, March 30, 1892

Dear Father,

I am forwarding to you this letter from Fr. Barral which you will return to me letting me know what you think about it. Tomorrow I shall be writing to you about Brothers Ceresi and Annibali.

Vincent Ceresi was born in Rome, February 25, 1869, and at this time was studying in Rome where he would be ordained next year, July 2, 1893. He died in Rome, March 2, 1958; a friend of Pius XII, he wrote a classic life of St. Francis de Sales.

Angelo Annibali, born at Oliveto, 1866, went home to his family from the Rome scholasticate in 1889 for health reasons, and then went on to become a diocesan priest.

The Council has considered the requests of Brothers Ceresi and Annibali.

1. Two issues arise with regard to Ceresi: that of support (financial) and domicile in Rome. As for the first see what financial help you can make available to him. The mother house, no longer able to meet his needs, is unable to undertake this responsibility and, accordingly, authorizes you to provide 300 or 400 francs yearly to his parents, if it's possible for you to do so (1,000 or 1,330 euros roughly).

2. It is quite impossible for us to promise him that he will remain in Rome once he is ordained priest. He must be wholly of that disposition whereby he is prepared to go where his Superiors deem it opportune. This is an absolute prerequisite for a religious who has taken a vow of obedience. Make sure he understands all this so that he will not come along later and make a case.

As for Annibali, quite obviously he no longer belongs to our Society since his temporary vows have expired for the past two or three years. He would be within his rights covering this period if he so wished to stay in the Congregation, on the supposition that his being sent away by Fr. Guyot was not canonical. Moreover, he had himself ordained to the priesthood without adverting us and, consequently, he belongs to the Bishop and his diocese. In the third place this young priest is laid up since he is permanently in hospital under the care of the Saint John of God Brothers. Why, then, should we burden ourselves with an invalid who, perhaps, will never be cured? What illness is it, how serious is it?

3. It seems to be against our Constitutions that we cannot send away from the Society for health reasons a professed in temporary vows because it is laid down that after perpetual vows nobody can be sent away because of health reasons. Accordingly, before perpetual vows are taken, one could send somebody away, since otherwise this last statement would be nonsensical.

4. If Fr. Annibali is now quite well and can provide doctor's certification stating that his condition does not present a problem, he may, in consequence, ask to enter, and the Council will consider it and provide an answer.

5. I am forwarding you the brief memorandum which you requested on behalf of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars with reference to Brother Laliaux.

6. The Archbishop has informed me that he doesn't know what to say in reply to Cardinal Verga, or what course of action he should recommend to him in order to bring about peace and unity among us, and would need to meet and discuss the matter with me. Let me know what you think about all of this and what I should say to the Archbishop. I shall not be going to Bourges until I have had your reply. You write on your part, also, to the Archbishop letting him know what you think, and informing him how you had this issue brought to your attention. I think that if the Sacred Congregation, or more properly Cardinal Verga, replies that things have been settled, and the dissidents have only to submit in a responsible manner, nobody thereupon will want to leave the Society, and peace will be restored; otherwise if they were being given to understand that new measures were afoot, heads would be set to work, problems would arise again and continue.

Cheerio, Father.

Council Meeting, April 6, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General, Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard, Assistants, Fr. Batard, General Bursar.

Affidavit to be left by missionaries leaving for foreign lands.

1. The Council, on giving consideration to those missionaries departing for the distant New World and Oceania to take up permanent residence and, consequently, unable to return easily to deal with business issues which require their urgent presence, decided that for the future they should, before departure, provide a signed statement according to which they can be legally represented when the need arises.

A request to increase Fr. Jouët's contribution (at the Rome house) turned down.

2. The Superior General read a letter from Fr. Jouët in which he asked that the contribution for the upkeep of the Rome scholastics be raised from 1,000 to 1,200 francs. The Council, taking into consideration that in the other houses of the Society the fees, costs, were no more than 600 francs, the mother house, now being asked for this increased sum and already excessively burdened financially, had no option but to turn down this request.

The building of a church at Canet-de-Mar postponed.

3. Fr. Carrière, Superior at Canet-de-Mar, having begun to undertake building a church without the requisite funding, the Council was of the view that, given the uncertainty and the threats overhanging the future, this undertaking should once more be shelved.

Financial aid for Fr. Godinoux's family.

4. The General made it known that Fr. Godinoux had requested financial help for his widowed sister-in-law who had to look after three children. The Council members were somewhat surprised by such a request, given the fact that he, Fr. Godinoux, who had just made his first vows, had said nothing whatever beforehand about having such an obligation to be met. Nevertheless, he was granted 350 francs annually to be taken from the mass stipends he would be celebrating. It was decided that as regards this issue the aid placed at the disposal of an individual for his family's benefit should normally be provided by the house to which he belongs and which benefits from his work.

5. There followed acceptance of certain members to vows and the taking of the habit:
Brother Royet accepted for temporary vows.

A. Brother Royet at Watertown (USA) at his request, and on the commendation of his Superior, was accepted for temporary (three-yearly) vows.

Brothers Dionysius, Wilhelm, Leon and Dominicus accepted for renewal of vows (three-yearly).

B. Likewise, at their request and with the favourable support of the Antwerp Novice Master, the lay brothers Wilhelm Schmitz, Dionysius (Adrian van Roessel), Léon (Nicolas Haman) and Dominic (Johannes Kop) were accepted for renewal of three-yearly vows which expire on the 21st of the current month.

Postulant lay brothers.

C. There followed, given the favourable report of the above-mentioned Novice Master, acceptance of the habit for the following lay brothers:

1. Hitarius (Jan Zwarthoed), born at Volendam, Holland, March 2, 1858.
2. Cornelius (Arnoldus Zwarthoed), born at Volendam, Holland, March 25, 1869.

3. Benedictus (Jan Kloos) born at Volendam, Holland, March 25, 1869.
4. Bernardinus (Jan van Heugter), born Lierop, Holland, April 8, 1859.
5. Basilius (Jan Maas), born Lierop, Holland, September 6, 1860.
6. Albertus (Adrian van Heemsbergen), born at Bergen op Zoom, July 24, 1851.
7. Damianus (Jacques Mabert), born Malines, Belgium, May 30, 1858.

A circular presenting different Council decisions.

Next, consideration was given to a circular letter already submitted to the consultors, dealing with the presentation of Council decisions. The following is the thrust of it:

Dear Reverend Fathers,

The Congregation's Council during the course of the current year, and that which has passed by, has taken several decisions which it considers appropriate for notification to all the Society's houses: this is the aim of this circular letter.

- I. A decision with regard to acceptance for temporary and perpetual vows, May 4, 1891.

The Council, conscious of its need to decide on admission to vows at a requisite length of time before their being taken, and having in mind also the need for the novices to follow the Constitutions and take the measures they consider appropriate as regards the administration of the estate which is theirs, or for the management of any other goods or valuables owned, and again that the Consultors have the freedom to acquire the knowledge needed to deliberate on the candidate's merits, it was, thereupon, decided that in future those wishing to enter should send their request for entry to the Superior General two months before perpetual profession, whether it is temporary vows to be taken or renewed, or perpetual profession. The members who find themselves in far away countries, for example the Oceania missions, should make their request earlier, sending it on five or six months beforehand, so that the notification of their request should arrive in good time. Every request of this kind should be written and signed by the appellant and ratified by the respective Superior who, otherwise, will provide all the requisite information towards making a judgment about the candidate, his piety, health, ability etc.

- II. Decisions with regard to Petite Oeuvre students, July 12, 1891.

1. Admission to Petite Oeuvre

1. The Council, having in mind that according to our Constitutions selecting candidates for the Petite Oeuvre should be discretionary and restricted to a small, choice, number of students exhibiting signs of a genuine vocation, and having in mind, as well, that the shortage of personnel in the Congregation did not guarantee many teachers and directors, it was decided that the utmost circumspection and prudence should be exercised as regards acceptance of candidates in all the Society's houses. The total number of pupils in a house should not exceed 10 students for each class without the authorization, otherwise, of the major Superiors. In order to arrive at this number, one has to take into consideration whether or not there are sufficient resources to meet the requirements of the accepted students right through to the priesthood. Moreover, it is necessary to demand from the students such guarantees of having a serious vocation as would be considered a prerequisite, and from their parents that assurance of good-will and acceptability which would allow them to relinquish the thought of their child as a support for the family.

2. Decision concerning student support

The practice of according to benefactors who requested it the opportunity to support (financially) their chosen candidates, has the advantage of stimulating financial support for their protégés, but very often it is to the detriment of the enterprise in general, and to the great disappointment of the benefactors themselves when their protégé leaves the Petite Oeuvre and requests their financial support in order to follow another calling. For the foregoing reasons, and others besides, it has been decided that in future no youngster shall have a named and specific patron.

3. Decision as regards acceptance of Petite Oeuvre students to the novitiate

They need to be examined quite rigorously before they are accepted, especially those who have not fully satisfied requirements as regards piety, health, intelligence, good judgment, etc. When the postulant's vocation would appear to be doubtful, he should be sent home to his family, and only be readmitted after a requisite amount of time has passed enabling one to assess whether or not he has a true feeling for the Society.

- III. A decision taken to have those being presented for ordination given a preparatory examination in their respective houses before they are presented for the Bishop's ordination, March 30, 1892.

The Council, having in mind that a number of students put forward for ordination did not fully satisfy the diocesan examiners when presented to them, has taken the decision that in future, for the well-being of the Society, those due for ordination will be examined beforehand by competent people in their respective houses, and they will not be put forward for the Bishop's examination unless they have satisfied in the previous examination the local Council of their respective houses; besides nobody will be put forward for orders without an accompanying letter signed by the Superior General.

- IV. Decision with respect to the Annals in countries outside France, November 11, 1891.

In order to safeguard unity of presentation as well as correct doctrine and exactitude of historical facts in the Annals published outside France, it is laid down:

- a, that all the Annals are published under the aegis of the Superior General, but this does not prevent the local Superior from appending his signature, either as representing Fr. General or as local supervisor of the publication with whom the associates negotiate;

b, the more significant contributions from the point of view of doctrine, the Association, the Congregation, or the Petite Oeuvre, should be submitted beforehand to the General for approval;

c, articles taken from the French or other Annals should be reproduced if not in their integrity at least without that kind of omission or alteration which might take from their original meaning and thereby give rise to justified complaints. Moreover, care should be taken to point out the original source of the article according to the adage 'unicuique suum' (to each his own).

V. Decision to change the title given to St. Joseph, March 2, 1892.

The Holy See has changed the title heading, St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, replacing it with St. Joseph, model and patron of the friends of the Sacred Heart, endorsing the new title as before with 100 days' indulgence. Consequently, the Council has decided that this new invocation should be introduced in all the Institute's houses. Given the decree making the new title obligatory, the different houses of the Institute are asked to put aside as quickly as possible the pictures, medals, books, prints, etc. representing the former title, replacing them by the new presentation in forthcoming representations and editions. Besides, from March 30, 1892, it has been decided that the 'Remember You' St. Joseph prayer will be recited thrice daily following that of Our Lady, for the intentions put forward by the archconfraternity, and will no longer be said following the litanies of the Sacred Heart at morning prayer.

VI. Varied Decisions.

1. A decision as regards payment of expenses incurred by change of property titles in the Congregation, October 15, 1891. The Council, taking note that the titles of the Congregation's assets should only be changed if absolutely necessary, with the general good of the Society in mind, but in particular the specific interest of the house advantaged by these assets, lays it down that in the event of a change of any title, the expenses should be met by the house profiting from the asset and not by that with which the new title is associated if found elsewhere.

2. A decision laying down that missionaries before departure for distant countries should formally write and sign a legal document; April 6, 1892. The Council, in view of the fact that missionaries departing for the distant countries of the New World and Oceania with the intention of remaining there and, consequently, not easily able to return to look after issues which might require their presence, has taken the decision that in future nobody will leave without providing a document duly signed and in consequence of which a third party can (may) represent him legally if the need arises.

3. Decision taken about aiding the families of certain members, August 11, 1891. When a Society member finds himself seriously faced with the likelihood of having to aid his family in the face of need, there is, by that very fact, a sufficient canonical reason to ask Rome that he be released from his vows, or their being left in abeyance. If the Congregation judges it opportune to provide from itself the necessary contribution to meet the need and lay out the amount, this will be determined normally by the mass offerings which the priest can celebrate. These offerings will be established in relation to the circumstances of the country and be made available to the family in need either fully or partially, relative to the need. Normally the contribution should not exceed this limit, particularly so if it is being granted annually and for an indefinite period. In addition, the Council lays it down that in these circumstances the contribution will come from the house to which the individual belongs and is the beneficiary of his services.

VII. The mailing of the Constitutions in French and a register for the inscription of personnel.

Together with this circular you will receive:

- 1, a copy of the Constitutions in French;
- 2, a register for the inscription of personnel in the Society's different houses.

As regards the Constitutions, if it is considered worthwhile to translate them in another language, the Superior would see to it that the translation is exact, and they should not be published without being submitted to the General Council; in this respect one is reminded of number 76 in the same Constitutions: Those who are the authors of, or translate, a work cannot publish it without the approval of the Superior General and his Council, and there is, in addition, number 158,10 which reserves to the General Council supervision of books which have some significance and which should only be published following considered appraisal, with the permission of the Superior General and the Bishop.

As regards the personnel register, it should be very carefully looked after by each Superior who will keep it himself and make use of it to write, with all the requisite information, the names of the different individuals forming part of his community beginning with the present year, 1892; having in mind the departure of former members and the arrival of new ones, he will note exactly departures and arrivals, and the respective dates, such-wise that if one needs some information about anybody who is or was in the house, he would be in a position to provide it.

These decisions are being communicated to you, Father, for your direction of the house and need not be made known, in principle, to all the members (of the community) as it suffices to make them known according to needs and circumstances as you judge opportune.

Issoudun, April 8, 1892

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. I am quite surprised that you haven't yet replied to the two letters I wrote, one about the Quito issue the other about the problems created by Fr. Lanctin's letter to Cardinal Verga. The Archbishop of Bourges is asking me to see him. I am waiting in vain for a letter from you letting me know what you think of all this.
2. Let me also know, my friend, if you intend to provide me with a reply to all those other questions which I put to you quite a while ago: the Silver Jubilee of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association and the Petite Oeuvre; Fr. Vandel's life; the privileges made available to our priests associated with the Sacred Heart Third Order; the Sacred Heart scapular which you promoted.
3. Fr. Morisseau made a mistake with the indult which refers to ordinations "ad mensam communem" (whose upkeep, the candidates, is looked after by the community, a wording no longer found in the new Code of Canon Law) in respect of all the bishops in those areas where we have houses; a new indult in 1889 gives us such permission, and there is no need, then, to engage with this issue for the time being.
4. As for the Father Laliaux issue, I sent you a petition 8 or 10 days ago which is more explicit and complete than that of Canon Eleonore. It should, therefore, suffice to obtain the sought for validation if it is required.
5. As regards the former brother Canio, Fr. Guyot maintains that the health reason given at the time was canonically correct. In the event, he says that he only undertook action following the recommendation and approval of Fr. Védère who replaced you. However that may be, this young man was then ordained sub-deacon with dismissorial letters from the bishop of his native diocese. His first vows had expired; he did not take perpetual vows. Meanwhile if, after this experience outside, he wishes to join the Congregation and his references are satisfactory, advise him to make his request which you will send on to us together with the information you have garnered about him, and we shall look at it and send you on our reply. The Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars will consider whether or not he should begin the novitiate whole or in part, or be exempted. Emphasize the requirements of his family, which, if they need help, cannot be met by us.

Cheerio, Father. I await impatiently your views on the Cardinal Verga and Archbishop of Bourges' issues.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

It is quite impossible for me to get to Bourges before Easter; we are in the middle of the young girls' retreat, and there are, thanks be to God, very many of them. On Monday the women's retreat, which I am preaching, begins and then the men will follow. If on Holy Thursday I could get away I would meet the Archbishop's invitation. In any event, please excuse me.

It is quite impossible for us to allow Mr. Personnot to leave us as his departure from Chezal-Benoît would mean the closure of the college.

As regards the acquisition of this property at the present time, the Government would in no way whatsoever agree to it. I shall speak to His Grace about this.

C 18920411

To the Superiors of MSC houses.

Issoudun, April 11, 1892

Circular, N.7

Reverend and Dear Father,

The Congregation's Council in the course of the present year, and the previous one, has taken a number of decisions which should be opportunely made known in all the Society's houses; this is the reason for the present circular.

- I. Statement of May 4, 1891, with reference to perpetual and temporary vows. The Council, aware of the need to deliberate on acceptance to vows at a requisitely appropriate length of time beforehand and that, in addition, the novices, in keeping with our Constitutions, take the necessary measures to arrange for the administration of their effects or some such property concern, or, again, that those in charge have occasion to inform themselves about the qualities of the candidates, has decided that for the future the candidates should make their request for entry to the Society to the Superior General two months before profession, whether it's the taking of first vows, their renewal, or final profession. Those who live in distant counties, for example the Oceania missions, should act more quickly and send their request five or six months beforehand, so that notice of their request might arrive in time. Every request of this nature should be written and signed in the postulant's hand and approved by the respective Superior who, besides, will provide all the information needed to make an assessment of the candidate, his piety, health, ability, etc.

II. Decisions about Petite Oeuvre students, July 12, 1891.

1. Admission of youngsters to the Petite Oeuvre.

The Council, in consideration of the fact that, in keeping with our Constitutions, the selection of youngsters for the Petite Oeuvre should be prudent and restricted to a small number of applicants who show promise of a genuine vocation, is of the view that the lack of personnel in the Congregation does not favour an increase of teachers and heads of schools and, consequently, considers that great circumspection and prudence should be exercised with regard to the acceptance of candidates in all the Institute's houses. The number of pupils in any house should not be greater than 10 for each class, unless more are authorized by the major Superiors. In order to meet such a number, one needs to have reasonable expectations of adequate financial resources to meet the needs of the accepted students as they go forward to the priesthood. Moreover, it is required to look for a more serious guarantee of a vocation for these youngsters and the evidence of good-will, acceptance, on the part of their parents in permitting their youngsters to leave them without the prospect, any longer, of their being a family support.

2. Decision about aid, support, for pupils.

The arrangement whereby benefactors who so request it are given youngsters to sponsor has the advantage of promoting the interest and generosity of sponsors for their protégés, but very often this happens to the detriment of the educational undertaking in general and the great disappointment of the benefactors themselves, when their protégé leaves the Petite Oeuvre and now asks for their financial help in order to embark on another career. For these reasons, and others besides, it has been decided that for the future no youngster will be individually provided with a specifically-named patron.

3. Decision concerning the acceptance of Petite Oeuvre students in the novitiate

Before admission they must be closely examined, in particular those who haven't been fully satisfactory as regards piety, health, intelligence, judgment, etc. When a postulant's vocation would appear to be free and easy, suspect, he will be sent home to his family and not welcomed back until a sufficient trial-period establishes that he has a truly serious attachment to the Society.

III. Decision as regards a prior examination in their respective houses of study for those about to be ordained (to the priesthood) before they are presented to the Bishop's examiners; March 30, 1892.

The Council, aware of the fact that several candidates for (priestly) ordination did not fully satisfy the diocesan examiners when presented to them, has decided that in future, for the good name of the Congregation, those due for ordination would be examined beforehand by competent priests in their respective houses, following which they will be put forward for examination by the Bishop's examiners, so long as they have satisfied the internal (MSC) examiners.

IV. Decision with reference to Annals published abroad, November 11, 1891.

In order to safeguard unity of outlook and approach, as well as correct doctrine and historical facts in foreign language Annals it is laid down:

1. That all Annals publications will be published under the supervision of the Superior General, but this will not prevent the local Superior from appending his signature either as local representative of the Superior General or as local director of the undertaking with whom the associates should deal.
2. The more important articles from the doctrinal point of view, those dealing with the Association, the Congregation or the Petite Oeuvre, should be first submitted to the General for his approval.
3. Articles taken from the French or other Annals should be reproduced if not wholly as such, but at least without the kind of change which might alter the sense and give rise to justified complaints. Moreover, care must be taken to indicate the article's source according to the adage: "unicuique suum" (to each his own).

V. Decision about changing St. Joseph's title, March 2, 1892.

The Holy See has changed the title of the Archconfraternity of St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, putting in its place that of St. Joseph model and patron of the friends of the Sacred Heart, enriching the new invocation with the same indulgence of 100 days. Consequently, the Council has decided that the new invocation should be adopted in all the houses of the Institute. Having in mind that the decree makes the new title obligatory, the different houses of the Institute are asked to remove as soon as possible the pictures, medals, printed matter, etc. carrying the former title, replacing it with the new formula. In addition, on March 30, 1890, it was decided that the Memorare prayer to St. Joseph should be recited thrice daily after that to Our Lady for the intentions commended to the archconfraternity and it will not be recited any longer after the litany of the Sacred Heart at morning prayer.

(NB: Nobody should be presented for ordination without an accompanying letter signed by the Superior General.)

VI. Varied Decisions

1. Decision concerning payment of expenses incurred when changing titles of the Congregation's properties, October 15, 1891.

The Council, in consideration of the fact that titles of the Congregation's properties are only changed by necessity, in the Society's general interest but particularly so in the specific interest of the house which benefits, lays it down that when a title is changed the expenses should be undertaken by the house benefiting and not the house to which the title belonged if elsewhere.

2. A decision whereby missionaries about to leave for the distant New World or Oceania countries should make a will before departure, April 6, 1892.

The Council, taking cognizance that missionaries leaving for the distant countries of the New World and Oceania and likely to remain there, who cannot return to deal with civic issues which would require their presence, has decided that in future nobody will depart without leaving a legal will with the Superior General, duly signed by him (the departing missionary), and in consequence of which a third person may legally represent him when there's a need.

3. A decision concerning financial help which the Congregation considers appropriate to make available to certain members' families in case of need, August 11, 1891.

When a member of the Society finds himself necessarily bound to help his family in straitened financial circumstances, there is in consequence, a sufficient - as well as canonical - reason to ask Rome for suspension or release from his vows. If the Congregation itself, however, judges it opportune to find from its own resources the financial help needed, it will normally provide it from the mass offerings which the priest would be celebrating. These are fixed by the accepted regulations of the country, and will be provided to the needy family either totally or partially according to the need. Normally, however, the contribution will not exceed this limit, especially so if it is being provided annually and for an indefinite period. Moreover, the Council lays it down that in this case the contribution will come from the house to which the individual belongs and which benefits from his services.

VII. Dispatch of the Constitutions in French and a personnel register. With this circular you will also receive:

- 1, a copy of the Constitutions in French;
- 2, a folder for noting personnel in the Society's different houses.

As regards the Constitutions, if it is thought opportune to translate them into another language, the Superiors will see to it that the translation is exact and it cannot be issued without its being submitted to the General Council. In this respect one must bear in mind number 76 of the same Constitutions: Those who write or translate a work cannot publish it without the permission and approval of the Superior and Bishop; and there is also number 58,10 which reserves to the General Council the publication of books of some significance which should only be printed, following mature consideration, with the permission of the Superior General and the Bishop.

As for the register of personnel, it should be looked after very carefully by each Superior who will keep it to himself and make use of it to write down, with the requisite information, the names of the different people making up the community from the present year, 1892. When people come and go he will carefully note departures and arrivals with the respective dates, such-wise that if one needs some information about an individual presently or formerly in the house, he would straightaway be able to provide it.

Dear Father, these decisions are being presented to you for your convenience and need not be made known to all the confrères, but you may make them known according to needs and circumstances as you think fit.

Assuring you of my warm and devoted good wishes in Sanctissimo Corde Jesu.

J. Chevalier.

Issoudun, Ash Wednesday, 1892

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. I am preaching the Issoudun women's retreat in preparation for Easter; it is going well. I experienced a set-back on the eve of my feast day, a set-back all the more harrowing because Rome is threatening us with dissolution. The sword could not be more sharp in order to pierce my heart to bits. I bow before it and I repeat after Our Lord: "Pater mi, si possibile est transeat a me calix iste; verumtamen non sicut ego volo, sed sicut tu". (Father, if it is possible, let this cup pass me by. Nevertheless, let it be as you, not I, would have it; Jerusalem Bible; Matt, 26,39.)

I do not really understand this general sense of discontent which prevails against us and, in particular, myself. Why isn't the Sacred Congregation, which has to hand the file of all the diabolical machinations against us, more sympathetic to us? We have accepted, point by point, what it has laid down for us over the course of the past year, so what, then, can be held against us? Am I to blame if some people who like stirring things up do not wish to accept its (Rome's) demands though clear and precise, and continue with their complaints? I understand its (Rome's) dissatisfaction, which I share more than anyone else, and it crucifies me.

2. We are being sharply blamed, you say, for Brother Laliaux's ordination which took place contrary to the wishes of the Sacred Congregation. There is, obviously, something wrong (confused) here as we did nothing which went against the Sacred Congregation's wishes. We asked through you for permission when he reached 26 years of age for Brother Laliaux to take perpetual vows to avoid his having to undergo military service for five years, although he had only been 15 months in temporary vows. It (the Congregation) refused this request and Brother Laliaux did not take perpetual vows. We, accordingly, accepted its refusal as something sacred, having too much respect for Rome's decisions not to take account of them. Never has it found, or will find, children (sic) more submissive than the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, always prepared to sacrifice themselves in order to obey (Rome) blindly. When having Brother Laliaux ordained to the subdiaconate in order to avoid military service, we felt authorized to do so by an indult of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars which authorized us to ordain our 'alumni' (members of the Congregation) without distinction, without respect to temporary or perpetual vows. Ubi lex non distinguit nec nos distinguere debemus (if the law makes no distinction it's not for us to do so). Look again at the text of this indult of which you sent on a valid copy and you will see the truth of what I am saying.

You say that we cannot be in doubt given Rome's refusal, whereas the refusal only refers to perpetual profession, but we have respected this last because perpetual profession has not taken place. It's here the confusion lies, which I would ask you to take note of. Otherwise, the Sacred Congregation has sent on nothing in writing. It's yourself who sent on its reply to our request about perpetual profession which we forwarded to you. If we have been mistaken in this instance, it has been, I repeat, in good faith. If it is not permitted to ordain to the subdiaconate in the above-mentioned case someone who has not yet taken perpetual vows, let them be good enough to let us know and we shall no longer do so. For the rest, it is the first time we have taken an initiative like this, and it was the circumstance of Brother Laliaux's military service which led us to act like this. I do think that our Venerable Cardinal Protector, and the Sacred Congregation, would approve of this explanation.

3. I do not see why, my friend, you do not let me know in a letter what you yourself think about pacificatory methods to be adopted in order to restore peace to our Society, especially when Cardinal Verga is asking the Archbishop of Bourges to make known to him what he should do. I shall be left to myself in making suggestions to His Grace, and being such, all on my own, what do you think I should do?

4. Why do you say nothing about the Quito issues following Fr. Barral's letter which I sent on to you? A discussion with the Holy See on your part would seem opportune to me.

5. There is nothing hindering you from writing Fr. Vandel's life without referring to the subject of Petite Oeuvre contributions, whose significance he exaggerated; you are free and in a position to write his life.

As regards other issues such as that of the Third Order or associated clergy, nothing is preventing you once again from suggesting an association project such as you understand it and the like of which Rome would insist on before granting spiritual favours. If Rome insists on all centres being situated in the Eternal City, I am not opposed to it. But what I do ask of you, my friend, is that you do not leave me without a reply in the face of all the requests I placed before you, the questions I put to you and the problems I submit to you. I always accept your recommendations.

Cheerio, Father. Yes let us be more united than ever and always work in tandem.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

With regard to the good Italian priest who wants to join us, we shall be very pleased to accept him if his references are good. Be good enough to get these from the competent authorities and forward them to us. Does he know enough French to follow the novitiate course?

18920404X

Council Meeting, April 14, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General and Fathers Piperon, Morisseau.

Recall of Fr. Meynier to Issoudun.

1. Since Fr. Meynier cannot provide the services at Canet-de-Mar for which he was appointed and as his presence there, besides, creates continually recurring problems for Fr. Carrière, it has been decided to recall him immediately and have him take on certain ministerial functions at Issoudun in keeping with his capabilities, as well as undertake some chaplaincy work for Madame de Bonneval who offers a salary in keeping with that for former chaplains, 1,500 francs per annum, with the obligation to celebrate (mass) daily for her intentions, apart, otherwise, from 50 days in the year.

Reply to a letter of enquiry from Bishop Couppé.

2. The secretary then placed before the Council a letter from Bishop Couppé, Apostolic Vicar of New Pomerania (later New Britain, New Ireland), involving certain administrative issues. His Lordship asks if he should remain Superior and whether it might not be advantageous to appoint a local Superior in each mission station, which might consist of three priests at least. The decision was taken that the Bishop should remain Superior, and any new houses should not be opened without the approval of the General Council, and that, otherwise, he could appoint for the different mission stations of his Vicariate a priest who would be authorized to replace him, but would not exercise the authority of a local Superior.

The acceptance of perpetual vows for Fr. Bley approved of.

His Lordship, having concluded that Fr. Bley might be accepted to perpetual vows, the decision was taken, contrary to Bishop Navarre's view, that such a profession was not canonical and should be taken again. The Council agreed to give him full authorization in this respect so that he could accept Fr. Bley for perpetual profession on condition that he make known the date of this new profession of vows to the Superior General.

L 18920415A

To Cardinal Raffaele Monaco La Valleta Monaco, Protector.

Archpriest of Issoudun (Indre)
Archdiocese of Bourges.

Issoudun, April 15, 1892

Most Eminent Protector,

I gather, with great regret, that Your Eminence is not favourably disposed to us following a measure of insubordination on our part towards the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. I hasten to rectify the matter. From what Fr. Jouët has written to me, there is clearly some confusion or misunderstanding. It seems, as well, that Cardinals Parocchi and Sepiacchi share your disapproval. If the issues were such as they have been put before the Sacred Congregation, there would be justification for it, but, thanks be to God, it is not at all like that. Last year one of our young confrères, with us for five years, was due to be called up for the army at the age of 26 if he was not already in sacred orders. There were but three months left and he was not a subdeacon. To avoid his being conscripted for five years, we thought about committing him to us by his taking perpetual vows, but he had only been in temporary vows for fifteen months. Accordingly, we asked the Sacred Congregation for permission to have him perpetually professed. The Congregation, through Fr. Jouët, replied that it would not grant permission. We respected scrupulously its refusal as was our duty and the young religious did not take perpetual vows; he will only do so in 8 months.

In order to make it possible for him to avoid doing military service, we had recourse to an indult of May 25, 1889 which permits us to present for sacred orders our young men without making any distinction between temporary and perpetual vows. In the event here is the text: Sacra congregatio episcoporum et regularium ... benigne annuit ac propterea tribui mandavit superiori generali oratori facultatem ad quinquenium duraturam relaxandi litteras dimissoriales alumnis proprii instituti tam pro tonsura et ordinibus minoribus quam majoribus suscipiendis, titulo mensae communis, dummodo tamen prius excardinati fuerint a propriis ordinariis originis et... As it happens, the scholastic Brother Laliaux, whom we had ordained to the subdiaconate at Bourges, exactly meets all these conditions.

I do not understand what confusion led our Procurator (Jouët), or his deputy, to give it to be understood by the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars that we went against its wishes in accepting for perpetual vows someone not entitled to make them, since it's not at all like this. In the meantime, if we have erred in ordaining to the subdiaconate a subject who has not made his perpetual vows, be good enough to say so, and we shall not do anything like this in future. We thought, and still think, that the aforementioned indult authorized us to do so. Consequently, it was entirely in good faith on our part.

I go on my knees before you, Eminent Protector, begging your pardon if we have done anything wrong, and to look upon us kindly as someone to whom we associate so much respect, as well as Their Eminences Cardinals Parocchi and Sepiacchi.

I have the honour to be with the deepest respect Your Eminence's most humble, obedient, servant and son in C.J.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, April 16, 1892

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. You should have received my explanatory letter about Brother Laliaux. I add in this letter some fresh observations from Fr. Morisseau. He should have sent them to you when this matter first arose. He is all too easily distracted and over-involved. I myself will look after correspondence in future with Rome, and the issues which need to be addressed. The explanations being offered today correspond with the doubts you expressed in your last letter.

2. I have written to Cardinal Monaco giving him the reasons I passed on to you so that his support, so needed by us, would rally once more to our side. I hope he will accept and forgive us any improprieties if there are such. I do not believe, however, that we have abused our rights with respect to the indulgence with which we were favoured.

3. I made known to you everything that had come to my knowledge about Fr. Lanctin's letter, demanding yet again another Chapter which would bring our internal squabbles to an end. The Archbishop of Bourges confidentially shared it with me, with the proviso that I should keep it to myself. Do not mention that I informed you about it. When Cardinal Verga wrote to the Archbishop he rejected the idea of a Chapter, but asked him at the same time to make known to him what measures should be taken to bring about unity and peace. The Archbishop was as pains to reply and asked me to come to Bourges and discuss the matter. I am going there next Monday. You can now see for yourself why I asked you to let me know what you thought about this latest series of difficulties before I go there, and which I expressly waited over, putting the visit off, until I heard from you. Since you make no comment whatsoever, I shall be at a loss. I leave it all to the Sacred Heart. The Archbishop will suggest what he thinks best in the circumstances since I can only advise him.

4. I haven't yet received from Quito Archbishop Ordonez's official reply. As soon as it reaches me I shall forward it to you for official delivery to the Holy See. With reference to departure from Quito, we have the right to do so because the initial contract burdening us with the construction of the basilica made our position quite impossible, and we are within our rights because Rome only sanctioned 5 years which come to an end this current month (April). We are free then to disengage. It is for this reason, therefore, that the Council, judging the situation to be untenable, informed the Archbishop of Quito of our departure at the end of the (five year) contract, whereupon the Archbishop suggested a new contract which, however, as you are aware, needed further clarification. I requested such. I am still waiting. I shall send them (the clarifications) on to you and you can discuss the issue with the Holy See. I do not believe that in so acting we have done anything wrong or gone beyond our rights. There's nobody who could not approve of, or respect, our prudence. We very much appreciate your commitment to this issue. But it is a question of safeguarding the rights of our Society for the future, and nobody could blame us for so doing.

Cheerio, Father.

To His Grace Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, April 19, 1892

Your Grace,

I am pleased to forward the enclosed letter to Your Lordship which I have just received from the Superior of our Salzburg house. It is like those you are already aware of, Your Grace. It, likewise, calls for a Chapter and the dismissal of our Society's Procurator. We have here, without any forcing of the issue, the basic thinking of the majority who are looking for peace and unity. An apostolic visitation will not have an advantageous impact on what is really at issue, only serving to postpone the remedy, prolonging the solution of the problem. Given the delicate situation, Your Grace, in which we find ourselves, it does occur to us that the prompt calling of a Chapter is a necessity. Your Grace, prior to the end of the assembly, will discuss matters with all those present, and in this way you will, undoubtedly, come to know what is being thought and spoken about in the different houses and thereupon take appropriate action.

Having given careful reflection to the issue, here then, Your Grace, is what we presume to put forward:

1. The calling of a Chapter as soon as possible.
2. It should be presided over by a delegate appointed by the Holy See.
3. This Chapter should confine itself to the appointment of Assistants and the Society's Procurator General, leaving the option to the participants whether or not other issues be brought forward if considered opportune.
4. Naming a commission of four members presided over by the Superior General to decide finally on the Directory which has been made ready, this being the recommendation of Cardinal Sepiaci. This Directory is absolutely necessary in order to provide for uniformity in our houses, where different practices have developed and are degenerating into abuses.
5. Stating a time duration for this Chapter: two or three days should be more than enough.

In these circumstances no problems should be anticipated and we shall see the return of confidence and harmony. Our Society, Your Grace, has a great future before it, having within itself the possibilities of worthwhile success. Besides its 84 priests, there are 102 scholastics, 83 lay brothers, 30 scholastic novices, thirty or so lay brother novices and, as well, 250 Petite Oeuvre youngsters.

What impresses us, and Your Grace as well, and will make an impact on Rome, is the obviously real and deep regard in which the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart hold their Society, since all, apart from one individual, given the opportunity of exercising their freedom on the occasion of the validation of vows, were willing to persevere in their vocation, something which might not, perhaps, have taken place in other Congregations which have long since been founded. This report brought to the attention of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars cannot but be to its liking.

I have the honour to be, with deepest respect, Your Grace's most humble, obedient servant and son in C.J.

Council Meeting, April 26, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Píperon, Morisseau, Maillard, Batard, General Bursar.

Brother Raffael accepted for renewal of three-yearly vows.

1. Given Brother Raffael's request and the support for him from the priests at the Sacred Heart house (Issoudun), the Council very willingly accepted this good brother's request for renewal of vows on June 30 next.

Brother Eichinger accepted for first vows.

2. The lay brother Joseph Eichinger at Salzburg, having requested first vows, and given the good commendation of Fr. Meyer, Novice Master, and notwithstanding his infirmity in being without fingers in his right hand, but which do not prevent him, however, from writing quite well and occupying himself with all the other activities undertaken by lay brothers, the Council, on considering the matter, accepted him for three-yearly vows on the expiry of his novitiate, May 30 next.

Acceptance of Emile Oulman to the lay brother postulancy.

3. Given the request of Emile Oulman, aged 18 and a native of Alsace, to forego military service and enter a religious community in France, and the excellent recommendation provided by the parish priest of his native parish about himself and his family, the Council accepted him as a postulant at the Chezal-Benoît Novitiate.

Discussion about a definite disengagement from Quito.

4. The Council next discussed departure from Quito, something already agreed, but left over because of certain advantageous proposals put forward by the Archbishop in order to hold on to us. Four documents sent by Fr. François Barral, Superior, to each member of the Council were looked at:

- 1, a letter he wrote to the Archbishop of Quito asking him to provide the explanations and clarifications which the Council were waiting on before it could give its verdict on the Archbishop's proposal, and which would serve as the basis for a new contract;
- 2, the official reply by the Archbishop put paid to any advantages which had been promised to us, stating in effect that Sagrario and the accompanying parish, which had been permanently made available to us, could only now be ours during the term of the present Archbishop's term of office, and that other things in our favour mentioned in the contract project were basically revocable by Archbishop Ordonez's successors; moreover, the intervention of the Holy See would not be needed in misunderstandings which might arise;
- 3, a letter was read in which Fr. Barral gave his own views on the contract project, favouring its rejection, and also a letter from Fathers Perriot and Bouvier approaching the issue in the same way and drawing a similar conclusion. Then Fr. General read out a letter from Fr. Gressin which didn't take the same view as that of his confrères but, nevertheless, did not contradict the accuracy of their assertions.

All the letters having been carefully considered, the Council held to the view that the Society's dignity and best interests did not permit us to remain in Quito given the situation with which we were being faced, and the conclusion was arrived at that this attempt to make a foundation there should be definitively abandoned. Nevertheless, before notifying the Archbishop of Quito about our colleagues' recall, the approval of the Holy See would be requested just as it was when this work was about to be undertaken. Since Fr. Jouët was involved with this undertaking in such a very personal way that one has concerns about his impartiality, it was decided that one would ask for the Holy See's approval through the intermediary of the Archbishop of Bourges, to whom the Council's decision would be forwarded.

Issoudun, April 27, 1892

Your Grace,

You will not be unaware that at the beginning of 1887 we undertook negotiations with the Archbishop of Quito to oversee the building of a basilica dedicated to the Sacred Heart and also to administer the Cathedral parish. The Holy See, in its prudence, made this a five-year arrangement only, that is to say the authorization to take charge of the parish. These five years have now passed by and, as the work on the basilica was clearly beyond our capabilities and resources, we informed the Archbishop in May of last year, first of all by letter and then face to face, that we could not continue with an undertaking so disadvantageous for us, and that it was our intention to withdraw at the end of the five-year initiative determined by the Holy See. His Grace seemed to be taken aback by our resolve. The people in Quito were very anxious for us to stay and influential women sent us a request firmly appealing to us to remain in Ecuador's capital. Even the Government intervened through the intermediary of its Paris Minister and the Rome Ambassador. The Archbishop, intent on keeping us on there, wrote through his Vicar General informing us that he was willing to draw up a new contract with us which would be more favourable than the first one. He offered us Sagrario in perpetuity, that is to say the parish church and presbytery where the Cathedral will be. He exempted us from the obligation to submit the accounts, expenses, of the (Cathedral) undertaking to the examination and approval of the Archdiocesan Curia, putting the proposal to us to replace fixed revenues with contributions foregone by the Curia and with offerings which His Grace himself would look after. Certain members of the Council here detected a trap in these promises which it was thought the Archbishop could not meet and, consequently, the decision was taken to write and ask for detailed explanations, our request being conveyed by our confrères to the Archbishop in a February 11 letter of this year, of which a copy is here included.

The archdiocesan administration, having taken time to consider the letter, made known its decision in a letter of March 11, a copy of which is here enclosed, and in which the Vicar General formally informed us: the concessions being granted are only valid for the direction of the present archiepiscopal administration, and, otherwise, His Grace does not want any involvement of the Holy See in this matter. The Society's Council, having patent proof before it of the bad faith being exercised with respect to us, and knowing for the rest from our confrères that the above-mentioned promises were only made to gain time in order to calm the faithfuls' feelings, who wanted us to remain, and as well to prepare little by little for our departure, as well as taking into consideration the desperate need for subjects in which we find ourselves, decided that the honour and best interests of the Society made it imperative that we should leave Quito, and recall at the earliest possible convenience the four priests and lay brother who are working there.

Nonetheless, before we make known this disengagement as a definite arrangement, either to the Archbishop of Quito or to our confrères, we believe it is our duty to have the Holy See's approval, and with a view to this we would ask Your Grace to be our intermediary. You are aware of our problems, our low ebb; one word from Your Grace to the Secretary of State, or to His Eminence the Cardinal Prefect of Bishops and Regulars, would suffice in order to bring about what we are looking for.

With deep respect, I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant.

To Cardinal Isidore Verga, Prefect of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

*Undated, but written after a Council Meeting,
May 18, 1892.*

The under-signed Assistants of Fr. Chevalier, Superior General of the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, humbly petition Your Eminence to be kind enough to give favourable consideration to a number of observations arising from problems which the Society is experiencing.

It is eighteen months since these regrettable issues came to the fore at the Chapter held in January last year. Since then we have had much presented to us confidentially, many regrets expressed by our dearly cherished confrères, and gone on to consider carefully issues relating to the best interests of our Congregation. We believe that we have in this way come by a satisfactory knowledge of the mind set and the needs of the Society. Despite the very real sense of depression prevalent at this time, we are all fully assured that the divine Heart of Jesus will make it possible for us to benefit from this trial, since, despite everything, he does not leave over blessing us quite palpably. There are appreciable qualities among us which make us optimistically look to the future, particularly so at this moment when under the impact of Fr. General and the suggestions of the Sacred Congregation we have brought close to our mother house the novitiate which has thirty or so novices, and the scholasticate which has a larger number of students and, besides, there are the higher classes in our juniorate where there are more than 70 students preparing for entry to the novitiate. All would appear to be animated by a good attitude. Besides, the vast majority of our religious are stable and love their calling. Have we not here, Your Eminence, the beginning of a development promising abundant fruit? Such is our belief, and also that of His Grace, the illustrious Archbishop of Bourges, who has often remarked on it to us and has a keen interest in our undertakings.

We feel bound to say that those of our confrères who raised problematical issues at the last Chapter have all more or less returned to a more positive viewpoint, very anxious to see the Congregation, to which they are devoted, flourishing. This is for us well-guaranteed from the fact that all have accepted the Sacred Congregation's rescript confirming Fr. General in office and in granting legal resolution of the irregularities which had arisen in the Institute.

Our confrères would like, in accordance with the Constitutions, to have the authority to elect a General Administration whose election would be approved by the Chapter. Your Eminence, we have the sense of moral certainty that by taking the precautions about which we were advised by the Archbishop of Bourges, a Chapter meeting could take place without creating problems and it would bring about very satisfactory results, since the Superiors could more easily exercise office on knowing they had the confidence, backing, of their subjects. Most Eminent Lord, in addressing this humble plea to you we have no other aim than to bring peace to our presently troubled Institute and by doing so contribute towards the Church's well-being by increasing the number of apostles and evangelical workers.

Whatever the decision of Your Eminence, we respectfully adhere to it as we remain Your Grace's most humble and submissive servants.

To His Grace Guiseppe Ignatio Ordonez, Archbishop of Quito.

Issoudun, May 1, 1892

Your Grace,

Fr. François Barrel on October 23, 1891, sent me from Your Grace through the intermediary of Monsignor Jean de Dieu Campuzano, your Vicar General, a contract laying it down:

1. That the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart was being offered in perpetuity the property of the Sagrario church and attached presbytery, the only obligation demanded being that of parish service and administration.
2. The revenues accruing from the parish would be wholly placed at the disposal of the priests to meet the expenses of the church, and this without accountability to their employer.
3. And by way of withdrawing from the priests the taking of responsibility on themselves as regards the financial intake and profits of the parish, Your Grace committed himself to provide for each of the five priests and any brothers involved in the parish, thirty 'suces' a month, that is to say a total of one hundred and eighty 'suces' as a monthly allowance. The Archbishop also contracted himself to meet the needs of the parish and the fabric as well as the interest; those of the fabric would be fully made available to the priests.
4. The contract project moreover laid it down that the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart would remain the spiritual directors of the enterprise involving the national shrine, and their obligation would necessitate receiving the contributions made at the shrine and transferring them to the Archbishop's curial office.
5. Your Grace, by way of providing a more solid foundation for the title of Spiritual Directors of the National Shrine, accepted that the Sagrario church should be the provisional one (for the shrine) until work on the basilica was fully completed.
6. And Your Grace likewise laid it down as a condition that if any one of the Sacred Heart priests were to make himself unworthy of his position, he (the Archbishop) could request the Superior General to withdraw this religious from Ecuador.

Having taken into consideration these proposals, Your Grace, and having consulted with my assistants, and to avoid all future difficulties, may I be permitted to place before Your Grace the following concerns:

1. Is it possible for the Archbishop of Quito to grant in perpetuity, as is stated in the contract, the church and presbytery properties at Sagrario?
2. Might not his successors come to a change of mind about this favour?
3. Can he alienate the rights of the Chapter with regard to the Sagrario church?
4. Can he disengage not only on his own behalf but as well in the name of his successors from the right to oversee the building's accounts?
5. Can he oblige his successors to forego parish rights and income and bind them also to provide each priest and brother with the rent mentioned in article 3 above?
6. Is the Archbishop in favour of the contract being ratified by the Holy See, suchwise that any problems which might arise in the future should be sorted out by the Pope?

In the face of all these concerns Your Grace, and through the intermediary of your Vicar General, Jean de Dieu Campuzano, I have been informed that, unable to commit yourself to the future, you could not as from yourself grant these requests other than for your own life-time! And, in addition, you could not alienate the rights of the Chapter in respect of the Sagrario church, etc., nor gainsay the Holy See's possible intervention. What becomes then of all gifts made in perpetuity, referred to in the contract-project which you wholeheartedly submitted to us for our endorsement? They are in fact quite imaginary, lacking any substance.

Faced with these explanations on the part of Your Grace, we have no option other than that of withdrawal from Ecuador. The initial contract, itself so demanding and uncertain for us, which associated us for five years with the Sagrario parish, and ended last April, leaves me with no other option than that of recalling to France all my confrères. It is not without a sense of regret, Your Grace, that the Congregation's Council takes this decision.

I thank Your Grace for his kindness and well wishes. We shall keep him in mind at prayer and we commend to him the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association, which is beginning to grow in Ecuador and bringing blessings.

I would ask Your Grace to bless us and accept our respectful good wishes as I have the honour to be Your Grace's very humble and obedient servant in C.J.

To Cardinal Monaco La Valleta Raffaele, Protector.

Issoudun, May 1, 1892

Most Eminent Protector,

In 1887 the Holy See sanctioned our acceptance over five years of the Sagrario parish in Quito, Ecuador. Knowing neither the country nor the customs of the people, we entered upon a contract with His Grace Archbishop Ordonez which was very challenging for us. During this period of time we experienced on a number of occasions serious problems with the diocesan authorities, so serious indeed that we were forced to send Fr. Jouët there, someone whose zeal and devotedness is known to yourself. He ironed out some problems. Yet this Quito undertaking was disastrous for us; besides an outlay of 30,000 francs (about 100,000 euros), two of our priests died there and four lost their vocations; the five who remain have continuously asked to return to France. Faced with this state of affairs, and having discussed the matter in Council, I fore-warned the Archbishop a year ago that we would withdraw our members from Quito when our contract expired. The people were upset and protested by way of pleas.

In consequence His Grace forwarded a new contract to us which appeared to offer both advantages and guarantees for the future. Having considered it, and before acceptance, we decided that we should ask Archbishop Ordonez for further explanations. His reply, which has just reached me, wholly counteracts his promises. In the enclosed letter you will find the attractive promises made by the Archbishop, our queries submitted to him, and His Grace's reply. Noticing that the Archbishop had promised more than he could deliver, following mature consideration we chose to withdraw our members from Ecuador, personnel of whom we are, anyway, in dire need given the present circumstances because of the great variety of works being undertaken.

His Excellency the Archbishop of Bourges, who is greatly supportive of us, and whom we consulted on this issue, approves wholeheartedly of our decision. He had been aware of all the uncertainties of this foundation from the beginning and never thought well of it, always advising us to disengage when the contract expired. Those priests who are returning will be very useful to us, whether in the Oceania missions, which greatly need missionaries, or in our other houses.

Prostrate at your feet, Eminent Protector, together with my respectful good wishes, I ask you in your kindness to grant your paternal blessing to me and our little Society.

Issoudun, May 2, 1892

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. I believe it was our duty to notify our venerable Cardinal Protector about the decision we have taken, supported by the recommendation of the Archbishop of Bourges, to withdraw from Quito. The reply by Archbishop Ordonez in face of the doubts I raised is in complete contradiction to all his promises. He tells me that he cannot contract beyond his death, or alienate his successors' rights or those of the Cathedral Chapter. Why then did he offer us all those favours in perpetuity? To gain time, no doubt, and calm down public opinion. If his promises were not lacking in openness they were at least very badly, clumsily, thought out. Will you be good enough to give Cardinal Monaco the enclosed letter together with a copy of what I sent to the Archbishop of Quito when I got his reply.

2. Your complaint that I sometimes leave some of your letters unanswered makes me more than somewhat amazed, my friend, when you do not yet mention the reception of such important letters as those I sent to you about Brother Laliaux justifying our handling of the matter before the Sacred Congregation. You always leave me experiencing the impact of terribly heavy burdens into which I have been pitched by your recent correspondence (or lack of it). Your prolonged silence (lack of contact) mystifies me and adds yet further to my downcast feeling. At the same time I have enough worries otherwise which you should try to understand and try to ease: I await very expectantly your reply.

3. Bishop Couppé has written to say that Fr. Kliem has refused to validate his vows and has left for Germany. He is the only one to leave us (on this issue). His Lordship informs me that illness (malaria, blackwater fever) is taking a heavy toll on his personnel and urgently wants more personnel from me. What am I to do? We haven't anybody. There's also the same cry for help from Bishop Navarre! Bishop Verjus is, for some time, on his way to Europe and I haven't had news of him so far; he is travelling with two little New Guinea natives.

Cheerio, Father; all good wishes in C.J.

Dear Fr. Barral,

I am forwarding to you a copy of the letter I sent to the Archbishop of Quito. From the moment the Archbishop placed a limit to the concessions he made to us in perpetuity, he virtually said to us: I don't want you any more; you can take yourselves off. Accordingly, you will return with all your colleagues to France as soon as possible. Do not create any problems; be prudent. Arrange everything amicably with the Archbishop, so that you do not hurt his feelings, and act correctly from our side. Bring with you if you think it appropriate the postulant you mentioned if it his wish to enter our Society.

Thank on my behalf the Vicars General, the Canons and all the Quito priests who extended to us their good-will and friendship, as well as the ladies and gentlemen who sent me petitions for you to stay on there and, of course, let our situation be well understood; you must not forget to thank the President of the Republic. Try to consolidate the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association and leave it in good hands.

Issoudun, May 9, 1892

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. If you think it worthwhile to hand Cardinal Rampolla and the Minister of Ecuador the letter I sent, with the advice and approval of the Archbishop of Bourges, to the Archbishop of Quito, do so. I am very much in favour of it. You are well aware how many problems this issue caused for both of us.

2. I cannot understand, my friend, how they do not want to accept our good faith as regards the Laliaux issue. We would deserve, then, to be placed under an interdict. Moreover, I do not understand how my last explanatory letter to His Eminence Cardinal Monaco "could be an additional element" to my disadvantage. I here recount the facts of the case as they occurred:

a) Brother Laliaux did not take perpetual vows because the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars forbade him; accordingly, in this respect, we are deserving of no blame because we accepted the injunction.

b) On carefully re-reading our indult we noted that it authorized us to accept for the subdiaconate a religious of our Society without respect to temporary or perpetual vows. Accordingly, basing ourselves on one side on the theological principle: favores sunt ampliandi (laws are to be interpreted in favour of the subject) and on the other (principle): ubi lex non distinguit nec non distinguere debemus (when the law does not distinguish we do not have to do so either), and taking into consideration as well that the young man would have been called to the colours for five years, we were convinced that we were doing the right thing in having him ordained subdeacon. This is the situation as it actually happened. If it was inadequately explained in the previous petitions, I very much regret it, but I fail to see how when presenting the issue as it really happened in my letter to our venerable (Cardinal) Protector, I presented something altogether different which was quite detrimental to me. It seemed to me that as the issue was a very delicate one, and had not been well presented to the Sacred Congregation, it was my bounden duty to present the facts such as they had occurred.

In the light of these explanations, if the Sacred Congregation accepts and acknowledges them, is a validation even necessary since we have accepted the refusal of perpetual vows for Brother Laliaux? There remains the indult issue. Let it be stated yes or no if we can apply it to temporary vows. Otherwise, this was the first time for us to make use of it for someone in temporary vows; we were urgently forced to do so because of the need to hold him back from military service.

Nobody more than myself is not only respecting of Rome's orders, but also of its wishes; I would rather die a hundred times than place myself voluntarily in conflict with the Holy See. You know this yourself; my whole life proves it. I am deeply upset by this issue and I regret so much the discontent and disapproval it has occasioned against our little Society, already so cruelly battered. I hope the Sacred Heart, who is aware of the sincerity of our motives, will take pity on us.

3. We do not have quite in fact one hundred priests in our Society. I am responding to the appeal which you forwarded to me with reference to Pope Leo XIII's Jubilee, enclosing 200 francs (about 665 euros) towards the 200 masses which we have to offer.

4. In addition I am sending you on a further 100 francs for 50 masses which you will celebrate or have celebrated as soon as possible for a dead person at a privileged altar.

Cheerio, Father.
Good wishes in C.J.

Confidential

Dear Fr. Jouët,

Fr. Casas has written to me about something whose precise significance escapes him and which creates all kinds of quandaries for me. He informs me that he was asked by the Archbishop of Barcelona, acting on the orders of the nuncio in Spain, to provide information about our Society and our Barcelona house... It is more than likely that the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars has made similar requests of the nuncios in the countries where we have houses. I tremble at the thought that the Superiors of Antwerp, Holland, Salzburg, England, who demonstrated such a carping spirit at the last Chapter, will not let up about the Society and its administration, thereby bringing disaster upon us. I have written to them requesting prudence in their answers if they are queried. I cannot take much more. I am worried to death. What is the purpose of this investigation on the part of the Sacred Congregation? The recommendations on the part of the Archbishop of Bourges forwarded to Cardinal Verga were, in fact, quite favourable; he praised our Institute, its commitment, its attachment to the Holy See, its zealous work among the natives (in New Guinea), the great future which lay ahead of it, given the number of novices (about 50), scholastics (possibly 150), etc., the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association which we set up, and our zeal in spreading devotion to the Sacred Heart. Why, then, these new initiatives to which Rome has recourse? Are you aware of all this? I beg you to tell me what you know, and think, and, as well, try to calm things down with our Cardinal Protector and the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda. Let them tell us what we should do and we shall carry it out, but, please, try and see to it that Rome does not have recourse to harsh measures in regard to us.

Bishop Verjus is still in Sydney; he sent me a telegram yesterday that he was taking ship for France. He should be with us in 6 weeks.

Cheerio, my friend.
All good wishes in C.J.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I received your letter this a.m. with the indult dealing with the Laliaux issue. Many thanks. I am upset on noting that in Rome matters are so negatively understood (directed) against me. Following my explanation, and my basic good-will, I never thought I would stir up, against myself, this kind of ill-will. I only acted, together with my Council advisers, in the Society's best interests. From now on I shall keep quiet and give rise to no further difficulties. My greatest regret is that of having pained our venerable Protector and led him to speak those words of criticism which you have passed on to me. I shall never forgive myself, however involuntary on my part, for having occasioned him so much displeasure, alienating his good-will, he who has been so good and devoted to us. Everything which has gone on for the past 15 months quite mystifies me. The silence, the initiatives, the letters, the explanations, all have been misunderstood. It has surely something to do with my being unresponsive to grace. The Lord has permitted the devil to unloose himself on me and our little Society, striking at its heart in order to shatter it. I hope he will not succeed, but, meanwhile, the storm breaking about us is fierce!

2. (There is no number 1, above.) As regards the Quito issue we are only following the advice of the Archbishop of Bourges, who never favoured this foundation given the lack of personnel with which we were faced. Our intention had been to submit everything to Rome and await its decision. I spoke to the Archbishop, and he replied: "You have come to the end of your contract, and this Ecuador house has only caused you problems, keeping personnel which you more urgently needed elsewhere and he (Archbishop Ordonez) no doubt asked you for more personnel which you could not make available to him. In the face of the ill-will of the Archbishop of Quito, failing to meet the promises made to you in writing about a new contract, you do not have to hesitate. Send a reply stating that your missionaries will remain no longer in Quito. Rome will have no reason to blame you; on the contrary, it will approve of what you are doing because you are acting judiciously. Write to your eminent and good-willed Cardinal Protector fore-warning him about this decision. This is all you have to do." I did so in the belief that I was acting in the best interests of our Society, and there it is: I am being harshly blamed. I am forwarding the whole dossier dealing with the matter. Present it to those who are involved and we shall wait on the Holy See's decision, since we are obliged to do so. I sent a telegram to Fr. Barral, in keeping with the wishes of Cardinals Monaco and Rampolla to hold over departure until Rome had given its decision.

3. I don't have to say to you any more that the mother house is at the limit of its resources, that intake can no longer meet expenses because of the burdens which weigh on French Catholics, halting contributions, and, as well, all the Society's houses place financial pressure on it when petitioning it to meet their general needs. All this you are aware of, and yet you continue to insist without letting up on having 1,200 francs (about 4,000 euros) made available for every scholastic we send to you, instead of the 1,000 francs which we think is enough. Very well! We shall give you your 1,200 francs to keep the peace, but we find ourselves in the necessity of no longer being able to send our young men to Rome since our resources no longer permit us such expenditure. If, on the contrary, you could have found a way whereby you would be quite happy with a contribution of 600 francs, 700 at the most, it would not have been just six young men who were being sent on to you but twenty. In any event, let us not keep on about this any longer. You will have your 1,200 francs.

4. We wholeheartedly approve of Brother Field's ordination to the subdiaconate, given your good report and approval.

Dear Fr. Barral,

The Secretary of State, Cardinal Rampolla, our Protector, Cardinal Monaco, on coming to know that I had written to the Archbishop of Quito recalling our confrères from Sagrario asked me to send a telegram to you putting off your return to France because the Holy See wishes to give serious consideration to the issue. It is only after this investigation that we shall be informed, positively or negatively, about leaving Ecuador. If Rome wants us to stay on in Sagrario, very likely it will enter into negotiations with the Archbishop, approved also by the Government, so that we may be assured of a stable and advantageous position for the future. Consider my last letter then as soon to be acted on.

Meanwhile be patient until the verdict is reached about this matter. Be shrewd and careful; do not compromise anything. Be continually respectful, dedicated, gracious towards the Archbishop and respectful of the Chapter. Keep me informed of all that's going on. I depend on your discretion that nothing should be compromised. Leave it to divine providence to shape these events. Rome has taken over the issue following the negotiations, and it has spoken, and we shall respectfully accept its judgment as obedient sons of the Holy See. Remain hopeful; the Sacred Heart and Our Lady will not forsake us.

My best wishes to all our dear confrères and Brother Herbert.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Let Archbishop Ordonez know that Rome has requested that your departure should be postponed.

Council Meeting, May 18, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

Lay brother Richard Beathy accepted for first vows.

1. At the request of Richard Beathy, and following the favourable recommendation of Fr. Derichemont, Superior, the Council accepted for profession this brother who has had more than a year's novitiate at Watertown.

Lay brother Bernard accepted for renewal of vows.

2. Following the request of Brother Bernard from the Tilburg house, and the positive approval of Fr. Lanctin, Superior, the Council accepted him for renewal of vows at the end of his three-year commitment.

The lay brother Gerard given permission for a family holiday.

3. Fr. Lanctin made it known that lay brother Gerard, whose temporary vows expire on December 25, would like to have a holiday with his family to restore his health, which has been affected by much too involved and prolonged office work. The Council agreed that this request should be granted.

The scholastic Brother Field accepted for the subdiaconate.

4. At the request, and given the favourable report, of Fr. Jouët, the scholastic Brother Field, studying at the Rome house, was accepted for the subdiaconate.

The rescript concerning the validation of Brother Laliaux's ordination.

5. The General read a letter from Fr. Jouët with the information that the validation document about Laliaux's ordination was being forwarded. The recalling of our confrères in Quito was also mentioned. As for the validation it is to be noted that nowhere is it suggested that he (Laliaux) needed validation in the circumstances described; the validation is granted because it was requested juxta petita. The request is hypothetical, the validation equally so. Until there is proof to the contrary, it is permissible to think that it was not really required.

Delay in departure from Quito.

The Council is not of the view that the recall should be countermanded. With reference to the Quito issue, Fr. Jouët has tried on a number of occasions to counteract the Council's decision, now about to take effect, since the letters recalling those there are on the way. He brings forward, either by way of pressure on the Council or by way of scaring it, the authority and impact of Cardinals Monaco and Rampolla, requesting that a telegram be sent to Quito counteracting the departure. The Council is not at all in favour of sending such a telegram and entering new negotiations which would postpone lengthily and indefinitely the arrival of our confrères, who are so badly needed by us. It was decided that Fr. Piperon should go to Rome to deal in a discreet way with this issue, ridding it of the misunderstandings and difficulties, more apparent than real, which have arisen (out of vested interest) in order to gainsay the Council's decisions. Having in mind that this issue should be dealt with as discreetly as possible, it was decided that Fr. (Piperon) should, as delegate, carry out at the same time a visitation of the Rome house where he will present himself as Visitor.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

The indulg about the Laliaux issues has arrived. Many thanks. We have begun visitations of our houses; Fr. Piperon has done some already, and the Council appointed him to do that of Rome. He will arrive there towards the middle of next week, very likely on Wednesday morning. He will discuss all your problems and concerns with you. I haven't the time to write any more to you.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

Yes, indeed, Archbishop Marchal's death is a great loss for the diocese in which he did so much good, but it is a cruel blow for us also given the difficult circumstances in which we find ourselves. I hope the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Our Lady will take care of us in our great needs. What is going to happen at Chezal-Benoît, given our vitally important work there? It is an ecclesiastical benefice (in Canon Law) and during the diocesan vacancy it will be administered by a lay official, perhaps sold. The Government is, who knows, about to say good-bye to us. What a black horizon unfolds!!! Meanwhile who will replace Archbishop Marchal as Archbishop of Bourges? In every respect it would be best if it was the Bishop of Sinope (his brother). Might you not suggest to the Holy See that he be presented by the Nunciature as its candidate? (!!!) The Government, very likely, would not dare to reject it (the brother's candidature). The good work already accomplished by the Archbishop would continue and, moreover, in the Bishop of Sinope we would have a friend and dedicated supporter. Try and do something about this. It is necessary to act quickly because a new Archbishop will be urgently needed. The funeral takes place on Wednesday. I shall send the Bourges religious weekly to you.

Dear Fr. Piperon,

Thanks for your letters. Yes, the Archbishop of Bourges' death is a terrible blow to us, for Chezal-Benoît in particular. I shall follow closely the sequence of events. I do not think your presence is needed; stay in Rome as long as is necessary because it's more important (than to be at Chezal-Benoît given Piperon's brief in Rome, see above).

Issoudun, June 13, 1892

Dear Father,

1. Thank you for your letter and the Brother Laliaux rescript.

2. The Chapter is no longer a mystery, either for you or myself. I let you know about it as soon as I became aware of it myself. What more could I do? You knew all about it as long as I did myself. Like you I abandon all to divine Providence, while hoping that in the general interest the Bishop of Sinope will be appointed apostolic delegate, praying indeed that it be so. I am sorry to find you rather indifferent (un-moved) facing such an important issue.

3. I asked Fr. Piperon to discuss with you the allocation of money to meet your expenses. I shall not be found wanting, my friend, in coming to your aid insofar as this is possible in order to meet the expense of running your house. We shall do the best we can to accommodate your needs. If you only knew how much we are limited at the moment through the transfer of the novitiate and scholasticate, as well as the Petite Oeuvre, to Chezal-Benoît, and the repairs which we found it necessary to carry out there. You cannot imagine what it was like. We can no longer make things meet, and are compelled to ask our other houses to come to our aid financially, as is the case in other communities (orders). We still owe 125,000 francs at the Paris house (about 416,180 euros) to the credit company and 60,000 francs on the Vichy house on which we are paying interest which it comes to 9 or 10,000 francs a year and we are still not able to unburden ourselves of the debt. Who among our confrères engages himself with these crushing financial burdens? Nobody! In your considerateness, my friend, be sympathetic to me and share my concerns. Moreover, we are paying 2,800 francs to the Archbishop of Bourges towards the tenure of Chezal-Benoît, without taking into account 1,500 francs in taxes as well as other general expenses. Fr. Piperon expects to return at the end of the week. I look forward to the pleasure of his return, and his news of you.

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

1. The meeting began with a reading of the minutes from the previous meeting which was approved, except for some changes in relation to the Laliaux issue and the Quito departure which were confirmed as a result of the decisions brought from Rome by Fr. Piperon and the memorandum he presented to the Secretariate of State.

A rescript stating that the temporarily professed cannot be put forward for orders titula mensae communis.

A. As regards Laliaux's ordination, the Sacred Congregation has decided that the competence to put forward subjects for Holy Orders mensae communis is not granted in or by our indults for those who are temporarily professed since they are not associated in a definitive manner with the Congregation.

Memorandum from Fr. Piperon to Cardinal Rampolla about Quito and the referral of the decision to him.

B. In the memorandum Fr. Piperon explained how Missionaries of the Sacred Heart went to Ecuador to work for Archbishop Ordonez and were installed at Sagrario, the cathedral parish of Quito. Differences arose between the Archbishop and the missionaries and as a result Fr. Jouët was sent there and he brought unity but, unfortunately, it didn't last long. The Congregation now finding itself facing a crisis, the Council decided to disengage from Quito, but this did not prevent the Superior General, moved by appeals from Quito, to reconsider the matter. The Archbishop, however, supported by the Government, having first sought to keep our confrères through advantageous proposals, then withdrew them (the proposals), everything, thereby, coming to nothing, and, in consequence, the (MSC) Council became determined in its resolve to leave Ecuador. Then the Archbishop of Bourges was asked to endorse with the Holy See our resolve to leave, he stating that as our contract had expired we only needed to recall our members and let Rome know at the same time. As a consequence of this, the Superior General sent a letter recalling his men from Quito and a letter advising Cardinal Monaco about this, and the latter replied that Quito could not be abandoned without agreement with the Secretary of State and, consequently, a telegram should be sent to our confrères to postpone their departure (for the moment). The final, decisive, decision, was left to the Cardinal Secretary of State.

Giacomo Cantoni accepted as a postulant.

2. There followed appraisal of requests for admission to postulancy, novitiate and profession.

A. Giacomo Cantoni from Mandello Lario, Piedmont, aged 34, asked in a letter dated June 4, 1892, to enter the Society as a lay brother, offering to come at his own expense and pay for his keep during his probation. Fr. Jouët testified to his piety and enthusiasm in spreading the Congregation's message, and the Council, accordingly, accepted him as a postulant.

The postulant Bachmeyer admitted to the novitiate.

B. The postulant lay brother Bachmeyer, a Bavarian, aged 21, a tailor by profession, was accepted for the Salzburg novitiate, being recommended by Fr. Meyer who greatly praised his piety, his discipline and liking for work.

The lay brother Joseph Arends accepted for final vows.

C. Fr. Meyer also highly recommended the lay brother Joseph Arends for final profession, his second three years ending on August 15, meeting in consequence the requirements of age and years of profession required by the Constitutions, and accepted, therefore, for final profession at the end of his second term of three years.

Brother Claudius Allera given conditional permission to visit his mother.

3. The Superior of the Antwerp house asks permission for the scholastic Claudius Allera to visit his mother who is seriously ill. The Council was of the view that this request could be legitimately granted, but on the condition that the journey's cost would not be met by the community, being entirely met by the family. The same conclusion is applicable to a Glastonbury brother who has asked to go home to deal with family property, monetary, issues before taking vows.

The proposal of a new purchase by the Antwerp sisters rejected.

4. The Superior (MSC) proposes to complete the purchase of ground for the setting up of a Notre Dame Sisters' foundation with the acquisition of an additional 1,500 metres of ground, which would add to the size of the garden and eliminate a prospected street which would cross it. The Council, aware that the Antwerp house finds itself presently faced with considerable debts and with the sisters in no position to indemnify us for such a serious undertaking, decided that there was no good reason to approve of the projected purchase.

Be kind enough to convey to the Cardinal my grateful acknowledgement for the amount of financial support allocated to our missions.

Council Meeting, June 23, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

The novice Cadou goes home.

1. The novice Cadou, called to military service and unable to proceed with his novitiate, will be given his freedom, and his fee at the major seminary need be paid no longer.

The contribution for students studying in Rome raised to 1,200 francs.

2. Given Fr. Jouët's request, and the recommendation by Fr. Piperon, that in view of the expenses involving the Rome house, as well as the absence of a financially competent individual who would look after financial issues and bring about desirable economies, the contribution from the mother house to meet the expenses of the scholastics should be raised to 1,200 francs for each one, beginning with the third term this year.

Decision about student swimming.

3. Fr. General having forbade swimming for the Chezal-Benoît scholastics during term-time, the Council thought that this refusal of permission was too absolute. Accordingly, swimming (bathing) will be allowed in the warmer season for the scholastics and once a week for the Petite Oeuvre students, during their walks.

The possibility of acquiring ground for a cemetery (Issoudun).

4. Since the concession acquired and paid for at the time of Fr. Vandel's funeral for a burial plot, lasting 15 years, has now expired, it was decided that a plot of ground should now be acquired in perpetuity to bring together the remains of our dead confrères in Issoudun.

Brother Cochard given leave of absence.

5. It was decided that, given the uncertain state of Brother Cochard's health, he could go home to his family. As his vocation, like his health, is also uncertain, this time off, and outside, will help him to consider matters.

Dear Father.

1. Fr. Piperon has returned from his trip (to Rome) quite satisfied. He found a good spirit among your young men. The book-keeping and accounts, he thought, left something to be desired. Kindly have an eye to this.
2. You will be allotted 100 francs (about 330 euros) each month to meet the living expenses of the students you are looking after.
3. Bishop Verjus is due to disembark at Marseilles about July 2, I gather. I fully approve of you going there to meet him since you expressed the wish to do so. If you could go with him to Lyons to meet the Propagation of the Faith committee, and then to Paris for the same reason, thereafter to Issoudun where we shall be delighted to see you, I wholeheartedly approve all this. The Propaganda committee (Paris) is only making 38,000 francs (about 126,500 euros) available to Bishop Couppé. There is here a lack of balance since, obviously, Bishop Navarre has a much larger number of personnel. Bishop Verjus will clarify all these issues. I am forwarding 200 francs for your journey.

You may share this letter with those who think like yourself.
J.C.

Dear Father,

Your latest letter has safely arrived and I am replying to it, simply putting before you what the circumstances are as regards the Chapter and its forthcoming convocation.

You are already aware that on three different occasions following our meeting in January 1892, I strongly requested the calling of a Chapter, but without success. Our last request was made, in effect, last spring, and the Cardinal Prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars wrote confidentially to the Archbishop of Bourges asking him what measures should be undertaken in order to restore peace (and unanimity) among us. On my advice, His Grace replied that the only way forward was to call a Chapter as soon as possible, but His Eminence the Cardinal in another letter asked Archbishop Marchal to put forward one or other proposals as the Sacred Congregation was not keen on having a Chapter called for the time-being.

It was at that time I wrote to all our Northern houses. Every Superior agreed that a Chapter was the only solution. You yourself wrote to the Archbishop of Bourges with this same understanding of the issue. The Archbishop in my presence wrote another letter to the Cardinal, confirming to him once more that the Chapter was the only way to remedy the situation. This is how things were when, to bring matters to a head, we decided to send Fr. Piperon to Rome with a letter for the Cardinal of which there is a copy enclosed here.

In an interview with Cardinal Monaco on his own, he, our Protector, handed him this letter, but His Eminence replied: "It is pointless, for the decree to call a Chapter had been issued when word came to us of Archbishop Marchal's death and we had appointed him as the Holy See's delegate. One must now, most likely, await the appointment of his successor."

Here, then, Father, are the facts simply stated and I have very much wanted to put them to you because you are well-motivated, your letter making it clear that you are warmly attached to our dear Society and its Superior. But let me tell you, Father, that despite all the administration has done to bring about a solution and set up a Chapter, it is disappointing and depressing to find unjust suspicions and a critical spirit still persisting. I am sick and tired of it and I am not the only one who is taken aback by all this. Cardinal Monaco, in the private meeting already referred to above, expressed himself succinctly to Fr. Piperon with regard to all of this: "We are annoyed and bored by all these letters which are being sent to us independently of the Superior General. They are proof that there is very little in the way of a spirit of dependence and respect. This is not the way the spirit of God goes to work."

It is very likely, Father, that our problems would be solved long since if there had been more measures of peace and calm about. If things are going to be stirred up once more, I am not going to react in any way; the responsibility will be entirely with those who will have stirred things up.

As for Fr. Jouët, he is absolutely uninvolved in all of this since he didn't know about the correspondence which passed between Cardinal Verga and the Archbishop of Bourges. This position (attitude) is only taken up when one is prejudiced against someone, he being always at fault even when, in fact, as is the case here, he is completely innocent. Please, let us bring fairness and charity into our judgments and the good Lord will be honoured. We ourselves will gain merit and Fr. Jouët come to be appreciated since, despite his having faults like everyone else, he has outstanding qualities, as well as a spirit of devotedness and submissiveness which I would like to see in all our members.

Be assured, Father, of my best wishes in C.J.

To Fr. Théophile Reyn, MSC, Superior, Antwerp.

Issoudun, July 1, 1892

Dear Fr. Reyn,

Many thanks for your letter which once more is proof to me of your attachment to the Society and your regard for myself. Your letter would seem to imply that our confrères are under the impression that I do nothing to try and calm things (people) down. They are all greatly mistaken.

I have on many occasions, both in speech and in writing, made you aware, as well as those who share your views, of the numerous efforts I undertook to achieve the result we are all hoping for. I sadly note that I wasn't believed. And if one gave credence to my words, and had more confidence in me, there would be no need to return so often to the same subject with menacing threats and anticipated fresh disagreements. The Spirit of the Lord cannot be the inspiration for such-like attitudes. And, as you say so well, and appositely, my friend, nobody more than myself wants peace and harmony, and yet it is sad to be the Superior and founder of a religious society held in suspicion by his confrères and called upon by them to take action under the threat of revolt from his subjects. I see in all that has happened my being punished for my sins. I acknowledge this, and weep for my part. Nevertheless, since I have to speak out, here is what has taken place. It's for yourself, and those who share your thinking.

Following my meeting last year, I sought and sought, more than people realized, to restore unity among us. On three occasions I officially requested that a new Chapter take place. On the first occasion the reply intimated that it would be premature; on the second occasion it was said that I should await until the validation process was completed for the spurious, legally uncertain vows; and the third time it was stated that the Chapter could not take place until all the members had accepted the changes made in the Constitutions. You know all this.

As for new initiatives, the Cardinal Prefect of the Sacred Congregation wrote confidentially to the Archbishop of Bourges asking him what initiatives should be undertaken in order to bring about unity. His Grace asked me to meet him in order to ascertain my views. I told him that a Chapter was, I thought, absolutely necessary, and he replied (to Rome) in this vein. But the news from Rome was that the Sacred Congregation did not approve of a Chapter for the time-being and he, the Archbishop, was asked to suggest an alternative. Our regretted Archbishop informed me of this decision. It was at that moment that I entered into consultations with the Superiors of our Northern houses. All informed me that only a Chapter could provide a remedy for the situation. I again went to Bourges and showed the Archbishop the letters which had reached me, including one from yourself. His Grace, in my presence, then wrote another letter to Cardinal Verga making clear once more to him that, in the light of the information which had most recently reached him, a Chapter, to be held as soon as possible, would appear to be the only solution. Matters so rested for one or two months, and then Fr. Piperon went to Rome. Not knowing what the reply would be on the side of the Sacred Congregation, we took the decision, in order to expedite matters, to give him a letter for Cardinal Verga asking him to put an end to our problems, authorizing as soon as possible the holding of a Chapter.

In a private meeting between Fr. Piperon and our eminent protector (Cardinal Monaco), he (Piperon) handed him a letter for the Cardinal Prefect (Verga). Cardinal Monaco perused it closely and said (to Piperon): "It is pointless giving it (the letter) to Cardinal Verga because the Sacred Congregation has decided, unanimously, to give you a Chapter. The decree was drawn up and about to be sent to Bourges when we had news of your distinguished Archbishop's death, and he had been appointed apostolic delegate (to the Chapter). Accordingly, we must now wait for his successor's appointment."

Advised by Fr. Piperon, I wrote immediately asking the Sacred Congregation not to delay the Chapter and to appoint as apostolic delegate the Bishop of Sinope, Archbishop Marchal's brother. I didn't get a reply.

There, then, Father, are the facts such as they are, truthfully presented. I very much wanted them brought to your attention because you are well-motivated and sincerely attached to our Society and your Superior and you, like myself, very much regret all that has gone on. But permit me to say to you, my friend, and you will concur with me, that, following all that the administration has attempted in order to bring about an acceptable solution, it is heart-breaking to find that a defiant challenge and a critical spirit still persist and are even found among our younger men. How irresponsible this is! I am not the only one to disapprove of this attitude; in Rome itself it has become tiresome. Cardinal Monaco, in his audience with Fr. Piperon, expressed himself pointedly in this regard. "We are annoyed and tired," he said, "by all these letters and memoranda which are reaching us without reference to the Superior General. This way of proceeding proves to us that there is the lack of a submissive spirit and it is, moreover, very bad witness. Good religious, moved by the spirit of God, do not behave like this."

It is quite likely, Father, that our problems would have been solved long since if there had been more calm and moderation about. What purpose does all this agitation and impatience serve? It only makes Rome ill-disposed to us. Please, let us calm down, awaiting calmly and confidently the Providential moment. Since we are certain that there will be a Chapter shortly, let us put our preoccupations behind us and pray.

As for Fr. Jouët, he is totally, my friend, outside all these negotiations. You can see for yourself that his influence is not so extensive and, accordingly, it is very incorrect to point the finger at him, because everything described in the foregoing was done without reference to him and his impact. Please let us be more just and charitable in our judgments. Fr. Jouët, no doubt, has his faults. Indeed! Who hasn't?! But his qualities cannot be overlooked. Who can ignore or fail to accept what he has done over the past 25 years for the well-being of the Society? He is pious, intelligent, zealous, devoted to and accepting of every task, absolutely committed and very well-disposed towards everyone. I would like all my confrères to have his religious spirit. The Chapter will decide for Fr. Jouët, as also for the present Assistants, what will be considered best for the Congregation's interests. Once again let nothing become precipitate; let us wait patiently and pray.

Please accept my best wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

It is possible that I shall pay you a visit during the summer. Could you not come to an arrangement with Belgian and Dutch directors of pilgrimages by way of organizing a pleasant pilgrimage to Issoudun for September 8? The Paris pilgrims would join up with you and we would have a lovely experience. I count on your enthusiasm.

Issoudun, July 4, 1892

1. I am pleased to hear that you and Fr. Merg have arrived in France. The Lord be praised! Fr. Jouët expressed the wish to go and meet you at Marseilles and be at your service also at Lyons and Paris when you meet the Council for the Propagation of the Faith. You will together agree on what is the best course of action.
2. We are expecting you at Issoudun for our confirmation towards the end of this month or later, since, as the Archbishop of Bourges is dead and his brother quite ill, our expectations rest on you. Do not miss out on being here.
3. Please convey our respectful good wishes to dear Fr. Caseneuve and all his worthy family; greet Fr. Jouët and Fr. Merg on my behalf.

Please accept, my Lord, my best wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I have received 30,474 francs 30 centimes (about 101,460 euros) on behalf of the New Guinea mission and 7,000 francs (about 23,300 euros) from the Holy Child. Try and get your allocation from the Propagation of the Faith increased. It's not enough. I received 30,673 francs, 50 centimes (about 102,125 euros) for Bishop Couppé. There is no proportion (balance as between the two Vicariates). It's either Fr. Delaporte or Fr. Miniot who will be responsible for getting this money on your behalf. I am sending you the Propagation of Faith documents to be filled in.

Issoudun , July 6, 1892

Dear Fr. Jouët,

No. There is not all that of a contradiction, as you seem to think, between Fr. Píperon's letter and my own. When he arrived in Issoudun he made known to me your wish to go to Marseilles and meet Bishop Verjus. Since we are so short of money, and since we can no longer tie up the two ends, we thought that it wasn't necessary to spend several hundreds of francs on a trip which wasn't necessary. It was an economizing issue, as you can see. Fr. Píperon then left for Chezal-Benoît. After he left it occurred to me that your trip to Marseilles could, nonetheless, have its uses for our missions, and also at Lyons and Paris with the Propagation of Faith committees. I mentioned this to our confrères who shared my view, but I also thought that by doing so you would have the opportunity of seeing your family and friends. (Jouët was, of course, from Marseilles.) You can see then, my friend, that there was no ulterior motive at work. You are becoming too logical, making yourself become ill at ease for nothing.

The telegram from Bishop Verjus was dated May 10, Sydney, informing me that he was taking the steamship on the 25th, arriving at Marseilles on July 2. But, then, Fr. Tréand wrote from Sydney on May 24th, 14 days after Bishop Verjus' telegram, to say that Bishop Verjus hadn't received his trunk containing his documents and tickets and would have to postpone his departure for 6 weeks. This is the reason why I sent a telegram to say that the Bishop would not be in Marseilles on July 2. Imagine my surprise, then, when on July 3 I had a letter from Bishop Verjus informing me that he was about to arrive in Marseilles! I immediately contacted you. Could I do anything else, or better? You will be much more helpful to Bishop Verjus than Fr. Merg in Marseilles, Lyons, Paris. Pay our respects to your good sisters, to Fr. Caseneuve, his family, etc., etc.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I asked Bishop Verjus to come and confirm our Issoudun youngsters during the last fortnight of July. I count on you.

Council Meeting, July 7, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Píperon, Morisseau, Maillard, assistants; Fr. Batard, General Bursar.

Acceptance of Augustin Angelini to postulancy.

1. A request from Fr. Cadot, Chaplain to the Claretian Sisters in Nantes, on behalf of Augustin Angelini, was considered; a former pupil at the Guérande minor seminary and the Nantes philosophy seminary, which he had to leave because of a financial disaster which led to his father being imprisoned. As his director suggested to him that he enter a community he said to the Chaplain that he would like to enter our Congregation. As the Chaplain vouches he meets the conditions of the requisite piety and ability, consequently the view was taken that he could be accepted on giving a 400 francs contribution towards his novitiate year.

The transfer of the Petite Oeuvre from Canet to Barcelona.

2. The Petite Oeuvre cannot remain at Canet in close proximity to fee-paying college students and, accordingly, it was decided to move it to Barcelona at the request of Fathers Casas and Carrière.

3. Following an earlier decision, the upper class (rhetoric students) at Chezal-Benoît will be allowed to go on holiday for some time with their families on condition that they find the money to meet the cost of the journey.

Brother Gregory accepted for renewal of three-yearly vows.

4. Brother Gregory (Jean Huser), a lay brother in the New Britain missions, who took first vows in August 1889, was accepted for renewal of vows on the commendation of Bishop Couppé.

Issues from now will be put before the Council only after consideration and a report from a member of the Council.

5. The decision was taken that, in future, issues of some importance, before being deliberated on, would be given beforehand to one of the consultors for perusal, and he would summarise them as briefly and clearly as possible before presenting his summary at the Council's next session. One avoids, thereby, any precipitate conclusions and any time-wasting caused by purposeless discussions when one tackles issues which have not been considered and clarified in advance.

Council Meeting, July 12, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Morisseau and Maillard, assistants; Fr. Batard, General Bursar.

Acceptance of lay brothers Justinus, Mathias, Augustinus to first vows.

1. Fr. van Grinsven presented and supported the request of five lay brother novices for first vows, as well as four postulants entering the novitiate, and left it to Fr. Piperon to give his verdict. He approved the acceptance of the three novices whose reports are satisfactory in every respect: Justinus, otherwise Johannes Berkers, born Asten, Holland, October 30, 1860; Mathias, otherwise Anton van den Eijnden, born Veghel, Holland, June 30, 1865; Augustinus, otherwise Willem van Meurs, born Kekerdom, Holland, June 29, 1856.

Postponement of Brothers Isidore and Eloi's acceptance.

Having been accepted at the July 21 meeting, Brothers Isidore, Cornelius van Miert, born Goirle, Holland, April 23, 1869, and Eloi, Jan van Andrichem, born Gravenhage, December 13, 1871, not having given satisfaction as to their health and ability, it was decided that their acceptance should be postponed until fuller, more assuring, information is available.

Acceptance of lay brothers Peter, Lambertus, Ludger, Emmanuel for the habit.

The four postulants due to take the habit, following good reports, may be accepted straightforwardly; they are Peter van der Eijken, born Ravenstein, June 25, 1873; Lambertus van Wellen, born Hazerswoude, July 27, 1874; Ludger, Fréderick Hunsliège, born Warender, Germany; Emmanuel Weber, born Brühl, Germany. The Council accepted the recommendations of the priest advising on this issue.

The need for more precise information about candidates.

2. With regard to Fr. Grinsven's comments about the candidates presented by him, it is thought that they are too vague, limiting himself to one word about character judgement whether good or ordinary, and the same for intelligence and ability, whether good or mediocre, and whether their health is good or weak. This is not sufficient to provide the consultants with the requisite information to accept candidates such as they are in their strengths and weaknesses.

The student Pouillot sent home.

4. The decision was taken that the second year Pouillot, who hasn't proved satisfactory, should be sent home.

A new site for the scholasticate.

Finally, attention was focused on finding a new site for the scholasticate, since Chezal-Benoît, already limited, is not large enough for those about to come in. Consideration was given to setting up the scholasticate at the Sacred Heart on the site of the Petite Oeuvre which will be moved to Chezal-Benoît. Having discussed at length the advantages and drawbacks of this arrangement, a decision was held over for the next meeting.

Issoudun, July 12, 1892

Dear Father,

Thank you for letting me have your news. I am pleased to gather that you had a good journey and found your mother in good health.

I am sorry that your approach to the Dominicans did not succeed. Fr. Henriot has written to me saying that he couldn't accept. So we remain without a preacher; try and find someone. I think we shall have a splendid pilgrimage. Fr. Reyn, at my suggestion, has written to say that he is setting things in train to bring many Belgians and Dutch to Issoudun. I am about to write to the different directors of diocesan pilgrimages asking them to organize groups for September 8. Fr. Lorain, whom I saw yesterday, has assured me that he will get the Berrichons to come; try and do the same in Normandy.

I think it's a pity that we let the centenary of Pius IX pass by without doing anything when we owe so much to him (he was born in 1792). I have written an article which you will look over. That on Our Lady of Victories and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will be for the next issue.

Yes, you may use the 600 francs (about 1,990 euros) for the purpose you mention. Here, there's nothing new. All the confrères wish to be remembered to you.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours ex intimo corde in Corde Jesu.

Council Meeting, July 18, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Maillard, Morisseau, assistants; Fr. Jouët, Procurator; and Fr. Batard, General Bursar.

Brother Laurenti accepted for final vows. Fr. Giovanelli appointed lecturer in the scholasticate.

1. Brother Laurenti, following his written request and the recommendation of Fr. Jouët, together with a favourable report from Fr. Piperon, was accepted for perpetual profession. The decision was also taken that Fr. Giovanelli would lecture in the scholasticate.

The acceptance of the postulant van Hoogstraten postponed.

2. Following Fr. Piperon's report, the Dutch postulant van Hoogstraten, unable to offer sufficient guarantees of intellectual ability, and unable to speak or understand French in conversation, but able to follow the lectures, cannot presently be accepted in the novitiate. He will remain for some months either at Antwerp or Tilburg to learn the language (French).

Advice given to Brother Power about the disposal of his assets.

3. Brother Power, who had been given permission to go home to settle his asset and property affairs before making final profession, and having made known his intentions to renounce all asset and property rights, was informed that such a procedure was unwise and the secretary was, accordingly, asked to write and inform him that he is at liberty to hand over the administration and interest of what is his to whomsoever, but since the Constitutions allow him to keep the property as such, he would be wrong to get rid of it.

Suggestions by Fr. Reyn to round off purchase-wise the property occupied by the sisters.

4. Although Fr. Reyn was earlier refused permission to buy a piece of ground to enlarge the property occupied by the sisters, he now proposes to sell part of the ground already bought for 20 francs a metre, the proceeds of which would almost provide that amount of money needed to buy the ground already mentioned (but refused), and it will cost no more than 5 or 6 francs a metre. This purchase would round off the property advantageously, eliminating a street which would run through it and make the whole property more valuable. The Council, having considered the matter, agreed that the purchase could go ahead on the conditions indicated, but its approval is not definite until the sale has taken place of what is to be sold, as well as the purchase of the aforementioned ground, and the elimination of the projected street becomes assured.

Discussion about the transfer and location of the scholasticate.

5. The location of the scholasticate came up again for consideration as well as the new building proposed at the Sacred Heart (Issoudun). A report by Fr. Piperon on these two issues was read, followed by another report from Fr. General. Suggestions were made, but there was no acceptable unanimity, the decision once again left over for a later meeting.

Issoudun, July 19, 1892

Dear Father,

I wrote to Father Marie-Antoine in Toulouse. If his reply is in the negative, we shall have recourse to someone else. Fr. Pascal, the former Dominican, might he not be suitable? Given the way things are, might it not be as well to invite once again Fr. Garnier (a diocesan priest)?

Bishop Verjus has been here in Issoudun for some days with Fr. Jouët and Fr. Merg from Sydney. His Lordship is very exhausted and the Dr. has recommended complete rest for a month at least. Otherwise, nothing new here.

Council Meeting, July 21; July 25, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard, assistants; Jouët, Procurator, Batard, Bursar General.

Plan to have scholastics ordained by Bishop Verjus.

1. Since some of the scholastics are due for tonsure and minor orders, Bishop Verjus could ordain them. The decision was, therefore, taken to write and ask the Vicar Capitulars in Bourges if they had the competence, and were agreeable, to authorize this ordination. If the reply was in the negative, the Bishop himself would ask Rome for the necessary permission.

Conditional acceptance of 4 students at Glastonbury.

2. Fr. Ramot is putting forward four rhetoric (final year) students from the Glastonbury college, J.W. Maher and Jos. Brooks, whose recommendations are excellent in every respect, and J. Grogan, W. Buckley who without being as talented have above average ability and qualities. The Council was pleased to accept them, but on condition that the money, in case they leave, should be made available, and that they pay a modest fee which can be amicably agreed on.

Acceptance of the students Badaroux, Baumann, Brirot, Erand, Laval, Rutten, Kleintitschen to the novitiate.

3. There followed a discussion about the Chezal-Benoît final year students who wanted to enter the novitiate. Following on the comments of the teachers and director of the Petite Oeuvre and the observations of Fr. Piperon at the meeting, the Council accepted the students named here below:

1. Ernest Badaroux, Mende diocese
2. Mathias Baumann, Germany.
3. Paul Etienne Brirot, Vichy, Allier.
4. Jean-Marie Erand, Nantes diocese.
5. Joseph Laval, Autun diocese.
6. Henri Rutten, Dutch.
7. August Kleintitschen, German.

Held over: doubtful.

1. Paul Czizikowski, Prussian Pole.
2. Jean Louis Fabre, Montpellier.
3. Louis Pierre Gouffé.
4. Jean Jos Kicken, Dutch.
5. André Clément Neumann, German.
6. Fernando de la Pena, Spanish.
7. Franc. Xav. Roseler, German.
8. Joseph Stettner, German.

Not accepted.

Jean Wulpers, German, nothing to commend him, was not accepted.

The scholasticate remains at Chezal-Benoît.

4. On returning to the location of the scholasticate issue, further discussions having taken place, together with a specific consideration of the issue by Fr. Maillard, the decision was taken that since there was no urgency to move the scholasticate to Issoudun, measures will be undertaken to keep it at Chezal-Benoît.

New buildings; smaller plans.

As for new work, the view was taken that the financial situation did not allow for work to begin on anything so large a scale as that which had been put forward, and that a new plan of smaller scale and in keeping with the present financial resources of the Congregation should be submitted for fresh consideration by the Council.

Decision about the three-yearly report for the Sacred Congregation.

5. On the recommendation of the Procurator (Jouët) it was decided that as soon as possible the three-yearly report on the personnel, disciplinary, economic and material state of the Institute, as prescribed in number 121 of the Constitutions, should be made ready so that it can be forwarded as soon as possible to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

Withdrawal of the circular accepting one annual financial report rather than the twice-yearly one prescribed by the Constitutions.

6. Several members having had recourse to the March 19 circular, 1890, permitting a once-yearly presentation of accounts, whereas the Constitutions, number 171, formally lay it down that it be done twice a year, that is to say six-monthly, the Council accepts that it erred in exempting the houses from making the report twice a year, that is to say every six months. The Council now believes that as the Constitutions are definitively approved, it is very much in order to observe them more faithfully and, consequently, the decision was taken that the circular of March 19, 1890, will be replaced by another one sent to all the houses.

The lay brother postulants, Isidore and Eloi, accepted for profession.

7. More detailed and satisfactory information having been provided by Fr. Van Grinsven about the postulant lay brothers Isidore Cornelius van Miert and Eloi Jan van Adrichem, held over from the meeting on the 12th of this month, the Council now accepts them for final profession.

Isidore Cornelius van Miert took the habit on December 8, 1890. (!)

Mr. Tarlier's plans were considered, the new buildings taking a line from the south wall of the old park to the north wall, and having heard from Mr. Tarlier about the extent and cost of these buildings, by majority the Council decided that only a part of the proposed plan would be carried out for the time being, from the south wall to the present Sacred Heart enclosure.

To Father Jean Vaudon, MSC, on a promotion trip.

Issoudun, July 31, 1892

Dear Father,

Our September 8 pilgrimage has had a lot of set-backs. Holland and Belgium are postponing their arrival until next year. Fr. Marie-Antoine cannot preach the Triduum, or Father Alfred Mermillod, to whom I had written, either. There remains Fr. Garnier to whom I am writing today. If he cannot accept, prepare yourself!

Yes, we are unknown; do some propaganda. Gather some priests around Fr. Garnier, in order to associate them with our Society. There would be some hope of success from this; try it. See about it when you are in Paris. Our retreat begins on the evening of August 16. Bishop Verjus isn't getting any better.

Today it's prize-giving at the school for outsiders (in Issoudun, as distinct from the Petite Oeuvre), tomorrow at Chezal-Benoît, and on Wednesday there's Archbishop Marchal's funeral.

Yes, at the present moment you may speak ex abundantia cordis (out of the fullness of the heart). You will do much more good for souls.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

NB: Attempt the impossible when in Paris by trying to organize a pilgrimage to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart on September 8. Go and meet the organizers of the pilgrimage to Pellevoisin which takes place on September 9. Try and get them to stop over at Issoudun on the 7th. I do not know them. Fr. Garnier will advise you.

Council Meeting, August 2, 1892

1. A serious complaint has been addressed to us by Father Benedetti, for the time being in charge of the Canet-de-Mar house in the absence of Fr. Carrière taking the Vichy waters, against the Brothers Assunto and Youlden, and of such a nature that it is absolutely imperative to send away at least one of them. The Council, on considering the matter, thought that in the interests of peace it would be best if Brother Assunto was, provisionally, changed to Barcelona during holiday time and that, following this latest information, a severe warning be delivered to the two delinquents.

Acceptance of eight students in the novitiate previously held back.

2. Having again considered the merits of the eight Chezal-Benoît students who had been held over as candidates of doubtful quality for the novitiate at the July 21 meeting, a definite decision was taken to accept the following postulants:

Paul Czizikowski, Jean Louis Fabré, Louis Pierre Gouffé, André Clément Neumann, Fernando de la Pena and Joseph Stettner.

As regards Jean Kicken and François Roseler, it was thought that before entry they should spend a year with their families in order to restore their health which at the moment is rather poor.

Acceptance of François van der Heijden as a postulant.

There followed consideration of the above-named, a former Chezal-Benoît pupil who, having been called up for military service, and being unsure of his vocation, left the Petite Oeuvre some months ago to enter a camp in Holland. Now, having changed his views, he is willing to accept any emplacement offered and go to the novitiate. The Council was in agreement about accepting him.

Twenty-two novices accepted for first vows.

3. The acceptance of 25 novices about to end their novitiate for temporary profession was discussed. Having read a deposition by the (Council's) secretary, based on information supplied by the Novice Master, and the viva voce observation made by him on each candidate, it was decided to accept for vows the 22 whose names follow:

- |                            |                              |
|----------------------------|------------------------------|
| 1. Joseph Bach             | 2. Georges Bögershausen      |
| 3. Joseph Bonaccorsi       | 4. Philippus Braun           |
| 5. Daniel Buckley          | 6. William Burke             |
| 7. Joseph Calloway         | 8. Henri Bakker              |
| 9. F. Fiate                | 10. Jean-Baptiste Fusshöller |
| 11. François X. Gsell      | 12. Louis Guerrero           |
| 13. Joseph Jouffray        | 14. Edouard Muldoon          |
| 15. William Muizers        | 16. Jacques Neyroud          |
| 17. Michael O'Reilly       | 18. Armand Pagès             |
| 19. Gustave Peeters        | 20. Pierre Louis Ronci       |
| 21. Georges van der Velden | 22. Joseph Viegen            |

The Council did not accept the novices Grimshaw, Gallagher, Smith as they did not offer adequate guarantees with respect to health, abilities, piety and moral outlook.

Request that Randwick (Australia) be given canonical status.

4. Fr. Tréand has written to say that the Cardinal Archbishop of Sydney is prepared to make available in perpetuity to the Congregation Randwick parish; consequently the process must be set in motion to acquire canonical approval, and it was decided that a request signed by the Superior General should be sent to the (Sydney) Cardinal who on receipt of it will have it ratified by Rome.

5. Fr. Reyn, on providing the guarantees sought by the administration concerning the changed situation as regards the acquisition ground plan, was given the sought-for authorization.

Request for release from vows on behalf of Fr. Xavier Klotz, Missionary of the Sacred Heart.

Most Holy Father,

Fr. Jules Chevalier, Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, whose mother house is at Issoudun in the archdiocese of Bourges, France, and its procure at Via Sapienza, 32, Rome, has the honour to prostrate himself at the feet of Your Holiness, and present to him what follows.

We have in our Society a member in perpetual vows who for quite some time has been a trouble-maker, projecting a divisive spirit damaging to authority among the Society's members, and of which we have positive proof.

Here are some facts:

1. At one of the Congregation's Council meetings held on April 11, 1891, his dismissal was decided on because of letters written by him to other members of the Congregation to dissuade them from giving due obedience to the Superior General. This decision gave rise to a letter from the same religious to Fr. General in which he promised to avoid either by word, writing, or action, anything which would be likely to diminish the confidence of the confrères towards the administration.

2. Despite these formal promises, following on the Chapter at which he was the moving spirit of the opposition, he continued to encourage his confrères to be rebellious against authority.
3. Most recently he has tried to stir up quite serious opposition, such that it jeopardizes the well-being of a whole house.
4. And then, quite recently, he tried to involve Bishop Verjus, our very pious and esteemed Vicar Apostolic, in his vendetta against his superiors, something to which the Bishop can testify. (See below)

By virtue of number 183 of our Constitutions as here presented: "Si quis infeliciter a societatis spiritu sic declinaverit, ut de ejus emendatione desperetur, et praesertim si hunc spiritum sua agendi ratione ex aliorum deturbaverit animis, hic prorsus a societate amoveatur...", the Council unanimously asks Your Holiness to be good enough to release from his vows the religious in question whose name is Francis Xavier Klotz, originally from the Strasbourg Diocese.

"Having recently arrived from our New Guinea mission, I was very saddened on finding divisions in our Chezal-Benoît house, calculated to compromise the future of our missions and that of the Congregation itself, since this house is both our novitiate and scholasticate. It is for this reason that I appeal to His Holiness to be kind enough to accept this request which I endorse in every respect, especially with regard to number 4."

+ S.H. Verjus

Coadjutor of New Guinea.

The Auxiliary Bishop of Bourges adds:

The confidence and respect which the Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, and his religious have always shown towards Archbishop Marchal of Bourges, who just recently has died, and to myself his brother and auxiliary, made both of us aware of the circumstances described in the present appeal. Our view over the past year was that he who seemed to be the principal instigator of the troubles with which it (the Society) was beset should be removed. Since then the situation has worsened and, if its course is to be arrested, it is an urgent matter to carry out the proposal of the Society's Council and, together with it, I petition Your Holiness to sanction this with his sovereign authority.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

Fr. Garnier has agreed to preach on the 6th, 7th and 8th of September. Prepare a little talk yourself for the 5th. You will greatly please people. Fr. Garnier wrote to me from Grenoble. I have just now received his letter.

Bishop Verjus remains quite ill.

I wrote to Fr. Deidier 8 days ago asking him to give us our retreat, but I haven't had a reply from him yet. His letter enclosed one for Fr. Brunet. I invited him to come to the retreat and he has sent me a telegram to say that he hasn't received my letter. Normally letters do not go astray from Issoudun to Paris. Tell Fr. Deidier that I am expecting him to be here and Fr. Brunet also.

Try to arrange a pilgrimage from Paris. Mention it to Fr. Delaporte and the other confrères; in my opinion one could easily get 40 people. They will have a 50% reduction.

Cheerio, Father. My regards to all. Until we meet.

Council Meeting, August 8, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Píperon, Morisseau, Maillard, assistants; Fr. Batard, Bursar General.

1. Fathers Píperon and Maillard having gathered from some scholastics that Fr. Klotz is the instigator of the general feelings being stirred up against Fr. Personnet (not an MSC, but in charge of the Issoudun school distinct from the Petite Oeuvre) and, as well, the Superior General's administration, and, besides, knowing from Bishop Verjus that the same Klotz made outrageous proposals to him in order to draw him to his side and, as well, delivering himself of certain remarks which demonstrate perverse attitudes towards the present administration and a presumption about the future, the Council deliberated on his case and agreed that the Holy See should be asked straightaway to release him from his vows and have him removed from the Society.

Fr. Lanctin named Rector of Chezal-Benoît.

2. Fr. Lanctin was appointed head of Chezal-Benoît, replacing Fr. Personnet, and director of the Petite Oeuvre.

Fr. Miniot, Superior in Paris.

3. Fr. Delaporte, having finished his second three-year term as local Superior in Paris, has been replaced by Fr. Miniot.

Fr. Hériault, Secretary General; Fr. Vaudon, mission ministry.

4. Fr. Hériault was appointed General Secretary and Fr. Vaudon to mission ministry.

Issoudun, August 9, 1892

Dear Father,

Fr. Klotz, as you are aware, is stealthily trying to create a bad attitude and feeling among our young men. It is becoming a matter of urgency to send him away. I send you a request to this effect. Be good enough to put it through (to the Holy See) and insist on its being carried out as it's urgent. It's like having a wolf among the flock of sheep.

I have received the decree calling the Chapter. There are only two questions to be considered: the appointment of the administration and the revision of the directory. It's the Bishop of Sinope (the dead Archbishop's brother) who will preside over it. I hope that all will go well because we are faced with some very headstrong people such as Fr. Guyot, Fr. Delaporte, whom we are replacing with Fr. Miniot, Fr. Lanctin whom we have moved from Tilburg, and Fr. Ramot. We shall appoint Fr. Hériault as secretary general and, very likely, Fr. Bizeuil to the mission ministry, giving both of them, thereby, a vote at the Chapter.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

I am awaiting a reply to my last letter.

Council Meetings, August 11, 16, 22, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard, assistants; Fr. Batard, Bursar General.

Georges Legardeur accepted as a postulant.

1. Georges Legardeur from Besançon, aged 18, the only son of an adjutant dead in battle, has completed his secondary studies and, keen to go to the missions since his infancy years, is accepted as a postulant at his own request and that of his mother, a benefactress of the Petite Oeuvre.

De Fróibly accepted as a lay brother postulant.

2. De Fróibly, a student at the Petite Oeuvre, unable to enter the priesthood novitiate due to lack of intellectual ability, is accepted for the lay brothers' novitiate.

The decision about Fr. Lanctin's appointment as head of Chezal-Benoît.

3. Given Fr. Lanctin's background and having again considered his confidential letter to Fr. General which indicates an unacceptable attitude, on the advice of the Bishop of Sinope, who was consulted about it, the decision taken on the 8th of this month that he be appointed head of Chezal-Benoît, replacing Fr. Personnet, was approved.

A decision about the closure of Canet (de-Mar).

4. Given the complete lack of personnel, the decision was taken to close the Canet College. The house will be put up for sale, or rented out in the absence of a buyer, or, otherwise, put to some purposeful use to the advantage to the Barcelona priests. If he would like to buy or rent it, Don Fernando will be given preference, and he is free to continue with the college, but at his own risk and responsibility, without any commitment on our part. This decision will be brought to the attention of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

The transfer and bringing together of the whole scholasticate at Issoudun.

5. Given the impossibility of having scholastics and novices together at Chezal-Benoît because of the need to find enough space there for the Petite Oeuvre from the lowest class to the top, on mature consideration the decision was taken to move the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre to Chezal-Benoît, with the Chezal-Benoît scholasticate moved to Issoudun where it will be equally joined by the Antwerp scholasticate so that from now on there will only be the one scholasticate.

Scholasticate Personnel.

The scholasticate will be in charge of Fr. Vandel, replacing Fr. Klotz, with Fathers Mathieu, Suchet, Giovanelli and Benedetti as lecturers.

Personnel at the Petite Oeuvre.

6. The staff was appointed as follows:

Director and Prefect of Studies: Fr. Carrière.

Teachers: Julien, rhetoric; Cochet, second class; Laliaux, third class; Delmas, fourth class; Pouvreau, fifth; Roussel, sixth and responsible for the youngest students; Bouvier, seventh; Compte for science; and Jourdon for history.

The day school, Issoudun.

7. Brothers Mourguis, François Boudin and Gotteland were appointed.

Report (financial) on the six-monthly accounts of the European houses.

8. The General Bursar reported on the accounts for the first half of 1892 from the different European houses, from which it was gathered that their finances were in a satisfactory state, except for Glastonbury. Antwerp and Salzburg are heavily in debt, but the intake makes it possible to support these houses and lessen annually a considerable part of their respective debts, which will, so it would appear, be cancelled out within three or four years. The Glastonbury debt is much less, but the intake is not enough to lessen it, being scarcely sufficient to meet the upkeep of the house.

Cardinal Verga, Prefect.

Given the attitudes and feelings of people, I firmly believe, Your Lordship, that it is necessary to call a Chapter straightaway. Because of the distance involving a number of our Superiors, we cannot in any way set a date for the gathering before 5 or 6 months have passed, that's to say January or February 1893. What do you think? I greatly wish for this Chapter to bring about peace and harmony among us.

There is here enclosed a plan for a circular to be sent to all who are due to come to the Chapter; be good enough to make whatever corrections which you might consider helpful. The Chezal-Benoît situation and its new head greatly concerns me.

With respectful good wishes, I have the honour to be your most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

The Chapter will open at the mother house on February 2, 1893. You need to get there and be present for the retreat which begins on the evening of January 29. If you have serious reasons for not being present, I would ask you to write and let me know as soon as possible.

I do not need to tell you, Father, that I count on your good-will, and your concern for what is best, to avoid in advance of the Chapter anything which could hinder the good-will and success of this gathering which we are calling with the greatest expectation, hoping it will put an end to the problems we are experiencing at the present time and open up a new era of advancement for our dear Congregation.

Chevalier had first written: "...an end to the defiance and divisions which menace our Society, and be a point of departure for a new era in our Congregation."

With all this in mind, and that the Chapter will have the divine Heart of Jesus' blessing, in all communities on receiving this letter, in the morning, after prayers, the Vini Creator will be said, and the "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart", and in the evening the litany of the Virgin, followed by the "Remember You" to St. Joseph. As well, each one is asked to have this special intention in mind at mass and communion.

Please accept my good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, August 15, 1892

Dear Father,

Rome, in the face of my request several times repeated, has authorized me to call a General Chapter in keeping with the new Constitutions, approved by decree of July 17 this present year.

Chevalier then reproduces, word for word, the Latin text given above in Article 2060. He continues:

The Chapter will open on February 2, 1893, at the mother house. You are requested to be there and present at the retreat beginning on the evening of January 29. If you have serious reasons for absenting yourself you are requested to make them known to me without delay. Do I need, Father, to say to you that I count on your good-will and your hopes for the best in order to avoid, before the Chapter takes place, anything which could be detrimental to a good outcome and the success of a gathering which we are calling with our most lively expectations and which, we hope, will bring to an end the problems of the present time, and lead our dear Congregation towards a new era of prosperity? Accordingly, and so that the divine Heart of Jesus will bless the Chapter, in all communities, on receiving this letter, after morning prayer the Veni Creator and verse will be said, together with the prayer to the Holy Spirit and the Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart; in the evening before the examination of conscience the litany of the Virgin will be recited followed by the "Remember St. Joseph". Each one is asked to have these intentions in mind at the Eucharist.

Please accept, Father, my renewed good wishes in Corde Jesu.

Dear Father,

Where are you? What has become of you? Did you receive our two registered letters, one of which had 200 francs (about 660 euros) enclosed for your journey and the other requesting Fr. Klotz's release from vows.

Bishop Verjus is a little better; he left Annecy yesterday for Marseilles to be with Fr. Caseneuve, who himself left yesterday, being due back, so I gather, in Marseilles on Sunday the 28th.

Council Meeting, August 29, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard, assistants; Fr. Batard, Bursar.

A second warning for Brother Cochard.

1. The Council took the decision to issue a further warning to Brother Cochard because of his silence and lack of candour with respect to Fr. Piperon, who had admonished him because of the unacceptable nature of a letter he had written to Fr. Maillard.

The role of Brothers Hannigan and Lynch in the secretive correspondence issue.

Brothers Hannigan and Lynch, having been implicated in the secret letter-writing issue, on considering their role, and given that they had not themselves written anything, knowing matters only through correspondence which they considered they should not reveal, the view was taken that Brother Hannigan could be accepted for perpetual vows, and also Brother Lynch who likewise made such a request. As for Brother Kuntz, a decision will be taken following the request for further information from Brother Alain de Boismenu who appears to be the source of this correspondence.

Varied appointments.

3. The decision was taken to put forward Brother Guillaume for the subdiaconate since otherwise he would be called up for military service if he is not a sub-deacon before next January.

4. Father Benedetti, due to be appointed lecturer in the scholasticate, will remain in Spain in charge of the Barcelona Petite Oeuvre.

5. Brother Power, from England (actually from Ballyheen, Kanturk, Co. Cork, Ireland!) will return to the scholasticate (from Glastonbury) and be replaced by Brother Conley. Brother Thomas Calloway will remain in Glastonbury until he is fully cured and he will be asked to help out insofar as this is possible for him.

6. Fr. Lanctin, no longer required at Chezal-Benoît, remains Superior at Tilburg.

7. Fr. Ramot is formally appointed Superior of Glastonbury.

8. Fr. Karsseleers will be in charge of the Antwerp Petite Oeuvre; Fr. Linckens will take exclusive charge of the German section (in the office) and Fr. Dezpresse of the French section.

9. In addition, to reinforce the Antwerp personnel and provide facilities to meet preaching requirements, it was decided that Fr. Peeters should move to this house.

To Cardinal Raffaele Monaco La Valletta, Protector.

Issoudun
Undated, likely end of August, 1892

Your Eminence, Cardinal Protector,

The Very Reverend Father Jules Chevalier, Superior General of the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, humbly prostrate at the feet of Your Eminence, petitions him to accept the respectful homage of his heartfelt acknowledgement of the fatherly concern Your Excellency has manifested towards our small Congregation, and for the decree calling the Chapter which, I hope, will restore peace to our dear Society of the Sacred Heart and, as well, for so kindly arranging an appointment with Fr. Piperon, Assistant General, whom I sent to lay different issues before Your Eminence.

The weight of the problems being experienced by our Congregation since the last Chapter was released by Your Eminence's decree, and its impact is felt more than ever. The General Administration often found itself faced with problems arising from the ill-will of some confrères who were stirring up unease and discontent. According to Your Eminence's advice, we need to act with firmness in order to safeguard the rights of authority, itself so necessary for the good spirit of a society in the process of growth. It is this which my assistants and myself will strive to put into practice without laying aside the principles of charity and good-will which are identified with followers of the Heart of Jesus.

Just the same, Eminent Protector, this firmness itself creates its own problems by alienating from the Congregation some individuals who, given their natural gifts, could have given it great service. We are caught in the painful necessity of closing some houses in order to provide the requisite numbers for more important communities, those in particular where our members pursue their studies. That is the reason why we have decided to close the Canet-de-Mar College in the Gerona Diocese, Spain. I am forwarding to Your Eminence the application in which I ask His Holiness to give us permission to withdraw our members from this house, and I make bold to ask Your Grace to support this request with your own authoritative approval. Several colleagues from this college are absolutely needed for placement in our houses of study and we lack people as their replacements.

In addition, Your Eminence, we urgently await a decision about the Quito house. The members of that community would greatly help us in our present circumstances if we could have them back in Europe and make use of them in the houses where they are needed.

I keenly hope, together with my assistants, that His Eminence the Cardinal Secretary of State will be good enough to take into consideration the basic reasons contained in the memorandum presented to him in my name by Fr. Piperon, my first assistant.

If I may so express myself, I would humbly petition Your Excellency to use his influence to bring about as soon as possible a solution to this matter.

The letter so ends.

B 18920831A

To Cardinal Monaco La Valletta Raffaele, Protector.

Likely late August/early September, 1892

Undated and unsigned.

Most Eminent Lord,

I humbly come to ask Your Eminence about bringing an end to the litigation issues involving the Ecuador Government and our Congregation in relation to our presence in Quito, where we had gone to supervise the work taking place at the Basilica of the Sacred Heart, while provisionally taking care of the Sagrario parish, which the Holy See agreed we should take on for five years. Because quite demanding experiences arose, with unfortunate consequences for us, we were unable to bring to an end the material work on the basilica, itself very much associated with the expectations of the Archbishop of Quito.

The Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars advised us to cut back on our excessive number of undertakings. On the explicit and reiterated advice of our lamented Archbishop Marchal we took the decision to withdraw from Ecuador at the end of our five years' occupancy of the Sagrario parish. Just the same, a section of the Quito faithful, wanting us to stay on, asked the Government to intervene, the issue then being referred to the Holy See through the intermediary of the Ambassador.

On the other hand, the Archbishop of Quito made advantageous offers to us which could become the basis of a new contract, limiting matters on our side to the religious side of the new basilica; we were sensitive to the requests of our confrères and asked for further explanations about the proposals being put to us. In his reply the Archbishop of Quito limited to virtually nothing the advantageous proposals he had led us to expect. Since, therefore, all initiatives appeared purposeless, we sent letters to our confrères recalling them, and, at the same time, notifying the Holy See about it through Cardinal Monaco, our Protector. His Eminence on expressing his disappointment that we recalled our members without getting prior permission to do so from the Holy See, I accordingly sent Fr. Piperon, my first assistant, to Rome and he, counselled by the Cardinal, countermanded by telegram the recalling of our Quito confrères, sending to Your Eminence on June 10 last a memorandum explaining the situation and circumstances, making possible a decision based on the facts of the case. It is this decision that, together with my assistants, I presume to be favoured with by Your Eminence and, given our inability to continue working in Quito, I cannot hold back from you our wish to bring it to an end. There are other factors which have a pertinent bearing on this.

1. The Archbishop of Quito, without advising our confrères, withdrew them from all involvement in the work on the basilica, proceeding to dedicate the Virgin Chapel under a different title to that which had been agreed with us, as is proved by the enclosed letter from the Quito Superior.
2. A recent request addressed to the Holy See, and which was sent to us, does not adequately reflect the wishes of the Quito people. This is not at all supported by the ecclesiastical authorities and, accordingly, it proves that we are not wanted or, at best, not very enthusiastically.
3. In the light of what has been put forward, our confrères find themselves in a situation where they are more and more compromised and, consequently, they want to leave.
4. Besides, the need of staff to maintain more important undertakings than that (in Quito) brings home the advantage every day of departure (from Quito).

Please accept, Your Excellency, my deepest respect as I have the honour to be Your Eminence's very humble...

The letter, document, so ends.

Issoudun, September 2, 1892

Dear Father,

I have received your letter and the views of Mr. Scalsi. I am taken aback. If we can no longer do anything, or say anything to Rome, for the good of our Society, without stirring up discontentment, what's going to become of us? The Lord well knows the good motivation of our intentions, and our wish to be favoured by the Sacred Congregation by doing everything it asks and suggests. And then I am under pressure, but I shall so remain as long as the Sacred Heart wishes. Since the present administration hasn't the confidence of Rome, it is to be hoped that what the next Chapter chooses will achieve something better than the preceding one. I am amazed that our honoured Protector can say that he doesn't know Fr. Klotz; if he read the spurious acts of the last Chapter, he might have been anything but impressed by him; in any event the official approval of the Bishop of Sinope and Bishop Verjus (against Klotz remaining in the Society) speaks for itself against him.

I sent Fr. Klotz to Vichy to replace the absent Fr. Guyot. He is still in doubt about our disapproval. Before he left I did not hide from him his unbecoming behaviour, making clear to him everything I knew about his scheming, from the Chapter right up to the present, and with proof to hand. He was shattered, going down, thereupon, on his knees and asking to be pardoned, appealing to me not to ask Rome to send him away, promising absolute obedience in future. He then put in writing his regret, expressing his sorrow, conveying his promise to mend his ways.

On receipt of Mr. Scalsi's observations, and given the hesitancy of the Sacred Congregation about approving Fr. Klotz's dismissal, I sent Scalsi Fr. Klotz's document begging to be forgiven, with the request to present it to Cardinal Monaco, stating that if the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars wished to show favour to the culpable repentant, we would wholeheartedly concur, and if the imposition of a penalty was thought to be appropriate in the case of Fr. Klotz, he would be quite willing to accept it. I await the reply. If one wants authority to be respected, there has to be an example set. Have a word with Monsignor Vernis (name unclear) about this; he will have plenty to say to you.

So much for the time being. We shall be speaking again about all of this.
Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

With full approval I give you permission to preach the retreat at Antwerp which you have been asked to give, and in this instance I am giving you a decision which was taken in Council.

Fr. Reyn, having informed us that he often received preaching requests, and being disappointed when he was not able to accept, we, for our part, thought of appointing you to the Antwerp house. Nobody better than yourself could meet such-like requests, as you can speak so well the two Belgian languages: French and Flemish. We are convinced that you will have a most salutary impact preaching the word of God. Otherwise, if this ministry does not fully engage you, you can meet whatever services the house requires of you and in this way your enthusiasm will not be inactive.

With my best wishes in sanctissimo Corde Jesu.

Council Meeting, September 10, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard, assistants.

New developments with regard to Quito.

1. It was accepted that new initiatives should be undertaken to bring the Quito situation to an end and bring about an imminent arrival (return to France) of the confrères. Another document which they have forwarded has additional reasons justifying their recall.

Acceptance to perpetual vows of Brothers Laliaux, Rascher, Von Hasselt, Dicks, Di Luzio, Ruggieri, Nieuwenhuis, Wemmers, Niesten, Crowley, Allera, Offermans, Lacan, Heines, Lotter, Pauly.

2. Following a discussion, the following scholastics were accepted for final vows, their temporary vows expiring in October.

1. Charles Laliaux of the Sacred Heart
2. Mathias Rascher
3. Godefroy von Hasselt
4. Jean Dicks, Chezal-Benoît
5. Moyses di Luzio and
6. Egidius Ruggieri, Rome
7. Jan Nieuwenhuis and
8. Joseph Wemmers, Tilburg.
9. Jan Niesten
10. John Crowley
11. Claudius Allera
12. Karel Offermans
13. Benjamin Lacan and

14. Henry Heines, Antwerp
15. Theodore Lotter, Salzburg
16. Theodore Pauly, Canet-de-Mar.

Postponement of profession for Brothers Kuntz, Hannigan, Lynch, Lindeboom.

Brother Kuntz in Rome, having compromised himself in secret correspondence with certain individuals in the Antwerp house, has been held back at the instigation of his Superiors; his confrères Hannigan and Lynch, who knew about this correspondence without revealing it, also became implicated and were likewise put back (for final vows). An indult which the Procurator judges to be needed, will be required to make this postponement legally proper. Brother Lindeboom, Antwerp, who didn't exhibit a good attitude during Fr. Piperon's visitation, was also held back for profession until he provided a satisfactory explanation.

Personnel appointments for Antwerp, Tilburg, Barcelona.

3. The following have been appointed teachers at the Antwerp Petite Oeuvre: Brothers Smits, De Jong, Christian Janssen, Knapen, Schmitz and Lebeau; at the Tilburg Petite Oeuvre: Nollen, van Dinter, Niesten, de Rijck, Wemmers, Nijsters, Glastonbury: Crowley; Barcelona: Brother Gutmann, with the already-appointed Reichert. Brother Assunto Constantini, presently in Barcelona, will return to the scholasticate.

4. Fr. Jouët has been given permission to take over a room as an office above the Petite Oeuvre's chapel (Rome).

Decision about Ceresi.

5. The scholastic Ceresi, who comes from a family of very modest circumstances, has asked to be ordained to the priesthood so that he can financially help his family through mass stipends made available to him. As he is thought to be overly attached to his family, he does not for this reason appear very suited to, or accepting of, the sacrifices called for in the religious life. It was thought that it would be best to open the door for him to leave the Congregation when he has gained his doctorate, following which he would easily find a bishop to accept and ordain him.

Issues involving Fathers Reyn and Guyot.

6. The Bishop of Sinope will be consulted about:

1. Fr. Reyn's status, in order to find out if he can be re-elected Superior at Antwerp without an indult when his three-year term ends next October, and despite his lack of the requisite age, and also, if replaced, whether the newcomer is entitled to be present at the Chapter.

2. As regards Fr. Guyot, one needs to ascertain if he should be looked upon as a Superior because he is in charge of an undertaking under the Society's auspices.

7. It was decided that a dispensation be sought for the novices Guillaume Neuzers and Aemilius van Rompaey who had to break off their novitiate because of military service.

Issoudun, September 11, 1892

My Lord,

I have the honour to put before you two issues about which I would like to have your advice, and which concern membership at the forthcoming Chapter. According to our Constitutions, numbers 107 and 145, in the Congregation's present circumstances, the assistants, the Procurator General, the general ministers, the Secretary General and local Superiors are called upon to be present, but it is with regard to the two last groups (the Secretary General and local Superiors) that two issues of concern have been raised.

1. Fr. Reyn, who was appointed Superior at Antwerp for three years before the law was introduced requiring one to be aged 35 for this role, finishes his three-yearly term next November and he will still be only 32 years of age. Could he be appointed for another three-yearly term without recourse to the Holy See, since he already has the Superior's office? If one appoints someone as his replacement is it he, Fr. Reyn, who is presently due to be called to the Chapter or his successor who will be there? In the event that someone with the capabilities to replace him cannot be found, and an indult is needed for him to remain there, should such an indult be sought or would it be better to have him replaced now by a less able individual? At the 1891 Chapter he was part of the opposition party.

2. We have at Vichy, with the Bishop's approval, a house, a hotel, looked after by a lawyer, which has a chapel quite well frequented during the spa season, served by Fr. Guyot, a former assistant, who resides in the hotel, where he is often on his own. Should he be looked upon as a Superior because he is in charge of an undertaking under the aegis of the Society and should he, consequently, be called to the Chapter? I don't think so, myself, because Vichy is not formally a religious house and he doesn't have the title of Superior. Moreover, he has been one of the opposition (to Chevalier) leaders.

In expectation of an answer to these issues, I respectfully have the honour to be Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: If you cannot, yourself, resolve these issues, would you be kind enough to forward them to Rome in order to avoid anything irregular at the next Chapter.

September 16.

Reply:

1. It is the Superior in office who is obliged by the regulations.
2. The Vichy house being a guest house, its guardian, who is there by himself, is not, in the accepted sense of the word, a religious Superior.

Council Meeting, September 17, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard, assistants.

Brother Jos Moorees accepted for final profession. Brother Lindeboom held over for final profession until October 17.

1. On the recommendation of Bishop Navarre, Brother Joseph Moorees, aged 30 and in temporary vows for 6 years, was accepted for final profession. Brother Lindeboom, having written a satisfactory letter of acceptance and, as well, having accepted an indefinite period of postponement with the utmost good will, the decision was taken to admit him to perpetual vows on October 17.

A fresh request for Fr. Klotz to be sent away.

2. Following new revelations made against Fr. Klotz during the scholastics' retreat, the decision was taken to write once more to the Sacred Congregation requesting his dismissal. Fr. Piperon was asked to write a letter which will be forwarded to the Cardinal Protector.

A fresh decision about amalgamating the Federation's Bulletin with the Annals.

3. Fr. Delaporte, having made approaches about publishing the Federation's Bulletin in our Annals, consideration was given to this proposal. Since this initiative was not considered as yet fully established, such an undertaking just now could become a fresh burden for the Society, since it is over-stretched already and, besides, this does not in fact quite mesh with the nature of our Annals due to its polemical and political articles, so much so that the coming together of the Bulletin and our Annals would give rise to continuous tension for Fr. (Delaporte) when the articles were being submitted to the censor, and might need some drastic pruning or changes and, consequently, the view was taken that the two publications should remain separate as before.

Fr. Chopin appointed to Paris, together with Brothers Vitalis and Bonaventure.

5. Fr. Chopin is appointed definitively to the Paris house, to which also the lay brothers Bonaventure and Vitalis will be assigned as cook and assistant cook.

Penance decreed for Alain de Boismenu.

Brother Alain de Boismenu, having provided explanations for being at fault in using invisible ink in correspondence with a Rome student, and now begging forgiveness for this lapse, the decision was taken to warn him, and as penance he will pray each day the Rosary twice in addition to what is laid down in the Rule and, therefore, he will pray the full Rosary each day for a whole month.

Request to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

Publication of request forwarded to the Sacred Congregation following the investigation referred to in dossier 3.

To be kept.

Issoudun, September 17, 1892

Your Eminence,

On the 9th of August last we were pleased to submit to Your Eminence an appeal endorsed by the Bishop of Sinope, the Vicar Capitular of Bourges, and Bishop Verjus of our Congregation, the coadjutor of Bishop Navarre, Vicar Apostolic of New Guinea. This appeal had as its objective the release from perpetual vows of Fr. François-Xavier Klotz, head of our scholasticate at Chezal-Benoît, Bourges Diocese. This young man, who was the moving spirit of the opposition at the last Chapter, and has created so many problems for us, has outrageously abused our confidence in him. We thought he had brought himself to a better frame of mind, but not so! Nothing is changed; having assured us in writing that he would act submissively and no longer rail against the authority of his Superiors, he started once more being destructive during the past year, and about which we have quite positive proof.

Having seen himself exposed, the unfortunate man wrote a letter of regret to us in which he acknowledged his wrong-doing. This letter was forwarded to you, distinguished Protector, by the intermediary of Mr. Charles Scalsi, apostolic forwarding agent. Since this took place we have received other reports which make clear to us this unfortunate religious' treachery, making us more than ever wish that he should take his departure from the Society. May we be permitted, Your Excellency, to make known to you some of these facts. What follows is drawn from documents written by members of the Chezal-Benoît community.

1. He says that "...with money one can get anything from Rome" (Document 30). An outrageous calumny no less hurtful to the very esteemed Congregation as for Fr. General. He gave it to be understood by a large number of our young confrères that the Rev. Fr. General had bought for money the decree which confirmed him in authority.
2. He claims himself to be a victim of jealousy and vendetta focused on him by his major Superiors (Document 25). "Salzburg was his Pathmos, and Vichy would become the second stage for him in his journey into exile." He was always saying: "Patience, patience, with a mysterious air about him" (Document 3). Then he was appointed bursar in Salzburg when he had himself put it in writing that he didn't want to be Superior any longer; he was, then, sent to Vichy as a replacement for the absent chaplain and to improve his health; his letter of acceptance did not include any other motivation.
3. Number 3 in the same document again re-affirms what follows. "Fr. Klotz has again spoken at times to me of the underhand role played by his Superiors as regards the validation of his vows, presenting themselves as tragic figures, tears in their eyes, as they begged to be pardoned, etc., etc." He adds: "When the Superiors classified themselves like this before us, what respect do you think we can have for them?" He spoke in this manner to a young religious about the Superior General and one of his assistants, who projected themselves, in fact, not arrogantly but with simplicity such as fathers would amongst their children. The statement (by Klotz) is lying and calumnious.
4. Before these facts, and quite a number of others which cannot be mentioned here to avoid boring Your Eminence, there has come about much criticism among the scholastics who criticize openly their Superiors, challenging their recommendations, breaking the rules without constraint. The author of Document 3 declares: "And, consequently, there has arisen among us a lively sense of impatience before the yoke of iron being laid upon us by Fr. Piperon, and a sadness and growing regard for the unfortunate victim (Klotz) who was not afraid to submit himself before every kind of snub." (The 'yoke of iron' was the Rule insisted on by the Superior; the snubs were the recommendations given to the religious.) The document's author goes on: "For myself I was so counteracted and circumscribed that, in my view, all the Superiors were in error, seriously so, and it was my bounden duty to redress this and change the views of others by putting in their place the great and to redress the wronged Fr. Klotz." These pernicious attitudes were to be shared by a great number during holiday-time in the scholasticate. Fr. Klotz, despite being forbidden to do so by his Superior, very often took the young men bathing in a small lake near the house. He made use of walks, more often than the swimming, to hide his real motivation from the Superior. The scholastics were aware of the situation. Here is what one of them wrote about this matter. "We went to the lake two, three, four times a week with Fr. Klotz's permission, he telling us that he would explain matters to you if ever our disobedience was discovered"!!! (Document 20). Unfortunately, the secret was kept right to the end. But a terrible blow became the consequence of all these misdemeanours. On the 31st of last month a young religious was drowned in a few seconds and couldn't be given absolution because he was engulfed. This terrifying calamity opened the eyes of our young religious. They began to understand their misdemeanours and identify their director's intrigues. The retreat which followed completed what had begun with the death.
5. Next, Fr. Klotz tried to capture votes for himself in the forthcoming elections, overstepping the mark in particular with Bishop Verjus of Lymire, the Vicar Apostolic of New Guinea. Bishop Verjus, who is shortly leaving for our Rome procure, 32 Via della Sapienza, can, if Your Eminence so wishes, confirm viva voce to you what we present above. He, Fr. Klotz, having spoken in calumny against Fr. General and his administration to the pious and zealous apostle of New Guinea, and finding him incredulous before his disgraceful accusations, as well as out of sympathy with his aims, he (Klotz) added: "My Lord, we have the majority on our side, the expertise, the better-off houses, the more distinguished religious, and if you do not come over to our side, we shall enclose you in a sack", which is to say we shall be opposed to your undertakings and give you no missionaries.

All these occurrences, and a great number of others, have become a great scandal for our young religious. May it please the Heart of Jesus that a certain number among them have not already lost their spirit, ideals, and the spirit of their vocation, if not their very vocation itself! Your most distinguished Eminence can verify the truth of these enumerated facts, if he thinks it worthwhile, by way of contact with Auguste Marchal, Bishop of Sinope, who has been appointed by the Sacred Congregation as Apostolic Delegate for the purpose of undertaking a canonical investigation of our religious. This will confirm, we are not in doubt, what we have presented, sadly, above, with the greatest regret, and all of which makes us greatly wish to have Fr. Klotz expelled from our Society.

Prostrate at the feet of Your Eminence, we have the honour to be your most humble and respectful sons in C.J.

My Dear Lord,

I have had a letter from Bishop Navarre which I hurriedly send on to you. He has little new to tell you. Fr. Piperon has come across further revelations about Fr. Klotz; it's diabolical! What terrible harm has been done to our unfortunate younger members by this disaffected individual! Proven, aware, that he has been rumbled, he wrote a letter to me in which, generally speaking, he admits all his wrong-doing. I sent it on to the Sacred Congregation. I don't think that it will be greatly to his advantage.

I would like you, as soon as you arrive in Rome, to go and see Cardinal Monaco, our Protector, and tell him all you know, so that we can rid ourselves of this pathetic subject.

Yes, I freely approve of Brother Allera being with you henceforth; I hope the Council will place no opposition to it.

Present my good wishes to the dear Caseneuve family, and my best wishes to yourself in C.J.

Vichy, September 19, 1892

Dear Fr. Piperon,

All you have shared with me in confidence has greatly worried me. The enemy has sowed more than thistle weed in the father of the family's field, trying with diabolical mischief to pull out the good seed itself. Let us be thankful to the Sacred Heart for our discovery of the problem; however serious it may be; it still remains remediable through the impact of grace. But it is necessary for us to get to grips with it in its total complexity. That's why I have put it to you as a necessary requirement to ask all the scholastics and young priests to put in writing all they know and name the culprits. The issue is particularly serious, and affects the very future of our Society. There is, in consequence, for all of them a bounden duty in conscience of the most serious kind to declare, and put in writing, what they know. I count on their devotedness, of which I am aware, and their fidelity to their vocation, as well as their warm attachment to their Congregation as a mother to them, in carrying out immediately what I ask of them. For quite some time now there has been something of a reprehensible outlook rampant in Chezal-Benoît and it would be desirable to know the precise cause of it.

Vichy, September 19, 1892

Dear Father,

I have arrived at Villa des Lilas, Vichy, where I shall be staying until the 30th of this month. Fr. Klotz is here in Vichy, always very anxious about what's going to happen to him. He asked me if we have made any decision about him. I replied that the issue was very serious and nothing had yet been decided. He should remain in Vichy waiting for the result. This young man does nothing at all here, hanging about wasting his time. I beseech the Sacred Heart that the Sacred Congregation be moved to release him from his vows as soon as possible. I received your letter and the translation of Mr. Scalsi's letter. Thanks. Send on the estimate for the expenses involved in the room you want to build.

You are giving thought to sending Fr. Giovanelli to us on October 2. As soon as Bishop Verjus arrives in Rome take him to see Cardinals Monaco and Verga so that he can tell them all he knows about Fr. Klotz.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Bishop Marchal replied to the queries I put to him:

1. The calling of the Chapter does not give the right to the Chapter, but the title of Superior in charge still holds when the Chapter takes place.
2. An indult is required to elect once more a Superior who has finished three years in office who is not aged 35; in this respect he (the Bishop) advised us not to look for it (the indult) in the case of Fr. Reyn and, therefore, have him replaced by someone who has the requisite age.
3. He (the Bishop) also says that Fr. Guyot, on his own at Vichy, cannot be considered a Superior, and has no right to attend the Chapter.

Article 2074

To Father Jean Vaudon, MSC, at the Sacred Heart.

L 18920924

September 24, 1892

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I most gratefully thank you for the sad communication you present to me about the person of P. (sic). I shall make use of what you tell me, and if everybody made me aware of the facts as opportunely as you have done we would be spared a lot of problems. I hope the Chapter will do well in appointing a good administration, restoring confidence and harmony. I pray every day for this; you for your part do the same, my friend, since you must be aware how deeply saddened I am by all that has gone on.

If in place of sharing thoughts about others, and even about the inadequacies of the administration, one simply opened one's heart to me and let me become aware of the true state of affairs, all that we now deplore might not have happened. In place of this holding back from having confidence in one's Superior, one committed oneself never to betray the secret shared. Being left in ignorance about a lot of issues, I could neither foresee or prevent the problems. Nonetheless the Constitutions are explicit since they impose on each one the obligation of drawing the Superior's attention to anything going on which is against the Rule, orderliness, and the Society's well-being. This capital injunction in the Constitutions has been for all practical purposes overlooked. Accordingly, we are experiencing the consequences of all this at the present time: a stirring of independence at first gives way, subsequently, to insubordination among many, and a lot of damage ensues.

Nevertheless, one must not lose hope; peace and calm will come back little by little. The spirit of faith and charity (good-will) which, unfortunately, has been pushed aside by quite a large number, will eventually return. There are so many good features in our Society; the storm is only a passing one. It is a matter of setting ourselves to work seriously and we shall achieve wonders. You are mistaken, Fr., if you encounter some good vocation prospects and don't direct them towards our Congregation. Despite the wretchedness inherent to our frail humanity, there is still so much good about it.

Since our confrères speak more easily to you than to me about what they know about such and such an individual, or even about myself, I would ask you to do what you can for the unfortunate Fr. X. I shall be intent on bringing about the reforms which facilitate the onset of the desired good.

It is true that the Silver Jubilee of the Petite Oeuvre falls this year. There is time to think about it. I shall ask Fr. Maillard for the documents and send them on to you. (There is no special mention, however, of the Petite Oeuvre in the 1892 Annals.)

I am well enough aware of your piety and attachment to the Society not to allow entry into my thoughts of the slightest suspicion of ambition on your part. Quid hoc ad aeternitatem? (What's a trifle like in relation to eternity?)

At the last Council meeting the assistants unanimously rejected a request to amalgamate the Bulletin of the Federation in our Annals (September 17 meeting), not wishing our Annals to become its mouthpiece. In consequence, that is to say in November, Fr. Delaporte will take over as before the Federation's magazine (he had a leading role in its foundation, 1890). The good man is very upset and, as it happens, wrongly accuses me of being responsible for this decision. Fr. Morisseau will have spoken to him about this.

Cheerio, Father.
All good wishes in C.J.

If only these worthy confrères returned for good to the right way, making me feel as happy with them as I was pained before. Many thanks for your satisfactory intervention. The Sacred Heart has already rewarded you since I have just now received a letter from Baroness de Brienne informing me that she is giving a further 20,000 francs (about 66,580 euros) to your mission, which I have asked her for. You must not complain, then. All the registered letters which arrive for you, the offerings made available for you and what you collect yourself, will come to a considerable sum.

Fr. Jouët wants you to be with him without fail on October 4; do not miss out on being there. I am sorry that I cannot be at Antwerp on Thursday. I shall be there, however, in spirit and good-will Oremus pro invicem (let us pray for each other).

Vichy, September 28, 1892

Dear Fr. Jouët,

Fr. Piperon has sent me his report, together with supporting evidence. It is shatteringly against the pathetic Fr. Klotz. The observations of Fr. Mathieu make clear to us the diabolical attitude of the Antwerp, Tilburg, Salzburg, priests before, during and after the Chapter. Read all this carefully, make a copy if you wish, and you will scarcely be edified by the behaviour of these unhappy young men who have come close to jeopardizing our dear Society, which has cost us dearly, to the point of being two fingers away from its being irreparably destroyed. Read also the other documents as well as the report enclosed in the letter to Cardinal Monaco, and all this will give you some idea of the harm done to us by Fr. Klotz. His expulsion is an urgent matter. Pass this letter on to the Cardinal Protector as soon as he returns and you may give it to Bishop Verjus when he arrives on October 2.

The Sacred Heart and Our Lady have had pity on us and we have been enlightened. The Sacred Congregation will see for itself where the problems lay, and I hope it will take our part. All the intrigues have been brought out into the open. Fr. Piperon only forwarded some of the documentation. He had put together 28 or 30 pieces in all. Any of these are at the disposal of the Sacred Congregation if it wishes to have them. Please, my friend, join with us and let us be united about restoring its original spirit and thrust to our dear little Society. The chains of the plot are broken and it will, I hope, become impossible for the opposition to mend them once the ring-leader is expelled.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I have had a frightfully upsetting blow. I feel I must share it with you straightaway. It has become known to me that you told Bishop Verjus that it was I who ordered the Chapter to be disbanded, whereas its opponents hold you unfairly responsible for it. The Bishop did not keep your confidence to himself, sharing it with others, and today it has come back to me.

You think, then, my friend that I am not hated enough as it is by our opponents, and that they should have yet more to hold against me. Why did you have to put me at the head of all this with Bishop Verjus? I came to your defence energetically against those blaming you and I said that Rome, taking into consideration the way things were going at the Chapter, considered that it was its duty to dissolve the Chapter – that's the truth!

Be careful; all our words are recalled and passed on in a twisted fashion. Do not be sure about anybody's discretion. I am so close to you and I identify myself so much with you that I would rather die than be unfair to you, and let it be the same for your part! Unity brings about strength. I always hope that you will not leave our dear little Society, whose development has cost both of us so much endeavour and heartbreaks! If anything happened otherwise with you I would never be without regret. If you are as associated (close) to me as I am to you, you will write very shortly to me stating that you are giving up on your proposal to ask for a validation which you think you need.

Issoudun, October 2, 1892

My Lord,

In your last letter you mentioned your wish to take Fr. Védère to your mission. You are well aware that Fr. Védère's presence is needed in Rome for the time being at least. You also mention Fr. Roussel who is in charge of the Petite Oeuvre's younger section. We have nobody, in fact, to replace him at the present time. As soon as it becomes possible to make him available to you, we shall do so with pleasure.

The same holds for Fr. Megrét who has been appointed Director of the Externat (the Issoudun day school). You are well aware that all our undertakings are under strain because of a lack of staff. If our men return from Quito we shall, perhaps, be a little less under (personnel) pressure. Nobody more than myself loves the missions. I am strongly motivated to come to their help since I well know the great good which can be accomplished there. If I could let you have 20 missionaries I would give them to you straightaway. You are not the only one looking for men: Bishop Couppé is incessantly looking for some, and Fr. Bontemps also. What can be done in the extremely straitened circumstances in which we find ourselves? You ask for Fr. Helfer and I shall freely let you have him if he wants to go with you when you return to New Guinea. The Council members would appear to look with disfavour on any departure of scholastics because of their studies and formation. As for lay brothers, these would not be a problem. I could let you have Fr. Karseleers in Antwerp who wants to go on the missions.

You might, perhaps, also take Fr. Reyn, Superior at Antwerp, with you. Here is the reason: his term of office as Antwerp Superior ends, I believe, on All Saints' Day. Since, according to our Constitutions, one can only be Superior for three years before being re-elected and one must be aged 35. As it happens Fr. Reyn is only 32 and the Sacred Congregation has become annoyed by our requests for indulgences, while the Bishop of Sinope who, as Apostolic Delegate, will preside over our Chapter, is not at all convinced that we should ask for an indulgence on behalf of Fr. Reyn, all the more so when he was one of the most combative opponents at the last Chapter. Just the same, he would appear to have a somewhat better disposition at the present time. Despite this being so, Bishop Auguste Marchal does not look kindly on his being left on as Superior. Fr. Reyn, who is self-conscious of the difficulties arising from his age, and feels that the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars does not want to grant him an indulgence because of his insensitive and combative opposition at the Chapter, would, as a result, like to consider going on the missions if he was not to stay on as Superior at Antwerp. He would like to know as soon as possible because, as he says, he would have to look for the money to pay his way if he is going on the missions. Be good enough, then, to present, officially, this matter to His Eminence Cardinal Monaco our Protector, and you will let me have his reply. Do not mention any of this to Fr. Reyn.

Remember me to all our Rome confrères and, especially, to Fr. Jouët.

Cheerio, esteemed Father, and please accept my best wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Let me have up-to-date news about your health as well as your negotiations in Rome. When will you be returning to France? It would be worthwhile knowing this in the interests of our missions, so that you could pay visits to minor and major seminaries to encourage vocations.

L 18921007

Issoudun, October 7, 1892

My Lord,

We have an administrative problem, for the resolution of which we would like to have had the Cardinal Protector's advice. Would you be so kind as to take it on yourself to place before His Eminence the problem which is of concern to us and, thereafter, send on the reply. According to number 142 of our Constitutions, local Superiors may only carry out their office over three consecutive years, following which they can be re-elected, but for one more term only (another three years). Number 124 requires that, for all ministries, Superiors, even local ones, should be 35 years old. Since Fr. Reyn, Superior at Antwerp, finishes his term of office next November and isn't 35 years old yet, being born on March 8, 1860, it so happens that he was already Superior when the clause, 35 years, was put into the Constitutions by the Sacred Congregation and, consequently, it was only as a result of an indult requested at that time that he remained in office until the present time. We cannot re-elect him without petitioning for another indult, given his age. On the other hand, we fear we shall be stirring up dis-satisfaction among our confrères if we appoint somebody as his successor. Here we are finding ourselves on the eve of a new Chapter, and many will not be slow to say that it was by way of keeping him away from the new Chapter that he wasn't re-elected. This would, perhaps, become for some a fresh reason for being in opposition since, it will not be lost on you, Your Lordship, Fr. Reyn has been, and possibly still is, one of the main opponents. The Bishop of Sinope is of the opinion that someone else should be appointed in his place who has the requisite canonical age. We shall act as our illustrious Protector decides.

Be good enough to convey verbally to the Cardinal Protector all these facts since you know how things are. I would like you to send on to me as soon as you can His Eminence's reply.

While you are meeting the Cardinal I would like you to convey to him my deepest regards and most appreciative acknowledgement.

Please accept for yourself, My Lord, my best wishes for a successful visit to the Holy Father, together with my warmest regards in C.J.

Issoudun, October 9, 1892

Your Lordship,

Let me assure you that you have no need to worry; I said nothing to Fr. Jouët, absolutely nothing to which in the least way you could take exception. I am aware of your good-will, your commitment and devotedness, as well as your sincere and deep regard for me. It is the same on my part for you, of which I have given proof and will always continue to do so.

I would like to make available for your mission not just 5 or 6 priests but 20, if that were possible. I have spoken to you of Fr. Helfer, Fr. Karseleers, perhaps Fr. Reyn, as those you might take with you. And if we could replace Fathers Védère, Roussel and Jullien, also Fr. Mégret whom you ordained to the priesthood when you came to Issoudun, I would freely let you have them, also Fr. Meyer if he wanted to make himself available to you. I love the missions greatly, yours in particular, such that I wouldn't stand in the way of any sacrifice in order to have them flourishing. I am altogether on your side. When you come to Issoudun we shall discuss all this. As you will not be returning to the missions before our Chapter you can attend it, and it's right that you should do so. I hope that between now and then we shall have new prospects available to you, particularly so if Rome agrees that we should leave Ecuador. Try to hurry up the expulsion of Fr. Klotz; this individual has caused us too many problems.

Cheerio, your dear Lordship.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB:

1. It would be very desirable in the interests of our missions if you were to pay a visit to major seminaries such as Nantes, Rodez, Mende, Aurillac, Clermont-Ferrand, etc. seeking recruits. And, assuredly, you would get some.

2. The Bishop of Sinope, Apostolic Delegate at our Chapter, would wish for nothing better than to go and visit our Northern houses, especially if Rome so wished it, but his health is quite poorly and I very much doubt if he would be able to go. For my part, far from being against it, I would greatly wish it to be so because he would then quickly be convinced of the bad attitude in these houses, their independent spirit, rebelliousness, disobedience. How is it possible to come across young men educated by us from the age of 12 or 14, and God alone knows how much it cost in sacrifices, and there they are in houses founded by us and belonging to us, where we have appointed them in the Society's name, and they talk about cutting off the noose, making themselves independent, bringing about a rupture if we don't do as they say and meet their demands. But this is quite frightful and outrageous; it is Satan's alluring cry, ascendat superius ("go, come, up, higher", Luke 14, 10). All those young men there are responsible for all our problems, and far from being disciplined, it would be better, rather, to have them expelled from the Society like Fr. Klotz. They are, effectively, ambitious and rebellious types who have placed our dear Society within a hair's breadth of being disbanded. It is for them to obey without reservations, in good faith. If they do not want it like this, let them leave the Congregation, return to the world, and we shall be at peace. What Fr. Klotz did with, and to, the young priests and scholastics at Chezal-Benoît merely echoes the pretensions of Antwerp, Tilburg and Salzburg. What we should aim at in the interests of our dear Society is to appoint French priests in charge of those houses, hotbeds of opposition as they are at the moment, until such time as we can make these countries into provinces. This was the advice given to me in Rome on my last visit. Read my letter to Fr. Jouët and you will gather for yourself what he has to say to you. This letter is for yourself alone and Fr. Jouët.

Cheerio, your dear Lordship, and you may be assured more than ever of my support and sincere regard. Remain hopeful: the Sacred Heart will not abandon us and Our Lady will watch over us.

The Bishop of Sinope intends, before the Chapter, to consult all the Superiors who will be there, bringing, as they will, all the expectations from their respective houses, which is the equivalent of a house survey, producing, indeed, the same effect since the Bishop's health does not make it possible for him to act otherwise.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I am pleased that you were so well received by the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda and for his generosity. On my behalf convey my thanks to Fr. Jouët for his nice letter.

My Dear Lord,

I am not delaying even by one minute the news that Baroness de Brienne is contributing a further 20,000 francs (about 66,580 euros, making a total of 199,760 euros or so). What she gives you makes a total of 60,000 francs. How good is the Sacred Heart! He so favours you and our mission! Courage; be confident. The enemy will be overcome.

We shall do our utmost to make good missionaries available to you and you can bring them with you. We shall arrange all this when you are in Issoudun. I sent a nice letter to Madame de Brienne. I shall pass on to you (later) her letter.

Cheerio, Your Lordship.

Council Meeting, October 15, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard, Assistants.

Fr. Benedetti appointed to the scholasticate; Fr. Donzé to Randwick.

1. Fr. Benedetti, not being able to return to Barcelona, nor to Rome where his presence is not wanted, will work in the scholasticate.

At Fr. Tréand's request, and to meet the wishes of Sydney's Cardinal Archbishop (Moran), Fr. Donzé is appointed to the Randwick 'cure' (MSC office). He will leave with Fr. Merg, accompanied also by Brother Wilhelm, appointed likewise to Sydney.

Brother Ignatius accepted for renewal of vows.

2. On Fr. Lanctin's recommendation, Superior at Tilburg, the lay brother Ignatius Stevens was accepted for renewal of vows, being pious and dependable, although, otherwise, of mediocre intellectual ability.

Brothers Willibrord and Antoine also admitted to renewal of vows.

On Fr. Meyer's recommendation as director of the Salzburg novitiate, the Brothers Willibrord Fuchs, born July 1, 1875 at Traunfela (Bavaria), and Antoine Unterholzer, born April 20, 1872 at Untergladen, Styrie, Austria, were accepted for three-yearly profession as lay brothers, their novitiate having ended on December 25, 1891. The first is a tailor by profession and has a certificate of exemption from military service. The second is very competent at carpentry and building; his short height would certainly exempt him from military service.

The scholastics Genaro and Assunto accepted, one to the subdiaconate the other to the diaconate.

At the request of Fr. Casas the scholastic Genaro Lacoste was admitted to the subdiaconate and Assunto Constantini to the diaconate, their knowledge being considered satisfactory by the examiner, the Superior of the Barcelona seminary.

Approval for the building of a wall on the Canet-de-Mar property.

3. Fr. Carrière, having pointed out that an enclosure wall is needed at the Canet property to keep out the heavy flooding which is a threat to it, now proposes to make available the sum of 5,000 francs left over from the closure of the house. The Council agreed that this expense should be approved of and authorized Fr. Casas to go ahead with the project.

Decisions about the Sydney Procure.

4. As regards Sydney, the following decisions were made:

A. Fr. Tréand, having presented a proposal to build on parish land, or on the land which is part of the Randwick property, two provisional buildings for the Petite Oeuvre, novitiate, etc., the Council, having in mind on the one hand the meagre space, 30 metres by 80, and on the other hand the lack of silence and remoteness which are a prerequisite for the above-mentioned works, with the activities and all sorts of comings and goings involved in parochial work. Moreover, aware that a spacious plot of ground had been acquired in the Congregation's name at Kensington to set up our work there, the Council is persuaded that it wouldn't be wise to start building on someone else's land when it can be done on our own property and, besides, the local provisos do not present comparable advantages which would compensate for the expenses to be incurred (at Randwick). Accordingly, there is no need to meet Fr. Tréand's wishes.

B. It (the Council) cannot approve any building plans other than starting work on a residential building at the Kensington property which will become the centre for our activities as they begin to be realized. It is towards this end that all our efforts and all the resources of our Sydney confrères should be directed. Nevertheless, the Council does not disengage from its previous decisions, February 4, 1891, March 30, 1892, about sharing out what is left over in the Sydney revenues, but this decision is only applicable to the revenue of the Randwick procure, made over to us by the Cardinal Archbishop specifically in favour of our missions. It does not, then, apply, as had previously been said, to income which comes from elsewhere, for example from the Annals, the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association, etc.

C. The projected undertaking cannot be carried out until the debt incurred in purchasing the ground is itself met, and there are laid aside sufficient financial resources to begin work.

D. Fr. Merg is reappointed Procurator of the Society's missions in Oceania. In carrying out his office he is under the jurisdiction of the Superior General and his Council, but in his contacts with the Apostolic Vicars he will always be fully respectful, carefully avoiding problems. If something does crop up, however, he will refer the matter to Father General.

E. As regards the direction of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Archconfraternity, and the Australian Annals, the Council, short of a decision to the contrary, maintains the status quo which has existed from the beginning as regards these undertakings, taken together or in detail, revoking any decision to the contrary in this area (sic). The Annals can be accompanied by a double signature, the Superior's as local director of the Association and that of the Annals' editor, both having competence, one for acceptance in the Association, the other having responsibility for the production and promotion of the Annals.

F. The Procurator will have no role to play in the ministry and parish undertakings, except at the invitation of those in charge, and, according to the circumstances, he will be willing to help pastorally, in keeping, however, with his own responsibilities.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I got your welcomed letter, the enclosed indults and the formula which has to be signed. We shall follow your direction as regards the Memorare to St. Joseph and the new invocation.

I beg you to hurry up with:

1. The definitive dismissal of Fr. Klotz; this is an absolute requirement. The Bishop of Sinope insists on it. An example needs to be made of someone, since, without it, he claims, the Chapter will not succeed, each one feeling he has the right to connive against authority and set going a bad attitude.
2. As regards Fr. Reyn, it becomes pertinent to find out if it is in order for him to remain Superior and, accordingly, petition for an indult. There should be an official request made to Cardinal Monaco about this and we shall act in keeping with his answer. It's Bishop Verjus who has taken on responsibility for this interview. Try and get him to hurry up with this matter.
3. As far as Quito is concerned, are we staying there or are we not? It is imperative that we get an answer.

Issoudun, October 23, 1892

My Dear Lord,

The Lord has allowed the terrible storm raised up against me since the unfortunate 1891 Chapter to continue without a let-up, and I accept it as something I have deserved because of my faults and failings, hoping that the divine Heart of Jesus will gain some advantage from it.

I only ask for one thing alone, to be myself the only victim, and that our dear Society will not itself suffer from the inadequacies with which I am charged. I acted in good faith as regards those irregularities which arose; our being expelled (from France) led to the expatriation of the Assistants and our confrères, leaving myself alone to cope with countless problems and a surfeit of work which weighed me down, and as well I had to cope with the problems and needs of our scattered houses and our missions, thereby taking to myself all responsibility and, accordingly, I could well be excused before God. What is most painful of all for me to bear is becoming conscious of the displeasure affecting the attitude towards us of our venerable and well thought of (Cardinal) Protector. I would have thought that following my memorandum and the explanations offered by the Archbishop of Bourges to the Sacred Congregation, I could expect a favourable assessment. God did not wish it so and I resign myself to his will. Enlightenment will, I hope, come later. If it were such that I was an obstacle, standing in the way, in order to save our dear Society I would be quite willing to stand aside, and the forthcoming Chapter would appoint a new Superior General, leaving me to regret my errors over whatever years remain to me and prepare for death. Having no longer the confidence and support of our devoted Protector and the Sacred Congregation, it is the wisest path that I can choose.

Pray for me, my dear Lord; please accept my best wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: Your description of the audience you had with the Holy Father made me very happy and, likewise, the welcome you had from the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda. I ask myself if I should not go to Rome and hand my resignation to Cardinal Monaco.

Issoudun, October 27, 1892

My Lord,

Not alone am I not opposed to the investigation referred to in the Rome rescript, but I, together with my Assistants also, would very much favour it, so that Your Lordship could become well aware about the mood and attitude of people and the measures which need to be taken in order to restore confidence as well as the peace and unity so much sought after. The worthy Fr. Ramot, however pious he may be, remains narrow-minded, tenacious in his ideas which he puts before Rome's decisions, his judgment being more than doubtfully suspect, his behaviour at the last Chapter quite deplorable. He had been Superior of our Watertown house (USA). Following the break-up of the Chapter, as decreed by Rome, he made his disappointment very obvious, refusing to go back to America and take charge of his house. He was appointed Superior in Sydney and as he didn't wish to go there we were faced with a very embarrassing situation. He stated publicly that on no account did he want to be appointed Superior since his conscience did not allow him to accept anyone wishing to enter our Society as long as a new Chapter consisting of the same participants was being called. We were forced to send the Glastonbury (England) Superior to Sydney and appoint Fr. Ramot to Glastonbury as vice-Superior. He wrote several letters to us stating that he was in a false position and that matters should be rectified. As a gesture of good-will, and in order to make clear to him that we were not biased, we appointed him, with the forthcoming Chapter due, Superior at Glastonbury, thereby facilitating his presence there. And here's the man who is complaining!

He insists, Your Lordship, that you should interview several members of the previous Chapter who will not be present at the next one. There's nothing wrong with this; I quite approve of it. The individuals to whom this applies are but two. Fr. Guyot who has resigned as Assistant and doesn't want in any circumstances, so he says, to be involved in administration. The other is Fr. Delaporte who has been Superior in Paris for 6 years and has to be replaced in keeping with the Constitutions. We did so already before calling the Chapter.

As for Fr. Ramot's concern, expressed in language which is anything but respectful, to have those members of the previous Chapter removed from the new one, he proceeds to mention Fr. Reyn, the Antwerp Superior, whose term of office ends at the beginning of next month. We cannot without an indult reappoint him because he is not 35 years old. And Rome is embarrassed by the number of indults we have been requesting, stating, summarily, that it does not wish to grant any more since, so it declares, a Society which is not moving forward except through a blaze of indults does not inspire confidence. Your Lordship is also of this view, having asked us to consult Rome officially as regards this matter. Bishop Verjus has just done so, and His Eminence Cardinal Monaco, our Protector, replied sharply that he no longer wanted anything to do with a Society continually requesting indults.

What is to be done? Bishop Verjus came away from the interview very upset. We have no other option, then, than to replace Fr. Reyn with someone else and not be too worried about what's going to be said by those who are unhappy about it.

As for Fr. Klotz, you are aware of his behaviour at the last Chapter and at Chezal-Benoît, and he has given his resignation in writing to the Tilburg Superior. We have replaced him with Fr. Lanctin who shares his views and will take his place at the Chapter. What, then, is there to complain about? These opponents believe that only themselves are enlightened and that the rest of the Superiors are not intelligent enough to look after the best interests of the Society!

I have the honour to be Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant and son in C.J.

Council Meeting, November 2, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard, Assistants.

The Scholastics, Brothers Hannigan, Kuntz and Lynch, accepted for perpetual profession.

1. Given the favourable approval of Fr. Jouët, the Council, having satisfied itself about the dispositions of Edmund Hannigan, Emile Kuntz and Christopher Lynch, they being held over because of secret correspondence unknown to their Superiors, it was agreed that there was no longer any need to postpone things and, accordingly, they were accepted for final vows, Fr. Védère being asked to receive these vows in Fr. Jouët's absence.
2. It was decided:
  - a. that the Council members with the local Superior at the Tilburg house should be Fathers Offermans and Kicken, the only priests in the house with the Superior;
  - b. the Council of the local Superior in Paris should be Fathers Delaporte and Deidier.

Approval and support for Fr. Ramot.

3. Fr. Ramot, having proposed to make improvements to the Glastonbury Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for propaganda purposes, has been granted full approval to do so, but at the same time he is advised to ask for fees from his students in order to avoid the imposition of an excessive financial burden either for the house, the scholasticate or the novitiate when the students are accepted.

Issoudun, November 4, 1892

My Lord,

1. For a number of months now I am continually under the onslaught of fresh, recurring, disappointments. Yesterday a young confrère who is Bishop Verjus' secretary, wrote to say that His Lordship is once more gravely ill following a chest infection complicated by meningitis. And it only adds to the bad news that it was on his way back to France that the Bishop was laid low by the illness at Oleggio (Italy). The parish priest took him into his house and there he hung between life and death. Fr. Jouët, contacted by telegram, went there. He is very worried. Be good enough, My Lord, to pray for him.
2. This morning brought me a letter from Mr. (Fr.) Scalsi, our representative, which could not be more unsettling about Fr. Klotz. You are aware, My Lord, of the request for his release from vows, and the serious reasons supporting this since you endorsed it. I am forwarding this latest letter to you which I cannot make sense of myself in any way, and places me in acute embarrassment. What is it trying to say? What must we do? You, perhaps, will understand its thrust (significance) better than ourselves. Is there not good reason to contact the Sacred Congregation about the meaning of this rescript and ask whether it is in the affirmative or negative he is released from perpetual vows because of his behaviour? Only you, My Lord, can act in this respect, since you can see for yourself how the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars has sided against me. I am depressed by all that is going on, as if hell was loosed against us. Anything incorrect which took place happened in good faith. Your distinguished brother acknowledged that himself. Obviously, it is the opposing group who, with all its complaints, is responsible for this fearsome storm. Fr. Lanctin's letter, which you were kind enough to share with me, is further proof of this. Your reply is perfectly in order, but will there be the wisdom to follow your advice?

I have the honour to be, respectfully, your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant and son in C.J.

Lanctin's letter. The Bishop's reply.

Tilburg, November 1, 1892

My Lord,

It is in regard to our dear Congregation, of which you are the intercessor and father, that I take the liberty to write what follows to you.

I shall not involve myself in the details of the discussions which have cropped up among us these latter years. Besides being against my wishes and engaging me at too great a length, Your Lordship will certainly be well informed about it. But I do believe that it is an issue of conscience to anticipate matters so that these divisions do not develop as time goes on with the result that our Society is likely to collapse almost certainly if the situation is not immediately remedied. Many good candidates will be discouraged, undertakings are likely to be put at risk, vocations will become uncertain and lost... then the role of authority, little by little, becomes jeopardized and mutual support, confidence, is set at risk, etc., etc. But what remedy can be applied to such a calamity? What virtually all are looking for is a general inquiry before the Chapter.

Very likely if all the members, or at the very least all the Superiors and directors of undertakings, were consulted and could speak freely, light would be thrown on things and the truth would out. One would be faced with what is good and wholesome in order to hold on to it, and what is wrong would be made to disappear. Having seen and heard everything relevant, a serious-minded, impartial judge, keen to bring about good, could make a decision based on knowledge of the situation. At this moment, my Lord, all are looking to you and awaiting a result from you. Your wise involvement would quickly, so we hope, lead to a prompt and complete resolution of the impasse we are in.

We all love our Congregation. All of us are persuaded that it not only can survive but go on to do much greater good for the Church. That's why we are all suffering before the trials being experienced and would like matters to be brought to a successful resolution at this moment; all over the Society prayers are being offered for this intention.

I cannot end this letter, My Lord, without thanking you for your many kindnesses to me on different occasions. I also want to assure you that I felt for you very much on your bereavement (the Archbishop's demise) and I pray for your own good health and all your other intentions.

Please accept my respectful good wishes as I have the honour to be Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Arth. Lanctin, MSC, Sup.

I am quite willing to accept, from all the religious of the Congregation who would like to contact me, their concerns on the occasion of the forthcoming Chapter. You are right in thinking that I am very committed to your Society. I like it very much and I shall do all I can to help it overcome its present problems. Pray and pray again that this so much sought after aim will come about. We would wish that besides prayer, everyone, no less necessary, self-embodied an appropriate extremely cautious reserve, I would even say total silence as regards individuals and their activities in the recent past. If it's like that, you will be able to see peace restored and flourishing within a unity which you think has disappeared, but which is perhaps only overshadowed at the moment.

So the letter ends.

Issoudun, November 5, 1892

Dear Fr. Jouët,

Thank you for your letter and the information you have for me. I am shattered by Bishop Verjus' illness. What a trial! We can only pray.

I had a letter from Mr. Scalsi, a copy of which I am forwarding to you. It refers to Fr. Klotz and I don't understand what's going on. Following our intervention, and the Bishop of Sinope's approval and support, the documents were forwarded; the whole issue baffles me. Are we being given, in this rescript, the right to expel Fr. Klotz? Is he released from his vows? To whom, or about what, does "Auditis audiendis refer"? I am told to conform in accordance with the Constitutions as regards the present (Klotz) issue. Our Constitutions state that "the expulsion of professed should take place according to the canonical regulations". What are the canonical regulations other than those we followed in bringing to Rome's attention the problems of this individual and petitioning for his dismissal, together with release from his vows?

I am depressed when I note that everybody is leaving us in the lurch; we have, nevertheless, the wish to do what is best and satisfy whoever is in the right. The war being waged against us by the discontented, and the unfavourable attitude of the Sacred Congregation towards me, shatters me. If I have to hand in my resignation I am quite prepared to do so since my position is no longer tenable. Bishop Verjus' letter informing me about his meeting with Cardinal Monaco indescribably shattered me. The Cardinal would appear to have said to him that you, yourself, asked to leave the Society... Can it be true that you also want to forsake me?

Be good enough to give me, if you can, information about the significance of the Klotz rescript, and if it's not possible at the moment see about it on your return to Rome.

It is in the heart of Jesus, my friend, that I stay wholly yours.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Kindly remember us to the Canon and the Caseneuve family, and also to your sister. Cardinal Rampolla is leaving it to the Chapter for a decision about Quito.

1. Fr. Reyn, Antwerp Superior, having completed his three years in office as Superior, and unable to be re-elected because he has to wait two years and four months before he becomes 35 years of age, and given that a successor has been unavailingly sought because there is no adequate replacement, it has been decided, accordingly, through the intermediary of Mr. Scalsi, to request an indult which will be endorsed by the Bishop of Sinope, apostolic delegate (to the Chapter).

Definitive expulsion of Fr. Klotz.

2. The Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, having judged it inconvenient to take a decision about Fr. Klotz, and having made it known that it was for the Superior General and his Council to decide on his expulsion in accordance with the Constitutions, leaving aside the request for release from vows, the Council accordingly takes the decision declaring that Fr. Klotz is expelled from the Society, and this will be communicated to him straightaway, while release from his vows will at the same time be requested from the Holy See. Issoudun, November 9, 1892

Dear Fr. Durin,

I was pleased to receive your letter and the St. Joseph snapshot. It has been a long time since I had news of you. I am pleased that success attends your zealous work. May the Sacred Heart of Jesus always bless your undertakings and keep you in good health. The Congregation at the present time is unable to take on your parish. Personnel are unavailable. Our Oceania missions require a large number and we haven't enough. The Holy Father would like Bishop Verjus to take 30 missionaries back with him! Where are they to be found? Bishop Couppé is also looking for some and Fr. Bontemps, but we have nobody available for them. It's all the more regrettable because the natives are blessed with the grace of conversion, coming in large numbers to request missionaries (to come among them) and showing themselves to be very well disposed. If we had a sufficient number of personnel it would be an issue of conscience for us to point them towards Oceania because we are officially appointed by the Holy See to take charge of these vicariates.

We must have a Chapter on February 2 to appoint Assistants and our Society's Procurator in Rome. Pray that all will be in keeping with the Sacred Heart's wishes. Each day we say the Veni Creator and the litany of the Virgin in the evening. Bishop Verjus, who came to Europe in the interests of his mission, is very ill in Italy at the present moment. He has a chest infection and meningitis. The doctors say there's no hope for him. Let us pray!

My Lord,

I am pleased to forward two letters to you which Fr. Klotz wrote to me, together with his appeal to the Holy Father. What are we to do now faced with these requests and his regret? If you think, My Lord, that these dispositions should be met positively, with his request officially supported by you, we shall place no obstacle in his way, but I do believe that it would be proper to ask the Holy Father to impose a twofold penance on him:

1. make a confession of his misdemeanours before those he scandalized in trying to lead them into rebellion;
2. that he be deprived of active and passive voice in subsequent Chapters, at least over a ten-year period, and, in addition, he become ineligible for any Superior's office over the same period of time. Perhaps this merciful and positive approach will, in the present circumstances, make a better and more positive impact on confrères than simply dismissing him. You will yourself be the judge of this.

You had the news in my telegram of Bishop Verjus' death. My God, what a loss to our missions! What a terrible blow! The ways of God are impenetrable... May his sovereign will be done; it is only for us to say "fiat" (let it be so done).

How I regret that I cannot be present for the funeral! I am here by myself in Issoudun. Fr. Maillard is gone on retreat to Chezal-Benoît; Fr. Morisseau left on Saturday to preach a retreat for a parish priest of Blésois. What an unfortunate coincidence! Please excuse me. I am so disappointed. I agonize over this. Convey to Madame Verjus all the regret which overwhelms me in her sorrowing loss.

Are you bringing the body of our venerable brother to Issoudun, or having him buried there in Oleggio? What are your thoughts on this? Thank on my behalf the Archpriest of Oleggio for all the care he bestowed on our dearly loved confrère, I shall ever be mindful of it. Thank also the Bishop of Novara and convey to him my humble respects. Yes, my thanks to yourself also, my friend, for all your commitment and to those good little brothers, Claudius and Helfer. I sent a telegram about the death to Randwick requesting Bishop Navarre be informed, as well as Fr. Bontemps. I sent a telegram to Watertown and our other houses.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Collect all Bishop Verjus' papers, his notes, diary, writings about the natives, their dialects, and have them brought here.

J.C.

What should be offered to the parish priest of Oleggio in appreciation and acknowledgment of his services?

To Bishop August Marchal, Vicar Capitular, Bourges.

Issoudun, November 16, 1892

My Lord,

I thank you most sincerely for all the support you have shown us in the difficult times we are passing through. I sent a telegram to Fr. Jouët to bring the body of our dearly regretted confrère to Issoudun. He replied that his mother was opposed to it, wishing to keep her son's body while she lived and, afterwards, we could bring it back. I insisted with entreaties, but it was the same answer...

Bishop Navarre wrote a letter to me which arrived this morning, asking me to send back Bishop Verjus to him as soon as possible because his absence left a great gap in the natives' lives. Poor Bishop Navarre! The news of his dear coadjutor's death will be a terrible blow for him. Who is going to replace him? Yet it is something absolutely necessary. I can only see Fr. Jouët as the one to save this mission from shipwreck. What do you think My Lord.? Would it be your view also? Do you think that Fr. Jouët would be willing to accept? Your involvement, I firmly believe, would be a requirement if you share this view.

I sent Fr. Klotz's letter to the Holy Father without any seal. Your observations are very relevant.

Please accept, Your Lordship, my respectful good wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

To the Director of Pontifical Missionary Work, Lyons.

Issoudun, November 21, 1892

Dear Director,

You have already become aware of the sad loss of our very worthy Bishop Verjus, the tireless apostle of New Guinea. What a calamitous loss for our missions! The Bishop had planned to leave in May and bring with him quite a number of missionaries. The good Lord decided otherwise. Nevertheless we are taking measures to send some priests and brothers to try and replace immediately the excellent labourer who has left us. It will be the first of December next when these new missionaries leave from Marseilles. While he was in Paris Bishop Verjus had the opportunity to meet some of the Propagation of the Faith staff who more or less promised to pay the expenses of the trip for those who were accompanying him. Accordingly, we would like to think, since the Bishop is dead and the mission more than ever needs support and personnel, that the money will be made available for the missionaries leaving for the New Guinea mission. It is close to 2,000 francs (about 6,650 euros) for each one. I am not yet sure of the exact number, but I think it will be seven.

Hoping that this humble appeal will be given consideration, I thank you in anticipation, Mr. Director, asking you to accept my deepest regards and appreciation in C.J.

F.X. Maillard, MSC.

On behalf of Fr. Chevalier,
MSC Superior General.

1. The decision already taken was confirmed; the Chezal-Benoît local Council will comprise the Superior and Fathers Batard, Carrière and Comte.

The lay brother novices, Bonifacius, Herman, Ferdinand and Christian accepted for profession.

2. On the recommendation of Fr. Van Grinsven, Novice Master at Antwerp, the following lay brother novices were accepted for profession:

- E. Amandus Guillaume Germ, born Tilburg, Holland, November 8, 1874.
- F. Victor Joseph Beekers, born Lille Saint-Pierre, Belgium, April 22, 1871.

Departure of 3 priests and two brothers for the missions.

3. The decision, previously ratified, was taken to send Fathers Roussel, Helfer and Karsseleers on the missions, accompanied by two lay brothers made available by the Salzburg house. Nevertheless, hesitations were expressed about Fr. Roussel because of his history in Quito and Guayaquil and brought up in two letters which were read at the meeting.

4. At Fr. Maillard's request, Fr. General wound up the Vichy enterprise, paying what was owed, agreeing to make available 27,000 francs, taken from the contributions made towards the new buildings at the Sacred Heart.

Three-yearly report on the Congregation.

5. The Secretary read the requirement to make available (information about) the Congregation's circumstances every three years to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

Most Distinguished Lord, Prefect of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, I have the honour to place at Your Eminence's feet the triennial report set down in our Constitutions as regards discipline, personnel, finances and property, and the novitiates.

I. Discipline.

We are unable to provide details which are as satisfactory as those of our last three-yearly report, March 25, 1869. Nevertheless, we are grateful to the Sacred Heart for his protection during the maelstroms which have latterly affected our Society. If administrative problems unwisely divulged, as well as the problems arising from too great and varied a multiplicity of undertakings, have diminished in a certain number of individuals respect for, and confidence in, authority, one must be thankful to God, nonetheless, that the damaging impact has not been greater.

Religious discipline has been maintained quite satisfactorily in our houses having regard to the circumstances. We can vouch for this from the reports of local Superiors, and from the canonical visits made to these houses; those representing higher authority have been everywhere received with respect and submissiveness. Accordingly, obedience and the other religious virtues continue to be esteemed among us. Despite a certain number of failures, the majority remain steadfast in their vocation. All, except for one, have emphatically accepted the June 13 rescript validating the irregularities which had come about, and demanding renewal of all professions between 1883 and 1891. There is, then, reason to hope that discipline, for some time jeopardized in a number of houses, will effectively be renewed and flourish as before.

II. Personnel and Undertakings.

The personnel comprises 82 priests, 120 scholastics, 8 lay brothers, spread in 18 houses, establishments or missions.

1. Issoudun is the mother house and cradle of the Society, home also to the scholasticate at the present time. There is a little school for the town's youngsters; there also one finds the Association's centre, and the office of the French Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. As regards personnel, there are 9 priests, 66 scholastics, 10 lay brothers. The Basilica of the Sacred Heart continued to be sealed off. The parish of Issoudun is the responsibility of the Society, looked after by 6 priests and 2 lay brothers.
2. -Benôit. This is an ancient college forming part of the Archbishop of Bourges' domain and rented to the Society by Archbishop Marchal of happy memory. Our main novitiate is there, as well as an apostolic school or Petite Oeuvre with 115 students. There are 10 priests, 6 scholastics and 4 lay brothers on the staff.
3. Paris. The house has a public church which is well patronized. It is the centre of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association. There are 5 priests, 1 scholastic and 2 lay brothers.
4. Vichy. Moulins diocese. There is a priest who looks after the public chapel which, during the spa season, is very popular. One priest and one lay brother.
5. Rome. Residence, office for dealings with the Holy See; scholasticate; public church. The church is well patronized, being the centre of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Archconfraternity, the perpetual cult of the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph. The scholastics follow the courses at the Apollinaire University. There is also a small Petite Oeuvre. The Association's office, the Italian Annals office. There are 2 priests, 15 scholastics, 1 lay brother.
6. Antwerp. Malines diocese, Belgium. House and seminary for the foreign missions; apostolic school for the lower Latin classes. Novitiate for lay brothers. The Association's centre for the French, German and Flemish Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. There are 5 priests, 8 scholastics, 20 lay brothers.
7. Tilburg. Bois-le-Duc diocese, Holland. Apostolic school for the younger years. Centre of the Association and of the Dutch Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Annals. 3 priests, 7 scholastics, 10 lay brothers.
8. Salzburg. Apostolic school for the younger years. Lay brothers' novitiate; centre for the German Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Centre of the Association. The lay brothers look after two farms which could not be rented out. There are 4 priests, 4 scholastics and 12 lay brothers.
9. Glastonbury. Clifton diocese, England. House, college, apostolic school. Care of two parishes, missions. Public church. Centre of the Association and of the French Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. 4 priests, 4 scholastics, 4 lay brothers.
10. Watertown, New York. Diocese of Ogdensburg, USA. Charge of a small parish. College and Petite Oeuvre. Small novitiate. Centre of the Association and of the English Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. 4 priests, 7 scholastics, 2 lay brothers.
11. Barcelona. Spain. Residence, public church. Small Petite Oeuvre. Centre of the Spanish Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. 2 priests, 2 scholastics.
12. Canet-de-Mar. Gerona diocese, Spain. College handed over to the Society in 1890 and relinquished at the present time due to shortage of personnel. The house is rented to the Marist Brothers for three years.
13. Quito. Ecuador. The administration of the cathedral parish, Sagrario. Centre of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association. 3 priests, one lay brother.
14. Sydney. Australia. House and mission procure for Oceania missions. Care of two parishes: Randwick and Botany Bay. Centre of the Association and the Australian Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. 5 priests and 2 lay brothers.
15. The New Guinea Mission. 1 Vicar Apostolic living on Yule Island. Several mission stations in the care of priests and lay brothers. House, parish, different undertakings on Thursday Island, 8 priests, 1 scholastic, 9 lay brothers.
16. New Pomerania (later New Britain) Mission. 1 Vicar Apostolic in residence at Kininungan; another residence at Volavolo. 4 priests, 9 lay brothers.
17. Mission to the Gilbert and Marshall Islands. House at Nonouti and some mission stations, 3 priests, 2 lay brothers.

III. Administration.

The Society is led by its Founder and Superior General, elected to office for 12 years at the 1869 Chapter. As there was no Chapter to re-elect him at the end of twelve years, he was confirmed in office for a further three years by the Holy See, following which he was again confirmed in office for 3 years by the Holy See in 1889, after which he was confirmed in office for 12 years by the validation formula (rescript) of June 13, 1891.

The General Council, normally comprising 4 Assistants, a secretary and General Bursar, finds itself not quite adequate following the above-mentioned rescript, according to which the Assistants were required to live with the Superior General, such-wise that Fr. Jouët could not accommodate this role (Assistant) with that of Procurator General since this required Roman residence. The duties of Secretary General were carried out by one of the Assistants, the Council then made up of 3 Assistants and the General Bursar. Of these three Assistants, two, Fathers Piperon and Morisseau, were elected at the 1879 Chapter, confirmed in office by the many times cited June 13, 1891, rescript. The 3rd Assistant, Fr. Maillard, was a Council replacement for Fr. Guyot who was dismissed when the 1891 Chapter broke up with the Holy See's approval on February 20 that year, and he was then confirmed in office, together with the other Assistants by the validation rescript.

The Constitutions, number 134, require the Superior General to have the assistance of 4 Assistants to look after spiritual and temporal issues, studies, the missions, but since he has not sufficient people available for such roles he is forced to select a General Bursar from outside his Assistants. The individual responsible for the missions is one of the Assistants.

Requirements as regards local Superiors and others in responsibility. An article placed in the Constitutions lays it down that they be aged 35. In consideration that this new regulation did not have a retroactive effect, we left in office Superiors appointed previously who did not have the requisite age of 35, three in all: those at Antwerp, Salzburg and Quito. As regards new appointments, we made it a requirement to act in keeping with the Constitutions, but since we are short on priests aged 35 and over, and since among them there a number who have not the qualities to be in charge of a house, we accordingly found ourselves in a predicament and were obliged to ask for a dispensation on behalf of two Superiors, Watertown and Antwerp, and also in the case of two Novice Masters at Watertown and Salzburg. Moreover, not having local Superiors available for our missions in Oceania, we had no alternative other than to petition the Holy See for a dispensation to make the Vicars Apostolic in New Guinea and New Pomerania (latterly New Britain) the local Superiors also.

IV. The Society's Property.

These assets comprise land and buildings, money to hand and income from different resources: contributions, salaries, etc.

1. Properties with approximate financial assessment.

	Francs

Saint-Priest, house and property	50,000
Vichy, church and guest house	300,000
Rome, church and house	500,000
Tilburg, house and properties	300,000

	Total 3,755,000

As for land purchased in the missions on behalf of the Society, it cannot be financially assessed.

Financial assets	200,000
	Total 3,955,000

The total value of the Society's assets comes to three million, nine hundred and fifty-five thousand francs. This amount is more than the real assets of the Society since it is necessary to deduct from it the debts being incurred, which are as follows:

Debts accruing as regards:

Sacred Heart ( Issoudun )	75,000
Vichy	65,000
Paris	125,000
Antwerp	300,000
Tilburg	40,000
Salzburg	100,000
Glastonbury	20,000
Canet-de-Mar	45,000
Sydney	60,000

Total 830,000

These debts in total come to 830 thousand francs.

If one deducts this figure from the assets, the real financial worth of the Congregation comes to 3,125,000 francs.

3,955,000
3,125,000 francs

3. Revenues accruing to the Society from other sources:

Bursary and Sacred Heart house ( Issoudun )	150,000
Paris	15,000
Vichy	8,000
Saint-Priest	1,500
Rome	20,000
Antwerp	150,000
Tilburg	100,000
Barcelona	20,000
Canet-de-Mar	3,000
Glastonbury	15,000
Salzburg	60,000
Watertown	20,000
Sydney	45,000
Quito	10,000

The revenue comes to a total of 617,500

Each particular house, under the jurisdiction of the Superior General, disposes of its income first and foremost for its own upkeep and thereafter to the support and promotion of the undertakings here mentioned: Petite Oeuvres, novitiates, scholasticates, devotion to the Sacred Heart, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, St. Joseph. The mother house, in addition, must take care of the general expenses incurred in governing the Society. Each house undertakes to manage its resources in such a way that each year it arrives at a surplus which allows it in time to cancel out the debt with which it is burdened.

The revenues to meet our Oceania missions comprise the contribution from the Propagation of the faith 80,000 francs, the offerings from the faithful to the different houses of the Society, that is to say 25,000 francs, the left-over intake at the procure, Randwick, Sydney, which is not large.

V. Novitiates.

The Society's main novitiate, moved to Holland during the November 1880 expulsion, has been latterly, with the Holy See's approval, transferred to Chezal-Benoît. At the present time there are 33 novices, among whom there is one priest, 26 destined for the priesthood and 6 for the lay brotherhood. It is, since 1880, in the charge of a Novice Master of long and varied experience, highly regarded for his competence and good standing. His Assistant, who is much younger, is likewise highly regarded for his competence and personal qualities.

The Society also has a novitiate at Watertown (USA), but it doesn't have any great number of novices, at most five or six, which means that they are obliged to join the rest of the community for several activities. Then there are also two other novitiates, for lay brothers, one at Antwerp the other at Salzburg, both in the charge of competent men, the first-named having 21 novices, the second 3 only.

The foregoing, Your Excellency, is the full listing of personnel and other matters which I have conscientiously put together and which I place before Your Eminence.

C 18921127

Circular to the Society's members.

Undated; likely late November, 1892

My Dear Fathers and Brothers,

I believe it my duty to share with you the translation of some recent regulations from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars published in Italian and dealing in particular with orders in solemn vows, but this, however, following the Cardinal Prefect's declaration, equally involves Congregations in simple vows where perpetual vows should be identified with the solemn vows of the major orders and the commitment of the subdiaconate. The decrees make reference to certain aspects of Italian law dealing with one year's military service and which is not applicable to France. Nevertheless, we have, besides the normal three-year military service, that of one year, when one has taken the licentiate degree in a state university. While reading these regulations, the Superior and the young conscripts under their care will take stock of their respective needs and try to carry them out faithfully, thereby helping to make sure of many vocations which would have been hazardous given the dangers inherent to military service.

Please be assured, dear Fathers and Brothers, of my sincere and devoted good wishes in S.C.J.

J. Chevalier, Superior General.

NB: The present circular and accompanying decree are to be read in all our houses.

PRESCRIPTIONS
SACRED CONGREGATION WITH RESPECT TO RELIGIOUS DISCIPLINE (N.177.479)

The Sacred Congregation, responsible for religious discipline, ever attentive to what benefits religious bodies, cannot but concern itself with young candidates who are its most promising hope. It is for this reason that, with the Pope's approval, it confirms the Apostolic Constitutions hitherto published and setting out regulations meeting normal circumstances, but now it provides for Superior Generals, with regard to their subjects undergoing military service, the following specific prescriptions:

1. For those in the first category who have no guarantee of being admitted, both solemn profession and acceptance in sacred orders must be postponed until they have finished military service, by a year or more if deemed necessary.
2. It is worthwhile to be in favour of one year's abeyance in keeping with the resources available to each order, helping your religious in need to meet in part, or fully, the expenses arising from Government tax, or other expenses necessitated by military service. Nevertheless, it goes without saying that these contributions are not to be made available except to those young religious of hopeful expectations, both docile and obedient.
3. It is appropriate that, before they begin the minimum service or anything longer they follow a course of spiritual exercises over ten days at least and do part of their theological studies, preceded by the normal course in other studies, so that they will be all the more confident in their religious convictions and more attached to their institute.
4. In order that these young religious more assuredly keep their vocation, and witness to it by becoming behaviour, besides religiously helpful advice, recourse to the sacraments inasmuch as it is possible, reading edifying books, they are obliged to contact church authorities appointed by the bishops in the area to look after their spiritual well-being, and the latter will do their utmost to provide these conscripts with directions which, in the circumstances, will be worthwhile for them. To facilitate this endeavour, Superior Generals will advise their Provincials to bring their subjects to the notice of the said bishops who for their part will notify the Provincials of the priests' names to which the young conscripts should address themselves.

Likewise with each change of address the young religious need to inform the Provincial and make known to him insofar as this is possible how things are with them. If, during their time as conscripts, they are granted some weeks' holiday, they should take the opportunity to go on retreat for at least three days. It is hardly necessary to say that in the towns and cities where their orders have houses the Provincials will appoint one of the community to take on the spiritual care of their conscripts, but there always remains a firm obligation to make known to the local bishops the names of the young religious who are on military service in their dioceses.

5. Those who, after military service lasting for a year or more, still continue in their vocation, as indicated by their good behaviour, shall once more be accepted by their orders, and straightaway they will go on retreat. They cannot be accepted for solemn profession or sacred orders without a period of probation lasting not less than a year so that they have the opportunity to provide proof of stability in their vocation, take up again their studies, while staying during this time in a house of professed members, or another house of strict observance, under the care of a mature religious of moral probity who will have been appointed to make sure the requisite moral standards be upheld.

Greater concern is called for in relation to those who, instead of the minimum, have completed the military service of longer duration. Testimonial letters from the diocesan bishops of the areas in which they have been stationed, for at least three months, will be needed for everyone. The prescriptions of Canon Law remain in force for those who fall short or incur penalties; in each instance papal dispensation is called for.

6. The same precautionary measures as set out in number 4 will be undertaken in relation to those who, following religious profession and holy orders, will be called up once more for military service of long-lasting duration.

7. Finally, if exceptional circumstances arise which are unforeseen, Superior Generals should have recourse to the Sacred Congregation for similar advice and appeals (requests).

Rome, November 27, 1892

J. Cardinal Verga, Prefect.
Jos. M. Archbishop Ces. de Pont. Sec.

18921128X

Council Meeting, November 28,
December 5, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard, Assistants.

Contribution of 300 francs for the parish priest of Oleggio.

1. The parish priest of Oleggio, Don Giovanni Renzi, having provided generous, but costly, hospitality for the regretted Bishop Verjus during his illness of 18 days prior to death, it was agreed that he should be offered the sum of 300 francs as a mass offering for the dead Bishop.

Acceptance to subdiaconate of Brothers Pierre Martin, Daniel Lehane, Eéphirin Peloquin, Frédéric Bormann.

2. At the request and good commendation of Fr. Derichemont, and following satisfactory results in their examinations, Brothers Martin, Lehane, Peloquin and Bormann were accepted for the subdiaconate.

Brother Bently accepted for minor orders.

Oswald Bently was likewise accepted for minor orders, although his examination results were not as satisfying at those of his confrères.

Philippe Erven accepted for renewal of vows.

3. At the request and commendation of Fr. Ramot, Superior, Philippe Erven was accepted for renewal of vows.

Decisions about the appointments of 3 priests and 2 brothers going on the missions.

4. It was agreed that from the three priests about to depart for the missions, two, Fathers Roussel and Karsseleers, would go to Papua, Yule Island, and the third, Fr. Helfer, would be asked to go to New Pomerania (New Britain) if he so wishes. As the two lay brothers are, likewise, German, they are being made available to Bishop Couppé, Vicar Apostolic of New Pomerania.

Information about the Rome Archconfraternities.

5. Fr. Jouët being present, he was asked to provide the meeting with information about the Rome Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, perpetual devotion to the Sacred Heart, devotion to St. Joseph, the Purgatory Association.

1. While the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart are rightly responsible for the Confraternity of the Lady of the Sacred Heart, affiliated to the Rome Archconfraternity of that name, they cannot make available a local confraternity, needing, therefore, a local confraternity properly attached to them in order to keep registers and make available the Association's indulgences. Likewise, they are not free to set down conditions for admission, as, for example, setting the obligation of the daily Our Lady of the Sacred Heart invocation.

2. Likewise, the Confraternity of Perpetual Worship of the Sacred Heart, wherever set up, needs to be affiliated to the Rome Archconfraternity of that name in order to provide indulgences. One cannot have inscriptions and distribute tickets of affiliation to Issoudun without a confraternity being properly affiliated. The directors of local confraternities haven't the right to set out obligatory conditions of admission for the Associates.

3. The title St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, having been rejected by the Holy Office, the Archconfraternity of this name accordingly finds itself suppressed, but since the title St. Joseph, model and patron of the friends of the Sacred Heart, has replaced the suppressed title, an Archconfraternity of this name will, likewise, be substituted for that which has been suppressed.

4. The Association of the little trip to Purgatory being neither a confraternity nor archconfraternity, and having no particular indulgences, has no other purpose than to pray, celebrate masses, make offerings, gain indulgences, for the souls in Purgatory, without making any financial gain from leaflets or entrance tickets.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

Here's a letter I have had from Quito. I would ask you as a matter of urgency to get Cardinal Rampolla to bring this issue to an end as soon as possible by saying yes or no! This long drawn out saga is very damaging. Fr. Bouvier, for conscientious reasons, has asked to come back. Fr. Barral is about to come for the Chapter and this only leaves Fr. Perriot. Fr. Gressin, lacking in judgment, is more of an annoyance than useful, Fr. Barral tells me. Hurry up with an answer; it's now an urgent issue.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

L 18921130B

To the Cardinal Prefect of the Propagation of Faith, Rome.

+ Issoudun, November 30, 1892

Most Eminent Cardinal,

1. It was not without being greatly moved that we came to know of the paternal and kind meeting you had with Bishop Verjus of our Congregation, coadjutor to Bishop Navarre, Vicar Apostolic of New Guinea, as well as the keen interest Your Eminence has shown in these far-away missions in our charge. We were no less touched by your regret on the occasion of Bishop Verjus' premature death, on whom we had built so much hope. Humanly speaking, his loss is incalculable. What comforts us is our having in heaven one more protector, and God always knows how to bring good out of evil. The death of this dear Apostolic Vicar, so highly regarded and loved by us all, makes us appreciate your regard for our missions. Several have already asked me to let them go to New Guinea; next Saturday five will be embarking at Marseilles for these distant lands and within a few more months others will follow.

2. For quite some time, Fr. Genocchi, from our little Society, presently Vicar General to Bishop Bonetti, Apostolic Delegate in Constantinople, has expressed a keen interest in the New Guinea missions. It is pointless to start praising this man to Your Eminence when his ability and talents are already well known at Propaganda. On hearing the news of Bishop Verjus' unexpected death, for whom he had great regard, he wrote to me some days ago asking me if he could go and work for the conversion of the natives in Oceania. Being required, as he says, to make a report to the Holy See about the mission assigned to him, he now takes occasion to ask the Holy Father for permission to go to New Guinea because, he says, Bishop Bonetti doesn't need his presence and help in Constantinople any longer. I make bold, then, Your Excellency, given your interest in the missions, to ask the Pope to grant the permission requested by our confrère.

3. Your Eminence is as aware as myself that for quite some time the vitality of Bishop Navarre, Vicar Apostolic of New Guinea, has been sapped by exhaustion, sickness and deprivations. Despite his intrepid zeal, heroic commitment, he is forced to keep to his bed most of the time. At the present time with the mission expanding and looking very hopeful, a new coadjutor with the right of succession becomes an absolute requirement for him. If I may be permitted to express a wish, I would suggest Fr. Jouët for Your Eminence's consideration and you will be aware of his zeal, integrity, commitment in the face of challenge, since he is at present our Society's Procurator in Rome, very well liked and highly regarded by Bishop Navarre. He will, without doubt, follow the footsteps of Bishop Verjus and provide fresh impetus to the work in New Guinea.

I leave this thought with you, Your Eminence, as I kneel before you asking to be favoured with your blessing and to accept my deep respect and regards as I have the honour to be your most humble and obedient son in C.J.

Your Eminence,

Your kind letter with which I was honoured, crossed with my own. Fr. Genocchi's wish to go on the missions has been encouraged by us for quite some time. We accordingly wholeheartedly support it. Although I expressed the wish in my last letter that he be sent to New Guinea, if, nevertheless, Your Eminence would prefer, given his experience in different areas and his deep knowledge of Oriental languages, that he remain in Rome as Procurator General of our Society, and thereby be more useful to Propaganda and the Holy See, we would be quite happy about it. Fr. Jouët, if he decides to go to New Guinea, would take other missionaries with him and, thereby, replace Fr. Genocchi. Your Eminence will decide what's best

I go on my knees before Your Eminence with deepest respect, while most gratefully acknowledging the concern you show for our little Society, asking you to bless me and all our undertakings.

Council Meeting, December 12, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General, Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard, Assistants.

Proposal for amalgamation from Fr. Arbelbide, Superior of the Hasparren Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

1. In the first place, consideration was given to a proposal from Fr. Arbelbide, Superior of the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Hasparren, Bayonne Diocese, a Congregation in simple vows under the authority of the local (Bayonne) Ordinary. He explained that his Congregation was made up of 21 priests, 12 novices, 10 lay brothers and 25 college students; and owns three houses with residential colleges, in one of which, Mauléon, there is an apostolic school and novitiate. There is legal ownership of all these properties and they are not mortgaged. From their present revenues and the contributions made by a number of well-wishers, he is, accommodatingly, able to provide for the different communities and even without the benefactors he is quite assured about the future financial prospects of his Society. Nevertheless, he finds it impossible to come by the resources to ensure that development which he wants for his Society. So motivated, and also having the wish to assure as well as possible his little Congregation's future and make it independent of the unsupportive bishop who was opposed to it, he thought about complete amalgamation with a Congregation approved by Rome. Since he and his confrères are called Missionaries of the Sacred Heart he would prefer to unite with a Congregation which carries this very same title, such as the Issoudun Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. He, accordingly, offers these three houses and their personnel to the MSCs on condition that their professed are not obliged to make another novitiate. For the rest, he accepts that his novices and his students should be accepted in the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart corresponding houses. But his houses must stay diocesan after a certain fashion and make at least ten priests available for pastoral work among the Basques. As for himself, personally, he would like to continue as Superior to guarantee a successful fusion, and bring to fruition his foundation scheme in the Argentine Republic for the evangelization of Basques who are very numerous in this country.

The Council acknowledged that the proposed amalgamation could be very advantageous for our Society, strengthening its French qualities and providing it with the opportunity to recruit in a country markedly Christian and where vocations are flourishing. But everyone is aware that on the eve of a General Chapter an issue of such importance cannot be put forward for consideration and approval, nor, of course, to the awareness and approval of the Apostolic Delegate, the Bishop of Sinope. It was decided to wait for the decision of the Chapter about this, which, if favourable, would then be referred to the Holy See in order to ascertain the manner in which this coming together would come about. Fr. Arbelbide will take it upon himself to get permission from his local Ordinary, the Bishop of Bayonne.

Consideration of an appeal from Fr. Klotz to be reinstated.

2. Consideration then followed of a request from Fr. Klotz, made first to the Prefect of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars and now forwarded to the Superior General by the Bishop of Sinope, whose view, as well as that of the Council, was being sought. This request was presented in very humble terms, so much so that one could not doubt the sincerity of the wayward one's regret and, in consequence, the Council decided that Fr. Klotz should stay in the Congregation on condition that he accepts the punishment which he himself put forward and accepted in advance: having neither active or passive voice (votes) at the Chapter, being ineligible for Superior's office and, besides, a retraction before the members of the forthcoming Chapter in whatever form is considered most opportune.

3. The rescript authorizing the Superior General to confirm Fr. Reyn in office as Antwerp Superior was then read to the meeting.

Brother Gerardus given permission to stay at home for a further three months.

4. Brother Gerardus, in Tilburg, whose temporary vows expired on Christmas Day, but who had gone to stay with his family for health reasons and not yet being sufficiently improved, now asks to prolong his time at home. He was granted a further three months.

Contribution to Mr. Benedetti.

Fr. Benedetti's father, finding himself greatly in need, was allotted an annual sum of 400 (francs) to be taken from the mass offerings of his son.

Issoudun, December 12, 1892

My Lord,

At the request of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, I held a Council meeting in order to get its views on the Fr. Klotz case.

Having taken into consideration the expressions of regret which were a feature of his recent letters, particularly so that written to Cardinal Verga, we are given to believe in the sincerity of his views and, accordingly, agree to keep him in the Congregation, but on condition that he should have imposed on him the punishments he himself proposes: his being deprived of passive and active voice at Chapters in the future, together with ineligibility for the office of Superior also for the rest of his life. In addition, he must ask pardon and retract all he has said or done against authority from the members of the new Chapter fixed for February 2 next, and according to the manner judged most opportune.

With deep respect, I have the honour to be Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Signed: J. Chevalier, MSC.

The above letter is in Fr. Maillard's handwriting.

Bourges, December 16, 1892

Your Eminence,

To meet the requirements of your telegram, dated November 30, 1892, I asked the Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, Archdiocese of Bourges, to bring together his Council in order to examine the petition from Fr. Klotz, who had been expelled from the Congregation, which had been sent to you in order to obtain his reinstatement and be in receipt of your verdict.

Fr. General and his Council, satisfied by the sincerity of the regrets expressed by Fr. Klotz as to his behaviour, are willing to grant him the pardon he seeks and accept him once more as a member of the Society provided, however, that he be deprived of all active and passive voting for the rest of his life and that, likewise, he can never be made Superior during his lifetime.

This is in consideration of the avowal made by the appellant to Your Grace as being absolutely frank, without the slightest attempt at justification, and that in advance he accepts all the penalties considered appropriate and which he himself sets down. But, on the other hand, in consideration of the fact that the behaviour which led to his expulsion was a relapse and that, accordingly, it is right and proper to accompany the pardon with some reservations, a punishment will be imposed upon him in keeping with the gravity of the circumstance.

Given the considered views of Fr. General and his Council, I myself am of the view that there is a case to be made for granting pardon to Fr. Klotz, and in consequence for his acceptance once more in the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, in keeping with the conditions laid down in the verdict of the Superior General and his Council as presented in the enclosed.

Accordingly, I would ask Your Eminence to be indulgent on the petitioner's behalf and obtain for him a favourable reply from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

Please accept, Your Eminence, my deep respect, as I have the honour to be your most humble and obedient servant.

Signed: Aug. Bishop of Sinope,
Vicar Capitular.

Dear Father,

I am grateful to you for sharing your news with me: a problem of which one is aware is half dealt with. Go to Vichy before you come back to Issoudun. A half season there will be good for you since the doctor is in favour of it. Do not delay in going there, your presence among us is so valuable and helpful. Mention the Hasparren priests' proposal to Fr. Guyot and let me know what he thinks. If it depended on myself, it would be very quickly arranged. I am about to write to the Superior and boost his hopes. I would like you to convey my warmest good wishes to Fr. Caseneuve and all his worthy family.

Issoudun, December 23, 1892

My Lord,

I am grateful to Your Lordship for being so helpful. On Monday our Deacon will arrive in Bourges at 3pm for the examination.

Cardinal Ledochowski, Prefect of Propaganda, has written asking me to forward to him, without delay, a name from among the confrères as a replacement for Bishop Verjus as Bishop Navarre's coadjutor. His Eminence tells me that Fr. Jouët, about whom I had spoken to him, is not a suitable candidate because of his age, 52, and health, adding that he would be more useful in Rome where he is highly regarded. The Cardinal obviously is unaware of the opposition which has been stirred up against our good Procurator. It seems that he doesn't want Fr. Genocchi, about whom I have spoken to you, either.

I am very much at a loss in presenting a candidate to him. In the missions I can see nobody of the right calibre. Since Bishop Navarre is due to come to the Chapter, I shall wait and discuss the issue with him; is that your advice also?

Here's a problem which has arisen: the Sacred Congregation gives the Chapter the right to name a commission comprising four MSCs under the presidency of the Superior General to prepare the directory. Should this commission be made up of members of the Chapter, something which is more preferable in my view, or from outside? What do you think? Must Rome be consulted? The text doesn't specify anything.

I have the honour to be, most respectfully, Your Lordship's most humble and obedient son in C.J.

Yes, we wait on Bishop Navarre to rectify matters. You can depend on me to keep the secret which you want to be kept so.

One needs to write to dear Fr. Ceresi and find out if he is prepared to leave Rome and his family, and then we can make a decision about him depending on his answer. If he is prepared to make himself obediently available, one would be willing to make available to him straightaway 400 francs (about 1,330 euros) a year for his family.

Amalgamation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart with the Hasparren Missionaries.

I. Reasons for this coming together.

The Issoudun Council is very much in favour of this union, and is ready to do its utmost to bring it about for the following reasons:

1. They (the Institutes) have the same name.
2. They have the same aims.
3. There are already very worthwhile assets to hand: 21 priests, 10 scholastics, 10 lay brothers, 25 students in secondary education, 3 houses without debts.
4. The part of the country where they are (the Basque region) is rich in vocations and bordering on the most fervent part of Spain.
5. This grouping would give rise to a great deal of good for our Society since union makes for force and, besides, it would strengthen the French element among us.

II. How this union might take shape.

1. One needs the approval of the Bishops whose missionaries they are (canonically).
2. One must come to an understanding with Rome about the procedures to be undertaken as regards a novitiate so that the priests anxious for this union, already living in community and with private vows, can proceed to make canonical vows, thereby becoming members of our Society. One of us could go there to introduce them to our religious way of life and receive their vows.
3. The young students could come to Chezal-Benoît for their novitiate year and go from there to the scholasticate. Then, on being ordained priests, they would return, inasmuch as it would be necessary, to the Bayonne Diocese where the house would be considered diocesan, and the staff, which could not be less than ten, would be made available to the Bishop.
4. The present Superior would remain at Hasparren and look after what is in his charge.
5. The properties in his name would belong to the Society, just like all those we have.
6. As soon as it becomes possible, a novitiate and scholasticate will be set up in this diocese.

The above document abruptly so ends.

Your Excellency,

I have the honour to place at Your Eminence's feet the triennial report, as prescribed by our Constitutions, on the disciplinary, personnel, economic, state of our Society and its novitiates.

I. DISCIPLINE.

We are not in a position to provide under this heading as complete and satisfactory a report as that of our last three-year report on March 25, 1889. Nevertheless, we must be grateful to the Sacred Heart of Jesus for His protection while our Society has been assailed by storms. If administrative problems unwisely brought into the open, as well as the burdens arising from much too great a multiplicity of work, have diminished in certain members respect for, and confidence in, authority, nonetheless the Lord be praised that the problems are not worse.

Religious discipline has been maintained in quite a satisfactory manner within our houses, given the circumstances. We can vouch for this from the reports of local Superiors and from canonical visitations made to these houses. The representatives of higher authority have everywhere been received with respect and acceptance during these visits. Accordingly, obedience and the other religious virtues continue to be held in honour among us. Despite certain failures, the vast majority remain faithful to their vocation. All, apart from one alone, have impressively accepted the June 13 rescript validating the irregularities which had arisen and prescribing the renewal of professions made from 1883 to 1891. One has reason to hope, then, that discipline, momentarily affected in some houses, will in fact be restored and flourish as before.

II. PERSONNEL AND FOUNDATIONS.

The personnel number 82 priests, 120 scholastics, 80 lay brothers, spread about 18 houses and the missions, as follows:

1. Issoudun. Mother house; cradle of the Society, home, presently, to the scholasticate. There is also a small school for the town's children, and the Association's centre for the French Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. There are in all 9 priests, 66 scholastics, 190 lay brothers. The basilica had its doors sealed in the dastardly year of the expulsions, 1880, and has not been opened since. The town's parish is the responsibility of the Society; there are 6 priests and 2 lay brothers.
2. Benoît. A former school, part of the Bourges diocesan patrimony, rented to the Society by Archbishop Marchal of blessed memory. The Congregation's principal novitiate is there, as well as an apostolic school or Petite Oeuvre with 115 students. There are ten priests, 6 scholastics and 4 lay brothers.
3. Paris. A residential house with a well-patronized church. Centre of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association. There are 5 priests, 1 scholastic, 2 lay brothers.
4. Vichy. Moulins Diocese. A priest resides there and there's a public chapel greatly frequented during the spa season.
5. Rome. Residence, via della Sapienza 32; also General Procurator's address. There is a public church, well attended, and it is the centre of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Archconfraternity, likewise of public worship of the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph. It is also a scholasticate and the students take their courses at the Apollinare University. There is also a little Petite Oeuvre and the Association's office. It is the centre for the Italian Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. There are 2 priests, 15 scholastics and 1 lay brother.
6. Antwerp. Malines Diocese, Belgium. House, foreign missions' seminary. Petite Oeuvre for classes up to third year. Lay brothers' novitiate. Centre of the Association and for the French, German and Flemish Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. There are 5 priests, 8 scholastics and 20 lay brothers.
7. Tilburg. Diocese of Bois-le-Duc (Holland). House, Petite Oeuvre for the lowest years. Centre of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association, the Dutch Annals. There are 3 priests, 7 scholastics and 10 lay brothers.
8. Salzburg. House. Petite Oeuvre for the lower years. Lay brothers' novitiate; Association's centre as well as the German Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Some of the lay brothers work on two farms which could not be rented out. There are 4 priests, four scholastics, 12 lay brothers
9. Glastonbury. Clifton Diocese (England). House, college, Petite Oeuvre. Two parishes or missions being looked after. Public church. Centre of the Association and of the English Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. 4 priests, 4 scholastics, 4 lay brothers.

10. Watertown. New York. Diocese of Ogdensburg (USA). Responsibility for a small parish, college, Petite Oeuvre. A small novitiate. Centre of the Association and of the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. 4 priests, 7 scholastics, 2 lay brothers.
11. Barcelona. Spain. House, public church. Petite Oeuvre for the first years. The Association's Centre and that of the Spanish Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. 2 priests, 2 scholastics, 2 lay brothers.
12. Canet-de-Mar. Gerona Diocese. College made over to the Society in 1890 and at the present time empty due to the lack of personnel needed to take charge of it. The house is presently rented to the Marist Brothers for three years.
13. Quito. (Ecuador, South America). House; for administration of the cathedral parish of Sagrario. Centre of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association. 3 priests, one lay brother.
14. Sydney. (Australia.) House; mission procure for the Oceania missions. Administration of two parishes, Randwick, Botany Bay. Centre of the Association and the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Annals. 5 priests, 2 lay brothers.
15. New Guinea Missions. 1 Vicar Apostolic residing at Yule Island. Several mission stations looked after by priests and lay brothers. House, parish, variety of work on Thursday Island. 8 priests, 1 scholastic, 12 lay brothers.
16. New Pomerania (latterly New Britain) Mission. 1 Vicar Apostolic in residence at Kininigunan. Another residence at Volavolo. 4 priests, 9 lay brothers.
17. The Gilbert and Marshall Islands Mission. House at Nonouti; some other stations. 3 priests, 2 lay brothers.

III. GOVERNMENT AND ADMINISTRATION.

The Society is led by its Founder and Superior General elected for 12 years at the 1869 Chapter. Since there was no Chapter which could re-elect him when he had completed 12 years in office, he was confirmed for three years by the Holy See and then, following an intervening period, he was again confirmed in office for three more years in 1889, which, following revalidation, became confirmed for 12 years by the validating rescript of June 13, 1891.

The General Council, normally consisting of 4 Assistants, a Secretary and General Bursar, finds itself incomplete following from the rescript referred to and according to which the Assistants are required to live with the Superior General, and in consequence of which Fr. Jouët could not fulfil this role and that of Procurator General which requires his presence in Rome. The role of Secretary General was taken by one of the Assistants, the Council consisting only of three Assistants and the General Bursar.

Two of the three Assistants, Fathers Piperon and Morisseau, were elected at the 1879 Chapter and confirmed by the June 13, 1891, rescript already mentioned more than once. The third Assistant, Fr. Maillard, was a Council replacement for Fr. Guyot, dismissed following the dissolved 1891 Chapter with the Holy See's approval, dated February 20 of that year, Fr. Maillard confirmed as Assistant by the rescript of validation.

Number 134 of the Constitutions advise the Superior General to draw on four Assistants to look after the spiritual and temporal affairs of the Society, education, missions, but as there isn't sufficient personnel to fulfil these posts, he was forced to appoint a General Bursar outside of the Assistants. One of the Assistants has responsibility for the missions.

As regards local Superiors and other people in authority, a number in the Constitutions requires that they be aged 35. Taking into consideration this new regulation as not having a retroactive effect, we left in charge those Superiors already in office who were not of the requisite age, three in number, those of Antwerp, Salzburg and Quito. In order to meet the new requirements we made it our duty to abide by the new demands of the Constitutions, but since it happens that we are very wanting in priest members who are 35 years old, and since not all of them have the ability to look after a house, we found ourselves greatly at a loss, having no other option than to request dispensations on the grounds of age for two Superiors, those of Watertown and Antwerp, and also for two Novice Masters, those of Watertown and Salzburg. In addition, not having local Superiors for our Oceania missions, we were forced to look for a dispensation from the Holy See to appoint the Vicar Apostolic of New Guinea and New Pomerania (New Britain) Superiors also.

IV. THE SOCIETY'S ASSETS.

The assets comprise ground, buildings, assets in banks, revenues from different sources: contributions, bursaries, etc.

Properties, their approximate value:	Francs
Issoudun: Sacred Heart house and what goes with it	600,000
Other effects	120,000
-Benoît: a wing of the building built at the Society's expense	50,000
Paris: rue de Calais, 21	300,000
Saint-Priest: a house and its effects	350,000
Vichy: a church and large guest house	300,000

Rome: church and house, Piazza Navona	500,000
Antwerp: house and property	550,000
Tilburg: house and property	300,000
Canet-de-Mar: house and property	70,000
Glastonbury, England:	140,000
Barcelona: house and church	200,000
Salzburg: house and large property consisting of two farms	250,000
Watertown	200,000
Sydney: ground recently bought to build on for residential purposes	125,000

Missions: the value of the properties bought on behalf of the Order is not ascertainable.

2. Bank Assets 200,000

The total assets of the Society come then to 3,955,000
Three million nine hundred and 55 thousand francs.

This sum exceeds the real financial situation of the Congregation since it is necessary to deduct from it the money owed which is spread about in the following manner:

At the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, the debt is	75,000
At Vichy	65,000
At Paris	125,000
At Antwerp	300,000
At Tilburg	40,000
At Salzburg	100,000
At Glastonbury	20,000
At Canet	45,000
At Sydney	60,000

830,000

The total debt is eight hundred and thirty thousand francs.

If one deducts this amount from the Society's assets, the real financial assets come to 3,125,000

3. Revenues accruing to the Society from various sources:

From the Bursar's office and Issoudun Sacred Heart house	150,000
From the Paris house	15,000
From Vichy	8,000
St Priest	1,500
Rome	20,000
Antwerp	150,000
Tilburg	100,000
Barcelona	20,000
Canet	3,000
Glastonbury	15,000
Salzburg	60,000
Watertown	20,000
Sydney	45,000
Quito	10,000

The revenues accruing from the different houses come, then, to

617,500

Six hundred and seventeen thousand francs.

Each individual house, under the Superior General's authority, will dispose of its revenues as follows: first of all for its upkeep, then for the support and expansion of the following undertakings: the Petite Oeuvres, novitiates, scholasticates; devotion to the Sacred Heart, Our Lady and St. Joseph. The mother house must, besides, meet the general expense entailed in running the Society.

Each house in debt must so manage its intake that each year there is a surplus which in time will make it possible to pay the debt.

The revenue accruing to our Oceania missions comes from what is made available by the Propagation of Faith, that is to say 30,000 francs, together with contributions from the faithful received by the different house of the Society, totalling 25,000 francs and what is left over and above from the financial intake at the Sydney procure which is not very large anyway.

V. THE NOVITIATES

The main novitiate of the Society, moved to Holland during the November expulsions (from France), 1886, has latterly, with the Holy See's approval, been moved to Chezal-Benoît. It presently comprises 33 novices, among whom there's 1 priest, 23 novices going forward to the priesthood and 6 lay brother novices. It is since 1880 in the charge of a Novice Master of great, prolonged, experience, highly commendable for his qualities! His Assistant (socius), much younger, is likewise well known and highly regarded for his competence and qualities.

The Society has another novitiate in Watertown, but it has only a small number of novices, at most 5 or 6, and as a result they have to join the rest of the community for a number of exercises.

And, then, there are two other novitiates for lay brothers, one at Antwerp the other at Salzburg, both in the charge of competent men, that of Antwerp having 21 novices, whereas Salzburg has only 3.

The foregoing, Your Excellency, comprises the full reality of the situation as I have conscientiously put it together and which I place before Your Eminence accompanied by my deep regards and most absolute commitment in C.J.

Council Meeting, January 3, 1892

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard, Assistants.

The Ceresi Contribution.

1. The decision already taken about Brother Ceresi in Rome was confirmed. Having successfully passed his doctorate examination, an annual contribution of 400 francs (that is to say 100 francs every three months) will be made over to his parents who find themselves in extremely parlous circumstances, while he himself will be put forward for holy orders if he is sincerely prepared to go wherever obedience takes him. It is proposed to write and ascertain his intentions.

Fr. Meynier brought back to Issoudun.

2. Likewise the decision was confirmed to recall Fr. Meynier to Issoudun in order to follow the theology course, while at the same time carrying out some role or providing some services.

Brother Alexis accepted for renewal of vows.

3. At the request of Fr. Maillard, the lay brother Alexis, having proved satisfactory during the past three years, is accepted for renewal of temporary vows.

4. The lay brother Claude, who interrupted his novitiate to go and look after Fr. Guyot in Vichy, will return and be replaced by another brother at the Sacred Heart and at Vichy.

Decision about Fr. Kütter.

5. The expulsion of Fr. Kütter. Not having been regularized since 1888 and given that he is asking what his position is as regards his religious vows, he is requested to petition himself the dispensation he is looking for, but if he sincerely regrets his mistake in leaving the mission without any permission to do so, and would like to return to the Society, he would need to undergo a disciplinary régime similar to that of the novitiate.

Issoudun, January 9, 1893

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

1. I have written, as agreed, to the Hasparren Superior, but I haven't yet had a reply from him... I fear that the Bishop isn't partial to the proposal.

2. Fr. Guyot could advantageously look after any Third Order and associate priests if he wanted to do so. I put this request to him, but I have had no reply. I do not wish to impose anything like this on him. But I think he would be doing so be performing a great service to our Society.

3. I also think that you would be attempting something worthwhile if you were to get him to write Bishop Verjus' life (Vaudon is the editor of the Annals). There is no lack of documentation. I shall make available to you all those I have in my possession.

4. I think that it would be advantageous to initiate a subscription for the Pope on the occasion of his Jubilee in our February Annals. The priests of the Tours Holy Face are doing so; I am forwarding to you, with the religious weeklies, their January number which mentions this subscription.

5. I approve wholeheartedly of the retreats to which you refer, but they must not clash with our annual retreat or the September 8 feast when we shall be having a marvellous Dutch and Belgian pilgrimage. On your return we can arrange the dates. When do you intend to return from Vichy?

6. The death of the Bishop of Moulins is a great loss for the diocese and for us, also, as he was very close to us.

Pierre de Dreux-Brize, 1811-1893, Bishop of Moulins for 43 years, 1850-1893.

7. I am forwarding a circular from Mr. Garnier who requests, together with the Catholic members of parliament, a novena of prayers. You can mention this in the forthcoming Annals.

Cheerio, Father. My good wishes to all.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Father,

1. I am sorry that you are not getting any better. We shall pray for you.
2. I have no letters from the missions. I am sorry about this.
3. I shall be seeing Fr. Piperon tomorrow and insist on getting the Petite Oeuvre contribution (to the Annals).
4. Yesterday's Universe carried the speech of Ecuador's President on the occasion of the blessing of the Church of the Sacred Heart's foundation stone. The Reign of the Sacred Heart (publication), which I have just received, refers to it. I shall send you this copy. I think it would be desirable if this speech, which is quite beautiful, was also published in our Annals.
5. Yes, indeed, the Chapter is getting near. Let us pray for its success. If you have some observations to make about it, and some expectations of your own, be good enough to forward them to the Bishop of Sinope.

I hope the new administration will be satisfactory for you as regards the Annals. I am sorry that you are in continuous pain. I am earnestly praying for you. Look after the subscription list on behalf of the Holy Father; I think that it is difficult and we might get very little from it. I am forwarding what you were looking for. Dear Fr. Jouët,

Thank you for your kind letter. Yes, we must pray. The Bishop of Sinope is laid low in Bourges with bronchitis and has asked me to hold over the Chapter for fifteen days. If Bishop Navarre arrives on the 29th he could stay and rest in Marseille for 8 to 10 days if he so wishes. Welcome him for me ex intimo corde. Be good enough to convey my respects to the dear Caseneuve family, always so good to us. We have received Fr. Védère's letter and the accounts. The new General Administration, on being appointed, will need to concern itself with this matter which is quite serious.

Perusal of accounts and budgets from Rome, Chezal-Benoît, Barcelona, Glastonbury, Tilburg, Paris, Vichy.

1. Fr. Batard presented to the Council the budgets from Rome, Chezal-Benoît, Barcelona, Glastonbury, Tilburg, Paris, Vichy, all examined article by article.

- a. The Rome accounts leave a great deal to be desired and the finances are in a wretched state.
- b. The budgets and accounts from Chezal-Benoît, Barcelona, Glastonbury, Tilburg, Paris, are in good order.
- c. The Vichy budget appears to be excessive, even taking into account the foreseen expenses.

2. Given favourable reports from Fr. Piperon, the postulants Emile Oulman and Jacobus Cantoni were admitted to the novitiate.

3. At the request and recommendation of Bishop Couppé, Superior of New Pomerania (New Britain), the following lay brothers were accepted for renewal of vows:

Issoudun, February 4, 1893

My Lord,

I thank Your Lordship for the 'exequatur' you have forwarded to me in relation to Fr. Klotz. We shall follow your directions.

Exequatur – legal term in Church Law referring to a juridical executive act validating something which has to be carried out and entails legal consequences.

I am devastated that you are not any better, and it's not about the Chapter's postponement but rather the state of your health, and your friends are very concerned about this. I had a letter this morning from Fr. Jouët in Marseille telling me that Bishop Navarre is not well and confined to bed. He hasn't been able to say mass since he arrived. His chest is affected; he is feverish and has no appetite. The doctor doesn't think he can travel for at least 15 days and only then on condition that the weather is good. I fear the same outcome as with Bishop Verjus. You can see for yourself, Bishop, how devastated we are! I am under the cosh.

An idea occurs to me and allow me to share it with you. All my confrères keenly look forward to the Chapter in order to bring the existing problems and issues to an end. Could we not, on the Thursday after Ash Wednesday, the 16th of this month, or on the first days of the same week, Quinquagesima Sunday or on Monday or Tuesday, go to Bourges around 1pm and have the Chapter in your room? We would do our three days' retreat at Issoudun beforehand. Following a meeting lasting 2 or 3 hours, all the election votes would have been cast and each one would move away after placing his vote in your hands, that is if he did vote. If this proposal seems quite feasible to you, as I think it will, kindly let me know and fix the date on which we would go to Archbishop's house, following which I would contact the Chapter members from Europe to come to Issoudun for the retreat. Fr. Hartzer, because of being snowed in, and Fr. Ramot, preaching a retreat away from Glastonbury, would not have got the telegrams requesting their presence. This is the explanation for their presence in Issoudun.

Please accept My Lord, my respectful good wishes as I have the honour to be Your Lordship's most humble and obedient son in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

If Bishop Navarre is not able to attend we shall be 13 at the Chapter.

On reflection, we could if you think it appropriate, begin the Chapter next Saturday.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

We are going on retreat Tuesday morning in preparation for the Chapter which will take place in Bourges on Friday. (It would be Saturday rather than Friday.) The Bishop of Sinope is too ill to travel to Issoudun. It's he himself who suggested this to us as he fears his illness will last a long time and eventually carry him off.

You will have votes in your favour as Assistant (General). If you are nominated, and it is what I would want myself, would you accept? Please let me have your views when you have thought about it before the Lord and let me know as soon as possible. Brother Claudius has been told to go immediately to Marseilles (the scholastic Claudius Allera). I am so depressed about Bishop Navarre's illness. Let us hope and pray for his recovery.

Convey my good wishes to the Villeneuve family. (It should, obviously, have been Caseneuve family!)

General Chapter 1893

On the seventh of February 1893 the General Chapter, called by circular letter on August 12, 1892, to take place on February 2 of this year, 1893, began at the Congregation's mother house in order to make arrangements for the session due to take place under the supervision of the Bishop of Sinope, the Apostolic Delegate, and also for the three-day retreat preceding it. Those present were the Superior General, presiding in the Apostolic Delegate's absence through illness, Father Piperon, Assistant and Superior of Chezal-Benoît; Fr. Morisseau, Assistant and Secretary General; Fr. Batard, General Bursar; Fr. Miniot, Superior of the Paris house; Fr. Ramot, Superior, Glastonbury; Fr. Casas, Superior, Barcelona; Lanctin, Superior, Tilburg; Reyn, Superior, Antwerp; Hartzler, Superior, Salzburg; Dericheumont, Superior, Watertown; and Barral, Superior, Quito. Those absent were Bishop Navarre, Superior, Thursday Island, forced through illness to stay in Marseilles; Bishop Couppé, Superior in New Pomerania (New Britain), unable to come because of his mission duties; Fr. Jouët, Procurator General dispensed by Rome from attending; Fr. Bontemps, Superior of the Gilbert Islands who didn't receive in time the letter calling the meeting; and, finally, Fr. Tréand, Superior in Sydney, unable to come because of the demands of Randwick parish and the plea of Cardinal Moran.

Following the distribution of the Chapter agenda, the rescript of July 12, 1892, from the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars was read, authorizing the Chapter on condition that it be presided over by the Bishop of Sinope as Apostolic Delegate. Fr. General made known to the meeting that the Bishop, laid up for quite some time but hoping for improvement, had requested a delay of two or three weeks so that he could preside over the Chapter. However, when there was no likelihood of improvement in the very near future, as well as being aware that most of the participants had already arrived, and that the Chapter meeting was urgent, he wrote a letter (read at the meeting) in which he stated that he was quite unable to make the journey to Issoudun. Fr. General, thereupon, put forward the idea to him of having the Chapter in Bourges under his chairmanship following the preparatory retreat in Issoudun. His Lordship in a further letter, likewise read out, accepted all the more readily this proposal in that he had the same thought himself, offering to place himself at the disposal of anyone who would like to meet him during the retreat and before the Chapter met. This offer was appreciatively accepted, and the decision was taken that on any of the three days the retreat lasted one or two Chapter members could go and see the Bishop in Bourges. On the morning of the Chapter meetings, as well as in the afternoon, he would be available to meet those who couldn't see him in the afternoons of the retreat.

His Lordship agreed to have a letter read each day during the retreat to replace the talks he would have given had he been present. The first letter came at the beginning of the Retreat and was read out. It conveyed his regret that he could not preside over the exercises and he conveyed his best paternal wishes for the Society and its members. The issue was raised as to whether or not the election of a Superior General should be proceeded with, and to elect before the retreat began two secretaries, three scrutinizers of votes, and four assessors. Some thought that this election would be invalid or could be challenged due to the absence of the Apostolic Delegate. But since the Bishop approved, and gave assurances of ratification, it was virtually unanimously decided to go ahead immediately with the election in order to shorten the duration of the Chapter session. Two secretaries were first elected and the three youngest participants would be the scrutinizers. Fr.

Morisseau was elected, having received the majority of votes, 10, and Fr. Ramot with a relative majority, 5. There followed the election of the three main scrutineers, Fathers Lanctin and Barral being chosen with a relative majority of six votes and Fr. Derichemont with five votes. There followed the choice of four judges. Those elected with an absolute majority were Fathers Miniot with 10 votes and Maillard with 9. There followed balloting involving Fathers Piperon, Reyn and Hartzler who each received 7 votes and this led to a second ballot with Fr. Reyn getting 10 votes and Fr. Piperon 6, both then elected and becoming two of the 4 judges.

Following the elections the Superior General explained what led to Fr. Klotz's omission from the list of those eligible for election. He made it known that he was seriously at fault by not deferring respectfully to authority and in respect to the confidence shown in him when placed in charge of the scholasticate, and that for these reasons the Council had been forced to expel him. He, feeling repentant, had written first to the Pope and General and then to the Cardinal Prefect of Bishops and Regulars begging most insistently for pardon and requesting that he remain in the Society, accepting in anticipation all penalties which would be imposed on him, including the loss of active and passive voice at the Chapter and ineligibility to be Superior for the rest of his life. Fr. General, by way of witnessing to Fr. Klotz's being at fault and repentant, wanted his letter to Cardinal Verga read to the meeting. Some members, however, felt that it was not quite proper to make public such an intimate letter, some of its avowals resembling a kind of confession. Fr. General in reply stated that Fr. Klotz himself had requested that his shortcomings and regret should be made public in order to repair the scandal he had created. The letter was then read to the meeting at the end of which the General stated that the Council, impressed by the sincerity and regret so obviously and implicitly expressed, pardoned him, while insisting on the punishment he himself brought up and accepted in advance. The Bishop Delegate had ratified the Council's decision and the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars had given him the authority to make available to the Superior General, as and when appropriate, the right to accommodate once more Fr. Klotz in the Society. The Bishop made available the 'exequatur' of the Sacred Congregation's rescript on condition that Fr. Klotz's disposition was what it should desirably be at the present time, and for the purpose of his being fully integrated one does not require more than an explicit assurance that he intends to persevere with these sentiments of regret and continue accepting the punishment he himself proposed.

Finally, Fr. General made known the wishes of the Apostolic Delegate that the views of the Chapter delegates be forwarded in writing to him for his consideration before the Chapter meetings. Some members replied that the views should be expressed at the Chapter meetings and should remain specific to each individual. The General replied that the Bishop would share them with the Chapter before sending them to Rome, accompanied by his own observations.

The meeting ended by setting out the retreat timetable which began straightaway.

Issoudun, February 7, 1893

My Lord,

I am very grateful to you for the letter you were kind enough to send us for the Chapter Fathers and which I read out. Everybody seemed pleased. I made known the freedom which was theirs to write to you or go and see you. Many will avail of this (between ourselves they are not the best disposed)(!). They want to discuss as a group the issues which are being brought up. I am not in favour of this, insisting rather on strict confidentiality, telling them that they should put things in writing for Your Lordship and that at the Chapter you will give a lecture and then send the proposals to Rome, together with your report. No more was said.

As for Fr. Klotz, I put a summary of his recent history before all the priests present, referring to his expulsion, recourse to Rome, the Sacred Congregation's reply and the conditions imposed for his return. I suggested that I should read out the appeal he sent to Cardinal Verga, in which he acknowledged all misdemeanours and accepted that he was at fault. His friends were not in favour, stating that it would be a betrayal of confidence. I held firm and replied that since the scandal was public, it was only right that the retraction be made public also and that, for the rest, it was also Your Lordship's wish. Nobody said anything.

There you have, Bishop, a résumé of this meeting, and then before going on retreat we elected two secretaries, three scrutineers and four judges by secret ballot. Fathers Morisseau and Ramot are the secretaries, Fathers Barral, Lanctin and Derichemont the scrutineers, Fathers Reyn, Piperon, Maillard, Miniot the four judges. These appointments will be submitted to Your Lordship at the beginning of the Chapter for ratification.

I have the honour to be with deep respect Your Lordship's most humble and obedient son in C.J.

CHAPTER PROCEDURE

These procedures have been initiated to lay down the definitive text of the Constitutions and to present a Directory replacing the former old and new Rules presented to the Congregation.

It would appear, however, that the text is identical to that drawn up for the ill-fated 1891 Chapter and chronologically belongs there, being added to for the 1893 Chapter; see the original French text, p2189, with N. Bovy's querulous dismissive observation: "This document has, so it seems to me, no place here."

This procedural document comprises: 1, what was preparatory; 2, the sequence of the sessions; 3, the results of the Chapter.

I. The preparatory stage and meeting.

1. The Chapter opened with a Eucharistic celebration attended by all the delegates and followed by the Veni Creator and the prayer to the Holy Spirit.

2. After the Eucharistic celebration everybody proceeded to the conference hall and the president (sic) addressed the gathering appropriately for the occasion.

3. There followed the election of two secretaries, three scrutineers and four judges, these last, together with the president, responsible for making known anything out of order.

4. The indult was read about the prolongation of the General's powers and also other documents relevant to the Chapter's purpose.

5. The Chapter discussed and drew up its procedures.

6. It then proceeded to elect three commissions and particular bodies responsible beforehand for putting forward issues for submission to the assembly's deliberations, the first being that which involved the cult of the Sacred Heart, religious discipline, the missions; the second dealt with the government of the Society; the third dealt with everything as regards studies, different ministries and undertakings. These groupings consisted of four who will be elected in the case of each group by secret ballot. Since the Chapter members number only 12, when the first two groups are formed, the four remaining members will make up the third group. The president, not being attached to any particular group, may take his place in any group as he thinks fit.

7. The sessions begin at 9am and are not to last beyond 11.45am; those of the whole group together begin at 3pm and last until 5.30pm.

8. At the first meeting each group will elect its leader and secretary. The oldest by profession will preside and if there is a tie it's he who will be elected.

9. Any proposal not included in (outside of) the approved programme and which it is thought should be submitted to the Chapter, will be put in writing and submitted to one of the presidents of the different groups who, with the other presidents, will make up a fourth grouping, with responsibility for giving consideration to proposals of this kind before submitting them to the assessment group, following which it will be put before the Chapter if it is in order.

10. The particular groups will, in their work, follow the order all agreed on.

11. As regards this work, as well as all the Chapter deliberations, everyone will have in mind that he is bound to the strictest secrecy in relation to all those who are not part of the Chapter.

II. The Sequence of Events.

1. Each meeting, whether of the groups or full assembly, begins with the Veni Creator Spiritus and ends with the Sub Tuum and its customary invocations.

2. After the Veni Sancte Spiritus, the meeting will open with an oral account of the previous meeting and each one is free to pass comment...

3. There follows, then, a discussion about the issues set aside for the day, but in these general meetings nobody will speak without the president's permission, who may refuse permission if he thinks it appropriate.

4. When a subject matter which is part of the day's schedule does not seem adequately dealt with, if so requested by three members it will be sent back to the commission for further debate in Chapter.

5. All decisions are arrived at by majority voting; when deadlock ensues, that of the president (chairman) will prevail.
6. In those issues considered to be more important, a second vote may be taken if three members call for it.
7. If someone isn't present when the vote is taken, his absence will not invalidate it.
8. One can count the votes standing up or sitting down when the majority in favour is quite clearly indicated; nevertheless every one has always the right to ask for a secret ballot if he thinks it appropriate.
9. In debate, the Chapter members will engage themselves to remain calm, without bias, or being too argumentative, avoiding anything which would not be in keeping with religious decorum, as well as the respect and kindness we mutually owe to each other.
10. At the end of each general meeting, the time of the next session will be announced, also the subject and order of the issues to be dealt with.

III. Conclusion

1. At the end of the Chapter the members will proceed to the oratory for the Te Deum thanksgiving intoned by the President and followed by the verse and corresponding prayer, together with Benediction.
2. The Secretaries will note all the decisions reached and they will then be submitted for the Holy See's approval.

Issoudun, February 10, 1893

My Lord,

Fr. Jouët informed me in his latest letter that he wouldn't be undertaking any engagement, in order to leave the Chapter members their freedom in voting. He will consider matters afterwards. Several will be voting for him as Assistant. If he doesn't have the requisite majority, as is likely to be the case, the Chapter will be very hard put to find a man with the requisite qualities for such an important post. Many have said to me that they would be happy to vote for him as Procurator, but on condition that he was not Superior. I share this view myself. Might you not say yourself when the vote is being taken that Fr. Jouët has all the requisite qualities and, moreover, in Rome itself he enjoys the Pope's respect and confidence, likewise with the Cardinal, and that you would wholeheartedly commend him as Procurator on condition that he is no longer Superior of the Rome house, following which many votes would be in his favour and we would keep him in the Society.

This, Bishop, is what wisdom counsels you to say. You will add that you do not wish to influence the voting and leave to each one his full freedom.

Your devoted son, so very much indebted to you in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

An issue to be resolved as regards the elections: has it to be an absolute or relative majority?

Just now your telegram reached me. I greatly regret that your health prevents you from coming. In the same mail I had Bishop Navarre's reply to the questions I put to him, especially about Fr. Tréand, Superior in Sydney. It only confirms for me what I already knew, that Cardinal Moran was resolutely opposed to a change involving Fr. Tréand. The Cardinal stated that if the Chapter made a serious faux-pas like this, he would relieve us of the important Randwick parish where we are based in Sydney and which is indispensable for our mission's upkeep. Besides, Fr. Tréand has written to us stating that in no way whatsoever does he want to be involved in administration and would prefer a hundred times over to be a Carthusian than Procurator in Rome. Accordingly it must be made known to the Chapter before voting takes place what Fr. Tréand's views are and also the Cardinal's opposition.

Tomorrow at 9.30am we shall be at Archbishop's house. Please accept, My Lord, my respectful good wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I have set out a Chapter schedule, a summary of which I am forwarding to you, not having the time to make a copy of it. May I be excused, Your Lordship, since I haven't the time left to take my letter to the mailing station so that you could have it this evening; it is 11.30pm.

General Chapter 1893

Report of the Chapter sessions held at Bourges under the presidency of His Lordship, Bishop Marchal of Sinope, Apostolic Delegate.

On February 11, 1893, the General Chapter of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, called by a circular dated August 12, 1892, began at Archbishop's house in Bourges under the presidency of Bishop Marchal, Apostolic Delegate.

Those present were all those priests named as being present at the preliminary meeting held at Issoudun on February 7. Those not present are the same as those mentioned in the earlier statement.

The meeting began with a recitation of the Veni Creator. The rescript was read authorizing the Superior General to call a General Chapter under the presidency of the Bishop of Sinope.

His Lordship spoke first of all about the purpose of the Chapter; the election of four MSCs to form the Administration under the presidency of the Superior General; the resolution of the Quito impasse; and the proposals put forward by the Chapter participants. There followed the naming of those at the Chapter by right, having been officially called to it. Attention was focused on the reasons given for exemption by those not there and these were found acceptable. There followed the naming of those present and confirmation by the Bishop delegate of the two secretaries elected, the three scrutineers and the four judges, as arrived at during the preliminary (Issoudun) meeting.

The Bishop spoke briefly about an election such as this always having the utmost importance, but at the present time it has a special significance because of the existing crisis which, instead of diminishing, would appear to be developing momentum. It is necessary to find a way out. And since in a storm every effort has to be made to get the boat into port, so all who are responsible for the Congregation must do everything they can to bring about peace and calm things down. If the voting is to bring about this outcome, it requires that they proceed from a great spirit of faith and, specifically, to enhance the glory of God. It requires that one be prepared to place aside his views and personal inclinations, seeking only what the Lord wants. Making these principles relevant to the election of the Assistants, his Lordship demonstrated that they are chosen to assist and support the Superior General in whatever he does. What can one say about a man who receives a weapon to go and protect someone and turns it on him whom he is supposed to support? So would it turn out in the case of those Assistants if they believed it to be their role to counteract the Superior General. But what can one say about this other than that they are indeed supportive in the sense that their role is to aid the Superior General within the guidelines traced by the Constitutions. It is precisely such that the Superior General looks for. If there were to be something taking from, or indeed an imbalance in, the proper working of the Administration, the Assistants should meet their obligations in all charity and with due respect, as the Constitutions themselves require. Accordingly, religious who are capable of making the requisite observations are required. These three principles, then, should determine the election of the four Assistants. The Bishop concluded by expressing the wish that the Lord would inspire everything being undertaken. At his request and example all went on their knees for a few moments to focus prayerfully on the elections about to take place. All were of the view that in order to be elected Assistant one should have an absolute majority of votes and that, moreover, the First Assistant should be elected separately.

The secret voting followed with these results:

Fr. Delaporte received 9 votes;

Fr. Morisseau 8;

Fr. Ramot 8;

Fr. Lanctin 8.

The election was acknowledged as complete and valid.

There followed the vote for the First Assistant. In the first ballot Fr. Ramot received 5 votes; Fr. Morisseau 4; Fr. Delaporte 3. One vote was blank. After the second casting of votes Fr. Ramot was elected First Assistant with 8 votes.

Before proceeding to the election of the Procurator General, the Bishop spoke about the particular circumstances associated with anyone fulfilling this role. He would be required to live in Rome to mediate and be intermediary between the Society and Rome (meaning the Vatican). He would be required to enter into direct contact with the Cardinals and even sometimes with the Pope. He needed, therefore, to be someone of varied qualities: of agreeable presence, the requisite age, well educated. A young man would not be suited to this position. It needed a man who could do honour to the Society and create good-will. Whoever is appointed should take it upon himself to be worthy of such a show of confidence. Fr. Jouët has rendered quite considerable service. His Lordship has seen him from close quarters working in Rome and can testify to the high regard he enjoys among the highest dignitaries. He is happy to pay this tribute to him. It would be regrettable if one were deprived of his contribution. One must acknowledge that there are problems in reconciling the roles of Procurator and Superior. This is a real problem since the Procurator must be continually concerned about advancing the Society's affairs and, therefore, he should not (ideally) be Superior. This conclusion was unanimously accepted.

Voting now followed for the election of the Procurator General. Fr. Guyot was elected by majority, 8 votes; Fr. Jouët received 4; Fr. Vandel 1.

There followed the appointing of a commission to oversee the publication of a directory under the presidency of the Superior General. The Bishop thought that it would be best to pick religious who had been in the Congregation for a certain length of time and who were familiar with the different needs of the various houses. This role is not irreconcilable with the duties of the Assistants or those living in Issoudun or Chezal-Benoît. If one chose people living in distant houses, this could lead to problems and inconvenience. His Lordship's view was that four members should be involved with the issue and bring their completed work to the group. The four were then elected by ballot: Fr. Ramot got 11 votes, Fr. Morisseau 10, Fr. Delaporte 9, Fr. Lanctin 9. These four were elected.

The Bishop asked if anyone had anything to say about the elections. No remarks were made. Attention was drawn to the fact that all four Assistants would be required to live in Issoudun (as does the Superior General).

Next there followed a debate about Quito, with Cardinal Rampolla's rescript read, leaving the decision to the Chapter. The Bishop presented a resumé of the situation. On the one hand the situation is very problematic. One must not send to a country very distant from the mother house young men not fully trained. It is equally true, on the other hand, that there are important reasons for accepting this foundation, such as promoting devotion to the Sacred Heart and the strong Catholic momentum which, according to Garcia Moreno, is beginning to characterize this country. But in practice this undertaking is impossible for the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart who do not have sufficient personnel for their other houses. Voting then followed about these two issues: disengagement or remaining on. Disengagement was unanimously voted for with one ballot paper blank. The Bishop observed that certain expectations touched on very delicate issues for certain members of the Chapter. He thought that it was the more prudent course to read them himself and make use of them when making his report to Rome.

When the prescribed schedule had been completed, His Lordship finished with a fresh appeal. All want peace and harmony. One must hope that this will be the outcome of this Chapter. Those elected to office should begin their new roles with an appreciable detachment from their own views. One must assert and support what one considers to be for the good of the Society, but one must not be too taken aback when one notes that his viewpoint is not shared.

The more close one is to the head the greater the need for perfect obedience which comprises submissiveness of will and respect for authority, owed indeed to the present Superior General under a twofold title, that of Founder and Superior. For the peace and well-being of the whole body one must act by way of example as much as by carrying out one's duties. In a recently-founded Congregation it easily so happens that obedience does not follow, as a matter of course, as it should, since it is always difficult to subdue nature entirely. The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart should follow Our Lord's example. Their Congregation should be characterized particularly by graciousness and humility: "Learn from me for I am meek and humble of heart." Graciousness before Superiors and confrères, humility in never seeking to domineer. The lack of submissiveness in his, the Bishop's, view was one of the great weaknesses of the Congregation. This must come to an end so that there be conformity in every respect with the Constitutions, and if there's perseverance in this way the sought-after aim will be arrived at.

Before ending the Chapter his Lordship asked for prayers to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to intercede with her divine Son to bless all that had been done in their honour, since the aim of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart is to make Our Lord and His holy Mother loved. His (the Bishop's) own emotions were greatly affected by becoming involved in such an intimate way with all the concerns of the Society. The reason for this was the death of his regretted brother who would have made a greater contribution. But what the Lord has done is well done. There is reason to hope that He will be kind enough to bless the work of his servant who will be delighted if from this meeting peace comes to the Congregation as a happy outcome for everything which has been done in order to bring it about.

The Superior General, in the Chapter's name, in moving words, expressed the gratitude owed to the Bishop as Apostolic Delegate, going on to declare that there could not have been a better choice to preside over the Chapter in the prevailing circumstances.

The Bishop replied most graciously that one could have chosen someone better, but one could not have chosen someone who better liked the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, having also particular insights for the accomplishment of his task through his very close contact with the Society; besides, the heart has its reasons which the spirit cannot quite come across. He will always be available to do everything requested of him for the good of the Congregation.

To the new General Council Assistants.

D 18930211

Introductory talk by Fr. Chevalier at a Council meeting attended by the new Assistants elected at the February 11, 1893, Chapter.

Gentlemen (sic!),

The Chapter has elected its Administration. It is my wish that it is for the Society's best welfare. You may be assured that the obstacles will not come from my side.

At the beginning of this new phase, you will allow me to express myself quite frankly to you so that you come to know, one way or the other, on what footing we are placed. The proposals drawn up at the Chapter must be read in public and without debate. This was the first request of the Apostolic Delegate. The Bishop of Sinope didn't think, by way of being tactful, that they should be made public; I, myself, regret this because we would have come to know the intimate thoughts of those who had spoken. What His Lordship did not presume to say, or have said, before the Chapter members, out of concern about creating embarrassment for me, became something obligatory for him in letting me know that the Council could not consider what Rome had reserved to itself for scrutiny.

I see it as my duty at the beginning of our meetings to clarify the issue and meet the preoccupations which some of you are likely to have.

I. One of the newly-elected Assistants (C. Ramot) has voiced the opinion that being a parish priest in a parish of 13,500 people I could not adequately engage myself with the leadership of the Society and that, in consequence, a Vicar General should be appointed to replace me as leader of the Congregation. He could not more clearly indicate that I am under constraint and by the same token affected in my ability to govern. In justification of his view, he sourly blames my Administration, depicting me as a wayward spirit, taking things too far, mishandling finances, lacking in fervour and a religious spirit. In support of which last contention he offers as evidence the rules I have drawn up and my published writings. This accusation, which is likely to be forwarded to Rome, could not be more damning.

1. First of all, it is necessary for you to know that I have founded no house, no serious undertaking, without the approval of the majority in Council. I defy anyone to prove the contrary. The confrère who complains against me is himself the very one who, in 1890, wanted at any cost to set up a new house in the USA, and even went to live there. Considering that such a foundation was premature, we broke off negotiations through lack of personnel.

2. The complaint that we exhausted or badly administered the finances is also wholly gratuitous. Who found the money for the following foundations, Issoudun, Rome, England, Spain, Paris, Tilburg, Chezal-Benoît, Vichy, without mentioning the contributions made to Salzburg, Watertown? Who knew how to come by resources for our various Associations, the upkeep of these houses, our undertakings, maintenance of personnel? It certainly wasn't he, or those, who are faulting me! My 40 years of sacrifice, suffering, commitment, are made use of and, in recompense, a stone is launched at me.

3. I now come to a yet more serious accusation. I have, it is said, no piety at all or, indeed, religious spirit, and he (sic) offers as proof of this the books I have written. I appeal to those who have read the Sacred Heart, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the School of the Sacred Heart and my book Meditations. Could a man with any sense have recourse to such-like contentions? If one makes piety and a religious sense consist of denigrating Superiors, mischievously interpreting their actions, belittling their authority and lowering it in the estimation of the subjects, no, a thousand times no, I am not a true religious. Let not my accuser cry out in surprise! It's the way he has acted for many years. The Assistants appointed him Superior in Sydney. Having accepted, he nonchalantly refused to take up his appointment on the advice of a brother who hadn't his facts right. And now here he is trying to lead his Superior into the fog. If there's one thing which above all else surprises, it has to be his presuming to accept being counsellor and First Assistant to him he so deeply despises, and whom he represents as unworthy and unacceptable before the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

II. There is also someone else whose aspirations greatly mirror those of the former. While not being aggressive he is no less hurtful. Only 15 days ago he made representations of respect, attachment, even warmth and appreciation, and yet in his deposition tendered to the Apostolic Delegate, I am assessed bitterly, unfairly, acrimoniously, if not to say contemptuously. Who is it that treats me like this? He is a youngster whom I brought up, nourished, provided for, not excluding his family which to this day remains a recipient of my generosity. Yet he is the one who wrote to me three years ago when I wanted to put him in charge of the Chezal-Benoît Petite Oeuvre: "I cannot accept this appointment where I would only find myself on the fourth rung of the ladder. In any case the request does not meet with my approval and I don't want to accept it. I request, then, release from my vows as I don't want to stay any longer in the Congregation." And if he is still with us, it is due to my own generous accepting intervention, since if I had listened to and gone along with the Archbishop of Bourges and the Council members he would long since have been sent away from the Society. And yet he is the one who makes himself the standard-bearer of the disaffected and had the audacity to relate me to the Sacred Congregation's tribunal. This is the cast of mind, well known to his confrères, which no doubt has earned for him his title of Assistant.

As for the other two, who have been made more temperate by age and experience as regards their expectations, everybody in the Society is aware of their hostile, opposing, outlook. Impartial confrères do not hesitate to say that I am being given such-like counsellors in order to paralyze my initiatives and make it impossible for me to take effective action. One is drawn to think that the elections had already taken place before the Chapter and no consideration whatsoever could change them.

However that may be, I find no sense of bitterness in my heart; I forgive and forget what has gone on in the past. I am willing to make myself available for whatever can contribute towards the well-being of our dear Society which I love more than myself. And I very much hope that feelings and antipathies will be kept out of our discussions. Going forward together, hand in hand, we shall make it obvious to those who are watching us that we do not want before all else anything other than the consolidation and growth of our undertakings. We shall do our utmost to maintain and make flourish the religious spirit in our Congregation, applying ourselves to restore the levels of discipline and obedience which have been unfortunately weakened over a number of years.

I do not wish to conclude, Gentlemen, without letting you know that absolute secrecy should be kept about all our deliberations, and no Assistant has any right to make known outside the decisions taken. It is for the Superior alone, in keeping with the Constitutions, to make them known when he deems it opportune. We need to work by word and example to regain the respect and confidence which seem to be wanting in quite a number. Respect for authority and absolute obedience are the foundation stones of any Society. And if occasionally the Superior General, with regard to issues on which he remains the final arbiter, believes before God that he has to take action contrary to the majority view, our duty must be to support him and defend him if necessary. If we work along these lines we may be assured of the blessings of the Heart of Jesus and the protection of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

1. According to the register of the Council Acts the Council met on February 20, 21, 22, Chevalier, Ramot, Morisseau, Delaporte, Lanctin. In the report of the meeting, no reference is made to Fr. Chevalier's introduction presented above. The first decision noted is that of "Fr. Morisseau confirmed in office as Secretary of the Society and the Council."

2. From a letter written by Fr. Chevalier to Bishop Marchal, dated February 19, one can draw the conclusion that he had changed his mind and did not read out the condemnatory talk presented above. See below, Article 2119, L 18930219.

Issoudun, February 12, 1892

Dear Father,

I am officially notifying you that at the Chapter meeting which took place yesterday, with the Bishop of Sinope presiding, you were elected Assistant together with Fathers Ramot, Morisseau and Lanctin; Fr. Ramot chosen as First Assistant and Fr. Guyot appointed Procurator General in Rome.

As was decided at the Chapter, and in conformity with the validation rescript and our Constitutions, that the Assistants must reside in Issoudun, you will make your arrangements as soon as possible to come and live at the Sacred Heart house.

We need to speak among ourselves, and with Fr. Guyot before he goes to Rome, about certain courses of action. Likewise we need to engage ourselves quam primum (as soon as possible) with drawing up the directory. The four Assistants have been appointed members of that commission and are responsible for its publication under your presidency.

My best wishes in SSmo Corde Jesu.

Issoudun, February 14, 1893

My Lord,

You have been very kind and I shall be in Bourges at 9.30 on Thursday morning. I am very happy to have your views on the Sacred Congregation's rescript. I shall do my utmost to provide leadership with the new Council, and if I experience serious problems I shall make it my duty to refer them to you and follow your advice. Might it not be helpful, needs be, if my letter to Fr. Klotz had Your Lordship's seal? I think so in order to relieve the opponents of all doubt.

I have written to Fr. Delaporte and to Fr. Guyot, whose letters I am forwarding to you. Fr. Guyot is ill as you can see for yourself, My Lord. His health would not stand up to the responsibility given to him. Beaten up with rheumatism as he is, he would be of no real service to us, not likely to be of any use other than writing his memoirs in order to knock down (scapegoat) our undertakings and faithfully echo the voices of our opponents. There but for the grace of God!

I am about to write, My Lord, to the Mayor of Issoudun, as Your Lordship so kindly intimated to me. I shall pass on to you his reply.

And there is that issue of the masses which have to be celebrated every day in perpetuity for the hospital benefactors following an arrangement between Pius IX and Cardinal du Pont, then Archbishop of Bourges. Can the archdiocese ask to be released from this? According to what's in the archives, and the relevant documents, 3 or 4 each day are set up in perpetuity, but Rome has reduced them to one each day. This decision, dated 1855, should be in the archdiocesan archives. Do you not think, My Lord, that a letter from the Vicar Capitular (Dean) to the Issoudun Mayor in the sense you have suggested to me might not have more of an impact than I would have?

I take occasion, My Lord, to send to you for your seal a letter I am forwarding to Cardinal Rampolla informing him of the Chapter's decision on Quito which he himself had passed on to it.

I have the honour to be Your Lordship's most respectful, humble and obedient servant and son in C.J.

Confidential

Issoudun, February 14, 1893

Dear Fr. Jouët,

The Bishop of Sinope, who is so fatherly drawn to us, has sent on to me part of his report on Saturday's Chapter. The observations he makes about the opposition's intrigues in order to arrive at the sought-after results in favour of the new Assistants and Procurator General, with the supportive arguments, are such as to make an impact on the Sacred Congregation and, perhaps, invite it to annul the elections. It brings out the ringleaders' anticipatory readiness beforehand and the efforts made to win over to their cause the young priests in the houses outside France in order to come by a majority. I don't know what the outcome of all this will lead to: whether for better or worse as regards our little Society. I really don't know, but I am not without concern. Do not move away from Rome; remain there until you get your orders. We asked the Sacred Congregation beforehand whether or not the forthcoming elections should be submitted for Rome's approval like that of the Superior General, because the Constitutions say nothing at all about the Assistants. The reply was in the "negative". In my opinion this is ambiguous; the newly-appointed (Assistants) naturally said "No". I presented the matter to the Bishop of Sinope. He, like myself, thought that it wasn't at all clear and will get in touch again with the Sacred Congregation; in the meantime while awaiting its reply the former administration will continue to function. You can see for yourself that there's no need to push matters. Let us keep on praying.

Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, February 15, 1893

My Lord,

Your report, so it seems to me, is very exact and well presented!

Before all else I seek the good of our Congregation and I am prepared to make any sacrifices to bring this about, handing in my resignation if it would be considered helpful. If I were to know in detail the complaints brought against me about my administration, identified as authoritarian and questionable in its financial arrangements, I would easily find an excuse in relation to the first gripe in the circumstances arising from the 1880 expulsions when all the Assistants were scattered, leaving me on my own to deal with all the problems. As for financial matters, I believe I looked after things with all the requisite prudence and economies. Each year I made a report to the Assistants at our general meeting. At the present moment, despite the 600,000 or more francs (about 2,017,780 euros) which I have made available for our different houses in France and beyond, and without counting the considerable amount of money which I laid out for the building of the Sacred Heart house in Issoudun and the basilica, I leave in property to the Congregation what can be valued for 1,200,000 francs at least (about 4,035,620 euros), without taking into consideration 150,000 due to us and money in trust... I am not quite sure if those who so cavalierly criticize my administration, and which has never failed to concern itself with the demanding upkeep of a personnel of no less than 200, could have done better in the wretched situation in which I found myself following our expulsion. You suggest, My Lord, in order to bring about peace in our dear Society, to request Rome to expel from the Society the principal leaders of this sad campaign, who are, you say, Fathers Guyot, Delaporte, Reyn, Lanctin, Léopold Hartzler and Ramot, since you have to hand certain proof of their blameworthy intrigues. Freed from those fermenting trouble and disunity, you go on to say that the Congregation, with the appreciable characteristics which remain, would take on a new lease of life. You have, My Lord, put your finger on the problem. But does not the remedy appear to you to be somewhat too severe? We shall discuss this at our next meeting.

I shall shortly be honoured to meet you and offer Your Lordship my most respectful good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, February 16, 1893

Dear Father,

I am sorry that I have to tell you that the Bishop of Sinope, as Apostolic Delegate, to whom your request was conveyed, has refused permission to grant you an 'exequator' (permission to stay in the Society). Accordingly, you are definitively sent out of the Congregation. You will be good enough to leave Vichy by next Monday. You cannot remain any longer at Villa des Lilas because you are not one of us any more.

With all good wishes, etc.

NB: You will recall that I sent 200 francs (about 670 euros) to meet the expenses of your journey.

Bourges, February 16, 1893

Dear Father,

Fr. Klotz's two letters, that of February 7 and, later, another, which I received on the 11th, both with reference to his present state of mind, the reasons for his expulsion, have in no way satisfied me and do not, in consequence, give you, without going against my conscience, any authorization to have him back once more in your Congregation. What I gathered on the occasion of the Chapter, and since then, only confirms me in my assessment.

I am sorry, then, that I have to refuse the 'exequator' which requires a rescript from the Sacred Congregation for its execution, and the granting of which is left to my considered view.

Signed: + Aug. Bishop of Sinope.

Issoudun, February 19, 1893

My Lord,

1. I am very grateful for your advice; I am staying quiet. I shall say nothing.
2. I am forwarding a letter to you which I had from Fr. Klotz in reply to that which made known to him his dismissal from the Society.
3. I am also enclosing a letter from Fr. Védère in Rome who is shattered by the new appointments, with which I enclose a letter from a professor in our scholasticate, Fr. Benedetti. You will see for yourself.
4. I have interviewed several of the scholastics who wrote to you in favour of Ft. Klotz. They all have one thing in common, stating that it was they themselves who took the initiative in this matter, something which seems quite impossible as I see it. Only one, Brother Villoud, candidly said to me that he had written under the promptings of Frs. Ramot, Vandel and Lanctin. He is not likely to be the only one.

Villoud, later a priest for almost three years, was ordained October 6, 1895. On June 13, 1898, he would be laicized. He died six years later in his native Chambéry.

5. If you approve, Bishop, I have it in mind to write a letter to you which you will forward to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars to make it known that I cannot in conscience accept Fathers Ramot and Lanctin as Assistants and stating the reasons, which you are aware of, and proposing to replace them with those who had, otherwise, the most votes: Fathers Piperon and Maillard. Fr. Guyot is still laid-up, suffering from articular rheumatism at the age of 63, walking with great difficulty. I would have it in mind to replace him with the man who received the next highest number of votes, namely Fr. Jouët. Fr. Guyot does not know Italian, which is absolutely necessary, but at his age it is impossible for him to learn it. What is your view?

Please accept, Your Lordship, my respectful good wishes in C.J.

February 19, 1893

Observations shared last Sunday with the Scholastics.

Later to be forwarded to the Bishop.

1. The Klotz issue: his expulsion.
2. Conference on discipline; the need for it if one is to be a good religious. No need to be preoccupied with administration matters. No need to criticize the decisions of Superiors or blame the authorities. Avoid a critical outlook which can damage the religious spirit. Criticize those who took it upon themselves to write to the Apostolic Delegate in favour of Fr. Klotz. This issue in no way concerned them; in place of helping Fr Klotz's case, it became a hindrance and nuisance. The promoters of this campaign were seriously at fault.
3. The scholasticate will be under my immediate surveillance; I shall come and visit often to make myself aware of what is going on there.
4. Nothing must go on at the scholasticate outside the special regulations, or the common rules, which apply to the scholasticate.
5. Nothing, therefore, which is outside the rules, such as holidays, special walks, Deo Gratias (permission to talk) in the refectory and whatever else, cannot be granted by anyone without my permission.
6. Under no pretext whatsoever should scholastics go into the priests' house; they must not go into the rooms, and none of the priests has the authority to ask them to his room without my permission.
7. Direction of conscience in intimate matters pertains to the confessor and the confessional.
8. The direction which, according to the rules, must take place every month, will only take place with myself or the priests I shall, in keeping with the rules, nominate.
9. The Sunday walk will be brought forward to Monday so as not to interfere with Sunday's specific time-table or our enclosure (religious privacy, activities).
10. It is forbidden to take recreation in the park reserved for the public and pilgrims because of the likely presence of women and young girls.
11. When on walks and recreation there must be groups of at least three and never two together, as our regulations forbid.
12. Correspondence with other members of the Congregation must be in French and not in a foreign language.
13. I have more recommendations to make at another time since I don't want to detain you any longer today.

---

I read through from number 3 to 14 without any comment. Here below are the other observations which I proposed to make because of the abuses which I referred to above.

1. Until such time as the directory is completed and returned from Rome, it is the former rules which will be in operation and they must be very faithfully kept.

2. In no way whatsoever are theatrical presentations appropriate for religious; nor light-hearted songs which encourage clowning about; I formally forbid anything like this.
3. I insist on putting aside musical studies, which a number are abusing, and that more serious attention be paid to the Church's plain-chant which has been greatly neglected.

Two other jottings on these issues were written by Chevalier with reference to the Scholasticate of the Sacred Heart. One with 19 headings was unfinished; the other remains an outline.

The Sacred Heart Scholasticate

1. It is under the immediate jurisdiction of the Superior General.
2. The Director must not do anything outside the special regulations which apply to the scholastics or the common regulations which, like all religious, they must observe.
3. Nothing outside these rules, such as holidays, special walks, Deo Gratias in the refectory and anything else can be allowed without my approval.
4. In principle the scholastics must not go into the Fathers' community house, nor into their rooms, or into those of their teachers. None of our priests has the right to call them (the scholastics) to his room. Only the Assistants to the General in a particular instance can have contact with them, and the less time spent with them the better so that they are not distracted from their studies.
5. The scholastics cannot leave their study-hall or speak to a lecturer in his room without the Director's permission.
6. They will be subject to the local Superior like all the other religious in the house as regards religious discipline and the religious life.
7. The Bursar appointed to the Sacred Heart will at the same time be the Scholasticate Bursar, but in dependence on the General Bursar.
8. Direction of conscience as regards intimate personal issues should involve the confessor, the confessional and the spiritual director of the house. As for conscience accountability each month concerning issues laid down by the rule, the scholastics will do so, either to myself, if I think it's appropriate, or to the priests designated by me, as is stated in the rule.
9. The Director of the scholasticate will have a room set aside where he can meet with, at stated times, those of his young religious who would like to speak to him or to whom he would wish to give advice.
10. The Director, if possible, and one of the professors whom he will choose, will sleep in the scholastics' dormitories.
11. There must be no going for walks (recreational) on Sundays and feast days, market days and public holidays. The Sunday walk is to be transferred to Monday unless the Director thinks that recreation can be had on Sunday in the grounds of the scholasticate or in our enclosure.
12. The scholastics must never go walking in the park reserved for visitors because they are likely to meet there (see immediately above, but crossed out here – "women and young girls").
13. The Director and lecturers should always accompany them and mix in with them.
14. They will not go to the dormitory without permission and never to the kitchen or the refectory if it isn't to carry out something asked of them.
15. They will eat nothing between meals without the Superior's special permission.
16. The reading of daily, weekly, papers, magazines, with the exception of the Annals, publications from the Propagation of the Faith, the Holy Child, the Catholic Missions, is forbidden, together with books which have no bearing on their studies.
17. They (the scholastics) will not be preoccupied with politics or the daily news or be taken up with poetry or music, making instead a special study of plain-chant.
18. Theatrical representations are forbidden and also skittish light-hearted songs of a clowning-about nature.
19. Correspondence with the Congregation's members and the Petite Oeuvre youngsters has to be in French and this is absolutely imperative.

Recommendations to the Scholastics

1. It (the scholasticate) is under the Superior General's immediate dependence.
2. The Director must undertake nothing in the scholasticate outside of its regulations or, indeed, outside the common rules which have to be kept by him and by the scholastics as in the case of all religious.
3. Nothing outside of these regulations, holidays, special walks, Deo Gratias in the refectory, etc., can be permitted without the specific approval of Fr. General.
4. Generally speaking the scholastics should not go into the quarters of the community priests, being there either because of a request made of them or needing to speak with the Bursar, meeting him at a time fixed by him in advance.
5. As for the Director, he will have a room in the scholastics' residence where he will receive at a fixed time scholastics who wish to talk to him and to whom he would want to give advice.
6. Among the priests, only the Assistants (to the Superior) can call scholastics to their rooms, and then only in a special case of necessity and only for the shortest possible time, so as not to detract the young men from their studies.
7. The scholastics cannot leave their study hall to go and speak to any priest without getting their Director's permission.
8. As for explanations to be sought from their lecturers concerning their studies, they will do so immediately after each lecture, in the study hall if it is free or in a designated room.
9. The direction in those areas which are intimate to the individual will take place either with the confessor or the spiritual director of the house. The monthly examination of conscience laid down by the rules will take place either with Fr. General or with one of the priests specifically chosen by him for this purpose, as the rule lays down: I appoint Fathers Ramot and Vandel to this charge.
10. The scholastics will not go to the dormitory without either general or specific permission. They will not go either to the kitchen or refectory except to carry out the duties confided to them.
11. They are not to eat anything between meals. Those who for health reasons need to eat something should not do so without the Superior General's permission, and this should be renewed each month, and straightaway be made known to the Bursar.
12. The Bursar at the Sacred Heart is also the Scholasticate Bursar; he comes under the immediate authority of the Bursar General.
- 12.(again)There will be no walks on Sundays or feast days nor on market days or public holidays when the walk is moved forward to Monday.
13. Recreations are always to be taken in the courtyard or cloisters, never in the town park which is exclusively made over to pilgrims.
14. The assistant priests on the staff may, if they so wish, take their recreation with the scholastics.
15. The reading of papers and periodical magazines is forbidden in the scholasticate. Nevertheless, one may read in the refectory, preferably at breakfast, the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Catholic Missions and some other magazines which Fr. General will specify at the request of the Director.
16. In the best interests of their spiritual training and studies, the scholastics will avoid any interest in politics and current affairs. For the same reason they are forbidden to become involved in poetry without special permission from the General.
17. They will have classes in plain-chant every week, but will not play music except insofar as this is necessary to prepare for the masses (Eucharists) and our most important feasts.

18. Theatrical presentations are likewise forbidden, also songs, choruses, etc. which encourage playing the clown, since all of this is detrimental to religious well-being and appropriateness.

19. Correspondence with members of the Congregation and the Petite Oeuvre youngsters will always be in French.

Council Meetings: 20,21,22 February 1893

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Ramot, Delaporte, Morisseau, Lanctin, Assistants.

Fr. Morisseau, Secretary General.

1. Fr. Morisseau was confirmed in office as the Council's Secretary.
2. The decision was taken that attention should be paid to the different houses which have been deprived of personnel as a result of the Chapter elections.

The Sacred Heart. This involves the residential house and the scholasticate. The Superior, Fr. Maillard, acting on behalf of Fr. General, who, according to the former rules, was the local Superior, and now, having to be away for a certain amount of time, his role falls provisionally to Fr. Ramot, First Assistant.

The attribution in the former rules of local authority at the Sacred Heart to the Fr. General has become obsolete since it is contrary to article 122 of the newly-approved Constitutions.

Fr. Ramot Superior at the Sacred Heart. Since Fr. (Maillard) is unable to live at the Sacred Heart house at the present time, and cannot fulfil the office of local Superior, it was decided that Fr. Ramot would take over as local Superior with all the rights of a local Superior.

Fr. Vandel, Director of the Scholasticate.

2. Fr. Vandel will continue to be Director of the scholasticate in dependence on the local Superior and in keeping with the customs and regulations in vogue, but making allowances for the intervention of Fr. General in special circumstances.
3. The Assistants, in order to fulfil their roles, must have the freedom to deal with the institute's varied personnel. They may, therefore, meet those scholastics who want to share concerns with them in confidence, but they, the scholastics, will not go to see them without informing the Director.
4. As for personnel in the Rome house, it is proposed that Fathers Genocchi, Meynier and Benedetti be made available to whomsoever is appointed Superior.

Fr. Deidier, Superior at Glastonbury.

5. Fr. Deidier is appointed to replace Fr. Ramot as Superior at Glastonbury.
6. Fr. Barral on his return from Quito is made available to the Barcelona house where the personnel is quite obviously insufficient.

Closure of the Salzburg house.

7. Arising from its being impossible to find a suitable Superior for the Salzburg house and likewise a competent Novice Master for the Antwerp novitiate, replacing Fr. van Grinsven who is leaving the Society, and having also in mind that the Salzburg house is in abnormal circumstances with its two large farms to be looked after and absorbing a large number of brothers on its own, without mentioning the many domestic staff, men and women with whom the priests and brothers are obliged to be in frequent contact, a hazard in itself, Fr. General suggests that the house be closed. The Council, on mature reflection, unanimously accepted this proposal, stipulating that a request be made as soon as possible to the Holy See seeking permission to leave the Salzburg house and sell it with its accompanying properties.

F. Roger, Superior at Tilburg.

8. On the supposition that Salzburg is abandoned, Fr. Hartzler will be Superior in Tilburg and Fr. Meyer will go to the Antwerp novitiate. However, as the Tilburg house urgently needs someone to replace Fr. Lanctin, Fr. Roger is provisionally appointed Superior until Fr. Hartzler becomes available.

Brothers Cochard and Sergent accepted for minor orders.

9. The Council, following the good recommendations in support of Brothers Louis Cochard and Remy Sergent, wholeheartedly supports their being put forward for minor orders.

Two Spanish postulants.

Fr. Casas, having presented two postulants who would appear to offer serious vocation prospects, is given permission to accept them on condition that they bring with them money for the return journey if it is thought best not to accept them.

Approval of workhouse, stable, at Tilburg.

10. A letter was read from Fr. Offermans, Bursar at Tilburg, requesting, in the name of the house Council, permission to build on the eastern side of the property a number of buildings for workshops and a stable, etc. The Council, having considered the plan and the expenses, coming to a sum of 5,145 florins or 10,290 francs, and, besides, given the opinion of Fr. Lanctin, former Superior at Tilburg, that such a building would be very useful, indeed needed, and that such an expense is not beyond the community's resources, decided unanimously to approve this construction in keeping with the above-mentioned plans and expenses.

Brother Willibrord accepted for renewal of vows.

11. Brother Willibrord, having asked to have his vows renewed, due to expire March 5, there was some hesitancy about granting this request because of the state of his health. But as this health condition, according to the doctor, was due to overwork at Canet as cook, it was thought that it wouldn't be quite just to send him away because of illness he has suffered in the service of the Society. Besides, he is improving and one can hope that he can get back to work. Accordingly, he is accepted for renewal of his three-yearly vows.

A French postulant.

12. The priest Fr. Flament was admitted to postulancy; he had earlier taken the Franciscan habit. The Novice Master is looking for all the requisite information and, if necessary, the indult admitting him to the novitiate.

Fr. Guyot's journey to Rome approved of.

13. As regards the Rome house, Fr. Guyot suggests that he should go and take over his role as Procurator, as well as informing himself about the requirements of the house, dealing with matters in the first place with Fr. Védère's help who is required to stay there for some more months before going on the missions. He (Guyot) will see for himself on the spot what personnel he will need to come to his aid in fulfilling his role as Procurator, and looking after the house and scholasticate. His proposal was accepted and it was decided that he would leave as soon as possible taking Fr. Benedetti with him.

Brother Muldoon made available for Glastonbury; Brother Ceresi will replace Fr. Benedetti.

Fr. Suchet goes to the Paris house.

14. It was decided that Fr. Suchet, released from teaching because of his health, should be appointed to the Paris house. Fr. Delaporte agrees to replace him in the meantime by taking his classes. The same Fr. Delaporte is asked to continue as before with the direction of the Sacred Heart Review.

The requests of the Chapter delegates.

15. Fr. General, having made known the wishes of the Chapter members as passed on to him by the Bishop of Sinope, the Council thereupon presented them as follows:

1. The Assistants will live at Issoudun with the Superior General.
2. Less undertakings.
3. The youngsters at the Chezal-Benoît Petite Oeuvre sent back to the houses from which they came.
4. A study plan (Fr. Delaporte).
5. The question of a Vicar General for the Congregation.
6. An examination for the young priests.
7. Changes involving the buildings under construction at the Sacred Heart.
8. A titled Superior of the mother house.
9. The appointment of Ministers General.
10. The right of the Assistants to receive their letters unopened.

+ Issoudun, February 21, 1893

My Lord,

Last Sunday I went to the scholasticate and called the community together to order to let them know about Fr. Klotz's expulsion, the news of which shattered them, since they were all hoping that it would be otherwise. The discontent was so palpable that everything I wanted to say, beginning with number 3 (see above article 18930219) and from there right to the end, was given the worst possible interpretation and reception. All were up in arms, including the new Assistants. The ring-leaders instead of lying low went to look for the Assistants and counsellors who share their views, with most of the night given over to meetings. Next day most of the scholastics, apart from twelve or fifteen, were intent on writing to Rome requesting release from their vows. The Assistants, with the exception of Fr. Morisseau, came and had it out with me, telling me that I had made their position impossible, as well as the direction of the scholasticate.

Having explained my position, which was conveyed to the students, it appeared that things had calmed down somewhat at this stage. But this morning Fr. Ramot, who is their spokesperson, informed me that I had deeply hurt them in letting them know that the letters they had written to Your Lordship about Fr. Klotz were rebellious against authority and they hadn't done the right thing when they got involved in this issue. And the First Assistant went on to say that if I didn't come and explain my words, he would not be responsible for the calamitous situation they could bring about. I went, therefore, to see the scholastics this evening. Something else: this morning at the Council meeting, the 4 Assistants complained that I was opening their mail, and they had the right to have them unopened surely, something in keeping with the spirit of the Constitutions, and that I was placing them in inferior circumstances to local Superiors who received their correspondence closed. He (Ramot) went much further, however, asserting (the others in agreement) that having been nominated by the Council as local Superior of the Sacred Heart, he had the right to have the mail directly given to him without its passing through (sic) my hands, all the letters, that is, which were being sent to those who lived at the Sacred Heart. I replied that while the wish was expressed at the Chapter that the Assistants should get their letters unopened, I was within my rights opening them as long as Rome had not given its decision. They maintained the contrary view, stating that their wishes were not brought before the Chapter or approved by it and, consequently, they were entitled to hold the opposite view. In addition, they brought forward for discussion the following issue: "We do not have Superiors available who have the ability to be placed in charge of many of our houses replacing such as the Assistants who have moved, and, in consequence, we need to send a request to the Sacred Congregation for an indult permitting us to appoint as Superiors capable men who do not have the requisite age as laid down in the Constitutions. They suggested that Fr. Lanctin should take this request to Rome since the new Procurator General was ill... I replied that I would not sign this request because it was against the Constitutions, and I knew that the Sacred Congregation would not favour it. At that there was uproar; administration was quite impossible, etc.

As things are, My Lord, I would make a request of Your Lordship: could you put half a day aside to come and spend a few hours with us, let's say Thursday, since I firmly believe that Your Lordship's presence would be very helpful and alleviate a lot of our problems? The Assistants, as far as I can see, want to gain the advantage in every possible way, only wishing to have in charge people who side with them. Fr. Ramot, meeting the wishes of the scholastics and their young lecturers, has had distributed among them a whole collection of songs, of which I am sending you a copy, and you will judge for yourself if I should leave them free to get their mail without any supervision.

The advice and recommendations I offered on Sunday were drawn up by Fr. Piperon who was at Issoudun. Give me your blessing, My Lord, since I greatly need it, and accept my most respectful good wishes in C.J.

Fr. Roger who is arriving shortly is appointed to carry out the role of Superior for the time-being. Issoudun, February 28, 1893

My Lord,

May I provide Your Lordship with some information about the situation? Our young men, always pandered to by those who opposed the Chapter, would nevertheless appear to be more relaxed at the moment, but discipline as always leaves something to be desired. In order to bring some order to the scholasticate, here is a counselling project which, if you approve, I am about to put before them. The Assistants have only one purpose in mind, that of sabotaging my intervention and overseeing matters themselves. They would like, as far as I can see, to empty the Rome house and place there those individuals committed to their outlook.

Guyot (sic) has arrived to spend some days in Issoudun. At one of our meetings he spoke of his age, his infirmity, his need to have personnel with him whom he can trust, and particularly, an 'alter ego' who would take his place in dealings with the Roman Congregations. I replied that at his age, 66, and with the rheumatism which most of the time prevented him from walking, his poor state of health, his ignorance of the language and Roman procedures, he must be fully aware of the fact, and the Chapter members also, that the office of Procurator was beyond his resources, and this explains why I sent a telegram to you, I said, to find out if you would accept him, since I was convinced you would not. He replied that given the virtually unanimous wish of the Chapter (delegates) he could not but accept, the thought occurring to him that there would be one or two people to help him out with his duties. You are the only one, and it is with you alone, I replied, that the Congregations will discuss and deal with the affairs of the Institute, and if you cannot do it (on your own) your resignation is called for.

Following on that, the Assistants wanted to put forward a request to the Sacred Congregation for an indult to elect as Superior of our young men (in Rome) somebody under the age of 35. My categorical refusal disconcerted them. They then proposed that Fr. Guyot be appointed Superior of the Rome house, as well as Procurator. I replied that the Chapter, before electing the Procurator, had unanimously decided that the two offices should be kept separate, and they cannot presently be shared/held by one individual without the consent of Rome. These gentlemen think that Fr. Guyot has the right, with the approval of the Council, to pick those personnel for the Rome house whom he would like to be in charge of the scholasticate and the Petite Oeuvre. I replied that, by virtue of the Constitutions, this right belonged to me as it did for the Society's other houses and I would use it according to my conscience for the general good. This is the way things are at the moment.

Fr. Guyot, still in pain and believing himself to be suffering from a serious illness, has returned to Vichy, wishing to spend some days or some weeks in the Forez hills to restore his health before taking off for Rome. And during this time what is going to happen at the Procure? Here's a letter from Fr. Jouët which brings up a serious issue as regards Fr. Guyot (Jouët's letter is not available): is it wise to become involved with the Sacred Congregation? If the issue is as serious as I think it is, one must again more have recourse to validations, and this is something which once more makes Rome ill-disposed to us. Nobody has given this any thought; there is good faith, but would it not be best to leave things to rest?

I actually believe, my Lord, that if you wrote an official letter to Cardinal Monaco, our Protector, in order to forestall, circumvent, the Chapter's decisions, it would be very desirable and His Eminence would take notice. This is his address: His Eminence Cardinal Monaco La Valletta, Apostolic Chancellery Palace, Rome, Italy.

Without reference to what Fr. Jouët says, I believe that Your Lordship should bring it to the attention of the Cardinal Protector that Fr. Guyot has not lived in community for many years, is 66 years of age, in very poor health, his rheumatism preventing him from being able to walk, knowing neither the Italian language or anything to do with Roman procedures, and, consequently, he cannot advantageously carry out the important role of a Rome Procurator and, consequently, the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars could not accept him. I greatly fear as the worst outcome that Rome, put off by the carping attitude which prevails and the troubles we have stirred up in its dealings with us, could very well declare the break-up of our Society. In order to avoid such a disastrous occurrence, which I cannot entertain the thought of without quaking, I am quite prepared to resign if that becomes necessary. Please, My Lord, use all your influence as delegate and Vicar Capitular to ward off this thunder-clap which presently threatens us and make their Eminences the Cardinals well disposed towards our dear Congregation which has already well served the Church and can, moreover, with the worthwhile qualities which characterize it, render it still greater service in the future. If you think your presence in Rome would be needed in order to repel the storm, I count on your commitment to us to intervene there on our behalf, and it goes without saying that we shall meet all the expenses.

I have the honour to be, most respectfully, Your Lordship's most humble and obedient son in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Fr. Maillard will go to Bourges to see Your Lordship tomorrow.

To Father Jean Vaudon, MSC, Director of the Annals.

Issoudun, March 1, 1893

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

Thank you for your kind letter and the confidences you share with me when letting me know your intimate thoughts. I am replying to you likewise, but in the utmost secrecy.

1. The confidence you shared with me about Fr. Maillard is in fact devoid of all foundation. Do not believe everything which is said to you. Fr. Maillard asked to go on the missions with Bishop Navarre and I gave him that promise. The Council thought it would be more purposeful to appoint him General Bursar and make him responsible for the missions. The good confrère is drawn to do so out of wholehearted obedience. He asked me if he could stay in the presbytery and I asked him to look after the office while you were away, since when you are not there there's so much disorder as you well know, and that's how it is.

2. Those who have been telling you that I don't know what to do with you are totally insensitive and stirring up bad feelings. Good God, who will rid us of these people? Nobody in the Society more than myself likes you and appreciates you and in proof of this I put you forward as Procurator General in Rome, while hoping at the same time that you could continue as director of the Annals, something you do so well and successfully. Not able to bring this about, I thought of you in connection with another confidential posting. Fr. Guyot came to Issoudun last week to find out what personnel would be made available to him. Since the Chapter unanimously decided that the Procurator General would not be Superior of the Rome house at the same time, I proposed you for that important post, but Fr. Guyot and several other Council members protested, Fr. Morisseau being the only one who supported me. The others maintained that Fr. Guyot could himself carry out the two offices, having the whole house under his immediate authority, and that your presence in Rome would be an obstacle in so doing. I strongly disagreed with this and refused to accept their proposal. It was easy to see that strings were being pulled; that's how it is. If you were called to Rome you would be indebted for this to Fr. Guyot on the occasion of his canonical visit. Such are the friends who flatter you; they are afraid that you would stymie their plans and become too influential in Rome. I shall hold fast to my view and since you have my full support, as I think I have yours, I hope that you will be in Rome very soon either as Superior or Procurator General, because I cannot believe that Fr. Guyot at 66 years of age, shattered in health, having difficulty in walking, especially going up stairs, having no knowledge of Italian and of Roman customs, with his abrupt manner and partisan spirit, can remain there very long. He has asked to go and spend a fortnight in the Forez mountains to restore his health before going to Rome and, in the meantime, the Procure and Rome house are empty. Fr. Jouët, who is laid up with a chest infection has, at his own request, been moved to a hospital in the care of the Presentation Sisters. Quite obviously the elections took place before the Chapter as you thought they would. Be patient, my friend, and let's hope and pray that good will come from bad. You can see for yourself that I really must have great confidence in you when I reveal all this to you and which you will closely keep to yourself, and to which I strictly oblige you. I depend, then, on you more than ever and we shall always go forward together, hand in hand, heart to heart. Isn't this right?

3. Yes, like yourself, I understand the need to group together our brighter young religious and have them directed towards the kind of work which fits in with their tastes and aptitudes. We shall be moving that way, my friend, before very long, since the need is being felt. You will help me! Fr. Suchet, chronically ill, cannot stay any longer in the scholasticate; he is bored with the place and his students are bored with him, and on a number of occasions he has said to me that he needs to be cared for and to rest and will not be able to stay on there after Easter. I, accordingly, acquiesced with his wishes and decided to appoint him provisionally to Paris.

4. As for the young curate you write about, I shall be greatly pleased if he comes to the Society if that is what he wants; he would be a very worthwhile acquisition who would serve to strengthen the French element, which is badly needed. Given his intelligence and talents he would be a valuable asset in his speciality. Give him every encouragement and I don't think he will have anything to be sorry about.

5. If my plans for Rome can come about in spite of my concerns, I am thinking of putting you in charge of our scholasticate in order to get rid of the bad spirit and atmosphere which has been further added to by the recent elections. What do you think yourself? Cheerio, my friend.

Wholly yours more than ever in C.J.

Council Meeting, March 4, 1893

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Delaporte, Ramot, Morisseau, Lanctin.

Fr. Giovanelli replacing Fr. Benedetti.

1. Since Fr. Benedetti's presence in Rome is currently inopportune, his replacement by Fr. Giovanelli was approved and he will accompany Fr. Guyot to Rome.

The Sacred Heart Review made Fr. Deidier's responsibility.

2. The Sacred Heart Review which had been offered to Fr. Deidier has been accepted by him.

Fr. Chétail's letter about the appointment of Fr. Deidier as Superior.

3. A letter from Fr. Chétail was read in which he deeply regretted Fr. Deidier's appointment as Superior at Glastonbury. It was agreed that the Secretary should write in the Superior's name to the latter (Deidier) asking him to abide strictly by the rules as local Superior and, in particular, not to make any significant change in the administration without reference to higher authority.

The postulant Oyant.

4. Joseph Oyant's acceptance as a lay brother postulant was agreed on, even if he cannot bring the 'trousseau'.

Fr. Pierre to continue as Fr. Casas' assistant.

5. Fr. François Barral, who has gone to Barcelona and who is older by profession than Fr. Pierre Perriot, Fr. Casas wants to know if he should be replaced in his role of supervisor. The view was taken that Fr. Pierre, in view of his advanced age, should hold on to his responsibility.

6. At his request and with his Superior's support, Brother Martinus van de Sande was accepted for renewal of three-yearly vows at the Barcelona house, having finished his first three years last December.

The lay brothers Antoine Pittinger, Roc Bing-Hüber, Mathias Polerer, Albert Pollak, Sebastien Fischer, accepted for first vows.

7. At Fr. Meyer's request, Novice Master of Salzburg, the following postulants were accepted as lay brother novices in the novitiate:

- a. Antoine Pitlinger, Brother Alexandre, from the Salzburg diocese, born September 26, 1876.
- b. Roch Birghüber, Brother Rochus, born Reichenhall, Bavaria, June 14, 1872, tailor by profession.
- c. Mathias Polerer, Brother Matheas, born in the diocese of Munich, November 17, 1870, shoemaker by profession.
- d. Albert Pollack, Brother Albertus, born Carinthie, Austria, September 20, 1854, cook by profession.
- e. Sebastien Fischer, Brother Sebastianus, gardener, born Bavaria, June 9, 1877.

All are exempt, or could easily be made so, from military service.

Brother van der Aa accepted for the priesthood.

8. Fr. Lanctin proposed that Brother van der Aa, a deacon of mature years, be accepted for the priesthood.

My Lord,

Enclosed find a letter from Fr. Klotz which the Rev. Fr. (Chevalier) has asked me to forward to you and about which you will be kind enough to let him have your views. The regulation which Your Lordship is aware of was communicated to the scholastics who accepted it grudgingly. The wrong kind of attitude has become part of these young men, who were so affected by the unhelpful kind of influence to which they were exposed either at Antwerp or Chezal-Benoît. We had to put up with this until some trouble-makers were shown the door, and a serious individual of the requisite religious spirit was put in charge of the remainder, that is to say someone with a spirit of respect and submissiveness towards the Superior General, who remains, whatever one says about him, the legitimate authority in the Congregation. It is difficult to act and introduce reforms until Rome delivers its judgment on the last Chapter.

Please accept, My Lord, my respectful good wishes as I have the honour to be Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. I wrote to Mr. Scalsi as you suggested and with the understanding agreed on.

2. Fr. Klotz continues to argue against his expulsion and wants to appeal to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. The Bishop of Sinope says that he should be left to his own resources and that we shouldn't be answerable to him. It is unimaginable that the Sacred Congregation should give way to his demands.

3. The Bishop of Sinope, concerned that our opponents might stir things up in Rome and create problems for us, would be quite prepared to go to Rome in order to support us and provide all the necessary information and explanations. But he would prefer if either Cardinal Verga or our Cardinal Protector asked him to come, or expressed the wish, and he would take himself there. Could you not make this invitation a possibility if it would help?

Cheerio, Father; let me have your news. Fr. Guyot is still laid up. Fr. Genocchi has arrived in Issoudun; he wants to go to the missions.

Issoudun, March 16, 1893

Dear Fr. Jouët,

The Council met this morning. The Assistants decided that it was urgent that one of them should go to Rome as Visitor in order to look over the house and put matters in order such as the accounts, etc. Fr. Guyot is unable to go there, being riddled with rheumatism. I did not in any way want to oppose their decision since I did not wish to let the secret out. (The March 10 rescript of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars requesting the Bishop of Sinope, as Apostolic Delegate, to carry out an investigation into the legitimacy of the elections of the recent Chapter and suspending for the time being those elected as Assistants.) This is a journey and expense which has no purpose, but just the same I shall let them get on with it. They have chosen Fr. Ramot as the one to go and want him to leave straight away. I prevented him from travelling until this evening so that you would get my letter beforehand and act accordingly. He will arrive on Saturday evening at 11pm. If I receive the decree in the meantime I shall send him a telegram requesting him to return. This journey is contrary to my wishes in the present circumstances but, nevertheless, I thought that in order to avoid stirring things up it would be best for me not to go against it, even if I knew nothing might come from it.

Let me have your eagerly awaited news.

Cheerio, my friend.

Wholly yours ex intimo corde in C.J.

I wrote to Fr. Védère letting him know about Fr. Ramot's arrival as Visitor. I mentioned nothing else to him.

Issoudun, March 18, 1893

Dear Fr. Jouët,

The Bishop of Sinope couldn't come to Issoudun so I went to see him yesterday and he handed me the decree (from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars), signed by Cardinal Verga.

1. The Sacred Congregation is anxious to know if there were plots and intrigue involved in the election and directed against the Superior General and Founder. One thing is certain: this is an investigation of the Chapter members. Will they be open and honest?
2. Do those elected embody the requisite qualities? The contrary is easily proved.
3. Is the opposition to the Superior General well-founded or not? In the meantime the Sacred Congregation has taken the decision that the previous Assistants and Procurator General should remain in their posts until the Holy See decides otherwise. Fr. Ramot hadn't yet left for Rome when I received the news about the decree's arrival. How is it going to be taken? I shall let you know. You are, therefore, restored to your post as Procurator.

Please take care of yourself and do not wear yourself out.

Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, March 19, 1893

My Lord,

In keeping with the decree from Rome, Your Lordship's procedure is all mapped out. It involves:

1. Setting up an enquiry as to whether or not the elections were proper or the outcome of intrigues and trickery against the previous administration. If openness characterizes the statements of the four Assistants who are at Issoudun, it should be easy, My Lord, to find out as you can put it to them that they are obliged sub gravi (by oath) to tell the truth.
2. As regards the competence of those elected to meet their requirements, it should be easy for you to point out in a new memorandum that they do not have it.
3. You will not either be at a loss to point out that their opposition to the Superior (Chevalier) and his former administration is rooted in an independence of spirit, pursuit of leisure and a nationalist outlook which is too exclusive, something I rightly challenge, together with their wish to be emancipated, their being inclined to continuous indiscipline, leading to the setting up of the novitiate over the mother house, as well as the scholasticate and three classes of our Petite Oeuvres which they wanted to hold on to at any cost etc., etc.

My humble view, Bishop, is that before they are informed that they no longer have any status, they should be made to take an oath, one after the other, forbidding them to make contact with each other and compelling them to say to you whether, yes or no, before the Chapter they had come to an understanding among themselves about the election of the Assistants and the Procurator General. Their approach to things, despite your wise advice, quite obviously indicates that they had been in collusion among themselves.

Then, once this primary issue is made clear, you will make them aware of their departure from grace (integrity) and the decisions of the Sacred Congregation. You will in the name of holy obedience enjoin on them sub gravi to say nothing whatsoever to the scholastics or the young priests and be quietly submissive to the Holy See, prepared to go without complaint wherever they are asked to go, holding themselves back from stirring up a critical attitude, defending before and against everyone this new kind of authority and maintaining it in all its administrative activities. It might not, perhaps, be unhelpful to demand this promise by them in writing. Meanwhile, what is to be done with these worthy (awkward) priests? Where can they be posted? How can they be made to accept this Roman decision calmly and with a spirit of faith? Should they be kept in Issoudun? What are they going to do?

As for Fr. Vandel, while waiting for him to be charged, Your Lordship could on Tuesday next make a point of seeing him, taking him into your confidence, showing trust and kindness. Then you might put him under an obligation, if needs be, in the name of obedience, to say nothing to the scholastics which could predispose them against authority, but rather to commit himself to the inculcation of submissiveness, to the fostering of a good spirit and wholesome outlook, and the pursuit in love of their holy vocation, etc.

We are expecting Your Lordship on Tuesday at 11.48am.
Please accept my deepest regards in C.J.

Meeting of the new Counsellors and members of the recent Chapter at Issoudun under the presidency of the Bishop of Sinope, Apostolic Delegate.

March 23, 1893

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Ramot, Delaporte, Morisseau, Lanctin, Maillard.

The suspension of the Chapter appointments.

The Bishop brought to the attention of the meeting a rescript from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars according to which the said Congregation, having doubts about the legitimacy of the recent Chapter's elections, asked him to investigate the matter and forbid the newly-elected from exercising their roles as Assistants, including the Procurator, until a new decision was reached, and those who exercised these functions before the Chapter would provisionally take over in the meantime. Accordingly, His Lordship suspends the newly-elected from functioning and ratifies those formerly in charge. In addition he strictly enjoins in virtue of holy obedience on each and everyone to maintain the utmost secrecy on this issue until the Sacred Congregation has resolved the issue.

Issoudun, March 26, 1893

My Lord,

Fr. Ramot would put anybody to the torture in his pursuit of irregularities and intent on destroying established authority. He is a man with a sick mind who has already caused us a lot of problems, and likely to do so again in the future. For the rest, Your Lordship is well informed.

I have been going through our archives and I read that the General Chapter held at Issoudun, September 19 to September 30, 1879, unanimously elected as Assistants Fathers Guyot, Piperon, Morisseau and Jouët. According to our Constitutions, the Assistants stayed in office until the next Chapter met which had the right to replace them or keep them in Office. After 1879 there was no Chapter meeting because of our being expelled (from France); consequently they were legitimately elected up to 1891.

The new Chapter called at this time was dissolved by Rome because of the problems you are aware of and the Sacred Congregation in its dissolution decree formally stated that the direction of the Institution should continue being carried out by the preceding administration: Quoadusqu Sacra Congregatio aliter decreverit, res Societatis ut antea esse peragenda. (Until the Sacred Congregation decides otherwise, the Society's affairs will continue as before.) What more of a proof is needed that the former Assistants had been maintained in office by decree and that all their actions are valid? In 1891 my powers as Superior General expired and Rome renewed them for 12 years and, with the same phrase as above, the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars confirmed the former Assistants in their role with the exception of Fr. Guyot who was dismissed and replaced by Fr. Maillard following a rescript.

What problems we are creating for you, My Lord! But how lucky we are to have you! The divine Heart of Jesus will compensate you for all the pain and frustration we are causing you. Through your endeavours may the truth come to the fore, spirits become calmed and unity restored to us. If there's an honest and open response to your questionnaire, you will quickly become aware of the machinations and irresponsibility of the ring-leaders. But will they dare to make an avowal of their culpability? Here there's always apparent peace and calm.

I have the honour to be Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: In addition to the above, My Lord, I find the following significantly pertinent words in the validation rescript dated June 13, 1891: "Insuper Eadem S. Congratiō facultatem pariter tribuit eidem Emo Protectori actuales Assistentes confirmandi usque ad proximum Capitulum generale. ea tamen lege ut una cum Superiore Generali habitationem habeat." "The said Sacred Congregation gives the same power to the Cardinal Protector to confirm the General Assistants until the next Chapter and in keeping with the regulations they will live in the same house as the Superior General." Cardinal Monaco so decreed on June 15, 1891. Fr. Ramot cannot be unaware of this decree as he had it in his hand.

Undated; likely March 26, 1893

Questionnaire project with reference to the 1893 General Chapter.

Rome, having taken note of the results arising from the work of the last Chapter, over which I presided as Apostolic Delegate, has begun to have doubts about the validity of the elections. Taking note of the fact that virtually all the votes were given to the principal opponents of the Chapter meeting in 1891, with a unity which was not to be shaken, one is led to believe that there was a previous intent and agreement. I present myself, then, in the name of holy obedience and sub gravi to let me have the whole truth. You will need to do so if you are not to incur canonical punishment.

1. Have you been asked by some members of the Chapter to give your vote to such and such a one rather than to someone else?
2. Have you been asked by religious (for your vote) who were not part of the Chapter?
3. Do you know if there was an earlier understanding among Chapter members or a certain group of them before the elections?
4. What reasons were presented to you by those soliciting your votes for some rather than others?
5. Did you yourself appeal to your confrères to vote for some rather than others and what reasons did you put forward?
6. Do you know if there was, following on the calling of the Chapter, or during the days before it took place, an exchange of letters or arranged meetings between certain religious about putting forward names, either as a critique of the Superior General and his administration, or with a view to a prior arrangement before the forthcoming elections?
7. It is expressly forbidden sub gravi to speak to anyone about the purpose of this enquiry or about the enquiry itself.

There is a serious obligation not to blame in any way the measures which the Sacred Congregation judged should be taken, nor the decisions of the new administration.

Issoudun, March 28, 1893

My Lord,

I have just returned from Bourges where I had the honour of meeting the Archbishop (the future Cardinal, Jean-Pierre Boyer). He was very kind, very paternal, Fr. Piperon was with me. His Grace thereafter spoke to me about our own problems, being aware of everything. He regrets all that has become public, and is shocked by the vicious attitude of those who stirred things up. His Grace said to me: "You may count on me as a father, a friend; it is absolutely imperative that you become free of these troubles. I am going to Rome shortly, and I shall have a word with the Pope, who I know has a high regard for you, and everything will be arranged to your satisfaction. Prepare a memorandum for me which will give me exact information; you will come again to Bourges and we shall discuss this very serious issue." What must I do, Bishop? Would it not be in order if you spoke about all of this with His Grace and let him know what is to be done? Fr. Le Sachet, with a word spoken by him to me, would appear to know something and I regret that this is so. The Archbishop, when we were parting, went on to say that "several confrères of yours who are opposed to you have already written against you to me. These are in revolt and they must be dealt with if order is to be restored". I thanked him profusely for all the concern he is showing for our little Congregation. "Yes, indeed," he added. "You can depend on me." He also spoke about Fr. Guyot in terms which suggested that he did not hold him in high esteem, finding his nomination as Procurator in Rome quite deplorable.

Please accept, Bishop, my deepest good wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

If you think it opportune, My Lord, to provide Archbishop Boyer with the memoranda I was pleased to give you, I shall, then, have no need to send them on again.

Issoudun, April 2, 1893

My Lord,

I thank Your Lordship on assuring me of the Archbishop's good will towards me. How kind you are, My Lord! How I appreciate your support!

When you come to conclude your report, if you think it opportune, I shall be honoured to meet Your Lordship to consider seriously those who might be put forward as Assistants and Procurator General, since Fr. Jouët has written to say that he wants to take a rest for sometime and be free of all responsibilities, actively and passively. Indeed Archbishop Boyer has informed me that when he was visiting Rome he had seen for himself that Fr. Jouët was too busy and did not make himself sufficiently available for the overseeing of the house. This explains the independent and critical spirit of the majority of our young men who have studied in Rome.

You will have to consider also, Bishop, if there is not reason, following the enquiry, to request the dismissal of the principal agitators: Fathers Ramot, Lanctin, Reyn and Hartzler. As regards Fr. Reyn, here's a letter which he wrote to Fr. Vandel following the death of his mother. I could not consider forwarding it to him without contacting Your Lordship since, at the end of it, it seems to me that there is an inclination towards breaking the secret which you ordered should be kept. In any event, what he confides can only intrigue Fr. Vandel and rouse his imagination. Since we receive a great number of stamps, you will allow me, Bishop, to forward some of them to you for the correspondence which we have occasioned you.

Tomorrow afternoon 8 of our young confrères and some Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, led by Fr. Genocchi, are leaving from Marseilles for New Guinea. Among them are a priest, two deacons, a sub-deacon, one in minor orders, two lay brothers. Over the past 3 months three priests and three lay brothers have been sent to the missions. Bishop Navarre will take more with him. Your Lordship, in addition to the work involved preparing for the elections prior to the Chapter, this is what Fr. Vaudon wrote to me on March 3 from Montargis: "I have to tell you that before the Chapter, the majority of the delegates asked me if I would accept the position of Procurator General. I replied in the negative. It was then they turned to Fr. Guyot. I am absolutely sure of this."

Please accept my deepest regards in C.J.

18930403X

Council Meeting, April 3, 10, 1893

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard, Assistants.

Fr. Genocchi named as Superior in New Guinea.

1. Fr. General stated that the New Guinea mission did not have a Superior since Bishop Verjus' death. It is necessary, then, to appoint a Superior and he put forward Fr. Genocchi. This was agreed on and, as he didn't have the requisite 35 years as stated in the Constitutions, a dispensation on the grounds of age will be requested from the Congregation by Bishop Navarre who will shortly be visiting Rome.

Brother Cornelius Deen admitted to perpetual vows.

2. In view of the request by Cornelius Deen, a lay brother in Tilburg, and about to end his second phase of temporary vows, more than 30 years of age, and having in mind the views of the local Council despite his quite considerable shortcomings, the decision, nevertheless, was taken to accept him for final profession when his second three-yearly phase ends.

Postulancy.

3. A student from the Rome Pie College, aged 18, with a baccalureate, has been put forward by Fr. Védère and Brother Ruggieri for postulancy during the holidays or the next reception, on condition that he has sufficient knowledge of French to follow the novitiate regulations.

Brothers Martin, Lehane, Borman and Péloquin accepted, conditionally, for the diaconate and priesthood.

4. Fr. Derichemont is putting forward for the diaconate at the end of April or the beginning of May, and then for the priesthood on Trinity Sunday, Brothers Martin, Lehan, Borman and Péloquin, all of whom passed satisfactorily the preliminary examinations they undertook. The Council, while of the view that these two ordinations were somewhat close to each other, approves on condition that the candidates have studied theology for at least two years before the priesthood in keeping with the November 4, 1892, rescript from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

Accepted for Orders.

5. At the request and with the favourable recommendation of the respective Superiors, Brother Field was called to the diaconate and Brothers Kuntz, Hannigan, Lynch, Nicolo, Laurenti, di Luzio and Guglielmetti to the subdiaconate; Brother Ronci and Bonaccorsi to minor orders, and Brother Valdambri to the tonsurate, all from the Rome house, and Brother Assunto from the Barcelona house to the diaconate.

The postulants Olmos, Tatcher, Poupenny, admitted to the novitiate.

6. Given the favourable recommendation of the Novice Master the following three postulants were accepted: Manuel Olmos-Nuñez, a Spanish priest, Joseph Tatcher, also Spanish, and Joseph Poupenny from the diocese of Besançon.

7. Brother Guerrero was appointed to Barcelona as a replacement for Brother Allera, on condition that he follows the courses at the Barcelona major seminary.

8. Given the flagrant insubordination of Brother Edward Muldoon in the Glastonbury house, made known in an earlier letter from Fr. Deidier, the Superior, the Council members were unanimous in having him expelled immediately.

All the replies to the Apostolic Delegate's questionnaire are pretty insignificant, some even abusive, for example those from Frs. Hartzer and Miniot. Fr. Reyn, affected by a little bout of pox, didn't reply; will he do so? The Bishop of Sinope is scandalized by the prevailing vicious attitudes. The scholastics under the damaging impact of Fathers Vandel and Ramot are for the most part un-supportive, concentrating very much on freedom and independence. I am disgusted; indiscipline is rampant; they no longer have respect for authority. The future frightens me. How culpably responsible are the leaders of this sad campaign!

To Cardinal Mariano Rampolla, Secretary of State.

Issoudun, April 15, 1893

Most Distinguished Cardinal,

I have the honour to send Your Excellency a memorandum about our situation in Quito with the request to provide us with an answer which we shall accept as coming from God. You were good enough in your reply to leave this issue with our General Chapter which took place at Bourges on the 11th of February under the presidency of the Apostolic Delegate. The Chapter decided unanimously, apart from one vote, to leave Ecuador. I forwarded the decision to Your Eminence and the Archbishop of Quito and to our confrères. The people (of Quito) who like and appreciate us were aghast and protested to the government. The President of the Republic sent the enclosed telegram, but I could only reply in keeping with the Chapter's decision. Archbishop Ordonez and the Cathedral Chapter, to whom the Sagrario church which we look after belongs, and the city's clergy, made no effort to keep us.

The Archbishop, aware that we had no stability in Quito, since we are at the mercy of the Church authorities who can bid us farewell at any moment, but sensitive to the numerous requests made to him by the people and by the upper class, offered us most advantageous proposals in order to entice us to remain. His Grace was prepared to offer us in perpetuity the Sagrario church and presbytery, taking away from the Canons their rights over this Cathedral and promising in perpetuity a very substantial annual rent. Before ending the letter I wrote to the Archbishop asking him if he might not commit in this way his successors and the Chapter. His Grace, on reflection, replied that he could only speak for himself. Noting then that the promises were empty and that we were in the same predicament as before, I wrote to His Grace informing him that we were leaving Ecuador. It was after that that requests were made to the Holy See which recommended us to delay our departure, which is what we did. Conscious that there could be no resolution of the issue on the Archbishop's side, I reported the matter to Your Eminence, and the decision would be communicated to the Chapter. I do not envisage any likelihood of satisfying the Quito government or the people, given the Archbishop's silence. If, accordingly, the Holy See considers that it should not directly intervene in order to guarantee us a stable situation, we are simply compelled to withdraw and we do so all the more readily when our Oceania missions require more people than we have to give them.

I have the honour to be Your Eminence's most humble and obedient son in C.J.

Issoudun, April 27, 1893

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I received your Naples letter and your telegram from Rome, thanks a thousand.

1. The Quito business is once more left aside. Here's the reason: Fr. Grom in Watertown has died from pneumonia; Fr. Van Grinsven, in charge of lay brothers at Antwerp, has left the Society; Fathers Bouvieret and Delmas, both teaching in Chezal-Benoît, are quite seriously ill; Fr. Bontemps is looking for personnel in his missions and we have nobody to fill these places. Faced with this situation our Society's Council, to which I made available the President of the Republic of Ecuador's telegram, the urgent letter from Mr. Larrea and Bishop Segna's advice (both these latter individuals' names uncertain), could not in conscience allow our confrères to remain in Quito, refusing straightforwardly to send a telegram to our priests asking them to postpone their departure. I gave way in the face of their decision. I conveyed this decision to Mr. Larrea and no doubt he will discuss it with you. Ask him to inform his government. I wrote for my part to the President of Ecuador informing him of the decision and thanking him for his good will towards us. Later, if something becomes possible, we shall see.

2. The Archbishop of Bourges is quite ill with a chest infection. We sent a telegram to Bourges saying that we were praying to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for His Grace. Pray, have him prayed for, as it would be truly a tragedy if he were to pass away. The Bishop of Sinope is also laid up.

Issoudun, April 27, 1893

Dear Ambassador,

I would have liked, in keeping with your wishes and those of Bishop Segna, to find myself sending a telegram at this moment to my Quito confrères asking them to hold over their departure, if new problems had not arisen. One of our priests, the parish priest in Watertown, USA, has just died and he will need to be replaced; and another, in charge of one of our novitiates, is forced for serious reasons to leave the Society; several are quite seriously ill and we haven't enough personnel to replace them. Besides, the two priests who are at present at Sagrario are not enough for such an important parish and we have nobody available at the present time. Given that there are only the two of them, they are in danger of risking their health and the religious responsibilities they have to meet, as well as the honour of the Society. These reasons, and others besides, Mr. Ambassador, prevent our Congregation's Council from going back on its virtually unanimous decision at the General Chapter to leave Quito; we greatly regret this, myself in particular, taking into consideration our time there which has already entailed so much sacrifice for us. If, later on, when prospects have improved, we can have, with ecclesiastical approval and the support of your staunchly Catholic government, another Quito foundation, we shall do so with pleasure. We are very grateful to the President of the Ecuador Republic for his very considerate intervention and the regard he has for us. But again, I repeat, it is at present quite impossible for us to meet his wishes and that of the public which was always sympathetic to us. It is with regret that we are forced to disengage.

I have the honour to be, Mr. Ambassador, with deep respect, and appreciative regards, Your Excellency's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Issoudun, April 28, 1893

Mr. President,

I thank Your Excellency for the telegram you were kind enough to send me requesting me in the peoples' name to leave my confrères in Quito for the time being by suspending their recall. The resolution of this issue has been placed in the hands of His Eminence Cardinal Rampolla. His Holiness' Secretary of State, having considered the dossier, left the decision on the matter to our General Chapter which took place on the 11th of February last. The Chapter, however, apart from one dissenting voice, favoured departure from Ecuador. I cannot, therefore, Mr. President, to my great regret, return to this issue which was influenced by serious reasons (for departing). It is not without great regret that we leave a country where we have received so much regard and considerateness. We shall never forget Your Excellency's kindness, nor that of your government. If in better circumstances it becomes possible for us to return we shall do so with pleasure.

Please accept, Mr. President, my lively appreciation, and deepest regards, as I have the honour to be Your Excellency's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Dear Father,

I have had a letter from Bourges that Archbishop Boyer is very ill and has received the last sacraments. I triduum of prayer has been called for throughout the diocese. A miracle is needed; let us hope our request will be granted.

Here is a copy of the letter I sent to the President of the Ecuador Republic. As above, article 2148.

NB: It is only the Holy See which can change a Chapter's decision. If His Holiness, having fully considered the issue, sent, through his secretary, a telegram to me: "the Holy Father wishes, despite the Chapter's decision, that you remain in Quito." my Sagrario confrères would get an order straight away to put off their departure. The Pope's voice is for us the voice of God.
J.C.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

If I received a telegram of this nature, everybody would be obliged to go along with it.

Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

To Bishop Auguste Marchal, Vicar Capitular, Bourges.

Issoudun, April 30, 1893

My Lord,

We are devastated to hear that you are still suffering. Please take care of yourself as your health is a matter of great concern to all your friends; we must pray once more to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

The way for proceeding suggested by Cardinal Monaco to you is not in fact practical in the present circumstances. How is one to know if the Chapter members exchanged letters beforehand and if there wasn't agreement reached among them, such as everything leads us to believe?

I. Now that you have, My Lord, the greater part of the information needed, it seems to me that the following must be stated in your report:

1. The result of your investigation indicates, if not peremptorily at least sufficiently, that the principal opponents of the 1891 Chapter, who wanted to change everything, acted in every way to bring over to their viewpoint the new members of the Chapter.
2. And there was, most likely, between them, a pre-arranged plan of campaign.
3. The election choices at the last Chapter meeting were already decided in advance as proved by the unanimity.

4. All this is the result of the trickery and vengeance involved with the 1891 Chapter break up, against which they have never stopped protesting.

5. The choice of the new Assistants and Procurator General is to be deplored!

II. It should be easy for Your Lordship to prove this latter (5) assertion because the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars contacted you about the personal qualities of the newly-elected, providing on each of them the assessment you are in a position to be aware of.

1. Fr. Ramot, first Assistant, a slippery individual, lacking in judgment and obedience, unable to look after a house with respect to religious discipline and economizing. Following the break up of the first Chapter (1891) he refused to return, at the kind invitation of his Superiors, to Watertown, USA, to take charge of the community, as he did likewise with regard to Sydney as Superior of the house there, deluding himself that his place was in Issoudun, or roundabout, in order to keep an eye on the current administration, thereby following the advice of his main supporters. His diaries seething with hatred and calumnies against his Superior General would, likewise, be very useful to you.

2. Fr. Delaporte. You are aware of his background, his personality, his lack of judgment, his ill-fitting behaviour, craven ambition, and the unbecoming stance he takes with respect to Your Lordship.

3. Fr. Lanctin, whom you are aware of in depth from his past and present behaviour.

4. As for Fr. Morisseau, he is a weak, indecisive, character, without any great ability, not very open, usually aligning himself with the majority.

5. Fr. Guyot, appointed Procurator General in Rome, is the worst possible choice one can make in the circumstances. Before the 1891 meeting he was, together with Fr. Delaporte, the standard-bearer of the opposition. If our young priests have rebelled against the measures taken by the Sacred Congregation, have continued in their insubordinate and undisciplined spirit to oppose authority, it's all due to their disastrous influence. How could the Chapter members think of making Fr. Guyot Procurator General when they were aware of his age (66 years), his ignorance of the language (Italian) and Roman ways, well aware also that he was laid up, only able to walk with the aid of a stick, greatly affected by articular rheumatism, his health exhausted from his illnesses, to the point that he hasn't left his bed for the past two months. Obviously his choice was deliberate on the part of a flagrantly opposing group who wanted at all costs to get rid of Fr. Jouët, and have a man dealing with the Congregation who would do the bidding of the disaffected.

III. Conclusion of the report.

On the supposition that the Sacred Congregation does not find sufficient reason in the accord of the Chapter members or in the presentations of the intrigues to validate the elections, the picture you will build up with reference to Fathers Ramot, Delaporte, Lanctin and Guyot will undoubtedly entail that they cannot remain in their respective postings and would need to be replaced by the previous administration, that is to say, by Fathers Piperon, Maillard and Morisseau. You might, I suggest, in the lack of anyone else, put forward either Fr. Vaudon or Fr. Roger as 4th Assistant, the latter presently acting as Superior at Tilburg in place of Fr. Lanctin, with Fr. Jouët put forward simply as Procurator General. We would then put forward Fr. Carrière as Superior of the Rome house, he presently being the director of the Chezal-Benoît Petite Oeuvre.

IV. In order to maintain discipline and compel people to re-establish order, you might ask the Sacred Congregation to forbid religious to criticize in word or writing the actions (decisions) of the administration, or bad-mouth their major Superiors, weaken their authority, this under pain of excommunication ipso facto reserved to the Superior General and with exclusion from the Society after a second or third defaulting. We can only see this forceful way as likely to remedy the problem, and, thereby, restore our dear Congregation to its pristine early spirit. Only then, given the previous qualities which characterize it, can it without shackles carry out that good to which it is called in the Church.

I have the honour to be most respectfully Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Article 2151

To Cardinal Isidoro Verga, Prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

L 18930430A

Undated. Likely end of April 1893.

A copy of the Bishop of Sinope's statement together with some slight modifications left to the discretion of His Lordship.

Your Eminence,

I have the honour to send you the results of the investigation which the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars asked me to undertake in relation to the election process at the General Chapter of the Issoudun Missionaries of the Sacred Heart meeting on February 11 this year at Issoudun. I personally met those Chapter members who live in Issoudun and Chezal-Benoît, and in order to avoid any inconvenience for those who live in other countries I sent them a questionnaire to which each one should reply in keeping with the specific requests. I also thought it worthwhile to seek the advice of Fr. Deidier, presently Superior of the Glastonbury house in England, because, while not involved in the elections, he was in a position to be well informed. I add his statement to that of the others.

The Sacred Congregation being anxious to know what I think of the issue, I believe it my duty to say that in my eyes there was a prior agreement to get rid of the previous administration, replacing it by that which, it had already been agreed on, should take over at the 1891 Chapter. The leading activists, Fathers Delaporte, Ramot, Reyn, Hartzler and Lanctin, drew the others, that's to say Fathers Morisseau, Casas, Barral, Miniot, Derichemont, to their side by playing down beyond all reason and fairness the merits of the former Assistants, and aiming the most severe and harsh criticisms at the Superior General, representing him as an old man who was a spent force and quite authoritarian, who should be given advisers capable of keeping him in check and, besides, the election choices made at the last Chapter are a way of hitting back at the Sacred Congregation for its dissolution of the 1891 Chapter. These latter decisions were attributed to the pernicious influence of Fr. Jouët, against whom there has been no letting up of protests. All of the foregoing follows from the statements of Fathers Delaporte, Hartzler, Reyn, Ramot and Fr. Deidier's letter, as well as from different verbal declarations made to me. What, in particular, Fr. Deidier's letter makes clear, particularly in relation to the ambitious presumptions of Fr. Delaporte, can be easily gathered from a part of the same Fr. Delaporte's statement letter. It is not irrelevant to point out that all Superiors were not present at the last Chapter. Bishops Navarre and Couppe were not there, nor were the Gilbert Islands Superior, the Sydney Superior or Fr. Jouët. It is, therefore, quite erroneous to say that the opposition represented the whole Congregation, or represented the unanimity of its leaders, as if the Superior General, the former Assistants, those unable to be there such as the Bishops, did not in their eyes have any significance.

As for the moral qualities which should characterize the elected in order to fulfil appropriately their office, I have no hesitation in saying that they are wholly lacking in them. I experienced them as over-ambitious, full of themselves, obstinate in their view-points, unaccepting of challenge and obstinately convinced that they, and no-one else, are in the right. I didn't notice the slightest hesitation attending their judgments, and not one of them sought a viewpoint or expressed any concern about the approach to be made in the difficult situations in which they found themselves.

Otherwise, those views expressed by them at the last Chapter, and which were included in my report, together with the statements accompanying this letter, are sufficient proof of that attitude which I have indicated as being characteristic of them. Fr. Delaporte, in particular, is already well known from his past, always stirring things up and indiscreet by nature, keen on occupying himself with work outside the community. That's why, as he freely admits himself, living in Paris is greatly to his liking and he does not see the Superior General's role as more than one of having better opportunities for frequent travel.

Fr. Ramot is a narrow-minded individual who, outwardly pious, gives himself over in stubborn obstinacy to the most injurious and unjust value-judgments such as those he formed about the Superior General. Fr. Lanctin, a soured, restless character, who at the present only cares about the religious life because his appointment as Assistant has made it possible for him to live near his parents. Fr. Morisseau has no mind of his own, inclining always in whatever direction the wind is blowing.

There remains the issue of tracing the cause of the animosity directed towards Rev. Fr. (Chevalier). He is criticized for being authoritarian, wanting to do everything himself... without taking the Rule into consideration, of specifically conducting the financial affairs of the Congregation without any supervision, or checks, etc. Circumstances may provide some semblance of truth as regards these accusations, but they give no justification for the charge.

From the beginning and as far as 1880 the Congregation as such had not greatly developed and, as it was largely in the control of its Superior, he maintained that overall authority which followed naturally from his role as Founder. After the expulsions (of religious from France) he had to look after things on his own, or equivalently so, because all his religious, especially the more important ones, were taken from him. Simultaneously, the Congregation underwent development as extraordinary as unforeseen. The material needs of many costly foundations had to be met, as well as their spiritual care and support. These foundations were always undertaken with the approval of the Assistants, even though they were dispersed. The Superior General, always on his own, and relying on his own convictions, necessarily had to make decisions on his own responsibility. But is it right to blame him, or can it be proved from the facts that the Congregation's affairs are in disarray and its finances diminished? Most pertinently I am aware that the contrary is the case. Never, perhaps, has an Institute been in such a healthy condition from the financial point of view and all due to the good financial performance of the Superior General, the resources he made available on his own initiative through the development of his undertakings and their maintenance.

Since 1891, and already before that, a Council was made available to him, and it functioned normally and regularly. The Superior General accounted quite properly for his financial transactions; the use of funds was supervised each month by the General Bursar, as the books make clear; the (financial) safe has three keys and holds all the currency, everything perfectly organized... (The direction) of the Congregation is not undertaken without the advice and contribution of the Assistants.

One may draw the conclusion that if in those houses and undertakings which are nearby he intervenes too much, he, on the other hand, leaves to their own devices those houses which are at a distance. But this conclusion is without foundation. Not being able to go himself on visitation to the most distant houses, the Superior General has twice sent visitors, to Watertown, USA, to Quito, Ecuador, Fr. Jouët; Fr. Tréand to Sydney. He on different occasions had delegate visitors in Salzburg, Tilburg, Antwerp, Glastonbury, Barcelona, Rome, all of which is verified in the registers. He himself on several occasions visited all the different European houses. And it was as a result of these different visits that he noted serious abuses which needed to be put right. It is the pursuit of these different reforms, especially as regards the northern European houses, which is in large part responsible for the discontent in those opposed to him. He is blamed for not taking the Rules into consideration which is quite a surprising accusation on the lips of those who have been the ones protesting most vehemently when the Superior General, wishing to reinforce discipline, added to the early Rule or directory prescriptions some severity. From what I can gather this complaint could justly be turned against those who brought up the accusation, taking as they do unexpected liberties in relation to the Rule. One is drawn to hold their sincerity as suspect, their knowledge of the religious life, their very faith, etc. I cannot but be taken aback and pained by such-like allegations and I do not wish to embarrass the Superior General by setting out to refute them. In summary, the circumstances explain and justify what has been done by way of the exercise of authority in Fr. General's administration, and over a number of years all has proceeded with as much regularity as possible. If there remain some measures to be undertaken in order to complete the Society's organization, the opportunities will arise as time goes by.

My conclusions, then, are the following:

1. The recent elections were the outcome of plotting.
2. Those elected are not blessed with the requisite qualities for fitting exercise of office.
3. The accusations levelled against the Superior General are both unjust and exaggerated. The critical spirit and the tendency to denigrate which characterize the main ring-leaders is likely to have serious consequences for the Institute if the Sacred Congregation does not see to its disappearance by undertaking strict measures to deal with it. The following are the names of those who have caused most problems in the Society: Fathers Delaporte, Ramot, Lanctin, Reyn, Hartzler, Meyer, Vandel, the Director of the scholasticate, and Guyot.

My Lord,

What strong measures should one suggest to the Sacred Congregation? The dismissal as such of all the above-named? Would not this lead to an aggravation of the issue rather than to its diminishment? The young and old, who only know them for their qualities and not for their drawbacks, would not understand these expulsions and would be aghast about it. The promoters, women and men, especially in the northern countries (Belgium, Holland) and the ecclesiastics among their friends would be drawn to lay blame (on us) for these harsh measures.

Again might not these expelled priests try to come together as a new community and try to win over most of our young confrères, the scholastics, etc.? Would not the same purpose be achieved if Rome were to excommunicate ipso facto, as a right of the Superior General, whosoever, in word or writing, gave himself over to criticism and condemnation of his major Superiors and the decisions of the administration, as I said in my previous letter (Article 2050, L 18930430)? If this measure is not acceptable to the Sacred Congregation could it not be laid down by it that any religious unwilling to accept the decision which it is about to take, would by that very fact be deemed expelled from the Society with release from vows, even perpetual?

Again, a third possibility would be that of permitting the Superior General and his Council, over a period of time, the right to send away from the Congregation anyone, even in final vows, who allows himself to stir up trouble, act in an insubordinate manner, be critically hostile, etc. All this latter procedure would be under the supervision of the Apostolic Delegate. I think, myself, My Lord, that by these latter means one would succeed without too much scandal and uproar in remedying a situation which is destroying us.

I have the honour to be respectfully Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Issoudun, May 1, 1893

Dear Fr. Jouët,

Mr. Larrea, following his meeting with Bishop Segna, requested me to let his government know by telegram that our Quito confrères should postpone their departure. I sent a telegram to you tasking you to tell him not to send the telegram because of newly-arisen problems and that an explanatory letter would follow. Now you inform me today in your telegram that he has contacted his government without waiting for your letter. You did not, then, make him aware of my telegram asking him to wait (for my letter)? I am now in a compromising situation as regards the Council members. I see only one way to extricate myself and that is to receive a telegram from Bishop Segna with this message: The Pope wishes, despite the Chapter's decision, your confrères in Quito to postpone their departure. And the telegram has to be signed by Bishop Segna, because Mr. Larrea's signature or your own would carry no weight with the Assistants. Your own name must not appear in any way whatsoever! You know why! Here you are still thought to be in Naples. It is my view that you can easily get this telegram from Bishop Segna and everything will be in order. Do not mention my letter to Mr. Larrea to whom you make reference. I would be blamed by the Council. I repeat the contents of the telegram: The Pope wishes, despite the Chapter's decision, that your priests postpone their departure from Quito. Segna, Secretary.

The Archbishop of Bourges continues to be seriously laid up. The Bishop of Sinope has another bout of bronchitis. As for myself, I am stricken by the influenza which is severely affecting Issoudun. I am feverish, have a headache, am weak of limb, have no appetite and I cough a lot. I was unable to say mass this morning. I am keeping to my bed and room. I hope that it will not be too serious. Pray for me. What's happening with Bishop Navarre? I don't hear anything about him.

Cheerio, Father. Send on the telegram as set out above; it is quite urgent.

My Lord,

I thank you very appreciatively for the concern you so kindly show for my health. The bout of influenza hit me like a thunder-bolt on Sunday night, Monday morning, when I began to ache all over, had a terrible headache, vomited, and had a persistent cough. Today I feel better. The fever, headache, sore throat, have gone, leaving me with a heavy cold which I must look after. And there's our first communion day on Sunday; you can see how the time is well chosen to be laid up!

I read with great interest the proposals arising from your report (see above, Article 2151). I have a number of observations of some significance to put before you and I would, accordingly, ask you not to put pen to paper until you have received my next letter.

Please accept my deepest regards in C.J.

My Dear Father,

You do well to study our Constitutions and immerse yourself in their authentic spirit. You will find there the secret of our thrust, the principles underlying our splendid mission, the powerful means to bring this about and all the constituent elements of social regeneration. It has to be so because the Heart of Jesus is the foyer of love and the centre of all great Catholic undertakings, as well as being the remedy for all our problems. No Congregation possesses like ours all the assets and qualities which meet in such a complete fashion all the needs of the present and future. Indeed if we only knew how to make use of them!

I wholly approve of your programme since it has its source in our Constitutions and the providential purpose assigned to us by the Holy See. You must, in the event, be kind enough to refer these issues to the Archbishop of Bourges. His Grace, who supports these undertakings, will approve, of this I have no doubt. I have already advised him about our September 8 feast and the emphasis we are laying on it because of the Eucharistic Congress in Jerusalem. You will find that the ground has already been prepared.

Please accept my most sincere good wishes in C.J.

Council Meeting, May 15, 12, June 3, 1893

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

Fathers Burnet and Chopin appointed to Paris.

1. The above have been appointed to the Paris house replacing Fathers Delaporte and Deidier.

The novices Brooks and Buckley asked to leave.

2. Brooks, due to persistent and excessive scrupulosity, and Buckley, lacking the requisite qualities, have been sent away from the novitiate.

A proposal to buy the de Cléry property as a country house.

3. Fr. General suggested that the de Cléry property should be bought as a country house, being near to Issoudun and presently for sale and for which, if necessary, we are prepared to pay up to 25,000 francs. The Councils were in agreement that a house in the country would be very useful to the scholasticate, endorsing the proposal.

Request for a long-term lease at Canet-de-Mar.

4. The Marist Brothers, landlords of Canet, wishing to bring about some changes in the house, are asking us to arrange a long-term lease but, since our Constitutions do not allow us to lease for more than three years, the Council's decision is that we cannot accept this request.

Called to Orders.

- a. John Field to the priesthood.
- b. Brothers Kuntz, di Luzio and Nicolo to the diaconate.
- c. Brothers Kuntz, Hannigan, Nicolo, Laurenti, di Luzio, to the sub-diaconate.
- d. Brothers Ronci and Bonaccorsi to minor orders.
- e. Brother Valdambri to the tonsurate.

At the request of Fathers Jouët and Védère the following were called to ordination:

- a. Brother Field to the priesthood.
- b. Brothers Kuntz, di Luzio and Nicolo to the diaconate, ordained sub-deacons with Field on the Saturday before Pentecost.
- c. Brothers Ronci and Bonaccorsi called to minor orders.
- d. Valdambri to the tonsurate.

Approval of ground purchase at Tilburg.

6. A letter from Fr. Roger, dated May 29, was read explaining that a piece of ground separated by a narrow fence from the Tilburg house enclosure, and on which houses could be built, disadvantageously overlooking the cloister and garden, is up for sale. The Council was of the view that it would be right to approve of such a purchase and agreed that it was an urgent issue to buy this plot of land in order to avoid any ongoing inconvenience, there being the likelihood of a sale which would not exceed 2,500 florins (4 to 5,000 francs), without burdening greatly the house which is beginning to pay its way.

Regulation about writing (letters) in French by those who know the language.

7. The Council, aware that certain members wrote in a foreign language, decided that Superiors who didn't know the foreign language should see to it that those who knew French should write in that language to other members of the Society.

Please take care of yourself and take all the necessary precautions. The Conclusion you draw in your report is excellent. The Sacred Congregation will take those measures which it will deem most effective from those you have suggested. Let us hope that as a result of your pertinent intervention, the divine Heart of Jesus will be kind to us. I am awaiting Bishop Theuret who is coming for dinner and will sleep at the presbytery before he makes his way to give confirmation there tomorrow. Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. I am getting better and beginning to take on my normal work. Following the letter from His Eminence Cardinal Rampollo asking me to postpone the departure of our confrères from Quito until fresh arrangements were made with the new Archbishop's administration, I sent a telegram straightaway to Fr. Jean-Baptiste Perriot asking him to postpone his departure.

2. I think that at last Bishop Navarre is about to leave for Rome, and he will deal with Propaganda. I expect Fr. Bontemps in the early part of June.

3. I am returning Fr. Tréand's letter to Fr. Guyot to you, and you can use it when you speak to Cardinal Moran, who is presently in Rome.

4. I am delighted that your work 'A little trip to Purgatory' (Petite Tour du Purgatorie) has been so successful, surpassing your expectations.

5. I cannot ascertain what amount of money you would annually need for your personal needs. Let me know how much and I shall speak with Fr. Piperon about what sum could be available for you and the matter can then be arranged.
6. Fr. Védère is looking for the approval of ordinations on Trinity Sunday and said you were going to write to me about it. You do not mention anything in your letter, however. What do you think?

Dear Fr. Reyn,

1. To be Master of Novices, one must be 35 years of age. You cannot be other than Fr. Van Grinsven's Socius who remains as of right Novice Master as long as his position hasn't been regularized in Rome (his departure from the Society). While he waits he may accept for the novitiate and for vows those whom you present to him, providing for each one the necessary information and forwarding to us the requests of the newly professed. You give the impression, my friend, that you are amazed that all our correspondence is in French and yet there is nothing more reasonable or in character with our Constitutions. Since our foundation this has always been the custom in our Society and I am amazed that you haven't taken notice of this until now. I say, then, that nothing is more reasonable. Up to now we have had only one province, the French Province; we must, therefore, since we all know French, correspond with each other in the language of that Province, French; this is elementary. I go on to say, secondly, that nothing is more in conformity with our Constitutions. It is stated in number 72 that the Superior must read all the letters coming in and going out of the house. Now all the Superiors don't know German, Dutch, English, Italian, Spanish, but they all do know French. Moreover, the Constitutions make it their duty to hand on or not to hand on letters as they see fit, and can they meet this obligation if they do not know the language in which the letters have been written? Moreover, it may happen that it becomes necessary to submit to the Superior General certain letters of a particular nature, and how can the latter, who only knows French, deal, otherwise, with such a letter?
2. You state, Father, that my successor might be German Dutch, Italian, English, Spanish. So be it! And what will the French say if he lays it down that his correspondence should be in his native tongue? The Superior General who will succeed me will know French, and if at this moment we have only one province, and that is French, he must insist that letters be written in French for the reason I have set out above.
3. When our Society becomes divided into provinces, each province, according to the Constitutions, will have its own autonomy and will correspond in the language spoken by the Provincial and the local Superiors.
4. There's a sentence in your letter, my friend, which worries me greatly since it goes to show that the religious spirit and obedience has very much left you. How can this issue (the subject of the letter), which is quite a reasonable one and very much in keeping with our Constitutions, be a threat to the peace which should reign among us? It has to be said that if one advantageously has a religious spirit, as well as respect for the Constitutions and authority, instead of complaining one should be greatly pleased to note that religious discipline was flourishing once more among us, since, take note of this Fr. Reyn, it is only with this that there can be a future for our Society and its development, with the blessing of the Sacred Heart.

The letter moves from No. 4 to 6.

6. As for the number of youngsters in our Petite Oeuvres, Rome wants us to keep it fewer for the time being and that's acceptable to us; we must not query it. Select them carefully with respect to piety, intelligence, health, a good and pleasing attitude and they will persevere. There's nothing to stop you replacing those who fall short with others.
7. Yes, I give my permission to the brother who has left his parents the interest on a sum of money.
8. Brother Fusshöller cannot continue any longer with his studies because of his eye-sight; he will be going on the missions. You were right to put him with the lay brothers. Fr. Morisseau forgot to mention this to you.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Fr. Barral,

The President of the Ecuador Republic and the populace of Quito on hearing the news of the imminent departure of our confrères contacted the Pope requesting that we should stay on. The Holy Father sent a telegram to the President through Mr. Larrea asking us to postpone our departure. Likewise, Cardinal Rampollo himself wrote to me saying that the Holy Father wanted me to send a telegram to our confrères in Quito asking them to remain there until a new arrangement was made, because a coadjutor (bishop) had been appointed who was likely to meet all our wishes by acting in concert with the President who was greatly attached to us. This is what I have arranged. Fr. Jean-Baptiste Perriot wrote to me saying that the people received the news most enthusiastically and the President had it posted everywhere in the city. What are we to do? Fathers Perriot and Gressin are too few and this provisional arrangement could last a long time.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Fr. Perriot asked me to tell you that the Garcia Moreno family continues to await a nice letter from you.

Issoudun, June 1, 1893

My Lord,

Since the 1891 Chapter, which was nothing less than a concerted intrigue against lawfully constituted authority, when five or six insubordinate individuals wanted at any price to get rid of people, I have not discussed our problems with you. Since you are going to Rome, and will have the opportunity of seeing Cardinal Verga, Prefect of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, and Cardinal Monaco, our Protector, it is appropriate that I confidentially bring you up to date on these issues.

The opponents at the first Chapter (1891) were Fathers Guyot, Delaporte, Ramot, Reyn, Hartzer, Klotz and they were very unhappy when Rome brought this Chapter to an end because it had become a rebellion and a scandal. The Sacred Congregation, having come to know of the decisions taken by the opponents, considered that it was its duty in our Society's interests to break up the assembly and appoint Fathers Piperon, Morisseau and Maillard Assistants with Fr. Jouët as Procurator General. This forthright initiative, which set back all their plans, was erroneously identified by them with the Superior General and Fr. Jouët, inde irae (hence their fury). They sent memorandum after memorandum to Rome in protest and by way of putting us down, calling urgently for a new Chapter made up of the same delegates.

The Holy See, annoyed with incessant requests arrogantly calling for the break up of our Institute, that is to say cutting off the houses of England, Belgium, Holland and Austria (from France), disregarding appreciativeness and justice, asked His Grace, Archbishop Marchal of Bourges, what might be the best way to bring about unity and calm among us. His Grace interviewed the disaffected, all of whom replied that a Chapter was needed. The Holy See refused to meet their wishes. They returned to their demand, and again Rome consulted the Archbishop who asked me to come and see him and tell him what I thought. I replied that I wasn't opposed to the idea of a new Chapter consisting of all the Superiors in charge, but it would have to be presided over by the Apostolic Delegate, and should not deal with anything other than the election of the Assistants and the Procurator General. The Holy See approved that the Chapter should take place on February 11 last, naming Bishop Marchal as Apostolic Delegate. His Grace, following his death, was replaced by his brother, the Bishop of Sinope.

In the hope of pacifying Fr. Klotz we put him in charge of the scholasticate which we had by now set up in Chezal-Benoît at Rome's suggestion. The ill-fated Fr. Klotz was like a wolf in the sheep-pen, bringing to the notice of his young charges, sixty of them, our current problems, sharing with them the views of our opponents, encouraging disobedience towards their Superiors, lessening in them the religious spirit, making them rebellious. While all this was going on, Bishop Verjus came to Issoudun and also spent some days in Chezal-Benoît where Fr. Klotz tried to influence our dear coadjutor bishop and win him over to his cause, unveiling to him as well all the plans and schemes of the opposition, bad-mouthing as much as possible the administration, having no hesitation in the face of any calumny. Bishop Verjus, outraged by such-like behaviour, made answer in the way he merited. Fr. Klotz, seeing that he was thwarted, said to him: "My Lord you do not wish to come over to our side. Very well! You will be sorry for this. We will give you no missionaries and we shall put you into a sack" (sidelining him). The Bishop, already quite exhausted, experienced a mortal blow with these threats. He came as quickly as he could to Issoudun where in tears he told me what happened. Fr. Piperon carried out an investigation among our young scholastics and heard the most disturbing news about Fr. Klotz.

The Archbishop, on coming to know this, stated that it was an obligation on our part to expel Fr. Klotz from the Society and request release of his vows from Rome, making a case in support. And that's what happened. Our opponents, angered by this initiative, strongly took his side. This was their state of mind when they came to the Chapter which took place at the Archbishop's house in Bourges under the presidency of Bishop Marchal.

During those six weeks or two months which preceded the Chapter, our opponents intrigued together and decided in advance who the new Assistants and General Procurator would be. They, then, did everything in their power to bring over to their side all the young Superiors of the houses abroad (those outside France). They achieved their aim and at the Chapter Fathers Ramot, Delaporte, Lanctin and Morisseau were appointed Assistants, and Fr. Guyot, aged 66, laid up, unable to walk, knowing neither Italian or Roman customs, was appointed Procurator General.

The Apostolic Delegate, suspecting intrigue and enmity in these regrettable choices, reported to the Holy See, and the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars proceeded to declare the elections null and void, restoring in the meantime the former administration and requesting the Bishop of Sinope to carry out an investigation, which has now ended. It proves that there was a prior arrangement, and the Delegate in his report concluded that the elections were invalid and the former administration should continue in the meantime. He named those principally involved in these intrigues, asking the Sacred Congregation to expel those who would not accept the new decisions which he deemed he should take and, as well, forbid in the future, under pain of excommunication or interdict, all insubordination, all criticism of the general administration of our Society. He thinks that this is the best way to bring together, and back, the Society's wayward spirits and thereby restore peace and unity among us. His Lordship asked me to relate all this to you confidentially so that you can proceed along these lines in your dealings with the Sacred Congregation and our Cardinal Protector. He would also like you to discuss the issues with Fr. Jouët, who is aware of all this, and come to an understanding with him.

Obviously the devil, foreseeing all the good our Congregation can do in the Church, given its attachment to the Holy See, lets himself loose against it in stirring up this storm. I hope that the divine Heart of Jesus and Our Lady will not forsake us and good will come from evil. There are particularly noteworthy features characterising us, committed and intelligent scholastics, most of whom only dream of going on the missions, 60 to 80 lay brothers, thirty in the novitiate destined for the priesthood, 25 lay brother novices, between 150 and 200 students in the Petite Oeuvres; the Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart animated by a lively spirit, and growing more and more; the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association numbering 18 million and 5,000 associates throughout the world. Our finances are healthy; all of this constitutes a workforce which, well organized, can lead to marvellous results. Now we have our missions among the natives of the South Seas and which presently offer much to hope for, something you are more familiar with than anyone else. Our American houses and those in European countries are destined for a very favourable future. Let us not be surprised if the enemy of what is good and wholesome has sown bad seed in the father of the family's field.

Be good enough to keep me informed about what is happening in Rome insofar as it concerns us, and if my presence is needed there, also that of the Apostolic Delegate who is so favourable to us; you will be kind enough to let me know. The report of the Bishop of Sinope should have been in Cardinal Verga's hands for the past 8 days. You are authorized to intervene promptly in this serious issue.

Cheerio, my dear Lordship. Assuring you of my best wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, June 4, 1893

Dear Vicar General,

Next Tuesday we shall have our confirmations; we pray, and shall have the children pray, for the Archbishop's speedy restoration to health.

We have already begun to organize our September 8 feast and I would ask you to present to His Grace the accompanying programme, submitting to me as soon as possible, if approved, all the changes which His Grace deems it necessary to make. Everything indicates a magnificent turn out and a large gathering of the faithful. Those of the Jerusalem Congress have presented us with a cross in olive-wood as a memento of their wonderful gathering; large numbers of them are coming to Issoudun. This cross was a prominent part of all their meetings and was carried in triumph through all the streets of the Holy City. I profit from this occasion, Vicar General, to draw Church authorities' attention to the Issoudun hospices served for 20 years by the Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul. Since last March, as you are aware, the civil administration has got rid of the chaplaincy and closed the church which served the Congregation. The Sisters are forced to walk two miles for mass in the parish church every morning. Despite the protests of their Superiors in Paris, the civil administrators remain ill-disposed. To smooth over the problems and keep the Sisters I offered to send a priest there each morning for mass, but my proposal was not accepted. The Sisters' Superior General, very concerned that this state of affairs should not continue any longer, has stated that she will take away the Sisters if her protestations and requests are not met. The administration does not seem in any way willing to act. I no longer see any solution other than the Archbishop's intervention.

Six months ago I made known to the ecclesiastical authorities and the Prefect of the Indre that the revenues of our hospice consisted of contributions from benefactors, with the condition that each day mass be offered for their intentions. According to the archival documents and the commemorative plaques three masses must be offered each day in perpetuity.

When the burse was set up again in 1854 or 1855, I being a curate in Issoudun at the time, it was agreed between Cardinal du Pont, then Archbishop of Bourges, and the hospital administration, that the masses be limited to one each day, with a stipend of 1,200 francs yearly (about 4,720 euros) for the Chaplain.

The present-day administrators are doing something deeply unjust when they try to get rid of the mass obligation and the Chaplain. I have protested to these people, and to the Prefect, by stating the facts (as above). I have heard nothing further. His Grace, in his wisdom, will see what can be done. If His Grace thinks it opportune to intervene, a letter from him to the Superior General of the Vincentians asking him to hold over the departure of the Sisters would seem to me to be urgent.

The Bishop of Sinope has passed on to Archbishop Boyer the report on our last Chapter at Bourges so that His Grace might be brought up to date about our situation. Bishop Marchal asked me for this report as he needed it; as it is presently with the Archbishop, I would be favoured if you would have it returned to the Bishop of Sinope.

Please accept, Vicar General, my respectful appreciation as I have the honour to be your humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Feast of the Sacred Heart

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I am sorry about your hoarse throat. By taking care I hope it will soon go away. Nevertheless, if after your commitment at Nancy it still persists you might think about giving up your Marseilles retreats. We shall pray for you.

I sent the Archbishop of Bourges the programme for our September 8 feast for his approval and he has accepted it. His Grace does not favour any meetings in his diocese (without his approval). Fr. Delaporte is very upset about this as he had already prepared a programme. We have no option but to obey. His Grace approves of the festivities for September 8, including the preparatory triduum and the solemn inauguration of the Jerusalem cross. By writing a good article for the Annals for the celebration, you will in this way provide a powerful thrust to the pilgrimage.

Fr. Béguinot, parish priest at Notre Dame, Bourges, has been appointed Vicar General and he is a good choice.

I congratulate you on your apostolate.

Cheerio my friend.
My best wishes in C.J.

Council Meeting, June 12, 19, 1893

In attendance: Fr. General, Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

The setting up of the Souls in Purgatory Association as a Confraternity, and the appointment of Fr. Jouët as its Director and Rector of the Sacred Heart Church near Castel San Angelo.

1. Fr. General shared two items of information with the Council which came from the Rome Vicariate. One is the copy of a decree from the Cardinal Vicar setting up as a confraternity the Souls in Purgatory Association, and the other is a copy of Fr. Jouët's appointment as Director of the confraternity, as well as the rectorship of the Sacred Heart Church near Castel San Angelo where the Association is set up. Fr. General then went on to say that Fr. Jouët did not want to be associated with the administration of the Congregation any longer, asking to be confirmed, with the Holy See's approval, to the undertaking at the Sacred Heart and, accordingly, the Council, neither able or wishing to act against his wishes, gave its approval on the express condition that he himself takes responsibility for his work, its risks and perils. The Society believes, having so much work as its responsibility, that it should not take on new work in the present circumstances and, therefore, while in praise and support of the praiseworthy Purgatory apostolate, it disengages from any involvement and responsibility for this work.

A contribution of 200 francs a month to Fr. Jouët. Since Fr. Jouët has requested a contribution in recognition of his services it was agreed that he should be given 200 francs a month.

2. Given the absence of a Procurator General in Rome it was decided that Fr. Védère should provisionally be considered as replacing Fr. Jouët, dealing with current affairs de mandato Superioris Generalis (with the authority of the Superior General). As for issues which are exceptional and out of the ordinary, he will only act with special approval.

Acceptance of Brother Bachmayer to temporary profession and Brothers Lanz, Fischer and Wenz to the novitiate.

3. With Fr. Meyer's approval, Novice Master at Salzburg, the lay brother Bachmayer was accepted for first vows and the postulants Josef Lanz, born Neukirch, Wurtemberg, 1876, aged 17; Georges Fischer, born 1875, aged 17, and Johan Wenz, born April 3, 1877 at Lumman, Wurtemberg.

4. The youth Savin, a former Petite Oeuvre student, who left a year ago to continue his studies at the Guérande seminary, has been accepted for the novitiate at his own request and with satisfactory reports.

Brothers Kuntz, Nicolo and di Luzio called to the priesthood.

5. On the recommendation of Fr. Védère, Brothers Kuntz, Nicolo and di Luzio were accepted for the priesthood.

Dear Fr. Chétail,

Your letter asking to go on the missions does not greatly surprise me since I have always been conscious of your spirit of commitment and sacrifice. Yes, how blessed you are that the Lord has lit in your heart the sacred fire which consumes itself for the salvation of souls! What more lovely vocation surpasses that of the missions! It is the assurance of heaven, with the crown of the apostolate and martyrdom, at least in voto.

I am too attached to the poor pagans in our care not to give my assent to your request. Yes, indeed, with all my heart, dear friend, I give my approval and I put you on the list of those who are shortly to leave. Since you speak English, I think it likely that you will be going to New Guinea. (He would remain in Australia, see immediately below.) You will leave with Bishop Navarre who is in Rome at present.

In the event Chétail didn't travel with Navarre when he left on December 3, 1893, but rather on August 3, 1894, arriving in Sydney a little over a month later, September 6.

I am pleased to give you permission to spend some days with your family before you leave on the steam boat. You may advise Fr. Deidier if you think it opportune.

Cheerio, Fr. Chétail, I wholeheartedly bless you; wholly yours in C.J.

Tréand, on his arrival in Australia, gave him responsibility for Botany Bay parish and then appointed him Director of Scholastics in Kensington. My Dear Superior,

I decided that I wouldn't write to you about our difficulties with Fr. Genocchi until I had a reply to my letter of January 2 last. But while sorting out in my correspondence letters which were no longer needed, I discovered that Fr. Genocchi had accepted 12 subjects from my mission for perpetual vows, and these vows could be very well null and void for lack of legal authorization. You wrote to me through Fr. Maillard on June 7, 1893, in the following manner: "I ask you, then, on behalf of the Very Rev. Father (General), to obtain as soon as possible from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, the necessary indulg for Fr. Genocchi's appointment as Superior of religious in New Guinea. He lacks by almost two years the age (35 years) considered requisite in our Constitutions to be appointed local Superior, being born July 30, 1860. On June 13, six days after Fr. Maillard's letter on your behalf, I was by now in Rome.

Chevalier writes:

Take up Fr. Genocchi's case as one who served Propaganda (the Congregation of this name) well; try and eliminate all the prejudices directed against him, seemingly, and do something about making him your coadjutor. As he is only 33 years old, and needs to be 35 before he can be a religious Superior, and since he is the only one who can be Superior, get an indulg from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. Deal with this through Bishop Scalsi, apostolic administrator, who is our Roman agent.

Dated June 17, you (Chevalier) wrote to me:

You may as Vicar Apostolic of New Guinea appoint Fr. Genocchi Superior of your priests, but if he is at one and the same time to be local religious Superior, receiving vows etc., he needs an indult from the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, something I think which can be easily obtained. I requested it for Bishop Verjus who wasn't 35 years of age. You being local Superior of Thursday Island cannot be so of Port Léon at the same time.

After all that, if you are encountering difficulties with the appointment of a coadjutor, perhaps you might put forward Fr. Hartzler's name if you are sure of him (his reliability).

You will see for yourself, My Lord, the machinations of Fathers Delaporte, Ramot and Lanctin (I haven't come across others) in writing to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. Isn't it unbecoming and outrageous to denounce the books on the Sacred Heart and Our Lady to Rome and try to get them condemned? And to think that such are the disciples who burden themselves with so much hatred and fury against a parent who never stopped showering blessings on them! I am quite shattered! These pathetic priests do not stop short either in the face of injustice or calumny, wanting to win at any cost! May the Sacred Heart have pity on us and come to our aid!

I am well aware of your devotedness and willingness; I know that I can count on you. I wrote to Fr. Jean-Baptiste Perriot requesting him to keep me informed about issues so that we know exactly what is required of us and I await his reply before taking any firm decision. I asked him to look after matters and do the best he can; when I have his reply, I shall write to you. I made every possible submission to Cardinal Rampolla in order to point out that we could not stay in Quito. He fell ill and the matter was put in the hands of the Congregation for special ecclesiastical affairs, whose secretary, Bishop Segna, replied stating that, all things considered, the Holy Father wanted us to stay in Quito until the new régime took over, when it was to be hoped that the new Archbishop and government would fully meet our expectations. Bishop Gonzales wrote to Fr. Perriot stating that he was very happy with the Holy Father's decision and that we could count on his support. When are matters going to be sorted out? Time will tell, and because of this we must not push matters too precipitately. I am sending you on Fr. Perriot's letter, letting me know what you think about it when returning it to me.

We regret the damage incurred and the twofold effect it has had on the cross, but there's nothing to worry about. If you are unable to sell the cross which you have, send it on to us with someone from the next pilgrimage. We shall make it our duty to pay the expenses you have had to meet, as well as the interest on the money sent to us by you this year. We shall be very pleased if the cross, before being sent on to us, is taken to the principal sanctuaries and sacred places of the Holy City if this hasn't already happened.

Fr. Genocchi left on the 3rd of April last for our New Guinea missions, Oceania. Please pray for him so that his apostolate be a fruitful one, and that our good Lord will preserve him from those deadly fevers. Issoudun, June 22, 1893

My Lord,

I am quite willing to go to Rome. I wrote to Fr. Jouët and Bishop Navarre asking them to so advise the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars and let me know by telegram if I should leave. Bishop Navarre has again met the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda, who agreed to postpone the appointment of a coadjutor. I shall forward Bishop Navarre's letter to you. I suggested that he put forward Fr. Bontemps' name, the pro-vicar apostolic of the Gilbert Islands, as coadjutor if this archipelago lost in the ocean is to be taken from us, and which would do us a favour. Fr. Bontemps is arriving in Marseilles at the beginning of July and I shall travel with him to Rome to deal, as well, with mission issues. I fear that the Archbishop of Bourges may become annoyed with us, which would add one more worry on the top of others. Fr. Delaporte's schedule, which was no more than a simple plan for the September 8 feast, greatly displeased His Grace, so I am told by Fr. Bardel, because he thinks that it is being introduced to the public without consulting him, and this is absolutely untrue. I sorted out the matter and it's no longer an issue. I wrote to His Grace asking his permission to buy this little house in the country as you suggested I should. His Grace replied through Fr. Bardel stating that as he didn't know our financial situation, he could not give us advice. I again wrote to him (Bardel) stating that our finances were in a healthy state, and if His Grace wanted to know the financial state of our Society, which I had forwarded to Rome at the beginning of this year, I was quite willing to make it known to him. At the same time I requested him to ask His Grace, since he could not himself preside at our September 8 feast, celebrated annually for 24 years now, if he could give me permission to invite some bishops in the surrounding area who appreciate our work. My letter has had no reply for 15 days now. Clearly we are not in favour with Archbishop Boyer. Is it because of our opponents? It wouldn't surprise me. Would you be kind enough to ask Fr. Auvrelle, who corrects the proofs for our Annals, to present His Grace with the programme for the feast, which is to be found in the next issue. We shall do nothing if His Grace so wishes. Respect for authority is sacred in my case.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

Despite our meagre resources at the present time when we are doing construction work, I am forwarding you, for the 5 months you have set out, from February to the beginning of July, 1,000 francs (about 3,361 euros), which I cannot easily afford but, nevertheless, I commit myself to meet your wishes. Every 5 months I shall continue, as long as I can do so, to send you 600 francs (about 2,010 euros). Pray for me as I badly need support.

I would not want to go to Rome, where my presence would nevertheless be desirable, without the approval of the Sacred Congregation. I asked Bishop Navarre to deal with this issue. The Bishop of Sinope is himself also willing to make the journey, but he would need to be invited by Cardinal Verga. I think his presence there would be very helpful to us.

As for a coadjutor in New Guinea, I suggested Fr. Bontemps to Bishop Navarre; he (Bontemps) is shortly due to arrive in France. If His Eminence the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda were willing to accept this nomination and, at the same time, relieve us of the Gilbert Islands, contact with which is so difficult, he would be rendering us a signal service since it is impossible for quite some time to provide even a basic contribution in personnel for these three missions. You should discuss with Bishop Navarre such an arrangement as one to be agreed on with Propaganda.

My Dear Father,

Rev. Fr. Superior (General) has asked me to reply to your letter of May 15 last. I am very pleased to do so since you are well aware, Father, how much pleasure it gives me to do so. Unfortunately, your letter treats issues about which I can scarcely keep my 'sang froid', and I am aware that my reply will be somewhat sharp and lively, but just the same, believe me Father, that it will not in any way lessen the regard I have for you and of which you are aware.

You refer then to colleges, novitiates, apostolic schools, etc. For all the foregoing, personnel are required, and such as have an aptitude for the work on which they are to engage, since otherwise they are in danger of experiencing a complete fiasco, or that kind of work which just limps along and of which we have far too much experience. The people available for the undertakings you dream about are not there. You do not indeed have anybody available for your own work at the moment when you are over-burdened, and if you look for someone to help there is nobody available. Fr. Meyer is absolutely needed in Salzburg since he is Novice Master and there is nobody at all to replace him.

Consequently, Fr., it seems to me that a few moments' reflection is enough to convince that we cannot at the moment begin any new undertakings. Since you were present at the 1891 Chapter, you will not be unaware of our Society's malaise. What is the explanation for it? The reason for it is the large number of undertakings for which we do not have sufficient personnel. This is the explanation for the need to over-burden people, to involve them when they are too immature, and giving them appointments which are not in keeping with their qualities and aptitudes. All this explains the discontent, the complaints, etc., etc., and you are yourself aware where such a state of affairs has led us. Our absence of personnel is so mounting that we are forced to make appointments such as those you disapprove of so forcefully at the end of your letter. Yet, despite all this, you give thought to new work to be undertaken by the colleges! Quite simply, I have to tell you that I cannot make sense of what you are saying! As for lay brothers, it is, perhaps, a little less of a problem to send you some, and the Very Rev. Fr. (General) will himself deal with this matter, but even here it's not that easy to find well-trained people who have sufficient solidity in the religious spirit to continue fervently in dependable regularity.

There it is, Fr., and presented to you without any hard feelings; I renew my sincere regards and my deepest respect in C.J.

F.X. Maillard, MSC.

PS: We continue to wait for Fr. Bontemps. Bishop Navarre, who has stayed, exhausted, in Marseilles for more than 4 months, is a little better, presently in Rome since the 8th of the current month.

Chevalier himself adds a brief letter:

Dear Fr. Tréand,

Fr. Deidier, given the favourable report by Fr. Delaporte (in Paris), has been unanimously appointed Superior of Glastonbury by the new Assistants at the first meeting of the Council. The Chapter delegates who chose Superiors of houses to be Assistants, didn't give any thought to the difficulties of replacing them since they must be aged 35 and in perpetual vows. Make the responsibility go higher. Cheerio, Father; oremus pro invicem.

Wholly yours; good wishes to all in C.J.

Dear Father,

I am delighted to hear that your retreat in Nancy was a success. I hope it will be the same in Besançon. Look after your throat and take care of it. Fr. Claude (Hériault, curate at St. Cyr) is pleased about his letter's successful impact. Today he is 'over the moon'. For the feast of the 68 regiment of infantry's flag, due to take place in the church tomorrow, he has decorated in great splendour the Saint Cyr college, with praise showered on him from all sides, and he is depending on you for a patriotic speech. He is deceiving himself. The cross from the Jerusalem Congress has arrived and it will make a marvellous impact.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Fr. Barral,

I sent you through the intermediary of Fr. Casas two weeks ago a letter from Fr. Jean-Baptiste Perriot submitting certain proposals to me. I asked you to return the letter to me letting me know what you think. I have had no reply. What is the explanation for this oversight?

I have heard just now of Archbishop Ordonez's death and the good will of Archbishop Gonzales for us. It was Bishop Segna, the secretary for special church affairs, who gave me this news.

Dear Father,

I am pleased to bring you a good recommendation in favour of Mr. François Rondet who is deserving of it in every way. During the two years he has spent with us we have only words of praise for his good behaviour, his character, honesty, prudence, etc. As for his son, René, we know him less well, having only seen him twice and but 2 or 3 days each time, but insofar as we can judge he seemed to be quite acceptable, of pleasant character, tidy, and attentive; in a word he seems to have his father's qualities.

If you would like to have more complete information or know the family background, you might write to the parish priest of Mehun since we knew nothing about this esteemed family before the father came to us.

Please accept my very best wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, July 5, 1893

Dear Fr. Ramot,

The present state of our Society should not, so it seems to me, create those concerns which you have made known to me this morning. Let us be responsive to the Holy See; whether it decides for or against us is not greatly important. As the mouthpiece of God we have to accept one way or the other what it decides.

And let us be careful about supporting anything being stirred up. On the contrary, our role is to calm people and impart a love of the Congregation to them, requesting fidelity on their part to it, being ready to devote oneself to the point of death for her as the mother of us all.

Please let not the Fathers of the Sacred Heart speak any longer to our young members about our problems, since the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars is working towards their elimination. Since several of our young confrères do not have to renew their vows until October 4, it is quite pointless to bring up this issue at the moment. In the first part of August I shall be seeing those concerned and speak to them; you need take no responsibility for this on yourself. I am about to go away for some days and I depend on your good will and support, since I am well assured that you will carry out the instructions I give you. Pray, pray greatly; the Sacred Heart and Our Lady will do the rest.

Cheerio, Father; be assured of my best wishes in C.J.

Have you received from Mr. Scalsi the indult from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars appointing Fr. Genocchi Superior of New Guinea? It is absolutely necessary if he is to exercise valid authority when needed and receive his confrères' vows, and which is independent of the powers which you could give him over your clergy...

As it happens, Father, in looking up my diary dealing with issues assigned to my stay in Rome, I find all the privileges...

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, July 7, 1893

Dear Fr. Jouët,

Archbishop Ordonez's death has removed a lot of the problems arising from the Quito issue. Since the Holy See wants us to stay in Quito for the time being, I believe that I cannot in conscience delay any longer in coming to the help of our two confrères who have the large parish of Sagrario as their responsibility. Their health will not hold out and we are faced with the likelihood of their becoming laid up, if not dying, from such a workload. I tried to gauge Fr. François Barral's feelings and he is quite prepared to go back to Ecuador. As he is aware of what is going on there, I think his presence would be needed there in order to enter negotiations with the new Archbishop, and with the government, so that we can be assured of a serious offer, stabilized and independent, such as was made over to us by the former Archbishop. It is absolutely imperative that we know as soon as possible what we are being held to in this quite serious issue.

Accordingly, be good enough to go and see Bishop Segna, the Secretary for Extraordinary Church Affairs, asking him to send me a letter with that understanding of which Fr. Barral speaks. This document is needed if we are to remain in Quito and for Archbishop Gonzales himself to become aware of what basis it is on which we must discuss the issue with him. As soon as the issue is set up and sanctioned by the Holy See I shall send on the necessary support. Since it is thought that my trip to Rome is pointless at the present time I give over the idea. We shall later look at it again. I still have the 20,000 francs (about 67,260 euros) to be presented to the Pope on the occasion of his jubilee, and which I can forward in the post at an opportune time.

Cheerio, Father; all good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, July 7, 1893

My Lord,

I was due to leave for Rome today, with the Archbishop of Bourges' approval, when the enclosed letter from Bishop Navarre persuaded me against travelling since at the present moment it would be pointless because, as he says, the issues are being continuously drawn out.

What's important at the present time is the lifting of the promise not to divulge, which Your Lordship imposed on the members of the Chapter, and the promulgation of the decree maintaining the former Assistants in office until the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars decided otherwise. You will be kind enough in your circular letter to remind us all of the need to accept without recrimination and wholeheartedly this decision by the Holy See which is owed our most absolute obedience.

Then you will challenge all of us to have a spirit of charity, unity and agreement, beginning in the first instance with prayer and then, based on Rome's wisdom, being given to dealing with issues weightily and with balance. You might also, perhaps, ask that the Sacred Congregation not be beseeched by new petitions, as so many did after the last Chapter, since this way of acting makes it (the Congregation) seriously ill-disposed to us.

You will judge for yourself, My Lord, what reasons you can put forward in explanation for the late promulgation of the decree issued on March 10. You might, perhaps, say that while hoping for a prompt solution, you thought that it might be best to have it held over and, having in mind as well that the Sacred Congregation at the present moment does not want to do anything too precipitately. Consequently, you are disposed to have the decision held back so that everyone knows what is entailed and obeys without reservation the administration set up by the supreme authority. Concerned that you may not have the decree, I am forwarding a copy to you.

I have the honour to be, most respectfully, Your Lordship's most humble and obedient filial servant in C.J.

C 18930714

Issoudun, July 14, 1893

My Dear Father,

I have received the accompanying circular from the Bishop of Sinope, Apostolic Delegate to the last Chapter. His Lordship has sent me this circular from Saint Die which is on his travel route, asking me to send it on to you and requesting that you acknowledge it in writing to the Saint Célestin minor seminary at Bourges. You will present this to your community together with the rescript accompanying it.

In order to expedite the resolution of the serious issues to which the Bishop refers, the Council considers it opportune, and in accordance with the Sacred Heart of Jesus, to prescribe a solemn novena of prayer in our communities to coincide with the reception of the present letter. The Council hopes that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, patron of desperate circumstances, will deign to look with mercy on our humble Society, devoted to honouring her under this new title. Accordingly, over nine consecutive days, in the evening, or another time which will be more convenient, there will be, with the Bishop's permission, Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament preceded by a special novena exercise, beginning with a recital of a decade of the rosary and the reading of the prayer appointed for each of the nine days in the little brochure titled: Novena of Remember Our Lady, after which the litany of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will be recited: at the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, the customary liturgical prayers will be sung, ending with the triple invocation: Domina nostra a Sacratissimo Corde Jesu, ora pro nobis.

If it is impossible to have Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, it will be sufficient to open the Tabernacle door, something which can be done without getting permission of the local bishop, and the liturgical prayers will be said before the exposed Blessed Sacrament, without there being Benediction.

During the novena all priests will offer a mass for the needs of the Congregation; those who are not priests will go to communion. Confrères are invited to offer the divine Heart other prayers and sentiments of reparation in order to reach a solution in keeping with the best interests of the Society.

Please accept, Father, this fresh assurance of my best wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The Bishop of Sinope's letter.

Saint Die, Vosges, July 12, 1893

Dear Fathers,

Following the report which as Apostolic Delegate I had to make about the elections arising from the last Chapter of your Institute, the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars sent me on March 10, 1893, a rescript requesting me to carry out an enquiry on the legitimacy of those elections, restoring the previous Assistants to their posts until it is decided otherwise. I do not have to request you to accept without complaint and wholeheartedly this decision coming from the Holy See itself. I do not wish, emphasizing this, to offend you by insisting on this since it would presuppose among you a lack of what is an essential and characteristic feature of all religious vocations: an obedient spirit.

However, in order to avoid the problems which are always possible in circumstances such as those in which you find yourselves, I have imposed secrecy on those among you whom I have interviewed. The investigation concluded, all the documents pertinent to it brought together and sent off, I was persuaded that a prompt decision would bring to an end the present provisional situation. I gathered from a most reliable source that the decision could be held over for quite some time yet and that's what made me decide on giving you information about the content of the March 10 decree.

Having been, in virtue of the mission confided to me by the Holy See, intimately involved with quite a large number of your members, I became aware of the reasons which led to the present problems. My conviction is that these problems will disappear quite speedily if each one forsakes his position in favour of the Congregation's general interest.

There are great resources for good in the Institute, something of which you are aware yourselves. So that these assets (talents) come to fruition, there needs to be much self-denial, and a spirit of sacrifice which accepts a setting-aside of prejudices and outlook in favour of a perfect union of hearts within a thrust towards an obedience which identifies, first of all, the Superior as not just a man with his qualities and failings, but someone in whom authority is invested.

You will make easy the role of the supreme tribunal to which your concerns are deferred if you wish to go along with it in presenting the uplifting picture of that paternal unity shown in being submissive to the authority which leads you. It is quite possible that this way of acting will be more likely and helpful in bringing about a favourable resolution to an issue which has been the regrettable occasion for lengthy and numerous memoranda which some individuals have sent to the Congregation, and of which the immediate effect would be to make it ill-disposed to you.

This call I make for peace and harmony is that of a friend concernedly appealing to you, being, as you are aware, as sincere as he is fair-minded. I place this communication under the material protection of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, as I ask you to accept me as your very devoted and warmly motivated servant.

+ Aug. Bishop of Sinope.

Contract between Fr. Chevalier and Mr. J. Daniel, Editor.

July 17, 1893

As between Fr. Chevalier, Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Archpriest, parish priest of Issoudun, acting in his own person as well as in the name of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and his successors, and Mr. J. Daniel, editor, and his successors, with an address of 76 rue Bonaparte, Paris, with agreement reached on what follows:

Article I

Rev. Fr. Chevalier grants for the time being to Mr. J. Daniel the exclusive right to edit, make, sell or exploit without limitation the six statues of whatever shape or size of which he has proprietorial rights:

1. The original statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, venerated in the Issoudun Basilica.
2. The modern form of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statue venerated in Rome at the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Church.
3. The St. Joseph statue, model and patron of the friends of the Sacred Heart, venerated at the Issoudun Basilica.
4. The statue of the Sacred Heart as shown in the accompanying snapshot and approved for our church in Rome.
5. An Ecce Homo of the Sacred Heart.
6. A Mater Dolorosa of the Sacred Heart.

All these statues are approved.

All these copies of six statues will carry the stamped seal: property of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, editor J. Daniel, rue Bonaparte, 76, Paris.

Article II

The agreement is drawn up to last nine consecutive years, beginning July 1 next, 1885. It will, nevertheless, be negotiable, without indemnity, according to the wishes of the two parties at the end of the first six years, and also a year after the re-opening of the Issoudun Basilica, notice being given, however, six months in advance, except for the Basilica's re-opening. If the agreement ends, all the statues in the shop must be sold or got rid of, before any new ones are made, and they will only be made insofar as they are requested.

Article III

If the agreement is disengaged from by one of the two parties, Fr. Chevalier must buy from Mr. Daniel:

1. The existing works and those agreed on by the two parties and the value of which has been set by experts.
2. The statues in the shop as valued by Mr. Daniel, but with a 30% discount.
3. If it is the sculptor who wants to disengage, the casts belong by right to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart who will pay half the price agreed on by the experts; in the contrary case the Missionaries will take possession at the price determined by the experts. At the end of an agreement for nine years, all the casts will be destroyed, unless the agreement has been prolonged by both parties. Fr. Chevalier will take the casts at the price fixed by the experts and the statues in the shop at the stated prices with a 30% reduction. It is to be understood that there will be only one cast of each model size as agreed between the two contracting parties.

Article IV

Mr. Daniel commits himself to pay Fr. Chevalier each year, six monthly, irrespective of the number sold, a contribution of 1,700 francs (about 5,380 euros), with respect to the six different types of statues. The first payment will be due on January 1, 1886, the second on July 1, 1886, the third on January 1, 1887, and such-wise until the final payment in July 1895, save for the disengagement according to the procedures given above, or when Mr. Daniel would pay what was agreed on during the following month.

As regards the re-opening of the Basilica, Mr. Daniel will in the year following the opening offer a special reduction of 10% on the amount which exceeds the average price of what was sold in the first three years (this with regard to the six statues).

Article V

Mr. Daniel undertakes to make a 15% discount in favour of Fr. Chevalier, and the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, on every one of the six statues sold, with the exception of those sold to Missionaries of the Sacred Heart living abroad, for whom special concessions will apply (beginning July 1, 1894, with a 25% reduction) - so wrote Chevalier in the margin of the contract.

Article VI

Mr. Daniel commits himself to provide Fr. Chevalier each year, beginning July 1 next, without charge, a statue of each model in Roman cardboard, half-coated, a metre in height. According to the wish expressed by Fr. Chevalier, these statues can be requested in one or other of the examples mentioned or in others created by Mr. Daniel, in keeping with the request made some months beforehand.

Article VII

Mr. Daniel commits himself to take 15% off each of the statues produced in his premises and whatever the size or material involved, in favour of Sacred Heart priests living in France or those living abroad as long as the request comes from them.

Article VIII

Fr. Chevalier will make it known that Mr. Daniel is the sole maker of the statues and will promote his business and its many products with vast numbers of Annals' readers. It will be found in one of the opening pages in every number of the French Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, published at Issoudun, as long as the present agreement holds, beginning with the first of July next. Mr. Daniel can himself write the text of his script for the Annals' editor who, in agreement with him, has the freedom to change the text. Any presentation (by Daniel) cannot go beyond half a page of the present format. As regards editions of the Annals in other languages, there needs to be a special arrangement between each house outside France and Mr. Daniel. The reduction, allowance, made will not be lower than 15%.

Article IX

Mr. Daniel commits himself to carry out the following at his own expense:

1. As regards the earlier model of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the following modification: raising up a little the Child towards the clouds, and placing him a little to the left, and set apart from the Blessed Virgin.
2. The plaster models of the Sacred Heart statue as in the accompanying photograph, as well as the Ecce Homo of the Sacred Heart, and the Mater Dolorosa of the Sacred Heart, as in the examples. The copies made will be submitted for approval to Fr. Chevalier, and Mr. Daniel will make the changes requested before commencing work.

Article X

Six months before the disengagement, or expiry of the present contract, the two parties will make an inventory of the casts and models in the studio. A copy of this inventory will be forwarded to Fr. Chevalier, or to those who are entitled to it.

Article XI

It is expressly laid down that where unwillingly the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart is put out of existence or expelled from France, and publication of the Annals forbidden, and also where it would arise that the statues themselves would be changed in format by the authority of the Holy See, Mr. Daniel will have no right to any compensation, but he will be entitled to sell the merchandise made and depicted in an inventory drawn up following these changes.

Where a fire or some other action destroys the models and casts of the statues, Mr. Daniel will be obliged to renew them at his expense within six months.

Article XII

Fr. Chevalier gives full authority to Mr. Daniel to prosecute, at whatever risks and perils, everyone given to forgery and counterfeiting who he will become aware of, or is made known to him by the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. To this end, Fr. Chevalier, by a separate act, subrogates Mr. Daniel as regards rights and procedures.

Mr. Daniel attests that the casts and models of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart are available in the following dimensions: 0.05-0.07-, 0.10-0.15, 0.30-0.40-0.50-0.70, 0.90-1m.20-1m.30-1m.40-1m.50-1m.70-1m.90; St. Joseph: 0.07-0.10-0.15-0.20-0.30-0.40-0.50-1m.00-1m.50-1m.90.

This agreement has been renewed for a duration of six or nine years as agreed above, beginning from July the first, eighteen hundred and ninety-four.

As of July 17, 1893.

To Father Albert Delaporte, MSC, Issoudun.

L 18930719

Issoudun, July 19, 1893

Dear Fr. Delaporte,

Thank you for your July 18 letter and the thoughts which underpin it. The peace and unity so sought and desired are easy to come by if each one, as the Apostolic Delegate wisely remarks, accepts without recrimination the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars' rescript and awaits patiently and prayerfully Rome's final decisions.

The good name of the suspended Assistants is in no way compromised, no less so the reputation of the elective body. Both groups have sent their letters or memoranda to the Apostolic Delegate; everything is in Rome; what more is needed? Let us leave the Holy See to examine at its leisure this whole matter, awaiting patiently its reply, assuredly confident in its wisdom, clarification, and impartiality, its reply becoming for us all the expression of God's will. If we are true and proper religious we shall accept in total submission, which is the only solution we want, and not to be had elsewhere. And if, which is something I cannot believe will happen, some refuse to accept the findings, they would be placing themselves in revolt against supreme authority, making themselves unworthy of being Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

For my part, and I am persuaded that all my dear confrères are of the same outlook, I subscribe in advance to all the Sacred Congregation decides. If it thinks that the Assistants appointed by the Chapter should continue in office, I shall thank God for that; if its judgment favours the contrary, it will find my accepting to the point of sacrifice and immolation.

You state, Fr., that I only want people who say Amen to everything I want, if not indeed to all my whims. Without bringing up here what that phrase could well mean, I defy you to prove it. While I have had Assistants working with me, and even before that, I have never undertaken anything serious without consulting them. I have always given way before the majority decision. You may ask any of them; provide one fact, just one alone, which is (was) significant. You add that I am plagued by the thought that my dismissal is being sought. This is totally wrong; I have never wanted at any cost to run the Society, and this is so factually true that I have offered to resign on several occasions. I would indeed, be very happy, before I die, to find myself with a wise and prudent successor, both pious and zealous, who would make all of us good religious, and contribute to the growth of our Society. There you have what I most sincerely want.

You moreover state that my excessive authoritarianism disheartens and discourages everybody. I have never sought or wished for anything other than the faithful accomplishment of our Constitutions and rules, and if I have tried to bring along those who were sluggish about this I do not think that I can be blamed for this before God. "You are headstrong," you write, "in taking too much on yourself in order to get results." I feel bound to say to you that I have never taken anything on without the approval of the Council. Would you be good enough to let me know what's too much, and I am quite prepared to forsake anything which is not for the well-being of the Congregation. One will never come across in me anything like systematic opposition, I can assure you. I only ask to have things clarified.

Since you seem to be conversant with everything the confrères are looking for, either reforms needed, or satisfying legitimate aspirations, or what steps to take in order to govern wisely, tactfully, prudently, in association with the Assistants, let me know quite frankly and I promise you I shall do so. I have been accused of many failures in administration, and always I have asked that they be pointed out to me; nothing has ever been said.

What I have noticed among quite a number in recent years is a spirit of unbridled criticism, even in the presence of younger men, directed at major Superiors when their actions are not in keeping with their ideas. This has been in many instances nothing less than scandalous opposition either to expressed wishes or orders given. The reason for this unhappy state of affairs, which we deplore, is to be found in a lack of religious spirit and the pursuit of one's own wishes, not elsewhere. The answer is to be sought in principled obedience and respect for authority. I am not asking for "heroic denial", but rather quite simply what our Constitutions ask of us all. You would appear, Father, to make me responsible for the break-up of the 1891 Chapter, as well as the results of the last one. This is deeply untrue, as I have often said to you, and repeat as something which cannot be gainsaid. Rome considered the Acts; I accepted, as I shall always accept, its decisions whatever my own personal views. What is the point of poisoning the issue once again? If, like your confrères, you seek the true good of the Society, and I do not doubt it, set out a memorandum under the eyes of God in which you will present all the needed reforms, whatever you deem to be helpful in restoring confidence, peace, unity, and we shall examine them together without prejudice, and once we have agreed on matters, and I depart from it, you will be in the right apportioning blame to me and denouncing me to any interested party. Let us at least try this out. I can assure you that you will have no resistance on my side. Nobody more than myself wishes that our Congregation prospers; I have spent 39 years of my life working for it; I have given myself over to the setting up of undertakings under the grace of God and the protection of the Sacred Heart. And it is at the moment when we could accomplish so much good in the Church that I find myself showered in bitterness by those very people whom I brought into the religious life and who, after God, owe everything to me. The life I have had to endure over a number of years has exhausted my forces; I feel that I cannot stand up to it any longer. If there is not the desire to acknowledge my contribution, let there at least be pity on my age so that I can go on to die in peace. I am not vindictive against anyone; I pardon wholeheartedly because everything which is going on is just chastisement for my sins. I ask the Lord to be merciful to me.

Assuring you, Father, of my good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, July 21, 1893

My Lord,

As promised I am forwarding a copy of Fr. Delaporte's letter to the Rev. Fr. Superior (Chevalier). I was unable to do so yesterday as the Reverend Father (Delaporte) was called by Archbishop Boyer to Bourges to discuss our problems, and he took this letter with him.

The Archbishop takes the view that, despite everything, Father (Chevalier) should go to Rome. The opposition party (among them Delaporte) has recently sent memoranda to the Pope himself and, consequently, the Archbishop thinks that one should go directly to the Pope and he (the Archbishop) will provide a letter for His Holiness. Your Lordship, who so kindly continues to be so keenly interested in our welfare, might like to continue praying with, and for, us since we need such more and more.

Things are rapidly getting worse and we are close to complete ruin if the good Master does not come quickly to our aid. What remedy will Providence have recourse to on our behalf? I have no idea, but as I see it, with fore-shortened vision, I can only find one solution: a break-up which would allow all the discontented to take off together and leave us in peace, making it possible for those who remain to revitalize the religious spirit in themselves. In this way, at least, all those who maintain that they no longer have confidence or good will are sent away, which effectively comes to this: cutting off the gangrenous part of the body which is eating it up and will lead to death if the amputation is not soon carried out.

Very Rev. Fr. Chevalier is awaiting the Archbishop's letter and is ready to leave (for Rome) straightaway, perhaps next Monday. In any event, My Lord, we shall keep you informed about what is happening.

Meanwhile, allow me to ask Your Lordship's blessing as I assure you of my deepest respect, having the honour to be your son and servant in C.J.

F.X. Maillard, MSC.

My Lord, (Bishop Marchal)

This trip to Rome comes at great cost to me and I only undertake it through obedience. What will come of it? The latest memorandum sent to the Pope 15 days ago was sent from Antwerp, the opposition using the services of Fr. Reyn. Archbishop Boyer has received a lot of letters criticizing me. They have no faith in you, and have recourse to the Sacred Congregation as being better informed. They want a break-up in order to get hold of all the members who share their views and found another society (which is precisely what Reyn did a little later). This is their aim. Their latest memorandum was sent to the Archbishop of Bourges who found it well presented, and sent it on to the Pope with a letter requesting the Pope himself to look at it and give his verdict on it. It's Archbishop Boyer himself who told me this, and this is for you alone.

I went to Bourges on Thursday at the request of His Grace. I noted in astonishment that all the senior parish priests (deans) were aware of our problems, speaking personally to me. Then the Archbishop complained to me about my parochial administration, saying that everything was being neglected in the parish etc., etc. It's unbelievable! I came back so upset and annoyed. I do believe, Your Lordship, that your intervention in Rome is necessary in order to defend yourself and to support our cause which seems very shaky.

Please accept my good wishes and deepest regards.

To Fathers Albert Delaporte, MSC, Célestin Ramot, MSC, and François Morisseau, MSC, ex-Assistants General.

L 18930724

Issoudun, July 24, 1893

Dear Fathers Delaporte, Ramot and Morisseau,

If the remedy you put forward can bring our problems to an end and restore confidence among us, I willingly accept it and am ready to make all the sacrifices needed for the well-being of the Congregation. If one wants Rome to take this into consideration, it has to be the Archbishop of Bourges, our Bishop, who will put it forward, having heard two or three of the signatories of your letter. That's why I advised Fr. Morisseau to go and discuss the matter with His Grace tomorrow. I also think that it will be necessary to inform the Bishop, the Apostolic Delegate (Marchal), who is conversant with the issue. In your meeting with Archbishop Boyer care must be taken to steer clear of all blame and accusation and simply state that people feel the need for unity in the common interest, drawing a veil over all the past. Meanwhile, Fathers, your latest letter is replete with exaggerations and erroneous statements which I am in duty bound to correct to avoid any further misunderstanding.

1. You state that it is I alone who is responsible for the present problems and you offer as irrefutable proof the statements I made to the Bishop of Sinope and which gave rise to his second report which led to the whole problem. According to you, the Bishop's first report simply conveyed the Chapter's decisions. But this is a seriously mistaken statement which the documents themselves contradict. Besides the actual report, the Bishop gives his own personal observations on the activities of certain Chapter members, on prior arrangements and the quality of the newly-elected which the deplorable goings-on of the 1891 Chapter and other activities brought to mind, as well as the complaints and threats which followed, drawing him to conclude that the elections took place in a spirit of opposition to the Superior General. Following his meetings with several members of the Chapter, the views shared with him, and letters received, he became more firm in his conviction. This explains his first report and its conclusions.

2. The Bishop was painfully taken aback by the involvement of several scholastics in the Fr. Klotz issue, and the letters he received inspired by some Chapter members, two of whom would become Assistants. He had proof of all this to hand. He put me under obligation to assign blame to them for their behaviour and state publicly that: "the scholasticate was under the immediate jurisdiction of the Superior General, and the Director should do nothing outside the special regulations which apply to scholastics, or the common observances which, like all religious, they must observe". These are the exact words I used as I kept a copy of them. And you astonish me, Fathers, when you have me saying that I stated that I was the immediate director of the scholasticate. If this falsifying of my words was voluntary, it would be unpardonable. You are not any more correct where you attribute to me the setting-up of partisan supporters which you identify as a group carrying tales. These are the ones among our young men who thought of getting together in order to become aware of and avoid their drawbacks, stimulate themselves in virtue, praying for the Society and its members, give good example, tackle the spirit of criticism, denigration and insubordination, which was rampant among them, making known to me in writing their worthy project which I could only approve of and encourage, and yet you have the audacity to blame me for this! In fact, in little colleges, major and minor seminaries, one comes across these worthy institutions, and you find it disturbing that young religious should have recourse to these measures for their own betterment and for the common good! And if some of them, witnesses to wrong undertakings, report this concernedly and confidentially to their Superior, you identify them as a group given to tale-telling. What do you make then of the Constitutions, p43, number 77, where it is stated that all our religious "...must undertake that the Superior should be informed of their mistakes and misdemeanours by whomsoever will have become aware of them, or come to know of them outside confession"? It is sad, you will have to agree, that the Assistants have so little of a religious sense in them that they can ignore on this issue the Constitutions and then go on to blame those who make it their duty. Is not this encouragement of a bad attitude and support for rebelliousness? When what happened in the dormitory or on walks was brought to my attention, I asked the supervisors to let me know what went on. Some 5 or 6 of our young disaffected sent a telegram to me complaining that as religious they had no need to be under surveillance, and that it was injurious to do so (a threat to their dignity), etc. Is this acceptable? Can you say that one should not be concerned about their training? I am aghast, and it is my duty in conscience to remedy this deplorable state of affairs as forcefully as possible. I shall do so, no doubt in a prudent manner, but with the grace of God I shall strive to do so even if I am again to stir up storms against me. How did these young men accept the statement I made to them on the orders of the delegate, that the scholasticate was under my immediate control? By revolting!!! And instead of ordering them to stay quiet and remain calm, as was your duty, some of you invited them to your rooms, helping them to draw up a memorandum which they wanted to send to Rome and having them stay with you until 11pm or midnight, contrary to the rules. I had to inform the Apostolic Delegate about all this as he had instructed me.

3. There followed the first meeting of the Council, and in what mood did you find yourselves? Discontented feelings scarcely concealed, an inclination to impose your views in an authoritarian and self-righteous manner quite perceptible in every word you uttered. One of you arrogantly assumed for himself total independence in the exercise of authority and maintained that he should directly receive all the postal correspondence for the Sacred Heart, as if the Superior General, who is always by right the local superior by virtue of the customary regulations still in force, was of no consequence and couldn't exercise any authority, even when the Apostolic Delegate made him aware of the contrary obligation. Another maintained that Rome must be immediately asked for indulgences on behalf of those young confrères not yet 35 years of age so that they can be put in charge. They will all approve of this. And when I remarked that the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, having grown tired of our appeals in this respect, no longer wanted to accede to these requests, as it was with myself, this led to a veritable outburst. A third individual left it to be understood that Petites Oeuvres should be set up as soon as possible in houses abroad. When I replied that the Sacred Congregation was opposed to it given the present circumstances of our Society, and that I had been refused permission, there was further disappointment. A fourth individual, in an authoritarian tone of voice, put forward the proposal that the personnel in the Rome house should be changed forthwith and more suitable men made available. On noting that I asked for time to think about this, I again had to cope with disapproving remarks.

I shared with the Bishop of Sinope the outcome of this meeting, as requested by him. Did he refer to all of this in his second report? I think so, since you say so. But to go on and say that it is on this second report that the Sacred Congregation exclusively bases its rescript is quite simply wrong, very wrong indeed. But you say that a consultor at the Sacred Congregation confirmed it to you. I do not question it but, then, he did not have to hand anything other than the second report, not the first, nor those other documents which were made available to others. The problems which plague my life do not date from the present time, my dear Fathers. Going by what you say all the problems come from my side, and you are the innocent party in every respect. You see the straw in your brother's eye but not the beam in your own. Quid autem vides festucam in oculo fratris tui, et trabem in oculo tuo non vides? I accept that I have made mistakes, but there are also many on your side. That's what Rome said to Bishop Navarre; there the truth lies; let us, then, in mutual good will ('entente cordiale'), and with the support of the Sacred Heart, rid ourselves of disharmony, and work together, hand in hand, for the good of our dear Society by being good religious, regular, humble, serious, submissive to all the recommendations of our Constitutions.

Please accept my best wishes in C.J.

To His Grace Jean-Pierre Boyer, Archbishop of Bourges.

L 18930725

Issoudun, July 25, 1893

Your Grace,

I am grateful to Your Grace for having brought to my attention the complaints addressed to you from Issoudun about my administration of the parish. You will allow me, Your Grace, in the interest of the truth, to describe the situation as it is and you will judge for yourself.

Issoudun, since the great revolution (1789), when so many scandalous happenings involving priests, monks, nuns, went on, has always been considered one of the most notorious morally problematic towns of the Berry (department). When I studied at the Bourges major seminary the students didn't wish to be appointed curates there. It was nothing to be surprised about! A kind of curse, since (18)93, had always hung over this unfortunate town (13,500 people).

When, in 1830, Fr. Crozat of blessed memory was appointed parish priest, he found there neither the catechism taught or religious instruction of any kind being given. Three men and five or six hundred women, including their children, made their Easter duty. Weekly communion was unknown before the arrival of the sisters from Bourges, who established themselves there at this time, and it was with astonishment that their approach to the altar table was received. (Even if only on Sundays! St. Pius X's 1903 decree was still very much in the future.)

Nine or ten priests and monks married there, some to nuns as the parish registers make clear, and, remaining on in the place, we come across their descendants every day.

For a long period of time there was only one curate, then there were two, but never more, and they had also to look after one or two neighbouring parishes, as well as the town, the hospitals and homes. There were no chaplains or priests available to help them out. When, in 1872, Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne thought it appropriate in the interests of Issoudun to hand over to our Congregation the care of the parish, appointing me parish priest, much needed to be done. The church was virtually an empty farm house. I suggested, with the approval of the building committee and the Archbishop, that it should be reconstructed. The town council was totally opposed. I made a list of subscribers who contributed 130,000 francs (about 416,186 euros) and the costs came to 210,000 francs (about 672,300 euros). I put in 50,000 francs from my account. The Minister for religious matters, following quite a number of problematic issues, agreed to give us permission, and so it is that today, Your Grace, we have one of the largest and most beautiful churches in the diocese, only the façade and the sides needing to be seen to.

Instead of two curates I have six with myself, four of those responsible to me and the other two have each only 600 francs a year (about 1,926 euros) available to them from the parish. Three (priests) are continuously responsible for looking after the girls and the others take care of the boys.

I set up right from the beginning of my ministry a catechetical class for youngsters from seven to ten years of age and, as well, ongoing catechism for the young girls and boys. These catechism classes are well patronized. Besides, I introduced a Sunday mass for all the youngsters of the lay schools and others; the church was packed with them. We examine them in public from the pulpit. The Bishop of Sinope has come along several times to be part of these examinations and he can tell Your Grace what he thinks about it. I also organized a mass each Sunday exclusively for the men and there's preaching, as at all the other masses. This mass is quite well patronized. We also have an undertaking for the young who come together each day under the leadership of one of our confrères. I likewise set up a workshop and the women of the town come there to work once a week on behalf of the poor and on church decorations as well; there is another workshop run by the Bourges' sisters for young girls. As regards schooling, following the laicization, I set up that of the Brothers of Christian Doctrine whose numbers come to more than 200 youngsters, and the sisters look after virtually the same number, despite the uncontrolled hostility of the radical municipality; there is a hospice in charge of the Bourges' sisters for all the little youngsters, of whom there are very many. It is scarcely necessary to add, Your Grace, that these schools are free of charge and for the greater part are my responsibility. We have, besides, our Sacred Heart school for middle-class youngsters.

Despite the difficult times (for religion) which we are passing through, almost one hundred men made their Easter duty, without counting the soldiers, and more than 200 youngsters from first communion to 15 or 16 years of age. Easter communions for women and young girls surpassed a level of 16 to 17 per cent, coming at least to 2,000. I do not refer, Your Grace, to the Saint Vincent de Paul Society nor the Sisters of Charity who visit the poor in their homes, nor the Associates of the Blessed Sacrament, the Holy Rosary, Christian Mothers, Children of Mary, St. Blandine for domestic workers, who greatly please us.

As for civil marriages, there are scarcely any; we maybe have two or three in the year, and yet it is unusual not to have them validated in the course of the year. In the early years of my Issoudun ministry, do you know how many former invalid marriages we validated? 71. As regards civil burials, we can have at least 4 or 5 each year and if there are not so many of them, as in the case of the civil marriages, it's not the fault of the Freemasons who, for many years, have had a lodge in Issoudun called the Gauloise, greatly supported by the town council, which makes every effort to increase the number, offering to do everything free of charge, etc., etc.

You will have become aware by now, Your Grace, what state the parish was in when we took charge of it in 1872 and all the efforts we made, and are making each day, to improve it. Your Grace can draw his own conclusions having been presented with the facts, and I do not think I am mistaken about what I have put before you.

And when someone ventures to write to Your Grace that I am neglecting the parish and that the work is failing under my responsibility, where before nothing was happening, it can only mean that at the present moment all hell is being let loose on me. I would very much like to see my detractors in my place 21 years ago; we would have witnessed something marvellous! If Issoudun ever returned to what it was like, with a parish priest and two curates, it would not be long in taking on its former state, having new sun-worshippers just like it had 25 years ago. One could compare them. For the rest, Your Grace, you may draw a comparison with the other large parishes of the diocese who found themselves in the same situation as ourselves 21 years ago.

Following the harsh experience of which you are aware, Your Grace, it adds to the sensitivity I feel that Your Grace brings up a further element himself to the accusations directed at my administration. We have never, my confrères and myself, spared ourselves in our commitment in giving ourselves tirelessly and demandingly, and without financial reward, to the well-being of Issoudun. Your predecessors, Your Grace, who have seen us working over many years, could bear witness to this if they were still living. Their support, engagement and protectiveness were of great help to us in the midst of our work, our struggles and trials.

Next there arises the hospice issue. When it was decided to end the chaplaincy, I sent one of my confrères there each day to celebrate the Eucharist for the good sisters and the sick. When the closure of the chapel was brought up, I said to the administration that I would provide a priest who would not charge for his services; my offer was turned down. With reference to the angry, unjust letter which I was supposed to have sent to these gentlemen, it's pure invention. I am sorry, Your Grace, that the individual who brought up this complaint did not furnish you with a copy; it cannot be other than some woman who is sick-minded and whose head is full of malice. If Your Grace thinks it appropriate to let me have her name, I shall soon be able to inform you of the facts.

Fr. Auvrelle has written to me to say that from now on we must send the proofs of our Annals directly to Your Grace as you want to look at them yourself: this is an honour for us and a further guarantee of assurance. Our Annals come out each month in 20,000 copies and there are more than 18,000 subscribers. They are well received and appreciated if we are to go by our extensive correspondence. Each day we get at least 100 or 120 (supportive) letters. The devotion of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, spread throughout the world, and whose cradle is at Issoudun, is one of the most beautiful blessings of the land, comprising today more than 18 million associates with signatures in our registers, and this figure is right as we have checked it more than once. And if we add all the other names enrolled in our centres, Rome, Spain, America, England, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Australia, Ecuador, we would, in all probability, be close to 30 millions. This year we registered more than a million appeals and 5,831 acts of thanksgiving; we sedulously preserve in our archives the letters so testifying.

Before our basilica was closed, more than one hundred thousand pilgrims visited it each year. We have had gatherings of 30,000 at a time. Over recent years the pilgrimage has begun to pick up; last year, on September 8, the feast of Our Lady of the Scared Heart, we had 8 or 10,000 people.

I permit myself to honour Your Grace by forwarding to him some pious books which I have written, to which I add a copy of the Constitutions, recently approved, and a copy of the Constitutions for the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I place myself at Your Grace's feet requesting your blessing and asking you to accept my respectful good wishes in C.J.

B 18930725A

Issoudun, July 25, 1893

Dear Fr. Delaporte,

Your letters which are so violently argumentative and error-prone are not those of someone who sincerely wants peace. To what purpose does one return again and again to things which are in the past, decided, and from which one has moved on? You use your pen to be abusive. In everything you write your all-too-easily perceived purpose is to lay the blame for everything on me, making me responsible for all the problems which have come about in our Society, and taking no account of our expulsions, the enforced departure of our Assistants, approved by Rome, and the unfortunate circumstances which we went through when you were not even a member of our Society.

You come back again and again to the 1891 Chapter, without even being aware what its purpose was. The Sacred Congregation's decree only authorized it for one purpose alone: that of making a choice between our former Constitutions and the new ones, the text of which I had sent to Rome. I have the rescript here before me. Was the meeting, then, not to be taken up with this specific issue? You are aware that the contrary was the case. There's the primary, fundamental error and source of all our later problems. Here one alights upon very irritating issues. In what way was Fr. Jouët treated? Like a scoundrel! He was outrageously got at from all sides. And Fr. Piperon, without regard for his virtues, qualities, the contribution he had made, was showered with insults, treated as an ignoramus, a man of no significance, lacking capability, etc., etc., and all this from confrères greatly indebted to him; one would have to say that all hell was let loose. If you have forgotten these scandalous goings on, I have well remembered them in detail, and a good number of others besides. Bishop Couppé was completely taken aback. I was myself strongly disapproved of by competent authority for failing to suspend immediately this so-called Chapter. As for Fr. Maillard whom you would appear to despise, this is an injustice which cries to heaven, since he has more intellectual, moral and religious qualities than those confrères whom you are placing on a pinnacle, being judicious, very pious and committed, a man observant of the rule, self-sacrificing and far-seeing. If we had more religious like him we wouldn't be where we are.

I said, and I repeat it here, that Fr. Jouët has exceptional qualities as procurator, making it possible to have our Society well regarded and appreciated not alone by the Cardinals but by the Pope also who has said so to myself several times, and it is you, despite the significant services coming from him on your own behalf, who was among those most hostile to him. I advised him not to go to Rome (immediately after the aborted Chapter), but he went and consulted the Archbishop who said it was his duty to return (to Rome). You see how you recreate and shape history!

How can a serious man maintain that two quality subjects were crushed at Chezal-Benoît because of all that was going on there? This is how you rail at and play down authority when it should be your duty to support it. If you choose to ignore these serious facts which have occurred and are, unfortunately, well proven, at least keep silent. And you go on to add, with a cynicism which I don't wish to qualify, the phrase being unworthy of a religious, "the one who looks after the cows in Salzburg". How is it possible to qualify someone who is house bursar and in charge of the lay brothers' novitiate as "the one who looks after the cows"? You, yourself, elected Assistant at the last Chapter, dare to use such language! As for the other individual, expelled for exceptionally serious reasons, you excuse him although he himself acknowledged his wrong-doing, and you have the presumption to accuse the Superiors and Rome for this, examining and judging the case on its merits; this appals.

You again return to the 1893 Chapter and the postponed elections, when you attribute to me an unbecoming role, presuming to say that it was I who dictated the two reports to the Apostolic Delegate. This is an outrageous assertion in face of the Bishop of Sinope and myself. Happily the documents prove the contrary. Your warm reception at the office, and the little talk full of joy and contentment which I delivered to all the Chapter members in my room after the meal, should prove to you that the contrary is the case. But not at all, you are all as pure as angels and I alone am the culprit!!! The Lord, who knows the truth, will judge.

You assert, Father, that a letter of yours coinciding with the proposals in favour of peace and conciliation was sent to the Apostolic Delegate. This is as baffling as it bowls one over. I should like to think that the other Assistants did not share your views, since I am given to think they would be more reasonable and balanced.

The administrative proposals which you map out for me are exactly what I want to follow myself if, as I hope, the proposed solution is accepted.

Your behaviour, Father, makes me all the more pained since justice and a sense of appreciation should make it a duty for you to act otherwise. Your outrageous administration at the Mercy (the house of the order in Paris before Delaporte and other members of his Congregation joined Chevalier's MSCs), from which you were forced out, should, if you had any sense of shame, make you hesitate about criticizing in such violent fashion your new (accepting) Superior. Nothing justifies your insults and outrageous remarks continuously directed at me over the past 4 or 5 years. At the very least some form of considerateness should have made it a requirement for you to preserve at least neutrality in all our difficulties if you did not at all wish to be on my side.

When departing the Mercy and not knowing where to turn or go, I took pity on you in those unfortunate circumstances. I accepted you among us despite the contrary advice of high ecclesiastics, giving you 1,000 francs (about 3,360 euros) to pay your debts, and brought you to Rome at our expense, also exempting you from the novitiate, accepting you too in our Council membership despite the opposition raised by a number of my confrères – and then appointing you Superior in Paris! How have you reacted to all these overtures? By turning against me in an unrelenting fashion, trying to destroy me in every possible way, spreading an unhealthy spirit and outlook in the Society and making yourself the standard-bearer of the discontented. Before God you have a grave responsibility for all the problems confronting us at the present time.

I pray that God may lead you to a better way of thinking. I draw a veil over the past; if I made mistakes I would want to make up for them through a wise administration. I strive for peace and unity and I shall do my utmost to bring this about by following the path of our Rules and Constitutions: I only want to be helped and advised in keeping with God's spirit. Obstacles will not be put in the way by me, of this I can assure you. But please let us forget the disastrous, sad, past and be united in our efforts and good-will to do better in the future and make our little Society prosper. We can do so under the patronage of the Sacred Heart and Our Lady.

To Bishop Auguste Marchal, Apostolic Delegate, Bourges.

Issoudun, July 26, 1893

My Lord,

Your circular letter, so good, wise and balanced, gave rise in our different houses to great excitement as if it had been waited for in respect to the sentiments which animated it. Several Superiors had written requesting the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars to approve the elections of the last Chapter, stating that it was the only efficacious way of bringing about peace and unity.

The elected Assistants would appear to have arrived at better, second, thoughts, regretting the way in which they behaved at the first Council meeting, stating that they wanted to work with me to re-introduce the religious spirit, have the Constitutions upheld, and help me without any systematic opposition to make our dear Congregation flourish. This is all I wanted. They sense that Rome will always support authority and that it's better to abide by Rome than resist it as regards what is reasonable and acceptable. They promised me this in such sincerity that I am drawn to believe them. That's why, at their request, I put my name at the bottom of their appeal if you approve of it. If, nevertheless, My Lord, you think it appropriate to send it (the statement) to the Sacred Congregation, and I do believe that one can have recourse to this means of bringing about reconciliation, since they have come to regret matters, you might put forward this doubt. A religious, who left a society in which he was Superior General, and was forced to leave because of his inept administration, Fr. Delaporte, could he be Assistant in the new one he has entered? The regulations as cited by the canon lawyer, Grandclaudé, Volume II, Section III, page 431, support the opposing view and here is the relevant text: "Plura Jure canonico interdicta sunt religiosis licite transeuntibus ad alias Religiones: redduntur inhabiles ad prioratus et officia quaecumque; nec exercere possunt curam animarum, ut constat ex Clem. I<sup>o</sup> h.t. Nequeunt etiam vocem in Capitulo habere, saltem quoad electiones ut docent communiter C.C." It is not to be doubted that the Sacred Congregation will reply other than according to the meaning of the text and, consequently, I would ask you to propose in my name Fr. Piperon, who is known to you for his devotedness and qualities, in place of Fr. Delaporte. This would be a great boost for the administration. Fr. Piperon, having been with me almost from the beginning, and been my Assistant always, would be very acceptable to Rome.

As for Fr. Guyot, aged 66, his illness and ignorance of the language make it impossible for him to be Procurator in Rome and he should, therefore, be ignored when presenting your petition. Fr. Carrière, presently at Chezal-Benoît, aged 36, a doctor in theology, could be put forward; these two concessions would compensate for the presence of the other Assistants (not really wanted by Chevalier). Yesterday Fathers Ramot and Morisseau went to meet the Archbishop of Bourges to discuss matters with him. Archbishop Boyer informed them that he had no role to play in our internal affairs once an Apostolic Delegate had been appointed. Please, My Lord, do not consider for one moment handing in your resignation; your involvement is of the greatest value and significance to us. Our Antwerp priests in their memorandum complained that you were personally involved in our issues and your reports and verdicts could not be impartial. That's all they have to complain about; they are not compelling. Meanwhile, My Lord, if you think it worthwhile that I should go to Rome with the petitions on behalf of these gentlemen, and your supportive observations, I shall go there as soon as possible.

Please accept, My Lord, my respectful good wishes in C.J.

My Lord,

Following the loyal, supportive, explanations presented to Father General, and which absolutely exclude any thoughts of systematic opposition, while affirming our sincere good will to act conscientiously coram Deo (before God) in keeping with the requirements of the Holy See, and in fidelity to the Constitutions, as well as the duty to respect the office of Father General when carrying out the functions committed to us by the February 11, 1893, Chapter, we are at one with him as regards the views coming from our houses in different countries: the disintegration which threatens our young Congregation if the difficulties which rock it are not promptly eased. Whatever happened in the past, a debate about which can only serve to inflame matters, the only efficacious remedy would appear to be acceptance and support for the February 11, 1893, Chapter, and in particular the elections which resulted from it.

Fr. General wished us to send, respectfully, this request to you. Our signatures are a guarantee of the sincerity of our statements. We are particularly supportive of the 4th elected member of the Council, Fr. Lanctin. Fr. General will testify that our thinking is in keeping with his, our wishes his wishes.

We have, otherwise, asked the principal pastor of the diocese (the Archbishop) for advice, who, given the discretionary requirements of the situation, would appear to hope for and even consider indispensable a prompt and peaceful outcome.

Please accept, Bishop, our deep regard and respectful good wishes.

Issoudun, July 27, 1893

Dear Father,

You will appreciate that it is impossible for me to write myself directly to the Sacred Congregation to propose a remedy in the situation and requesting that it be accepted.

1. I would be placing myself in open conflict with the Apostolic Delegate.
2. I would belittle his authority.
3. I would be humiliating him in an underhand fashion, which it would be entirely inappropriate for me to do.
4. I would have no success in Rome where I would be all the more severely judged.

If you believe that the maintenance of the Assistants appointed by the Chapter is the only way to bring about peace and unity, here in my view is what you might do: write a petitionary letter to the Bishop of Sinope along these lines, more or less.

My Lord,

From what is reaching us from the different houses, we are firmly convinced that the disunity which characterizes us would go away if the election of the last Chapter involving the Assistants was maintained and supported. Undoubtedly there are faults, serious faults, on both sides, and we all accept this, bitterly regretting it. It was thought that we were all systematically opposed to Father General, inserting ourselves in his administration in order to impose ourselves on him. We want to assure you, My Lord, that such is not the case and we want to help him and accompany him within the meaning and purpose of our Constitutions. Our thinking is certainly not that of overthrowing the established order, or changing the undertakings set up by the previous administration, which we would wish to respect by continuing to work together in mutual accord, consolidating things and, if possible, making them thrive yet more.

We believe, My Lord, that neither Your Lordship or the Sacred Congregation would have anything to regret as regards our endeavours. It's not ambition which draws us, since our role as Assistants is one of great responsibility and, uniquely, in the best interests of our dear Society.

Be kind enough, My Lord, to give our petition the seal of approval and support, as Apostolic Delegate, and no doubt the Sacred Congregation, greatly annoyed by our differences (and splits) will confirm our request which will restore peace and unity.

It is with the full approval of Fr. General that we send this request to you. If Your Lordship approves, which we do not doubt, he will supportively add his signature to it. He may even wish to take it to Rome if he considers that it might be helpful to do so.

While awaiting a favourable reply we have the honour to be...

I think this is the only way forward if we want to reach a satisfactory result.

My Lord,

At the request of Fr. General I send you herewith some thoughts on the remedy being proposed by Fathers Ramot, Delaporte and Morisseau. These reflections, which I have put before Father General some hours ago, relate to his signature on the group letter (immediately above, Article 2187) which Your Lordship received this morning.

Fr. General, who is only concerned about restoration of peace and harmony and who, I understand, would be very happy to see matters settled amicably in order to avoid closure of houses and the expelling of religious, something which in particular is always painful and sad for the fatherly heart, and he has, I repeat, signed this request; before doing so he asked me to read the letter (see above Article 2185) which he had written to Your Lordship and then to give our view of the situation.

You will appreciate, My Lord, that being so personally involved, it was very difficult for me to state categorically that we should not pursue this course, all the more so when the proposal by Fr. Chevalier in his own letter was more or less what I myself put forward on the occasion of the last Chapter (February 1893). I am happy, then, to state that if the true solution to the problem is to be found there, I would wholeheartedly accept it. Both issues are part of your submission but, following more mature consideration, I would have to state:

1. (There is no number 2) That half-measures satisfy nobody and achieve nothing; consequently, and even if the Congregation was to accept the arrangement requested, it would achieve very little, since on the one hand it is likely that the adversarial party would not see it straightforwardly, being constricted by its own ideas, and, as well, this would not safeguard Fr. General, given that the opposing group would always have a majority in the Council. Moreover, even on the supposition that this were to satisfy everybody and give rise to peace superficially, would such a procedure save the Society? I think not. The issue is very deep and extensive. In particular there's no longer any discipline in the scholasticate. Leaving aside some rare exceptions, these young men no longer concern themselves with their spiritual betterment. Their biggest concern, preoccupation, is to find out what is going on, and they find fraternizing with them complacently indiscreet priests who tell them all they know. Following from this criticisms become stirred up, together with fault-finding and violent recrimination. It has reached such a stage that two or three of our younger members (students) from other houses, on passing no more than a few minutes with the scholastics, have said that they would much rather leave the Society than come to do their studies in the scholasticate if the attitude prevalent at present remained there. And, nevertheless, the scholasticate has within it the men of the future and, truly, I cannot imagine a future for our Society when I think of religious such as these who, after some years, will be the same people involved administratively. It does not seem possible, as I see it, to come by some serious developments without a weeding-out; and those who need to be sent away are quite numerous. And what will be the result of these expulsions? Simply proposing such a procedure would stir up a storm among the majority of Assistants, since it would be on them the responsibility falls for the deplorable state of the scholasticate.

I shall offer but one example in support of the foregoing. The present director of the scholasticate (Jules Vandiel), in my humble opinion, and I do believe I am not at all making a harsh judgment, is deserving of expulsion as much, if not more so, than the individual who was put out of the Society a year ago (F.X. Klotz; see above passim). Yet he (Vandiel) is one of the most highly regarded priests of the Society by the February Assistants (of 1893).

All these observations, and many others which I cannot embark on without over-lengthening this letter, lead me to the deep-seated conviction that we shall not save our dear Society other than through amputation. Anything which is attempted otherwise will only serve to prolong the problems. One might think for a moment that the problem has disappeared because the wound seems to be healing, but the virus remains present in the blood and one day it will appear somewhere else. I appreciate that it will be costly to arrive at this solution, but the more delay there is the greater the problem. In a brief space of time it will become impossible to remedy the situation since through the influences (attitudes) enforced on members the rot will spread. Strength of character of an exceptional quality is required to face up to a violent current and very soon the number of religious who remain faithful to their calling and authority will be scarcely there at all, or equivalently so.

Such, My Lord, is my assessment of the situation. If I am favoured in coming once more to burden Your Lordship with these reflections, it is only for the reason that I perceive that the honour of God and the goal of many is at stake. Personally, I would be very pleased to find myself at a distance from all this, serving the good Lord quietly and without the thousand and one preoccupations which have so exhausted me since I became involved with administration.

Maillard was involved in general administration from February 3, 1891, when appointed in place of the dismissed Guyot. He was not elected at the February 11, 1893, Chapter, but Bishop Marchal, Apostolic Visitor, restored him to office in March and he remained in office until the following August when Archbishop Boyer, by now Apostolic Visitor, appointed new Assistants.

Once more accept, My Lord, my deepest regards, as I have the honour to be Your Lordship's most humble son and servant in C.J.

F.X. Maillard, MSC.

PS: Fr. Píperon, to whom I read this letter, tells me that he entirely shares my views.

Chevalier now adds as an accompanying letter of the same date.

My Lord,

If I signed the letter by Fathers Ramot, Delaporte and Morisseau, it was only after consulting Fr. Maillard who said to me that, given the context in which it was set out, I could well do so, Fr. Píperon being away. What this good Father (Maillard) writes to you today is more or less there already in your twofold report. Your conclusions, so it seems to me, are more practical than those put forward by Fr. Maillard.

In order to decide on a break-up, there should be a fresh enquiry and interrogation; there should be agreement on sharing of assets, etc. This would entail, in my opinion, the death of our missions and become a scandal with an impact on the whole of Europe, demeaning our Society. Leo XIII, who makes every effort to reunite the branches separate from this Society, as with the Trappists and others, would not be happy with this proposal (Maillard's). If the request of these gentlemen is sincere (Ramot, Delaporte, Morisseau), as I am led to believe, it seems to me that it would, perhaps, be better to try this approach. If you do not find it explicit enough you might, perhaps, write to them stating that it is not enough to promise in writing that they will take no initiative to destabilize the established order of things, leaving, that is, the novitiate and scholasticat beside the mother house, with the houses abroad continuing to send the French Petite Oeuvre the 3 upper classes, as Rome made incumbent on the Superior General, and even the Pope himself. From their reaction you will see for yourself whether or not their actions are sincerely motivated. Such precautions need to be taken. I believe that you will easily get the support of the Sacred Congregation in seeing to it that Fr. Delaporte does not become an Assistant and that Fr. Guyot is not Bursar General, for the reasons I have made known to you. Fr. Píperon would replace the first-named and Fr. Carrière the second; the latter, educated in Rome, speaks Italian perfectly and thereby we would be much more assured. This remedy, so it seems to me, is to be undertaken since, otherwise, we could be staying quite a long time yet in the regrettable state of affairs in which we find ourselves. The consultor who passed on to the opposing faction the contents of your second report, was seriously lacking in professional secrecy and deserves to be seriously reprimanded, since he has written to them stating that the Sacred Congregation's rescript is only based on this second report. From which the conclusion is drawn that I am the one who is the cause of all this trouble in making you aware of their opposition at the first (new) Council meeting. This made them all the more opposed to me.

Issoudun, July 28, 1893

Dear Fr. Delaporte,

Since you were appointed to our Paris house, you have written many letters complaining against, and blaming, myself and my administration, particularly so after the 1891 Chapter. Your criticism was bitter and your complaints bloody-minded at times; I gave ear to everything you said in order to profit from it. Allow me then for my part as Superior to let you know all I would like to say, uniquely motivated to clarify matters and do something in your favour.

I do not challenge or overlook your intelligence, your ability to think and communicate, or your other qualities both natural and acquired. I would like to draw your attention to some other issues. I have always noted that you are lacking in memory and awareness for matters in the past which you all too quickly have forgotten. Do you not recall, Father, the circumstances in which you found yourself when I accepted you among us? No longer able to stay at Mercy where you had created havoc through your inept administration, and where you had alienated everybody, you had no option but to take yourself off without knowing where to go.

Through considerateness, something the highest ecclesiastical personages and serious-minded people reproached me for doing, I took pity on you because of your age and misfortune, holding my hand out and accepting you among us, going on to provide you with a thousand francs (about 3,360 euros) to cover your debts and meeting, in addition, the expenses of your trip to Rome. Since you did not want to enter the novitiate, I made you exempt and Fr. Jouët, whom you have denigrated so much, got permission from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars for you to take your perpetual vows straightaway, having spent only three months in one of our houses. And how did you react to all those manifestations of kindness and support? By being most bitterly ungrateful, in taking violently against me, blaming with bitterness my administration in the presence of confrères, supporting the rebelliousness of young religious, making yourself the standard-bearer of their supposed grievances. I have proof of this to hand. The basic requirement of due acknowledgment would call for you to remain neutral at the very least if you do not want to take the side of authority which the disaffected were trying to set aside in every possible way. But not so, being flattered led you on a regrettable course. Wishing to be friendly and supportive, thereby gaining an unhealthy popularity, you gave ear to and further fostered the bad attitude and divisions in the Society, much more so than you think. Your very age, your personal problems and your past should have led you to map out another way of acting. In practice you are totally lacking in religious spirit. How did you run our Paris house? Without order or discipline. So much so that today everything must start from scratch there. In order to please some of your friends I had you called into our Council meetings. That was one of my biggest mistakes. Being neither prudent nor discreet, you made our decisions known to anybody who saw you on intimate terms. Then you did not hesitate to boost your vote when it was to your advantage although your name was nowhere part of our deliberations. You are an unconditioned utopian setting everything in motion and commotion, unable to finish anything, and yet you are the one who presumes to take up the rod and strike with wincing blows all who have always been committed to the Society, and for which you have done nothing whatsoever! Despite all of this you had the presumption to accept the office of Assistant when offered to you at the last Chapter, as indeed you so wrote to me quite recently, and which, indeed, Canon Law makes it a requirement to refuse as a former religious of another community. "Plura, jure canonico, interdicta sunt religiosis licite transeuntibus ad alias religiones : redduntur inhabiles ad prioratus et officia quaecumque ... Nequeunt etiam vocem in Capitulo habere, saltem quoad electiones, ut docent communiter C.C." (Grandclaude Jus. Can. T. II ; sect. III ; p. 431.)

All I have here put to you, my dear Father, does not in any way diminish my respect and regard for you.

With best wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Document presenting a synopsis of the opposition's views.

August, 1893

1. Following the January 1891 Chapter, because of serious problems and frustrating debates, the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, having been made aware of everything that had taken place, and knowing that the Chapter called to decide as between the new and old Constitutions had finished its remit, forwarded the decree dissolving the Chapter. Several members of the Chapter, believing themselves to be insulted as to their dignity and rights, protested most vehemently against this decree. They forwarded to Rome petition after petition signed by a good number and insisting on recalling the Chapter with the same members in attendance. Rome refused, and this gave rise to more discontent, as well as strong feelings against the Superior (Chevalier) whom they unjustly accused of being opposed to them and, yet more strange, they went so far as to call for a break-up (of the Society), not having any qualms about separating themselves from the mother's womb, she who had given them birth, nourished and brought them up.

Chevalier also wrote, but blotted out: this petition was put to the young priests to sign in order to win them over to their cause.

When the break-up of the Chapter was formally notified, before the members dispersed, the Superior, by way of avoiding problems all too easy to foresee, asked and enjoined the dissatisfied group to keep secret all that had gone on. They, however, went on to take no notice of this, and nothing was more urgent for them than to inform their subordinates and, as well, calling down all sorts of recrimination on those who didn't share their views. This serious error and prejudice became the explanation for the bad attitude and approach which has been characteristic of recent years.

2. The Sacred Congregation 'ad cautelam' as a precautionary measure, provided a legal overlooking (sanatio) in the case of certain irregularities which had arisen in good faith during the (Society's) expulsions, particularly as regards professions which had taken place after 1883, those involved free to accept or withdraw from the Society. The Superior went to Antwerp with his first Assistant, as time was limited, to accept the statements of those willing to remain, but found himself faced with systematic opposition. The over-looking, re-endorsement, would not be accepted, so it was stated, until it was made clear that a new Chapter would be called comprising the same members as before.

I overlook the secret contact entered into with Rome, unknown to the Superior, invoking a certain lawyer priest who encouraged their resistance, falsely telling them that the Sacred Congregation would be in their favour, and that a rescript in this sense would shortly be sent to them. I could well have told them on arrival from Rome, where I had met the Pope and the Cardinal Prefect of the Sacred Congregation, that I knew the contrary was the case, but I was not listened to. It was the same when I took myself to Tilburg and Salzburg.

3. On the advice of the Secretary of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, Bishop Sepiacci, and Archbishop Marchal of Bourges, it was decided that the novitiate in Tilburg should be transferred to Issoudun or its vicinity. Fr. Pipheron, First Assistant, went to Holland fully authorized to bring our young members from there. The dismissed Superior of that house (Tilburg), Fr. Klotz, in the presence of the Antwerp Superior and two of his staff who happened to be there, vehemently protested and every effort was made to prevent this happening.

4. The Congregation's Council, not having enough competent professorial staff to provide all the classes in our apostolic schools (sic, not Petites Oeuvres), took the decision to bring the three final classes from our Northern houses (in Holland and Belgium) to join the Chezal-Benoît students. This very wise proposal only served to stir up loud protests, giving rise to blind and deaf opposition which affected both the teachers and youngsters of these countries and echoed as far as Rome, giving rise to a bad attitude and feeling which lasted quite a long time.

5. The directors of the Chezal-Benoît college believed before the Lord that they should send away for serious reasons some youngsters who had come from the North. What complaints and discontent did not these expulsions give rise to in our Antwerp and Tilburg houses, also Salzburg! There was no hesitancy in attributing the blame harshly on those who took this initiative.

6. The Sacred Congregation, at the repeated request of the Superior General and Archbishop Marchal of Bourges, who thought that thereby the discontented might be appeased, agreed to have a new Chapter convoked under the presidency of His Grace as Apostolic Delegate. On the Archbishop's death, the function was transferred to the Bishop of Sinope. The Delegate, in keeping with the confidences of which he was the recipient, the different memoranda, as well as the impartial enquiry he made among the Chapter members, sent a report to Rome, and the Sacred Congregation taking note of it proceeded to suspend from office the Assistants and (new) Procurator General, provisionally reappointing the previous administration. This initiative provoked a great number of protests, of which Rome has an unhappy recollection and concerning which it could not fail to lay blame in its latest rescript appointing our distinguished Archbishop Boyer as Apostolic Visitor.

7. I am overlooking the protests and all the blame levelled on the occasion of the well-merited expulsion of Fr. Klotz and the support given to him when he appealed to Rome.

In the light of all these facts, straightforwardly presented, and quite a number of others which I leave over mentioning, I ask anyone who professes to be impartial if the title of opposition is justified or not?

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Article 2191

To His Grace Jean-Pierre Boyer, Archbishop of Bourges.

L 18930800A

August 1893

Report on the transfer to Chezal-Benoît of the three upper classes from apostolic schools at Issoudun, Antwerp, Tilburg, Salzburg, addressed to His Grace Archbishop Boyer of Bourges, Apostolic Visitor of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart Congregation.

Towards the end of June 1890 Fr. Chevalier, Superior General, put a project to his Council of bringing together the three upper apostolic school classes from Tilburg, Antwerp and Salzburg to Issoudun. Archbishop Marchal, of saintly memory, strongly favoured this proposal considering it to be necessary for the general well-being of the Congregation, proposing to make available for this purpose the former college building of Chezal-Benoît. But already Fr. General, unhappy about the attitudes being manifested in the Northern houses, had taken the decision to gather around the mother house all the formation undertakings involving student members of the Congregation, moved to do so by the recommendations of the highest authority. The following are the main reasons which prompted his decision and they would appear to be of the highest importance:

- a. that of working in a uniform manner towards the intellectual and moral formation of students destined for the Congregation. Without such a serious formation the way lies open to divisions in the future.
- b. making our youngsters accustomed as early as possible to the spirit of sacrifice by taking them away from their families and country.
- c. strengthening studies, necessarily incomplete, given the shortage of suitable teachers in the special courses for the higher classes.

By bringing together in the same place the three upper classes, one reduces the number of needed teachers by three-quarters in the four houses. Up to now we are obliged to appoint the teachers from the newly-professed, scarcely out of the novitiate, and thereby placing an obstacle in the way of their religious formation. With a foundation in Chezal-Benoît we can have the greater numbers of our young men engaged in the study of philosophy and theology.

This proposal, unanimously approved by the Assistants, was put into operation in the month of October that same year, 1890. The experience of the past three years indicates that it was a good decision. The attitude of the youngsters is excellent, liking the Congregation and being drawn to their vocation. The studies have become sharper and stronger. Of the seven students who took the baccalaureate examination, six were successful, and four of them merited distinction. It has to be said, however, that our confrères in the Northern houses, whose schools have decreased by half, cannot accept such a justifiable measure. These houses, it has to be said, have lost something of their significance and prestige. But Fr. General and his Council at the time were persuaded that the general good dictated such a decision as the most appropriate in this particular instance. Several expressed concern that the decision would discourage the supporters of our Petite Oeuvre and lessen considerably the contributions made in favour of our Northern houses' apostolic schools. The financial takings from these houses over the last three years should have eased any such fears because the takings are at least as much if not more than those of the preceding years.

At the last meeting of the Council one of the Assistants proposed that the students should not be brought this year to Chezal-Benoît, but rather come together, for example, at Antwerp, adding that this decision would be a powerful way of calming people and a token of good-will to the disaffected. This proposal was not so accepted by Fr. General and his First Assistant, being convinced that such a proposal was a measure likely to counteract what had begun with such excellent results at Chezal-Benoît.

The best way to bring about the peace and unity so badly needed is not to be had by way of successive concessions, but rather in being respectful of, and submissive to, the decisions of the Superiors, as well commended by His Holiness Leo XII. The remedy for the problems damaging our Congregation is wholly to be found therein.

Piperon wrote the report as far as this; Chevalier now takes over.

You have said to us, Your Grace: can we, all of us, and for good, accept without reservations this sweet obligation!? If Your Grace thinks it would help towards pacifying matters to leave the 3rd year class with those objecting, even though everything is in readiness to receive them at Chezal-Benoît, then we shall wholeheartedly go along with this. For us obedience comes before all sacrifice. This concession granted will certainly draw our Northern confrères to make claims next year to the second class, and then the rhetoric class will follow. This is what they propose. Fr. Reyn admitted it to us. And then we shall be encountering the very same problems we are facing at the moment, and which I feel I must bring to Your Grace's attention. Whatever he (the Archbishop) does, will be well done.

Two years ago the Secretary of the Sacred Congregation, Bishop Sepiacci, said to me that "...we are giving too much emphasis as regards development to our Petite Oeuvres and that it is absolutely imperative to hold back on this because our young men becoming excessive in number would constitute a danger for the Society. Accustomed to living in their own country they wouldn't want to leave it, creating thereby a break-up." And he went on to add that "...the Antwerp, Tilburg and Salzburg houses have already made this request, which is quite objectionable. Act in keeping with your Constitutions which lay it down for you that you take in some well-selected youngsters." I forwarded this decision to our Northern confrères who did not give it any consideration on the pretext that their resources were flourishing, whereas the Antwerp house is still 300,000 francs in debt, Tilburg more than 100,000 and Salzburg at least 200,000. I haven't stopped telling them to make the lessening of their debts a primary consideration, but my advice served no purpose. Only Your Grace can make an impact on them and make it an obligation on them to lower each class at most to ten youngsters, and this already seems too great a number to me.

Your Grace will see what he can do.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

L 18930801

To the Cardinal Protector of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.Undated; likely before August 21, 1893

Most Eminent Lord,

The undersigned, Assistants to Fr. Chevalier, Superior General of the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, humbly ask Your Grace to be good enough to accept favourably these observations about the problems in which their Society finds itself. It is eighteen months since these regrettable issues surfaced at the Chapter held in January of last year. Since then we have had a great deal confidentially said to us, and listened to many grievances from our appreciated confrères, as well as paying careful attention to issues having a bearing on the interests of our Congregation. We believe that in this way we have come by a detailed knowledge of the outlook and needs of the Society. Despite the real depression existing at the moment, we are all fully hopeful that the divine Heart of Jesus will truly make us profit from this trial since despite everything he does not, quite obviously, give over blessing us.

There are among us precious qualities looking towards the future, in particular at the moment when, under the General's impetus and in keeping with the advice of the Sacred Congregation, we have brought the novitiate near our mother house and presently containing thirty or so novices, and the scholasticate which holds a larger number, and there are the upper classes of our juniorate which have nearly seventy students preparing for the novitiate. All these members seem very well motivated to us and the vast majority of them are seriously vocation-loving. Do we not have here, Your Grace, the seeds of growth which promise abundant fruit? We are convinced of this and so is His Grace, the distinguished Archbishop of Bourges, who has often so expressed himself to us and who is greatly interested in our well-being.

We would also add that those of our confrères who stirred up problems at the last Chapter have little by little come round to a better, more positive, way of thinking and are now greatly anxious to see the Congregation prosper, and to which they are committed. We have express guarantees that all were prepared to accept the Sacred Congregation's rescript confirming Fr. General in office and legally overlooking irregularities which had arisen in the Institute.

What all look forward to, and we with them, is that the Superior General calls as soon as possible for a Chapter under the presidency of the Apostolic Delegate. Our confrères wish, as the Constitutions prescribe, that a General Administration be elected at the Chapter.

Your Eminence we are morally certain that in abiding by the safeguards put forward by the Archbishop of Bourges, a Chapter meeting can take place without causing problems and have a most satisfying impact, since the Superiors will more easily govern knowing that they have their subjects' confidence. Most Distinguished Lord, in presenting this humble request to you we have only one purpose, that of bringing peace and harmony to our Institute presently in turmoil, and in this way contribute towards the Church's well-being by adding to the number of apostolic evangelical workers.

Whatever form Your Eminence's decision takes, we shall respectfully accept it, as we remain Your Grace's submissive sons and most humble servants.

My Lord,

I am pleased to return to Your Lordship my letter to the Pope with the additions which you kindly suggested. I hope, My Lord, that your approval will have a successful impact on His Holiness, being one hundred times more effective than my words and any memoranda I would send to him.

Please accept, My Lord, my deepest regards as I have the honour to be Your Lordship's most humble and obedient son in C.J.

Issoudun, August 5, 1893

Most Holy Father,

Father Jules Chevalier, Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, Bourges Archdiocese, France, humbly prostrate at the feet of Your Holiness, is pleased to set out what follows: serious problems have come to the fore in the said Society over a number of years.

Here, forthwith, is the reason for it: noting that religious discipline was falling off in our Northern houses, I felt it my duty to make serious complaints to the Superiors. They were very unhappy about this. At the same time the General Council of our Institute on the advice of our venerable Archbishop of regretted memory, Joseph Marchal, decided unanimously to bring to France, near the mother house, the upper classes of our different apostolic schools. This decision was taken for very serious reasons:

1. We were short of members capable of being teachers.
2. We felt the need to provide all our young men with the same formation and spirit (outlook).
3. It had become necessary to get rid of that spirit of exaggerated nationalism growing in those young men who felt they need never leave their country, something not acceptable in a missionary society whose aim it is to spread the love of the Sacred Heart as far as the ends of the earth.

This endeavour which seems so prudent, praised indeed by Cardinal Sepiacci of venerated memory, and which Your Holiness himself approved of in 1891, when I had the honour of an audience, this proposal, I repeat, displeased the Northern houses' Superiors who thought that this way of acting lessened the importance of their respective houses. And it was under the impact of this discontent they came to the Chapter which opened in January 1891. This Chapter was a stormy one and the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, informed about what had gone on, dissolved it by decree, re-establishing the preceding administration.

Several delegates, feeling that they were victimized in the exercise of their rights, have not given up on their campaign against this decree, placing the responsibility for it with the Superior General and his Assistants, conveying from that time onward to the Sacred Congregation many bulky memoranda against their Superior General, in which are to be found calumnious accusations against him and his administration. Besides, they called for, incessantly, the convoking of a new Chapter made up of the same members (as those at the previous one); the Sacred Congregation refused to accept this proposal, and from this further discontent arose, blaming their Superior unjustly and unfairly for this refusal. From then on they unceasingly fomented division among the Society's members, having recourse to dastardly and calumnious defamations to draw people to be defiant, and even defiantly hostile, to their Superior General. One or other individual went so far as to lay blame with the Sacred Congregation itself.

Before such a vicious attitude which was prevailing in an institute to whose development I had consecrated almost my entire life, I thought, having waited two years, and with the hope of doing what was best, that the remedy for the problem might be found in convening a new Chapter. This was also the view of Joseph Marchal, the Archbishop of Bourges, who was aware of all our problems. His Grace, consulted by the Sacred Congregation, replied in the same sense. The Chapter was approved of, but on condition that it be presided over by the Apostolic Delegate, and only concern itself with elections, the votes of the members to be forwarded directly to the Sacred Congregation which on this occasion reserved the right to judge and peruse matters. All was done accordingly except that Archbishop Marchal, the appointed delegate, had died (just previously), being replaced by his brother, and auxiliary, Bishop Auguste Marchal, titular Bishop of Sinope and Vicar Capitular of the diocese.

The Chapter took place on the 11th of February last, and immediately the proceedings were forwarded by the Apostolic Delegate to the Sacred Congregation who added his own assessment of the Chapter and the newly-elected. On the following 10th of March a rescript of the Sacred Congregation, forwarded to the Bishop of Sinope, suspended the elections and restored the previous administration, requesting His Lordship to investigate the manner and circumstances of the election.

This new initiative by the Sacred Congregation, far from satisfying the discontented, only made them more so. They blamed me for having the second Chapter's Acts suspended just as they accused me of having collapsed the first. I don't know what purpose they have in mind, but since the promulgation of the decree they are actively engaged in bringing over to their side the youngest priests and even scholastics. They attempt, either directly or indirectly, to disengage these young men from their Superior General, attempting to sew in their minds defiance and disregard for authority. Again memoranda have been written, and sent either to the Sacred Congregation or to Your Holiness. For the rest, the investigation – carried out conscientiously and impartially by the highly regarded, clear-thinking, Bishop Marchal, Apostolic Delegate – clearly presents the outlook and attitude of the opposition.

Regrettably, Most Holy Father, I am deeply unhappy that having worked more than 38 years towards the foundation of this Society, which I love more than my life itself, that I see it in dire peril; at the very moment when our dear Institute should be producing the fruits which we would be right to expect from it, the enemy of all that is good is sewing corrupt seed in the father of the family's field.

Here is a brief summary of the personnel and undertakings of our Society: 90 priests, 105 scholastics, 92 lay brothers, 60 novices and more than 250 youngsters in our apostolic schools hoping to become Missionaries of the Sacred Heart when their time comes. We have 14 houses in established countries and 2 apostolic vicariates in mission countries where 45 of our confrères devote themselves courageously to evangelization of the natives and where already the results are most encouraging.

I founded a Society of Sisters, called Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, who are developing in a manner which could not be foreseen. Already thirty of these admirable sisters are combining their efforts with those of our missionaries in the Oceania islands.

The Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which I began at Issoudun and which, through the good dispositions of Your Holiness, was then set up in Rome at our Piazza Navona church, went on from there to spread itself throughout the world under the impetus of our little Society.

All these undertakings would appear to be seriously compromised by the problems afflicting us and which have been stirred up in recent times by the perverse attitude of certain confrères. Consequently, I tearfully beseech Your Holiness to be good enough to provide a remedy for these afflictions. The least of your children expects a full resolution from our august paternity, and he will accept in a fully submissive way and with deepest appreciation the remedy which Your Holiness graciously proposes. It is on the advice of our distinguished and well-loved Archbishop Boyer that I have put together this little memorandum which His Grace will be responsible for presenting to Your Holiness, and I myself will go to Rome to receive the advice which Your Holiness would want to share with me.

Council Meetings, August 6, 19, 24, 1893

In attendance: Fr. Superior General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Maillard.

Brother George refused permission to go home.

1. Brother Georges van der Velden asked, because of his health, to go home, but it was thought that his health could be restored in the scholasticate just as much as with his family, and in any event he was with his family a little while ago during his military service. There is no serious reason for him to go home now and if he persists in asking he will be asked to leave altogether.

Fr. Giovanelli given permission to visit his father.

2. Fr. Giovanelli, whose father is continuously laid up, asked permission to visit him during the holidays, and it was granted.

Brother Eberleen accepted for perpetual vows.

3. Brother Eberleen, teaching in Salzburg, having requested acceptance for perpetual profession and been refused on the advice of his Superior, has now, following further explanation from Fr. Hartzler, been definitively accepted at the meeting on the 24th.

Brother Schall accepted for final profession.

4. Brother Schall, also teaching in Salzburg, at his request and following favourable reports from his Superior, has been accepted for perpetual profession.

Brother Adam and others accepted for final profession.

5. On the favourable recommendation of Bishop Navarre, present himself at the Council meeting on the 24th, Brother Adam was accepted for final profession. Brother Adam has been professed for seven years and is more than 30 years of age, as are other brothers in New Guinea who next year if not now will fulfil the same requirements of age and probation as Brother Adam.

Fr. Pourquier admitted to first vows.

6. Documentation on 19 novices, one of them, Pourquier, a priest, was considered, the latter asking to be professed next October. From 19, 14 were accepted, they are:

- a. Fr. Louis Marius Pourquier from the Marseilles Diocese, born August 12, 1865.
- b. Brother Ernest Pierre Marie Guillebault, Nantes Diocese, born June 12, 1870.

- j. Brother Matthias Baumann, German, born June 18, 1874.

- k. Brother Paul Léopold Guillaume Cziezikowski, German-Polish, born March 28, 1874.
- l. John Grogan, English, born April 24, 1876.
- m. Jean-Marie Eraud, French, born November 23, 1873.
- n. Jean Louis Labre, French, born June 19, 1873.
- o. John William Maher, English, born June 5, 1876.

Brothers Rutten and Stetterer held over.

From the other five novices two were held over because of lack of positive details in their regard, these being Brothers Guillaume François Rutten and François Joseph Stetterer.

Three, Angelini, Hannigan and Kicken, sent away.

Three did not offer sufficient evidence of piety, mental aptitude, health: Augustine Anthony Angelini, Thomas Hannigan, Jean Joseph Kicken.

Brother Wittman accepted for renewal of vows.

7. At his request, and with the favourable report of his Superior, the lay brother Michel Wittman from Salzburg was accepted for renewal of his three-yearly vows.

Nothing is allowed to get in their way, per fas et nefas (in idiomatic English: by hook or by crook!). Fr. To Bishop Auguste Marchal, Apostolic Delegate, Bourges.

Rome, August 11, 1893
32 Sapienza St.

My Lord,

I am here in Rome since Tuesday. The complete dossier of our affair was in the Sacred Congregation's files; by order of the Holy Father it was taken out today and attentively examined.

Yesterday I went to see Cardinal Verga who informed me that he couldn't meet me because the Congregation was involved in looking at our problem. This was the only reply I had. I then went to the Vatican asking for an audience with the Pope. His private secretary, Monsignor Angeli, told me that he would be pleased to arrange an audience for me and would let me know the date. The opposing group from Issoudun and Antwerp has recently forwarded memorandum on memorandum to challenge the complaints made against them and insisting that the elections at the last Chapter should be upheld.

The Archbishop of Bourges, who has received quite a number of complaints from the opposition, also advised me to go to Rome immediately and meet the Pope, for whom I would provide the requisite explanations. I asked him to provide me with a recommendatory letter. "No," he said to me, "I prefer to write directly to Leo XIII to let him know of your arrival and requesting him to give you an audience, and I shall tell him to make clear to you himself the remedy needed to bring about peace."

Yesterday Monsignor Angeli told me that in the morning's mail there was a letter from the Archbishop of Bourges, but the Holy Father was as yet unable to read its contents. What is in the letter? I don't know. In my interview with Archbishop Boyer, His Grace seemed to favour the complaints of the opposition. I do hope the details with which he was provided by me have helped to clarify his mind! I shall keep you up to date. I am like St. Lawrence on the grid-iron. Pray for me.

I have the honour, My Lord, to be with deepest respect Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Dar Fr. Vaudon,

I received your letter in Rome, where I have been since Tuesday with Fr. Morisseau, visiting the house and offering His Holiness the good wishes of our little Society on the occasion of his jubilee. We are presenting 20,000 francs (about 67,250 euros) to him in the name of our Society.

I await our audience and we shall quickly take the route back to France. The heat is unbearable. Fr. Bontemps is with us accompanied by the two natives. Nothing new here. Everybody is well. Take care of yourself, Fr., I hope your course of treatment at Vichy will do you good. See another doctor if you think it might be helpful. My good wishes to Fathers Guyot and Lanctin.

Rome, August 14, 1893

Your Grace,

Monsignor Angeli kindly received me this morning, informing me that the Pope read with great interest Your Grace's letter and my accompanying memorandum. "His Holiness," he added, "is perfectly aware of all the problems which are affecting you, admires your Society, has a great regard for all the good it does, and has made known to the Sacred Congregation the solution which he thinks is the most appropriate. Be at ease. I shall let you know as soon as possible the date of the audience." I shall use the occasion to offer 20,000 francs to the Pope, which I collected to mark his pontifical jubilee.

From the Vatican I went to meet the Secretary of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, His Grace receiving me very graciously, informing me that two decrees were to be sent out at the end of this week, one to Your Grace the other to the Bishop of Sinope. I did not ask what the contents were, but in the office I gathered from a secretary that the role of Bishop Auguste Marchal had come to an end and the Holy Father had invested you with all the necessary jurisdiction to bring about order, unity and peace among us. I am delighted, Your Grace, with this resolution of the issue; it is the happiest outcome we could envisage! As soon as I have had the audience I shall leave for Issoudun, hoping to be there next Sunday.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

From Fr. A. Yenveux, Chaplain at the Sacred Heart, Montmartre, to Chevalier.

Rome, August 15, 1893

Dear Father,

In respectful confidence I wish to draw on your charitable good-will in helping the advance of perpetual, universal, adoration, initiated at Montmartre, and laying claim already to 67 episcopal approvals and close to 3,000 affiliated churches. Heartened by the requests which are reaching us from all over the world, and particularly so arising from the Holy See's gracious good-will in granting all affiliated churches a plenary indulgence on the day they have adoration in common with Montmartre, and moved as well by the consideration of the evils which threaten society and call for very special remedies, we decided to look for support to all the vicariates and apostolic prefectures. Those who have already contributed tell us that they hope to gain from this coming together a most fruitful outcome in their apostolate.

In order to make more easily available the invitation sent out to the different missions of your Congregation, and aware of your zealous concern for the glory of the Sacred Heart, we are drawn to ask you if you might take it upon yourself to pass on to those in the different missions our appeal. We shall forward to you the literature intended for those in charge of these missions, with the work manual, and some comments added by you to these letters would assure their success. Bishop Livinbac (a White Father, Bishop of Pacando since 1883) has taken it upon himself to write to the different missions of his Congregation and also the Superior of the seminary for foreign missions in Paris, and is prepared to forward letters for the different missions of his Society, having first sealed them. I hope you can render us, or rather the Sacred Heart, a like service. Being responsible for dispatching these letters, may I ask you to be kind enough to let me have the addresses of the different heads of your missions to whom these letters of invitation can be forwarded.

With respectful good wishes, I have the honour to be in the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary.

A. Yenveux
Chaplain at the Sacred Heart

Chevalier in reply:

Answer and tell him that we shall gladly undertake adoration on the first Friday of every month, during the day only, and on the 7th of September each year from 7am until 8am. Give the addresses of Bishops Navarre, Couppé and Fr. Bontemps.

Rome August 16, 1893

My Lord,

It wasn't until this morning at 11 o'clock I met the Pope in private audience; he didn't want any of my confrères accompanying me. He was somewhat tired. He had been fore-warned of my arrival by Archbishop Boyer. His Holiness was completely up to date and informed by the Sacred Congregation about our problems as forwarded by you and, as well, he was aware of the memoranda sent by the opposition group and, no doubt, the letters from the Archbishop of Bourges.

When I entered the room His Holiness said to me: "Oh it's you Fr. Chevalier; I am aware of your problems; I know that there are trouble-makers in your Institute, individuals who are critical of authority and spread a carping attitude. Things cannot go on like this; one must be an obedient religious or no religious at all. As the Bishop of Sinope, the Apostolic Delegate, is continuously laid-up, I am appointing your ordinary, the Archbishop of Bourges, as Apostolic Visitor with plenipotentiary powers. It's he who I make responsible to oversee everything, to be firm and severe, sending away from your Society all those who do not wish to be submissive. Today more than ever authority must be respected, and especially so in religious institutes. Go to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars where a letter will be given to you which I have written to the Archbishop of Bourges and which you will hand to him. He will discuss with you how to go about organizing matters. A letter for Auguste Marchal, Bishop of Sinope, will also be handed to you."

Leo XIII then spoke to me about France and the opposition directed against his teaching by the 'Legitimistes' and the letter he had written to the Cardinal of Bordeaux.

The 'Legitimistes' was the name given after the 1830 Revolution to the supporters of the older line of the Bourbons, and its last descendant, the Count de Chambord, opposing the July monarchy and, then, the second empire.

I then left, greatly comforted, but before doing so I offered him 20,000 francs from our little Society (about 67,250 euros). I then went to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars where the secretary, most kind to me, gave me a letter for Bishop Boyer and another for Your Grace. I leave this evening and will bring them with me. I expect to be at Issoudun on Friday at mid-day. I am in a hurry to get away as the heat is atrocious.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Issoudun, August 20, 1893

Dear Father,

The letter you wrote to me in Rome came back to me this morning in Issoudun where I have been since Friday.

Your journey to Vichy was pointless. I handed Archbishop Boyer on Friday a letter from the Pope and a decree from the Sacred Congregation, approved of by Leo XIII, appointing our Archbishop Apostolic Visitor with plenipotentiary powers from the Holy See to bring our issues to a head as he judges à propos. The Archbishop sent me a copy of the decree, together with the procedure he intends to follow. This outcome, so quickly carried out, will calm people as I believe everyone has confidence in Archbishop Boyer's impartiality.

I had a private audience with the Holy Father which was very uplifting. Leo XIII did not hide his displeasure, nor that of the Sacred Congregation, with regard to the numerous memoranda forwarded to Rome and the results it was hoped they would serve. "All this," he said, "proves that the religious spirit and submissiveness are weakened in your Society, a Society which I like because of the good it is called to bring about. It is necessary that these qualities return at all costs. That's why I bestow all our powers on Archbishop Boyer. All must accept without recrimination the measures he considers appropriate."

Issoudun, August 21, 1893

My Lord,

I am back (from Rome) since Friday and not very tired. Before I left Rome I sent you the details of my audience with the Pope. Leo XIII was extremely kind. He told me that all the memoranda of the opposing party were proof that they neither had a religious spirit or one of submissiveness, and they must be either straightened out or seen off.

The Pope, as I informed you My Lord, has appointed the Archbishop of Bourges as Apostolic Visitor with plenary powers, but the elections which took place at the last Chapter are void, with the former Assistants continuing in office until Archbishop Boyer assesses the situation and, if à propos, appoints new Assistants. What measures will he undertake? I don't know. He is very much influenced by the opposition group who would appear to place all their expectations in him. I do well believe that he will be hoodwinked by more than one. I left Rome on Wednesday evening, bringing the two decrees with me, sending Archbishop Boyer his, and he will let me have a copy. I am sending you the other.

I shall keep you up to date about everything and I thank you for your supportive prayers.

Archbishop Boyer asked me for information about the opposing group, and their threats. If I could have a copy of your reports and assessments or their intrigues and on the leading participants, I do well believe that some would be shown the door.

I have the honour to be most respectfully Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant, lastingly indebted to you in C.J.

We have reached that time of year when we need to concern ourselves with personnel in our Society, appointments, admission to novitiate and religious profession of our young men, as well as different arrangements either at Chezal-Benoît, Issoudun, which need to be addressed.

Their contribution for the time being seems to me to be necessary.

Council Meeting, September 12,13,14, 1893

A new Council appointed by the Archbishop of Bourges, Apostolic Visitor.

On September 10, 1893, Father General announced publicly at the Sacred Heart that:

1. A decree from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, dated August 12, appointed Archbishop Boyer of Bourges Apostolic Visitor.
2. A circular letter from His Grace to the Congregation's communities made public this decree and Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Reyn and Vaudon were provisionally appointed Assistants, while Fr. Carrière was appointed Procurator General of the Society and local Superior of the Rome house. Fr. Batard was appointed General Bursar and Fr. Maillard in charge of missions.

On September 12 the new Council met with Fr. General presiding. Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Reyn and Vaudon in attendance.

Fr. Piperon, Assistant and Novice Master.

Fr. Renaud, Assistant Novice Master.

Fr. Renaud, his present deputy, will replace Fr. Piperon when he is away, and he will replace him in his post as soon as possible following his perpetual vows.

Fr. Lanctin to be in charge of the Chezal-Benoît Petite Oeuvre.

Fr. Lanctin will replace Fr. Carrière as Director of the Petite Oeuvre. Fr. Godineux will be Bursar in place of Fr. Batard who in exercising his role as General Bursar will look after finances at the Sacred Heart helped by a bursarial aide.

Your Grace,

I am pleased to send you the following reports. The Antwerp, Tilburg and Salzburg houses which, over a number of years, have been the hot-bed of opposition, still with these new nominations submitted for your Grace's approval, continue to request problem characters as Superiors. There should be in Antwerp at least, as an important house, someone who has a good attitude and outlook, aptitude for administration, a lover of discipline and knows a little Flemish. I had put forward Fr. Maillard who incorporates all these qualities, but Fr. Reyn has stated that he would not be accepted by the Northern confrères who do not like him, and instead of peace it would be continuing war. Two of the Assistants desirous of peace took his (Reyn's) side and this led to the requisite majority. I have no more to say; I give way and accept.

I need, Your Grace, to spend 8 days in Vichy and would request Your Grace to give me permission to do so.

My address will be Villa des Lilas.

Please accept my deepest regards in C.J.

Vichy, September 18, 1893

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I knew that Fr. Carrière's appointment would please you. I suggested his name to the Archbishop who very willingly agreed, as well as Fr. Piperon's name also. The appointment of Fr. Reyn is personal to the Archbishop. As far as the other vacant posts are concerned, we are in great difficulty. The Archbishop wants to look at things very closely before making appointments.

Bishop Navarre would very much like to take Fr. Jullien and Brother Guis with him, but the latter has not yet studied any theology. I am thinking of sending him to Rome with some others.

Guis was ordained on December 21, 1895. He cannot have had much formal training in theology. He died in Sydney, September 14, 1913.

The Holy Father has sent his blessing through Cardinal Rampolla and a wonderful message which more than 300 priests heard at Issoudun on September 8. Fr. Naudet was marvellous (the preacher). The crowd was huge.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

The Archbishop of Bourges approves of all the appointments made by our Council, but before their promulgation he wants all the Assistants to gather at Bourges, together with Fr. Ramot with whom he wishes to speak at the same time. His Grace also wants to discuss at the meeting the issues arising from our Petites Oeuvres which he considers very serious. Archbishop Boyer wanted us to meet yesterday, Monday, at Bourges, but I notified him that you were away, asking him to postpone the meeting until early next week. I suggested Thursday to him.

In any event, be ready to leave at any moment.

Dear Father Delaporte,

I do not know how Fr. Morisseau worded his letter, but he assures me that he in no way conveyed an order from me not to put your foot in Issoudun, and I believe him because I never said such a thing to him. He is as astonished as I am that you could read into his letter a decree of expulsion from the mother house. When Fr. Morisseau gave me the first letter you wrote to him where you mentioned to him that you would be in Paris on the Saturday, and knowing otherwise that there was a need for a Sunday mass in the church, I told him to write to you and ask you to stay in Paris since the new Council had assigned you there as your residence and thereby you would avoid the expense of coming and going, since the vow of poverty makes it incumbent on us to avoid all unnecessary expense.

The vow of poverty, Father, forbids the possession of a sum of money or any money, even with the approval of the local Superior. All must be placed, then, in his hands and he is to be informed as to what use it is to be put. The Pope insists that our Constitutions be faithfully put into practice.

Please accept my good wishes in C.J.

Council Meeting, September 29, 1893

In attendance: the Superior General; Fathers Piperon; Morisseau, Reyn and Vaudon, Assistants.

Appointments approved by the Archbishop of Bourges.

1. The Archbishop, having ratified the appointment of Superiors chosen at the Council meetings, September 12, 13, 14, they will have to be informed straightaway.

The setting up of one particular Petite Oeuvre in the North (the Low Countries and Germany) with the focus on Antwerp.

2. Political necessity arising from antipathy in Germany towards France, and accentuated more and more, make it impossible to have German youngsters brought to France for their education and, consequently, it was decided that from now on there would be two complete self-sufficient Petite Oeuvres, one at Chezal-Benoît for the French and the Belgians who speak French, the other to be set up at Antwerp for the countries of Saxon language (German, Flemish). The youngsters from these countries will be in preparatory class either at Antwerp, Tilburg or Salzburg, but once they are able to follow normal courses they will be placed in the Antwerp house to follow their studies right through to the final rhetoric course, following which those who wish to join the Congregation will go to the French novitiate.

3. The arrangement previously made must be rigorously upheld: one must not accept in any given year more than 10 youngsters at the preparatory level in each of the above-mentioned houses.

Dear Fr. Barral,

The Holy See seems to want us to stay on in Quito because the government and people want us to do so. The Archbishop of Bourges, who represents the Pope, wants me to send support to our two confrères in Sagrario straightaway and that the present state of affairs be ended as quickly as possible. Since you are conversant with this issue leave as soon as possible for Ecuador so that you can consider with your confrères what decision we are being asked to take. It will have to be, as you state in your letter, advantageous and firm so that we can give our undertakings the requisite stability and development which they deserve to have. Once you come to an agreement about a proposal and agree on a contract, submit it to me; then if we approve of it we shall have it ratified by the Holy See. The last one made with Archbishop Ordonez, and which thereafter he didn't want to keep, could serve as a blue print. I believe myself that the present Archbishop will wholeheartedly be supportive, as well as the government which has promised me its support. The ladies and gentry of Quito are prepared to come together and buy a large house for us near the presbytery. You will come across all this yourself. You must leave on the next steamship from Saint-Nazaire on the 8th or 10th of next month. You haven't much time to spare. Once things are agreed on I will give you reinforcements.

September 1893

Report on the Quito foundation for His Grace Archbishop Boyer of Bourges, Apostolic Visitor for the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

State of the question

In 1892 the Superior General's Council by majority vote decided to recall the missionaries in the Quito house, Republic of Ecuador, the principal reason being that with the Congregation short of members it could not make available to this house the number of religious needed. This decision was first brought to the awareness of the Archbishop of Quito in a letter and then in conversation during His Grace's Paris visit that same year. The Archbishop on first hearing the news was very unhappy, informing Fr. General that he couldn't accept this decision. In these circumstances the news of the missionaries' departure reached Quito where it stirred up very keen displeasure among the people. Within a few days a petition had the signatures of the ladies of the upper class and it was forwarded to Fr. General, appealing to him to undo his Council's decision and leave the missionaries in Quito. The President of the Republic himself sent a telegram to his minister in Paris asking him to appeal with the same objective to Father General. Simultaneously he asked his minister in Rome to intervene diplomatically and make the Holy See intervene to prevent the departure of the missionaries. Fr. General made all these involvements known to his Council, requesting a fresh consideration of the issue, but the Council felt that it should maintain its earlier decision, the reasons given then retaining their full force. This fresh decision was forwarded to the Archbishop of Quito and at the same time our missionaries were ordered to leave the city and return to France. His Eminence Cardinal Monaco La Valetta was informed by Fr. General of these facts. We were under the impression that the agreement reached between the Archbishop of Quito and Fr. General, once rescinded, could lead to our withdrawal without the approval of the Holy See. But the Cardinal Protector (La Valetta) did not see it like that, insisting that we leave the decision on the matter with the Cardinal Secretary of State.

A memorandum dealing with the whole issue was forwarded to His Eminence the Cardinal in May 1892 and we waited on his decision. Sometime before the last Chapter met, a rescript from the Secretariat of State sent to Father General left to the Chapter the final decision on this issue. Unanimously, apart from one vote, the Chapter decided that the Quito house should be closed down and Fr. General passed on the result of this vote to the Archbishop of Quito, to the President of the Republic of Ecuador and to His Eminence the Cardinal Secretary of State. Some weeks later Cardinal Rampolla wrote to Father General asking him to postpone the Chapter's decision until a new statement followed, stating that the issue should be held over for the arrival of the new Archbishop of Quito. Since then there has been total silence on the issue. Only two priests are in the house, in charge of Sagrario parish which has more than 20,000 people. The people on the one hand and the President of the Republic on the other are against the departure of the priests. At the present time the Congregation cannot send any missionary to help them, lacking available people.

Fr. General's Council is greatly concerned about the false position in which our unfortunate confrères find themselves, and would like to be able to bring them back, fearing that these young priests will become discouraged or will physically succumb under the weight of work well above their resources. The Council, then, is prompted in all humility to ask the Archbishop what needs to be done in these circumstances. The proposal of Fr. General would favour continuing with the status quo until the new Archbishop of Quito is appointed; the Assistants would like the recalling of our confrères to go ahead without delay.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The hand-writing of the above is not that of Chevalier.

On my last visit to Rome, Your Grace, I saw Cardinal Rampolla and asked him what he thought about the Quito issue. He replied that the status quo should be maintained until the arrival of the new Archbishop who, because of the regard he has for us and the wish of the government and people that we remain, will make our position there more stable and advantageous.

Fr. Morisseau went there as its first Superior, but he, through inept and woeful administration, raised the hackles of the former Archbishop, Ordonez, to whom he wrote insulting letters, which were sent on to me, and led His Grace to ask us to withdraw Fr. Morisseau, which I did. The 3 confrères who remain in Quito are most keen to stay on there because of the good they are accomplishing; the former Superior, now in Barcelona, Fr. François Barral, has asked me to send him back there. I think that it's possible to give him another confrère and thereby keep this house, where we are doing a lot of good.

Nevertheless, Your Grace, I accept in advance, and open-heartedly, with closed eyes, whatever Your Grace will decide about this as well as everything else.

Council Meeting, October 2, 9, 1893

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Reyn, Vaudon, Assistants.

The transference of the Antwerp novitiate to Tilburg and the Petites Oeuvres of Tilburg and Salzburg to Antwerp.

1. It was agreed that the transferring of the lay brothers' novitiate from Salzburg and Antwerp to Tilburg, as well as the transferring of the Petite Oeuvres from Tilburg and Salzburg to Antwerp should take place as soon as possible.

The Tilburg and Salzburg houses may keep the 6th year and the preparatory year.

2. Fr. Offermans, having stated that taking away the Petite Oeuvre would be disastrous for the house and diminish offerings, the issue was further considered and the decision was taken that the Tilburg and Salzburg houses could keep the sixth and preparatory years, which implies that for the current year there will be effectively thirty students or so, a number which should suffice to please supporters and benefactors.

The Walloon students will go to the French Petite Oeuvre.

It was also decided that Walloon students, because French is the spoken language, are entitled to go to the French Petite Oeuvre.

New Personnel.

3. Following the changes, the personnel of the named houses below has been altered:

Antwerp: Fr. Peeters becomes director of the Petite Oeuvre, and the following are appointed to the staff of the Petite Oeuvre, Brothers Niesten, van Riel, Bach, Gsell, de Jong, Nollen and Brocken. Brother Bazot becomes assistant bursar to Fr. Linckens.

Tilburg: Fr. van der Aa remains bursar, Brother Ch. Offermans takes charge of the office and Fr. Kicken takes charge of the Petite Oeuvre. Brothers Dorman and van Dinther are appointed teachers.

Salzburg: Reichert and Geitman continue on the teaching staff and supervising, with a third person added to help them.

Barcelona: Brother Fernando de la Peña will be sent there if it is not inconvenient for him to live near his family.

In addition, Brother Baeten is appointed to the Issoudun office.

Other appointments.

4. The decision is confirmed to appoint Fr. Batard bursar at the Sacred Heart and Fr. Bizeuil assistant bursar, but both will continue in the work they were doing previously. Likewise Fr. Guyot, who was appointed Superior in Paris, has been relieved of this office, this last in agreement with the Archbishop of Bourges. Fr. Miniot stays as Superior in Paris and Fr. Casas in Barcelona.

Brother Eligius replaces Brother Hinard.

5. Brother Eligius, on his return from Vichy, has been appointed to the Paris house, replacing Brother Hinard who has been appointed to the Issoudun office.

Fr. Guyot appointed to live in Paris during the winter. On the recommendation of the Archbishop of Bourges, it was decided that as it was abnormal for Fr. Guyot to live in Vichy during the winter, he would live in Paris during this time and return to Vichy in the spring, together with a priest who will be given to him as a companion.

6. Brother L.M. Cochard accepted for final profession.

Brother Louis Marie Cochard of the New Guinea mission, at his own request and with the recommendation of Fr. Genocchi, his Superior, has been accepted for final profession.

The lay brothers Lambertus, Emmanuel and Modestus accepted for temporary (three-yearly) profession.

At their request and with the approval of Fr. Ramot, their present Superior, and Fr. Reyn their previous one, the lay brother novices Lambertus van Wossons, Emmanuel Wicher and Modestes van Eijken have been accepted for temporary profession, but as their novitiate could be challenged on the grounds of nullity because of the seven-month absence of the Novice Master, the issue will be referred to His Grace the Apostolic Visitor.

Brother de Santis restored to his role as lay brother.

7. Brother de Santis of the New Guinea mission, who was incorrectly taken away as a lay brother and became a scholastic and now, unable to study or stay in the missions, wants to go to Sydney as a lay brother. His request was sanctioned.

The purchase of Cléry.

8. Finally, Fr. General made known that the purchase of the Cléry property, decided on previously, has been carried through, priced at 20,000 francs payable over 10 years at 4% interest. This property, situated 2 kilometres from the Sacred Heart, will be used as a country house.

Personnel made available to Bishop Navarre.

9. The following have been made available to Bishop Navarre for his mission: Fr. Jullien; the scholastic brothers Hannigan, Guis, Marie, Gust Peeters, De Rijcke, McCabe and Guillebaud; also the lay brothers Alexis, Louis, Bonaventura, Grippa, Theodore, Philippe, Dionysius and Servatius.

10. Fr. Barral is appointed Superior in Quito pending the status quo.

To His Grace Jean-Pierre Boyer, Archbishop of Bourges.

L 18931003

Your Grace,

Issoudun, October 3, 1893

1. I feel I must let you know that peace has returned to us because of your appreciated intervention. The appointments made by Your Grace and those you have approved of, have been very well received. Everyone is very well disposed and is keen to do good. All the young religious whose temporary vows end on October 8 have asked to be finally professed, except for two who want to hold it over, but whose vocation has for quite sometime been doubtful.

2. During my days in Vichy I brought it to Fr. Guyot's attention that the Council had appointed him Superior of the Paris house and that Your Grace had approved the appointment, but he replied that he couldn't accept this posting and would let you know, Your Grace, the reasons for his refusal. I tried to get him to understand that the duty of a religious was to obey, and that if each one acted like himself, administration would be impossible. Fr. Guyot is keeping very well at the moment; his living in isolation at Vichy, outside the community, is not acceptable. He could very well carry out the role of Superior in Paris where the members of the community are few. If he persists in his refusal, as seems likely, we shall find great difficulty in replacing him (in Paris). Your Grace will understand his reasoning, but as for ourselves we would like him to accept the posting willingly, unhesitatingly.

I carefully read, Your Grace, the appeal by ex-Father Klotz. Having prayed and examined all the issues before the Lord, I do not think that this unfortunate priest can return to our Society. The reasons justifying his exclusion are many. The November 4, 1892, decree, to which he resorts, cannot help him. It was promulgated a long time afterwards. At our Council meeting, August 8 that same year, we unanimously approved Fr. Klotz's dismissal. We forthwith made this decision known to Rome, together with the supporting arguments. In early September the Sacred Congregation replied, stating that it was the role of the Superior General and his Council according to our Constitutions to decide on anybody's expulsion. That is what we did at our November 7 meeting and we petitioned the Holy See at the same time to release him (Klotz) from his vows as the Sacred Congregation had asked us to do. The decree mentioned by the appellant was in no way whatsoever referred to by the Sacred Congregation. I then made known to Fr. Klotz the decision taken to expel him from the Society, following which he wrote to the Holy Father and the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars acknowledging all his misdeeds, stating that he seriously regretted them, was greatly to blame because he had taken no notice of the warnings given to him by his Superiors and he asked His Holiness to forgive him, requesting as penance to be perpetually deprived of active and passive voting rights at Chapters and to be excluded from any responsibility for the rest of his life, etc., etc.

The Sacred Congregation forwarded his letter to the Apostolic Delegate, making him judge of his change of heart, and free, having taken advice, to insist on his expulsion or have him brought back into the Institute as he thought fit. The Bishop of Sinope, finding no evidence of sincere repentance in Fr. Klotz's letters, once more pronounced him expelled, bringing the issue to an end. I notified him of this decision. He then had recourse once more to the Holy See, arguing from the November 4, 1892, decree. Rome spent a long time without replying until Fr. Klotz wrote the letter which was returned (by Rome) to Your Grace with the request to take a fresh look at the situation. In his last letter Fr. Klotz goes so far as to say that he thinks he was "unjustly condemned". How can he write like this when in his appeals to the Holy Father and the Sacred Congregation he acknowledges himself to be responsible for all the charges laid against him? The Holy See had made its definitive judgment through the intermediary of the Apostolic Delegate who made known the dismissal verdict.

- a. Whatever he may say, warnings were not wanting so far as he was concerned and, indeed, he promised in writing not to cause any further opposition to the Superior General's administration and to withhold his attempts to draw his confrères into this regrettable course of action.
- b. The damaging impact of Fr. Klotz's behaviour necessitated prompt action in order to bring a scandalous episode to an end.
- c. The religious whose support he calls upon are those very ones who have supported him in his opposition to his Superior General, and who were strongly criticized in the Sacred Congregation's latest decree.
- d. There was no pressure brought to bear on the young professed who wrote against him (Fr. Klotz). They were simply told to write all they disadvantageously knew about him and, as for those who said they knew nothing, they were told: write, then, that you know nothing.
- e. The Assistants in charge at the time all signed the request of the Superior General to the Sacred Congregation for the expulsion of Fr. Klotz. It was endorsed by Bishop Verjus who had been called on by Klotz for his support, a suggestion he rejected with horror and a sense of outrage, as did the Bishop of Sinope, the Apostolic Delegate.
- f. In addition to all these lapses, I may add what Fr. Klotz did at the first Chapter held in 1891. I was requested by the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars to forward to it the Acts of the Chapter. I searched everywhere and was unable to find them. Fr. Klotz had surreptitiously taken hold of them and carried them off to Rome on his own initiative, without any permission or authorization on my part and against my wishes.

There's the individual, Your Grace, who requests permission to return to our Congregation. For me it would truly be disastrous, his return among us a victory for insubordination, encouragement of disobedience and indiscipline, disrespect for authority and a slighting of the Bishop of Sinope who has been part of this sad affair in all its details and has to hand all the written evidence of culpability forwarded to Rome. The decree which Fr. Klotz calls to his defence is not legally applicable to him because it didn't come out before his expulsion.

If Your Grace needs further information, I am quite willing to make it available.

I have the honour to be with deepest respect Your Grace's most humble and obedient son in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The expulsion of Fr. Klotz was called for by our Constitutions Number 183, p.76, as hereby expressed: Si quis infeliciter ab hoc Societatis spiritu sic declinaverit ut de ejus emendatione desperetur, et praesertim si hunc spiritum, sua agendi ratione, ex aliorum deturbaverit animis, hic prorsus a Societate amoveatur.

Your Grace,

It's on the 18th of this month that the ordination of our young men is due to take place and they will go on retreat tomorrow evening.

I had been given to understand that the Vicar General, whom Your Grace has asked to supervise the examinations, would be in Issoudun tomorrow. I decided to write to Fr. Auvrelle and ask him if he might let me know when he would be here. His reply at this moment informs me that he has received no request from the Archbishop. I hasten to inform Your Grace so that you can be kind enough to ask him.

I have had complaints from our Salzburg, Tilburg and Antwerp houses about the decisions taken with regard to our Petite Oeuvres. We are meeting tomorrow at Chezal-Benoît where I am going to preside over the novices' taking of vows. I shall be pleased to inform Your Grace about the Council's decision. Towards the 15th of this month, Your Grace, the lease of our Sacred Heart house from Archbishop Marchal runs out and I would very much like to know if Your Grace wishes to continue with it and accept the same conditions. There are no expenses involved, no responsibilities and no difficulties, and it is security and assurance for us in the event of anything awkward occurring.

He studied in Rome and was in charge of the office after Fr. Fromm's departure. Again in Barcelona, April 1889, he taught at Canet de Mar from July 13, 1890; after which he went on to New Britain, from where he left the Society.*

Council Meetings, October 12, 16, 1893

In attendance: Fr. General; Frs. Piperon, Morisseau, Reyn, Vaudon, Assistants.

Brother Bogerhausen replaced by Brother Kleintitschen at Chezal-Benoît.

1. The first named, teaching German at Chezal-Benoît, is appointed to the Salzburg Petite Oeuvre and replaced at Chezal-Benoît by the newly-professed Brother Kleintitschen.

Brother Lebeau replaces Brother Baeten.

2. The appointment of Brother Baeten to the Issoudun office is rescinded and Brother Lebeau is appointed in his place.

The Salzburg lay brothers' novitiate is brought to an end.

3. The lay brothers' Salzburg novitiate has only five novices and, given the end of their novitiate next Easter and their needed availability, particularly so when the two made available to Bishop Couppe will have left on completion of their novitiate in Salzburg, the novitiate will end with their departure.

The offer of a house for a Petite Oeuvre near Tivoli turned down.

4. A letter from Fr. Carrière was read stating that a former religious house was being made available at Palumbara, near Tivoli, but the Council was of the view that shortage of personnel made it impossible to accept this offer.

Decision as regards permission to pursue studies in Italian state universities.

In the same letter (4, above) Fr. Carrière made known the possibility of studying at Sapienza state university for Brothers Guglielmetti and Ruggeri, held back aged 26 for military service. He pointed out that the drawbacks arising from this permission, already adverted to by Fr. Védère last August, are the reason why permission is not granted in the Roman seminary or other seminaries. The Procurator is asked to verify matters for himself and, if there is a genuine need, he may grant the said permission, if the advantages weigh positively against the disadvantages and only in the case of necessity, taking good care to avoid anything detrimental to vocations.

Fr. Ceresi put forward for Canon Law studies.

The same (Carrière) suggested that Fr. Ceresi be appointed professor and the proposal was accepted if there is a need to be met, while it was also agreed that he should study canon law.

Fathers Reyn and Vaudon should go to Antwerp to set up the Petite Oeuvres.

5. The priests in Antwerp and Tilburg, experiencing almost insurmountable difficulties in settling up Petite Oeuvres in Antwerp, and since it is difficult at a distance to sort out these problems, it was decided that Fathers Reyn and Vaudon would go there immediately to deal with the matter.

Acceptance of the novices Stettner, van der Heiden, van Hoogstraten and Rutten to first vows.

At the request and recommendation of Fr. Offermans, the following were accepted for first vows: the German Joseph Stettner and the three Dutch, Frans van der Heiden, Martin van Hoogstraten and Henri Rutten.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I am sorry that you were unable to come to Issoudun. We would have been happy to see you. I hope your many preaching commitments will not affect your health; look after yourself. I pray for you and don't forget me in your own prayers. The former Fr. Klotz is requesting the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars to make it possible for him to return to the Society. Archbishop Boyer has had a letter from the Cardinal Prefect wanting to find out what he thinks and which he passed on to me. I informed him that his return would be a victory for a bad attitude, for insubordination and rebellion. Fr. Klotz bases his argument on the decree at the end of 1892, asserting that we did not adhere to the formalities therein laid down about expulsion. But in fact his dismissal was decreed before this decree was formally introduced. I don't know what the outcome will eventually be.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Does your little chaplain still want to go on the missions? Fr. Bontemps would be happy to take him along. Bishop Navarre will be accompanied by 16 of our confrères. There's the 30 asked for by the Pope.

I would like to make 6 or 8 missionaries available to Fr. Bontemps, with 4 or 5 Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. With this number and those there already, might he not before leaving get the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda to set up a Vicariate with Fr. Bontemps himself Vicar Apostolic? It would be something badly needed for the mission's success, given the vast distances and problems in communication!

Issoudun, October 14, 1893

Your Grace,

A decree of the Sacred Congregation of the Council dated May 25 last and promulgated by Your Grace, confirms a previous decree of 1874 condemning as dishonest practice the activities of bookshops or other businesses who, by way of publicity and prime opportunity, gain for themselves mass stipends and have the obligation of these masses met by impoverished priests; books and merchandise being forwarded to them rather than stipends. This practice is also condemned when the bookshops or business people do not keep the stipends and help those priests who do not have mass stipends. This is also the case when the resulting benefit is used in favour of pious undertakings. Not alone are these commercial operators condemned but, as well, those who aid them in their activities by helping to procure mass stipends for them even when they would not be getting any remuneration for so doing. Those, that is, who take responsibility for the masses allotted to them by the above-mentioned, and who negotiate and receive goods in place of monetary stipends.

The decree, having pronounced the most damaging indictment on those who resort to such practice, lays it down that in future, in order to root out the evil at source, those enjoying an ecclesiastical benefit, and other administrators of church undertakings, should forward at the end of the year mass offerings not yet fulfilled to their respective bishops who will have these mass obligations met by forwarding the respective stipends.

Here a difficulty presents itself.

Must it only be at the end of the year that mass stipends not yet met should be sent to the respective local bishop? It remains that, during the course of the year, there is the possibility of passing on to priests of one's acquaintance mass stipends which one cannot meet by oneself, and it is to be taken for granted that such stipends are not made available to priests who would make a traffic from them. It would appear that the decree according to the letter should be so understood, and on the other hand it would seem that, so understood, it would not achieve its aim since many stipends not going through the bishops' hands run the risk of passing through a third party and becoming part of the dishonest process so severely condemned.

Your Grace is requested to let us know what we must do in the future. Up to now we have passed on to priests of our acquaintance either within or outside the diocese those mass stipends which we could not ourselves fulfil, while keeping for our undertakings a portion of the mass offerings in keeping with the August 27, 1891, indult. The Sacred Congregation of the Council was requested "...ut dicta elemosyna missarum ad unam libellam (1 franc, about 3.40 euros) et excessus retineri possit a Congregatione". On the recommendation of the Cardinal Prefect, His Holiness "accorda facultatem juxta petita per triennium tantum... dum modo tamen retentio elemosyna non sit ultra medietatem." Is this indult in contradiction to the above-mentioned decree? We do not think so, since the authorized reduction of offerings in favour of appropriate religious undertakings is not trafficking. And from another perspective it does not mean that the reduced stipends imply disreputable trafficking so rightly forbidden. His Grace is asked to clarify matters on this issue for us if we are in error. If our indult is at odds with the decree, it becomes obsolete, and we can no longer avail of it as this is a formal decree: revocatis quibuscumque indultis ac privilegiis usque nunc concessis quae praesentis decreti dispositionibus utrumque adversentur.

Should we, then, in this case, ask for another indult? It would appear not so, since it is not likely that there is any going back on a decree which has been so officially and authoritatively promulgated.

If, however, the indult is not contrary to the decree, we may then continue to avail of it until it expires in three years, and it is pointless, therefore, to ask at the moment for its renewal. As for the mass stipends which we receive in greater numbers than we can cope with, we shall forward them to Your Grace if you so wish in order to have them seen to.

My Lord,

How delighted I am to hear that you are in the Berry and in better health. The Lord be praised!

Bishop Navarre is here in Issoudun. He is ordaining some of our young men on Sunday. He would be very pleased to see Your Lordship. As he hasn't so far paid a visit to Bourges, he suggests that he should go there to see you next Thursday. If you are available, he would avoid in this way any inconvenience for you and there's time for him to have your reply. What have you to say about our problems, My Lord? The opposition party are in the ascendancy at the present moment, triumphant everywhere. Fr. Reyn is an Assistant and Superior at the Sacred Heart, Fr. Ramot at Antwerp, Fr. Offermans at Tilburg, Fr. Hartzer at Salzburg, Fr. Vandel, Director of the scholasticate, and Fr. Lanctin in charge of the Chezal-Benoît Petite Oeuvre. Fathers Piperon, Maillard and your servant (myself), particularly, are looked upon as the opponents of peace and equilibrium. The opposition, being in power, firmly insist on the return (rehabilitation) of Fr. Klotz, and everything leads one to believe that they are about to succeed.

Pray for us, My Lord, and particularly so for myself, whose heart is laid low with mortal anguish.

Please accept, Your Lordship, my respectful good wishes in C.J.

Council Meeting, October 23, 1893

No names given of participants, but see signatories below.

Brother Heines and Fr. Kuntz appointed teachers at the Antwerp Petite Oeuvre.

1. Fathers Reyn and Vaudon reported on their visit to Antwerp. First of all they stated that the teaching personnel is realistically too inadequate. In order to strengthen it Fr. Kuntz was appointed, together with Brother Heines, both German and with the ability to teach the fourth and third years. As regards the other classes, and supervision, the brothers already appointed will be available: Christian Janssen, Smits, Schmitz and van Riel.

Fr. Linckens, Director.

Fr. Linckens, more so than Fr. Peeters, has the support of the other teachers and is appointed Director. Since he knows German, he will, together with (German-speaking) Fr. Kuntz, be able to hear the confessions of the pupils who only speak this language.

Father Peeters: Bursar; Brother Bazot: Assistant Bursar.

Fr. Peeters is appointed Bursar, with Brother Bazot assisting him.

Salzburg pupils ready for the second class will have the opportunity to study French.

2. There followed a discussion about a dozen or so Salzburg students who have completed third year and would be ready for the second year, but do not know enough French to follow the courses in that language. It was decided that they will study French sufficiently to make them reach the level of the others and then they will go into the third year, the highest ranking class at Antwerp for the time being.

Fr. Deidier relieved of the Superior's office in Glastonbury, and replaced by Fr. O'Mahony.

3. Fr. Deidier has been relieved of his duties as Glastonbury Superior. This good man has for a long time been affected by diabetes and, no doubt, influenced by a particular type of illness, he has taken to excessive drinking, causing problems for the community as has been attested to by witnesses worthy of respect for what they have to say. Anxious that this state of affairs should not become public knowledge, the Council decided that he should leave his post as soon as possible and return to his former residence in Paris. His replacement at Glastonbury will be the Irishman at present in Watertown, Fr. O'Mahony.

Your Grace,

Issoudun, October 24, 1893

I am pleased to inform you that we have had to change the appointment of Superiors in Paris and Barcelona. Fr. Guyot is unable to exercise the office of Superior in Paris and Fr. Miniot will continue in charge, while Fr. Casas, already Superior in Barcelona for six years and who should be leaving office according to our Constitutions, will remain Superior because there is nobody suitable to replace him for the time being.

Following Your Grace's recommendation, it was decided that Fr. Guyot should not be left in Vichy. He will live in Paris during the winter and only return in the spring to Vichy, with a priest and brother accompanying him.

Fr. Barral, who has left for Quito, will be Superior during the status quo. Three lay brother novices in Antwerp, Lambertus (Limmer), Emmanuel (Weber) and Modestus (Van der Eijken), having finished their novitiate, are accepted for temporary vows. But since they didn't have a Novice Master so titled during the latter six months of their novitiate, one is concerned that they may be tainted with some form of irregularity and, accordingly, Your Grace is requested to grant ad cautelam (as a precautionary measure) a safeguarding verdict.

With deepest respect, I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

18931026X

Council Meeting, October 26, 1893

In attendance: Father General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Vaudon, Assistants.

Fr. Barral appointed Superior in Quito; Fr. Casas in Barcelona.

1. Fr. Vaudon, who paid a visit to the Archbishop of Bourges, made it known that His Grace confirmed Fr. Barral's appointment as Superior in Quito and Fr. Casas as the Barcelona Superior.

The Archbishop does not approve of Fr. Delaporte's signed articles in the Universe (newspaper).

He is not at all in favour and strongly disapproves Fr. Delaporte's signature to the articles he publishes in the Universe. Fr. Vaudon is requested to ask him (Delaporte) to act in conformity with His Grace's wishes. He will make this request in the way he thinks best fitted to deal with his (Delaporte's) susceptibilities.

Following His Grace's latest clarifications, Fr. Guyot, appointed to Paris, will return to Vichy.

As regards Fr. Guyot and his request to return to Vichy, the Archbishop, while disapproving of his presence in Vichy all by himself, didn't have in mind anything personal but rather a question of principle which can admit of exceptions. He drew attention to a particular inconvenience identified with Fr. Guyot's existence on his own there, and what might seem in the public's eyes to be the presence of someone who is in charge of a guest house and looks after the material interests of the place, making capital also from the private chapel, and this at the risk of arousing the jealousy of other Vichy business people (who would be envious of the chapel's attraction). In the event, it was decided that Fr. Guyot could return to Vichy (in the spring) and confrères would be made available to him insofar as this was feasible.

Candidates chosen to study for university degrees.

2. Fr. Vaudon then suggested that teachers and pupils should be selected in order to be put forward for university degrees. The following were named: a, Fr. Comte who has already the baccalaureate and, having a special aptitude for science, could within two years qualify for the licentiate in this subject; b, Fr. Cochet who could do likewise in history which he studied with special emphasis; c, Fr. Suchet who could easily finish his uncompleted baccalaureate; d, Fr. Pourquier and the Brothers Alan and Michel who, while continuing to teach, could prepare to take the baccalaureate.

Three-monthly examinations at the Petite Oeuvre.

It was, likewise, decided to have three-monthly examinations at the Petite Oeuvre.

Personnel for Fr. Bontemps

3. Fr. Bontemps, having requested personnel for his mission, has had Fr. Nicolò made available to him (with young Fr. Canion accompanying him, Canion ordained outside the Congregation but, having been rejected for lack of the requisite canonical formalities, has requested, nevertheless, that he remain). Also made available are R. Van de Wouwer who, having finished his theological studies, can be ordained to the priesthood before he leaves, and then there are the scholastics, Brothers Fillodeau, Lebeau and Baeten. In addition, six brothers will be made available, chosen by Fr. Reyn.

Expense procedures to make trips to family on the part of those appointed to the missions.

4. Problems having arisen about travel expenses for a lay brother's trip home before departing for the missions, it was decided that in such cases expenses should be met by the mission to which the individual was going, unless the families or benefactors wished to meet the expenses.

Fr. Giovanelli, following his father's death, appointed to Rome.

5. Fr. Giovanelli, having lost his father, and given to thinking that his personal presence was necessary in order to look after his family's affairs and provide for his two young sisters who are without support, requests permission to return to the Rome house where he will accept whatever charge is given to him, stating that if his request cannot be met he will feel obliged to leave the Congregation. Given this state of affairs, it was agreed that he should return to Rome where he will remain a member of the Congregation if he accepts whatever role will be assigned to him by Fr. Carrière.

Acceptance of a lay brother postulant.

6. A brother of the pupil Erand has been accepted as a lay brother postulant, being favoured with good recommendations.

Decision taken about Brother Postalier.

7. Brother Postalier, considering himself needed to support his family and obliged to stay in the seminary in order to be released from two years of military service, requests permission to take his seminary course at Mende in his native diocese with a view to entering the diocesan clergy. He is encouraged to finish his two years of military service in order to be free to join the Congregation.

My Lord,

Yes, the gates are about to break open with fresh rebellion. At a Council meeting three votes were favourable to Fr. Klotz and two opposed, Fr. Piperon and myself. We must return to this issue on Monday. If you still have Fr. Klotz's letter to Cardinal Verga asking for pardon, acknowledging himself as guilty on all the charges with which he was being accused, and asking as punishment that he be excluded in perpetuity from any involvement with the Congregation, and deprived for good of active and passive voice (voting status) at Chapters, I shall be pleased if you can let me have this letter or a copy of it.

In his latest letter to the Cardinal Prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, dated September 4 last, in order to beseech His Eminence to hurry up with his rehabilitation, he had the audacity to declare: "I have asked the Sacred Congregation to review a process whereby I believed, and still believe, I was unjustly condemned." This is a cynicism which goes beyond all measure and belief.

Pray for me, Your Lordship, and our little Society which is so battered.

I assure you of my best regards and beg a blessing from Your Lordship.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

18931030X

Council Meetings
October 30, November 7, 1893

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Reyn and Vaudon, Assistants.

Permission granted for Brother Van Rompaey to go home to his family for health reasons.

1. Fr. Reyn made it known that the student Van Rompaey, continually laid up and unable to follow his courses, should be sent home to his family in the hope that a change of climate would benefit him. Since he is from Antwerp, it would be possible for him to visit our house now and again as the family home is nearby. Everyone agreed with this proposal.

Brother Nollen appointed to Antwerp.

2. Brother Nollen, already in Antwerp, will stay there because his services are urgently needed. This proposal was agreed.

3. Brother Verroni in Rome wants, for family reasons, to leave the Congregation, and writes to say that the Cardinal – his Bishop – has so advised him. Since he will be without vows when his three-yearly vows end on October 4, he is free to take his departure and the Council will put no obstacle in his way.

Brother Guglielmetti is about to leave for family reasons.

4. The above-named, also from Rome, asks to leave the Society and return to his family where his presence is needed because of trying circumstances. Since he is linked to the Congregation by perpetual vows he must, as from himself, ask to be released and his request will be met.

The decision was taken that Brother Hannigan, at first destined for Bishop Navarre's mission, should replace Fr. Giovanelli as professor in the scholasticate.

The decision involving Fr. Deidier.

6. He professes to be innocent with regard to the complaints brought against him and wants to justify himself. The decision is held over and it was mentioned that two Assistants should go there (Glastonbury) to investigate matters.

Discussion on the decree of the Congregation of the Council about mass stipends.

7. Given the decree of the Congregation prohibiting any trafficking in stipends and stating that provision be made at the beginning of the year about those mass stipends which have not yet been arranged or looked after, the Archbishop of Bourges has been consulted (see above) to find out if and when we must forward these left over stipends to him which we have not been able to meet, and whether or not in the meantime it is permissible for us to hand over these mass stipends to be looked after by others, as we have been doing through a concession in our favour, and accordingly we continue reducing half our mass offerings while keeping the other half for our own undertakings.

His Grace, finding himself unable to give a reply on this issue, suggested that we write to Rome, which is what we did. Fr. Carrière, having consulted competent people about this issue, replied that there is no obligation to send mass offerings to the Bishop other than at the beginning of the year which coincides with the receipt of these offerings, and the privilege of reducing the stipends is not contrary to the relevant decree and, accordingly, we can continue to do so.

The students Tournaud and Van Lierde accepted as postulants.

8. The scholastic Tournaud from the Felletin minor seminary, well commended by Fr. Vaudon and Raymond Van Lierde from Belgium, a lay brother postulant, were accepted for the novitiate. Also Régis Rasele, sent away and now re-admitted, requests to repeat his vows and it was decided that this was acceptable once he spent another month in the novitiate.

Report on Fr. Klotz's appeal.

9. Next Fr. Klotz's request for re-entry was considered at length and a report was put together for His Grace the Apostolic Visitor which is summarized in the following manner: Fr. Klotz acknowledges himself to be at fault and the appropriateness of the decision to dismiss him from the Society, but in acknowledging himself to be at fault, and very much so, he was not prepared to say that he was guilty with that degree of malice and perversity attributed to him. It was put to him that he could expect to be forgiven by way of certain penances which were being laid upon him. Hoping in this way to come by more easily the pardon he sought, he exaggerated his misdemeanours rather than diminished them. Taking advantage of these avowals both to the Pope and the Superior General, in order to emphasize his culpability, would serve to balance matters. While accepting wholeheartedly the appropriateness of his expulsion, he was drawn to say, nevertheless, that he was unfairly condemned:

1. because no proper juridical procedures were taken against him and the prescriptions of common law were not adhered to in his case whereby he would be given the time and opportunity to defend himself.

2. Besides, his expulsion was influenced by a legitimate concern for the truth, but it was indeed emotionally influenced, as evidenced by the Chezal-Benoît Superior who allowed himself to express condemnatory words against the accused with the intention of compensating for the scandal given. And again there were those high condemnatory words, and those feelings tangibly evident in the accusatory observations where the issues were so expressed that there was inevitable imbalance, especially so when he (the accused) was made responsible for Brother Charneau's death.

As for his being at fault when taking off with the Acts of the 1891 Chapter, which was all the more convenient for him given his role as Chapter Secretary, and which he took with him to Rome without the approval of Father General, he cannot gainsay anything, but it finds something of an explanation in the extreme opposition raised among so many by the dissolution of the Chapter brought about in mysterious circumstances, and in a manner lacking somewhat in loyalty and openness.

One cannot, then, blame the accused for having recourse to Rome when he saw the gates of mercy becoming closed to him, and one cannot but be impressed by the constancy of his willingness to remain in the Congregation in which he has experienced so much disappointment. The Fr. Klotz case has been looked at afresh in keeping with the advice of the Vicar Apostolic. While accepting the above statement, three members of the Council have expressed reservations about the paragraph which involves the former Procurator General.

Decision on Brother Postalé.

10. Brother Postalé, unable to decide about completing his three years of military service, it is agreed that he may enter the Mende seminary in his native diocese and he is dispensed from his vows until the date they were due to end. If on ordination to the priesthood he wishes to return to the Society, he will be accepted wholeheartedly.

My Lord,

The new consultors do indeed accept that Fr. Klotz was rightly expelled by us from the Society. But they venture to say that his vows were not released by Rome and, in consequence, they are drawn to conclude that he continues to remain one of us. It seems to me that when the Sacred Congregation left the matter in your hands, leaving you free, having taken counsel, to keep him or send him away, he was by that very fact released from his vows when Your Lordship did not deem it proper to accept them.

Have you kept this Rome document and a copy of your letter to Fr. Klotz intimating to him his definitive expulsion? My confrères need to return again to this issue on Monday.

I beg your blessing as I extend to you my most respectful good wishes in C.J.

Article 2229

To His Grace Jean-Pierre Boyer, Archbishop of Bourges.

L 18931107

Issoudun, November 7, 1893

Your Grace,

Fr. Klotz, stating that he was unfairly condemned, does not say that he wasn't at fault in any way and that he is wholly innocent. The decree expelling him is, then, well founded and he acknowledges the justice of it, but despite that he does not accept the blame being laid on him. He does not accept it despite his premeditated qualities, perverse attitude and the conspiratorial qualities with which he is identified. In stating that he is at fault, and gravely so, he has in mind certain activities and writes at variance with respect for authority, but he has also in mind interior attitudes, wayward thinking and wishes which cannot be outwardly assessed: he may then say that he was guilty without, for all that, accepting that he was responsible or accountable for all the misdemeanours attributed to him. For the rest, in what circumstances does he make this avowal? It's when he is overwhelmed by the weight, or more specifically the number, of these accusations which he hasn't time to consider. At such moments, he is drawn towards recourse to mercy. He is offered hope of being excused. The penitence he might undertake is even suggested to him. The poor accused, accordingly, does not dream of justifying himself and thinks of nothing else other than inclining his judges to his way of thinking. Accordingly, as he asserts, he is no longer looking for excuses and much prefers to declare that he was at fault, more at fault than was really the case, in order to have mercy shown to him. It would appear that there is something quite obnoxious in profiting from such avowals in order to emphasize his culpability. Accordingly, having declared himself culpable and accepting the justice of the sentence meted out to him, Fr. Klotz, for all that, can go on to say that he was unfairly condemned:

1. because he was not heard and sentenced legally, in keeping with the requirements of common law, which requires that the accused be given time and the means to defend himself. It is true that on the day of November 7, 1892, the Council members were as yet unaware of the decree on the 4th of the same month. He (Klotz) had received verbal confirmation of certain complaints made against him. This would not be sufficient to meet the numerous charges made against him, to establish their validity, meaning and significance.

2. On the other hand, an investigation had been requested by Fr. General, and the Superior of the Chezal-Benoît house read out a letter (from Chevalier) instigating this investigation. However, before it began, Fr. Piperon, becoming emotional and, understandably, quite moved, and believing that in this way he could lessen the scandal being given to our young religious, delivered himself of some remarks about Fr. Klotz calculated to lessen his reputation in the estimation of those being called upon to state their case against him. This could, perhaps, have prejudiced their case against him. The accusatory remarks were made under the impact and thrust of this same high feeling.

If one wishes to go further back and condemn Fr. Klotz for his improper behaviour when taking away with him to Rome the Chapter deliberations of 1891 without any approval on the part of Fr. General, nobody would excuse him in this matter, but it is necessary to keep in mind the circumstances and the highly-charged atmosphere which prevailed at that moment, and which was set in motion by the suspension of the Chapter. If Fr. Klotz was culpably responsible, was he any more so than the individual who went and denounced his confrères in Bourges and Rome, condemning them without its being possible for them to say a word in their own defence?

When Fr. Klotz saw for himself that his expectations were in vain and that it was no longer likely that he could count on the mercy of his judges, he decided to have recourse to justice by appealing to Rome. Who in the circumstances could fault him for so doing? Who indeed, on the contrary, could not be moved by the single-minded perseverance of this young priest who, with his talents, could achieve a prominent position in the diocesan clergy and yet was adamant about staying in the Congregation in which he had experienced so much disappointment, because he wanted to remain faithful to his vocation?

The Bishop of Sinope, charged with carrying out the merciful rescript of the Holy See, found in Fr. Klotz's first letter unequivocal evidence of one truly regretful, but in a second letter the evidence was so equivocal that he could not see his way to accept him back.

It occurs to us, then, that the Council's views can be summed up in the following way: Fr. Klotz was judged while under the impact of an emotional feeling rightly legitimate but, nevertheless, an emotional feeling... And it does not appear that the issue was dealt with in a juridical manner. We request Your Grace, then, if we can, must, reach a conclusion purely and simply in favour of mercy, or whether we must set up once more a process in keeping with the norms set out in the decree of November 8, 1892?

Issoudun, November 12, 1893

Your Grace,

Fr. Guyot has written to me asking me to thank the Council for having approved his return to Vichy. Aware that he had written against me to Your Grace, I put it to him: "Was it really necessary, my friend, even appropriate at the present moment? I pardon, suffer, pray." He now replies to me that he did so because not alone did he deem it necessary at the present moment, but because it was absolutely imperative, and he is not bothered that I know about it because, he goes on, it is only right that he against whom complaints are raised should come to be aware of them either to excuse himself if it's erroneous, or else to be made aware of his drawbacks and eliminate them if that is the case, etc. I am forwarding to Your Grace a copy of the letter I am sending to him. I have shared it with each member of the Council, all of whom have said that I could without any embarrassment bring it to the attention of Your Grace. I do so in order to bring you up to date on my thinking.

I make bold, Your Grace, to offer you as a token of my filial love a little series of meditations which I have just published. Yesterday I was given copies of the last volume. I was drawn to write these meditations as something helpful not only to pious lay people, but also for priests and those in vows. I add with it another little book entitled School of the Sacred Heart, published last year and well received by the public.

NB: This letter, Your Grace, was about to be posted, when I received Your Grace's own letter. Far from being opposed to discussing in Council Fr. Reyn's memorandum, as with any others, I very much want to do so. Open discussions will always get rid of misunderstanding, prejudices, and help to enlighten and clarify Your Grace's understanding (of us), contributing most palpably towards achieving among us the unity and peace so much sought after, genuine entente cordiale.

Undated. Likely mid-November 1893

Dear Fr. Guyot,

Thank you for your letter; I shall make use of it. I believe, nevertheless, that it would have been preferable in the present circumstances, when everybody is anxious that peace should come about, and searches for ways to achieve it, for me to send on your letter to Archbishop Boyer. If my reply to your complaints does not in any way meet your expectations, you will always have the opportunity of recourse to His Grace. Nobody more than myself, Fr., you may well believe me, desires unity and has more expectant hopes that we all return, as you say, to the faithful observance of both canonical laws and our Constitutions. Over the last two years, with the Assistants beside me, I do not think I have evaded anything in this respect.

Yes, the religious spirit is, in general, lacking among us at the present time, and we state it as a fact without trying to find out what explains it; this weighs heavily on many of us and all the more so insofar as it involves the inherent difficulties in our foundation when so many problems affected it, and, as well, those tragic events which led to our expulsion. Let us now leave the past in its shadow; this is Rome's wish. Reliving the past is not a remedy! Let us, rather, come to an understanding with our Apostolic Visitor to find a way of restoring unity among us, and seriously establishing among us a truly religious life by the requisite observance of our holy rule. And then our dear but very harassed Society will henceforth, without hindrance, carry out the worthy mission confided to it by God.

The devil no doubt, foreseeing the good which the Society can be the occasion of in the Church, with the precious characteristics which feature it, is making at this moment a final onslaught against it; let's frustrate his plans. And under the lofty inspiration of the Holy See's representative, let us cement our entente cordiale by making on one side and the other, if needed, the sacrifice of our personal views. Let us listen, submissively, to his authoritative word, accepting wholeheartedly the measures which in his wisdom he will consider helpful for the consolidation of our Institute, following without flinching, hand in hand, the way he would like to map out for us. We are all aware of his impartiality and the keen interest he brings to our concerns. Let us be confident and hopeful and we shall come away more strongly from the painful crisis we are passing through.

There, Father, you have my feelings and concerns. I do not doubt that they are shared by all our confrères. May the Sacred Heart of Jesus, whose children we are, and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart deign to bestow on us their merciful regard.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Council Meeting, November 14, 1893

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Reyn, Vandel.

The purchase of a plot of ground near Cléry.

1. Fr. General suggested that a plot of land adjoining the Cléry property should be bought, giving access to Théols and priced at 1,500 francs. The Council approved this purchase.

Fr. Reyn's memorandum considered.

2. Fr. Reyn's memorandum, forwarded to the Archbishop of Bourges and returned by him to Fr. General for consideration by the Council, expresses a number of complaints, charging Fr. General with a lack of openness and straightforwardness as regards some administrative actions. In a prolonged discussion, he (Fr. General) provided several explanations, proposing to complete them and provide them in writing at a subsequent meeting.

The Archbishop's letter about the Fr. Klotz issue.

3. A letter from the Archbishop about the Fr. Klotz affair was read. His Grace, arising from the report sent to him and given the reservations expressed by the majority in the Council, decided that we can go ahead with a review of the process according to the prescriptions of the November 4, 1892 decree of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

Procedure proposed to Fr. Klotz.

In order to avoid long delays and the drawbacks of a process which will awaken unhappy memories as regards the reservations expressed by the majority (in Klotz's favour), explanations which would be expected to please the minority, it was agreed on all sides to put it to Fr. Klotz, leaving aside the view of the Apostolic Visitor, that he withdraw his request, and his appeal would be favourably considered, and meanwhile steps will be taken to re-admit him as soon as possible to the Society.

The Archbishop to be consulted.

4. In seeking the approval of the Archbishop in this matter, His Grace will be consulted in order to find out if it is expedient in the present circumstances to accept the perpetual vows of those wishing to do so in accordance with the Constitutions, and if it is appropriate to carry out the projected enquiry at Glastonbury.

Decisions taken at the request of Fr. Offermans.

5. Having considered his letter it was decided that:

a. The lay brother Gérard at the Tilburg house, who for health reasons has been with his family for more than a year, cannot remain there indefinitely. He will be dismissed if at the end of the latest concession he does not return to the Tilburg house.

17 Postulants.

b. It was agreed to accept the 17 postulants put forward by Fr. Offermans for the novitiate on condition that he forwards their names, and Fr. Reyn, who knows them, will provide particulars about them to the Council. Another postulant, who would be the 18th and comes from another Society, does not offer reliable guarantees and will be refused.

The fee to be requested in the case of lay brothers.

c. The upkeep of the lay brothers remains provisionally at 300 francs and the nominal fees remain in the case of the Petite Oeuvre pupils, the novices and scholastics.

Looking after the interests of lay brothers.

d. In principle the lay brothers, on making first vows, will make a general arrangement whereby someone is chosen to look after their material interests while they are away, either on the missions or when living in a far-distant location.

e. From now on lay brothers will no longer take a religious name but, like the priests and scholastics, use their family and baptismal name. This will help to avoid confusion as when several brothers have the same name.

Edouard Lafontaine accepted as a postulant.

6. Edouard Lafontaine, a student from the Jesuit secondary school at Turnhout who has spent a month in the Spanish Jesuit novitiate but was forced to leave because his health could not adapt to the climate, is accepted as a postulant. The recommendations are excellent and it does seem as if he is consistent because he already felt attracted to our Congregation before he went to the Jesuits' Spanish novitiate.

Replies to the Archbishop.

7. Fr. Vaudon, deputed to go to the Archbishop to bring back his reply to the three questions mentioned above, informed the meeting that His Grace agreed that one should take the measures agreed with concerning Fr. Klotz if all the counsellors are unanimous and, moreover, that it is permissible to accept the perpetual vows of those who will request them. Finally he did not deem the enquiry projected for Glastonbury opportune.

Fr. Reyn named as an adviser to the Superior General.

8. At this meeting the Superior General let it be known that he needed an adviser who would live with him. Given his proposal the Council chose Fr. Reyn who, however, stated that he didn't wish to accept the post unless it was requested by the Apostolic Visitor (the Archbishop). It was, therefore, decided that this appointment should be submitted to His Grace.

L 18931120

Issoudun, November 20, 1893

Your Grace,

I

You will appreciate that it is a moment of sadness for me to be forced after 40 years, of so many struggles and sufferings, to defend myself against serious and painful accusations brought to the attention of Your Grace by those very people whom I love more than myself. I am a father and I do not wish to incriminate anyone; I excuse, and indeed I respect, the motives which the well being and love of the Society can inspire. I shall put forward quite simply the facts, frankly and openly, and Your Grace will judge for yourself.

1. Yes, I put forward Fr. Maillard's name as Superior of the Antwerp house which, after Issoudun, is the most important in the Society. At the present moment, this house is still about 400,000 francs (about 1,345,200 euros) in debt and involves a considerable amount of funding. It was my contention that it needed a good administrator, a man well experienced in financial matters, pious, dependable. I find these qualities in Fr. Maillard. Besides, he has lived in Tilburg for a number of years as Bursar and knows a little Flemish and Dutch, which are a prerequisite at Antwerp and are not known by the new Superior. Yes, while Fr. Maillard was put forward for different postings, I was not in favour because these postings were not other than minimally important and, besides, Fr. Maillard filled with success at Issoudun the important roles of General Bursar and mission ministry. In putting him forward for Antwerp, I had in mind the well being of a major concern and had I wanted him to remain in Issoudun, following the Council's refusal, it would be for the same considered reasons.

2. Yes, I was not in favour of Fr. Ramot's appointment to Antwerp, and this was a matter of conscience, because for many years I had satisfied myself that he, while paying tribute to a certain kind of piety, hadn't in my opinion the necessary qualities for a posting of such importance. His administrative abilities in the different roles assigned to him had very great shortcomings. I had other reasons of a higher level which the Bishop delegate is aware of, and not wishing, out of kindness and fairness, to divulge them, I said: "Get in touch with the Bishop of Sinope if you care to and he will provide information about this individual." One of the Council replied: "We have nothing to do with (or learn from) the Bishop of Sinope; His Grace the Apostolic Visitor is the one for us." I replied: "It's not the same thing; the Archbishop is not as well informed (in this case)." What crime have I committed in speaking out like this? Drawn to deep respect for authority, as soon as Your Grace had approved of Fr. Ramot's appointment I would have made no further objections and put myself on the side of the majority in a decisive way, supporting the new Superior as if he had been my own choice.

3. Yes, I maintained that Fr. Roger should remain as Superior of the Tilburg house where he had been provisionally in charge for seven months. Fr. Roger is a good religious and supportive of the rule. I put his name forward:

- a. because I thought a serious-minded man (aged 63) and experienced, would be needed in this house where there are only young religious;
- b. because we have no-one else having the age required by the Constitutions to put in his place. The Assistants, in my opinion, were not in the majority and I voted unhesitatingly for him (Roger). Yes, I accepted that Fr. Roger, despite his acknowledged qualities, could not at his age be in charge of a school with tiny youngsters; the experience we had been through in Barcelona, and which obviously the author of the memorandum ignores, had been all too sad an experience, without having it repeated at Issoudun.

4. Yes, Fr. Deidier, supportive of his Superior and the Society to which he belongs for 25 years, and having been in charge at Arles and Barcelona without serious complaints being levelled at him, was accused of over-indulgence in drink. I spoke to him about it and he replied that, since he had advanced diabetes and a heart condition as well as being vertiginous, he could be considered drunk on occasions when in fact it was not so. That's the reason why I came to his defence. But serious complaints were raised against him by three of his Glastonbury confrères. The Council, having considered the matter sufficiently proven, particularly so after the deposition by the two Assistants who confirmed that they had seen him in his cups from wine, decided that he should be moved from there, and I approved. It was felt necessary to make known the circumstances to Your Grace. I said that I didn't think it necessary to do so since it only involved a change of address and not an expulsion. Since there was insistence on your being informed, I added: "What advantage is to be gained by the loss of his reputation with the Archbishop since nothing like this is called for?" What is not mentioned in the memorandum, no doubt through forgetfulness, is that when the letter from the secretary was about to be sent notifying Your Grace of the change (for Deidier) and the appointment of a young priest, three other Glastonbury confrères of his wrote to me defending Fr. Deidier of the charges brought against him. And he himself wrote to me in the same post asking to be heard before being condemned. It was at that moment I decided to send two Assistants to make enquiries on the spot in order to get to the truth of matters more readily; the majority agreed with this proposal. What is the purpose in this article of the following ill thought out phrase which is highly questionable: "It is to be noted that Fathers Maillard, Roger and Deidier are among the relatively few priests who Fr. General does not consider among the opposition." All my confrères are my children and hold the same place in my heart and I extend the same love to all of them.

5. I asked Bishop Navarre on his return from England if the priests in Glastonbury had spoken against Fr. Deidier and he replied in Fr. Maillard's presence: "Father, they say the same about (against) all who are on your side." I understood as a matter of course, and Fr. Maillard as well, that the words "they say" were applicable also to the Glastonbury priests. It would appear that, as the Bishop understood it, this phrase was applicable to all our members who do not support me. Can I be accused of lying?

6. Brother Courbon, a scholastic, remained inside the curtains in the dormitory with one of his companions and they disturbed the others for quite some time. In order to get at the truth I had the two concerned brought before me, who admitted the facts to me. I do not recall having recourse to the word "midnight" because I couldn't be given the time they were there together. But I accept the facts as confirmed. Is it not in keeping with the most elementary regulations, having a bearing on clarity, to be under the impression that I was mistaken about the time this situation lasted, or that memory played me false in this particular respect, rather than drawing a conclusion about a lack of sincerity?

7. Fr. Mégrét. His subjects in the first place brought to his notice what was unacceptable in the house, but that recourse should not be made to the Superior General except when that which is unacceptable continues and no attempt, according to our rules, is being made to remedy the situation. Fr. Mégrét, no doubt agitated by the remonstrances of his Superior, came looking for me requesting permission to go and see his confessor who at that moment was in Chezal-Benoît, stating that it was absolutely necessary for him to go and talk to him because he was not easy in his conscience. I felt it was right to give him permission and he would have to advise his local Superior that he would be absent, something required by the rule. If he didn't do so he would be at fault. Was it my role to do this? Quite clearly, no. Why should I be made responsible? I could have asked Fr. Reyn to make every effort to gain the confidence of Fr. Mégrét and to appoint him a member of the (house)

Council in order to make him more involved. However, Your Grace, it is right that you should know that there are distinct councils at the Sacred Heart, that of the school for outsiders which comprises the Superior, the director, the principal teachers, among them Fr. Mégret. I can only refer to this council since the other one is that of the local Superior with the Superior General, in keeping with our Constitutions appointing those who are its members. It is obviously through misunderstanding that one makes it an issue of complaint of this matter.

8. I began by saying that I never prevented, and would never do so, a confrère from going to see the Archbishop as long as there were serious reasons for doing so; it's a basic right. As for Fr. Morisseau, if I said the words he attributes to me, I regret it, but they must have been spoken undoubtedly in the context of a certain occurrence which escapes my memory. From start to finish I would never have said anything of this nature. In any event I believe it would have been wiser to say nothing to the author of the present report; charity makes it imperative.

9. From the letter Your Grace wrote to me blaming me for not putting before the Council the Fr. Klotz dossier, I come to the conclusion that one of the Assistants had complained to you about this matter. At the following meeting I made known my displeasure about this way of acting which can only stir up discontent, create problems, and come in the way of that peace amongst us which is so much to be desired. I went on to say that "...if before writing I had been asked I would have provided a plausible explanation for this delay". For one or two moments there was total silence. Noting that no-one broke it, I said: "You are saying nothing, and, nevertheless, the author of the letter is right here." It was then that Fr. Reyn uttered the words which he cited. I replied: "Dear Father, I cannot approve of your action; you know very well that I did not wish to withdraw this issue from the discussion which we must consider in Council on the orders of the Archbishop. The issue does not appear to me of such urgency that I cannot send His Grace further information. It would have been wiser to let me know your complaints before directly having recourse to the Apostolic Visitor. I would have provided you with the reasons why I so acted and the Council, most likely, would have approved." I said no more than this. Fr. Piperon spoke the words attributed to him and the author of the memorandum uttered the phrase which ends this article.

10. Yes, at the next Council meeting, out of concern for unity, so that there should be as much unanimity among us as possible, and that we should not be faced with surprises or disagreement which might lead to divisive views, I proposed that nothing should be written to Your Grace about the Society's affairs without first submitting it to the Council members. "In this way," I added, "we shall avoid letting our feelings get the better of us (in speaking) for the Congregation. It is to identify issues that His Grace the Apostolic Visitor has selected us. Let us, then, not compromise matters by being unbalanced; we must try to think and act in unison. If you wish matters to be so, let us all accept the proposal I am putting before you. For my own part, I promise to bring nothing to the notice of His Grace about the Society's affairs, or our differences, without bringing it to your notice beforehand." This proposal seemed judicious to me, as well as prudent, and I would even say something necessary in the present circumstances. All the members present accepted it except Fr. Reyn who thought it had accompanying inconveniences. Not having complete unanimity, we did not reach a conclusion other than to refer matters to Your Grace whose reply would be our rule of conduct. If following these genuine explanations, Your Grace, you consider me to be at fault, I accept in advance whatever blame you will lay upon me.

II

1. The second part of the memorandum would, in the view of its author, and something he always wanted, be the most important part of it. It begins with a proven fact. The new rules which I put forward were, in effect, the beginning of our problems, but the explanation of the facts is lacking in exactitude. The former rules, quite incomplete, did not any longer meet the needs of our Society spread in two hemispheres. I believed that it was my duty before I died to fill in the gaps and restore discipline, thereby leading to uniformity among us. With this in mind I procured the directories of the Jesuits, the Redemptorists and Marists.

My survey completed, I sent the results to the Superiors of all our European houses and those abroad, asking them, following consultation with their confrères, to let me have their comments, which I would take into consideration. I followed this up with a second copy incorporating the observations. This was returned with fresh requests, which I took for the most part into consideration. Following all these safeguards I drew the conclusion that I could promulgate these new regulations, having satisfied myself that I would be pleasing everybody. Sadly, I was very much mistaken! Imagine my amazement when I became aware that my confrères in the north (Belgium, Holland) had sent a memorandum to Rome in protest at this abuse of power. I had taken it for granted, mistakenly no doubt, that it was my duty as the founder to complete this directory and leave it to my family as a testimony from my heart. Taking this opposition to heart and anxious to secure peace, I thereupon suggested to them that these regulations should be undertaken per modum experimenti until the next Chapter when on appraisal a decision would be taken. No attention whatever was paid to my wishes. There you have the authentic story about the rules and regulations.

2. Yes, I accept that I made mistakes during the course of my administration, and I believe and hope that the good Lord in his mercy will pardon me, since I began this Sacred Heart undertaking at a young age, without experience, money, prestige and influence. I had to fight a lone battle from the beginning against unforeseen problems and obstacles of all sorts which cannot be envisioned by those who complain against me today. I had nothing to sustain me other than the grace of God, the protection of the Virgin and my concern to begin something worthwhile. Later I had to build houses, a church, etc., and find the financial resources to assure the future of our little Society. I do not look for acknowledgement on the part of those who are today enjoying these benefits, but simply justice.

Our 1880 expulsions forcing us into exile created deep-seated problems for us. The Assistants, due to a Rome rescript, were authorized to go abroad to save our novitiate and scholasticate from being ruined; this was the main reason for the cessation of Chapters after 1879, the date of the last. Those worthy fathers who criticize us have no idea what we had to suffer and go through during this time of persecution. Given these circumstances I asked Rome to give the definite approval of our Constitutions. I awaited the decree before calling a Chapter. In Rome the view was taken that there were too many additions to the Constitutions. The Sacred Congregation sent me a rescript authorizing me to call a Chapter to decide between the former text and the new one, informing me that if we chose the latter it would not approve of it until there had been a ten-year experience of it, while, on the contrary, if we chose the former text, approval would be given straightaway. At the next meeting, we unanimously chose the former text.

3. Burning issues, delicate, inopportune for some at least, were brought to the fore. Problematic, impassioned, discussions would deeply affect the assembly. The Sacred Congregation, made aware of what was happening in the assembly, came to the conclusion that the Chapter had completed its task and dissolved it. The reasons for so doing can be understood in different ways. I neither want to attribute blame or make excuses; I believe that there were faults on both sides. And since Rome wishes us to move away from the past and not go back to it, it is our duty to all that we should humbly obey. During the first years after our expulsion, irregularities crept in; this is true. But the Holy See, having acknowledged them to be involuntary and understandable, revalidated everything in a general validation. I freely withdraw the words 'opposition', 'revolt', no longer considering my good confrères as other than good religious ready to make sacrifices to cement an 'entente cordiale' (a common expression in English also meaning mutual understanding, agreement) and from now on living and sharing in the most complete way possible.

4. At my request, several times re-stated, and warmly supported by the Archbishop, a new Chapter was called for last February. Everything seemed to have proceeded most properly, and so I thought myself as I welcomed the Chapter members with the warmest of welcomes. But given certain submissions and confidences made to the Apostolic Delegate, the Bishop (delegate) was led to believe that there was a prior understanding among some Chapter members to impose on the Chapter the individuals they wanted. They were drawn towards this way of thinking by an occurrence which I must mention here. The Sacred Congregation had authorized the Chapter delegates to put in writing what expectations they considered likely to be helpful for the good of the Society, which would be forwarded to Rome together with the Chapter details. However, those observations of the three newly-elected Assistants were so damaging to the Superior General and his administrators that the Sacred Congregation was, without a doubt, so taken aback that it issued a decree suspending the new Assistants from carrying out their functions, provisionally appointing the previous Assistants and requesting the Bishop of Sinope to carry out a discreet investigation to arrive at the truth. The opposition reacted and sent memoranda after memoranda to Rome. It was at this moment that Leo XIII became aware of what was going on, and in a new decree he appointed His Grace Archbishop Boyer as Apostolic Visitor, with plenipotentiary powers to pave the way for, and restore, peace among us. How and when in all this have I been lacking in loyalty and propriety and brought matters into disrepute? Your Grace will judge for himself.

Please accept, Your Grace, my deepest regards in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: To provide proof of my wish to do the best in every way, to avoid any occasion for discontent and worry, I requested at our last meeting that an adviser other than Fr. Piperon, first Assistant, living in Chezal-Benoît, be made available to me. I put forward Fr. Reyn's name. All the Assistants approved of this choice. I hope that this initiative will pre-empt more than one problem and help towards bringing about unity among us.

18931122X

Council Meeting, November 22, 1893

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Reyn, Vaudon, Assistants.

The perusal of Fr. Reyn's memorandum. Fr. General's submission. The views of the Assistants.

1. Proceedings began with a survey of Fr. Reyn's memorandum to the Apostolic Visitor (the Archbishop), and sent back by His Grace to be examined in Council. After the memorandum was read in its entirety, with Fr. Reyn adverting to different issues in which he believed there was a lack of correct procedure on the part of Fr. General, he read the submission he had himself prepared with respect to the facts mentioned and complained about. There followed an observation by each one in turn about the memorandum.

Fr. Vaudon is not happy about the memorandum, however much he thinks it was motivated by a genuine love of the Society, because he finds its wording excessively imbalanced and wanting in respect for the Founder. Fr. Piperon thought the accusations were in no way justified, with certain facts presented inaccurately or incompletely, and this does not suggest good will. Fr. Morisseau overlooks any ill will on the part of Fr. Reyn, but refers to certain observations which seem to him imbalanced. Without passing a verdict on the basic thrust of the memorandum he thought it would be helpful if, in prompting professions of loyalty on both sides, it could lead towards perfect agreement.

Fr. Reyn added further to his memorandum and had his reservations about the opposing memorandum of Fr. General.

2. Fr. Giovanelli thinks that it is necessary for him to be the support of his family, especially his two young sisters who are in a difficult situation following their father's death. He asks to leave the Congregation and remain outside while his presence is necessary to the family, especially in looking after his sisters. Whatever the family requirements, which are not as compelling as he alleges, on the suggestion of Fr. Carrière, the Council was of the view that his (Giovanelli's) appeal should be met in which he requests release from his vows for an indeterminate period.

The lay brother Gaspard accepted for renewal of his temporary vows.

3. With the favourable approval of Fr. Reyn, his former Superior, Brother Thelen Gaspard was accepted for renewal of his three-yearly vows which expire on December 8.

Fr. Galloway, Glastonbury, asks to leave the Society.

4. Fr. Galloway urgently asks, for reasons of conscience, to leave the Society, and the decision was taken, given his repeated demands, to grant immediately his request. It must be made clear to him that in order to be released as soon as possible from his obligations he should refer matters to the Apostolic Visitor (the Archbishop).

Decision as regards Brother Fusshöller

5. Brother Fusshöller, forced to give up his studies due to very defective eyesight, has asked to remain as a lay brother and go on the missions. He was at first chosen to go to Fr. Bontemps, but then on his (Bontemps) recommendation this posting was cancelled. Meanwhile, the said brother, having seen an Antwerp oculist who informed him that his sight was good enough to continue studying, wants to continue his studies in Europe. In order to bring all these comings and goings to an end, it was decided that since he was German he should be made available to Bishop Couppé who needs people of German nationality, with His Lordship free to have him continue studying or accept him as a lay brother. He himself (Fusshöller) accepts this decision, being prepared to go either to Bishop Couppé or Fr. Bontemps.

L 18931126

To His Grace Jean-Pierre Boyer, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, November 26, 1893

Your Grace,

We are forced to dispose of some of our property in Salzburg (Austria) because the city wants to build a hospice on the site. Since this sale is forced on us, we have, undoubtedly, to meet the approval of the Holy See in keeping with the requirements of our Constitutions, number 57, 12. Persuaded that Your Grace can, by virtue of the unlimited powers bestowed on him, authorize us in this matter, we deferentially request that it be granted.

With deep respect I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

18931127X

Council Meeting, November 27, 1893

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Reyn, Vaudon.

Fr. Delmas appointed to Barcelona; Fr. Meynier to Chezal-Benoît.

1. Fr. Delmas from Chezal-Benoît is moved to Barcelona where he replaces Fr. Assunto who is leaving for the New Britain mission. Fr. Reynier will replace Fr. Delmas at Chezal-Benoît and, besides supervising, he will continue his theological studies under the guidance of Fr. Blanchet. Fr. Meynier's role in the day school will be taken over by a scholastic who will be chosen by Fr. Reyn in agreement with Fr. Vandel.

Fr. Klotz's letter.

2. A letter was read which is about to be sent to Fr. Klotz requesting him to withdraw his appeal to Rome and bring himself to ask for pardon which will certainly be granted to him on the recommendation of the Apostolic Visitor.

Letter to the Archbishop.

3. The detailed discussion which arose from Fr. Reyn's memorandum was noted. It was decided that a letter based on this discussion should be forwarded to the Archbishop in which the consultors would do their utmost to forget past differences and attempt to make it possible for the Archbishop to reach a definitive decision.

Discussions about making the Gilbert Islands' mission into an Apostolic Vicariate.

4. A discussion took place about setting up an Apostolic Vicariate for the Gilbert and other islands of Micronesia, and an appeal will be made to the Cardinal Prefect of the Propaganda Congregation setting out what follows:

- a) the mission is flourishing; there are more than 3,000 baptisms.
- 2. The conclusion is that the setting up of a Vicariate is a necessity for the following reasons:
  - i. The prestige and authority which would follow from the appointment of a bishop.
  - ii. The greater credibility which would ensue with the government in dealing with mission concerns.
  - iii. The moral impact which such a status would give to the head of the mission in challenging the numerous and hostile Protestants in these islands.

c. The particular reasons for bestowing the dignity of Apostolic Vicar on Fr. Bontemps are his personal qualities and his apostolic labours over 7 years. His becoming a bishop would be a just reward for his zeal.

d. Nevertheless serious considerations would not favour the setting up of a new Vicariate by the Congregation. There is a small number of Catholics and it could only get by with serious demands made on the Vicariates of New Guinea and New Britain. In addition to the present personnel of the mission, 3 priests and 2 lay brothers, one can offer no more than ten in support, of whom five are priests, or hoping to be priests, and five are lay brothers and to these some sisters would be added.

e. The particular circumstances drawing the Council to put forward this request at the present moment when we acknowledge our lack of numbers, are influenced by the presence of Fr. Bontemps in Europe. If it was thought fitting that he should become Vicar Apostolic, he could easily be made a bishop whereas once he has returned to these remote islands he could not without great difficulty be ordained by another bishop.

Brother van der Heijden sent to help Fr. Offermans.

5. Fr. Offermans, Superior in Tilburg, in charge of the lay brothers' novitiate, reasonably points out that the personnel available to him is insufficient in relation to the novitiate and Petite Oeuvre, and the decision was taken to send him Brother van der Heijden as helper.

17 postulant lay brothers admitted.

6. Seventeen lay brother postulants were accepted on the recommendation of Fr. Offermans.

Jan van Bussel, born December 16, 1868, Dutch, a farmer's son; military service completed.

Desiré Aloys Heysse, born February 24, 1861, Belgian, a builder's son, also watchmaker.

Adr. Paschasius Kockx, born May 13, 1872, a carter by profession.

Edward Plaschaert, born July 17, 1871, Dutch, baker.

Jan Cornelis Schellekens, born February 27, 1873, Dutch, gardener.

Jean Louis van Riel, Born May 10, 1873, Dutch, painter.

Petrus de Moor, born January 31, 1869, Dutch, gardener.

Jean Ferdinand Hatzig, born July 31, 1868, German, no profession.

Antoine Hartmann, born November 13, 1866, German, former soldier, hospital nurse.

Lambert Otterdijk, born June 17, 1873, Dutch, labourer, basket-maker.

Henricus Joosten, born December 4, 1869, Dutch, has done military service.

Adr. Egbertus Arnoldus Verwiel, born May 4, 1875, Dutch, baker.

Antonius Godefr. Marie Vogels, born August 18, 1874, Dutch, apprentice carpenter.

Jean Bapt. Jos. de Cocq, born March 23, 1873, Dutch, former student of Petite Oeuvre which he left in 1890, because of lack of interest in studies; he then became a painter.

Aug. Jean Roozen, born June 23, 1873, Dutch; shoemaker.

Jan Lasters, born May 12, 1869, Belgian, labourer, has done his military service.

Hein van Thienen, born November 11, 1862, Dutch, baker.

Approval for sale of part of the Salzburg property.

7. The Salzburg house finding it necessary to sell part of its property because of the city's need to build a hospital, and with Fr. Hartzler estimating, not without reason, that this alienation of property cannot take place without the approval of the Holy See, the Archbishop and Apostolic Vicar must see to it that neither the finances or the Salzburg house are compromised in this handing-over. Once this two-fold condition is met, the permission granted becomes absolute.

L 18931127

Issoudun, November 27, 1893

Dear Fr. Blanchet,

Aware of your piety and devotedness, I always thought that you wanted to go on the missions. That's the reason I spoke to you, but as you do not feel so drawn the good Lord is not calling you.

I understand, my friend, that having ministered at Issoudun you sometimes feel somewhat bored at Chezal-Benoît. It is only natural that you miss the work you took charge of with zeal and success.

Just the same, dear Father, given that we are fulfilling the will of God made known by our Superiors, this indeed is what's essential to get to heaven. Keeping to the requirements of obedience we are surely in the path of salvation. You are conversant with this language which is that of faith. Following one's own will is not always the best thing for us. Patientiam habet (be patient)... A time will come when we can meet your wishes. You are providing a worthwhile contribution at Chezal-Benoît. The confrère who replaced you in the parish does not have the required qualities for the important role you are presently filling. Be of good heart, then, my friend; if you have time to spare after preparing your classes and fulfilling your duties, prepare some homilies and retreats which could be advantageous to you later. The time you spend teaching will not, believe me, be time lost. You have all the requisite qualities to do well. Keep on translating the book I gave you. The fiftieth year of Mother Gaillard's profession is on October 9. This will be a special celebration at the convent. Come, if possible, and assist at it and you will be pleased; we shall be happy to see you there. Arrange this with Fathers Piperon and Lanctin.

Cheerio, my friend. I greet you most warmly.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, December 3, 1893

Your Grace,

I am pleased to put before Your Grace a request which we intend to send to the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda if you think it opportune. If so, we would request Your Grace to be kind enough to stamp it with your seal of approval.

With deepest regards and good wishes, I am Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in S. Corde Jesu.

J.F. Morisseau, MSC, Secret.

Your eminence,

Jules Chevalier, Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, whose mother house is at Issoudun, and the Procurator Generalate in Rome, Via Sapienza 32, together with his Assistants gathered in Council to discuss setting up an Apostolic Vicariate in the Micronesian mission comprising the Gilbert and other islands, are pleased to place before your distinguished Eminence what follows.

1. The flourishing state of this mission confided to the aforementioned Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, and administered by Fr. Bontemps since 1886, has been confirmed in a report from the same individual already sent to Your Eminence, and a copy of which we enclose. According to this report more than 3,000 natives have already been baptized and practise the Christian virtues. This number can only increase when missionaries become more numerous.
2. The need of a Vicar Apostolic to meet the requirements of this exciting mission seems urgent to us. If Your Eminence will allow us to put forward our reasons to him:
  - a. The episcopal dignity would provide greater prestige and authority for the mission head viz-à-viz the natives, and be an imposing challenge to the Protestants who are a major obstacle to the development of the faith in these lands.
  - b. The Apostolic Vicar of New Britain, who has overall responsibility for this mission, finds it impossible to go there on a visit and correspond with the missionaries because there's no boat sailing between New Britain and these far-away islands.
  - c. The title of Vicar Apostolic would offer greater prestige with the government in charge of these islands and also in dealing with the interests of the mission.
3. Nevertheless, we must candidly put before Your Eminence our concern that we shall not be able to sustain this mission when we take into account the small number of our missionaries and the demands on our Congregation, already having responsibility for the Vicariates of New Guinea and New Britain which are a burden above its present resources and involve a large number of its members. We would like to make available to Micronesia a multitude of evangelical confrères, but despite our best intentions we are unable to add to the two priests and two brothers. Fr. Bontemps has at present no more than two other priests, two sub-deacons, one ordained to the tonsure, and five lay brothers to all of whom there will be added some religious sisters to evangelize the women. One does not foresee that new missionaries can be made available for some years.
4. On many occasions we have asked ourselves if it would not be more advantageous for this mission, and for our other two Vicariates and indeed for the Congregation itself, overly weighed down with undertakings, if we should not request Your Eminence to hand over to other societies more rich in members than we are, the evangelization of these countries. But we have always held back before such a request. Let Your Eminence, who has responsibility for all the missions, decide what is most opportune. If in his considered opinion he judges it to be opportune that we should keep this mission, despite our lack of personnel, then relying on the special assistance of the Sacred Heart which is our support we shall try to maintain it in keeping with the measure of our resources. We shall be all the more pleased to keep it since our priests were the first to land on these shores.
5. On this supposition, and for the reasons given above, we would presume to ask you to raise Fr. Bontemps to the dignity of Vicar Apostolic, he being the first apostle of the Gilbert Islands, making it thereby possible for him to exercise with greater authority the Apostolic Vicariate of Micronesia. He has in everybody's estimation all the qualities fitting him for this demanding role, and it would be a fitting reward for his zeal, the challenges he faced over his seven years of apostolic endeavour in these regions among people so wonderfully well disposed to receive evangelical enlightenment.

The reason why we submit this request to Your Eminence at a time when we feel obliged to acknowledge our inability to take on the burden of a new Vicariate, is that Fr. Bontemps, presently in Europe and due to remain some further months, could easily receive episcopal consecration, something which would not be possible without great difficulty once he returns to these islands lost in the (Pacific) oceans at the antipodes of Europe.

May the Lord keep you in good health!

So ends the appeal.

Council Meeting, December 4, 1893

In attendance: Fr. General, Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Reyn, Vaudon, Assistants.

Acceptance of Brothers Didacus and Anthony for renewal of vows.

1. On the recommendation of Fr. Hartzler the lay brothers Didacus Maierhofen and Antoine Tober were accepted for renewal of vows due to expire on January 6.

Scholastics accepted: Laurenti for the diaconate, Lebeau for minor orders and the sub-diaconate.

2. The decision was taken, on the proposal of Fr. Carrière, to accept Brother Laurenti for the diaconate and Brother Lebeau, supported by Fr. Ramot, for minor orders and the sub-diaconate.

Decision with respect to the senior pupil Van Berkel.

3. The decision was taken that the senior pupil Van Berkel, who arrived from the Gemert College in Holland, and shortly returns to his country to do military service which he hopes to be exempted from, will be accepted for the novitiate on his return, even if he hasn't completed his senior course, the reason being that he couldn't do so in Chezal-Benoît where the curriculum does not correspond to that which he has followed in Holland.

Louis François Lejoly admitted to the lay brothers' postulancy.

4. The Belgian Louis François Lejoly, a Walloon, is accepted as a lay brother postulant at Chezal-Benoît, having written a very good letter to Fr. Piperon and offering excellent references from his parish priest.

Letter from the Apostolic Visitor in reply to the Council's letter.

5. In his letter the Apostolic Visitor expressed his satisfaction with the letter forwarded to him by the Council, and he recommends that it should be forwarded to the Holy Father with the added wish, in keeping with protocol, to give effect to these sentiments by a practical example of religious virtue based on obedience and respect for authority. Fathers Reyn and Morisseau, who at first experienced some difficulties about signing, followed the other Council members and signed when they more carefully considered the thrust and meaning of His Grace's proposal.

Your Grace,

I am pleased to forward to Your Grace the letter signed by all the Council members. May it be for your devoted self and the Holy Father a gratifying first offering followed by many others! I wholeheartedly request this from Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Today, Your Grace, we celebrate the 39th anniversary of our dear Society's foundation. It was on the 8th of September 1854 that it began, the very day of the proclamation of the dogma of the Immaculate Conception. I greatly commended the foundation to the Virgin. May she enlighten and calm spirits, smooth out difficulties and bring about unity, peace, and sharing as part of a truly religious spirit! This is my prayer every day and I am prepared for every sacrifice in order to obtain this favour. If Your Grace is conscious of some demands he would like to put to me, I shall be pleased to accept whatever is asked of me.

The sale of the ground which the city of Salzburg is requesting of us in order to build a hospice, so far from being a disadvantage will on the contrary be greatly to our advantage. I kneel at the feet of Your Grace requesting your blessing and presenting my most respectful good wishes in C.J.

Your Grace,

I have the honour to inform Your Grace that we have received a cable from our confrères in Quito worded as follows: "Contract unacceptable; order departure for January 8."

The Council is of the view that the issue can no longer be deferred, given the unlikelihood of obtaining an acceptable (appropriate) foundation, and as well the requirements of our Congregation, and we must, in consequence, recall our confrères from Ecuador if Your Grace is in agreement and supports our decision before the Holy See, making a representation to His Holiness that we cannot remain indefinitely in a situation (set of circumstances) where we have no future.

With deep respect I have to honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Issoudun, December 15, 1893

J M J

Your Grace,

Yesterday I forgot to bring Your Grace's attention to an issue which I am pleased to place before you today.

Bishop Couppé, Vicar Apostolic of New Pomerania, New Britain, has a mission diocese which progresses very well, and it's through the youngsters in particular that he hopes to bring about the kingdom of God among these primitive peoples. To achieve this aim, he has set up two orphanages, one for boys which numbers more than 80 youngsters and is in the charge of our Fathers and Brothers, the other for girls in the charge of the Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Unfortunately, these sisters are too few in number and cannot meet requirements. Following repeated requests from Bishop Couppé, Mother Superior has decided to send His Lordship 4 additional sisters, one of whom, however, will not be finishing her novitiate until the 3rd of March next, and because of this there is hesitancy about letting her leave, although, otherwise, she has all the necessary qualities to become an excellent missionary. But now there comes a telegram, received two days ago, from Bishop Couppé, informing us of the death of one of the sisters, reducing their number to three. Faced with this regrettable circumstance we cannot have any hesitation about sending the 4 sisters who are due to leave about the 12th or 13th of January. Consequently, I now ask Your Grace to permit the sister in question to finish her novitiate outside the Issoudun community and make her vows in the mission. The Sisters of Our Lady, not having up to the present other than episcopal approval, come entirely under Your Grace's jurisdiction.

In ending, I would commend to Your Grace's prayers and good will this little Congregation of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart who are growing little by little in a praiseworthy spirit of humility, simplicity and great love for the Sacred Heart and the most holy Virgin. This undertaking (foundation), truly blessed by God, is one of my more consoling experiences in the midst of the trials and bitterness of the present time.

Please accept, Your Grace, my deepest regards and appreciation as I have the honour to be Your Grace's most grateful and submissive son in C.J.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, December 15, 1893

Dear Father,

Engaged and preoccupied as I have been, I could not send you before now your three-monthly sum. Here then are 200 francs (about 670 euros). Today I heard from Monsignor Caseneuve that you were present at the departure of our confrères for New Guinea. I am grateful to you.

Today we are forwarding to the Archbishop of Bourges a request to seal an appeal we are presenting to the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda requesting that Fr. Bontemps' mission be made an Apostolic Vicariate. The Archbishop of Bourges, whom I saw yesterday, greatly favours it. You for your part would do us a favour to support this request at Propaganda. In a few days the petition will be in Rome.

You are aware that Fr. Klotz has further appealed to Rome requesting to be judged in keeping with the new decree, which we were not then aware of since it only came out in November and his expulsion dates from September. The Holy See has forwarded his request to Archbishop Boyer ("pro informatione"), etc. He wants our Council to deliberate again on this matter. His Grace's expectations are that the whole issue should not be stirred up again and that he (Klotz) be favoured as on the first occasion with the conditions which he himself requested from Cardinal Verga at the time he was expelled, that is to say that he should never again have anything to do with being in charge, and is deprived as long as he lives of having a vote for or at a Chapter, or of being Superior. He acknowledges all the serious complaints laid at his door.

To meet His Grace's thinking and expectations we wrote to Fr. Klotz stating that if he wanted to withdraw his appeal to Rome, we would readmit him in keeping with the conditions he laid down himself to the Holy Father and Cardinal Verga. Following 3 weeks of reflection and, perhaps more so, consultations with his supporters, he sends a reply stating that he doesn't want pardon since he is innocent, but a decision which excuses him (absolves him) and acknowledges his rights. The Archbishop of Bourges is put off by such behaviour. As he (Klotz) wants to appeal to Rome, he (the Archbishop) went on, good, let him go there! Rome is fair-minded and will assess the situation rightly. In this whole affair Fr. Klotz and his supporters want to come back to the 1891 Chapter at which they claim to have been outrageously slandered and maligned!!! I am deeply shocked by all this. His Grace the Apostolic Visitor now sees the issue more clearly for what it is.

I do not forget you.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Your Grace,

I hasten to send you the copy of the submission which Your Grace wishes to make available to the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda.

I hope we shall have some further new recruits for Fr. Bontemps by the time he leaves which will not be until the end of February or the beginning of March. How greatly I thank you, Your Grace, for all the concern you so kindly favour us with. We are an excess of embarrassment and, perhaps, boringly burdensome to Your Grace. But what comforts me is the thought that God has chosen you to bring about unity and peace among us and restore on a firm basis our dear Society of the Sacred Heart which, I believe, is called to do a great deal of good in the Church. There needs to be energetic measures undertaken and a weeding out if certain individuals fail to impress and inspire Your Grace.

I prostrate myself before you, Your Grace, asking you to accept my filial respects and appreciative acknowledgement in C.J.

Council Meetings, December 18, 27, 1893

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Reyn, Vaudon.

Brothers Knapen, Courbon, E. Janssen, G. Van der Velden admitted to yearly vows.

1. At the request of Fr. Reyn and the appeal of those involved, Brothers Knapen, Courbon, Ernest Janssen and Guillaume Van der Velden were accepted for annual vows.

The novice Brother Claude accepted for three-yearly vows.

2. Recommended by Fr. Piperon, the lay brother novice Claude was accepted for first vows at the end of his novitiate.

The deplorable condition of the Glastonbury house.

3. Consideration was given to the present circumstances of the Glastonbury house and a letter from Fr. Audouy presented a pathetic description of the place. Considering the lack of personnel needed to promote advantageously this house, one of the Council suggested closure and others approved, but Fr. General intervened to say that His Grace the Apostolic Vicar was not in favour of any house being closed in a foreign country, being of the view that it should be kept and an effort made to improve the situation one way or another.

See here also Twohig, Late But Not Too Late; Glastonbury, passim.

Visitation of Glastonbury.

It was decided, before any decisive measure is undertaken, to have a canonical visitation of the house and Fathers Reyn and Vaudon were chosen to carry this out. The latter being unwell he was replaced by Fr. Morisseau.

Report of the visitors on Glastonbury.

The two visitors on their return read the report made following their visit. They endorsed everything which had been said about the dysfunctioning of the Glastonbury house; nothing had been exaggerated; its school embellished with the title College of the Sacred Heart is in total disarray, finances included. The lack of order in the house and its financial disarray are due in the main to the small fees paid by the students, four paying nothing and another four only paying 124 or 200 francs. It was decided that those who do not pay the 300 francs (designated fees) should be sent home to their families.

Decisions on Glastonbury.

Fr. Chétail, unable to act as Bursar because he is continually absent, Fr. Audouy will take over and apply himself first and foremost to the restoration of order in the kitchen, dining room, dormitories, etc., aided by whoever is made available to him. Once an orderly state of affairs is restored, consideration will be given, allowing for the lack of personnel, however, to the betterment of the place.

Fr. Fernand Hartzer called back to Europe (from Australia).

4. A letter from Fr. Tréand stated that Fr. Fernand Hartzer had gravely compromised himself by taking along with him a young religious (man) and two young girls. Since it isn't the first time he involved himself in similar questionable situations, the view was taken that it was a matter of some urgency to call him back to Europe. He could be sent to Glastonbury (!) where, with his knowledge of English, he could be of some service to the place.

Fr. Tréand writes of the need to build in Sydney.

5. He explains that the small size of his presbytery does not make it possible to lodge visiting missionaries or those who are unwell and need to rest. It is, accordingly, urgent to begin work on a procure on the Kensington property purchased in the Congregation's name and now about to be completely paid for.

The model would be based on the Tilburg house: Fr. Tréand suggests that the buildings should be modelled on those of Tilburg and plans should be changed a little, beginning with one section only. This would lower the cost to 125,000 francs or so.

The conditions (of the Council) for the approval of these plans.

It was thought that it wouldn't be right to approve these buildings without having set before the administration the overall plan and a precise, detailed, presentation of the work to be carried out and the estimated cost, all presented by a qualified assessor. Moreover, in order to make an estimate of the Sydney house's financial situation and whether this could allow work to begin, it was absolutely necessary to have a full account of its financial intake and outlay, with the exact amount provided of what was in the bank and what was the financial intake, as well as indicating the debts which had been contracted.

Fr. Tréand suggests that a Mr. Hockins be accepted first as a helper and then as a member of the Congregation. Given the submissions made by this gentleman, Fr. Tréand's proposal was not accepted.

6. Fr. Tréand, having been in correspondence with a young man named Hockins from the Nottingham Diocese, England, keen to go and join him in Australia, he (Tréand) suggests that he first become an auxiliary and then a member of the Congregation. This young man is a priest, but hasn't satisfactorily completed his studies. Having been a Redemptorist lay brother, he went to spend some months in Glastonbury before going to Chezal-Benoît, after which, for no serious reasons, he returned to England where, a little while later, he was ordained to the priesthood. The Council, having been informed and advised by Fr. Piperon, took the view that under no circumstances should he be accepted by Fr. Tréand.

A telegram notifying the demise of Brother Nicola (Marconi).

7. A cable arrived notifying the death of Brother Nicola on the missions. This offers an opportunity to state provisionally the masses, prayers, and benefits to which the Society's dead have a right:

a. In the house where the individual dies a service will take place. If the dead person is a priest, all the priests of the house will celebrate three masses for him, while the scholastics and lay brothers will offer three communions for him (sic). In the other houses each priest or brother will celebrate one mass or offer one communion for repose of his soul. If it's a scholastic or lay brother who has died, everywhere each priest or each brother will either say a mass or offer communion for him.

b. On receiving the news of a confrère's death, it will be made known publicly in each community and the De Propendis will be said for him, as well as the recital of the Rosary over eight days.

The contract with the Archbishop of Quito rejected by the Archdiocese Chapter. A letter from His Grace about this.

8. Fr. General presented the contract plan proposed in his name to the Archbishop of Quito, together with a letter from him and a statement from the Metropolitan Chapter in regard to the contract. The Council considered first the proposal and then two other documents. The contract laid down that the Congregation would have charge in perpetuity of the Sagrario parish's administration, and provide a sufficient number of priests to meet the requirements of both the parochial work and the religious life. The contract called for the lease in perpetuity to the Congregation of the parish church and an income of 80 monthly stipends (340 francs) in addition to parochial entitlements, offerings, and a capitular contribution, all of which are presently in vogue.

The Chapter's decision was to reject these (the above) proposals, and the Archbishop's letter expressed his disappointment about this decision against which he could take no action while at the same time appealing to the good will of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart to remain on there, offering to raise the present financial contribution to 1,000 francs.

New statement by the Council about disengaging from the Quito enterprise.

The Council accepted that there was no further reason to involve itself with the proposal since it was rejected en bloc by the Chapter and, accordingly, it called to mind what had already been stated several times. The Society could in no way continue working in Quito, either because the guarantees it sought were refused or it did not have sufficient resources (personnel and otherwise) to bring about a serious foundation, particularly so because of the absence of personnel, this being such that it could not provide the personnel needed for the only Spanish-speaking house in Europe (Canet de Mar, Barcelona).

Appeal to the Apostolic Visitor (the Archbishop of Bourges) to recall the MSCs in Quito.

The Council accordingly asked the Apostolic Visitor to intervene and get permission to recall the three priests and one lay brother in Quito, this request being all the more urgent because if there is not a January departure they cannot, due to the rainy season, leave before June, having to stay on in an impossible situation which would be particularly painful for them.

Dear Fr.,

I do not understand you demanding requirements at the present time. It's certainly not the Heart of Jesus or His divine grace which inspires and motivates you. How is it that you place yourself in contradiction with yourself? Do you forget your appeal to the Pope, to Cardinal Verga, where you acknowledge your faults, beg pardon, and draw up yourself the penances which you ask the Sacred Congregation to impose upon you? The letters, so humble and touching, so full of repentant sentiments, which you wrote to me at this time express the same sentiments.

Believing that you continued in the same disposition, the new Council very much wanted to have you back among us, with the approval of His Grace the Vicar Apostolic, under the same conditions which you intimated yourself to the Prefect of the Sacred Congregation. But you seem to have forgotten these conditions. Allow me, then, to bring to your notice the rescript where they (the conditions) are referred to by the Council itself. I very much doubt if you are aware of this official document, which will serve a twofold purpose for you.

Klotz in Institutum cum conditionibus de quibus in precibus. Contrariis quibuscumque non obstantibus.

Romae 25 januarii 1893

Signé Card. Verga Praefect.

So you will see, Father, that the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars looked upon you as being legitimately expelled. There is no question in this rescript of bringing up the November 4, 1892 decree which you introduce since your expulsion took place quite sometime beforehand, unanimously decided by the Council on August 8 of the same year. That's why the Cardinal makes no mention of it.

He gave me the right to receive you again (into the Congregation) with the approval of the Apostolic Delegate. He (the latter), however, not considering it appropriate to give me this power (permission), you remain, therefore, expelled from the Society. Nevertheless, taking into consideration you continuing wish to return, we have asked our distinguished Apostolic Visitor, who has a keen concern for us, to be kind enough to endorse an appeal which we put before you and which is similar to that which you forwarded on another occasion to Cardinal Verga asking to be pardoned. His Grace was very willing to cooperate. But you refused! It's your decision. I have been asked to inform you that if you wish to see the Archbishop of Bourges, His Grace will be happy to meet you.

Please accept, Fr., my good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, December 22, 1893

Your Grace,

I am pleased to send Fr. Klotz's dossier to Your Grace, to which I add extracts from the statements made against him by our young religious whose obedience and respect for authority was lessened (damaged) by him. The most serious accusatory letters are with the Sacred Congregation, and I am sorry I cannot place them before Your Grace. But the thrust of what was said is to be found in the copy of our discussion.

Here is my letter to Fr. Klotz in reply to his (letter 2243 above). Will Your Grace be kind enough to let me know if I should send it to him.

Added here (a copy) is our deliberation as sent to the Sacred Congregation requesting the dismissal of the offending one.

Dear Father,

You are aware that our wish to have you back among us does not begin today. We are indeed prepared to go back on our decision, but only under the express condition that you always repent of the serious wrong-doings for which you are responsible, and indeed acknowledged in a number of letters addressed to me, as well as in your appeal to the Pope. And moreover you must be positively disposed to accept the penances which you yourself mention in your letter to His Eminence Cardinal Verga. Herewith are the terms of his rescript which no doubt you are aware of:

P. Klotz ex Instituto Missionariorum SS<sup>mi</sup> Cordis Jesu cujus domus princeps extat in loco vulgo Issoudun, dioecesis Bituricensis, expulsus a praefato Instituto ad pedes S.V. provolutus, implorat, ut, non obstante ejus expulsionem, recipiatur iterum in praefato Instituto ea sub conditione ut remaneat privatus voce activa et passiva in Capitulo, et non possit elegi Superior, perdurant ejus vita quod etc.

Signé : J.Card. Verga praef.

So you see Father the Sacred Congregation looks on you as lawfully expelled, and there is no place in this rescript for the November 4 decree which you invoke; nevertheless Cardinal Verga is well aware of it since it was he who promulgated it. He has granted me the authority to accept you back with the approval of the Apostolic Delegate. His Grace, the Visitor, very well disposed to you, very much wishes to give me the permission which the Delegate refused. Consider then if you want to return to the Society under the same conditions which you put forward yourself last year. The doors are open to you and everything brought to an end. Your fate is in your own hands. If you would like to meet the Archbishop of Bourges His Grace will be pleased to see you.

Cheerio, Father. All good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun
Undated, likely December 23, 1893

Your Grace,

In keeping with the wishes of Your Grace, I am pleased to forward you the Fr. Klotz dossier, to which I add some of his letters to certain disaffected priests like himself following the break-up of the 1891 Chapter. You will judge best for yourself. I found the copy of his appeal to Cardinal Verga, to which I add the letter he sent to me from Vichy in which he acknowledged the error of his ways, accepting that he broke his promises of another time and asking for penances, etc. (see numbers 2 and 3, dossier 2). Reading this, Your Grace, will sufficiently clarify the issues for you and provide the elements of a reply which must be forwarded to Rome pro informatione et voto. It will also, no doubt, be advantageous in finding out not only the harm done at Chezal-Benoît, but also the source which gave rise to it which, for the most part, is identified with the Northern houses where Fr. Klotz lived for quite sometime, with Antwerp in particular the meeting place of the opposition. This ruffles their pride. Meanwhile, Your Grace, you may judge from the following facts if what is said in the immediate foregoing is not merited.

1. Following the January Chapter in 1891, as a result of serious problems, unacceptable demands, painful discussions, the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, having been made aware of all that had taken place and knowing that the Chapter called to decide between the new and old Constitutions had finished its work, sent a decree to dissolve it. Several members believing themselves to be deprived of their rights and standing, protested most vehemently against this decree, forwarding petition after petition to Rome insisting on convoking the same Chapter with the same personnel as before. Rome refused, whereupon there arose fresh discontent and violent opposition to the Superior whom they falsely accused of being opposed (to a new Chapter). And, something altogether more astonishing, they proceeded to go so far as calling for a break-away, (unworried about separating from the mother whose womb gave birth to them, who nourished them and brought them up. In order to give added importance to their undertaking, they had this petition also signed by those young priests whom they had won over to their cause. They made bold to contact Cardinal Mermillod asking him to intervene in their favour; he, quite horrified, repulsed them; it was he himself who told me this, giving me a copy of their letter, which I have kept.

When the break-up of the Chapter was announced, before parting, in order to avoid problems all too easy to foresee, I asked the disaffected participants to keep secret what had passed. They paid no attention whatsoever, and nothing was more pressing for them than to communicate with their subordinates, and place all the blame on those who didn't share their views. This fundamental mistake is the explanation for the bad attitude which has lasted up to recent times.

2. The Sacred Congregation ad cautelam (as a precautionary measure) granted a safeguarding decree against certain irregularities which arose in good faith in regard to professions during the years of expulsion after 1883, and members were either free to accept it or leave the Society. I went to Antwerp accompanied by the First Assistant to accept the names of those willing to remain, but I found myself faced with systematic opposition. The safeguarding would only be accepted, I was told, on the understanding that there would be an assurance about the calling of a new Chapter with the same participants.

I overlook the secret activities which the opponents undertook in Rome, most insultingly, with a certain priest-lawyer who encouraged them to continue their campaign, informing them, quite erroneously, that the Sacred Congregation would support their cause, and that a rescript of this nature would be sent to them in the very near future. I was pleased to inform them that having come from Rome where I had seen the Pope and the Cardinal Prefect, I was quite certain that the contrary was the case. What I said was neither heard or accepted. And it was the same story both at Tilburg and Salzburg when I went there. They would only accept the safeguarding decree if I put a promise in writing that a fresh Chapter would be called as soon as possible. The Antwerp Superior was deputized to go and meet me in Paris, where I found myself at that moment, to lay down this condition for me.

3. At the suggestion of the Secretary of the Sacred Congregation, Bishop Sepiacci, and Archbishop Marchal of Bourges, the decision was taken to transfer the Society's novitiate from Tilburg to Issoudun or nearby. Fr. Piperon, First Assistant, went to Holland with full power to bring back with him our young men. Fr. Klotz, removed from this house, the directors, and the Antwerp Superior who had gone there with two of his confrères, strongly protested, and made every effort to prevent the departure.

4. The Society's Council, not having people available as teachers for all our Petites Oeuvres, decided that the three upper classes in our Northern schools should join up with those in Chezal-Benoît. This judicious proposal, suggested by the Archbishop of Bourges, stirred up the most violent opposition, leading to a deaf response among both lecturers and pupils in these countries (Belgium, Holland), and which echoed as far as Rome itself, all leading to a wave of ill will.

5. The heads of the Chezal-Benoît school believed in all seriousness that they should back, support, for quite serious reasons, the youngsters who came from the North. What complaints, what dissatisfaction, what blame, was directed from Tilburg, Antwerp, Salzburg, because of these departures!

6. The Sacred Congregation, at the repeated request of the Superior General and Archbishop Marchal of Bourges, who believed that by doing so the demands of those who were dissatisfied would be met, finally decided to have a new Chapter called under the patronage of His Grace. When he died, Rome replaced him with his brother, the Bishop of Sinope, and the Chapter took place last February.

The new Apostolic Delegate, following the reports given to him, the various memoranda received and the enquiries he made among the Chapter members, forwarded a report to the Holy See and the Sacred Congregation which, on being taken into account, cancelled the roles of the new Assistants and the Procurator General, restoring provisionally the former administration. This decision led to many protests, some going as far as the Holy Father, and it was altogether a sad experience for the Sacred Congregation.

7. I do not have to mention the many complaints which were raised when Fr. Klotz was expelled, or the support given when he appealed to Rome, and the efforts made to bring about victory in the revolt against authority.

All these issues, candidly presented, will help to clarify matters for Your Grace. Aware of the problem, and the reasons for it, it will be more easy to find a remedy since it is high time that we get away from the discontented situation in which we find ourselves, and our beloved Society returns to the way divine Providence wishes it to take in order to carry out effectively its beautiful and important mission. It is in you, then, Your Grace, that, after God, we place our hopes.

Be good enough to favour us, Your Grace, with your blessing as I express my deepest regards and wholehearted acceptance in C.J.

Undated, but late December

Your Grace,

In keeping with Your Grace's wishes, I am pleased to forward you Fr. Klotz's dossier together with straightforward quotations from statements made against him by a number of our young religious whom he had turned away from obedience and respect for authority when they were in his charge at Chezal-Benoît scholasticate.

The more serious accusatory letters are with the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. Meanwhile the just measure of things is to be found in the copy containing the Council's deliberations which was sent to Rome to justify his expulsion (see the accompanying dossier, number 3).

In this dossier there are also several letters from the said priest in which he expresses regrets for his acknowledged faults, admitting that he had broken the promises he made hitherto (he had then been led to see this) and requesting forms of penance, etc. (see numbers 4,5,6,7,8). Reading this Your Grace will be sufficiently enlightened so as to provide the wherewithal of the reply which he must provide for Rome pro informatione et voto.

Here also is my letter to Fr. Klotz in reply to his, and Your Grace will kindly let me know if I should send it to him.

Please accept, Your Grace, my deepest regards as I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient son in C.J.

No date, likely end of 1893

My Lord,

We are aware that you have a great regard for Fr. Reyn, our confrère, and we also know that this dear father has unlimited confidence in Your Lordship. Very soon it will be three years since our Society began to undergo a serious crisis. Following on the expulsions (from France) serious problems arose among us on a number of occasions. The Holy See officially considered them and since it wishes that all of us should return to the most complete peace and unity, it has placed all authority in the hands of His Grace Archbishop Boyer of Bourges, who has been appointed Apostolic Visitor.

Pope Leo XIII, who greatly likes us and is aware of the good work being done by our small institute, particularly in the Oceania missions which are in our charge, now demands that we forget the past, leaving in the shadow all our differences, and come together with one heart and soul under the authoritative guidance of the Archbishop of Bourges. We are on the eve, if not to say the day itself, of this happy turn of events.

Fr. Reyn, whom we greatly appreciate and like for his commitment and outstanding qualities, worn out by the struggle in which he was involved, had reached the stage where he was thinking of abandoning his vocation. We would in the most heartfelt way come to regret this, and it would be quite disastrous, particularly so at the present moment. He enjoys the esteem and regards of all the young religious who know him, his departure likely to have a damaging impact on many vocations.

He is taking himself off to Luxembourg, My Lord, to place the outcome of things in your hands. Your decision, he claims, will be definitive for him. The Congregation's Council humbly beseeches Your Lordship to help us in this double blow.

Fr. Reyn is a young man who has been brought up by us, having been with us since he was 16 years of age. His vocation is not in doubt. Please try to keep him with us, My Lord, and you will help in avoiding the scandal which his departure would entail at large, and thereby you will help to confirm and consolidate more than one vocation in our Society. As Fr. Reyn greatly likes Your Lordship and is enthusiastically interested in your diocese which is so Catholic, later we might set up a house there under your kind patronage.

There, My Lord, is the petition we put before you and the favour we make bold to ask of you in the name of the Heart of Jesus and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Please accept, My Lord, my good wishes and deepest regards as I have the honour to be Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

To Fr. Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, January 5, 1894

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I thank you from the bottom of my heart for your New Year good wishes. Nobody more than yourself knows better how much I need them. I hope they will bring me happiness. I send you my own in turn and they are no less sincere and extensive, and if the good Lord grants them you will be successful in your endeavours and win souls for the Lord.

Like you I hope good will result from evil. But when and in what way? Only God knows. It is unfortunate that our eminent and good Archbishop still remains too unwell to engage himself actively with our affairs and act purposefully.

Our good scholastics (60 or 70 of them) who continue to have Fr. Vandel as director and Fr. Reyn as local Superior at the Sacred Heart are found to be lacking more and more in the religious spirit; I suffer and I pray.

With the recommendation of the Apostolic Visitor we asked Fr. Klotz to come back to the Society under the conditions he himself put to Cardinal Verga at the time of his expulsion, and he withdraws thereby his appeal to Rome. He has now replied to the Archbishop of Bourges saying that he doesn't want to return as a favour, but rather as someone who has been justified (upheld) by the Sacred Congregation. Archbishop Boyer proceeded, therefore, to ask me to let him have the complete dossier in order to prepare it and provide Rome with his assessment of it pro informatione et voto. This dossier, which I added to with former letters from Fr. Klotz where he stirred up trouble one way or another, and acknowledges all the complaints associated with him, would seem in my mind to weigh heavily against him. If the Visitor's verdict is that his expulsion should be confirmed, as I believe it will, the Sacred Congregation will follow suit. If, against my expectations, there must be a judicial process, I shall forward a copy of the dossier to you which you will have examined by a lawyer of your choice who will argue your case for you.

As regards Quito, I firmly believe that we shall be forced to leave the place. I am forwarding a letter to you from Fr. François Barral which will update you about the issue. The new Archbishop, Gonzales, has written an official letter to me confirming what Fr. Barral said, adding that he cannot go against the decisions of his Chapter which he forwarded to me. I forwarded all of this to Archbishop Boyer who advised me to call a Council meeting, which I did, and the decision was taken that, given these conditions being put to us, we could not stay on in Sagrario. I sent on all the documents to the Apostolic Visitor (the Archbishop of Bourges) who will pass them on to the Holy See.

Cheerio, my friend; oremus pro invicem.
Wholly yours in Corde Jesu.

Council Meetings, January 15, 18, 1894

In attendance: Fr. General, Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Vaudon. Absent Fr. Reyn, travelling.

Brothers Félix Lacasse and Herman Müller accepted for renewal of temporary vows.

1. At their written request and supported by Bishop Couppeé, the above-named lay brothers were accepted for renewal of their three-yearly vows.

The lay brother novices Bernard Werner Buller, Fridolin Sebastian Dehm, H. Roestenberg and Guillaume Marie Gem were accepted for profession on the proposal of Fr. Offermans. Buller and Dehm both German, Roestenberg Dutch and Gem (not clearly stated where he came from) have completed their novitiate and provided sufficient guarantees for persevering. Another individual who had finished his novitiate was held back because he didn't provide sufficient guarantees. The Novice Master is authorized to send him away if he thinks it opportune.

Brother Cziczikowski's request.

2. The above has permission to go home for the reasons given, but there seems to be no urgency and his departure is put off until the holidays.

Proposal to send scholastics to stay at Chezal-Benoît for the baccalaureate.

Four philosophers requested that they study for the baccalaureate, but they need a science teacher to do so. It was mentioned that they might be sent to Chezal-Benoît where there is such a teacher, but one was aware of some drawbacks by so doing and nothing was decided.

A survey of financial accounts for the first part of 1893.

The franc in 1894 would have been more or less equivalent to 3.40 euros in 2009.

3. The accounts now examined are those for the first three months of 1893 and forwarded from the houses of Issoudun, Chezal-Benoît, Paris, Rome, Tilburg, Antwerp, Salzburg, Glastonbury. The houses of Watertown, Quito and Sydney had sent nothing.

Although they may not add up, the following figures are as given.

1. The account from the Sacred Heart (Issoudun).

The accounts are regularly balanced, except that the overall financial situation indicates a debt which does not exist. Intake: 26,720 francs; expenses met 26,072.65 which spread among 86 people comes to 303 francs for each person every three months, and 51 francs monthly.

2. Chezal-Benoît.

The accounts are properly kept. Receipts were 55,408.25 francs. Paid, or to be paid, 55,859.91 francs, which spread among 174 people comes to 309 francs for each person every three months, and 51 francs monthly.

3. Paris.

The accounts are regularly kept, but there is an imbalance. From 15,006.30 francs expenses met came to 13,694.40 francs of which 6,706.55 francs was visitor expenditure, all of which spread among 8 people became individually 838 francs every three months, 139 each month. This exaggerated figure is due to the cost of hospitality relating to this house.

4. The Rome house.

The accounts have been very inadequately dealt with. Over a total of 40,210.58 francs, expenses came to 39,475.96 francs, a deficit of 734.62 francs. The expenses arising from upkeep were 27,738.32 francs which shared among 34 people becomes 819.83 francs every three months, 135 each month. This excessive sum is double that of other houses and comes about for different reasons, as Fr. Carrière explains, while proving convincingly that this house cannot suffice for itself given:

- a) The number of students of whom there are twenty between the major and minor seminary (this last the Rome Petite Oeuvre) whereas the amount of money available for this house scarcely suffices for 10 people.
- b) The annals. 6,000 copies are sent out, but only 2,000 are paid for or have contributions funded.
- c) The Church. Its upkeep is costly with three sacristans, then there is maintenance of the property as well as the four chaplains' expenses for the masses they undertake (stipends 2.50 francs), and there could be self-sufficiency here because of the intake of mass stipends but, since two-thirds of these mass offerings go to Fr. Jouët's oratory, this source is in fact quite diminished.

In order to reduce these debts the Council undertook to ask Fr. Carrière to decrease gradually the number of pupils and to bring to the Cardinal Vicar's notice that, while other Congregations could meet the expenses of their schools and colleges, we could not do so at the present time because of the excessive financial burdens which weighed upon the Society. As regards the Annals, every effort must be made to make the publication interesting, disengaging from supplying copies which do not serve the house and its undertakings financially.

As for the church, Fr. (Carrière) should carefully consider if three sacristans and four chaplains are absolutely essential, and make clear in every possible way the difference between our undertakings and that of Fr. Jouët. Undoubtedly it would be desirable if one could decorate and embellish this church which is the main centre of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Archconfraternity, and thereby make it figure prominently among so many distinctive churches which abound in the Eternal City. Fr. Carrière hopes to make an appeal among the Society's houses which are more financially stable; but it does seem that this is not the time to make this appeal, and for more reasons than one.

5. The accounts of the Tilburg house.

The accounts are perfectly in order. The figure of 5,543 francs in charitable contributions was considered excessive. Perhaps the contribution to the Holy See was included in that figure. From a total of 131,904.85 francs the expenses of upkeep came to 26,774.78 francs which spread among 72 people comes to 345 francs for each one every three months, 59 francs each month.

6. The Antwerp accounts.

The accounts are kept quite properly. The money spent on printing costs and promotion was thought excessive, as much as 26,396 francs, and the expenses paid out on the property 35,000 francs, and 250,528 yet to be paid. From 272,245.21 francs, or a total of 475,599.21 francs, upkeep expenses came to 41,073 francs which spread among 121 people comes to 339 francs every three months and 56 monthly. The debt is 203,354.08 francs.

7. The Salzburg accounts.

The accounts are in order except that florins should be converted into francs. The sum set aside for the maintenance of the buildings, 2,041 florins, was considered excessive, and one doesn't see the point of associating 398 florins as subsidy for a provincial house which doesn't exist. Intake was 49,920.35 florins (96,287 francs): expenses 45,851.24 florins. (The same figure as with the 42,920.35 florins above is given in francs, 96,287.60!) Debts come to 149,950 francs. Liabilities come to 241,237.60 francs. Living expenses came to 32,821.21 francs spread among 79 people which comes to 415 francs for each person every three months and 69.26 francs monthly. This high figure is explained, perhaps, by the fact that included among the expenses of upkeep is the sum of 5,027 florins as expenditure on culture. The debt is 149,950.60 francs.

8. The Barcelona house.

The accounts are normally badly kept. The balance dealing with the financial situation has not been made. The intake has not been shown since the intake is not represented nor the assets. For the preceding three months the receipts were 46,581.18 francs, the expenses 24,953 francs. The expenses for upkeep were 6,680 francs spread among 22 people which comes to 339 francs every three months and 50 francs each month.

Comment called for about the low cost of meat and vegetables. It was calculated (at the Council meeting) that the cost of meat for each person came to 6.50 francs a month, or 39 francs every three months, with vegetables costing no more than 1.10 a month for each one, or a little more than 3 cents each day. This begs the question: how and from what do the Barcelona confrères exist (live)?

9. The Glastonbury house.

The accounts which are not kept in proper order outline a pathetic financial situation. The receipts are not kept in orderly fashion since there is no mention of the interest accruing from a financial deposit placed with Mr. Munster at 5 per cent and at present comprising 5,000 francs. (For Munster see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, passim.) Secondly, the renting of a field for the use of the house is given as revenue. Bringing together these binding accounts and adding 800 francs deposited with the bank, and Mr. Munster's 5,000 francs, the sum of 18,632.25 francs is positively arrived at. On the other hand, in adding to the expenses paid or due to be paid (32,604 francs), the 27,000 francs due on the property, there is a deficit of 40,972.15 francs. The upkeep expenses are 9,568.85 francs which spread among 50 people comes to 191.36 francs over three months and 31.89 francs each month.

10. The Issoudun presbytery.

The accounts are not provided, a number being quite simply taken from the general expenses which later is given as 7,069 francs, this shared among 10 people coming to 706.90 francs for each one over three months and 117.80 francs each month. This exceptionally high sum isn't surprising because of the expenses involved in accommodating people in the presbytery.

11. The Mother House, or general bursary, accounts.

Most of the financial intake comes from mass stipends, donations made to the Petite Oeuvre and for the missions, as well as various other contributions such as the intake from the Annals and what is offered by the other houses towards the upkeep and education of the Petite Oeuvre students and those of the scholasticate. The total in all comes to 292,642 francs. The main expenses are met from the contributions and subsidies made available by the different houses of the institute, the contribution made by offerings on behalf of the missions, printing expenses, mass offerings and contributions to the Pope. The total sum reaches 284,461.55 francs.

Council Meetings, January 15, 17, 1894

Meeting of scholasticate lecturers.

1. The decision was taken that a meeting of the scholasticate lecturers should take place every 15 days.

Brothers Guillaume and Michel accepted for the priesthood.

2. It was agreed that Brothers Guillaume and Michel, both deacons, should be put forward for ordination to the priesthood.

An appeal to Cardinal Rampolla to recall the Quito confrères.

3. The Council was informed by Fr. General that the Archbishop of Quito had advised him that he was not authorized in any way to allow us to abandon the Quito mission and, consequently, he directs us in this matter to Cardinal Rampolla. It was decided that a request should be made to His Eminence, endorsed by His Grace the Apostolic Visitor (the Archbishop of Bourges).

Information about the German attitude to the New Britain mission, with reference to Bishop Couppé and the Society.

4. Fr. Reyn referred to a trip he made to Berlin. He provided a number of comments made by a Cologne canon who was a member of the Empire's colonial council, offering observations about the New Britain mission, the relationship of Bishop Couppé and the German administration and the scarcely welcoming attitude of the German authorities towards the Congregation.

Fr. Ilge requests release from his vows.

The Council then considered Fr. Ilge whom Fr. Reyn went to visit in Berlin. He, having seriously compromised himself in Salzburg and elsewhere, agreed to ask for release from his vows and write a request to this effect.

To His Grace Jean-Pierre Boyer, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, January 17, 1894

Your Grace,

I am pleased to bring to your notice a decision taken in Council and for which we request your approval. The provisional Superior at Glastonbury (England), who has been replacing the appointed Superior because he had to be recalled for health reasons (see below), has asked us to urgently provide him with at least two competent people to take on the role of teachers and two lay brothers to look after the material well-being of the house. The Council however, regrettably, is unable to make anybody available who is competent, English or knows English, and adequately meets the request. It is equally regrettable that the Council finds it impossible to find a Superior with the requisite qualities to raise the standards of this house, which is in a deplorable financial position, and also with respect to studies.

For these reasons it was unanimously decided that as the college could not make progress with its present personnel, the students, who are no more than thirty, should be dismissed on the occasion of the Easter holidays. I request Your Grace to be kind enough to sanction this decision.

With deep respect I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in S. Corde Jesu.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

*Deidier was in name the Glastonbury Superior, having replaced Ramot following the February 1893 Chapter, but he had to be relieved of his duties by the General Council on October 23, 1893, when C. To His Grace Jean-Pierre Boyer, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, January 17, 1894

Your Grace,

For some time now I have felt the need to withdraw from being at the centre of my community to give myself more fully to it. I even spoke about it to your esteemed predecessor, who favoured such a proposal, but at the same time asked me to postpone doing so until the moment arrived when His Grace could, as he said, put forward one of us to replace me, since, as he remarked, "...the Issoudun parish is of help to your Congregation either by way of avoiding a parish priest who would be unsympathetic to you, frictions which are anything but conducive to the good and well-being of a place, or what would keep you away from the intrigues of the secular authorities if you were not securely established in the town. The priests whom you appoint to the parish I consider as my own and I can come to their defence." When Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne offered us the parish of Issoudun in 1872, I put forward good reasons against accepting it. He replied: "I do not wish to impose it on you, but I am only acting in the best interests of your Society. We live in a Republic and in France this can give way to excess. Who knows if one day the responsibility for this parish might not be for your institute and its undertakings a plank of salvation." This prophecy was fulfilled. At the time of the expulsions, without the Issoudun parish the dispersal would be complete and our dear basilica would have been closed, the huge Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association finding itself paralysed and our resources wiped out.

1. Accordingly, Your Grace, once my successor is appointed and chosen from the diocesan clergy, we will no longer have the parish church at our disposal for the archconfraternity meetings, Your Grace requesting us to have them in our basilica as in the past, and to receive the associate members there without opening, let it be understood, the doors facing the public street. In this way the local civil authorities, who are aware that the people go into our Sacred Heart Chapel, will close their eyes just as they have done over many years.
2. I founded, Your Grace, 16 or 17 years ago, the religious community of the Religious Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, having in mind our missions. Archbishops de la Tour d'Auvergne and Marchal ratified me as the Superior under their immediate jurisdiction, as you yourself, very appropriately, have confirmed me by word of mouth in this same role (see note below). In order to avoid any misunderstanding with whomsoever replaces me, I venture to ask Your Grace if it is your intention to confirm me in this role?

3. On Tuesday last Your Grace said to me when discussing the Fr. Klotz issue that I had no-one supporting me except Fr. Piperon and those religious who are on our missions. Your Grace has undoubtedly been misinformed. If he could pay a visit either on his own or through a delegate, something which to me seems necessary at the present time, to our different houses, at least those of Issoudun and Chezal-Benoît, he would straightaway be made aware that the contrary was the case. He would note that all my confrères in Rome, Quito (Ecuador), Watertown (USA), Barcelona, even England, Sydney, Paris, with the exception of Fr. Delaporte, the parish priest of Issoudun and the Sacred Heart, support me, except for two or three who have brought from Antwerp a bad attitude, introducing it among our young religious in the scholasticate.

The letter abruptly ends here, without a signature. As for the foundation of the sisters, 16 or 17 years would go back to 1877 or 1878, but in fact the sisters were founded on August 30, 1874. While stating that the purpose of the sisters was mission-focused, it has to be kept in mind that before the re-launching by Mother Hartzler in 1882, the emphasis was not, as it now became, on "foreign missions". The Archbishop was alive and involved in 1877 and 1878; he ratified Chevalier as Superior, in 1874 approving the new foundation and the preliminary Rules. Chevalier could more rightly say in the above letter to the Archbishop: "I founded the sisters about 20 years ago."

Issoudun, January 20, 1894

Your Grace,

When in 1872 Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne offered the parish of Issoudun to the Society, I put forward good reasons against accepting it. His Grace replied to me: "I do not wish to impose myself on you; I am acting specifically in the best interests of your Congregation. We are living in a republic! And being France this can be taken to excess. Who knows if one day having this parish might be for your institute and its undertakings a plank of salvation." This prophecy has been fulfilled. At the time of the expulsions the radical town council made every attempt to have us removed from the parish and from Issoudun. My irremovable appointment was always a stumbling block and rendered them powerless. In 1892 wishing more than ever to retire from the Sacred Heart so that I could devote myself entirely to the leadership of our Society, I discussed the matter with your distinguished predecessor who greatly appreciated this proposal: "Yes," he said to me, "the issue seems an urgent one to me, but I would like beforehand to replace you with one of your own since the parish of Issoudun is needed by your Congregation either to avoid, with a parish priest (not yours), awkward issues always getting in the way, or to have you safeguarded from the threats and inconveniences of a troublesome government. The priests you have working in my diocese and which you appoint to the presbytery, I look upon all of them as my own... and I can defend and support them as I have always done. I shall proceed to consider some arrangement and while waiting I would ask you to go and stay at the Sacred Heart because you have serious-minded and experienced curates who can replace you in day-to-day issues. You would only need to go and spend some time each day at the presbytery. On Sundays and feasts you could remain the whole day and you would deal with the authorities on serious matters." His Grace's death intervened and I stayed with the status quo until now.

Might not Your Grace, who is keenly interested in us, share this way of thinking? The republic is far from allowing itself to be disarmed. Fresh persecutions are still very likely to come our way. On the one hand the Issoudun parish remaining with our institute over the last 22 years would continue to be great security for us in these difficult times we are passing through, and on the other hand my presence in the mother house would make it easier for me to look after our little Society, aided by the wise advice of Your Grace.

The parish administration would not suffer in any way. I have two older priests, two of whom are former parish priests, and three others have been with me for some time, one over 16 years, Fr. Hériault, and another for the last 12 years, Fr. Bizeuil. If necessary I could provide two more, both from the Berry: Fr. Godinoux, aged 44, formerly parish priest at Quincy, prisons' chaplain at Bourges, and Fr. Blanchet, formerly parish priest of Méry-es-Bois. Both are bright, pious, committed.

Godinoux died in the Society on June 5, 1925; Blanchet was in Issoudun 1894 and 1895; he was laicized in 1896.

There, Your Grace, you have the thoughts I make bold to put before you, having prayed to the Lord over them. If Your Grace considers that he shall not accept them, I am wholly disposed and ready to accept his wishes.

2. On Tuesday last, Your Grace, you said to me while discussing the Fr. Klotz issue that I had no-one supporting me except Fr. Klotz and those working on the missions, but this last is significant since there are nearly forty of them. But Your Grace has surely been misinformed. If he were to visit either by himself or through a delegate our different houses, he would become aware that the contrary is the case. He would see for himself that all my colleagues – in Rome, Barcelona, England, Paris (with the exception of Fr. Delaporte), Quito, Watertown (USA), the parish of Issoudun, also Chezal-Benoît with our 25 novices – without exception, or as good as, respect their Superior and founder's authority as legitimately constituted.

I can say the same for the confrères at the Sacred Heart house, excepting those priests who have come from Antwerp and a considerable number of young scholastics who have allowed themselves to be influenced by them. These young men have lost the spirit of discipline and obedience. What goes on among them is very regrettable and I can see there is an inability to have it stamped out. If I draw their attention to the Superior or Director I am accused of stirring up division, and those who inform me of these facts are treated as tale-bearers and spies. If I wish to intervene, and this following consultations with my Assistants, I find these young men to be outrageously resistant, something which saddens the better disposed among them. It seems that for them (those who are opposed and difficult) I have lost the right to make criticisms and recall to the observance of the Rule those who are not taking it seriously. The two accompanying letters will clarify the issue for Your Grace.

In my view, Your Grace, urgent measures need to be taken and I would urgently appeal to Your Grace to undertake, either yourself or through a delegate, a canonical visit of our Issoudun house. The more such a visit is postponed the greater the problems become aggravated and unlikely to be remedied.

Your Grace will then have recourse to what measures he deems necessary. If it were expedient for me, Your Grace, to express a wish, I would say that if the principal trouble-makers were expelled from the Society, unable any longer to exercise their damaging influence, everything would quickly be restored to order.

Please accept, Your Grace, my deepest good wishes in C.J.

To His Grace Jean-Pierre Boyer, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, January 25, 1894

Your Grace,

At the meeting you kindly arranged to have with me yesterday, Your Grace led me to understand that our Northern confrères (Belgium and Holland) are drawn to separate themselves from the mother house and form a distinct community on their own. This proposal would go against the views of the Holy See which over a number of years is making every effort to reunite as from their common source the different branches which have grown apart, such as with the Trappists and the Benedictines. Moreover, aside from the scandal it would bring about, it would virtually entail the ruin of our splendid Oceania missions.

Having given it some thought, Your Grace, and spoken to the Assistants, the following is the proposal I should wish to place before you, that of requesting Rome to set up a Province comprising the three Northern houses: Antwerp, Tilburg, Salzburg. In this way they would have their own autonomy, their own undertakings, and they would get along by themselves in dependence on the Superior General and his Council, and according to the regulations as legally constituted and commonly practised in other Congregations. This setting-up of a Province would meet the wishes of our confrères in these countries, satisfy all and give a new and fresh thrust to our Society. In this way we would avoid any upheavals and restore peace and unity among us.

Once this initiative has been approved by the Holy See we shall appoint a Provincial who will live either at Antwerp or Tilburg. And as soon as it becomes possible for us, we shall set up in these regions a novitiate and scholasticate which will be nurtured by their Petite Oeuvres.

What immediately follows in this letter at this point is read with difficulty and can be understood, more or less, as follows:

Then the Province will flourish and establish houses in Germany to meet the needs of the missions.

This resolution of the problem, Your Grace, would be the most effective of all; Rome would look upon it as a solution for our problems and would agree with the utmost approval if it had Your Grace's endorsement. If the proposal appeals to you as it does to us, Your Grace, at your request I would go and speak to you about it.

I am with deepest respect Your Grace's most humble and obedient son in J.C.

Council Meeting, January 27, 1894

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Morisseau and Vaudon; absent Frs. Piperon and Reyn.

Arguments against closing Glastonbury, at least not before the long summer holidays.

1. Fathers Audouy and Chétail take issue with the Council's decision to close Glastonbury college due to the lack of competent teachers. They request that it should be delayed until the summer holidays (in other words the school would remain open until then). Since the Archbishop has not approved of this decision, and doesn't seem disposed to do so, the Council approves of the request made by the two priests on the spot, if they can get by with the present personnel either by reducing the number of classes or by sending on to us those youngsters who might try their vocation in the Petite Oeuvre.

Two postulants put forward by Fr. Carrière.

2. He has two postulants, one a Pole, Joseph Hendzel, the other an Italian, Federico Provaglio of illegitimate birth. These candidates would appear to be very uncertain as to their suitability and time is needed for reflection and also for conferring with Fr. Píperon.

An additional Roman postulant.

A third postulant who doesn't know any French has asked to stay in the house, fee-paying, in order to learn French and thereby prepare himself for the novitiate. Fr. Carrière is free to accept him on these conditions if he thinks there is nothing problematic about it, but he cannot accept as someone paying his way a young priest who would also like to learn French, but has no intention of entering the novitiate.

Brothers Field and Laurenti accepted for the priesthood.

3. The same Fr. Carrière, Superior in Rome, puts forward with supportive approval the deacons Laurenti and Field for the order of priesthood.

A clear and succinct decision is needed with regard to the inscription of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Associates.

4. The view was taken that the same Fr. Carrière, in his role as Procurator, should obtain a clear and definite decision about the issue previously brought up and answered successively in a contradictory fashion, that is to ascertain whether in our houses one may lawfully inscribe Archconfraternity of the Sacred Heart Associates and keep the enrolment registers and, moreover, if one may not alone inscribe the names of those who come forward, but also those who send in their names in writing or through an intermediary.

Different Postulants.

1. A number of postulants were discussed with none accepted because it is necessary to have information about them before coming to a decision.

Fr. Carrière's two postulants not accepted.

2. The Pole Joseph Hendzel and the Italian Federico Provaglio, unable to offer satisfactory guarantees, were turned down.

Guillaume Van der Velden allowed to leave for good, his brother George allowed home for some time.

3. William Van der Velden, who has been renewing his vows annually, having asked to leave the Society definitively, was given permission to do so, while his brother, George, who is in poor health, was allowed home to recuperate.

Issoudun, January 29, 1894

Dear Father,

1. I am sorry to hear of Bishop Barriga's death which is a loss for Guayaquil. We shall pray for him.

2. The Archbishop of Bourges does not wish to take the responsibility on himself for departure from Quito. He told us to refer the issue to Cardinal Rampolla. The Council has made an appeal requesting the Secretary of State to give us permission to recall our confrères who find themselves in a disadvantageous situation. The Apostolic Visitor told us to deal directly with Rome as there's no need for his seal of approval. He leaves for Rome tomorrow with the findings of the Quito Chapter and Archbishop Gonzales' letter preserving the status quo, unwilling to make any concessions. The Cardinal can be the judge. We shall carry out what he decides. It is very likely, on examining the issues, that he will ask us to recall our confrères. The Ecuador government, it would so appear, has disengaged itself from the issue, having nevertheless promised earlier to come to our aid. It's left to the Holy See alone, then, if it wants us to stay in Quito, to ask the Chapter to endorse the contract it placed before us and which we forwarded to His Eminence the Secretary of State. But he would not wish to go against the Archbishop's decision. This would be a requirement, nevertheless, if we were to have a stable and independent status.

3. I would like very much my friend to be helpful and send you in advance the three-monthly contribution, but it is, as I have already told you, quite impossible. The building work on the Sacred Heart Church is costing us 200,000 francs (about 67,100 euros) and I am finding it extremely difficult to come up with the money, not knowing which side to turn to in order to pay the work force. Add to this the fact that the Rome house is less able to provide for itself than ever before. It seems to be the case that your undertaking relieves the place of two-thirds of its mass stipends, and it is to Issoudun that recourse is made to make up this loss. I don't know what to do any more.

4. Fr. Klotz continues to remain outside the Society. He has made efforts to return through the intermediary of the Archbishop of Bourges, who seems to think that we should take him back and see what happens. Nothing has as yet been decided. That's the way things are at the moment.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Most Reverend and Distinguished Lord,

Jules Chevalier, Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, whose mother house is in Issoudun (France), and the Procurate General, via della Sapienza, 32, Rome, having discussed the matter with his Assistants and heard their views, has the honour to address the following request to Your Eminence:

To meet the wishes of Your Grace, he suspended last spring the order given to his subjects in Quito who found themselves in a delicate and provisional situation, doing so in the hope that the pending discussions would result in a favourable outcome. The contract, however, which would have improved their status, and which he himself proposed, was turned down by the metropolitan Chapter following on the report made by the commission appointed to deal with this matter, and also arising from the Archbishop of Quito's letter of November 3, 1893, which likewise comes under this heading with regard to the contract in question.

He (Chevalier) most humbly and with urgency requests Your Eminence to permit him to recall immediately his confrères who no longer have any assurance of making a serious foundation and wish to disengage, since they cannot expect any support in personnel from their Congregation due to lack of subjects, requesting with insistent urgency that they be recalled as soon as possible.

May the Lord safeguard Your Eminence.

Possibly January 29, 1894*

My Lord,

We are aware that you have a great regard for our confrère Fr. Reyn and we also know that he has boundless confidence in Your Lordship.

Soon it will be three years since our Society began to experience an unfortunate crisis. Following on the unfortunate expulsions, serious problems overtook us in various ways. The Holy See looked into the matter and since it is its wish that we return to the most desirable peace and unity which can be achieved, it handed over all its authority to His Grace Archbishop Boyer of Bourges in appointing him as Apostolic Visitor.

Leo XIII, who greatly likes us and knows well the good work being done by our little institute, especially in the Oceania missions which have been confided to us, has firmly requested that we forget the past and, leaving aside all our former differences, become one heart and one soul. Under the wise and firm guidance of the Archbishop of Bourges we are on the eve, if not the very day itself, of this happy outcome.

Fr. Reyn, for whom we have the greatest regard and whose devotedness and great qualities we very much appreciate, worn out in the extreme by all the problems he has had to face, has given some thought to abandoning his vocation. This is something we would greatly regret, and it would be especially disastrous for us at the present time. He enjoys the esteem and affection of all our young religious who are in contact with him, his departure likely to create a crisis for many vocations. He is taking himself off to Luxembourg, My Lord, to place his fate in your hands. Your decision, so he says, will be a determining one for him.

The Congregation's Council humbly beseeches Your Lordship to help us avoid this double blow. Fr. Reyn is a young man whom we educated and who has been with us for 16 years. His vocation is not in doubt; please be good enough to save and confirm it. In this way, My Lord, you will help to avoid the scandal which would arise and help to confirm more than one vocation in our Society.

Since Fr. Reyn has a high regard for Your Lordship and is keenly interested in your diocese which is so flourishingly Catholic, perhaps, later, we might set up a house there under your welcoming guidance.

There, My Lord, you have the request we put to you and the favour we dare to ask of you in the name of the Heart of Jesus and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Please accept, My Lord, our lively acknowledgement and gratitude as we have the honour to be Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Departure of Fr. Reyn from the Council and the Congregation.

Departure of Fr. Vandel from the Congregation.

Fr. Reyn made known that given the painful discussions of which he has been the subject, he can no longer be a member of the Council or the Society and, accordingly, he asked the Apostolic Visitor to be released from his vows and has been accepted by the Bishop of Liège. He would request the Council, accordingly, to release him immediately so that he could place himself under the Bishop's jurisdiction together with Fr. Vandel who shares common views with him and also requests release from his vows because of the problems he is experiencing in running the scholasticate. The Superior General pointed out to Fr. Reyn the disastrous consequences which would follow his departure from the Society, asking him to withdraw his request but, when he continued to insist, the Council was persuaded that there was no point in trying to make him stay on when he was unwilling and, consequently, approved his departure. With consent given, Fr. Reyn went on his knees to get the General's blessing and bade farewell to all his colleagues before going off to get ready to leave, assuring all that he would do nothing injurious to the Society in which he had spent so many years.

Fr. Vaudon appointed Director of the Scholasticate and Superior of the Sacred Heart.

Fr. Morisseau appointed Professor of Moral Theology.

On Fr. Reyn's departure from the meeting the decision was taken that Fr. Vaudon should take charge of the scholasticate and become Superior at the Sacred Heart, while Fr. Morisseau would replace Fr. Vandel and lecture in moral theology.

Permission granted to Brothers Hannigan and Crowley to leave the Society.

Since Brothers Hannigan and Crowley had also made known their intention to leave the Society, it was thought best to let them go straightaway rather than hold over their departure, and a Council member was asked to notify them about this decision.

The lay brother Joseph Johnson accepted to three-yearly profession.

The lay brother Joseph Johnson, a novice in Watertown, accepted previously for profession on the recommendation of Fr. Derichemont, but through forgetfulness not informed, is accepted once more.

Issoudun, February 8, 1894

Most Distinguished Lord,

Your Eminence is aware of the problems which have beset us. We are all most anxious to see them disappear, including our distinguished and well-regarded Apostolic Visitor, Archbishop Boyer of Bourges.

Having considered matters before God, we make bold to ask two favours of the Sacred Congregation: one, the setting-up in one Province of our three Northern (European) houses in Antwerp (Belgium), Tilburg (Holland) and Salzburg (Austria), with their apostolic schools, novitiates, scholasticates. The second request is to call a General Chapter under the supervision of His Grace the Apostolic Visitor, the purpose of which would be, in keeping with the Constitutions, the election of Assistants and a Procurator General, all of whom are merely provisional at the moment, and also have a commission appointed to revise and complete the Congregation's directory, something which is quite urgent. This twofold approval would, we are strongly convinced, calm down people and cheer them up. The creation of a Province for the houses mentioned above would prove very satisfactory in relation to the spirit of nationality, which has been one of our main problems and source of disaffection, and also promote vocations which are so plentiful in these countries, as well as contributing to the development of our Oceania missions.

In the interests of unity and common concord, we would ask Your Eminence to be kind enough to favour us with a prompt solution to this two-fold request.

Your most Distinguished Grace, I am your most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Issoudun, February 9, 1894

Dear Father Offermans,

Fr. Reyn has had a very bad impact on us. Over quite some time he has been preparing for his departure from the Society in order to found at Liège a Congregation of Holy Family Missionaries to focus on the working classes. He is taking Fr. Vandel with him, also Brothers Hannigan and Crowley.

Edmond Mary Hannigan was born on April 3, 1872, at Subulter, Castlemagner parish, Ireland, also home parish of the first Irish MSC, J.M. Neenan; see above and also Twohig, Late But Not Too Late. He made his temporary profession on October 4, 1889, final on November 2, 1892. He studied in Antwerp until October 31, 1890 when he went to Rome where he took a double doctorate in philosophy and theology. He had been a sub-deacon since April 16, 1893, but left the Society on February 8, 1894.

James Crowley was a near neighbour of Hannigan, but born in a different parish, Ballyclough, Kilbrin, coming from Castlecor, being professed on the same day with Hannigan at Antwerp, October 4, 1889, and finally professed at Antwerp, October 4, 1892, after which in the same month he went to the Issoudun scholasticate. He became a sub-deacon on November 15, 1893. He left the Society on the same day as Hannigan, February 8, 1894. For Crowley's contribution and brilliance as a lecturer cut off in Ireland during the First World War when he lectured in a make-shift Irish scholasticate, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late.

We were about to set up a Province comprising the Antwerp, Tilburg and Salzburg houses. The Archbishop of Bourges was in agreement and Fr. Reyn also. Next Monday we were due to meet the Archbishop of Bourges to put the request in writing, but Fr. Reyn on Wednesday last made his plans known to us. All our proposals have come to nothing since he informed us that the Bishop of Liège was awaiting him and he had to leave immediately. He has, then, left, with his supporters (Crowley and Hannigan) whose departure has been deeply troubling for the scholasticate. The vast majority there remain steadfast in their vocation. The Germans are going to Salzburg where they will finish their studies at the major seminary, possibly with the aim of committing themselves to the German missions in New Britain since the German government only wants Germans born and brought up in Germany.

Your own dear compatriots, likewise faithful to their vocation, want to stay in the Society, requesting to be allowed to go to Tilburg to finish their studies under your direction in the hope that you can help them, and if not they would like you to arrange for them to go to the Gera major seminary where you would look after them as regards their religious life. See what you can do, then, to meet their wishes. They are deserving. Your good wishes and your kindness greatly moves us. It will only be a brief interval before a new province begins to take shape.

As regards the financial contribution you are looking for on behalf of the lay brothers, the Council is not, as yet, able to consider the matter. It will carefully deal with the issue and report back to you. You will understand our predicament at the moment.

Cheerio, Father.

All good wishes to you and your dear confrères in C. J.

1. I am forwarding Brother Vuister's letter to you. You try to calm him down and tell him to go with the others to the Tilburg house if he so wishes and you and Fr. Morisseau approve. It seems to me that this is better than staying with his family.

Vuister: Dutch born at Deventer, December 25, 1872; he made his first profession on November 23, 1891, at Chezal-Benoît, and was finally professed on November 23, 1894; he became a priest on September 19, 1896. He died at Borgerhout, July 21, 1910.

2. I confirmed dear Fr. Bouvier in office and gave him responsibility for the office and the catechism of perseverance (sic!) for the young girls, also enjoining him to preach the retreat to them. He seemed to me to be in agreement with all this. I suggested to him that he should live in the presbytery to dispose better of his time and look after his health. I believe that this will be helpful to him. He is available.

3. The Archbishop has written a note to me; he believes that we should not have any misgivings about what has happened and wants us, the Assistants and myself, to go to Bourges. Come at 2pm with Fr. Morisseau and we shall discuss all this.

Council Meetings, February 16, 19, 1894

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Vaudon, Assistants.

Proposal for a scholasticate in the Northern (Low) countries and a decision about the Dutch scholastics.

1. With Fathers Ramot and Offermans also present, at the invitation of Fr. General, the need to open a new scholasticate in the Northern countries was acknowledged. It was thought that such a scholasticate would be very well situated in Louvain where the scholastics could attend the lecture courses provided by the Jesuits, already being attended by other religious communities. If the Germans cannot, given the demands of their government, study in Louvain, they will be advised about this option, and its whereabouts. This scholasticate cannot open until the end of the long vacation. Provisionally, therefore, while awaiting a definitive decision, the view was taken that the scholastics who went to Tilburg should continue their studies under the supervision of Fathers Peeters and Dezpresse whom Fr. Ramot will agree to make available to Fr. Offermans. Since Fr. Dezpresse lacks seriousness and balance in his behaviour, it is appropriate that the scholastics should be kept apart from the rest of the community and he will have nothing to do with them other than to give lectures. Fr. Peeters will look after them under the overall direction of Fr. Offermans.

A doubt about the German scholastics.

2. In the presence of Fr. Hartzler, he likewise called to a Council meeting at Fr. General's request, the issue of German scholastics who wanted to study in a university in their own country was given consideration, but they are nowhere near meeting the requisite conditions to obtain enrolment either at Innsbruck or elsewhere. There are serious unacceptable reasons which do not favour their being sent to the Salzburg major seminary. The view was taken that Fr. Mayer will give lectures and engage with them as best he can until matters can be decided otherwise.

Brother Gennaro Lacoste admitted to the subdiaconate, etc.

3. Brother Gennaro Lacoste was admitted to the subdiaconate, Brother Waeckel to minor orders, Brother Baeten to the tonsurate and minor orders and, in addition, Brother Norbert Roestenburg to renewal of his three-yearly vows which have expired over a few months.

3,000 francs made available to Glastonbury.

4. The need to put the Glastonbury house in better shape and make it properly habitable has led to an increase in the deficit which goes beyond two thousand francs. In order to meet expenses already incurred or to be undertaken, Fr. Maillur (sic! Maillard), sent there as a special administrator, is looking for 3,000 francs. A decision will be taken about the sum which will be forwarded to him.

Dear Father Offermans,

Issoudun, February 24, 1894

Happily I give Brother Aloysius the permission you ask for on his behalf.

Aloysius Schall was born in 1870 in Holland; he was ordained to the priesthood on July 19, 1896. In 1900 he was at Canet-de-Mar; two years later, November 23, 1902, he was secularized.

I am gratified to gather that your worthy scholastics are both pleased and happy. They are, obviously, in a more favourable environment than Issoudun. May the Lord favour them and continually keep them in their present good dispositions! Within a number of years, I hope, we shall have in them courageous and generous-spirited missionaries, thanks to your wise and efficient direction as well as that of your kind and devoted collaborators.

I express the wish that you can bind more closely to our Society such as the brothers Bakker and others. If they are wise and serious-minded they will return to stability with you and will not have to run the gauntlet of a new foundation. Good Fr. Vandel, with his particular friendships which had become something of a scandal, has done a lot of harm to several of our young men, always having them in his room, and unable to separate himself from them. It is the natural thrust of things which draws them towards him and not the spirit of God. I am convinced that a wise director, knowing the truth of the matter and the extent of things, would have turned them away. Pray and God will take care of the rest. Call upon Bishop Verjus whom I believe is heard in heaven.

Cheerio, my friend. Oremus pro invicem.
I send you and all the others my good wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

We have met with Fr. Hartzler who also finds his young charges well disposed.

Confidential

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. I didn't know about the acquisition of the ground and the laying of the foundation stone for your Sacred Heart Church in honour of the souls in purgatory. It was the ladies who told me about it the day before your letter arrived. May the Lord be praised and bless your work so that you can see it brought to fruition in a short time; such is my wholehearted good wish.

2. Yes, indeed, Fathers Reyn and Vandel have left the Society. The Lord be praised! Here are the circumstances. You know from your own experience the reprehensible attitude which characterized for a long time these two unfortunate confrères and all the harm to which they have given rise in the Society. They were the two worst trouble-makers at the 1891 Chapter at which you were present. They had prepared everything surreptitiously, drawing into their intrigues a considerable group of people, giving a wrong interpretation to virtually everything with no remorse shown in relation to hurtful remarks or calumny. Their behaviour, their correspondence and reports to Rome, bear witness to this.

Having become aware that their plans hadn't succeeded either at the Chapters of 1891 or 1893, they only became more determined. Compelled to reshape the Council, Fr. Reyn was forced upon us and it was hoped that in this way he would gain our confidence. It was really a case of bringing the enemy right within. When the scholasticate was moved to Issoudun, Fr. Vandel, in spite of our concerns, became its director, leading to yet more undermining. These two priests set about, in an underhand manner, making little of authority as exercised and made themselves favoured by way of indiscipline and unhelpful concessions to the young religious, telling them that the Congregation was badly led and another needed to be founded.

I drew the attention of our distinguished Apostolic Visitor to this state of affairs, asking him to come and carry out a canonical visitation in order to ascertain for himself the unhealthy state of affairs which prevailed; his illness made it impossible for him to do so. Seeing for myself what was going on, I made a novena to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and to Bishop Verjus, asking for our concerns to be taken in hand.

Meanwhile, Fr. Reyn, under the pretext of having to go to Belgium to deal with matters there, went and saw the Bishop of Liège, requesting his approval to found in the city a Congregation focussed on the working class under the title of Missionaries of the Holy Family. His Lordship undoubtedly endorsed his proposal. On his return he shared his expectations with Fr. Vandel and made Brothers Hannigan and Crowley, teachers in the scholasticate, partners in the plotting also. He then, without my knowing it, sent Fr. Vandel to have the last word with the Bishop of Liège. Fr. Vandel had scarcely returned from Belgium when the two priests and the two teachers (Hannigan and Crowley) came to tell me that they had lost all confidence in me and were leaving the Society to set up the undertaking in question. They left that same evening, all four of them, Thursday, February 8. Their departure created excitement, but next day nobody asked to follow them – a great disappointment (let down)!

Our fleeing members went straight to Liège, hoping to be well received. But the Bishop did not want to accept them after the manner in which they presented themselves to him, asking them to leave his diocese. They were, accordingly, forced to take themselves off, the two priests going to Aix-la-Chapelle and I don't know where the two brothers went. What are they going to do, all four? I don't know. The Antwerp, Tilburg and Salzburg houses have remained loyal to us. I have had the three Superiors come here and they are well-intentioned.

Since other nationalities do not on the one hand get on with the French, and the Berlin government on the other hand complains to the Propaganda Congregation that our German subjects, destined for the New Guinea mission of New Britain (New Pomerania), are being educated in France, we have decided that they should be sent to complete their studies either in Tilburg or Salzburg. They are all happy and pleased about this, expressing a great love for the Society and their resolve to persevere, no matter what, in their vocation.

There you see, my friend, a providential occurrence. The tumour came to a head, broke as from itself and the main disaffecting element came out. There is a great sense of ease among us all. Our scholastics in Issoudun, twenty or so of them, are happy and well disposed. Unity and peace would appear to be quite securely re-established. The Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, and our distinguished Protector, will receive this news with quiet satisfaction. You may mention all this to Fr. Caseneuve (in Marseilles) in confidence, extend to him our good wishes and also to his family.

Cheerio, my friend; keep me in mind often in your prayers.
Wholly yours.

Council Meeting, February 26, 1894

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Vaudon, Assistants.

Final, definitive, decision recalling the Quito confrères.

1. The meeting began with the reading of a letter from Cardinal Rampolla giving permission to recall the Quito confrères. The Council, acknowledging that it was now more impossible than ever to continue this work, decided unanimously that, with the approval of the Apostolic Visitor, the decision would take effect as immediately as possible, and following on the affirmative advice of His Grace, the Archbishop of Quito and the confrères would be written to in order to apprise them of the situation.

Decision to close the Glastonbury college.

2. It was agreed that if the Glastonbury college could be closed at Easter, the young teachers there, no longer needed, should be posted to the scholasticate. Later the matter will be addressed about the use of the furniture. If the college doesn't close at Easter and keeps going until the long summer holidays, at the very least those youngsters who are not paying the requisite fees should be sent home to their families. Fr. Maillard will get a letter to this effect.

An issue regarding isolation; moving the scholasticate.

3. The issue was raised of moving the scholasticate to Chezal-Benoît and the novitiate to Issoudun. Fr. Vaudon noted that Fr. General had promised to move the scholasticate from Issoudun at Easter in order to isolate it more fully since experience, time and again, had shown that in an institute the scholasticate cannot succeed when set beside another establishment and that its isolation, or at least its transfer from Issoudun, would be well received, inspiring confidence among the scholastics who remain reluctant when they find themselves in a place where there are so many hardships to be undergone. Fr. Piperon, however, stated that work on the new house is not advanced enough for the novices to take up residence there at Easter. In any event, moving in the middle of the year would be a great draw-back. Fr. Piperon thinks it would be more advantageous to wait for the long summer holidays since he acknowledges in principle, together with the others (Chevalier excluded), that the scholasticate needs its autonomy and should be in a place where there is no need to have anything to do with the other undertakings to be found nearby in that place.

Your Grace,

We have the honour to submit for Your Grace's approval the following conclusion taken about the Quito mission.

The Council of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart deliberation,
February 26, 1894

The Council began with the reading of a letter from Cardinal Rampolla about the Quito mission.

"To Rev. Father Chevalier, Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

Very Reverend Father,

I notify you about an undated document which was sent to me in the early part of the present month, together with other documents which are relevant to the reasons which dictate that the missionaries of your Congregation should leave Quito. I engage myself to inform you that having examined the details of this matter as presented in the relevant documents, I believe that I should leave to your judgment responsibility for the decision which best accommodates the growth and prosperity of your Congregation.

I take advantage of the occasion to express my very warm good wishes in the Lord.

Rome, February 24, 1894

M. Card. Rampolla."

The Council, aware that it is more impossible than ever in the present circumstances to maintain the Quito mission, and since His Eminence Cardinal Rampolla gives permission to recall the confrères in that capital, has decided unanimously that, with the approval of the Apostolic Visitor, the recall will be put into effect at the earliest opportunity, and following the favourable, accepting, decision of His Grace, the Archbishop of Quito and the confrères will be informed about the decision.

Council Meetings, March 5,12,14, 1894

In attendance: Fr. General, Fathers Píperon, Morisseau, Vaudon, and Batard, General Bursar.

Brother G. Cantoni accepted for first vows.

1. On the recommendation of Fr. Píperon, Novice Master, the lay brother novice Giacomo Cantoni was accepted for first profession, but Brother Oulman was held over because as yet he doesn't offer the requisite guarantee of perseverance. On the recommendation of his Superior, Brother Vitale in the Paris house was accepted for renewal of vows on May 3.

The proposal by Fr. Robadey, parish priest of Saint-Pierre-des-Clages, Valais, Switzerland, to set up a preparatory school in Switzerland.

2. The proposal of Fr. Robadey was considered. He offered in a letter of February 8 to make over to the benefit of our Congregation a school which he intended to set up and run himself under the title "Undertaking for Priestly Vocations", focusing on youngsters from poorly circumstanced families who wanted to be priests and who, following their studies, could opt in favour of the missions, the religious life or the diocesan clergy. He is looking for an annual income of 300 francs over 10 years, and an annual fee of 300 francs for each student committed to us, and he would meet the financial costs involved with those students who would after their studies no longer want to join us. In a second letter on February 19 he requested that remittance over 10 years, that is to say 3,000 francs, should be forwarded to him so that he could build suitable accommodation locally, but nonetheless if these contributions are not forthcoming, he would make arrangements in his presbytery. When the Superior General requested him to adapt his plan to meet our requirements, he agreed in his letter on the 25th of the same month, but he went on to say that the purpose of his school was particularly aimed at our Congregation and he couldn't any longer depend on the contributions which he had been promised. Otherwise, he has given over the idea of building anything, and is happy to adapt his presbytery to accommodate ten students. The yearly fee of 300 francs not being sufficient for the upkeep of one student, he would try to find the additional 200 francs which would be enough to meet the full financial requirements. This is the situation as it now concerns the Council.

Certainly the commitment and the involvement of this worthy priest is beyond all praise, but there are a number of difficulties involved. If one accepts what he is offering, one is by that very fact obliged to meet the expenses involving us. As for offering to reimburse us in the case of those students who do not wish to come to us, is he really in a position to do so? And as for ourselves, could we really demand he recompense us? The projected school could possibly offer good results, but rests on a variety of eventualities. Besides, we do not know anything at all about this parish priest who makes these proposals to us, not certain if he has all that is required to bring this undertaking to a successful conclusion. In order to be so informed a visit would have to be made to see things on the spot, meet the bishop, etc. If it isn't prudent to advance money in the circumstances described, there is nothing at risk in promising to pay him a reasonable fee of 400 francs, for example, to meet the expenses of each student properly educated who can be made over to us. He has had a letter from us to this effect, but the letter crossed with his latest letter of March 7 in which he agrees to accept the procedures laid down by Fr. General, and is happy to accept a fee in the expectation that the students themselves contribute the supplement of 200 francs, or if he himself can find such a sum. This last statement, as put before the Council, in no way changed its decision.

A survey of the accounts for the second term, 1893, and the 1894 budget.

3. There followed an appraisal of the accounts and budgets for the different houses, but among them the presbytery of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, is not included, nor the Tilburg, Watertown, Sydney, Quito, Glastonbury houses.

The following figures, which don't necessarily add up, are as given!

1. The Chezal-Benoît accounts.

It is completely in order. Receipts come to 57,196 francs. Expenses met or about to be met come to 57,113 francs. A loss of 83 francs. Upkeep and living costs come to 57,113 francs which, spread among 172 people, represents 308 francs every six months or 51 francs monthly.

2. The Rome accounts.

They are in order except the deficit in the last account, 734 francs, is not found in the overall expenses. The balance is inadequately carried out. Intake was 25,482 francs; expenses 27,740 francs. This is a deficit of 2,257 francs and with this deficit all the expenses have been met. Nobody is to be paid? There is nothing to be paid according to what is written down.(!) The expenses to meet the upkeep of people (34) come to 22,241 francs, or relative to each one, 654 francs over six months, and 109 monthly.

3. The Barcelona accounts.

Receipts are 37,603 francs; expenses 16,017. There are 21,586 francs in credit. 6,027 francs provide for the upkeep of 16 people, or 376 every six months and 62 each month. The cost of meat comes to 950 francs for 16 people, or 59 francs over 6 months, 9 francs a month and 0.30 francs daily.

4. The Paris accounts.

Receipts are 15,384 francs; expenses 14,356 francs. In credit: 1,028 francs. 9,551 francs meet the upkeep of 11 people, in effect 868 francs over six months, or 144 a month for each person.

5. The Antwerp accounts.

Receipts total 220,175 francs; expenses paid out 147,844 francs. To be paid: 310,160 francs, that is to say 458,004 francs minus 220,172 francs, making a total of 237,829 in debt; 57,843 francs are spent for personnel upkeep, or 409 six-monthly, monthly 67 francs individually. The debt and paying off are not in their proper place at the heart of expenses.

6. The Vichy accounts.

Intake 6,279; outlay 5,861. 418 francs in credit.

7. The Salzburg accounts.

Intake 73,442, expenses 71,040 francs; 2,401 to hand. Towards personnel upkeep 32,993 francs divided by 77 every six months for each person, making a total of 428 francs, divided by six for each person every month, making a total of 71 francs. The debt, which at the end of the last six-monthly term was 148,950 francs, is nowhere mentioned among what is to be paid out. Among the money paid out is the sum of 6,300 francs in depreciation. The cash figures are confused with intake and outflow. The budgets in principle have been calculated from the accounts or even unattentively copied out.

Your Grace,

Not wishing to do anything without the complete approval of Your Grace, may I be permitted to present you with the enclosed letter and discuss with you our September 8 feast. I do this well in advance, Your Grace, so that we can carry out, without any precipitateness, the necessary arrangements for the Silver Jubilee of the crowning of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. If Your Grace, as I greatly venture to hope, approves of this 25th anniversary, I make bold to ask:

1. if he would not himself appoint the preacher or preachers he would like to see preaching at the preparatory triduum for the feast and the sermons on the feast day itself;
2. to let us know if he is thinking of inviting some bishops to enhance the status of this imposing ceremony;
3. to set out for us the programme we should follow.

It goes without saying, Your Grace, that we shall ourselves meet all the expenses which arise from these arrangements.

If we are to judge from past experience, these feasts publicized well beforehand will draw huge numbers to the feet of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart whose prayers will draw down abundant blessings on the Church, Our Holy Father the Pope, on France, on the diocese of Bourges and on yourself who will be the precious means by which heaven's purpose is served.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient filial servant in C.J.

Issoudun, March 6, 1894

Your Grace,

It will be 25 years on the 8th of September next since Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, of blessed memory, solemnly crowned at Issoudun in the name of the venerated Pius IX Our Lady of the Sacred Heart before 17 bishops, 500 priests and 30,000 pilgrims. This unforgettable festive occasion, when the heights of enthusiasm were reached, was the beginning of a devotion which only advanced since that occasion. Presently Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is honoured throughout the entire world, her blessed name to be heard from everyone's lips, her supporters so numerous that they surpass eighteen millions. More than 200 banners from all parts of Europe were presented by the different pilgrimages which have followed the first one. The ex-voto numbers in marble which literally cover the basilica from the pavement to the vault are representative of her intercessory powers and kindness, expressing the acknowledgement of the pious faithful.

We are drawn, Your Grace, in our associates' name, to request from your paternal good will and acknowledged piety, permission to celebrate with the full support and presidency of Your Grace the Silver Jubilee of the coronation of the Heart of Jesus' divine treasury which brings so many special memories to mind for us. The impressive ceremony cannot but add to the confidence, already so evident, of the Christian people in the patron of hopeless and desperate cases of which, sadly, there are so many in our time! Our joy would be complete, Your Grace, if you could get permission from the Holy See on this occasion for jubilee favours during the month of September this year, with a plenary indulgence to the benefit of those who would communicate at least once during the month in our basilica and, as well, an indulgence of seven years and seven quarantines for each visit made by pilgrims in the course of the Jubilee Year.

The great Pope Leo XIII would, I believe, be all the more willing to grant these requests if the petition were to be authorized by of Your Grace, for whom he has the utmost regard and appreciation while he himself, when still a Cardinal and Bishop of Perugia, set up in his own cathedral devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. And on coming to Peter's Throne he has not failed to provide examples of his continued good will. In effect it's he who established the archconfraternity worldwide, the association so dear to us, and he also appointed our Piazza Navona church in Rome to be the worldwide centre of the association. Sometimes His Holiness, mindful of the received blessings which have been obtained and, in order to solicit more, sends one of his chaplains to celebrate mass at the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart altar, placing at her feet a splendid bouquet of flowers from the Vatican gardens.

Hoping that Your Grace will be good enough to meet our humble request favourably, we kneel before Your Grace expressing our deepest respect and asking for your fatherly blessing.

To His Holiness Leo XIII.

Issoudun, March 12, 1894

Most Holy Father,

On September 8 next it will be twenty-five years since the Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, of blessed memory, solemnly crowned at Issoudun, in the name of His Holiness Pius IX, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, in the presence of seventeen bishops, 500 priests and thirty thousand pilgrims.

This impressive ceremony greatly boosted our dear association, founded to support the many and varied difficult and desperate situations in which people find themselves in the demanding times we are passing through. This devotion has only developed all the more since then. Presently Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is honoured throughout the whole world, her blessed name to be found on all lips, her supporters so numerous that the total of eighteen millions has been surpassed, as our archives make clear. More than 200 banners from all over Europe have been presented during the different pilgrimages which have followed. The ex-voto numbers in marble which literally cover the basilica from the pavement to the vault, are representative of her intercessory power and kindness, testifying to the acknowledgement of the pious faithful.

Most Holy Father, in the name of our distinguished and beloved Archbishop Boyer, together with all our associates, we request from Your Holiness the favour of a jubilee during the month of September this year on the occasion of the Silver Jubilee of Our Lady's coronation, with a plenary indulgence favouring those of the faithful who go to communion at least once during the month in our basilica, and an indulgence of seven years and seven quarantines for each visit by pilgrims in the course of the Jubilee, in accordance with the requisite conditions.

Your own sensitive devotion, Holy Father, to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, makes us expectantly hope that you will favourably meet our humble request. We shall never forget all you have already done for her. If known (honoured) and invoked fervently in Perugia, it's because of you! Besides, it is due to you that her association was made a Universal Archconfraternity, and as well there is the lovely Piazza Navona church where the people of Rome come in numbers to pray and give thanks for favours she has obtained from the Heart of her divine Son. We would like to ask Your Holiness, then, to complete yet further his acts of good will and kindness by being generous enough to meet the request we place before you. The trust which is already so strong among the faithful before the heavenly treasure of the Heart of Jesus can only be further added to by this signal favour.

May the Lord safeguard Your Holiness and keep you with us for the well-being of the Church and France.

Your respectful and obedient children in Corde Jesu.

Your Grace,

Issoudun, March 19, 1894

Our Confrères in Antwerp, Tilburg, Salzburg are insisting that we ask the Holy See to make these houses into a Province, stating that this undertaking has become a necessity in order to satisfy the nationalistic spirit and consolidate in a definite manner the peace and unity which now prevail in the Society. They consider that it is all the more urgent an issue since the Berlin government wishes before everything else, because of our missions, that these (German) members of ours, who are quite numerous, should receive an education which is exclusively German and share in a certain autonomy, after the pattern of other Congregations which work in its empire.

Presented with these considerations, which appear serious to us, we have taken the decision in Council to meet this proposal positively, and we would ask Your Grace to be good enough to stamp it with his seal, if he thinks it opportune, and forward it to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

Thank you for your kind letter and its news about the good spirit prevailing in your house. You ask me when your countries will be made into a Province and how everybody wants it so. I can tell you now that we have sent such a request to the Archbishop of Bourges to have it sealed and sent on by him to the Holy See. This issue is, perhaps, not moving ahead as quickly as we would like since you know that in Rome there is no sense of urgency. But in any event steps have been taken and we can only await the result which, I hope, will be favourable. In the meantime be getting together in order to organize matters. Act in unison, all three of you, with Fathers Ramot and Hartzler, and when you have come to a common arrangement you will make known to us what is practically possible and we shall proceed to consider it. I spoke to the Archbishop about Fr. Lanctin as a replacement for Fr. Reyn and he replied that it wasn't urgent at the moment and he would think about it. I spoke to Fr. Lanctin about our proposal and he seemed to be happy. I shall return to this issue.

My Very Dear Sisters,

May the Sacred Heart be always with you!

I am very much indebted to you for the prayers you are offering on my behalf and which I greatly need to help me in carrying out the duties of my office. I for my part do not forget you and I often ask the Lord to support you in your endeavours, bless your undertakings and make all of you saints. I have come to know in an extremely gratified manner about the many conversions taking place in New Britain, which indeed is very uplifting. You do not mention Bishop Couppé's health, but I like to think that he is well and that the Sacred Heart will for a long time to come preserve him to the advantage of his dear natives. Convey my regards to him.

Cheerio, dear Sisters. I bless you all, also the good orphans, in C.J.

Issoudun, March 30, 1894

Dear Fathers in Quito,

His Eminence Cardinal Rampolla, Secretary of State to His Holiness, has left over at our suggestion until the beginning of this month the Quito problem's resolution, that is to say whether or not you remain in Sagrario. Having taken Archbishop Gonzales' of Quito's letter into consideration, and given our small numbers and the problems faced in maintaining the house there, we have decided to call you back straightaway. Accordingly, you will arrange for your departure as soon as possible. I am also writing to His Grace to let him know about this decision. I also send you a copy of my letter. You will go to see the Archbishop and say good-bye to him, thanking him for his acts of kindness, since it is right and proper that you leave on the best of terms. Try to make the most of what you have and what you can take with you. Try, in particular, to assure a future for the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart devotion in these countries. Cheerio, Father.

Assuring you of my best wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, March 30, 1894

Dear Fr. Barral,

I got your letter just as I was about to close this one. (That immediately above.) I hasten to reply.

1. As for the worthy priest who wants to enter our Society, we agree to accept him unless he is very elderly – he should not be more than 40 years of age (!) and in good health, a man of piety, a proper vocation, with no obstacles placed in his way by the Archbishop. It is a requisite that he bring along with him his testimonial letters and whether or not he can meet the expenses of his trip from there and his return in the event that he cannot remain with us, and whether he knows sufficient French to follow the novitiate's exercises and programme. Your departure looked at from here is not likely to take place before the month of June due to the rainy season and, accordingly, he (the priest in question) can perhaps benefit from this.

2. As for the two postulants who want to join the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Sisters, Mother Hartzler does not think it wise to have them coming from such a distance, questioning if they should not be forsaking a stable situation for one which is uncertain. Moreover, she says, they can do well under the impact of Fr. Morisseau in Quito. Why take them away? It's better that they should stay there and provide a Christian upbringing to the youngsters in their care. To mention the people of Quito to Fr. Morisseau is enough to bring on a state of fever.(!) Accordingly, the net result of his meeting with Mother Hartzler is that these ladies should stay in Ecuador.

Your Grace,

I received the letter which Your Grace paid me the honour of writing to me, and in which you notify me of your agreement with the Chapter's decision whereby our position as regards the Sagrario church and presbytery is not acceptable. Having freshly considered the situation, the Congregation's (General) Council, conscious that it was in the event no longer possible for it to maintain the Quito residences, decided to withdraw its subjects. Accordingly, Your Grace, I advised my Sagrario confrères to get ready to leave and be back in Europe as quickly as possible, where other important posts are awaiting them. I am grateful to Your Grace for all his kindness and good will. We shall never forget the warm welcome we received, nor the kindness of the very Christian population in Quito. Its devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, which complements that of the Heart of Jesus, greatly and deeply touches us. I hope that despite our departure it can only develop with the significant support of Your Grace and give rise to a fruitful impact on the faithful. We shall not give over praying for these good people and the well-regarded leader who is responsible for them.

I place myself at your feet, Your Grace, asking for your blessing, with an assurance of my deepest regards as I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Council Meetings, April 3,6, 1894

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Vaudon, Assistants.

Brother Courbon: release from vows.

1. A letter from Brother Courbon was received asking to be released from the vows he made at Christmas. It was unanimously decided that his request should be met.

The recall of the Quito confrères.

2. The Superior General presented to the Council the letter he had sent to the Quito confrères and also the letter to the Archbishop informing him of the decision.

The reply to the request that the Gilbert Islands' mission become a Vicariate.

3. A letter from Cardinal Ledochowski, Prefect of Propaganda, was read, being his reply to the request made in favour of making the Gilbert Islands' mission a Vicariate Apostolic. His Eminence stated that this matter was connected with that of New Britain (then New Pomerania) and involves problems with the German government which have to be left aside for the time being.

Notification of Brother Gregory's death.

4. A telegram from Sydney brought the news of Brother Gregory's (John Huser) death in New Britain. The different houses of the institute will be notified to have the customary prayers and masses said for him.

A Superior to be appointed in Watertown.

5. Fr. Derichemont wrote to say that his term of office as local Superior will end on the 28th of the current month and he suggests that Fr. O'Mahony should replace him. It was agreed that he should be asked if in conscience he thinks Fr. O'Mahony is capable of continuing and promoting the Watertown work. If the answer is in the affirmative, Fr. O'Mahony will be appointed Superior and Fr. Derichemont will be recalled to Europe.

Acceptance of Brothers Joseph Tatcher and Joseph Poupency to first vows.

6. Fr. Piperon, Novice Master, put forward for first vows Brothers Tatcher and Poupency whose novitiate ends shortly. The first-named has been fully satisfactory, but the second does not offer corresponding guarantees since it is noticeable that he is lacking in judgment as well as wanting in ability, giving rise to concern about the future. Nevertheless, given his impressive good will, he is to be accepted.

Brothers Jacques Robel and Joseph Wadensdorfer accepted for renewal of vows.

7. Proposed by Fr. Hartzler, Superior at Salzburg, the lay brothers Jacques Robel and Joseph Wadensdorfer were accepted for renewal of vows which expire on May 31.

Issoudun, April 8, 1894

Dear Father Offermans,

Before reaching a verdict about the acceptance of the three scholastics for the subdiaconate whom you are putting forward, the Council would like to have precise assessment for each of them.

1. Piety; 2. Regularity; 3. Good Attitude; 4. Attachment to the Society; 5. Willingness to persevere. Following this, send on the reports.

Archbishop Boyer, my friend, when referring to "the religious insubordination of certain priests" had in mind only those four who left us abruptly creating trouble and insubordination everywhere. As for the rest, His Grace was quite happy to please by meeting our request to set up a Province which dates back two or three months.

Our Procurator General in Rome. Fr. Carrière, had a long interview at my request with the Propaganda Secretary, who told him that the report critical of our German missions (in New Britain) did not come from Fr. Ilge but from the authorities in New Britain. In this report it was stated that:

1. Berlin had asked the missionaries be of German nationality;
2. that the missionaries should not go into the area where the Governor lives since it is reserved to the Protestants.

The Sacred Congregation replied to the Berlin government that:

1. over a number of years our Society had sent out German-born missionaries since they were trained in Salzburg for this undertaking;
2. the Holy See could not in any way whatsoever accept the second condition as the Gospel has to be preached everywhere.

The Propaganda Congregation is awaiting a reply to this communication.

If you could get the Cologne canon to intervene immediately with Berlin in our favour, the issue could be resolved and Fr. Bontemps would at the same time be appointed Vicar Apostolic of the Gilbert and Marshall Islands, since the latter also come under German jurisdiction. There you have the thinking at Propaganda which is always supportive of us. Get going on this straightaway, particularly so with Berlin since it all happens from there.

Fr. Carrière wrote on the same occasion to me to say that Fr. Ilge will not be given release from his vows, as requested by him, until he provides an authentic document from a bishop who is prepared to accept him and provide him with a canonical title. I cannot write to him myself since I don't know his address. Could you let me have it? Get in touch with Fr. Ilge; perhaps he might make the Berlin government favour our missions if he is as well connected at court as he is said to be. This is an urgent matter.

Cheerio.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Fr. Vandel,

I wish to thank you for your good wishes and the feelings to which you give expression. I hope they will be fulfilled. I reciprocate with my own and, if the good Lord lends a favourable ear to them, everything will be in keeping with our wishes since we only seek his glory and the salvation of souls. I have just now heard from Rome that the Holy See, at our request, has made the Antwerp, Tilburg and Salzburg houses into a Province, the decree for which is being made ready.

Why did you not believe me? Why were you in so much of a hurry and worked up? The disturbances, more so the splits, which came about so precipitately need not have happened. One would have avoided the loss of vocations, an abnormal separation badly misunderstood, and I would not have to carry in my heart an open wound which bleeds and which will never close. And you, yourself, would have been spared being thrust into an unknown which is always full of anxiety and danger, separating yourself from a family which took you in, brought you up, loved and cherished you, and with a family name of which you were the faithful guardian.

Issoudun, April 13, 1894

Your Grace,

I have received some good news from Rome which I make haste to share with Your Grace.

1. The rescript is being forwarded to me giving permission to have the Jubilee in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart during the month of September, with the indulgences sought. It now becomes a matter, Your Grace, of apportioning the degree of solemnity which you would wish to give this Silver Jubilee of our dear Madonna's coronation, what bishops should be invited, the preachers to be chosen for the 8th of September and the Triduum which precedes it. Your thoughts and wishes, Your Grace, will be ours. As soon as we shall have decided things, we shall set to work on preparing such a great occasion; the months left are not too many.

2. Our Procurator General informs me that the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars has given permission for the setting up of the Northern Province as requested by us and warmly supported by Your Grace. The decree will be forwarded to me as soon as it is ready. This announcement will greatly please our confrères in these countries.

3. The Propaganda Congregation Secretary, Bishop Ciasca, has informed me through our Procurator that the hostile attitude of the Berlin government against our German missions is attributable to the governor of New Britain. The government is adamant about having these things:
- missionaries of German nationality;
  - that the (Catholic) missionaries do not put their feet in the area where the Governor lives as this is reserved to the Protestants;
  - that Bishop Couppé does not use a boat to go up and down the coasts unless he accepts the laws and regulations set down for all navigation in these countries.

The Propaganda Congregation replied to the Berlin government:

- stating that for some years our Society has been sending German missionaries there and they have had their training in Salzburg for this purpose;
- the Holy See can in no way whatsoever accept the second condition given that the Gospel has to be preached everywhere;
- the boat issue could be settled as a matter of detail between the Governor and the Apostolic Visitor.

The reply from Berlin is awaited.

As for Micronesia, the Secretary added that this issue depends on the first, the New Britain one, and it cannot be dealt with until that is resolved, because the Marshall Islands belong to Germany and this is where Fr. Bontemps works. If Berlin were to accept Propaganda's proposal, Fr. Bontemps would be appointed Vicar Apostolic immediately. There you have a summing up of the situation and we can only await the outcome. Just the same, Your Grace, the Marshall Islands only form a very small part of the Melanesia Vicariate; the Gilbert and Ellis Islands, etc., are under English sovereignty. Should these areas be deprived of the benefit accruing from a Vicar Apostolic because of the Marshall Islands?

I have the honour to be most respectfully Your Grace's very humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Council Meetings, April 16, 24, 1894

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Vaudon, Assistants.

Brothers Wemmers, Okhuijzen, Nieuwenhuis, Pauly, Lindeboom, Dicks and Lotter called to the sub-diaconate. The first-named three are from the Tilburg house, the latter four from the Salzburg house.

Brothers Muizers from Tilburg and Matthäus Rascher from Salzburg were accepted for minor orders and Guillaume Baeten to the tonsurate.

- Brothers Guillaume and Michel were accepted for the priesthood, de Boismenu and Lacoste to the diaconate, Sergeant, Meunier and Villoux to the sub-diaconate, Jourdon, Quoisier, O'Mahony and Boudin to minor orders.
- Petit, d'Aubigny (Cher) was accepted as a lay brother postulant. Ernest Janssens, who has entered the Liège seminary, asked to be released from his vows on their expiry at the end of three years. It was agreed that his request be accepted.

Complaints from Fr. Tréand about Fr. Merg.

- A letter from Fr. Tréand was read in which he complained bitterly about Fr. Merg. At first the decision was to recall the latter immediately by telegram, but on second thoughts it was not carried through. The General read his reply to Fr. Tréand in which he made observations and recommendations about Fr. Merg and the planned work in Kensington.

A programme for the Provinces.

5. A plan for the organization of Provinces was put forward for discussion, of which a number of copies were made, and which will be submitted for consideration and approval to the Apostolic Visitor.

Likewise, with the setting up of the Northern Province, His Grace will be requested to put in writing what he has verbally authorized, the transfer of the novitiate, in a legitimate manner. In addition he will be consulted about the election of a fourth Assistant, Fr. Lanctin.

A requirement that the Superior General receive in writing, and communicate in writing, confession faculties.

6. Since Father General has been granting confession faculties to the Congregation's priests by word of mouth by virtue of a practice approved by the Archbishop of Bourges, and since this procedure has drawbacks which are not justifiable, it is necessary to dissipate these doubts about the practice and its extent. For this reason it was decided that Fr. General should request a written approval from the Archbishop, and that these powers should be conferred in writing.

Dear Fr. Offermans,

You have sent a request to Rome for the parents of your community members and, no doubt, for your youngsters who visit to be allowed to enter your house to go to mass in your chapel, which mass exempts them from attending another. The Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars has sent your request (postolatum pro informatione et voto) to the Apostolic Visitor (the Archbishop of Bourges). His Grace finds it disconcerting, as you will see from the enclosed letter, that in this matter you have acted of your own accord without consulting me. In every religious Society which is well set up there has to be common action, and when it becomes a matter of recourse to Rome it is the least to be expected that nothing is done without the approval of the Superior General. I am quite certain that you gave no thought to this. You forget, my friend, that women are not allowed to enter religious houses, forbidden not only by canon law and normal religious discipline, but also as something normally inconvenient. Now you are aware that your chapel is well within the house and in order to get to it one has to walk down a long corridor. Besides, you have a novitiate in the same building and Rome insists that the novices should be completely separated from the faithful. If the entrance to your church was on the public street and the section set aside for the laity was separate from that of the community, I would well appreciate the appropriateness of your request, in which case the permission of the local bishop would have sufficed.

Cheerio, Father.

Issoudun, April 22, 1894

Dear Father Offermans,

You did not in any way go against me. Your intention was good and, accordingly, I excuse you quite readily. The document sent to Fr. Carrière was in all probability of a general nature, referring to both men and women. But Rome, most likely, will have replied having women in mind. As regards men, entry to your inside chapel will not be forbidden in any way as it's a common right. If you want the mass they attend with you on a Sunday to be their mass of obligation, your bishop's permission would suffice for that, without any need for recourse to Rome. Ask for this and if it's granted everything will be over and done with.

When I go to Tilburg we shall together look into the matter and find out if it's possible to have access to your chapel without going inside your house and, if so, women could go to mass just like the men, but always with the approval of the Bishop.

Issoudun, April 27, 1894

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I am pleased to hear that you had a good journey. Bishop Morel wrote to me in the sense you gave me to understand, and I passed it on to Fr. Hartzler. He told me that his bag, which contains his notes and printing plans, has not yet arrived and it is quite impossible for him to do what's wanted of him. Together with yourself, I am sorry about this. We have been granted a Jubilee for the month of September to honour the Silver Jubilee of the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You would greatly favour me if you could write an article for this celebration in our French Annals. We would like to recreate our splendid pilgrimages of other years. The Sacred Congregation of Indulgences is creating difficulties for us about enrolling the absent and our promoters. How can it be credibly insisted on that somebody should come from the ends of the earth where Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is venerated to enrol herself/himself either in Rome or Issoudun? This is to insist on the impossible and paralyse our undertaking. When the Pope decreed to award us perpetual direction of the archconfraternity, the role of the promoters was acknowledged since they were granted a plenary indulgence each month (decree of July 21, 1881). The Sacred Congregation, therefore, implicitly accepted that one can enrol those who are absent (at a distance). Bishop Panacci, as you will remember, explicitly informed us that the absent could be enrolled on condition of their consenting and enjoyed the use of reason. While you were away I sent on documents to Fr. Carrière requesting him to draw up a memorandum, having consulted with you, so that these concessions would be granted in writing, and others of a corresponding nature. Be good enough to take up this matter, S.V.P.

I have made fresh overtures to Propaganda that Fr. Bontemps be appointed Vicar Apostolic of Micronesia. See Fr. Carrière about this and treat it as an urgent matter. He tells me that permission for a province of the north has been granted and the decree is being made ready. Try and bring it to a conclusion. Following the departure of our trouble-makers peace and harmony now prevail in the Society. Fathers Reyn and Vandel are curates in the Liège diocese. Hannigan and Crowley are, I am told, in the major seminary together with two or three of our former scholastics, so it would appear. They continue in their attempt to attract others who have remained faithful to us – it's devilishly mischievous. Fr. Klotz, who is due to join them, is still a curate in the Troyes diocese. I don't understand the Bishop of Liège who, so they say, promised to bring them all together in a Congregation at the end of the year under the title of Missionaries of the Holy Family. They deserve to be dispersed for once and for all.

Cheerio, Father.

Issoudun, May 2, 1894

Your Grace,

I am pleased to forward Your Grace the decree which authorizes the creation of a Northern Province and the release from vows of one of our young scholastics about whom we were not satisfied; in both cases you will be kind enough to provide the 'exequatur' (approval) required by Rome.

Since the Holy See, Your Grace, grants us a Province, we have thought it an urgent matter to revise the Provincial regulations as in our Constitutions, submitting them to Your Grace for approval. We have followed in this revision what Canon Law lays down as well as our Constitutions, and what is done in other societies like our own. We pursue the same course of action for our common and specific rules which need to be improved because incomplete. When this process is finished we shall forward them to Your Grace for your approval if the changes are considered appropriate.

Our last Chapter at the request of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars made this work the responsibility of the Superior General and his Assistants.

I beg Your Grace's blessing, with deepest respect.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Closure of the Sacred Heart Review.

1. The decision was taken to end the Review of the Sacred Heart which was running at a loss of 3,000 francs each year and, since it had no advantage compensating for its financial losses, it will be replaced at the end of the current year by a three-monthly bulletin.

Authorization to withdraw 10,000 francs placed with Mr. Munster to help meet a sum of 12,000 francs owed to Mr. Scholl.

2. Fr. Maillard explained that the Glastonbury house owed Mr. Scholl 12,000 francs borrowed at a rate of 5%, and had at its disposal with Mr. Munster 10,000 at 5% interest. It was agreed that this latter amount should be made available to Mr. Scholl, following which he will be owed no more than 2,000 francs, thereby simplifying accountability. The proposal was accepted.

Acceptance of a house and property situated at Jesi.

3. The offer of a house and property at Jesi on the road from Rome to Ancona, 7 or 8 leagues from the latter, was accepted. The offer comes from a family in the locality which has no close relative. Fr. Carrière's plan would be to associate the Petite Oeuvre with this property, taking personnel from the Rome house to set up that at Jesi. Since this plan would seem to entail taking no risk, the view was taken that it wasn't possible (right) to refuse such an advantageous offer.

Brother Lebeau called to the sub-diaconate; Brother Power held over.

4. Brother Power in Glastonbury requested that he be ordained sub-deacon, like Lebeau, but the view was taken that he be held over since he hadn't done normal studies and his theological knowledge could not be guaranteed. He should prepare himself to pass an examination before the representatives of the Bishop of Clifton, and if successful he will be ordained at the first ordination to follow the feast of St. Peter (sic: June 29).

Brother Grogan permitted to leave.

5. Brother Grogan, no longer wishing to remain in the Society, has asked to leave and his request is granted. Fr. Piperon will notify him of this decision.

Brother Jean's request.

6. The lay brother Jean, in Glastonbury, asks permission to go and see his family in Antwerp. If there is some matter involving himself and his parents, he may go, if not he cannot be given permission.

Fr. O'Mahony appointed Superior in Watertown; Fr. Derichemont recalled to Issoudun.

7. The decision was taken that Fr. O'Mahony should replace Fr. Derichemont in Watertown, the latter returning to Issoudun where he will work with Fr. Lanctin in looking after the Petite Oeuvre.

Brother Eloi appointed to Vichy.

8. Brother Eloi in Paris will once again go to Vichy for the season and Brother Emile, who has finished his novitiate at Chezal-Benoît, will replace him in Paris.

To bring about the full complement on the General Council, the Archbishop requests two names.

9. Father General made it known that he had spoken to His Grace about the authorized project of a Northern Province. His Grace, prior to the appointment of a Provincial, has asked for the requisite number on the General Council to be completed, specifically a new Assistant, and he wanted two names put forward. These names have not yet been chosen.

10. Once the Northern Province is set up, the students who are part of it will have their upkeep met by it, whether they are in Rome or elsewhere.

11. Attention now became focused on the accounts of the Issoudun mother house and those of Tilburg and Watertown.

1. The mother house accounts for the second half of 1893.

These are set out regularly by Fr. Maillard. In taking into account the last month totalling 8,141.20 francs and adding the receipts of the present three-monthly intake, there is, effectively, a total intake of 264,838.80 francs. Adding to this recent intake, 2,557 francs, the total available comes to 276,186.30 francs. As regards outlay, if one adds the debt paid out, 249,166.50 francs, to unpaid debts, 38,699.80 francs, this amounts to 287,866.30. As between the two figures the positive, credit, outcome comes to 20,670 francs.

2. The Tilburg accounts for the second half of 1893.

The accounts are regularly drawn up and provide the following facts. What remains over from the previous six months comes to 13,513.65 francs, which together with accounts met comes to 72,240.27 francs. Expenses met come to 70,566.67 francs; expenses to be met come to 22,681.94 francs. There is a deficit of 21,008.34 francs. The 1894 budget is equally set out as precisely as possible, expenses being of the order of 151,511.94 francs and intake at 152,827.60 francs, giving a surplus of 1,315.60 francs.

3. The Watertown accounts, second half of 1892.

They are not made up with regularity. No indication is provided for the intake of the preceding six months nor the number of mass stipends received. Likewise for expenses, the interest paid on money owed is given, but not the amount itself. The following is presented.

Debt to be met 19,708.15 francs.

Debts paid 20,061.25 francs + outstanding debt 6,546.30 francs. This gives an overall deficit of 6,899.40 francs. Does one pay a debt of 20,061 francs with 19,708 francs? Eventually a debt of 26,421.38 francs is acknowledged.

First six months 1893.

Accounts to be met 31,782.10

Debts paid 29,877.10 francs + 7,050 francs, making a deficit of 5,145.10 francs. The earlier debt above of 26,421.30 francs has disappeared without trace!

Second six months of 1893.

The intake of the preceding six months has not been added to the receipts of the current six months. This corrected, the accounts which must be met come to 23,910.5 francs in current debt. Debts paid come to 20,732.60 francs, debts to be met 7,333.60 francs, the whole coming to 28,066.20; the deficit is 3,177.93 francs from 4,155.67 francs. The 1894 budget continually excludes the above last mentioned sum.

To His Grace Jean-Pierre Boyer, Archbishop of Bourges.

J M J

Issoudun, May 9, 1894

Your Grace,

At the meeting Fr. Superior had with Your Grace last Saturday he forgot to discuss a matter which has its own significant importance and which he requests me to bring to your attention.

After the 1880 expulsions, Archbishop Marchal, your distinguished predecessor, agreed at the request of our esteemed Superior to rent the Sacred Heart house and its dependent buildings in order to set up a public school there. As a result of the legal decision relative to it, the Archbishop became the tenant of the school and buildings. It is due to this circumstance, we are certain, that we have never been infringed upon in our guidance of the school. The rent was not assigned other than for a period of 3, 6 and 9 years and when it expired it became replaced by a verbal arrangement renewed each year. It still holds even though the man who rented it out is dead, but it has to be said that it is through sheer good will on the part of the director of education that things have so favourably continued, since up to now he has closed his eyes to the irregular situation which prevails, requesting us at this moment to provide him with a new name as soon as possible.

We would hope, Your Grace, that you would favour us in a signal manner with your name, either to rent or as a spoken arrangement. This will not involve Your Grace in any commitment, being no more than signing the document whereby you are acknowledged as the lessee of the Sacred Heart premises at Issoudun. The figures given for the transaction are only there as a matter of form.

Hoping for a favourable reply, I have the honour to be Your Grace's humble servant in C.J.

On behalf of Father General,
F.X. Maillard, MSC, Bursar.

18940521X

Council Meetings, 21, 25 May; 4 June, 1894

In attendance: Rev. Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau and Vandel Assistants.

Brother Emile Oulman admitted to first vows; A. Carls to renewal of vows.

1. The lay brother Emile Oulman, who had been held back at the end of his novitiate, is accepted for profession, while Andreas Carls in New Guinea is accepted for renewal of vows.

Brothers Lynch and Gotteland accepted for priestly ordination.

2. Brother Lynch was put forward for ordination to the priesthood by Fr. Carrière although he is 18 months too young; the proposal was accepted, however, because of his exceptional qualities.

For further on Lynch see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, passim.

Brother Gotteland, about whom there had been a proposal to postpone his priestly ordination, was put forward by Fr. Bontemps; it was agreed that he should be ordained.

A postulant from Rome accepted.

3. At Fr. Carrière's suggestion, a young Rome student who has been studying French in the house for some months, was accepted. Since he finds himself, because of unfortunate circumstances, unable to pay a fee during the novitiate, he will be taken in free of charge with the proviso that he pay his travel expenses and bring with him enough money to pay for his journey home if he doesn't stay.

The election of the fourth Assistant: Fr. Lanctin.

4. Following the request of the Archbishop of Bourges two candidates were put forward to fill the post of the vacant Assistant: Fr. Lanctin was chosen as between the two by the Archbishop.

The gift of the Jesi property.

5. Following the reading of a document about the gift of a property (house and grounds) near Jesi on the railway line between Rome and Ancona, it was agreed that the offer should be accepted because it was advantageous and didn't involve any great financial burdens, but with a condition added that if the Society could not continue to use it, the property should be handed over to the Bishop who might offer it to another Congregation which would be in a position to fulfil the intentions of the donors. What we have added to the property needs to be taken into account in any assessment. This clause being accepted for the aforementioned donors, the release becomes an accomplished fact.

A contribution of 6,000 francs for the Jesi property.

6. Fr. Carrière in a letter to the Superior General mentioned that the new Jesi house could accept the Rome Petite Oeuvre and be used as a holiday house for the scholastics, but if used for this purpose it would need an extra storey. The cost of this addition cannot be met by the donors, although it wouldn't be more than 6,000 francs or so. He, Carrière, suggests that the mother house should meet the costs. The Council, not wishing to be involved in the future of a house which has already so many financial charges, agrees that the 6,000 francs needed for the additional storey should be provided, but on condition that it will be reimbursed, and meantime it will entail an interest of 4%, a condition accepted by Fr. Carrière.

The building of a staircase in the new Issoudun Sacred Heart house.

7. The Issoudun Petite Oeuvre, before its installation in the new Sacred Heart building, north side, needs to have adaptation changes made before the beginning of the new school year. The present staircase at the end of the building is totally inadequate to cope with the movement of a large community and a larger staircase is needed which cannot be constructed within the present building, which means the construction of a wing in the south, parallel to the building and at a cost of 7 to 8,000 francs.

Discussions about the transfer of the scholasticate to Chezal-Benoît and the novitiate to Issoudun.

8. When problems arose in the Society last February (the departure of Reyn and others) the scholastics who remained steadfast were promised that they would be separated at Easter from confrères and outsiders. The carrying out of this promise was not possible at Easter and became adjourned to the long (Summer) holidays. While the location was not mentioned, Chezal-Benoît was thought of at first, with the Petite Oeuvre and even the novitiate envisaged as coming to Issoudun so that the scholastics would be completely isolated, on their own that is. But an Issoudun siting presented so many problems both for novices and scholastics, due to the comings and goings of confrères, visiting clergy, pilgrims and the feasts in the basilica. In any event the huge Chezal-Benoît house is more than sufficiently large for the two undertakings which can co-exist there separated from each other and each keeping its autonomy under two Directors immediately responsible to the Superior General. Nevertheless, Fr. Vaudon, Director of the scholastics, thinks that the promise made and confirmed more than once will not be fully realized, as they see it, because they are suspicious as to its sincerity; besides he thinks that the placement of the novices in Issoudun would not have the same inconvenience attached to it as it would for the scholastics. Since there was no giving way as regards the differing viewpoints, it was decided that the decision would be left to His Grace the Apostolic Visitor (the Archbishop of Bourges).

The construction of a shelter for Our Lady of the Sacred Heart pilgrims.

9. The General explained that for quite sometime the need for a shelter for pilgrims was something to be addressed, since there was nothing like it attached to the basilica. One could be built to the east of the town part in a plot of ground adjacent to it which belongs to us. Having examined the plan, with a quotation price of 2,500 francs, the proposed shelter was approved.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I want to thank you for letting me know all you have heard from Propaganda about the Gilbert Islands issue. We shall wait and see. I shall be greatly obliged to you for an article in depth about the Silver Jubilee of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart coronation. There are marvellous things to be said and it's only yourself who can do this adequately.

I am forwarding to you:

1. my letter to the Archbishop of Bourges;

2. that to the Holy Father;
3. my request to the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences;
4. the rescript granting permission for the Jubilee.

Do not be too late in sending on the lovely article you are about to present to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Issoudun, June 5, 1894

Your Grace,

I hasten to thank Your Grace for your many acts of kindness and for the responsibilities you confer on me. I am pleased to send you two items for your approval and which you have forgotten, no doubt, to return:

1. the Directory or Provincial Regulations;
2. the approval of the fourth Assistant, Fr. Lanctin, who was unanimously chosen and will be well received by all.

We await Your Grace's twofold approval before we proceed to elect a Provincial for our Northern houses.

A rich Italian family, the Count and Countess Franceschini, childless and very drawn to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, is offering us a very beautiful property, with a church and large new buildings, on the Adriatic coast between Ancona and Loreto in the Jesi Diocese, to set up our Italian Petite Oeuvre, presently in Rome which is not an appropriate setting for it (the petite oeuvre). This distinguished family will look after the furnishing and rents, the latter annually being 1,500 francs (about 5,020 euros); there are many other advantageous aspects also. In any event, I am forwarding to you our Procurator General's letter, and Your Grace will be better able to judge the situation for himself. Before entering into negotiations I asked Fr. Carrière to speak to the Cardinal Vicar and find out what he thought of this offer. He replied that His Eminence warmly recommended acceptance of this very generous offer which could, very likely, be of great benefit from many points of view. Our Council is unanimously of the same opinion. We await Your Grace's recommendation.

Please accept, Your Grace, my deepest regards as I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: May we then invite the Province's bishops and others to the September feast? We would be delighted, Your Grace, if on your return to Bourges you would pay a visit to our beloved Sacred Heart and its accompanying buildings, of which you are the tenant.

Dear Father,

Most willingly I give you permission to go to Paray-le-Monial. I am sorry that you cannot go to the congress in Rheims where your presence would be very advantageous! Your having to return to Paris should not be a problem preventing you from going there (to Rheims). You are not responsible to anybody in this respect. Serious-minded people are aware that religious are not tied to a place and are likely to experience changes of domicile. For the rest, your qualities are known to those participating in congresses and your presence among them would only add to the regard they have for you and the Congregation you represent. Fr. Pèlerin, who wrote to me, is disappointed that you are not going. You will act in this matter according to what you think best. Otherwise, try Father to arrange with your Paris confrères the organization of a pilgrimage to Issoudun for September 8. It is necessary to organize it well in advance. Do your best in this matter.

Your Excellency,

On September 8 next we are having in Issoudun the Silver Jubilee, the 25th anniversary, of the coronation of the statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. On this occasion His Holiness Leo XIII has agreed at the request of Archbishop Boyer to open generously the Church's treasury. Among other spiritual favours of great quality, the Pope has favoured us with a solemn Jubilee for the whole month of September. May I dare to hope, Your Grace, that the representative among us of Christ's Vicar would add to the splendour of our September 8 celebrations by his presence? Your kindness is well known, Your Excellency; add further to it by meeting the humble and pressing invitation we beg to place before you and, as well, to our highly respected and well-loved Archbishop.

To Father Clement Offermans, MSC, Superior, Tilburg.

Issoudun, June 14, 1894

Dear Father Offermans,

The Archbishop of Bourges has approved of Fr. Lanctin's appointment as the fourth Assistant and we are about to make it known officially to all our houses. Yes, the Apostolic Visitor would have liked us to be aware, before naming the Provincial, of the undertakings you and your confrères are thinking of setting up, the houses where they will be undertaken, and the personnel available to you. His Grace wishes that everything is seriously undertaken and is as much as possible in keeping with the Constitutions. It seems surprising to him that you have a novitiate of your own for some years given the absence of personnel to look after it.

The Archbishop insists on our presenting to him two individuals from whom the Provincial will be chosen; he will make his choice as between the two; that's what he has done as regards the fourth Assistant. There is nothing to stop you from letting me know, having discussed matters together, the two confrères whom you would consider capable to take charge as Provincial, and going on to make clear which one is the more favoured persona grata; this is quite in order. The Apostolic Visitor will appreciate it for his part and go on to make his choice for the greater glory of God and the well-being of the institute.

Following your favourable recommendations, we willingly accept the two postulants you write about for the novitiate. As for Brother Vuisters, I do not find him well disposed and he has had ample time to think about his vocation. If he doesn't want to remain, why keep him until October? Given his attitude, he could be harmful for your scholastics. Do not be concerned about numbers, but rather about quality. I am pleased to be informed that your young men are getting on well. May the Sacred Heart bless us!

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Council Meetings, 18, 15 June, 1894

In attendance: Father General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Vaudon, Lanctin, Assistants.

Circular as regards Fr. Lanctin's election and the setting up of the Northern Province.

1. It was decided that a circular letter be sent out stating that Fr. Lanctin has been elected Assistant and that the Northern houses, Antwerp, Tilburg, Salzburg, were being made into a Province. Next Father Carrière's reply to the question of the cape was considered; it cannot be looked upon as a choir costume and, consequently, be considered for ecclesiastical functions, such as serving at mass, choir, etc.

The Glastonbury house has been reduced to a lower status, that of a (canonically) smaller house with a preparatory school. Fr. Hartzer is appointed Superior.

2. Glastonbury will have a diminished status and have no more than a preparatory school for the lower classes as far as the sixth, taking in youngsters who are meant to go on to the Petite Oeuvre, or those who can pay a fee from 5 to 600 francs. At the beginning of the new school year the students in the higher classes who are due to go to the Petite Oeuvre will come to , while others will be provided for elsewhere. Fr. Fernand Hartzer is appointed Superior and Fr. Chétail is made available definitively to Fr. Tréand in Sydney.

Your Grace,

I am pleased to return the Provincial rules and regulations to Your Grace with the explanations you asked for. I have set out the articles which have been taken from our Constitutions in their numerical order; the rest are from St. Liguori which the Holy See has officially approved of. What comes from ourselves is not greatly important and follows from the nature of things, without any sourcing. Your Grace will add or take out whatever he judges pertinent.

These regulations for a Province which you wish to approve of, Your Grace, like our common rules which we shall shortly be submitting, will remain obligatory until the next General Chapter which, after a process of experimentation and considered evaluation, will approve of them by its authority. This preparatory measure will, I believe, please all the confrères, giving us a better guarantee for the future.

The Superiors of the Northern houses are very pleased that Fr. Lanctin has been appointed fourth Assistant. In making their approval known to me they asked permission to have a Provincial named who would be acceptable to them. We very much want to meet their wishes. I replied asking them to forward two names, having prayed over the issue. We shall then decide on our choice, taking into account Your Grace's advice. Afterwards we shall send Your Grace the names of the two candidates, together with our own assessments as we did in the case of the Assistant (Lanctin), and Your Grace will make his choice.

We are not going to become engaged with the appointment of the Provincial until the rules are approved; this in order to avoid any problems.

With deep respect, I have the honour to be Your Grace's very humble and obedient servant in C.J.

3. that following recent discussion, the long cloak which is part of our religious habit cannot be considered a choir habit and take the place of a surplice in ecclesiastical ceremonies such as preaching, serving at mass or assisting in choir during the office.

D 18940624

The Jubilee of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.
The 25th Anniversary of the coronation in the Issoudun Basilica.

It will be 25 years on September 8 next since Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne of blessed memory solemnly crowned at Issoudun in the name of Pius IX Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in the presence of fifteen bishops, five hundred priests and thirty thousand pilgrims.

This unforgettable day when the enthusiasm was at its height was the point of departure for a devotion which blossomed after that. Today Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is acclaimed throughout the world, her blessed name on all lips. Her following is so increased that the numbers today surpass the figure of eighteen millions, as our archives make clear. More than two hundred banners from all over Europe were presented in the different pilgrimages which followed. The ex-voto offerings in marble, which literally cover the basilica from floor to ceiling, testify to her impact and, no less so, her kindness, expressing the acknowledgment of the worthy faithful.

To commemorate this magnificent occasion in 1869, the worthy and distinguished Archbishop Boyer of Bourges, so drawn himself to the cult of Mary and the worship of the Sacred Heart, made it his duty to petition the Holy Father to accord the favour of a jubilee during the whole month of September, with a great variety of indulgences in favour of pilgrims who will be visiting the well-known sanctuary of the patron of difficult and despairing cases, circumstances. Leo XIII favourably acceded to the request and met all its requirements because it was in keeping with his own heartfelt good wishes and, accordingly, he couldn't act otherwise. The worthy and distinguished Pontiff had long exhibited a special devotion towards Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. While still Cardinal Bishop of Perugia the cult began in the cathedral-church, and since he came to Peter's Throne he has not failed in extending significant support and good will to the devotion, endorsing the Issoudun Association as the Archconfraternity for the entire world and going on to designate the huge church at Piazza Navona in the centre of Rome as the universal centre of the devotion. His Holiness, acknowledging graces granted and requesting more, often sends one of his chaplains to celebrate mass at the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart altar, placing before it splendid bouquets of flowers from the Vatican garden. The reference here is to the Piazza Navona Church.

It is, then, as meeting the wishes of the Holy Father, that we attach a very particular solemnity to the forthcoming September 8 feast. Many bishops will grace us with their presence at this imposing ceremony and quite a number of pilgrimages are already being organized in different dioceses to celebrate the day. Others will come in the course of the month, that from Lyons is due on September 14. Each feels the need to come and pray in the splendid Basilica of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the patron of difficult and desperate cases. The time of disillusionment is over and we clearly are being affected by serious issues. It is necessary, then, to make a strong impact on, appeal to, the Heart of Jesus, source of every grace and blessing, in order to secure the triumph of the Church and Christian society. Let us commit ourselves for this to her who holds the key to his divine gifts, coming with conviction to pray in the privileged sanctuary and, thereby, obtaining what our hearts wish for. What favours have not been granted to those who in confidence call upon her! (They are countless and we refer only to those known to us.) We have already enrolled 459,800 without counting those in still greater numbers who did not come to our notice.

May our hearts expand in hope! Let us come in crowds, making our appeals at the feet of the divine treasury of the Heart of Jesus, and everything leads us to believe that we shall be heard.

We shall shortly make known the specific favours granted by the Holy See during the course of this Jubilee and, likewise, the organization and programme for these feasts which most likely will surpass in splendour the coronation and subsequent years.

18940702X

Council Meeting, July 2, 1894

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Vaudon, Lanctin.

Departure of Fr. Ilge,

1. Father Ilge writes from Sücklen, Cologne Diocese, asking to be released from his vows and petitioning for certificates which would make it possible to find a bishop or an accepting community. The view was taken that the said exclaustating document would be granted on condition that he found a bishop, and the document would be sent to him as soon as this condition was fulfilled. As for other documents which he is requesting, it is quite impossible since he has been so long away and without regular contact. If he wishes to enter a cloistered community to atone for his serious misbehaviour which led to his being banned in three dioceses, he will be facilitated in every possible way.

Brothers Pfeiffer and Dörfler accepted for renewal of vows.

2. Both the above in New Guinea request renewal of vows, supported by Bishop Couppé. The request is granted.

Likewise at the request and support of Fr. Hartzler, Superior, the lay brother Frederick Hasters, aged 35, has been accepted for final vows.

Fr. Casas recommends the pupils Miguel Ulayat and Felipe Echarsi for the novitiate. The first-named, although quite intelligent, is not accepted for health reasons; as for the second, although he is of canonical age, fifteen and a half, there is need for further assurance about him. A lay brother postulant, Coma, is also put forward; he is accepted provided he knows sufficient French.

Fathers Ramot and Offermans as Provincial candidates.

3. A discussion followed about the appointment of a Provincial for the Northern Province. The Council was of the view that the first-named was of canonical age, being over 48, and a conscientious religious of French nationality, associated over many years with the Congregation and, far from favouring separatist tendencies, would use his influence, rather, to draw his confrères to the centre of unity, and, conscious that all in the Council would be in agreement about him, the Council itself was in favour of nominating him in the first instance for the Provincial office. Consideration was given to the fact that, after Fr. Ramot, he who gained most votes was Fr. Offermans, the Tilburg Superior. He likewise being conscientious and attached to the Congregation, Dutch in origin, and a good administrator. Since one would not easily find another as capable who would be so willing and acceptable, the Council was in agreement on proposing him as the second choice for the above-mentioned post, even if he is not yet 33 years of age.

Transfer of the scholasticate to Chezal-Benoît.

4. Discussion followed on the definite transfer of the scholasticate to Chezal-Benoît and the Petite Oeuvre to Issoudun. There was unanimous agreement that the change must take place given the promise made and the need to get the students away from the comings and goings associated with the Sacred Heart house, Issoudun.

Maintaining the novitiate beside the scholasticate.

There followed a discussion as to whether or not the novitiate should be left beside the scholasticate, both institutes keeping their respective autonomy. Four votes against one favoured the retention of both establishments near each other and this decision would be submitted for approval to the Archbishop.

Brother Lynch's ordination to the priesthood postponed.

5. Fr. Carrière made it known that Brother (C.) Lynch needed an 18-month dispensation in order to be ordained to the priesthood but, due to his behaviour (attitude), he didn't quite merit such an extraordinary dispensation; he cannot be ordained in Rome (at least for the time being).

Fr. Carrière himself spoke of threats directed at him by sinister forces arraigned against him because he had to send away staff who were useless. He offers to leave his post to safeguard the house if it is thought best, but the remark was made that by giving way to the threats one could only embolden these enemies of the order and, therefore, it would not be wise to give way, with Fr. Carrière advised to go on a holiday and spend some time away.

Fr. O'Mahony endorsed as Superior at Watertown.

6. Fr. O'Mahony having made known his lack of ability and natural timidity as reasons for refusing the post of Superior at Watertown, the view was taken, having heard what his predecessor Fr. Derichemont had to say, that there was no good reason to accept his (O'Mahony's) self-estimate in this respect since he is both judicious and sufficiently intelligent in a practical way to look after matters responsibly. Supported by the Lord he will overcome his timidity.

Issoudun, July 5, 1894

Dear Father Vaudon,

Four of the Council members are of the view that my promise most sincerely made to the scholastics has not been in any way infringed by the arrangement you are aware of. What do you want me to do? I have always accepted the will of the majority. Let His Grace be the judge once more; his decision will be determining both for me and my confrères without recourse in any way whatsoever to a challenge. That's how it is in all well regulated communities.

Your letter forwarded to the Archbishop, and such as you have shared it with me, does not seem wise to me. I haven't yet shared with His Grace our latest discussions and decisions and I don't think I can do so before tomorrow evening. Come and see me tomorrow morning and we shall discuss this issue.

Cheerio, Father.

Council Meetings, July 9,16, 1894

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Vaudon, Lanctin.

The chaplaincy of the rue Chaptal sisters, offered to the Paris confrères, accepted.

1. The Paris confrères were offered the chaplaincy at a convent nearby in rue Chaptal, the stipend 2,000 francs per annum, the chaplain celebrating a daily mass with a sermon on Sundays and feast days and weekly confession for thirty or so sisters. The Council thought this was an advantageous proposal and should be accepted. Fr. Roger appointed to the post.

The Tilburg fathers given permission to send their youngsters home for the holidays.

2. Fr. Offermans asked permission to send the Petite Oeuvre youngsters in Tilburg home to their families during the holidays as happened two years ago due to the influenza epidemic, and last year because of the circumstances at the time. One hesitated in Council before giving this permission since he is concerned about creating a questionable general precedent which could become common practice. Nevertheless, since the absence of the pupils could give our confrères valuable leisure time to organize the Northern Province, it was thought that this itself provided sufficient reason to authorize the Tilburg fathers to give three weeks' holidays to their students, but specifically so this year and without prejudice for the future.

Fr. Ilge banned.

3. Fr. Ilge, having been banned from the ministry for unbecoming behaviour by the Administrator in Berlin and the Archbishop of Cologne, it was decided that he should be deprived of any permission which had been granted to him, with his departure from the Society speeded up, and he should be asked to take himself off into a cloistered community to do penance for his unacceptable behaviour.

Paul Bertin accepted as lay brother postulant.

4. The file of a postulant, Paul Bertin, was considered; he had left or was sent away from the De La Salle Brothers' novitiate and would now like to join the Society as a helper if not, otherwise, as a lay brother. He is only 17 years of age. Taking his family into consideration it was agreed that he be accepted, but if it is thought appropriate that he be accepted, he should undertake a lengthy postulancy.

Request for a director at the Jesi Petite Oeuvre.

5. Fr. Carrière is looking for someone to take charge of the Jesi Petite Oeuvre and would approvingly accept Fr. Godineux for this post. Several Council members, however, were of the view that he would not be suitable and that his proper posting should be in France, where he could provide valuable service as a preacher. It was decided that the matter should be looked into during the holidays.

Amalgamation of the Sacred Heart Revue and the Preacher's Bulletin.

6. Mr. Téqui, editor of the Preachers' Bulletin, wants to amalgamate with it the Revue of the Sacred Heart, which we are suppressing. Since this proposal offers a number of advantages which are not to be gainsaid, and since, otherwise, this amalgamation is an honourable way for it, the Sacred Heart Revue, to disappear, the proposal was accepted.

A plea from Fr. Tréand for building to commence at Kensington.

7. Fr. Tréand continues to insist on starting work at Kensington and the Council for its part freely acknowledges the need, being quite willing to approve and support the undertaking, but on condition that a summary cost is provided, if not yet in detail, of the outlay and intake, with accompanying plans and projected costs of the proposed undertaking. He (Tréand) intends to place at the disposal of these undertakings what is left over, or becomes available, from the Randwick parish accounts, and he further states that Cardinal Moran will certainly authorize this use, whatever about its being normally made available to the missions. He also requests that the aforementioned construction has money set aside for it from the contributions on behalf of the missions received at the Issoudun procure. (!) The Council will give its approval if it can see evidence for reliable approval from the Cardinal, and can meet the complaints from the Apostolic Vicars that revenue intended for them is not being made available. The buildings being put up at Kensington will benefit the missionaries who will come and stay there on holiday and/or to regain their health, being in this way of immediate benefit to the missions themselves. It is not at all to their disadvantage that the Procure will be set up.

The proposal of a foundation at Oulx rejected.

8. A letter was read offering to the Congregation an old abbey at the foot of Mount Cinis, Oulx, near the tunnel opening. Everyone agreed that the lack of personnel made it impossible to consider new foundations.

Issoudun, July 10, 1894

I hasten to let you know that I have received your letter in which you do me the honour of writing to make known to me the departure of my confrères and your expression of regret that this is so.

I thank Your Grace for your appreciated expression of regret and the kindness you have shown them. It is not without regret that we ourselves have left a town where we were the recipients of so much support and kindness. We shall be always there in the unity of prayer and we shall be pleased about what good is accomplished by others in our place. I am, Your Grace, delighted that SAGRARIO will always remain the centre in Ecuador of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association. I shall send an affiliation form from our archconfraternity so that all the associates can benefit from the indulgences granted by the Holy See.

Favour me with your blessing; with deep respect I have the honour to be Your Grace's obedient and humble servant in C.J.

You will know as from today what bishops will be present for the ordination of Bishop Bardel, and could we, then, send out now our invitations for September 8? The Issoudun Silver Jubilee celebrations.

As soon as you have decided on your choice as Provincial, I would ask Your Grace to be good enough to let me have it.

If you could let me have back, Your Grace, the letter from the miraculously cured Tours person, I shall be very grateful to you, because I can then place it in our archives with others of the same nature which testify to the impact of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Once more I am grateful to Your Grace for all your kindness and the keen interest you have in us. It's Fr. Jouët who will be preaching at our feast, those I had contacted unable to accept the invitation.

Dear Father Offermans,

I am informing you that it is Reverend Father Ramot who has been appointed Provincial. His Grace the Apostolic Visitor has ratified this decision. I am forwarding to you the Provincial rules and regulations approved by the Archbishop until the next Chapter which will shortly take place. Where do you think the Provincial headquarters would be best situated? I invite Fr. Ramot to come to Issoudun for a discussion about this.

Fr. Ilge no longer belongs to our Society. Rome has released him from his vows. It would appear that he was responsible for serious misdemeanours in the Cologne diocese. The Archbishop, who recently wrote to me, placed him under an interdict. What's going to become of the poor unfortunate man?

Council Meeting, July 19, 1894

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Morisseau, Vaudon, Lanctin.

A meeting with the Archbishop who approved Fr. Ramot's appointment as Provincial, and the transfer of the scholastic to Chezal-Benoît.

1. The Council, with the exception of the ill Fr. Vaudon, went to Bourges at the request of the Archbishop, and Apostolic Visitor, who, following the different views put before him, approved Fr. Ramot's appointment as Northern Provincial. His Grace agreed that the promise to transfer and isolate, made to the scholastics, will be sufficiently met by setting up the scholasticate at Chezal-Benoît, beside the novitiate, but on condition that there is complete autonomy on both sides, and separation of the two institutions, although the cooking will be in common. The Archbishop has insisted on two different occasions that a General Chapter should shortly take place. He also wants the Petite Oeuvre, due to be transferred to Issoudun, to keep its autonomy, likewise, and have nothing in common with the school (college) for day pupils.

The Antwerp house designated as Provincial headquarters.

2. The Antwerp house will be the Provincial headquarters and, due to lack of personnel, Fr. Ramot will combine the offices of Provincial, local Superior and Director of the scholasticate, having Fathers Hartzler and Offermans as Assistants and Fathers Linckens and Kuntz as local Assistants with Fr. Offermans Provincial Bursar.

Decision taken about allowing holidays in families.

3. Several teachers asked to go home to their families to relax, something which they need. The decision was taken to uphold the Constitutions on this point where it is stated that members are not allowed to visit their families except in the case of necessity, and permission will only be given to those who have a valid reason for going other than the natural satisfaction of seeing their parents.

I beg to ask Your Grace yet again to add your signature of approval to the two enclosed letters. Issoudun, July 27, 1894

Dear Mr. de Bonneval,

I am very grateful to you for what you so kindly undertook and the results achieved. Since the Jubilee lasts for the whole month (of September) I would very much like it if the concession of 50% was not confined to the 7th, 8th, 9th and 10th of September, but extended as far as the 30th, since our objective would be to attract on each day of the month pilgrimages from the Berry parishes and the surrounding dioceses. Be good enough to seal the accompanying letter and send it directly to the director general. (The matter is urgent.) Up to now there are only two or three bishops who have replied to our invitation; that's very little. It appears that there will be 17 for the ordination of Bishop Bardel, among them the Cardinal of Paris.

I am delighted that your health is so good, and the Alpine journeys! Give my regards to Madame de Bonneval, and remember me also to your good children and the parish priest.

With my deepest regards in C.J.

Council Meetings, July 29 and 30, 1894

All members present.

Brother Jourdon sent to Croisic for the good of his health.

1. On medical advice he needs to spend some time by the sea, as well as an operation to heal the tumour in the eyes from which he suffers.

Fr. Gressin appointed to the Gilbert Islands.

2. Fr. Gressin is appointed to the Gilbert Islands in place of Fr. Gotteland who is not prepared to go there at the moment.

Brother Hubert Simons dismissed from the Society.

3. Having separated himself from his confrères when returning from Quito, and abandoned his vocation by getting married, he is expelled from the Society.

Fr. Barral and Brother Genaro appointed to Barcelona.

4. The first-named is definitely appointed to the Spanish house and will take with him Brother Genaro Lacoste, who will be ordained in Barcelona.

Refusal of Postulancy.

5. A De La Salle brother whose ten years' commitment is about to end asks to join the Congregation in order to go to the missions. The view was taken that there was no reason to meet his request by asking for an indult on his behalf.

Requests from Brothers Neyroud, Fabre, Fiate and Héraud to visit their families.

6. All due to be called up for military service asked to spend all or part of their holidays with their families by way of resting from their work, strengthening their health and pleasing their parents. The view was taken that these requests were not serious enough and in keeping with the Constitutions to justify family visits. Nevertheless, the view was taken that they could be allowed some time off before they were called up.

Setting up a preparatory school at the Saint-Pierre-des-Clages, Petite Oeuvre, Switzerland.

7. Information was provided about the mission which is the responsibility of Fathers Barral and Gotteland in association with Fr. Robadey, parish priest of Saint-Pierre-des-Clages, diocese of Sion, Switzerland. It is proposed that youngsters should be prepared there for entry to the Petite Oeuvre, with a yearly fee of 400 francs provided for each student, and the accompanying expenses involved with lodging the youngsters in the presbytery. The priest has no parish responsibilities, but is held in high esteem by his superiors. Able to live from his benefice, without an accompanying ministry, he has therefore the leisure to engage himself with this worthy undertaking, being ready to take in a dozen pupils or so to whom he would teach the primary elements of Latin and would educate as far as the fifth level. The above-mentioned two priests think that this worthy priest, on his own, supervising and teaching this little band of students, would be pushed to the limit to meet such a demanding task. Their view is that it would be better to start with 5 or 6 students. One of the priests could examine them at the end of the school year, and if the examination has a satisfactory result one could come to a decision about making further contributions to the project. This decision, which seemed judicious, was accepted and was passed on to the priest. He, however, replied that as he could count on the support of a confrère friend he would be able to take in eight pupils. He was left to his arrangements.

The proposal by Fr. Derichemont to set up a house in the USA turned down.

8. Fr. Derichemont put forward a lengthy memorandum arguing for the necessity and feasibility of a second house in the USA, presenting himself as the one to bring about this foundation. The Council's view was that in the present precarious state of the Congregation one could not give any thought to new foundations.

Proposal to have a novitiate and scholasticate in the Antwerp Province.

9. The new Northern Provincial, Fr. Ramot, having met with his Provincial Council, made it known that he and his confrères wanted to set up immediately a novitiate and scholasticate in the Province, the scholasticate at Antwerp under the guidance of Fr. Meyer and the novitiate at Salzburg under the direction of Fr. Hartzler, with Fr. Kuntz as socius. It was put forward as a motive for this precipitateness that those in the Province would thereby become assured that real autonomy was being given to them such as they wanted it and this proposal of its very nature strengthens their confidence and affirms peace within the Congregation.

The serious drawbacks when a novitiate is without the requisite personnel.

The Council does not balk in any way before the setting up of a scholasticate, but it objects to a novitiate in the circumstances put forward. Already, before the present meeting, two members were consulted by Fr. General, and the considered view was that such a measure could not be sanctioned without the approval of the Apostolic Visitor, and this same decision was now shared with the Council members who, freshly considering the issue, found that there were serious drawbacks in setting up a novitiate with such inadequate personnel. Neither the director or socius would have the requisite legal age, the director already a Provincial Councillor, local Superior, bursar. Both would be the only resident priests without anyone to help out in case of sickness or enforced absence. What guarantee would be offered for the formation of people in those circumstances? The Apostolic Visitor would be contacted to get his decision on the matter.

Issoudun, July 29, 1894

Your Grace,

Straightaway I shall thank the Bishop of Tours for his gracious acceptance which we owe to Your Grace's letter to him. Please accept this renewed expression of our gratitude. Fr. Beguinot was due to inform you that the Bishop of Limoges would not be coming due to the death of the venerable Bishop of Cahors; we are very sorry about this.

All our Northern confrères are pleased with the appointment of Fr. Ramot as Provincial. Following Your Grace's advice I asked him to come and discuss the organization of his undertakings with us and he has done so. He informed us that the wishes of the other Superiors would be that:

1. the Provincial house be in Antwerp, as well as the scholasticate and the Petite Oeuvre for German youngsters;
2. the Tilburg house would continue as the lay brothers' novitiate, as well as the Petite Oeuvre for the Flemish and Dutch, their language being the same;
3. that Salzburg be the novitiate for all, beginning this year.

We told him that we would give consideration to all this. We then appointed the Provincial Council which would consist of the Salzburg, Tilburg and Antwerp Superiors, this last being Fr. Ramot himself. They will meet every three months to examine Provincial matters and more often if necessary. The General Bursar of the Province would be Fr. Offermans, the Tilburg Superior. We then set up the local Council for each house, with respect, of course, to Your Grace's approval, all the more necessary when several people have not in fact the requisite age stipulated in the Constitutions, exercise a number of roles and are exempt from residing with the Provincial.

Fr. Ramot on his return to Antwerp called together the Superiors of Salzburg, Fr. Hartzler, and Tilburg, Fr. Offermans, to consider these arrangements. I forward you the letter which he (Ramot) sent on to me after this meeting. I sent him the telegram he requested, stating that we approve of these arrangements if His Grace the Apostolic Visitor also approves. Then on that same evening I wrote to inform him about certain problems presented by this proposal. I forward to Your Grace his latest reply. The issue which most concerns us is that of the novitiate. We ask ourselves if it is opportune, prudent, to allow them to have a novitiate beginning this year given the lack of personnel, and if it might not be preferable to leave their youngsters for one or two more years at the Chezal-Benoît novitiate to form them in the religious life and imbue them with the Congregation's spirit. Tomorrow I shall be calling together the Council once more to examine reflectively all these issues and we shall submit our findings to Your Grace.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Issoudun, July 30, 1894

Your Grace,

The General Council of the Congregation met today, July 30, to discuss the setting up of a novitiate which our Northern confrères intend to start at Salzburg this year. Our intention is to place before Your Grace the reasons for and against so that you arrive at a decision based on the facts. Your verdict will be for us an expression of God's will.

Reasons for:

- a. Rome's decree approving the setting up of this Province and granting it a novitiate.

- b. All the Northern priests want it (the novitiate) as it will have an excellent impact, creating a great deal of confidence since the essential undertakings will be functioning from the beginning in the Province.
- c. The new Provincial, having contacted us, we replied by telegram as requested that we would approve their plans if the Apostolic Delegate himself was in favour.

Contrary reasons:

- a. Lack of staff. Fr. Hartzler, the suggested Novice Master, already is a Provincial Councillor, local Superior and likely Bursar. Could he, besides all these charges, become Novice Master? Moreover, even with a socius made available to him, the Salzburg house has only one other priest, an elderly man close to retirement, and if anyone were to be laid up there would be nobody there to replace the Novice Master and his assistant.
- b. Canonical age. The director put forward hasn't the requisite canonical age; he will only be 34 in October, whereas the Constitutions lay down 35, and the same regulations lay down 30 years for the assistant (socius), whereas the one suggested is only 25.
- c. It would appear that one novitiate for the Congregation would foster a common, united, spirit, and in the very best interests of the new Province would provide its subjects with a more serious and uniform formation.

Such are the reasons, Your Grace, which suggest that for the present, for one or more years, the young men from the North should go to the established Chezal-Benoît novitiate.

With our deep respect in C.J., and begging your blessing.

Issoudun, July 31, 1894

Dear Fathers and Confrères,

You will have no doubt gathered by now that at the request of the Archbishop of Bourges the Holy Father has granted Jubilee benefits over the whole month of September to all pilgrims arriving in Issoudun to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart by Pius IX. In order to meet the wishes of our distinguished Archbishop, so keen on drawing upon his huge Bourges diocese those divine blessings which will be in keeping with a new thrust in the Issoudun pilgrimages, I come to ask you, esteemed colleagues, if it would not be possible for you to organize, in association with your neighbouring confrères, one of these pilgrimages during the month of September on a date which would suit you best. There will be, perhaps, in the parish sisters, children of Mary, a youngsters' group, or an association which would become the organizing centre for a pilgrim group.

I shall be indebted to you if without delay you let me know what your intentions and proposals are in this respect so that, as soon as possible, we can arrange in an orderly way the sequence of pilgrimages and get all favourable reductions from the railway companies. We can, therefore, make known in the Religious Weekly, or our Annals, the days allotted for each pilgrimage.

We dare to hope, Father, that in your pastoral zeal for your good parishioners, you will be good enough to promote this demonstration of love towards Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

With renewed assurance of my respectful and devoted good wishes in C.J.

July 31, 1894

Very Reverend Father,

Fr. Dumont informs me that you have given him permission to follow the scholastics' retreat, even though the thought, so he says, would never have occurred to him. Fr. Morisseau and myself would greatly take it amiss in seeing a stranger, even if it were Fr. Dumont, associated with this retreat. More than one would have been shocked if Fr. Chastré were to hear certain conferences in which the preacher dwelt on the life-style of certain religious. Fortunately he had left. Unless you insist otherwise, Fr. Morisseau will take charge of the retreat for Fr. Dumont.

The issue then arises as to the place or area where he will have his meals. Up to now we have abided by the custom not to have outsiders with us. Should we make an exception? This is not Fr. Morisseau's view. All the retreatants, the retreat-giver included, take their meals in the scholastics' refectory. Should Fr. Dumont go there? I do not at all think so.

Your view, Father, on these matters, would clarify things.

With filial regards in C.J.

Chevalier adds:

Dear Friend,

You are right: let Fr. Morisseau give Fr. Dumont his retreat and let him (Dumont) keep the silence and eat apart. It is impossible for me to go back on my instructions; I am too far behind in my correspondence in any event.

I am forwarding some texts to you from the epistle to the Galatians, which have stimulated me. You will recall better than myself what I or other priests said.

It's the Cardinal of Tours who will be presiding (Guillaume René Meignan), and up to the present we are only certain of 4 or 5 bishops attending. Council Meetings, August 3, 10, 1894

All members present.

Request of Brother Lynch to visit his family.

1. He asked to go home during the holidays for reasons which would appear to be serious, but since he is due to be ordained to the priesthood in Advent, and since, otherwise, the request is not absolutely urgent, the decision was taken that he should await his ordination to the priesthood before going home, something to which he will have at that time a right consecrated by custom.

Permission granted to Fr. Crochet to dispose of property.

2. It was decided that Fr. Crochet be authorized to dispose of property in relation to family matters.

Recall of Fr. Hartzler from Glastonbury.

3. Fr. Fernand Hartzler, Superior at Glastonbury, is looking for teachers, but since Bishop Navarre has sent on unbecoming details about his behaviour which give no reason to expect permanent, judicious, administration on his part, the unanimous view was that he could not stay on as Superior. Since he could not be sent to the missions or made use of elsewhere, it was thought best to recall him to Issoudun where he could be of use in writing articles about the missions or giving English lessons.

Compensation of the French Province for a burse benefiting the Tilburg house.

4. As notified by Fr. Maillard, a burse has been set up at the Petite Oeuvre by Mademoiselle Chabert de Beauvois for the past ten years. He himself received its interest and he used it to the advantage of the Tilburg house where he was then bursar. But the intention of the donor would have been primarily in favour of a French house. And since the Tilburg house is no longer associated with France because of its association with the Antwerp Province, it is quite obvious that this burse should return to the French Province. The Council thought so also and asked the bursar to undertake the necessary procedures to bring it about.

Fr. Derichemont appointed Superior at Glastonbury.

A decision taken about Brothers Maher and O'Reilly.

5. It was decided that Fr. Derichemont would replace Fr. Fernand Hartzler at Glastonbury and he would continue to have Fathers Audouy and Callaway on the staff, together with Brother McCabe. Brother Maher is to be recalled to the scholasticate. It was also decided that Brother O'Reilly will be sent to the Antwerp scholasticate, but will only be informed at the end of the holidays.

Card-playing forbidden in the French Province.

6. Several members complained about card-playing at the Sacred Heart and elsewhere, with priests and scholastics giving themselves over to the game with passionate intensity. Given the fact that this game is not in habitual use elsewhere in our countries among worthy and respectable priests, and since one may give a bad example or scandalize laity or ecclesiastics, the Council took the view that it cannot be tolerated any longer in our French Province, and this is a decision which will be brought to public notice.

Request from Fr. Laliaux to join the Northern Province turned down.

7. A letter from Fr. Laliaux was read requesting permission to enter the Northern Province, and this for a number of reasons of which the following are the most pressing: he has been the subject of damaging suspicions because of certain friendships which to him are totally blameless, and his call to Holy Orders was deferred, etc. Certain members commented on his laid-back character and lack of willingness, being of the view that his departure would be no great loss. Nevertheless, given the present circumstances and the impact of such a departure on others, the decision was taken that there was no reason at the present time to meet such a request.

A letter from Father Ilge requesting documents to facilitate his departure from the Congregation.

The outlines of the certificate granted him.

8. Finally a letter was read from Fr. Ilge, following on the interdicts placed upon him in Berlin and Cologne, asserting his innocence and requesting a certificate and dismissorial letters in favour of his entrance to a diocese or a community. To this letter on August 1 a reply was sent on the 6th that a certificate in his favour could not be granted, but at the same time he would be granted the least unfavourable one. It would state that while he lived in the houses of formation, at the Petite Oeuvre, novitiate, scholasticate, there was nothing to be said against him, but following his time in Salzburg several complaints had been made against him, so much so that a year ago the Archbishop placed him under interdict in his diocese and in Berlin, where he continued to exercise ministry, he was once again placed under an interdict, following which the Archbishop of Cologne likewise withdrew his faculties. This earnest priest denies being at fault, but since we cannot carry out an enquiry with regards to the facts and activities with which he is reproached, we are unable for this very reason to bring a verdict either for or against him. In the event, he himself aware that he cannot, after such like charges and suspicions, remain in the Congregation, requests release from his vows, which is granted on condition that he finds a bishop who will accept him. It will become a fait accompli as soon as this last condition is met.

Your Grace,

Fr. Ramot has asked me to go to Antwerp for his installation. If Your Grace could let me have your decision about the novitiate before my departure, I shall be very much obliged to you. I shall make it known to the Northern confrères, and this important issue will be brought to a conclusion.

Please accept my deepest good wishes in C.J.

Your Grace,

Fr. Ramot, impatient by not having had a reply, has written again. I am forwarding his letter to you.

Since you are, Your Grace, following your respected predecessors, the lessee of our Issoudun house, I may forward to Your Grace the prospectus of our school in which you will see for yourself what we are aiming at. During the current school year our Chezal-Benoît college has presented for the baccalaureate in Paris 14 students, 11 of whom have been accepted and several with honourable mention (the English equivalent of honours). It is satisfying success.

Besides the Tours Cardinal, the Bishops of Blois, Chartres, Sées, Verdun, Monaco and Bishop Dufal have agreed to be present for the September 8 feast. Some others have cancelled. The Orleans (railway) company has granted a reduction of 50% for each group of 40 pilgrims, and a special train with the same reduction for 300 people. It is something very much to hope for that Cher and Indre make their pilgrim journey; these concessions last the whole month of September.

Besides the plenary and partial indulgences granted by the Holy Father, His Holiness is granting a Papal blessing for each group arriving in Issoudun during the month of September.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Council Meeting, August 16, 1894

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Lanctin. Vaudon absent.

The Apostolic Visitor holds back from a decision about a novitiate in Salzburg.

1. The Superior General read a reply from the Archbishop to the request made to him about setting up a novitiate in Salzburg. His Grace, conscious that there were serious issues involved either in granting or not granting authorization, thought that he himself could not give a decision and suggested that the issue be deferred to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. This appeal would take a long time and there would not be a decision in time to commence this novitiate project in the autumn. The Council, accordingly, agreed that the project in question could not be feasible for the year 1894-1895.

The transfer of the Petite Oeuvre from Rome to Jesi goes ahead.

2. At the request of Fr. Carrière the decision to transfer the Petite Oeuvre from Rome to Jesi will go ahead if dispensation can be had from the law requiring a graduate in Italian for the opening of a school. If the move becomes possible, Fr. Barral will be in charge and acting Superior at Jesi; Fr. J.B. Perriot will be appointed to Spain.

Examination of accounts for the first six months of 1894, forwarded by the Society's different houses.

The franc this year, 1894, would roughly be the equivalent of 3.30 euros in 2009.

1. The Chezal-Benoît house

The accounts are in order. Intake: 47,972.30 francs; yet to come 4,069, giving a total of 52,041.30 francs. Paid out 46,953.15 francs with an additional 1,991.70 francs; 48,944.85 plus 3,096.45 francs. To hand, 47,978.30 francs – 46,953.15 giving a surplus of 1,019.15 francs. Upkeep of personnel: 168 people: 297.29 every six months; 49.55 each month.

2. The Sacred Heart house.

The accounts are normally well kept. Receipts – 2,464.10 francs; paid out 2,264.10 francs (!). To pay: 103.10 francs; leaving a deficit of this amount. The general upkeep of 52 people would come to 72.33 francs for each one.

3. The Rome house.

The accounts were up to date and in order this time. Receipts: 48,501 francs; outlay 30,751.35 francs. 17,749.80 francs remain in the account. Intake: 48,501.15 francs; yet to come 1,500 making 50,001.15 in all. Debts met: 30,751.35 francs; to be paid; 10,800 francs. 8,449.70 francs remain over and above. Personnel upkeep 41 people; 722 francs over six months; 120 month.

4. Tilburg.

The accounts are properly kept. Intake: 113,703.11 francs; outlay 111,339.45 francs or 2,363.66 francs to hand at the end of six months. The financial situation is not addressed, nothing mentioned about intake or payment. The financial circumstances are narrowly identified with finance in the office.

Observations as regards Tilburg.

A. Rent accruing from capital: 1,995 francs. What is this capital; where is it placed?

B. Borrowings: 28,816 francs. Have these been authorized? When? Upkeep of personnel (83 people): 382 francs for each person over six months; 63 francs a year.

5. Glastonbury.

The accounts indicate a deplorable financial state of affairs. Financial situation: Intake 15,993.20 francs; outlay 15,893.20 francs. Financial situation: Imbalance. Bills to be met: 2,462.35 francs. Debts paid: 15,828.20 francs; to be paid 1,119.95 francs, together with the ongoing debt for purchase and construction; 48,198.15 francs.

There is a deficit of 45,735.80 francs. The current receipts, leaving aside the 3,132 francs made available by the mother house, become reduced to 15,913 francs, minus 3,152 francs, making a total of 12,841 francs. Normal expenses come to 16,948 francs, and within this only 160 francs is identified with paid interest, whereas it comes to 895 francs each year and 447 every six months.

6. The Barcelona house.

The accounts are inadequately kept, but the finances are sound. What is to hand and the overall financial situation are (wrongly) amalgamated since there is neither money being received or debts to be met. Receipts: 56,249.10 francs. Expenses met: 23,795.22 francs. There remain as disposable 32,453.88 francs. Included in the expenses are 7,498.28 francs for Canet, which obviously refers to meeting the Eléonore debt. Personnel upkeep (12 people); 631 francs for each one every six months; 105 a month. The figure is not exact since in other months it was half that again.

7. The Antwerp house.

The accounts leave something to be desired as regards exactness. Moreover, a debt of 203,354.08 francs is identified with the end of 1893 whereas it is now increased to 252,841.51 francs because new debts are added on without any explanation.

Intake: 223,164.80 francs; expenses met 199,518.70 francs, leaving 23,596.10 francs to hand.

Financial situation: Intake: 223,164.80 francs, expenses met 199,568.70 francs, or 23,598.10 francs in the account.

Financial situation: Bills received: 223,164.80 francs. Passive: expenses met: 199,568.70 francs; 23,596.10 francs to hand.

Financial situation. Receipts: 223,164.80 francs; paid out: 199,568.70.

Expenses to be met: 252,841.56 francs.

Outlay: 452,410.26 francs.

Intake: 223,164.80 francs.

The deficit presently is at 229,245.46 francs.

At the end of 1893 for the latter six months it was 237,829.85 francs.

The deficit for the last six months came to 237,829.85 francs, an increase of 8,584.39 francs.

Upkeep of personnel (156 people) in total 61,549 francs; 388 francs for each one over 6 months; monthly 64.65 francs.

8. The Paris house.

Intake 14,874.35 francs

Expenses: 12,515.67; 2,358 francs to hand.

Current financial state: receipts 15,698 francs; paid 12,515; to be paid 1,343 francs, leaving 1,840 francs.

Upkeep of personnel (ten): 9,096.52 francs or 910 francs for each one over 6 months, 151 francs each month.

Issoudun, August 15, 1894

Dear Vicar General,

You kindly took it upon yourself, on my last visit to Bourges on the 7th of the current month, to deliver to His Grace the letters I had for him. Today again I make bold on the part of the Superior (General) to draw upon your kindness in according us the same favour.

Among those letters which you were kind enough to pass on to His Grace was one with a petition to the President of the Republic. His Grace was kind enough to write and say that he would endorse this letter if it included some changes which he indicated to us. The changes have now been made, and we would be pleased if you can ask the Archbishop for his supportive endorsement and forward it in the Archbishop's envelope to the President of the Republic at Pont-sur-Seine marked 'personal'.

We are quietly confident that our request will in these circumstances be favourably met, and it's to you as Vicar General we shall be greatly indebted for this favour. What appreciation shall we not have for this favour which will draw upon yourself Our Lady's protection. Please accept, Vicar General, together with my anticipated gratitude, warm and deep regards in C.J.

On behalf of Fr. General,

Issoudun, August 22, 1894

Your Grace,

I was visiting our Northern house when Your Grace kindly wrote to me returning our petition to the President of the Republic and your warmly supportive signed letter for which I am so grateful. On my return it was in Issoudun. I had hoped, Your Grace, that you might forward it directly to Mr. Casimir Périer in an envelope incorporating Your Grace's seal. For this reason I stopped over in Paris to meet Cardinal Richard who kindly favoured me with a letter in support of an audience with the President. I went along, then, to Pont-sur-Seine. His Excellency, unable to meet me, sent his information officer to me in order to find out what was at issue since he was not aware of what was involved (in my visit). I explained everything to him. The official, a very agreeable and sympathetic man, having consulted with the President, informed me that Mr. Périer wanted us to deal directly with the Minister for Worship, as this issue fell within his competence, but he would approve of whatever he decided. The official himself added: "In the interests of your case, I would advise you to ask that pilgrims be permitted to enter your basilica during the whole of September to gain the indulgences granted by Leo XIII and thereafter one will close one's eyes." To which I made reply: "But if there is no reply, I shall interpret the silence as tacit approval." He did no more than laugh as he remarked: "That's the best thing to do." I do believe that in saying this he was echoing the feelings of the President. We left on very good terms. Before I left I gave some pictures of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, like that enclosed, for him to pass on to Madame Périer, her young daughter and the ladies of the court, and he promised to do so.

This afternoon I forwarded to the President of the Republic the petition which Your Grace so kindly addressed to him. I do believe that my visit to Pont-sur-Seine will not have been pointless.

I went to Tilburg for the installation of the new Provincial, as he had asked me to do, and I proceeded from there to Tilburg. There I found the confrères very well disposed, quite aware like myself that it was now too late to have recourse to Rome for the novitiate, and it would, accordingly, be best to remain at Chezal-Benoît for this year as they would have had to begin otherwise at the end of this month; and what would have become of them while waiting for the Congregation's reply?

With regard to all issues affecting our Society, I have always dealt directly with Your Grace since I know and appreciate too well the wisdom of your advice. The new Assistant, Your Grace, will live at Chezal-Benoît where he is in charge of our Petite Oeuvre! He and Fr. Piperon, the Novice Master, come frequently to Issoudun for Council meetings each week and more frequently if it's necessary; the distance is quite near, covered easily in one hour.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Your Grace,

In keeping with the wishes of the President of the Republic, I forwarded a fresh request to the Minister of the Interior and Cults. If I am not making excessive demands on your kindness, Your Grace, I dare to ask Your Grace to support this request once again with your seal of approval. I hope we can have success through the support of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Would you advise me, Your Grace, to go and see the Prefect of the Indre to bring him up to date with our plans? I am aware of his good will, seeing that in him we have a supporter rather than an opponent.

We are actively engaged preparing for our feast. A large number of pilgrims are preparing to come from all over. We greatly hope that nothing will prevent Your Grace from being present and also Bishop Bardel; without you it cannot be a celebration.

I have the honour to be, respectfully, Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Your Grace, let me have as soon as possible your seal of approval.

Issoudun, August 27, 1894

Your Grace,

As I wrote to Your Grace I forwarded to the President of the Republic the appeal which you were kind enough to seal with your approval.

Today I have had a reply stating that my "request was forwarded to the President of the Council, the Minister of the Interior and Cults, who is alone in a position to consider the issues".

On Saturday morning I went and saw the Prefect of the Indre to let him know about the approaches we had made to government with regard to the opening of our basilica during the Jubilee month. He was very sympathetic and quite willing to favour us. Fiat! He spoke to me in the most glowing terms about Your Grace and Bishop Bardel.

The Cardinal of Tours and the bishops who accepted the invitation will very likely arrive in Issoudun on the 7th, the eve of the feast. Your Grace will kindly let me know when he will be with us, together with his good and devoted coadjutor. Our pilgrims will be delighted to hear your apostolic words and those of Bishop Bardel who charmed the faithful at Châteauneuf.

Requesting your blessing, with deepest respect in C.J.

Council Meetings,
August 28, September 3, 1894

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Vaudon, Lanctin.

Jules Vandel re-admitted.

1. A debate took place about the re-admission of Jules Vandel to the Society. He has, in effect, been asked by his confrères and members of his family, as well as indicating this himself in letters to certain people, about the likelihood of a return to the Society. Eventually Fr. Lanctin, on going to see him, brought away a letter in which he informed the Superior General that he believed he perceived God's will for him in the advice being given to him about returning to the Congregation, and that he sincerely regretted taking off and the harm he had done. He was now seeking re-admission and wholly disposed to go wherever he would be sent. Some members expressed concern that this initiative did not come entirely or spontaneously from Fr. Vandel himself (motu proprio), being due to the influence of certain intermediaries who influenced him, which seems all the more likely when, very recently, one could read letters by him which demonstrate that he was still well distanced from the necessary disposition conducive to re-admission. Nevertheless, the Council was of the view that he was sincere in his regret about his past behaviour and all the problems created. In expressing the wish to return there was reason to believe that he was sincere, since he was prepared to go wherever he would be appointed. In consideration also of the fact that his return will stabilize in their vocations those who had been shaken by his departure, it was decided that his request should be met under the following conditions:

1. that he send a retraction for his misdemeanours to Fr. General and all the confrères whom he scandalized, and make clear henceforth his intention to obey in every respect the Superior of the Congregation;
2. that he should not be given an appointment in the Northern Province, but instead in a house outside Europe, in Sydney for example.

A copy of this decision was presented to the Apostolic Visitor who approved of it. Accordingly, Fr. Jules Vandel is definitively re-admitted under the conditions laid down immediately above.

A request from Brother Alain de Boismenu.

2. Brother Alain de Boismenu has put a written request to the Superior for entry to the Northern Province. The definitive reply is postponed, but the view was taken that there was no reason to accede to this request at the present time because of our lack of able members.

A request to have the right to celebrate the votive mass of the Sacred Heart.

3. The Secretary put forward a petition requesting the Holy See to favour those priests who come on pilgrimage with the faculty of celebrating the De Beata votive mass, or that of Our Lady of Graces, in the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Basilica. The decision was taken to go ahead with this request.

Decision about second year German students.

4. The Northern Province's authorities hope to begin their novitiate next year, and request that the German students of the second year (so called) be accepted in the Chezal-Benoît novitiate. The view was taken that these students should be sent there if a rhetoric teacher can be found, and this does not have a bearing on holding on to the rhetoric teacher for whatever number of French are there in order to prepare them for the baccalaureate.

The decision maintained to recall Fr. Hartzer.

5. The recall of Fr. Fernand Hartzer as Glastonbury Superior is confirmed as well as the appointment in his place of Fr. Derichemont. In order to preserve the morale of the recalled Hartzer, he is asked to request himself that he be changed.

The Council refuses to have any responsibility for the Bulletin publication.

6. The Council, giving permission to merge the Sacred Heart Review with the Preacher's Bulletin, had not understood that this latter publication would be under the direction of the Congregation and, accordingly, it was with some surprise that it was presented as appearing under the direction of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. The view was taken that an objection should be made against this proposal, leaving the said publication in the hands of Fr. Deidier, if he wants to take on responsibility for it.

Scholasticate personnel, Petite Oeuvre, and the Issoudun school.

7. In conclusion the personnel for the scholasticate and the Petite Oeuvre were chosen, also the Issoudun school.

Scholasticate: Fr. Matthieu moral theology; Fr. Bernard dogmatic theology; Fr. Compte sciences; Father Laurentin and Brother Lynch sacred scripture and philosophy.

Petite Oeuvre personnel: Pourquoi rhetoric; Suchet second year; Alain de Boismenu third year; the younger Mr. Bertin fourth year; Mr. Huchard fifth year; Fr. Guillaume sixth year; Gotteland seventh year; Fr. Cochet history; Fr. Bertin sciences; Fr. Meynier supervision; Brother Laumen supervision and German; McCabe English; Fr. Blanchet art; Fr. Laliaux the choir. These appointments are subject to the approval of His Grace the Apostolic Visitor, who has made it known that he was not in favour of appointing teachers at the Petite Oeuvre from outside the Society, and if this continues recourse must be had to other arrangements.

Personnel in the (Issoudun) school. Fr. Lavialle in charge; his assistant and Latin teacher Fr. Mégret. The outsider Mr. Vinette will teach French while at the same time he will study Latin under the supervision of Fr. Blanchet in order to prepare himself for the novitiate for which he is a candidate.

Your Grace,

I hasten to bring good news to Your Grace. The following is the telegram which I have just now received: "PERMISSION GRANTED TO OPEN THE BASILICA; INFORM ON THIS." Signed Carnier. You are aware, Your Grace, that on the advice given to me at Pont-sur-Seine I made a fresh request to Mr. Dupuy which Your Grace kindly supported. It was through Fr. Garnier, editor of 'Peuple Français', who knows him personally, that I made an approach, asking him (Garnier) to support the request wholeheartedly. The President of the Republic wrote to me a few days ago to say that he was forwarding our request to the Minister of the Interior and Cults. Finally we had our request granted; the Lord be praised. And let Your Grace also receive our grateful acknowledgement! Our Lady of the Sacred Heart owes Your Grace a complete cure. You will obtain it. Come to Issoudun on Saturday to intone the Te Deum with us. Your presence is indispensable; without you the feast is not complete. We are all hoping and praying that you can make the journey.

Please accept my deepest regards in C.J.

I am informing the Prefect about this development.

I do not wish to delay in replying and expressing to you my heartfelt thanks. Your presence at the feast greatly pleased not only your missionaries, but all your priests and the numerous pilgrims who were to happy to have you in their midst. The weather made it possible for us to have the torchlight procession in the Sacred Heart park. The scene was wonderful to behold; Issoudun never had its like. Everything took place in the most orderly manner and the most edifying manifestation of piety.

Please accept Your Grace our gratitude and deep respect. I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Council Meetings, September 10, 13, 1894

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Vaudon, Lanctin.

Re-admission of Fr. Vandel.

1. A letter was read in which Fr. Vandel made honourable amends for his departure from the Society and professed to be ready to go wherever he is assigned. His attitude and his regret were considered acceptably honourable and his re-admission was ratified.

Alain de Boismenu stays in his Province.

2. Brother Alain de Boismenu, having requested permission to join the Northern Province, it was decided that for the reason given above (at the last Council meeting) it was not possible at present to grant his request.

A memorandum from Fr. Fernand Hartzler justifying himself.

3. A self-justifying memorandum by Fr. Fernand Hartzler defends himself before the facts and activities of which he is accused by Bishop Navarre. The Council having heard what Hartzler had to say, thought that the Bishop, influenced by his medical condition and unhappiness, had imagined the defects of Fr. Hartzler. Nevertheless, it remains difficult to believe that Fr. Hartzler is completely innocent. In any event it is certainly obvious that he is not a bursar and could not prudently oversee the financial arrangements at Glastonbury. Accordingly, the earlier decision is confirmed, but he will be given a reasonable amount of time to prepare for his departure, so that it will be seen as a spontaneous decision on his part.

4. The shared retreat for the Sacred Heart houses, the parish and Chezal-Benoît will begin on the 16th of this month and be followed by the scholastics' retreat.

Fr. Batard appointed Bursar at the Sacred Heart and Fr. Godinoux at Chezal.

5. Fr. Batard will be bursar at the Sacred Heart and the Petite Oeuvre; Fr. Godinoux replacing him at Chezal-Benoît.

All teachers at the Petite Oeuvre will be in the charge of Fr. Lanctin; all others under Fr. Morisseau.

6. All teachers at the Petite Oeuvre and the other school in Issoudun (the external lay school) will be overseen by Fr. Lanctin, with the rights of a local Superior. Those priests and brothers who are not involved in either of these two institutions will be under the immediate jurisdiction of Fr. General, who in his absence will be replaced by Fr. Morisseau.

Brother Samuel Vogl of the Chezal-Benoît Petite Oeuvre, born September 28, 1874, was held over.

Fr. Ramot given permission to accept day brothers for temporary (three-yearly) vows.

8. At the request of Fr. Ramot he is granted permission as Provincial to accept lay brothers for temporary vows on condition that:

1. he will not accept them without the supporting decision of his councillors in keeping with number 86 of the Constitutions;
2. that he be prompt in providing the six-monthly account called for by number 28 of the Provincial special directory.

Reply to Fr. Ramot's query about the desire of three brothers, who had left the Congregation, to return.

9. He wanted to know if he could accept them. The reply was that these young brothers must follow the procedures of Fr. Vandel, that is to say they must write a letter in which they will honourably excuse their behaviour in the past, indicate that they are disposed to obey the Superior of the Congregation in every respect, and go wherever they will be sent. Their letter will be forwarded to the Apostolic Visitor who will decide if they can be readmitted.

Father Bernard is appointed professor for the second year and Father Laurenti professor of dogma.

10. Fr. Bernard, earlier appointed professor of dogma, will now look after the second year, with Fr. Laurenti appointed to take charge of dogma in his place.

Issoudun, September 15, 1894

My dear little Thérèse,

Your letter calls for jubilation; I am so pleased for you. Six months' waiting is quite a long time, don't you think? And now what do you want to do? Are you going to convert yourself and become serious during this time? You missed out on a great deal by not being present on the feast of the Sacred Heart; it was a wonderful occasion. Your cousin, in any case, will describe it to you. You do well to get in touch with me from time to time and pray for me, something which I greatly need. For my part I do not forget you since you know well how affectionately I regard you. You do not tell me anything about my little Charlotte (Thérèse's younger sister); is it that she has perhaps died, or that she no longer gives any thought to her Issoudun Father? Convey to her, in any event, all my good wishes.

Cheerio, dear Thérèse.

I bless you in C.J.

Dear Fr. Vandel,

Aware of your good will, zeal, piety, devotedness, the Council has decided that you should go to Sydney at least for the time being. Fr. Tréand, who would very much like to have you there, will receive you with open arms. You will leave from Marseilles on the 3rd of October next. We shall book a place for you. You can go directly to Marseilles, towards the 1st of October, where you will find Fr. Jouët waiting for you and go with him to dear Fr. Caseneuve, 18 Thiers Street, who will look after your embarkation and provide the necessary money for your journey.

Fr. Tréand has been told in advance; he will be eagerly awaiting your arrival, appointing you to the work which will engage you. You will often give me news about your work. Cheerio, Father. My regards to your worthy and pious family.

Wholly yours in C.J.

A lay brother from Paris and several Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Sisters will be travelling with you.

To Father Célestin Ramot, MSC, Northern Province Provincial.

Issoudun, September 23, 1894

Dear Fr. Ramot,

Fr. Morisseau incorrectly wrote his report, not reflecting the Council's thinking. As you are aware he is distracted and forgetful.

I am replying to your questions; the following is what has been decided.

1. Affirmatively, you have authority to accept for the novitiate lay brother candidates, and send them away if you are not satisfied with them either during the novitiate or while in temporary vows, but you will do so only with the approval of the Provincial Council.
2. All members from Belgium, Holland, Germany belong as of right to the Northern Province, and must stay within it unless the General Council thinks it appropriate to create an exception for some either in the general interest or that of the individual himself, the issue having been discussed with the Provincial.
3. The General Council has decided that those from Alsace and Lorraine belong to the French Province, such wise that those you have left with you are, strictly speaking, French, and make their profession with you.
4. Yes, Father, those who are doing their rhetoric year at present from your Province remain yours and will go back to you. Those in the future will make their studies in your Province as soon as you have the house set up, and it is my wish that it will be next year. Meanwhile, one must have in mind, Father, the overall well-being of the Society. You are aware that quality of religious life depends on the training given during the novitiate. If it becomes impossible for you to set up properly your novitiate next year, what great calamity would there be in having the novitiate for a few more years in Chezal-Benoît, focusing solely on providing you with subjects well formed in the religious life and who would be a potent force in your Province? Again, I repeat, we do not have any intention of holding on to them. It is no more or less than to provide a service for you in your own best interests. When we are at that stage, you will give serious consideration to the issue and submit it to the Apostolic Visitor, who no more than ourselves will create problems about what has to be done.

5. As regards the arrangement and disposal of assets, one is to be guided by article 43 of our Constitutions which deals with this issue. We shall give it some consideration at our forthcoming General Chapter and if there is a need to change we shall do so, giving the Provincial more extensive powers.

6. You mentioned Fr. Offermans' brother as a likely lecturer in the scholasticate; have you now given over this possibility? Get in touch with Fr. Carrière to find out if he can let you have Fr. Ceresi; I am very agreeable to this if he can.

7. It goes without saying it is your Province which from now will provide personnel for Bishop Couppé since Berlin only wants German-born subjects.

8. Kindly let us have some lay brothers since we badly need them. The brother door-keeper at the Paris house, whose father has decided to be French, is being recalled by the government and, to avoid being called up for military service, he is leaving (for Australia) with Fr. Vandel on the 3rd of October from Marseilles. In Paris they now have only one brother, the cook. Two brothers are needed for the Paris house straightaway. And two are also needed at Issoudun where the Petite Oeuvre is due to be set up. I would ask you then to be prompt in meeting our requests.

9. Yes, it is necessary for your Province to have some worthy members in Rome; make a choice and try to send at least six to Father Carrière. The Cardinal Vicar wants our Congregation to be well represented (in Rome). We have only one or two French going to Rome this year as the rest would be unable to follow the courses successfully.

Please accept, Fr. Ramot, my best wishes.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I wish to thank you for writing and letting me know your concerns; if you have any further issues to be clarified, do so in complete candour since we are on both sides prompted by the best intentions. Fr. Delaporte is giving us a good retreat; on Tuesday he gives one to the scholastics.

Brother O'Reilly, an Irishman, wants to join your Province to continue his scholastic studies and remain with you. We shall send him to you after the retreat if you would like to have him. See Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, for O'Reilly, passim.

Fr. Reynaud accepted for perpetual vows.

1. Socius in the novitiate, he has requested that he make perpetual vows when, shortly, his temporary vows expire. His request is granted.

2. Brother Legardeur, having requested that he be accepted for temporary vows, the Council was at first divided about him due to concern being expressed about his health. Eventually the majority favoured acceptance.

Brother O'Reilly given to the Northern Province.

3. The scholastic O'Reilly, who for certain reasons doesn't wish to remain in the French scholasticate, is given permission to join the scholasticate of the Northern Province.

The appointment and roles of Fr. J.B. Perriot in Spain.

4. Fr. Jean B. Perriot, being definitively appointed to Spain, at his request his responsibilities in the house were given consideration. He will take charge of the Petite Oeuvre while remaining under the authority of Fr. Casas, the Superior. Admissions must be dealt with in Council, in keeping with the regulations, and every effort will be made to make the right choices. Moreover, Fr. Perriot will be bursar in dependence on the local Superior and give himself to pastoral ministry insofar as this is possible due to the other demands on him. Together with Fr. Delmas he will be assistant to the Superior. Given the lack of sufficient (teaching) personnel, the youngsters will continue to attend classes in the minor seminary.

Fr. Suchet appointed to lecture in philosophy at the scholasticate.

5. Appointed to teach second year at the Petite Oeuvre, but replaced by Fr. Bernard, Suchet is being made available to the scholasticate to offer a philosophy course which prepares for the baccalaureate. This decision is maintained despite his protestations.

Fr. Mégret appointed director of the school in Issoudun; Fr. Gotteland, his deputy.

6. Fr. Mégret is definitively appointed in charge. Besides Fr. Gotteland on the teaching staff, there will be Mr. Feuillet, who has a diploma in teaching and wants a post in Issoudun. He will be given a salary of 800 francs. Mr. Huchard, another member of the staff, will be given a salary of 1,000 francs unless he wants to have 1,200 francs by giving up his mathematical proceeds.

7. Brother Jean J.J. Philippe in Watertown is accepted for temporary vows, on condition that his acceptance becomes approved of by his local Superior who has not given his own verdict on him.

NB: This verdict has since arrived and is favourable.

I am sorry that I cannot go to Marseilles to see you off myself and embrace you ex intimo corde. Dear Fr. Jouët and the very respected Fr. Caseneuve will be on hand to replace me. I wish you, then, a good journey; let me have your views as soon as you arrive. I shall give the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Sisters the objects you want to take with you. As for our dear Liège scholastics, I have had no letter from them, no news at all. I know nothing about their regret, or their wish to return to us, or of following you to Sydney. I am sorry about this neglect on their part. If they wanted to go with you I would not be opposed, but who would meet the costs of the journey? I cannot myself meet those expenses given the circumstances in which they find themselves in relation to the Society.

It is possible that Fr. Tréand, were he adverted to the situation, would meet the expenses involved. If they cannot leave with you, you might, perhaps, arrange for them to come later after discussing matters with Fr. Tréand, and then their situation could be regularized.

I wrote to Mademoiselle Rorton (or Rostou) that her young son could accompany you at his own risk. I do well believe that you will take him with you.

Brothers Petrus and Calixtus accepted for final vows.

1. With the favourable commendation of Fr. Ramot the following lay brothers were admitted to perpetual vows. Petrus and Calixtus who are over thirty years of age and have met the probation requirements laid down in the Constitutions.

The scholastic novice Jean Philippe and the postulant Robinson also accepted.

2. Given the favourable recommendation of the Watertown Superior, Fr. O'Mahony, the brother scholastic Jean Philippe was given permission to make his profession, and Richard Thomas Robinson was accepted as a lay brother novice.

3. At his request Brother McCabe was accepted for final profession, his three-year vows having expired last year.

Brother Neyroud to supervise at the Petite Oeuvre.

4. He is appointed as supervisor of the senior pupils at the Petite Oeuvre, a post which will not occupy him completely and allow him to work towards his licentiate. Brother Sergent is made available to the Externat school (in Issoudun). He will also help Fr. Mégret, do some work at the Petite Oeuvre and study theology.

Alsace remains part of the French Province.

5. Fr. Ramot calls for the wishes of the three Alsace students to be met by having them incorporated in the Northern Province. Because of the impact such a concession might have on other Alsatians, who would be drawn to make the same request, and also to safeguard the principle accepted from the beginning that Alsace was part of the French Province, the view was taken that this request could not be met. Nevertheless, since they are needed by the Province at this time, they are made available without prejudice and will only be recalled in case of urgent necessity.

An exception made in favour of the sons of employees who work under the German administration.

Fr. Meyer, having pointed out that employees of the German administration cannot make available their children to go to France, it was decided that youngsters could go to the Northern Province and belong to it, but if they enter the Northern Province, after being associated with France, the Northern Province will compensate France for the expenses involved in their education.

6. The decision was taken that a burse of 13,000 francs, from which first Tilburg and then Antwerp have benefited, and made by Mademoiselle Chabert de Beavois in the first instance to favour a French undertaking, should, on the grounds of equity, return to France; consequently, Fr. Ramot will be asked to hand it back.

Issoudun, October 2, 1894

My Dear Child,

The Archbishop of Bourges has passed on to me your letter of September 18. It explains the less than respectful quality of the letter you recently wrote to me when I asked you to return without delay, following holidays you prolonged without my authorization and despite your vow of obedience, which must always hold.

You state in the letter to the Archbishop that you had asked His Grace last April for release from your vows because a new experience, you proceed to say, has made clear to you that peace and unity has not returned to us. This is a gratuitous assertion before which I take exception, since all the confrères have remained loyal, and against which, as well, Fr. Vandel would protest, since he has returned to the Society while expressing sorrowful regret for taking himself off. The reason you offer is no more than a pretext to justify your conduct and insubordination and, let it be said, rather, that you are lacking in virtue, that religious life weighs on you, that discipline is irksome to you and that you are motivated by the wish to be independent. You want to live after your own fashion and in outright freedom; so be it! You will find out in the future how costly this is going to be for you. You assuredly will regret it.

Reflect well on all this. But, my son, in order to be released from perpetual vows, canonical approval sanctioned by the Archbishop as Apostolic Visitor is an absolute requirement. I can only see one reason: the need to help your family if it really needs you. Consider before the Lord what it is. If the reason holds and you remain adamant in your proposal, make an appeal to the Holy Father and I shall sign it; the Archbishop of Bourges will forward it to Rome. It will be necessary to have it accompanied with a Bishop's letter stating that he is prepared to accept you; without this you will remain under interdict by the very nature of things. You will see for yourself then that the issue is serious. I do hope, Father, that in attempting to justify your departure you will not proceed to denigrate your Congregation before priests and bishops. Sadly, I fear you have already done so. This would be downright ingratitude, an unbelievable lack of good will and acknowledgement since you virtually leave out of consideration what the Society so maternally did for you, having taken you in at a very young age, and it's due to her that you went on to the priesthood despite what little you offered in the way of guarantee. Now that you are a priest and could, should, make a return for all the sacrifices she made on your behalf, you instead want to leave her. You are free to do so, but remember that in relation to her you have a duty in justice to meet, that is to say compensation for the vast amount of money spent educating you. Nobody, nothing, can disengage your conscience in this respect; it is a serious indebtedness which you have contracted and which you yourself are obliged to meet.

Please, Father Meynier, accept my best wishes in C.J.

Brother O'Reilly returns to the French Province.

1. Since Fr. Ramot would not accept Brother O'Reilly in his Province, he will return to the French Province following his studies at the Antwerp scholasticate, and with the expenses of the Northern Province to be met.

The need to lease a house in Vichy.

2. Mr. Ravau wishing to withhold his lease of Villa des Lilas, Vichy, another lessee is to be sought for a property needed for the projected foundation or, otherwise, arrangements should be made with someone prepared to rent unoccupied rooms to priests during the thermal season.

Georges Bögershausen accepted for minor orders.

3. The Salzburg native is accepted for minor orders if he has completed the necessary studies.

The lay brother Jean B. Weber in New Britain accepted for renewal of vows.

4. At his own request, and on the warm approval of Bishop Couppé, he is accepted for renewal of vows.

Brother Orlandi's perpetual vows postponed.

5. Brother Orlandi in Rome has asked to take perpetual vows, but Fr. Carrière did not give a favourable report, observing that he could be called upon to support his family. The view was taken that his request should be held over.

6. The following were accepted for perpetual profession with Fr. Ramot's support:

Adrien van Dinther; Paul Guitmann; Guillaume Baeten; Antoine de Jong; Henri Nollen; Jacques Schmitz; Louis Vuisters; Joseph Reichert; Godefroy von Hasselt; Henri van Riel; Ferdinand Dormann.

Brother Jean Clement Hellmann accepted for renewal of vows.

This lay brother in Antwerp is admitted to renewal of his three-yearly vows. It is not accepted that he make annual vows before reaching thirty years of age, and then make his perpetual profession. The Constitutions do not acknowledge vows of this nature.

Brother Bertin, a novice, accepted for vows.

1. He is accepted given his good reports.
2. Young Ducloux, a former pupil at the Petite Oeuvre, is accepted as a lay brother postulant, being unable to continue studies because of his health.

Request from Fr. Meynier to leave.

3. Having requested release from his vows, the decision was reached that he should apply to the Holy See.

Views expressed about Brother Henry.

4. Brother Charles Henry in Rome has requested that he make perpetual profession, but with reservations because of family commitments he foresees, and the view was consequently taken that it needed to be considered whether or not these family matters (issues) were as great and forthcoming as he states, and might not be shared by his De La Salle brother and by his sister, a Visitation nun.

5. A discussion ensued about the way the area in Vichy, which would be the site of the projected residence, could be made private, and also the staircase, with this in mind, as requested by Fr. Guyot; no positive conclusion was reached.

Letters from Fr. Ramot; the Council's reply.

6. Three letters from Fr. Ramot were read in which he raised issues and made complaints about his legitimate rights to deal as of himself with his German subjects, rights which the Superior General and his Council had infringed, expressing these complaints and claims in a quite unacceptable manner. Fr. General suggested that the reply should be both firm and well-wishing and as such presented to the Council.

7. Different views already aired were again expressed about the proximity of the Petite Oeuvre and the Externat (school), also the Sacred Heart house. Fr. Lanctin will be in charge as local Superior over the teachers and pupils; Fr. Morisseau, acting on behalf of the Superior General, will be in charge of the priests and the personnel of the Externat as regards the common spiritual exercises and observance of the religious life.

Council Meeting, October 29, 1894

All members in attendance:

Further complaints from Fr. Ramot and a fresh reply.

1. There has been a reply from Fr. Ramot to the Council's response. He again vindicated his supposed rights to Alsace and exaggerates the thrust of the Council's decision. He once more challenges the legitimacy of the procedures which vindicate the validity of the burse set up by Mademoiselle Chabert, basing his argument on an erroneous interpretation by Fr. Piperon regarding the use of the money granted for this foundation. The Council decided that a fresh reply would be made ready in which it would be categorically stated that it was the Council's right to intervene in the new Province and regulate its financial affairs. Meanwhile, as regards the Chabert foundation, pro bono pacis (to preserve the peace) matters will be left as they are in the present status quo until the issue becomes definitively clarified in Chapter. Meanwhile, it will be pointed out to the Provincial (Ramot) that he exaggerates the consequences of the Council's decision which, understood in the manner explained, does not prevent them (in the Northern Province) from sending their Annals to Alsace, or taking in students or contributions, so long as this is discreetly done, and doesn't directly create obstacles in the way of French undertakings.

Fr. Godinoux accepted for perpetual profession.

2. At his request and given a good report, Fr. Godinoux was accepted for perpetual profession at the end of his three years. As he had made known to different Council members that support for his family had been promised when he entered the Society, it was decided that for this purpose an annual sum of 400 francs should be made available to his parents. Besides, having engaged himself to accept the obligation of 30 masses for specific intentions, he is allowed 40 masses free for other intentions, inclusive of the 12 which are commonly at the pre disposal of each priest in the Society.

Brothers Cros, O'Mahony, Schall, admitted to final profession.

3. On the supportive recommendation of the scholasticate Director and their written requests, Louis Cros and Denis O'Mahony from Chezal-Benoît, as well as Aloysius Maria Schall from Antwerp, are admitted to final profession.

Brother Henry admitted to final profession.

4. The information sought about the precarious financial state of Brother Henry's family has arrived. His 64-year-old rather infirm father and his laid-up mother are really without financial resources and cannot hold out very long in this situation. Neither his De La Salle brother or Visitation sister can do anything for them. It is a financial burden which can be as much as 600 francs for the year and besides which a family benefactor, Fr. Krügel, parish priest of Gumbrechts, near Reichshofen (Alsace), has promised 160 francs and, if necessary, 200 francs. The Council is of the view that the individual has a certain intellectual quality, that the drawbacks referred to by Fr. Carrière do not seem too serious and, since he is shortly to be put forward for the priesthood, he could make available his mass offerings in support of his parents. The Council, then, agrees that care of his family should be undertaken and meanwhile he can be accepted for final profession.

Fr. G. Walpot, Postulant.

5. Fr. Ramot puts forward as postulant a Dutch priest who for some time is associated with the Tilburg house, G. Walpot (Chateau de Neuburg, Galoppe). He himself, and the priests of the Northern Province, wants to make his novitiate in Tilburg. The Council, aware that this novitiate was set up exclusively for the lay brothers, feels that it cannot meet this request; moreover it queries what kind of novitiate it would be for this postulant surrounded by lay brothers given to employment and activities not fitting for him in the circumstances. However, in order to meet the wishes of the confrères, it may be suggested that they send a petition to the General Administration which will be passed on to the Apostolic Visitor in the hope of obtaining the sought-for authorization.

A request from the scholastic Velasco.

6. Brother Velasco, newly professed, makes it known that he had done little or no classical studies in Spain and was unable in any way to follow the scholasticate courses. Consequently, he asks to be sent to Barcelona where, he believes, he could compensate for his earlier lack of studies and make it possible for him to study philosophy and theology later. It was decided that Fr. Casas should be consulted about the matter before meeting his (Velasco's) request.

Proposed reply to Fr. Ramot.

1. A discussion took place about the manner in which a reply could be formulated in response to Fr. Ramot's last letter. Since agreement on this was not reached by all, the Secretary was asked to reply in his own personal name in order to draw some explanations from him (Fr. Ramot) which could provide the basis for a firm and measured response to which everybody could subscribe.

A request from Fr. Ramot for a priest who would like to do his novitiate in Tilburg.

2. He would like to have a priest undertaking his novitiate in Tilburg. This request will be endorsed and sent to the Archbishop with appropriate observations.

There should be no acceptance for orders or profession other than through favourable reports.

3. Fr. Ramot provided a list of scholastics whom he wishes to put forward for orders and one scholastic's name who wishes to be finally professed, but no report whatsoever is provided about any of them. The Council was in agreement that some information should be provided about each of them so that they can be accepted with the requisite knowledge.

Brother Pouvreau's request.

7. On his return from military service Brother Pouvreau asked to take perpetual vows, but it is uncertain if he can do so before one year has passed in the light of the 4 and 27 November decrees, 1892. Enquiries will be made to Rome and it will be asked if, when being unable to take perpetual vows, he may, or should, take temporary vows.

8. Two postulants, one from the Laval diocese the other from Luçon diocese, were not accepted because they were not meeting the requisite requirements.

Brother Régis appointed to the office.

9. Brother Régis Rasele was appointed to the archconfraternity office.

Brother Orlandi accepted for perpetual profession.

10. As a result of the latest reports, Brother Orlandi is definitively accepted for perpetual vows.

Your Grace,

The Council gives its approval to the enclosed appeal with a certain amount of concern because it is to be feared that the priest postulant will not be adequately trained for the religious life in the midst of lay brothers. How can he make a serious novitiate when he is absorbed by all the manual work it is proposed to give him in Tilburg? Your Grace in his wisdom will decide.

Please accept Your Grace my deepest good wishes in C.J.

Your Grace,

We are pleased to forward you a copy of our Council's deliberations arising from Fr. Ramot's request.

October 29 meeting.

Fr. Ramot presents for the postulancy a Dutch priest, Georges Walpot, known to the Tilburg house and anxious to make his novitiate. For their part the confrères of this house would be pleased to have him as a novice because of the service he has provided for them. The Council, having in mind that the Tilburg novitiate comprises lay brothers only, is of the view that the aforementioned postulant cannot be accepted unless it has the approval of the Apostolic Visitor. Fr. Ramot was sent a reply in this sense.

November 8 Meeting.

Fr. Ramot's request was read in which he asked the Apostolic Visitor (the Archbishop) that the priest postulant Walpot be given permission to make his novitiate in Tilburg. The Council decided that it would put such a request to the Archbishop, while expressing its concern to him that the said postulant would be likely to make very much a second-rate novitiate in these circumstances.

The foregoing, Your Grace, is the thrust of our discussions about the individual in question. The Council remains convinced that, given the circumstances, it is difficult to refuse the confrères, and the appellant himself, the favour requested. The appeal is purely and simply identified with Fr. Ramot, despite the drawbacks brought to Your Grace's attention.

With deep respect we have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servants in S. Corde Jesu.

Your Grace,

Bishop Bardel wrote last week to me to say that he was prevented from coming on December 8 to preside at Issoudun over the 40th Anniversary celebrations marking the foundation of our little Society. I hasten to make known to you how much we all regret this. I take occasion also to ask you to let me know briefly if Your Grace would be available on Thursday morning at 9.30 because I want to ask him if he could ordain, or arrange to be ordained, several of our young men around Christmas time. Not having had a reply I do not want to go to Bourges tomorrow. I picked on Thursday because it is the only day that I am not catechizing the youngsters.

I beg to present Your Grace with this list of those to be ordained in the event that Your Grace will be good enough to meet this request favourably. He might like to let me know the time these examinations would take place. Fr. Vaudon, who is in charge of the scholasticate, writes to me: "You can assure before the Lord His Grace the Archbishop that I am very satisfied with the good spirit of our young men".

I have the honour to be with deepest respect Your Grace's very humble and obedient son in C.J.

To Father Albert Delaporte, MSC, Paris.

Issoudun, December 8, 1894

Dear Fr. Delaporte,

Let the great feast of the Immaculate Conception be acclaimed! Our dear basilica has not experienced such-like solemnities for a long time! Why weren't you there? It was wonderful! Fr. Suchet played on the great organ like an accomplished artist and Fr. Pourquier preached like a Bourdaloue (the famous Bourges-born preacher, 1632-1704). The torch-light procession and the lit candles were enchantingly spectacular. What a wonderful day! Between the divine office in Notre Dame we blessed the new Sacred Heart house.

Yes, your book deserves to be published; it has appeared at the right time. I admire your initiative and prolific qualities. You are right in saying that our finances are rock bottom through a continuation of unfortunate circumstances. I forwarded to the Carthusian printing press the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which has gone out of circulation. The new edition will include the Latin text and a supplement, making for a large book of 8 or 900 pages, but of which there will only be 1,500 copies. Yours will mean an outlay of 4,000 francs or so (about 13,420 euros). I asked them to be kind enough to wait sometime for payment. I am thinking of some advantage to be gained from your work. If the society comprising the publishing houses of Christian education were to accept it for promotion, there would be an assured intake. We shall put this proposal to them and await the reply.

If you were to meet Fr. Madon, the instigator of this alliance, you might make him consider and favour this proposal.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Council Meeting, December 11, 1894

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Morisseau, Vaudon, Lanctin, Assistants.

Fr. Ramot, Superior of the Northern Province, and Fr. Linckens, Superior of the Antwerp Petite Oeuvre, were present in order to discuss a proposal about a foundation in Germany which seemed to them quite important in regard to the New Britain missions, as well as the other islands which were the Society's responsibility and under Germany's protectorate, and having in mind also a future for the Petite Oeuvre in Germany. At the invitation of Fr. General, Fr. Linckens put forward what follows.

1. Canon Hespers of Cologne and a member of the German council for colonies, with which he has had a number of discussions about the above-mentioned missions, has agreed to speak on behalf of these missions before the Council dealing with the empire's colonies, as indeed he has done in the past, but only in accordance with the following conditions: a, that a priest of German nationality or naturalized will be appointed to engage with him about our missions in the German colonies, and that he will be authorized to make the necessary demands and explanations before the council for the colonies. The Canon states that he neither wishes or finds himself able to be involved in this matter with other members of the Congregation; b, he requests that this religious should be stationed in Germany once a foundation becomes possible in that country.
2. He states that this foundation is necessary in order to train German youngsters for the missions and provide them with a proper German education.
3. Canon Hespers thinks that the prospect is a possibility and quite feasible by following the initiatives he has suggested: moreover he will contribute to this foundation as purposefully as he can if he can be assured that there is a serious mind to undertake it. He promises that once the negotiations begin our arrival in Germany will only be a matter of time and that we should no longer be concerned about it.
4. In addition he states that the Berlin government would be prepared to replace the Wesleyan ministers in certain islands within Bishop Couppe's vicariate with Catholic missionaries, and if the Congregation could promise to provide two German priests it is ready to grant this concession.
5. He went on to say that if the measures proposed are not undertaken, the missions in the German imperial colonies world (sic) have great difficulty in pursuing good relations with the German government, whereas if adopted, mutual understanding would be greatly facilitated. It was in this manner that the Holy Ghost Fathers, the Oblates of Mary Immaculate and the Missionary Fathers of Steyl (Holland) were easily able to set themselves up in Germany under the same conditions through his intervention.

Fr. Ramot and his companion considered that this foundation proposal was of the utmost importance. They are of the view that if the opportunity is not taken in the near future to set up a house in Germany, whence comes the greater part of their financial resources, it may happen that we shall be turned away from the German missions recently set up, and this would be to the great detriment of our house and work in Antwerp.

As regards personnel required, Fr. Ramot puts forward Fr. Linckens to take charge of the new foundation. He is Dutch and will be 34 years this coming January, being well versed in the German language and customs; it will be very easy for him to become Germanic. He would be joined by two young German priests who are due to be ordained next year. The house, though small, would gradually develop. Canon Hespers in order to guarantee his support is looking only for a firm promise that the foundation project become a reality in the space of two years, but he is looking for a formal and genuine decision from Fr. General.

The Provincial and his companion now withdrew; the Council then discussed the above proposals.

On the one hand the proposal in question is not new since it has been discussed for a number of years, and only the impossibility of carrying it out, given the circumstances (personnel and finance), has prevented it from happening.

Besides, Canon Hespers is not a newcomer; his services to the New Britain mission are an earnest pointer to what he can do in the future.

Moreover, setting up a house in Germany would be greatly to the advantage of the German missions by preparing people to work there, and it would also be in the interests of the Northern Province which has such a large number of youngsters as well as many young scholastics. What has been offered already, and now repeated according to the conditions expressed above, might not be feasible in later circumstances if presently turned down.

Accordingly, Fr. General and his Council are agreed that it is opportune to welcome Fr. Provincial's proposals and have decided on: a, the foundation of a house in Germany, with the Northern Province responsible for the costs of that foundation, its situation and construction, the appointment of personnel. The Northern Province will be responsible, then, for everything involved with the setting up of this house.

b. Fr. Linckens is authorized to make himself a naturalized German, and is delegated to deal with Canon Hespers in all aspects of our German initiative; he will not act, however, as an intermediary between Fr. General and the German authorities. He will undertake nothing of importance without reference to Fr. General and his Council, just as the latter will convey to him whatever proposals and concerns need to be placed before the colonial council or civil authorities. Fr. Linckens, and those who replace him, must carefully avoid acting in their own name, never forgetting that they are the delegates of the Congregation and the Province. They will not then act in their own personal name, but in that of the Superior and General Council represented by the Provincial.

c. It is to be understood, as already stated, that the new foundation will have modest beginnings, given the lack of subjects, and given the fact that experience shows that foundations undertaken on a grand scale succeed only with difficulty. It is much more advantageous from every point of view to work calmly and slowly in setting up a house rather than be obliged to cut back on the work undertaken or personnel.

Council Meeting, December 11, 1894

All members in attendance.

The proposal to set up a foundation in Germany.

1. Having heard the proposals expressed at length by Fr. Ramot, and particularly by Fr. Linckens, in favour of a foundation in Germany, the Council's view was that serious consideration should be given to the proposal they had brought forward. There are three requirements at issue: a, the need to have Fr. Linckens made a naturalized German in order to have a German priest in charge of this foundation; b, to have authority made over to this priest to deal in the name of the Congregation with the Berlin government either directly, or indirectly through Canon Hespers.

c, The putting into effect as soon as possible of the proposal. This last is certainly that which causes most problems due to lack of personnel in the Northern Province and this is an issue which needs to be looked at with greater concern and precision.

Acceptance to orders.

2. At the instigation of Fr. Carrière, Brothers Orlandi, Massini and Henri were admitted to the tonsurate; Brothers Bonaccorsi, Neyens, Gsell, Bach, Braun, to minor orders. Vullings and Neysters to the subdiaconate, these latter together with the above-named for minor orders, having met the conditions required to receive this order: perpetual vows and two years' theological study. A discussion took place about admitting Brother Régis Rasele to the tonsurate, something opposed by the director of the scholasticate because he is not sufficiently intelligent; nevertheless, the other Council members would favour his acceptance, not given to think that he is as inadequate as Fr. Vaudon thinks he is.

Issoudun, December 13, 1894

Your Grace,

I am pleased to submit for Your Grace's approval the former Father Meynier's release from vows. Our Procurator General made enquiries in Rome as to whether or not we might have a proper office (liturgical) for Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. The reply he received, Your Grace, was that there was no objection to it if Your Grace approved and commended this initiative. The Congregation of Rites some years ago gave us permission for the office of Our Lady of Graces on the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, but it is incomplete, vague and doesn't properly accord with the spirit of the devotion. Accordingly, we thought about putting together a special one of our own which we present to Your Grace for careful scrutiny, and having made the appropriate revisions deemed necessary, you will then let me know if you consider that it meets your approval. It will be a vast contribution on your part to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for which she will reward you, as well as an additional reason for us to be grateful to you.

I have the honour to be, respectfully, Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

NB: Enclosed is the request which Your Grace may change as he thinks fit.

18941218X

Council Meeting, December 18, 1894

All members present.

Consideration of the German foundation proposal.

Once again Fr. Ramot's views on the founding of a German house were considered; it seems an absolute requirement to meet the needs of our missions in the German colonies and also having in mind the undertakings of the Antwerp house. As regards the missions, Canon Hespers of Cologne has agreed to put the issue before the empire's colonial council, of which he is a member, but on condition that a priest of German nationality, or who has become a German national, be appointed to be responsible with him for the concerns of the said missions, given authority for bringing before the (German) colonial council the issues and claims which could arise. The Canon will not be prepared to negotiate with another member of the Congregation. Moreover, he wants whatever priest is chosen to live in Germany once a foundation in this country becomes possible.

With reference to this foundation, Canon Hespers thinks it is an absolute requirement that those youngsters destined for the missions should be given a German education, and this could be facilitated if what he suggests is carried out; he will use all his influence to bring this about, given that it is a serious undertaking to bring it to fruition. According to him the German government would be prepared, in some islands of Bishop Couppe's Vicariate, to replace Wesleyan teachers with Catholic missionaries, and he will do his utmost to obtain this concession if the Congregation commits itself to making two priests available for this ministry. Furthermore, he added that if there is no foundation in Germany, our German missions will have difficulties in pursuing good relations with the government, whereas undertaking these measures everything will fall into place, citing as examples the Holy Ghost Fathers and the Oblates of Mary Immaculate, etc., who set themselves up in Germany and their undertakings were not a source of concern to the civil authorities. As regards what they undertake, it has to be said that the Northern houses cannot prosper without a German house since without it the resources which are provided by this country will go to the recently-created centres of German missions.

To bring this foundation about, Fr. Ramot proposes that it be the responsibility of Fr. Linckens, who will be 34 in January and is well versed in German ways and the language. Since he is Dutch he will become a naturalized German, something which will not be a problem since he is supported by Canon Hespers. He will be joined by two young German priests due to be ordained next year and the house will, therefore, from a small beginning, develop gradually.

Approval of a German foundation.

The Council, appreciating the seriousness of the reasons put forward, accepts that there is good reason to welcome the Provincial's proposals, authorizing, therefore, the establishment of a house in Germany, making the Northern Provincial responsible for it, both for the location, the building(s) and appointment of personnel. The Province should be responsible, financially and otherwise, for everything involved in this new foundation. Fr. Linckens is given permission to make himself a German citizen to realise the project in question. But he will not forget, either himself or those who replace him, that he is only the Province's and Congregation's delegate, not acting in any way in his own personal capacity, but rather in the Superior General and his Council's name through the intermediary of his Provincial. It goes without saying, as has been mentioned above, that the foundation will begin in a simple fashion given the lack of personnel and from the example of foundations undertaken on a grand scale which succeed only with difficulty, whereas those which develop gradually have a better chance of surviving.

Following the present Council meeting, at the request of the individual concerned, and the recommendation of the Watertown Superior, Brother Louis Villate, called Léonard, was admitted to renewal of vows at the end of his first three years. Also at Fr. Píperon's request the lay brothers Eugène Chatellier and Léonard Lejolly were admitted to first vows.

Your Grace,

I place before Your Grace my grateful appreciation of your favourable and successful support for the office in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. We had all hoped, Your Grace, that, given your invaluable recommendation, our request would be granted.

I would like to submit for Your Grace's approval the request here included if you think it opportune that Canon Hespers, Cologne, continues to act, as in the past, with the German colonial council. Our Northern Province confrères want to get things moving quickly since they are being pressed to do so by Canon Hespers who is shortly due to go to the colonial council in Berlin where German mission issues are dealt with.

Conscious of the pressing engagements involving the New Year, I take occasion beforehand to offer Your Grace New Year good wishes, and may you continue to make your advice and fatherly support available to us. If our prayers are answers, the Lord will restore you to complete health, and you will long continue to be in charge of this diocese for the great benefit of those in your care.

Begging your blessing, please accept the deepest regards and complete submissiveness of your missionaries in C.J.

Issoudun, January 2, 1895

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. I thank you for your New Year good wishes and send my own to you which are no less sincere and extended. May the Divine Heart be responsive to them for both of us.
2. I am sending on your three-monthly allowance of 600 francs (about 1,980 euros).
3. I had already been told by Fr. Carrière what you have to say to me about the "cumul" (a technical word in the Roman Catholic Church for the accumulation of posts, positions, roles). He wrote to me about 8 days ago to say that Fr. Védère had come to him informing him that a certain Monsignor, a consultant with the Congregation of Bishops and Religious (he wouldn't give his name), had expressed his amazement that our Procurator was at one and the same time Superior of the Rome house, and this was forbidden by Church law because there was far too much inconvenience involved when two responsible charges involved the same individual, and these roles should be kept separate. I replied to Fr. Carrière that he should not associate any great importance to the observations of Fr. Védère:
  - a. because from the beginning of our house in Rome the Procurator always held the role of local Superior, with the knowledge and approval of the Sacred Congregation, which itself never raised the issue;
  - b. because you have stated and written a number of times that the procurators of the French Congregations in Rome were Superiors of their houses at the same time;
  - c. because at the time we appointed Fr. Carrière Procurator we made him local Superior at the same time, as a result of the impossible situation in which we found ourselves by not having anyone else available for this role (of Superior);
  - d. because the Apostolic Visitor (the Archbishop of Bourges), who had plenipotentiary powers from the Holy See, endorsed this two-fold appointment;
  - e. because the Sacred Congregation itself, on becoming aware of any inappropriateness in this appointment, would officially intervene, either with Fr. Carrière or the Archbishop of Bourges, instead of having recourse to a consultant clouded in anonymity who expresses himself in confidence to someone not really involved (Védère).

I fear that all of this is part of a stirring-up of hostility against Fr. Carrière by disaffected or envious people just as happened in your own case. Pathetic human nature!

Now that the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars is laying it down that these two roles must be kept separate, something which for me presently creates a problem, we shall attempt the impossible to meet its wishes. I am very grateful to you for letting me become aware of what you know about all this.

Thanks be to God, following the departure of Fathers Reyn and Klotz and the setting-up of the Northern Province, peace and unity characterize us once more. May the Sacred Heart consolidate it among us more and more!

Dear Fr. Vandel,

A thousand thanks for your good wishes and kind letter. How pleased I am to read that you are so happy! Felix culpa! (Happy fault – the reference is to Vandel's temporary break-away from the Society; see above, early 1894.) The Lord is wonderful; how marvellous what is planned out by Him! You and I have been through a number of bad experiences. The upshot for you is that you have become more irrevocably attached to your vocation and Superiors, expanding our dear Society through the creation of a new Province, bringing about a return of peace, support, unity and among us, restoring the links which unite us and bringing me consolation, which is all the sweeter because of what I suffered beforehand. Let us acclaim then with Fr. Jouët; let difficulties thrive! Long live the Sacred Heart!

I am not at all surprised, my friend, by the warm reception you have had from our Sydney confrères, nor by the kindness and support extended to you by our dearly-loved Fr. Tréand. You will continue to support and strengthen the Randwick house and its very important undertakings. You will be, I have no doubt, a living example of all the religious virtues, your example encouraging others and drawing precious blessings down upon you.

The Ruggieri issue.

1. Called up for military service, he wanted to put it off until he was 26 years of age, the law granting this privilege to those who study at state universities but, for health reasons as well as the drawback of university studies, he has had to do his military service straightaway. He was, accordingly, conscripted, he himself having asked the Sacred Congregation to suspend or release him from his vows, which was granted. Fr. Carrière considered that his impact on the other scholastics was upsetting, only allowing him to visit the Rome house under certain conditions and on condition that he behave in a discreet manner. What was said to him by Fr. Carrière shocked him and he no longer visits the place. Meanwhile, he complains to certain confrères about Fr. Carrière's attitude to him, letting them know of his wish to return after military service, but to another house rather than that of Rome. The decision was reached that if he behaved satisfactorily and had satisfactory reports, he would be welcomed on his return, but on condition that he undertook the probation year prescribed by the November 27, 1892, decree.

The revalidation of perpetual profession for Brothers Dormann, Henry and Orlandi.

2. These three in Rome made their perpetual profession two days before their three-year vows were due to expire and Fr. Carrière wants their situation invalidated. It must have the approval of the Apostolic Visitor (the Archbishop of Bourges).

The lay brothers Gabriel, Théodore, Mariano, Salvatore, Domenico, Stanislas, accepted for final profession.

3. At the request and commendation of their respective Superiors, the following lay brothers in New Guinea were admitted to final profession, having already reached, or about to reach, their 30th year:

Gabriel Vereijken; Théodore Van Spijk; Mariano Travaglini; Salvatore Gasbarra; Domenico Grippa; Stanislas van Rooij.

Brothers Louis and Alphonse accepted for renewal of vows;

Brother van Berkel accepted for three-yearly vows;

Brothers Antoine Charles, New Guinea, and Alphonse Vriend, Sacred Heart, Issoudun, were accepted for renewal of vows.

With the commendation of the Novice Master, the novice Jan van Berkel was admitted to three-year vows, although his report doesn't suggest someone of quite satisfactory qualities.

4. Brother Jouffray at his own request has left the Congregation.

The Salzburg accounts for the first six months of 1894.

(The franc in 1895 would be roughly equivalent to 3 euros for the year 2009.)

5. These accounts are not quite kept in order with sufficient regularity. In regard to receipts, those received are mentioned, but there is no mention of those which have yet to arrive. The same holds for expenses; those paid being mentioned, but not those yet to be paid, such-wise that one is aware of the account but not of the financial situation.

Intake: 45,518.26 florins (roughly 95,588.34 francs).

Expenditure met: 35,542.45 florins (74,739.14 francs).

Money available: 9,925.81 florins (20,949.20 francs).

Personal upkeep: 17,946.13 florins (37,686.87 francs) towards the expenses of 72 people, the equivalent of 513 francs for each person over six months, or 85 francs monthly.

In a post script a redeemable debt of 65,000 florins is mentioned, 65,600 x 210 (the equivalent of 137,760.00 francs).

The Sydney accounts.

6. For the first time ever Fr. Tréand, Superior in Sydney, forwards the accounts in his own hand, but they are presented as briefly as possible.

Parish financial returns: £411, 16 shillings, 10 pence (being the equivalent of 10,296 francs) together with the intake from the Annals of £644, 10 shillings, 6 pence (the equivalent of 26,409.19 francs).

Annals expenses came to £240 (6,000 francs). The preparation of the Kensington ground (for the new house) cost £359 or 8,750 francs. The upkeep of the house and priests came to £470, 4 shillings, 6 pence (the equivalent of 11,755.60 francs), representing £1,060, 4 shillings, 6 pence or 26,515.60 francs, constituting a deficit of 96.50 francs.

The financial upkeep of 15 people comes to 11,755 francs over six months for each person, or 783 francs monthly. (£6 is the equivalent of 130 francs)

Your Grace,

I request Your Grace to favour us with an 'exequatur' (a legal term denoting a decree granting execution of a decision reached) as regards the indult here enclosed and given to legitimize yows which have been illegitimately taken in our Rome house. The indult is accompanied by justifying explanatory reasons, its acceptance by the three interested parties and an explanatory letter by the Superior of the house.

With deep respect I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in SS Corde Jesu.

Issoudun, January 14, 1895

Dear Father,

I have discussed Brother Jouffray's situation with Fathers Morisseau and Lanctin and, like myself, they think that this good brother should either return to the scholasticate or go home. By keeping him on at Issoudun we would be acting contrary to the Rome decree.

Dear Fr. Lynch asked my permission to print mementos of his ordination, but it is something I cannot allow because it is contrary (this usage) to the religious life, and I am quite firm that such a procedure does not come to be practised among us.

I haven't yet gone to Bourges. I shall try to do so on Thursday.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Fr. Lanctin has written to Fr. Barbier about the young man and has forwarded the grammar to him.

Christopher Lynch was born on December 25, 1871, at Ballyhass, Cecilstown, Mallow, Co. Cork, Ireland. He would shortly be ordained in Bourges, February 10, having studied in Rome. He left for Sydney at the beginning of March 1896 where he became a professor in the newly set-up scholasticate with his friend Jules Vandel. For a fuller treatment of C. Lynch see, in extenso, Twohig, Late But Not Too Late.

Issoudun, January 23, 1895

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

1. I am happy that I have pleased you and I pray that everyone's health will be restored. When you are able to travel you can come to Issoudun with Fr. Piperon.

2. Write to the Archbishop in order to find out the exact date of the examinations (for orders).
3. Fr. Bauron, parish priests at St. Eucher, Lyons, is requesting that you and Fr. Guyot give a mission in his parish from the 1st to the 17th of November 1896. Can you undertake it? There are 6,000 people in the parish and 3 curates.
4. I am not in the least favourable to placing in the hands of our young men the 'Correspondant' (magazine) which always has been, and still is, the voice of the liberal school of thought which has caused so much harm in the Church and led astray so many. I am about to get the volumes which you mention, but only for our main library. Did you take with you to Chezal-Benoît the 13 volumes of the Summa Aurea as they are no longer in Issoudun?

The reference is to a series on systematic theology, beginning in the 12th century, associated with Gottfried of Poitiers and William of Auxerre, which flourished in medieval universities and centres of learning.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

I made it clear that the magazines and weekly religious papers you wanted should be sent on to you.

Issoudun, January 24, 1894

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I am sending on to you the last letter from Fr. Guyot and that from Fr. Bauron, whose mission would take place this year between the 1st and 17th of November if possible. Fr. Guyot would be available and he counts on you, judging your presence as being necessary for the Society's reputation. He will smooth out with you all the difficulties. See what you can do and if not it will have to be next year.

Wholly yours in C.J.

If your health allows, come with Fr. Piperon on Saturday, but if not, next week.

Council Meeting, January 28, 1895

All present except Fr. Vaudon who was laid up.

Request by Fr. Laviaille to have his correspondence unopened.

1. Consideration was given to a request from Fr. Laviaille to be dispensed from the regulation requiring correspondence to and from members of the institute to be submitted to the scrutiny of the local Superior. He argues in favour of this dispensation that it is allowed in the Society of Jesus, and the greater part of his correspondence consists of letters for spiritual direction in which secrecy is paramount. One is of the view that the Jesuits, finding themselves in other circumstances than ourselves, can grant dispensations such as these whereas we cannot grant them without being inconvenienced. If letters of direction were sufficient reason for withholding a priest's correspondence from the surveillance of his Superior, the way would then be open to many abuses. Besides, the privacy of direction is adequately guaranteed by the discretion of the Superiors who are bound by normal secrecy requirements. For the rest, one is surprised that Fr. Laviaille asks to be dispensed from a law which inconveniences him so little since he is more often than not away from the house and, in the circumstances, he is free to have unsupervised correspondence. While the Superior can ask him to provide letters received and about to be sent, he will not take his investigations as far as this. Accordingly, the decision is taken that Fr. Laviaille must, like his confrères, simply comply with the Constitutions in regard to his correspondence.

Fr. Mégret should open the correspondence of his boarders.

2. Fr. Mégret, as director of the school, making enquiries as to whether or not he should open the correspondence of his boarders, whether going out or incoming, received an affirmative answer since this is general practice in educational establishments.

3. Fr. Carrière is in favour of taking in some youngsters at the Rome house who would follow the Apollinare (university) courses and help in the church's singing and ceremonies. The Council feared that the personnel available was not sufficient for the supervision of these youngsters and that there could be damaging consequences as regards the young priests and scholastics. Nevertheless, as the Council is not in a position to judge whether one can sufficiently overcome such inconvenience, it leaves the issue to be dealt with by Fr. Carrière who will act on his own responsibility.

The lay brothers Kopp and Van Roessel admitted to final vows.

4. At the request and with the favourable support of Fr. Ramot, the lay brothers Dominicus Kopp and Dionysius Van Roessel were accepted for final vows. As for Gustavius Dheer, since the reports on him were not satisfactory, the conclusion was drawn that he should be bade farewell on the expiry of his vows.

A request from Fr. Ramot to communicate by closed letters with his Rome scholastics.

5. He asked to be allowed to communicate confidentially by way of closed letters, as their major Superior, with the scholastics from his Province who are in Rome, as if they were virtually in their own Province. As they are in Rome under the jurisdiction of a Superior who has a very particular, specific, role, it would be relevant to find out if Fr. Ramot could be considered his major Superior. Before a decision is reached on this issue, it would be worthwhile to find out what happens elsewhere in this respect with other Congregations.

Some subjects appointed to Fr. Bontemps' mission.

6. At the request of Fr. Bontemps who would like to take with him in April five priests and five lay brothers, consideration was given to those who might be available to him. Fathers Fillodeau and Lebeau have already been made available to him, but since Fathers Raynaud and Pacard, who want to go, cannot be replaced in their duties, they will be replaced in the Gilbert Islands by Brothers Meunier and Villoud who are about to be ordained deacons and will be ordained priests before departure for Sydney. A diocesan priest from France will accompany them and, maybe, an Italian priest who wants to go on the missions. As for the lay brothers, the names put forward are those of Boniface, Matthias, Charles and Justinus.

Issoudun, February 4, 1895

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

1. I thank you for the good news you share with me about our young men.
2. Dear Fr. Morisseau is very forgetful, often making his own ideas those of others. I have asked him to write to you and explain himself.
3. Dear Fr. Bontemps is too hasty. Little Brother Meunier was not promised to him; he doesn't want an Italian priest, and it's for this reason and of his own accord no doubt he settled on the brother in question.

Try and come on Thursday; there are several issues to be considered.

4. As for the scholastic on military service in Toulon, if he no longer wishes to return we cannot force him; he will return to lay life; that's the reality. We shall dispense him from his vows.
5. If the Spanish brother is called up and forced to go, let him do so, but he should ask his parents beforehand for money to meet the expenses of his journey; this is elementary.

200 francs made available for the Rome scholasticate's library.

1. The Rome scholastics having requested their theological library should be completed with the purchase of works by modern or contemporary authors, it was agreed that 200 francs should be made available to them, with the Provincial of the Northern Province also asked to contribute since the Rome scholasticate library is for the use of the scholastics.

An appeal for funds on behalf of the scholastics who went away with Bishop Navarre.

2. Bishop Navarre requested financial support on behalf of the scholastics who went with him, claiming that he had saved their vocations. His request was considered, and was not considered sufficiently valid since almost all the scholastics referred to are now priests. And there is only one of whom it could be said that the Bishop saved his vocation. In any event these scholastics were not forced on His Lordship, he himself insisting strongly on having them, saying nothing about the money needed to meet their financial upkeep.

A decision about the lay brothers who will be moving from the Northern Province to the French Province.

3. Fr. Ramot gave notice of a decision taken by his Provincial Council about lay brothers from the Northern Province who were in France or in the French Province. Only those will be made available in France who can speak French or are likely to speak the language in a short time and who freely accept repatriation. By the very fact of their acceptance in the French Province they will be incorporated in it and will no longer belong to the Northern Province, which will be in no way obliged to take them back. The General Council, while accepting this decision, is of the view, however, that the German brothers should be made available for the New Britain mission. As for the others, one accepts that knowledge of the French language is a prerequisite in order to come and live in the French Province. In order to cope with this problem, it is for the Superiors and Novice Master for the lay brothers to see to it that they learn French, since it is the official language of the Congregation. Otherwise, knowledge of French is less a requirement for the missions apud infideles in New Guinea and the Gilbert Islands.

Fr. Blanchet made available as an auxiliary priest to the Archbishop of Bourges.

4. The Archbishop finding himself greatly deprived of priests, requests through the intermediary of Fr. Auvrelle some auxiliary priests. The decision was taken to make available Fr. Blanchet as being the only one to draw on.

The scholastic Guerrero goes home.

5. He requested money to pay for his return journey to Ecuador. Fr. General replied that he needed to know his reasons for leaving and that he request his family to provide the money for his return. Nonetheless this scholastic took himself off at the beginning of February.

Authorization for the acquisition of ground to the benefit of the Spanish house.

6. Fr. Casas explained that the ground bordering on the southern part of the Barcelona property could not be purchased for the time being because it belonged to minors and, accordingly, he proposes buying other land both more spacious and less expensive, but likewise limited on its eastern side. He was authorized to go ahead with the purchase which is no less necessary to avoid a right of way which might, otherwise, arise later.

A problem arising from the concession of a proper Office of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

7. According to a letter from Fr. Carrière, a proper office of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will be voluntarily granted to us, but the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart would, at the request of one member of the Congregation, need to be changed and replaced by Virgin of the Sacred Heart, an unacceptable condition if maintained.

8. Brother Giacomo Cantoni is appointed to the Jesi house.

Fr. Leblanc recalled to Europe.

9. Fr. O'Mahony, Superior at Watertown, having written that the health of Fr. Leblanc is deteriorating in the inclement Watertown weather, the Dr. recommending that he find a milder climate, the decision was taken that he should return to Europe as soon as he could make the journey.

The Rome scholastics belonging to the Northern Province, but under the immediate jurisdiction of the Superior General, cannot correspond with the Provincial in closed envelopes.

1. Some scholastics of the Northern province have claimed the right to correspond with their Provincial, whom they look upon as their major Superior, in sealed letters. It was decided that Fr. Carrière should take note of what is customary in other Rome scholasticates. The general procedure, and particularly so in the Oblate scholasticate, is that all scholastics are in dependence on the Superior General and have no special privilege in the way of correspondence with their Provincial. It was decided, therefore, that the same should hold for our scholastics.

Fr. Védère released from his responsibility as director of scholastics.

2. Fr. Védère on resigning his post as director of the scholastics will need to be replaced by someone who is suitable for this post.

Letters from New Britain about the lack of unity among the confrères.

3. Letters from there present sad stories about the divisions prevailing among the confrères and the animosity levelled by some against Bishop Couppé, their Apostolic Vicar, who, having to send Fr. Assunto away, pleadingly appeals for Fr. Bormann of Watertown.

Council Meeting, February, 26, 1895

All members present.

The annexation of the New Britain mission by the Northern Province.

1. It has been decided more than once that the New Britain mission should be taken charge of by the Northern Province which should oversee personnel and material aid, in particular mass offerings. The December 11 decision about setting up a house in Germany to look after the interests of this mission is based on this proposal. Despite this decision, of which he has an authentic copy, the Provincial wants it to be further ratified officially. It is for this reason that the Council endorses further its present deliberations, confirming what has previously been decided about the New Britain mission, by presenting its decision for approval to His Grace the Apostolic Visitor (Archbishop Boyer).

Request for its own novitiate by the Provincial of the Northern Province.

2. A letter from the Northern Provincial was read to the meeting in which he asked that a novitiate be set up for his Province at the Salzburg house from this coming September, 1895. The reasons he puts forward are the following:

a. There are in Salzburg fifteen students ready to enter the novitiate and four or five others in Antwerp who are equally so. There would, then, be great inconvenience involved, sending all these Germans to France and, likewise, one would only need to transfer to Germany the 12 German students in the senior rhetoric course who are at Issoudun, and they would be happy to do the novitiate in their own country.

b. Fr. Provincial up to now was not in favour of having the novitiate in Salzburg, so distant from the Provincial house, but he has changed his mind and thinks that the best place for the novitiate is at Salzburg rather than at the scholasticate, because the candidates, mostly Dutch or Flemish, would much prefer to spend only a year outside their country, rather than spending 5 or 6 years there, or away, doing their philosophical and theological studies. Besides, Fr. Hartzer, Superior of the house (Salzburg), knowing German quite well, would be better suited than most to supervise the novices. He, as by miracle, has twice been restored to health and now seems predestined by Providence for this undertaking. He could be given Fr. Kuntz as socius, somebody still quite young, but seriously motivated.

c. With the setting up of a novitiate which a Pontifical indult will legally establish, the Province becomes fully organized and everybody will be pleased, particularly the Salzburg house as the centre of one of the most important undertakings of the Province.

It has to be said that the arguments brought forward by the Provincial (in b above) are quite weighty, but the lack of personnel which prevented the Council a year ago (Council deliberations 29 and 30 July, 1894) from consenting to the establishment of a novitiate, still prevails this year. It is quite right. Fr. Hartzer is 35 years of age, but Fr. Kuntz is only 25 in place of being 30, the requisite age. Moreover Fr. Hartzer would have to take on all these responsibilities. The conclusion is that time must be taken to examine further this serious issue and postpone a decision until the next meeting.

Report on the visit to the Barcelona house.

3. Fr. Morisseau read his report on the visit he made to the Barcelona house in which he was accompanied by Fr. Maillard. The visit helped to calm the high feelings raised by Brother Guerrero's departure. It became clear that the house was in a flourishing state from the material and financial point of view. The Our Lady of the Sacred Heart association is thriving, but the Petite Oeuvre languishes. In order to bring about serious improvement, another Superior is needed, together with some staff able to train the youngsters in the house itself, without needing to send them for class to the diocesan minor seminary. Until this is done, it is pointless to try and develop this undertaking as it will always lead to unsatisfactory results. The Canet house rented out to the Marist Brothers is in quite a good state of repair, despite the humidity prevailing in certain places. The tiling needs to be almost entirely renewed. The garden is very well looked after and cultivated by the brothers.

The lay brothers' retreat fixed for January 27.

4. As some brothers about to leave for the Gilbert Islands' mission would like to make a retreat before their departure, it was decided that the annual brothers' retreat at the Sacred Heart house should commence on the 27th of the current month and be given by Fr. Maillard. Besides, since a brother is absolutely needed in Spain, where Brother Martinus is on his own for quite some time, Fr. Offermans will be asked for such a brother, as well finding two or three brothers to replace those at Issoudun who are about to leave for the missions.

Appraisal of accounts and budgets.

The 1895 franc would, roughly, be the equivalent of 3.20 euros in 2009.

In conclusion the Council looked at the accounts of the different houses in the French Province. As the accounts of the Northern houses had not been sent on, they are to be requested from Fr. Offermans, the Provincial Bursar. There followed an examination of the accounts over the previous six months, or even the entire year, 1894, as well as the 1895 budgets sent in by the different houses in the French Province.

1. The General Administration Accounts; second half of 1894.

The total intake of 205,567 francs surpasses the total outlay of 198,229.30 francs giving a surplus of 7,037.70 francs.

The 1894 Budget.

The receipts for the previous year were 423,883.55 francs, exceeding in total the expenses of 216,232.20 francs by 23,294.35 francs.

The 1895 Budget.

Income for the previous year came to 422,883.55 francs, but one does not foresee more than 361,794.35 francs for the present year. Equally, expenses for 1894 were 415,261.50 francs and one does not foresee more than 369,820 francs for this year (1895).

Calculating the total intake (receipts) for 1894 of 205,567 francs over the first six months and 240,026.55 francs for the second six months, making in all 445,593.55 francs, together with contributions to the missions and special accounts (117,725.25 francs in the first six months and 166,882.80 francs for the second six months, making a total of 284,608.05 francs), the overall assets reach 445,593.55 francs as against debits of 284,608.05 francs, making a surplus of 160,985.50 francs. The total outlay of expenses met in 1894 comprised 198,529.30 francs for the first six months and 216,732.80 francs for the second six months, making in all 315,261.50 francs; special expenses being 49,538.65 francs for the first six months and 121,514.55 francs for the second six months, making in all 171,043.26 francs. This brings ordinary expenses to 315,261.50 francs, minus 171,043.26 francs, making a total left over of 144,218.30 francs. Consequently, the normal intake surpasses the normal expenses by 16,757.20 francs; the financial situation is, therefore, satisfactory, the budget deficit of 8,025 francs being in no way anything to worry about.

2. The Sacred Heart house accounts, inclusive of the first six months of 1894 and three months thereafter. Supplied by Fr. Godinoux.

These accounts are put together from the monthly receipts and expenses provided by the bursar over the 9 months. The intake comprises students' fees, guests' contributions, mass offerings celebrated by the priests or the staff. The total comes to 38,816.15 francs. Expenses of all kinds over this same period of time amount to 39,035.60 francs. One notes that if these accounts are exact, the bursar would have paid out more than he had available to him, something quite impossible.

The final three months of 1894: accounts supplied by Fr. Batard.

Intake: 26,800.40 francs; to be put in 1,330.00.

Expenses met: 22,774.20 francs; to be met: 208.50.

In total 4,126.20 francs. Intake surpasses outlay by 1,121.50 francs.

As a result there are 4,126.20 francs to hand, plus 121.50 francs also available, making a total of 4,247.70 francs.

Living expenses (food and clothing) come to 200.45 francs for each individual over three months, or 60.80 a month. This figure is more than that for the upkeep of personnel at the Petite Oeuvre and this is because of expenses incurred by installing things. The 1895 budget is well balanced, having regard to personnel numbering 126. Expected intake 74,590.20 francs; expenses 74,556 francs, making a surplus of 34.20 francs.

3. The presbytery accounts for each six months of 1894.

The first six months. Intake: 8,521.65 francs of which 6,490 francs came from the parish and mass offerings. Outlay: 8,332 francs. The more important sum is that of 1,981.51 francs given to the general bursary, after which there remained in the presbytery account 189.65 francs. If the overall total had been given to the general bursary, 1,981.51 and 189.65 francs, a total of 2,171.15 francs, there would be nothing left in the presbytery account.

The second six months. Intake: 6,165.05 francs, of which 4,090 francs were taken into the general house coffers. Expenses came to 6,165.05 francs; intake matched expenses. There is nothing left over.

An observation on the practice here of keeping accounts as to intake and outlay. Only 2,423 francs were received in the first six months and 313.20 francs for the second six months, in total 736.80 francs. Yet over the second six months 1,497.10 francs were placed in the Archbishop's coffers. What is the explanation for the difference between intake and the amount laid aside for the Archbishop? Would it not be in order to have a specific account dealing with money intended for the Archbishop and one for other in-Society projects? The final outcome is that the parish account received in total 4,090.20 francs, this makes 2,108.70 francs owed to the general account.

The 1895 Budget. This is not balanced. One anticipates 10,700 francs as intake and 11,485 as outlay, making for a deficit of 785 francs. But all indications are that this deficit will be much greater because certain expenses will almost certainly exceed what is foreseen. One foresees 150 francs for lighting and heating, whereas that figure should be quadrupled in order to be realistic. Besides there will be a number of unforeseen expenses for which no figure can be provided and, obviously, recourse will be had to the main account in order to stabilize matters financially.

4. -Benoît Accounts: second half of the year.

Fr. Godinoux, when setting out the Chezal-Benoît accounts for the latter six months of the year, brings together the three last months of Fr. Batard's role as bursar and his own three months as bursar, setting out a balance both with regard to personnel and intake, expenditure. Since, however, there is a lack of proportion both as regards personnel and, undoubtedly, expenditure, it is not possible to assess fairly the administration of one and the other. Be that as it may, Fr. Godinoux states that there was an intake of 32,188.20 francs and an outlay of 32,236.15 francs. But it is unrealistic to pay 32,236 francs with 32,184 francs; moreover, Fr. Godinoux identifies 32,184.20 francs as debt paid, making for a deficit of 51.95 francs. The conclusion is that the sum of 32,236.15 francs as expenditure paid is not correct and we cannot be sure if there are not other inexactitudes, besides.

The 1895 budget for Chezal-Benoît would appear to be made out quite satisfactorily in relation to personnel, involving 47,850 francs by way of receipts and the same amount in expenses, but the bursar has forgotten to place at the head of his expenses the debt of 51.95 francs and this compromises the exact balancing of his budget.

5. The Paris house accounts; the latter six months of the year. Receipts come to 13,000.97 francs with a further due intake of 1,000 francs. Expenses met come to 11,743 francs and those to be met are 400 francs, which implies available currency of 1,258.20 francs plus an additional 600 francs making a total of 1,858.20 francs. Expenditure for the upkeep of nine people comes to 873.41 francs or 971.05 francs for each person over 6 months and 161.30 a month. The 1895 budget. This is calculated on intake and outlay over the preceding year; intake was 23,599.37 francs; outlay came to 23,624.74 francs, making for a likely deficit of 25.37 francs. This insignificant deficit does not prevent the Paris house from bettering itself financially little by little. The new chaplaincy which has been taken on will make it possible to meet as from themselves the rent of 125,000 francs to be met for the house. This rent is not, as some are inclined to believe, set at 5% since at this figure it should be 6,250 francs, whereas in reality only 1,343.85 francs has to be paid every three months or 5,375.40 francs over a year.

6. The accounts of the Vichy house, first and second half year 1894. Intake: 6,991.85 francs; expenditure 6,279.55 francs, making for a surplus of 712.30 francs. What claimed the greater part of intake in 1894 was the cost of building a staircase to the oratory, 519 francs, and a contribution of 1,500 francs to the general Society (sic). Intake for 1895 came to 4,521.45 francs; expenses were 4,340 francs, making for a surplus of 181.45 francs.

7. The Rome house accounts for the latter six months of 1894. Receipts came to 44,625.45 francs with 3,000 yet to come. Expenditure met came to 30,886.75 francs with 9,796 francs yet to be paid. Cash to hand came to 13,738.70 francs with 6,796 francs due to be paid out. From the total receipts of 47,625.45 francs, there is the sum of 23,034.10 francs to hand inclusive of special expenses, with 24,591.235 francs remaining to meet normal expenses. The same holds for outlay: from the overall amount of 40,682.75 francs special expenses run to 10,783.05 francs, and ordinary expenses to 31,099.70 francs. Accordingly, the normal expense surpasses the normal intake by 5,508.35 francs, which goes to show that Rome's finances are not as yet quite as healthy as the excess of 6,942.70 francs would seem to suggest.

The 1895 budget is calculated in relation to intake and outlay for the previous year with 72,988.70 francs foreseen as intake and 62,560.60 francs foreseen as expenditure. This means a surplus of 10,428.10 francs, which goes to show that while the Rome finances are not marvellous they are, nevertheless, positively progressing.

8. Barcelona budget: the latter six months of the year. Expenditure met: 16,254.71 francs. Money to hand: 46,907.16 francs. The upkeep of 18 people came to 4,720.33 francs over the six months, that of one individual to 262.20 francs over six months and 43.70 francs for a month. The budget has a positive balance of 207.11 francs, but it is obvious that the intake is below that of the previous year, whereas the outlay greatly exceeds the previous year. In order to meet the accumulated financial charges, there was one simple measure; add to the expenditure the purchase of ground which the house was obliged to undertake in order to avoid the inconveniences of neighbours (and their properties) getting too close.

9. The Glastonbury budget, first and second half of 1894. Receipts, intake, 15,993.20 francs, yet to come, 250 francs, making for a total of 16,243.20 francs. Expenditure: 15,828.20 francs; to be paid, 32,369.95 francs, in total 48,198.15 francs. Total amount: 111.47 francs; total deficit: 31,551.58 francs.

Over the first six months of the year the upkeep of 41 people cost 12,196.40 francs, that is to say 299.91 francs for each person over 6 months and 48.98 francs a month. In the second half of the year, the upkeep of 23 people came to 8,112.80 francs, that is to say 352.73 for each one over 6 months, or 58.77 monthly.

Budget. Intake: 27,704 francs; outlay: 27,825 francs, but added to by borrowings from Roberts and Scol (31,006 francs) this mounts up to 58,831 francs. The resulting deficit is, then, 31,127 francs. Yet the budget only foresees 255 francs to be paid when the Roberts' rent (26,964 at 3%) requires 809 francs and the Scol rent (4,042 francs at 5%) requires 202 francs. This makes for a total of 1,011 francs. If the interest of the sums at issue is not fully paid, it will accumulate each year with the financial abyss growing ever deeper.

10. The Watertown accounts, first and second half of 1894. Second half-year. Intake: 30,504.73 francs, with a further 2,000 to be included, making 32,504.73 francs in all. Expenditure met: 20,139.65 francs; to be met: 35,080.35 francs; in all 55,220.00 francs. Cash to hand: 10,365.08 francs. A total liability of 55,210 – 32,504.73 francs, becomes 22,706.27 francs. The upkeep of 21 people has cost 21,228.80 francs, or 1,010 for each person over 6 months or 168.60 francs monthly. The first six months. Receipts banked 27,837.98 francs, together with 3,000 francs; making 32,857.93 francs in total. Expenses met: 19,648.55 francs; to be met: 30,948.95 francs or in total 50,597.50 francs. There is, then, in the accounts 8,189.38 francs. Negatively, 50,597.50 francs; positively 32,857.93 francs, making for 17,739.57 francs. The upkeep of 28 people has come to 21,281 francs, or 760 francs for each one over six months and 126.60 francs a month.

Budget. Expected intake: 59,645.80 francs. Expected expenditure: 76,400.35 francs, making a deficit, therefore, of 16,755.27 francs. This deficit could be easily met by selling ground bought by Fr. Ramot in order to build a church dedicated to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, a project which has now been abandoned. As a result, the Watertown finances are not in such a bad state as one might be led to believe from looking at the budget deficit.

Your Grace,

There was a fire last night in the old Sacred Heart house; beginning in the garret, it was noticed at 7 this morning. In the course of a few hours everything was ablaze, the roof, garret and second storey. At the time of writing, the fire has died out. We were able to save the new building and the church. The firemen, the troops and the population were wonderful in their helpful concern. We were able to save the library and the furniture. The ground floor and first floor were not affected except for the ceilings, onto which the water flowed. This is reassuring. This is a fresh set-back on top of all the others.

Aware, Your Grace, of the concern you have for us, I felt I had to let you know straightaway. I would like you to bestow on us your blessing; my very respectful good wishes in C.J.

Council Meeting, March 5, 1895

All present except for the indisposed Fr. Morisseau.

Decision on Fr. Ilge.

1. Fr. Ilge, having earlier requested dispensation from his vows, his petition was acceded to conditionally with reference to the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, requiring him to find a benevolent bishop. Since this hasn't happened, he continues to remain bound by his perpetual vows, while living apart from the Society for many years. Fr. Ramot will be asked to write to him requesting that he return either to Antwerp or Tilburg if he wishes to continue being a member of the Society. If he refuses and wishes to be released from his vows, let him find a bishop willing to accept him and make known the identity of this bishop so that at last he can be released from his association with the Society. If he doesn't do one or the other, the Society will refer the matter to Rome, requesting his expulsion and this will be made public in Germany.

The association of the New Britain mission with the Northern Province confirmed.

2. The General Council at its February 26 meeting unanimously decided that the New Britain mission, as had been previously agreed, will in future be associated with the Northern Province which will be responsible for providing it with personnel and subsidies and make available mass intentions to the priests. His Grace the Apostolic Visitor is requested to ratify this decision.

The prospect of setting up a novitiate in the Northern Province.

3. This matter was again considered and if it would be opportune to agree that this novitiate should begin with the next intake of students. The lack of personnel would appear to be a fundamental obstacle, and Fr. Ramot is requested to prepare a memorandum about the need for, and the likelihood of having, such a venture and this will be presented, together with the views of the Council, to His Grace the Apostolic Visitor and, if necessary, to the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

Fr. Tréand given permission to build three rooms above the kitchen.

4. Fr. Tréand, having explained that in order to provide lodgings for the community he found it necessary to build three rooms above the kitchen at a cost of 3,000 francs, was now looking for permission to undertake this work. The Council agreed that he could not be refused his request.

5. Brother Auguste Boudin, whose temporary vows have expired since October, and who for a variety of reasons had his request set aside, is now accepted for final profession. Likewise, Brother William Schmitz in Sydney is accepted for final vows, being more than 30 years of age and about to end his second period of three-yearly vows (sic!).

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

Please, please, calm down! You attribute views to me which are far from my thinking. Who could possibly have misinformed you? I know quite well that the splendour of youngsters rebounds on their father and, consequently, I do not wish to play down that in any way. Consequently, the Universe article, once you find it advantageous, will appear in extenso (completely).

You will remain our Annals' director, this being a necessity, and collaborate as you wish with all the other reviews which are in keeping with your tastes, so long as it isn't detrimental to the work of the Society which has been made your responsibility.

Be circumspect my friend, before the remarks of certain confrères who very likely make use of my name to present their views to you. Let it be enough to know that I like and appreciate you and all the more so for the qualities with which you have been gifted by the good Lord.

Memorandum from Fr. Ramot in regard to his novitiate.

1. A memorandum from Fr. Ramot was considered, requesting the setting-up of a novitiate in the Northern Province and presenting the reasons in favour of such a venture. Time was requested to reflect on this matter before reaching a decision.

A request to build chapels at Tilburg and Salzburg.

2. Fathers Offermans and Hartzler asked permission to build chapels in their respective communities. Seeing no reason militating against these proposals, the Council is prepared to approve as soon as it receives the plans as directed by the Constitutions.

Eight masses at their own initiative at the disposal of newly-ordained priests.

3. It is the custom to make some masses at their own disposition available to newly-ordained priests, outside of those which are set out for the first Friday of the month. Fr. Marcilly put forward as a postulant.

1. Fr. General proposed for postulancy Fr. Marcilly, who studied at Besançon and spent three years with the Holy Cross Fathers as a novice and professed member. Released from his vows he went to the Jesuit novitiate where he did not remain very long. The documents he presented are not sufficiently explicit, and the view was taken that further information was needed in order to ascertain whether or not he should be accepted.

A decision about the Marseilles house acquired by Fr. Jullien.

2. The house bought by Fr. Jullien to serve as a procure in Marseilles cannot any longer be used for this purpose, and his mother suggests that it should be sold to the financial advantage of the missions. The view was taken that it would be worthwhile to sell the house and give the revenue from the sale to the missions. The same decision was reached about the 2,000 francs made available by Brother Justinus.

3. Brother Guerrero, who left the Society a short time ago, has asked to return to the scholasticate and it was agreed that he could do so.

A request from Spain for a supervisor.

4. The Spanish house wants a supervisor for the Petite Oeuvre, but it was not considered appropriate to set aside a scholastic for such a task, particularly so when they have adequate personnel to supervise ten students.

5. Letters from Bishop Navarre were read out in which the Bishop complained that his authority was not being respected. It will be necessary to write to Fr. Genocchi about this.

To Bishop André Navarre, MSC, New Guinea.

L 18950322

Issoudun, March 22, 1895

A copy of the original which is in the archive of the Bereina Diocese, Papua, New Guinea.

My Dear Lord,

I regret the troubles with which you have had to cope. I do not understand how your rights as bishop can come to be challenged, and your jurisdiction over the whole of New Guinea, including Thursday Island, and over all the priests in your Vicariate. (New Guinea here does not mean New Britain or New Ireland.) It's you yourself alone who has authority over the administration of the Sacraments, to grant or withhold as you see fit before the Lord. It is for you to appoint and confirm each of your collaborators in the administration of the Sacraments, to restrict or take away as you see fit before the Lord. It is you alone who has the right to appoint to each of the stations, and close those which you think are inopportune at this time. You have the same rights where you are and the same jurisdiction as bishops in their dioceses. You are the legitimate supervisor of all the stations in your Vicariate, the religious houses there of men and women. You not alone have the right, but also the duty, of seeing to it that everything goes forward properly in keeping with Church laws, and calling to order anyone who is ignoring them. In all of this, all the confrères and religious should be duly obedient to you: this is basic.

Since according to Canon Law a bishop or vicar apostolic cannot be Superior of religious who come under his jurisdiction without a Roman indult, we have requested such for yourself and Bishop Verjus, something which gives you the right to assist at General Chapters of the Society; otherwise you could not do so. Having said yourself that the Thursday Island climate was more pleasant for you than that of New Guinea (what today is Papua) and that you would set up your permanent residence there, we appointed you local Superior of the religious who live there. You, therefore, enjoy in regard to them and their houses all the powers of a local Superior as regards their interior life, spiritual, religious, material circumstances, without prejudice, it goes without saying, to the overall jurisdiction which you exercise over the subjects and undertakings of your Vicariate.

To replace Bishop Verjus, we have appointed Fr. Genocchi as local Superior of the Sacred Heart religious in New Guinea, since it is very important that they have a Superior living among them to oversee the upkeep of the rules and Constitutions, and the vows with respect to the religious life and carrying out their duties. But the role of Superior exercised by Fr. Genocchi does not in any way infringe your rights as Vicar Apostolic and the jurisdiction you exercise with respect to personnel and undertakings in New Guinea. Nothing should be done in the whole length and breadth of your Vicariate without your approval. You have the inalienable right to inspect, visit, organize, encourage, reprimand as you think fit with respect to appropriate administration of the areas confided to your care by the Holy See. There you have in the above what should be evident and one thereby forestalls all problems and/or misunderstandings.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Fr. Genocchi, Superior at this time, would have received a copy of the above.

Fr. Marcilly not accepted.

1. Fr. Marcilly was not accepted for the novitiate.

A new postulant, Fr. Coronnat, put forward.

2. Fr. Joseph Coronnat, a former teacher at Notre Dame de Saintes School, has requested entry to the Society. Several letters commending him were read, all in his praise. It was decided to look for more precise information from the Rector of the Bordeaux major seminary where he had studied.

Fr. Ramot insists on having the Walloon (Belgian) students; the decision reached the previous year giving these subjects to France is reiterated.

3. Fr. Ramot insists on having as part of his Province the French-speaking Belgians, and the decision taken about associating these subjects with the French Province is brought to his attention. He also asked for the release from vows of Fr.

Ilge who has agreed to leave the Society. Every effort will be made to get the certificate as soon as possible from a bishop willing to take this subject under his jurisdiction.

A new decision about the novitiate being sought by the Northern Province.

4. A plan drawn up asking the Apostolic Visitor to open a novitiate in the Northern Province was put before the meeting. One member argued that the Council was opposed to such a venture since the Northern Province hadn't the personnel needed and it wasn't for the Apostolic Visitor to undertake the initiative, but rather for the Provincial Council which should put together a request signed by all its members, and in which one sets out precisely the reason, or reasons, which demand urgency as regards an undertaking which is so premature, as well as what practical steps would be taken to compensate for the lack of personnel. All of which finally means a request submitted to the General Council for approval and then presented, if required, to the Apostolic Delegate for approval. It was decided to write to Fr. Ramot to put his request or question in a manner and style different to that of his previous memorandum, which was not explicit enough about the reasons and the views mentioned above.

Issoudun, March 29, 1895

Your Grace,

I am pleased to share with Your Grace two letters from one of our better scholastics who has been led astray by the leaders of insubordination. His aunt, a Claretian Sister in Chateauroux, sent him to the Petite Oeuvre years ago. We regret to see him leaving. He went from Issoudun to the Puy major seminary in his native diocese where he stood out for his good behaviour and talents. Grace touched his heart and, bitterly regretting his misdemeanour, he requests importunately to return to us. All the members of my Council are in favour of having him back if Your Grace places no obstacle in his way. Reading his letter, Your Grace, would greatly interest you and please you, indicating yet again that the very grave crisis we have undergone was indeed the Devil's work. Once more we see in this particular instance that God always makes good arise from evil since this young man, confirmed more than ever in his vocation, has attracted serious-minded recruits whom he wants to bring along with him. All these regrets and returns can only please the Holy Father and create good will at the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars where we have been so much maligned.

Fr. Bontemps, pro-Vicar Apostolic in Micronesia, left on Monday accompanied by 5 priests, 7 lay brothers and 7 Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. They are due to embark from Marseilles on April 3.

With deepest regards, I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Antwerp, April 1, 1895

Given the statement (expressed below), followed by the decision arrived at in this letter by Fr. General and the members of his Council, I confirm it with my approval.

+ J. Pierre Boyer, Archbishop of Bourges, and Apostolic Administrator of the said Congregation.

Your Grace,

In the interests of our Northern Province, we think it our duty to ask your permission for the opening in September next of our novitiate. The following are the reasons which dictate this request:

1. The setting up of the Province has greatly helped to calm people and restore peace, which last will be still better realized once the Province has all its constitutive elements in place as soon as possible. We have our Petite Oeuvres, our Scholasticate, and only the Novitiate is lacking. As long as we do not have that, there will be a certain unease of spirit and heart.
2. You will be aware how delicate our position is with regard to the German government, both as regards our New Britain mission and the issue of our German subjects' education. We have in our Province twenty or so candidates ready to enter the novitiate; seventeen or eighteen are German. Experience has shown us that it becomes more and more difficult for these subjects to go to France for their education.

Different documents give proof of this, both for parents and those who present the certificates. For a variety of reasons they are afraid they will compromise themselves in relation to the German government of which, in many instances, they are the employees and agents. This latter reason seems particularly pertinent to us. We cannot send to France our young men, foreseeing that the problems arising from their departure will pre-dispose our benefactors against us and, perhaps, the government, which will make use of it to oppose our plans for the advancement of our missions.

Faced with such serious considerations if we do not have our own novitiate, we shall be, in conscience, obliged to keep our young students in the Province's houses and see to it that they study philosophy until such time as we can have our own novitiate. This would, undoubtedly, be a great inconvenience, but much less so than the prospects of sending our young men to France.

3. Salzburg would seem to be the place where the novitiate should be. It is there by right already since permission was given by Rome, and over a number of years it has functioned well there. It is the only one of our houses where the novitiate can be on its own without the proximity of another undertaking which would encroach and interfere with perfect regularity. At the moment Salzburg has a Petite Oeuvre with a certain number of scholastics present on the teaching staff.

This is a prerequisite as there has to be work going on in this house. But it is the second German Petite Oeuvre which should be advantageously replaced there by a novitiate. The Petite Oeuvre would join with that of Tilburg, Holland. With a novitiate Salzburg would have the undertaking which best suits the splendour of the buildings. The Petite Oeuvre is removed and the personnel in charge would remain for the novitiate. Accordingly its establishment would not be a burden for the Province. On the contrary it would make possible a recalling to the scholasticate of a certain number of our young students. Fr. Hartzler could easily take over as Novice Master while continuing as Superior since the community is not very large. He could in particular accept German postulants since he knows the language quite well. We could, therefore, in this way have ready much earlier a certain number of priests available for the missions. Appeals have already been made. Fr. Hartzler is, one acknowledges, a member of the Provincial Council, but this does not take up too much of his time and it is enough that we meet each other three or four times a year. It isn't necessary that he remain on as bursar. This bursar issue is not as complicated as it may appear from a distance. The work which Fr. Hartzler would undertake is not likely to prevent him from exercising his other responsibilities.

Fr. Kuntz seems to us to have the necessary qualities to be socius (assistant to the Novice Master), speaking German perfectly, serious-minded, balanced. He does not meet the age required by the Constitutions, but we have to deal with the circumstances such as they present themselves, and act in the best interests. If there are some issues not quite in keeping with the way things should desirably be in a Province about to begin, they will disappear quite soon.

Besides, Your Grace, Salzburg is considered by the German government as a house which is as German as can possibly be. When it becomes known that an important undertaking has begun there, it will be recommendation for us and our missions.

For all these reasons above we consider that we should ask Your Grace to approve of a novitiate at the end of this school year. The Rome rescript allows us in law to have a novitiate. It is no longer other than a question of fact which depends on the authority presiding over the direction of the Society.

We have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble servants in C.J.

L. Hartzler, Miss.SC.

C. Ramot, MSC, Sup.Prov.

With reservations about all which relates to me personally, and my qualities for this undertaking, and with reservations about some details.

We the undersigned members of the General Council, are in agreement with our Northern confrères' request, with number 1, wholeheartedly, and for the rest mainly because of the political argument presented in number 2.

To Father Jean Vaudon, MSC, Superior, Chezal-Benoît.

Issoudun, April 2, 1895

Dear Father Vaudon,

I. I immediately did what you asked of me. Fr. Maillard replied that: 1, he owes nothing to Chezal-Benoît; 2, that he paid Fr. Godinoux for the whole month of April; 3, that he made advance payments of 500 francs (about 1,630 euros) for the month of May.

II. As regards the masses, Fr. Piperon received the stipends; he said so to Fr. Comte, and it was from this money that he gave him he paid for his trip to Bourges.

III. Father Godinoux left 250 francs in the account, more than was needed to write the cheque for 200 francs on the first of April. It was you yourself who wrote about this to Fr. Maillard. If the scholasticate cannot make do with its allowance, this is due either to excessive expenditure or lack of supervision or carelessness about money. A good administration must relate expenditure to intake and know how to hold back on needs to avoid a deficit. The Superior has the right and responsibility to keep financial matters in check; the bursar needs to keep him informed each month, in keeping with our regulations about intake and outlay, and taking care to avoid contracting debt.

One must absolutely see to it that everything is balanced since it is quite impossible for the mother house, with all the demands on it, to continue meeting deficits. One can and one must be self-sufficient, since, otherwise, we shall be quickly on the way to ruin. We must all make it our business to avoid all superfluous expenses and those extras which are in no way foreseen, or catered for, in the rule.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: It seems that when Fr. Batard left Chezal-Benoît he left quite a considerable amount of money in the account and provisions for the whole of winter.

The issue of scholastics on military service to be regularized in keeping with the requirements of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

1. Fr. Vaudon referred to the fact that the scholastics Bouellat, Kopp and Soucille, living in barracks, had not yet been regularized; the view was taken that it is a matter of urgency to write about this either to those involved themselves or to the bishops where they are posted.

Fr. Fernand Hartzler authorized to begin negotiations for the sale of the Glastonbury property to the town.

2. A letter was read in which Fr. Hartzler made it clear that Glastonbury was already an unfavourable setting for an establishment such as a college and would now become more so, due to the close proximity of a hospital for contagious diseases which the town council plans to build quite near our house. He, Fr. Hartzler, thinks that the town council might consider buying our property if it was proposed to it through the mediation of certain influential people. The Council took the view that in this case every effort must be made to bring about the sale since it would be advantageous for the Society to get rid of this Glastonbury house in favour of a more suitable place.

Northern Province members called to orders.

3. On the recommendation of Fr. Ramot and the good reports which they merited, the following were called to orders:

- a. The Priesthood
Brothers Théodore Okhuijzen; Joseph Wemmers; Jean Nieuwenhuis; Conrad Lindeboom; and Jean Dicks
- b. Diaconate

Issoudun, April 7, 1895

Madame,

I would ask you to excuse me for not replying sooner to your letter about the house intended to be our procure in Marseilles. The fact is that we do not have the requisite personnel available to take it over. Our Oceania missions have taken a great number of our members for some time now. Nonetheless, this procure greatly appeals to us and our keenest wish is to set ourselves up there as soon as possible. At the same time the Colomb ground next to our house and which we would like to have has been sold without our knowledge, so I am informed by Canon Caseneuve. We no longer see the possibility of undertaking a serious work in this area.

Here then is what the Council decided: you should sell your house, which is continuously deteriorating for lack of repairs, and then you can place the money with a trustworthy bank and thereby make the interest available to dear Fr. Jullien to meet the needs of his mission. But the capital provided by your good son will remain at the disposition of the Society which at an appropriate time will be made use of to buy another house as a procure. If you so wish, Madame, send us the interest money and we ourselves would forward it to Fr. Jullien, which perhaps would be the more practical thing to do. Or indeed, if you so wish, have the house repaired, bringing it up to its proper value, and send the lease to your son. You can make the choice yourself as to what is best. I cannot end, Madame, without thanking you for all your kindness and the keen interest you have in our Society.

My most respectful regards and appreciation in C.J.

You have quickly got on your high horse! I forwarded to you quite simply the information made available to me. If there's error or exaggeration, I am not responsible for it. In any event, I do not see why you contacted me in regard to your queries about finances. I am not at all in charge and cannot be engaging myself with such-like details. There is a general bursar and it's to him you should address yourself, and then to Fr. Morisseau about your mass stipends.

If you have any complaints to make, requests to put forward, abuses to be taken note of, bring all this before the Council which has, also, the responsibility "for not letting the truth be contaminated", and taking care that everything is carried out in an orderly and proper manner, but please do not make me responsible for issues in which I have no part to play. For quite sometime I have been burdened with such a role in the Society and you will understand the serious inconvenience of this. I would like to know, my friend, who refused you money for your forthcoming trip to Normandy and the necessary contribution which you were impelled to solicit elsewhere. I do not at all doubt the inexhaustible kindness (financial) of your friends, but I do believe also that our Congregation can itself also lay more than adequate claim to this virtue. If you think not, consult the Council and you will be enlightened on this matter.

I am pleased to become aware of the zeal you demonstrate in providing those sacred objects which were wanting in the scholasticate chapel; for such I thank you. Thanks also for your greetings for Easter. I hope the Lord will favourably answer them. I am, as well, appreciative of the efforts you have made to bring about peace of soul and joy of heart.

Cheerio, Father.

As always, wholly yours in C.J.

Dear beloved Fathers and Scholastics,

I thank you sincerely for your good wishes. It was a most joyful experience for me. The sentiments expressed went straight to my heart. The assurance you provide of your attachment to our little Society, of the orderliness and good motivation which animate you, your obedience and the manner in which you strive towards religious perfection, gives me great pleasure. I see in all of you true apostles of the Sacred Heart and I do not forget you in my prayers.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I am very sorry about your accident. Happily it does not have serious consequences; you should make an act of thanksgiving to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Fr. Piperon was asked to convey to you my sympathies straightaway. I immediately made known your plight to the confrères at the bursary. Do you know how Fathers Hériault and Laliaux (your best friends otherwise) reacted to your serious plight when I told them how exactly you escaped from the vehicle? With a burst of laughter!!! It's shocking. I also went on to tell them that I would denounce them to you... I keep my word.

Cheerio, my friend. Take care of yourself and get better quickly.

Dear Fr. Barral,

I thank you most appreciatively for your good wishes for the feast and those from your little community. Keep praying for me, my friend; I greatly need prayers; for my part I do not forget you.

All you tell me about your house greatly pleases me. The good spirit and the religious spirit, prevailing there is greatly comforting to me.

You do well to pay attention to the religious formation of your youngsters. Apply yourself to making good assessments when accepting, and do not keep those who do not appear to you as having a vocation. Pauca sed bona (few but good). We have had too many in this respect who deceived us. The youngsters are a hundred times better off at Jesi than in Rome. I would myself like to go and pay you a visit shortly when the weather is better and acknowledge in person my gratitude to the Count and Countess.

I gather that dear Fr. Carrière is at Jesi; give my regards to him, and also to Fathers Ceresi, Diluzio and Brother Bonnaccorci. I congratulate them on their commitment.

Cheerio, Father.
I bless you all in C.J.

Paris, April 17, 1895

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I thank you in all sincerity for your good wishes on the feast. They make me happy because I know they are sincere. I for my part do not forget you. It's in Paris that your letter reached me. I return to Issoudun tomorrow morning. Problems are not easing up with taxes lodged against Congregations which are not certified and we are among them, as is more than likely. I don't know how we are going to cope if we are to meet our expenses. We must do our utmost to diminish them. Our missions give us grounds for hope in the midst of all our misfortunes. Like yourself, I am delighted to see them set up, being an honour to, and forceful impact for, our little Society. It will also be an accolade for us to have contributed towards their being set up.

Peace and unity would appear to have come back to us. Several of our young religious led astray by those ringleaders have shown signs of sincere regret and have returned to the Congregation.

Cheerio, my friend Oremus pro invicem.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Council Meeting, April 20, 1895

All present except the laid-up Fr. Vaudon.

The request of the Northern confrères for a novitiate.

1. A letter to the Apostolic Visitor, from the Northern confrères, requesting the setting-up of a novitiate in Salzburg, was read, followed by a letter from Fr. Hartzler, one of the signatories, setting out the implications of certain reservations expressed by him, followed by a letter from Fr. Vaudon favouring purely and simply the request. The majority of the Council think likewise, but one member is of the view that he cannot sign without reservations, and requests more time to reflect on the issue. A final verdict was held over.

Brother Royet accepted for final profession, Brother Beatty for renewal of temporary vows, and Thomas Hodgins for the novitiate.

2. Fr. O'Mahony, Watertown Superior, supports the written request of the scholastic Etienne Royet for perpetual vows, the renewal of temporary vows for the lay brother Richard Beatty, and Thomas Hodgins for entry to the Watertown novitiate.

A request from Fr. Védère to return to France.

3. Fr. Védère has written to Fr. General that he would like to speak to him personally about matters, and requests permission to return to France in order to do so. The view was taken that there are drawbacks involved by giving permission for such a trip, and one would like to know the reason since it could be misinterpreted. In any event, it does not seem to be necessary when he (Védère) could say whatever he has to say in a confidential letter. He, besides, also requests a Visitor; it is agreed that a visit is a prerequisite, but one is not in a position to do so at the moment.

100 Francs made available to Brother Henry's parents.

4. A lay brother postulant, proposed by Fr. Piperon, was accepted and 100 francs were made available to the parents of Brother Henry in Rome.

Watertown Assistants.

5. At the request of Fr. O'Mahony, Fathers l'Espérance, Lehane and Martin were confirmed as his Assistants.

L 18950420

To Cardinal Monaco la Valetta, Cardinal Protector, Rome.

Issoudun, April 20, 1895

Distinguished Cardinal Protector,

We are undergoing at this moment a quite sensitive trial which we were far from expecting. The Archbishop of Bourges has forwarded to us a decree from the Holy Office, dated this April 3, forbidding once again all copies of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statue where the child is standing before his mother who is on her knees, and setting it out that the new model approved by Rome where the Infant is in the arms of the Blessed Virgin should be the only one used and put before the faithful for veneration. It is with urgency that we wish to meet the requirements on this issue and also to take note of the two works which are mentioned: The Way of the Cross of the Sacred Heart and The Rosary of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, both works published with the approval of the Bishop. Submissive children of Holy Church, we look upon it as a sacred duty to obey blindly all that has been laid down.

But we cannot hide from Your Eminence the deep pain which afflicts us when we read these words in the decree: "Sperandum fuerat has Supremae Congregationis praescriptiones debita obedientia excipiendas esse et executioni fideliter mandandas. At contra non sine aegritudine compertum est imagines non probatas pluribus exemplaribus iterum impressas passim evulgari et fidelibus distribui adversus decreta et mentem S. Congregationis."

"One would have hoped that the recommendations of this Congregation would be obediently received and faithfully carried out. But, on the contrary, and not without disappointment, one has become aware of these unapproved representations once again being freshly circulated and published here and there, and made available to the faithful, against the decrees and viewpoint of the Sacred Congregation."

It is good and proper that Your Grace becomes aware that ever since the prescription we have totally disengaged from making available for public veneration the statues which portray the Child Jesus before his Mother. It has always been the new prescribed model which we have put forward and made our own. This cannot be gainsaid and is incontestable.

Meanwhile, Your Eminence, if we have presented in consideration of the faithful's private piety pictures and medals of the former (now condemned) model, it was with the support and full, entire, approval of Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne of Bourges. His Grace consulted the Holy See as soon as he became aware of the February 28, 1875 decree, asking if this disapproval was applicable to the Issoudun statue crowned in the name of Pius IX on September 8, 1869, and reproductions of it for private devotion. His Eminence Cardinal Patrizi replied immediately in the name of the Holy Father with the enclosed letter which was never published, in keeping with the wishes of His Eminence, and the existence of which undoubtedly the Sacred Congregation of the Holy Office is unaware. I enclose it here with the correspondence which passed between Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne and Cardinal Patrizi. Your Eminence can see for himself that we have done no more than follow the directions of our illustrious Archbishop and acted in conformity on all issues with the instructions and decisions received from Rome. If we then came to be in error, it was quite involuntary since we were acting in complete good faith. Accordingly, I would in all humility ask Your Grace, who has been good enough to take us under his protection, to clarify the matter with the Sacred Congregation and its illustrious head. The Holy Office Congregation, according to the documents here enclosed, will take note of the appropriateness of our behaviour and the authenticity of our intentions, and will come to realize, I confidently hope, that we do not merit to be reproached for the disobedience which it considers it necessary to identify with us. But you may assure His Eminence that now, on knowing his negative verdict, we shall without reservations accept his proposals. From today we shall make it known in our Annals that the representation (of our Lady and Jesus) must no longer be promoted, even in private worship, only the new representation is acceptable, the other, and former, one forbidden by the Holy See.

I allow myself to make a further plea to the Sacred Congregation, namely not to make public, if at all possible, this new decree, or at least to omit the phrase where we are charged with being disobedient which would serve in all likelihood to bring discredit on our Society which is so committed to the Church and to the Holy See, bringing worry and concern to the hearts of the faithful.

I kiss Your Eminence's hand, asking that my deep regard in C.J. be accepted.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Dear Father,

Fr. Morisseau will send you the list for ordinations. All those put forward were not accepted; some are adjourned. Yes, it is indeed Fr. Durin's fault if the facts set down are not correct. I told him this in my letter. Fr. Hartzler has been asked to rewrite the history of our missions as Fr. Jouët's book is out of print. It is very likely that in his letter to Fr. Durin he was looking for information. His Grace, whom I saw yesterday, awaits the section dealing with the Province, and complains about the delay (for which Fr. Morisseau is responsible, since he wishes to express absolutely his reservations). But His Grace wants all out signatures. Come to Issoudun with Fr. Piperon when you are on your way to Normandy and we shall all sign it.

Council Meeting, April 27, 1895

All in attendance.

Fr. Renouf accepted as a postulant.

1. Fr. Renouf is a Canon of the Coutance diocese, aged 68, but still quite active and likely to be of service to the Congregation as a preacher. Besides, having a pension of 3 or 4 thousand francs, he would not be a financial burden on the Congregation.

Candidates called to orders.

2. The following lists those to be ordained on June 29.

Priesthood: Brother Meynier; diaconate: Brothers François Boudin, Quoirier and Sergent; subdiaconate: Brother Veckel; minor orders: Brothers Poupenay, Burke, Pages and Auguste Boudin; tonsure: Brothers Buckley, Gouffé and Tacher. Brother Rasele Régis will be called to tonsure and minor orders if he passes the canonical examination.

Decision about Brother McCabe.

Before he is put forward for the subdiaconate, further information is needed about the illness which affects him, and which would appear to be epilepsy.

Louis Eraud accepted for first profession.

3. The lay brother novice Eraud is accepted for first three-yearly profession. The postulant Duclou, formerly a student at the Petite Oeuvre who left because of sickness but then returned to become a lay brother, has now felt well enough to be able to study, asking that he return as a scholastic. Before acceding to his request, the advice of the Dr. will be sought in order to ascertain if he is capable of pursuing these studies.

A novitiate granted to the Northern Province.

4. The request of Fr. Ramot for a Salzburg novitiate next year was given consideration. Among the reasons he put forward one alone seems to be worthy of serious consideration: the difficulty involved in sending Germans to the French novitiate given the dislike of that nation (Germany) for France. The Council members, some completely so, others mainly so, for that reason, subscribed to Father Ramot's request, while looking upon this project as an immature one due to the lack of personnel, that is to say experienced personnel capable of undertaking these works.

Your Grace,

I am pleased to present for your approval two requests which have been put to us by the Council members of the Northern Province.

The first aims at officially attaching the New Britain mission to this province since it is a German protectorate. We wholeheartedly agree since the reasons put forward appear compelling to us.

The second request is that for a novitiate in Salzburg, already approved of by the Holy See 5 or 6 years ago. It would appear to be a requirement at the present time since, in addition to the political justification for it accepted by all, any compelling of the Dutch and Germans to make their novitiate in France, now that they are a province, would again recreate the problems of the past which have been so unfortunate for us. At the present time there's unity and peace, and the granting of this concession can only contribute advantageously in the circumstances.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

18950506X

Council Meeting, May 6, 1895

All in attendance except Fr. Vandel.

1. The approval of His Grace, the Apostolic Visitor, of the take-over by the Northern Antwerp Province of the New Britain mission and the setting-up of a novitiate in this province at Salzburg.

Fr. General made the Council aware of the Archbishop's approval of the New Britain mission by the Northern Province and the creation itself of the Northern Province.

2. Fr. General read the draft of a letter to the Archbishop in which he made known to His Grace that nothing had been asked so far about such a right of association, most likely because we are not considered as religious subject to this pretence of a law. If matters were changed with respect to us, he (the General) stated that it was his intention to follow the procedures set out during the Berry Religious Week, that of passive resistance, and he hopes, as well, that we may be able to evade this requirement yet further if the Archbishop continues to look upon us in relation to the Government as diocesan priests, and our educational establishments considered as diocesan also. He requested letters of incorporation for those confrères who haven't yet received them.

A letter from Cardinal Ledochowski, Prefect of Propaganda, which proposes to separate the German part of New Guinea.

3. The letter requested our views on separating from the jurisdiction of Bishop Navarre that part of New Guinea which is under German rule. Since the Northern Province confrères are raising this issue, the view was taken that His Eminence should be asked to bring this about if at all possible.

Fr. Godinoux's financial losses.

4. The unhealthy financial state of the Chezal-Benoît house was considered, specifically in relation to Fr. Godinoux's financial incompetence and a likely deficit of thousands of francs. It was agreed that he should be asked to send in his accounts as soon as possible. The Council, while recognizing his fine qualities, is agreed that he does not have the qualities necessary to be a bursar and intends to have him replaced. The double financial arrangements of the house are to be deplored and it was agreed that there should only be one account with Fr. Piperon and advisers supervising expenses. It was unfortunate, also, that the bursar (Godinoux) was too identifiably associated with the scholasticate, whereas he should as well be equally involved with the novitiate.

Brother Raphael accepted for final vows.

5. At his request and with the support of the Superior, Brother Raphael was accepted for final vows at the end of his second three years of temporary vows.

Some requests from Fr. Renouf.

6. He would like to associate his assets with the institute and suggests that his house at Fermanville (Manche) should become an MSC foundation. While awaiting this to happen he puts forward certain proposals to make use of the revenue. These proposals can be accepted. He then asked if, in the event of his not being able to become a religious, he might stay on as someone helping out in one of our houses. The view was taken that it might not be wise to accede to such a request.

Your Grace,

Issoudun, May 7, 1895

I read in the Universe that the Superior Generals of the different Congregations, or their representatives, are at the house of the Eudists in Paris to consider what their approach should be as regards the new taxes, and all agreed on passive resistance. I was not asked to this meeting and I don't know if the Superior of our house in Paris was invited. If this pernicious law begins, Your Grace, to affect us, I think that we also must follow the procedures set out at the Berry religious week, beginning April 27, that is to say oppose and resist it. I do not, however, think that we shall be subject to it. For these reasons:

1. Following the vote about the right to impose taxes and applicable to approved Congregations or not, nothing was ever asked of us. Now the new tax of 0.30 and 40% was only voted on in order to ratify this usurped right and in order to relate it to Congregations primarily subject to it.

2. The Government looks, no doubt, upon us as auxiliary priests, under a simple title, and, which is true, paying all the taxes in accordance with normal legal procedures and, as well, all the registration charges like everyone else where it is a question of buying or selling. This circumstance, so it seems to me, makes us free of all worries and concerns.

3. Archbishop Marchal, following our expulsion, in order to meet the challenge of any future persecutions, set himself up as the tenant of our Sacred Heart buildings at Issoudun, giving us all incorporation titles in his diocese in keeping with recommendations from Rome, such-wise that those who live here, just like those at Chezal-Benoît, are identifiably subjects of the Archbishop. There is no need, then, Your Grace, to do anything other than leave things (legally that is) as they are. Moreover, I make bold to ask Your Grace to be good enough to continue holding the lease which you were kind enough to sign without any payment last June, which will end at the beginning of July this year with a 9-year lease for example, and the right to cancel every three years and, likewise, make available to all my confrères who work in your diocese new letters of incorporation like the copy here enclosed. By this means we could defend ourselves all the more advantageously if we came under attack.

Hoping for a favourable reply, I have the honour to be Your Grace's most honourable and obedient servant in C.J.

Your Grace,

The letter I wrote to you was meant to make Your Grace aware of our exact position viz a viz the Government and the new legislation which has been passed. I would not be able to explain it any better. In order to meet any new challenges I would ask Your Grace to be kind enough to continue holding the lease and make available to us the documents incorporating us in your diocese, as also carried out by your worthy predecessor.

I am drawn to tell you straightaway that the section of the Constitutions which you bring to my attention has not been overlooked. Two years ago I visited our Rome house with Fr. Morisseau and all was quiet and peaceful. One of our Rome confrères recently made complaints and requested a canonical visit, stating that if it didn't take place he would refer the matter to the Apostolic Visitor. We replied immediately that he could rest assured as the visit he sought would take place during the last fortnight of this month. We are disappointed that this good priest hadn't more patience and failed to take any notice of our intentions. If Fr. Vaudon, who is due to return on Wednesday, were not away, we would have forwarded immediately to Your Grace the decision you sought, signed by all the Council members; we shall forward it to you, then, at the end of the week. It is a pity, Your Grace, that as Apostolic Visitor of our Congregation your health does not make it possible for you to visit our houses yourself, and you would observe that we overlook nothing in the way of seeing to it that everything is carried out according to the Constitutions.

I have the honour to be most respectfully and appreciatively Your Grace's most humble and obedient filial servant in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: I would like, respectfully, to ask Your Grace to write 'personal' on the envelope when the address is not in his handwriting. With an incoming mail each day of between 60 and 80 letters at least, I hand all over to the Secretariat of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association. There might be embarrassment if the employees in the office came to know what Your Grace had written to me.

Approval of plans for the Salzburg church.

1. It will cost approximately 14 to 15,000 florins. The Council agreed that this church, the plans of which were scrutinized, is an absolute requirement, and that for the rest it is proposed to build it as economically as possible, the Council willingly accepting the approximate cost.

Brother Badaroux released from temporary vows.

2. The scholastic, who went home to help his family, thought mistakenly that he was still part of the Congregation. Now, set free from his erroneous thinking, he asks to take definite leave of the Congregation and this request is granted.

A contribution of 600 francs allocated to Fr. Calloway's parents.

3. Fr. Calloway at Glastonbury is allowed to have his mass stipends made available to him in order to support his parents, since the Glastonbury house cannot provide the money. He will have an annual sum of 600 francs made available to him from the general bursary account.

Repairs to Pingaudière.

4. Repair work at a cost of 5 to 6,000 francs has been sanctioned for the Pingaudière house which belongs to the Society.

Fathers Piperon and Lanctin selected for the Rome visit.

5. The Rome confrères, despite their awareness of a canonical visit during the last two weeks of May, wrote to the Archbishop, the Apostolic Visitor, and he forwarded to us their complaints in the hand of his private secretary. The decision was taken that Fathers Piperon and Lanctin would go there on the 24th of the present month and this decision will be made known to His Grace the Apostolic Visitor.

The reply of the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda with reference to a division of the Apostolic Vicariate of New Guinea. In the same letter to His Grace the Apostolic Visitor there will be included Fr. General's reply to the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda's letter in which he proposed to separate German New Guinea from the Apostolic Vicariate of Bishop Navarre. In his reply, given the comments made by the Northern Provincial and his Council, His Grace is asked to postpone matters until the forthcoming establishment of these confrères in Germany.

Council Meetings, May 23, June 19, 1895

All in attendance:

A communication from the Archbishop of Bourges forwarding a decree (from Rome) forbidding the earlier presentation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

The meeting was greatly taken up with the Rome visit of Fathers Piperon and Lanctin. In addition, Fr. General made it known to the Council members that all were, with himself, mandated by His Grace the Apostolic Visitor to meet him about an important issue. It was decided that they would all go to Bourges next day where His Grace would read the decree from the Holy Office forbidding the availability of any pictures of the former presentation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in public worship. Measures would be undertaken to carry out the requirements of this decree.

A discussion about the woeful moral atmosphere of the Rome house.

At the meeting on June 19, following the report of those who went to Rome, the regrettable moral state of this house was spoken about, with several people in the house opposed to their Superior, giving rise to intrigues involving the Cardinal Vicar and the need to bring back, at least some section of it, the Jesi Petite Oeuvre to Rome.

Your Grace,

I am pleased to forward Your Grace my letter to Cardinal Monaco, Secretary of the Holy Office Congregation. I add to it all the official documents, the originals of which we have, and which make clear and exonerate us of blame for being disobedient to those decrees of the Holy See which were inflicted upon us. I would like very much if Your Grace were to become aware of this, and you will note that we are completely innocent of the reproaches directed at us, and will easily understand the importance we associate with this issue. Since the best interests of our Congregation, which has been so shaken, rest in your fatherly hands, I would ask Your Grace to be kind enough to endorse my letter to His Eminence and through him to his master, the sovereign Pontiff. At the same time I am forwarding a little work to you titled "The Two Statutes"; on page 8 Your Grace will find the sought-after explanations. Here are the two leaflets placed under interdict by the decree for public use and you will note in what sense they were put together. If they had, quite simply, on the cover: "Way of the Cross" without adding "of the Sacred Heart", and on the other "The Rosary" without adding "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart", since that doctrinal devotion is not criticized, I can well believe that the Sacred Congregation would not have disapproved since there are different formulas used when explaining the mysteries, and in the different books for the usage of the faithful. There is not one preacher preaching these two devotions from the pulpit who would always say exactly the same thing.

Rome has spoken and that's enough for us.

I have the honour to be, most respectfully, Your Grace's most humble and obedient filial servant in C.J.

Issoudun, June 6, 1895

Dear Fr. Jouët,

Thank you for your nice letter. I am sorry you were away from Rome during Fr. Pipéron's visit as you would have greatly helped him in his endeavours. He had the copy of the decree which I forwarded to him, together with all the other explanatory documents. I also gave him a letter for Cardinal Monaco, and others for the Holy Office assessor in which I explained everything.

Try and meet him as soon as possible in order to discuss the issues with him. Ask him to let you have all the documents I made available to him,

The Cardinal Vicar might in the circumstances be helpful to us.

Cheerio, my friend.

Issoudun, June 9, 1895

Dear Father,

1. I am leaving immediately for Rome where I have been called by Fr. Pipéron. Do not mention where I have gone.

2. I have had news from the Lyons Apostolic Work informing me that a chalice and vestments are being forwarded to Fr. Meunier to take to the missions. Make his parents welcome to his first mass.

3. Yes, keep Our Lord apart from the Blessed (the then Blessed Margaret Mary Alacoque). You may receive them in your chapel given that they do not constitute a group.

4. Yes, I have replied to Fr. Pacaud to cut off his beard and not to let it grow until he receives official news of his departure. (!)

5. Fr. Suchet has said nothing to me. He is a sad figure and I do not approve of his coming to Issoudun without you being there with him.

Cheerio; wholly yours in C.J.

Fr. Carrière's report on the Holy Office audience June 11, 1895, authenticated by Fr. Chevalier.

On June 11, 1895, the Very Reverend Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, accompanied by Fr. Carrière, Procurator, and Father Védère of the same Society, both living in Rome, was received in special audience by one of the more important officials of the Holy Office. (Monsignor Fausti, Holy Office assessor.)

The purpose of this audience was to seek certain explanations about the Holy Office's recent decree about the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart presentation, which laid aside the promotion of the former Issoudun model and forbade any promotion other than the new presentation, whereas the previous representation was the only one approved by the Supreme Roman Congregation.

The Reverend Father (General) had enquired as to whether or not the decree directly referred also to the Issoudun statue crowned by Pius IX in 1869 and presented for the veneration of the faithful since the association began, and those other statues of the same model venerated in several sanctuaries before the decree, and whether they also would need to be substituted by the new one prescribed for Issoudun, and whether it should stay as it is given the veneration of which it is the object, and to do otherwise would be contrary to the spirit of the decree and, as well, there would be deep problems occasioned by its disappearance, not to speak of the scandal which would affect pious worshippers.

As for the other statues accommodated up to now, they will have to be replaced by the new model... "quantum fieri protest et ubi toleratae prudunt caute pridenterque removeri et earum loci probatos substitui praecept" ("insofar as that is possible and where they have been tolerated [they], insofar as it can be done prudently and smoothly, must be removed and replaced by approved statues").

Fr. General likewise enquired if the blame for such disobedience attributed to the promoters of the former representation was directed against the Issoudun missionaries and the reply was in the negative, the official adding that blame was being apportioned in general and applies specifically to those who propagate these representations in spite of Rome's condemnation. It was, accordingly, laid down that from now on under no pretext whatsoever is the propagation of these representations in any way permissible.

As for the two works: "The Sacred Heart Way of the Cross" and "The Rosary of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart", it was stated that the teaching contained in them was "irreproachable", but as regards public worship one must follow the guidelines approved by the Church.

This report was written by Fr. Carrière and acknowledged as correct by the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart present at the audience.

Rome, June 13, 1895

Your Grace,

I am taken up with the two visitors dealing with the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statue issue. At a meeting which I had with Monsignor Fausti, a Holy Office assessor, His Excellency, who was aware of the contents of the document sent to Cardinal Monaco, frankly and positively informed us:

1. that the charge of disobedience contained in the decree was not directed at us, but only at those who had unreasonably spread reproductions of the earlier presentation, and that we could rest assured in this respect;

2. that the Issoudun statue crowned in 1869 should stay where it is and that it would be contrary to the decree itself and the thinking of the Holy Office to change anything because of the harmful effect and scandal which would result;
3. as for the statues of the former model which are elsewhere available to the veneration of the faithful, they need to be substituted insofar as this is possible by the new one, but cautiously and prudently, and if their being put aside gives rise to problems and disedifies, it is best to hold over for the time being, but, above all, there should not be urgency if there are significant consequences to be feared;
4. that henceforth only the new presentation must be propagated in order to bring about uniformity in the association. Monsignor Fausti has given us permission to publish these findings if it's necessary.

The Visitors (those delegated officially to visit and survey) have, in keeping with the regulations, made a canonical visit to the Rome house and have handed me their report. I myself interviewed everybody. The majority of the scholastics are characterized by a good outlook. The complaints made to Your Grace are identified with two or three scholastics who are difficult character-wise and who are, unfortunately, supported by two priests who are opposed to the Superior of the house, among them Fr. Védère, about whom Your Grace asked me for information. He is good, pious, devoted, zealous, but not very level of judgment and of weak personality.

I was honoured to have a meeting with Cardinal Parocchi, His Holiness' Vicar, who put before me his expectations on the Jesi issue and we were both in agreement. We shall put before Your Grace the measures undertaken by the Issoudun Council, both in regard to this undertaking and the Rome house.

We had an audience today with the Holy Father, who received us most graciously and asked about Your Grace. This morning I met the Propaganda Cardinal Prefect who spoke most approvingly to us about our missions and would appear to take a lively interest in us.

We have the honour to be most respectfully Your Grace's most humble and obedient filial servants in C.J.

Marseilles, June 16, 2895

Dear Father,

I arrived here in Marseilles yesterday evening at 7.20, met at the station by the Canon, Mademoiselle Marie and Fr. Renaud. The delight was evident on both sides. Oh what a wonderful family and how they love you! This morning I met your kind, dear sister, being very happy to renew acquaintance with her; she seemed to me to be in quite good health. She was very happy to get news of you. I leave Marseilles tomorrow evening at 8pm, getting to Issoudun on Tuesday at 3.30pm.

Many thanks for all your help and support.

Issoudun, June 23, 1895

Your Grace,

I am back from Rome since Tuesday morning, the two Visitors (of the house) having returned on the previous Saturday. I came back by way of Marseilles where the concerns of our missions' procure demanded my presence. I met Bishop Robert who is very sympathetic to us and would very much like to have a house of our Society in his diocese, which is so devoted to the Sacred Heart. I shall discuss this with Your Grace when I meet you. We shall also forward, shortly, the report on our visit to the Rome house.

I discussed our missions with the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda who seemed to me very well disposed to us, informing me that the Sacred Congregation, having consulted with Bishop Navarre, had handed over quite recently for compelling reasons the German part of New Guinea to a German-speaking institute, but we would have time to establish ourselves in Germany before the final arrangement is reached. He went on to add that the Vicariate Apostolic of the Gilbert and Ellis Islands had been approved and shortly I would be asked to choose one of the confrères as its bishop. We see nobody other than Fr. Bontemps.

Meanwhile, I am forwarding to Your Grace the results of work I had done on the two Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statues, bringing together for that all the documents which could clarify the issue. The new decree is to be found there, together with the explanations provided by Monsignor Fausti, the Holy Office's assessor; he is the son of the former apostolic intermediary of the Archbishop of Bourges. Your Grace will be very interested to read this. While authorizing me to publish it, it was not desirable that I should put my name to it. Faced with this request, I felt I could not have put it in an appendix, as was the case with the book (Chevalier's "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart") which I am having reprinted by the new Chartreuse Fathers of Our Lady des Pies, "The history of two statues". We shall bring out a brochure of our own which will not be made available to the public. The different editors of the Analecta and Ephémérides in Rome, to whom I spoke, all told me that if the Holy Office had been aware of the reply by Cardinal Patrizi and Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne's letters, it would have withheld publishing the recent decree, and that it would be best to keep these documents secret since they could be helpful to us later. I present to you then, Your Grace, this little brochure for your consideration and approval, with the request to make the necessary changes you deem appropriate.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant and son in C.J.

Fr. Mathieu appointed in charge of replacing Fr. Comte.

1. Having discussed changes in personnel at Rome, moving the Petite Oeuvre at Jesi to Rome, the setting up of a procure in Marseilles for the missions, and without reaching any definite decisions, it was agreed that Fr. Comte be given the opportunity to study for his licentiate and Fr. Mathieu would replace him as the head of Chezal-Benoît. Brother Cross will return to the scholasticate for the next school year. Brother McCabe cannot at present be put forward for Holy Orders since he has had several epileptic fits, the last on March 2 of this year and, consequently, one must await a sufficient lapse of time to make it prudent to draw the conclusion that no further attacks are likely. Meanwhile, he will continue his studies and help at the Petite Oeuvre.

The Sydney local Council and Fr. Tréand's prolonged term in office as Superior.

2. The decision was taken that the Sydney local Council, at the request of Fr. Tréand, should comprise Fathers Tierney, Merg and Vandel, with Fr. Tréand himself confirmed in office for a further three years as local Superior.

3. Various postulant candidates.

1. A young priest from the Montpellier diocese;
2. A teacher at Saint-Célestin, Mr. Barrot, who was not called to orders for health reasons.
3. Two Rome Petite Oeuvre pupils: Alliotta Rosario and Bernardino Valdambri.

A letter addressed to Cardinal Ledochowski on his priestly Golden Jubilee.

4. The General read to the Council a letter to be sent to the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda on his priestly Golden Jubilee.

A complaint from Fr. O'Mahony in Watertown.

A letter from Fr. O'Mahony complained that the Bishop had divided the large Watertown parish without adding anything to his parish which is too small given the personnel available to him in the house. His view is that following the foregoing observation (complaint) a new fondation in another country (Ireland?) now becomes imperative.

Council Meeting, July 1, 1895

All in attendance.

Indult with reference to Fr. Renouf.

1. An indult from the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars permitting Fr. Renouf, despite his advanced age and his being in another Congregation, to take the habit, was read out.

A congratulatory letter from the Archbishop.

2. A letter of his, congratulating the Superior General on accepting the Holy Office's decree, was read to the meeting, forbidding any promotion of the former Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statue. He is invited to go and see it at Touvent with the two Visitors from Rome.

Discussion about Fr. Ilge. Procedures to be followed.

3. Fr. General then presented what followed from a discussion with Fr. Carrière about Fr. Ilge. Since he was the recipient of an interdict published in the Cologne diocese, his native diocese, and yet continued to use the MSC title, it is absolutely imperative to expel him from the Congregation. The expulsion cannot take place with all the formalities of the law due to this individual's unwillingness. Fr. Benedetti, a Consultor with the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, is of the view that the procedures should be taken immediately leading to the expulsion, making it known to him by registered letter, of which the invoice should be kept, something which should be done three times. So advised, he will have no appeal to make in the way of vindicating himself, and shall himself see to disengagement from his vows. Accordingly, the Council confirms, as a requirement, Fr. Jean Ilge's expulsion and takes the decision to have the three legal summaries brought to his attention as soon as possible.

4. There followed a discussion about presenting the findings of the Rome visitation to the Archbishop and Apostolic Visitor. This report expresses concern about:

1. The problems of the Rome house and the people responsible, Fathers Védère and Benedetti, together with 3 scholastics, one Frenchman and two Germans, one of the latter having already left Rome for health reasons. Fr. Carrière, despite his excellent qualities, has contributed to the problem because of his cold, reserved, character and, otherwise, he had to bring about very important changes either in the material administration of the house or in restoring certain religious disciplinary regulations which had been very much overlooked.

2. Measures to be undertaken.

The measures to be taken to counteract this unhealthy state of affairs were set out. Move away all those who were the principal instigators, beginning immediately with Fr. Benedetti (he later became a bishop!), and the departure of Fr. Védère will also be seen to; the foregoing, insofar as it is possible, satisfying the Cardinal-Vicar whom the discontented group displeases as regards moving the Petite Oeuvre to Jesi (where it was imbalanced by leaving part of it in Jesi and bringing the rest to Rome). The regulations in the house will need to be changed wisely and put into effect at the beginning of the school year. Finally, Fr. Carrière should have one or two confrères made available to him who, well disposed, would help him to restore and maintain discipline.

Fr. Ramot's request to build is not authorized for the time being.

5. Letters from Fr. Ramot were read in which he requested permission to construct new buildings in order to house more comfortably his different communities. The price of these constructions could approximately be as high as 80 or 100 thousand francs. Having regard to the fact that the Antwerp financial situation is far from being clear, that the setting-up of a German house which is being considered would result in a diminution of the Antwerp personnel, and that even Fr. Ramot himself realizes he has problems affecting his present building situation, the Council is of the view that the moment has not yet arrived to embark on the projected buildings and, accordingly, considers that it should not give the permission requested of it.

Acceptance of different Petite Oeuvre postulants for the French and Northern novitiates.

6. Finally, the Petite Oeuvre students for the novitiate were selected. Those from the rhetoric year for the French novitiate, on the recommendation of Fr. Lanctin, the Director, are Gustave Desnoes, Antoine Paravy, Auguste Villard, Joseph Lecoq.

Two students from the second year, of advanced age and with little aptitude for rhetoric studies: Henri Tissier, Maximilien Branger. Barthélemy Fauvet was not accepted. Two third year English students who would have little to gain in the second year and rhetoric classes: Edmond Smith and Thomas Maher. A Rome student, Rosario Alliotta; Valdambri is sent away. 12 were accepted from the Northern Province: Antoine v.d. Bogaard, Gerard Vesters, Joseph Wendler, Joseph van Henkelom, Joseph Filbry, Alfons Van de Wouwer, Joseph Bruijn, Henri Blecker, Jan van der Bergh, Alfons Freson, Adrien Muskens, Joseph Winthuis.

July 2, 1895

Dedication of the new edition
(of the book entitled 'Our Lady of the Sacred Heart') to His Grace Archbishop Boyer of Bourges.

Your Grace,

It is in your fruitful and glorious episcopacy that this new edition of the book titled "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" is appearing. I am happy to place it at Your Grace's feet as a humble gesture of appreciation.

The devotion which it presents and endorses came into being in the very heart of your diocese, consecrated to Mary from the beginning of Christianity by one of Our Lord's seventy-two disciples. St. Ursin, thought to be the Nathanael of the Gospel, was sent by the apostles to these lands, making Bourges the centre of his ministry. His first concern was that of setting up in all the towns he visited churches not only to St. Stephen, at whose martyrdom he was present, but particularly to the Mother God whom he had the happiness of knowing during her life. Bourges was made her own under the title of Our Lady de Sales; the ancient Xoldun, the second town in the Province and rival of Avaric, was not forgotten by our saint. He went there to proclaim the word of salvation. Noting on the hill or fort which dominates the city a temple consecrated to Isis, mother of the sun, he smashed the idol and dedicated the temple to the true sun of justice. Since then the inhabitants of Xoldunen have always had a special devotion for the Blessed Virgin.

If then, Your Grace, the people of Bourges date their faith back to the apostles' time with respect to their knowledge and love of Mary, they were, likewise, drawn to worship of the Sacred Heart from the beginning of the apparitions. By way of remembering St. Chantal's brother, Archbishop Frémot of Bourges (1602-1621), the Visitation Sisters were soon set up in our diocese, Issoudun having one of their first convents and becoming a centre of devotion to the Heart of Jesus. Would not this conjunction of circumstances have a bearing on the choice Heaven made for our Berry and the town of Issoudun, to give rise to and promote a devotion which unifies at one and the same time the source of grace and its divine dispensation? The Sacred Heart of Jesus devotion was given to us at a time when already Christian society carried within itself the germs of the breakdown which are affecting it today. At this significantly ominous moment Our Lord offers it (the devotion) as a plank of salvation which can save us from shipwreck, but especially so as the remedy for the cure of all our evils. (The reference here is to St. Margaret Mary.) But can it be said that up to the present this remedy was applied in the appropriate circumstances when either ignored on the human side or justifiably so on God's side, it has remained without impact for two centuries? So it is that Jesus Christ, having pity on our unhappiness, inspired the thought of associating His Mother with this upturn, she who contributed so marvellously to his role and who knows so well its sovereign efficaciousness.

The hour of the bestowal of great mercy has arrived! Mary, whom we have always associated with all the Redemptive mysteries, could not remain indifferent to such a regeneration of modern society by the Heart of her divine Son. She needed a new name to signify her involvement in this saving work, that of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. The devotion entailed is indissolubly linked with that of the Sacred Heart, of which it is a corollary, a natural and necessary outcome. Accordingly, everything leads us to think that the devotion is on the threshold of a more complete expansion and will be officially proposed by the Pope to the piety of the faithful, and then we shall experience the salutary benefits of the divine promises. Consequently, Your Grace would appear to have been chosen to hasten the arrival of such a blessed day, and it will not be one of the last glories of your episcopate. Born in Paray-le-Monial, that town privileged above all others where the Sacred Heart revealed to Blessed (now Saint) Margaret Mary his merciful designs and cradled from your childhood in the love of Mary, nobody more than yourself can better take hold of this endeavour and make it succeed. It is with this expectation that I ask Your Grace's blessing as I offer you my deepest respects in C.J.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I hasten to forward you the 600 francs (about 1,950 euros) of the three-monthly arrangement.

I came back, as you are aware, by way of Marseilles where I saw the Bishop who approved of a foundation in his diocese. Bishop Robert sent a message to me by Fr. Royan today stating that there is a large building between Alger Street and Jaubièrè Street very near to the White Fathers' financial office (procure) which would be very suitable for us. He invites us to set ourselves up there without placing any obligation on us. This property has a huge church and belongs to Mr. Alfred Pine whose son is a Jesuit. I think it is too far out from the centre. Monsignor Caseneuve would prefer to see us in the house bought by Fr. Jullien for at least sometime and then we might consider what to do after that.

I met your good sister and was very happy to renew my acquaintance with her. She is a saintly soul.

Cheerio, my good friend.

Your Grace,

I have the honour to submit to Your Grace the proofs of the fourth edition of the work entitled Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the first of which appeared in 1884, honoured with a brief from His Holiness Leo XIII, and the imprimatur from the Master of the Sacred Palace, to whom it was submitted, Bishop Bausa, now Cardinal Archbishop of Florence, together with the approval of Archbishop Marchal and quite a number of bishops. Your approval, Your Grace, to which I attach so much significance, would be very precious to me. All the foregoing documents are at the beginning of the work.

If on looking through these proofs Your Grace finds something or other to be taken out or modified, I shall make sure to take note of it.

I allow myself, Your Grace, to accompany this letter with another, dedicating this work to Your Grace if you are graciously willing to have it so, of which I am confident. I shall place it with your reply at the front of the work.

I wish to inform Your Grace that all the Latin texts quoted in the work have been verified and acknowledged as authentic.

At the end of the work Your Grace will read, not without interest, the different appendices, in particular that which treats of the apostolicity of the Church of Bourges. It links with Chapter 1 where I prove that the town of Issoudun was evangelized by St. Ursin. The history of the two statues makes up the fourth appendix.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

NB: I shall be grateful if Your Grace would return these proofs to me as soon as possible because it would greatly please the printer who is impatiently waiting on them.

Marseilles visit.

1. It was decided that Fathers Vaudon and Maillard should visit different locations with a view to a mission procure in Marseilles.

Father Doutre.

2. A novice with the Augustinians of the Assumption, not finding himself drawn to that institute, has asked to enter ours. Since he is presently on retreat at , a decision will be taken later.

A decision about the Jesi Petite Oeuvre.

3. Letters were read from Frs. Carrière and Véacre about Rome issues and the transfer of the Jesi Petite Oeuvre. There followed the drawing up of a report for the Apostolic Visitor and the Cardinal Vicar summarizing the meeting the Cardinal Vicar had, first of all, with the Visitor Fathers and then with Fr. General, followed by the Council's decision to move the upper classes of the Petite Oeuvre to Rome in order to meet the Cardinal's wishes, leaving at Jesi the lower classes in order to arrange things as smoothly as possible and avoid making Fr. Carrière's position absolutely impossible. Moreover, this report will be accompanied by a notification about the involvement of Fr. Védère with the Cardinal Vicar, influencing the latter to force us to move the Petite Oeuvre.

4. A time-table for the Rome scholasticate was then considered, a decision about which will be taken later.

A change of post for Fr. Benedetti.

5. It was decided that he should be moved from Rome, beginning with a sojourn at the salt water baths which he needs, and afterwards he will be sent to another place. This appointment is urgent.

Leave granted to Fr. Védère.

6. Having already himself some time ago requested that he should for different reasons return to France, his request is granted as of now.

Valdambrini: accepted for the novitiate.

7. The decision taken already about young Valdambrini's admission to the novitiate is approved since there would be serious consequences if he were left in Rome or sent away from the place.

8. In Glastonbury Fr. Hartzler is looking for teachers who would help to develop the school, something he finds absolutely necessary. The view was taken that nothing could be promised given the lack of personnel.

Retreat to begin on September 12.

9. It was decided that Fr. Guyot should be asked to give the community retreat, beginning on September 12, and the scholastics' retreat from 22nd to 28th of the same month.

July 18 Council

Fr. Doutre accepted for the novitiate.

1. It was agreed that Fr. Serge (Doutre) should be accepted in the novitiate if released by the Holy See from the Augustinians of the Assumption novitiate, but with the recommendation of his Superior, and the support of Fr. Piperon who, having put him through a demanding retreat, believes that he provided sufficient reason to justify his change of society.

2. A young Spaniard was also accepted for the novitiate having been given a dispensation from the Holy See, since he had been at the Capuchins' novitiate in Barcelona and left for health reasons. Fr. Casas, who recommended him, has had favourable reports about him; in any event, the breakdown in health due to the austerities in the St. Francis rule will not be incompatible, it is to be hoped, with our less austere style of life as compared with the Capuchins.

Van Horenbech

3. The Belgian of this name, aged 36, was accepted for the lay brothers' novitiate. His 8 grades for his service with Maricolles Hospital Sisters in Berkem provide excellent proof of his capabilities.

A plan to set up a house in Marseilles.

4. There followed a discussion with reference to two proposals put forward by the Bishop of Marseilles about a foundation, which were considered unacceptable. The view was taken that it would be best to hold on to Mrs. Jullien's house which, through repairs and additions at no great cost, could become a tidy residential house and offer lodgings for missionaries passing through.

Issoudun, July 12, 1895

Your Grace,

I hasten to send you the edition of the book printed in Rome and presented to the Master of the Sacred Palace who, having carefully examined it, gave it the imprimatur which you can see at the end of the volume. There you will also find the Pope's Brief and Archbishop Marchal's approval. As for the supportive letters of the bishops to whom I sent the first volume, justifying the title and devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, I have printed some extracts in Chapter XXVI of the present volume, page 513 and following, and again on page 461. I add here that of Cardinal Monaco which I have been able to find. The edition which I am having printed at the present time only contains those chapters dealing with Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, read and approved in Rome as Your Grace may rest assured. As for those on the Sacred Heart, I published them separately in 1866 as part of a volume in 12 with some additions. I only added chapter four to the new volume, page 248; the sovereignty of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, as well as the third appendix which has already appeared in the third edition 'in 12', the many inhabited worlds, p.594. The other two chapters, St. Ursin and modern-day prophets, are contained in the volume which accompanies this letter, pages 697-745. The three appendices also appear in the third edition 'in 12'.

In the dedicating preface which I took the liberty of addressing to Your Grace, I wrote that devotion to the Sacred Heart will not bring about the results promised by Our Lord until Our Lady of the Sacred Heart becomes associated with them, and becomes officially put forward to all the faithful of the Catholic Church by its Supreme Pastor. A simple brief sent to the author approving the book setting out this devotion would not be enough. It's a document from the Holy See, either by decree or encyclical, as His Holiness Leo XIII did in the case of Our Lady of the Rosary, which will achieve this aim. The Rosary was the remedy provided by heaven in the Middle Ages to demolish the Albiginsion heresy. In our own time Our Lord puts forward another remedy to counteract the abyss, devotion to His Divine Heart, complemented by that to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which is a providential and necessary consequence, omnia per Mariam (All through Mary). As long as the Vicar of Christ hasn't received from God the impetus to put it forward officially to the whole Church as a means of salvation, we shall continue to experience a sorrowful state of affairs. That's my convinced contention. Perhaps we do not yet merit such a grace.

There, Your Grace, you have the thinking expressed in the work's dedication and which prevails over the whole book. I am drawn to think that Your Grace has been chosen to hasten the hour of divine mercy.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Likely Issoudun, between July 12 and 19, 1895

May it be permitted us to say in conclusion, Your Grace, to draw on your good will in setting out a way of proceeding as regards the right to develop. We shall deem it our duty to abide by the instructions which Your Grace will deign to put before us.

In this respect, I believe that it is necessary to inform Your Grace that the house which we live in is not our own, being rented to us by the Fathers of the Sacred Heart, together with some furniture. The rent, then, cannot be left out of consideration. Over several years, already, this is part of the registration and as a result we pay taxes on the revenue which comes to 120 francs per annum. Should we remain in abeyance before this unjust law which we accepted beforehand like all the other communities in the diocese? Or should we adopt a passively resistant policy in face of the tax requirement?

Be good enough Your Grace to excuse my excessively lengthy letter, as with deep religious respect I am Your Grace's most humble and obedient daughter.

Sister Marie Louise
Daughter of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Superior

I can only approve and commend to Your Grace's good will this proposal from the Mother Superior of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, requesting Your Grace to be kind enough to support her plea, as it would be an excellent way of counteracting the lay institutions' impact in Issoudun and prevent the young girls from taking off for the large cities to complete their education.

Issoudun, July 19, 1895

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The Sisters' project envisaged the opening of a school for young girls this coming school year, 1895, 1896, at Issoudun, in keeping with one of the Congregation's aims and a project in mind for quite some time. In the event, for whatever reason, the Archbishop did not give permission.

L 18950720

Issoudun, July 20, 1895

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I received both your letters and I can see that we must drink the chalice right to the dregs. What can you expect? We shall accept it humbly and be fully resigned. We shall place the decree in its full extent, both as to Latin and French, in the August number (of the Annals), with the necessary and appropriate explanations prudently couched to offset the very serious and unmerited rebuke of having disobeyed the Holy See's prescriptions. This rebuke is all the more keenly felt since nobody more than ourselves is so responsive to Rome's decisions.

Quite clearly this decree, such as it will be published and without any softening of its impact in all the magazines, religious weeklies, Catholic papers, will lead to our being considered rebellious and be greatly damaging to us. At last there comes about what the good Lord wants: may His will be done!

It has to be said that over the past 4 years the most cruel trials have overtaken us. We have been crushed under the impact and nobody has stood up to defend us!

I have produced a brochure giving the history of the two statues, together with all the relevant documents from the beginning up to the present time. This work ends with the recent decree, to which we adhere and give our support fully and wholeheartedly, requesting all the faithful to do the same.

I sent this brochure to Archbishop Boyer who gives it his complete support in a letter which is at the beginning of the work. His Grace, expressing his formal wish that this brochure should receive the maximum publicity, is keen to have it placed in our Annals, but like you I don't think this is a prudent course of action for the time being since on reading it one could draw the conclusion that the mistakes are not from our side. I shall forward a proof to you on Monday or Tuesday.

I do not understand how His Excellency Cardinal Mazzella insists on this decree appearing straightaway in the Ephemerides... What relationship is there between this matter and rites? His Eminence is not without knowledge of my interview with His Lordship the Assessor of the Holy Office and the decisions about toning down he gave me, requesting, as well, to leave out his name on publishing it. Moreover, Monsignor Fausti has in his hands the dossier dealing with this whole matter and all the justifying submissions. The Cardinal Prefect of the Congregation of Rites should be familiar with all of this. What is behind all of this? In any event we shall be obedient children right to the end, usque and mortem (until death) if that's what is needed.

The Archbishop of Bourges said that I should put this matter to the Pope, sending him the full dossier about it, he being of the view that Leo XIII will think (and judge) otherwise, I shall consider matters carefully. I would rather leave it all to divine Providence and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I include here a fair summary of my interview with the Bishop assessor. If you think it pertinent you might pass it on to Fr. Mancini, Monsignors Cadène and Batandier.

I am forwarding to you three copies of the brochure entitled The Two Statues. Consider for yourself if it's wise to get in touch with Fr. Mancini and Monsignors Cadène and Batandier. I leave it to yourself to be the judge.

In any event ask them to let you know in advance the notification which should accompany the publications. You will correct them at your convenience so that they will not cause us problems with the Holy Office. Do the best you can.

Council Meetings at Chezal-Benoît
July 24, August 1, Issoudun

All members in attendance.

1. Various letters were read treating in general Congregation issues and, particularly, dealing with the Rome house. No decision was taken about the latter.

2. Fr. Jouët in Rome, given the absence of Fr. Carrière, offers his services in conjunction with the publication of the decree forbidding the earlier image (statue, picture) of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and counteracting the unfortunate impact which it could have on the public (the faithful). His offer was accepted.

Brother Oswald Bentley accepted for priestly ordination.

3. Fr. O'Mahony, Watertown, puts forward the deacon Oswald Bentley for the priesthood; although his examination results are mediocre, the view was taken that he could be accepted for the priesthood. The same Fr. O'Mahoney suggests that Fr. Martin should return to Europe because he is disaffected in America. He would be quite welcome, but since he is a military draft evader he cannot return to France and, accordingly, could be made available to the Glastonbury house. Fr. Lehane might also be obliged to return to Europe because of his health.

For more on Martin and Lehane see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, passim.

4. Fr. General made it known that Fr. Ilge had at last found a bishop who was willing to accept him and this could pave the way for release from his vows.

Fr. Tréand requests permission to begin work on the Kensington building.

5. He requests approval in order to begin work on the Kensington property. He refers to a project which would cost 500,000 francs, but what is being planned at present will cost 150,000 francs. He will begin by spending 50,000 francs and thinks that in time it will be feasible to meet the debt of 100,000 francs which he will be undertaking. Giving consideration to the fact that this work is necessary, there is unanimity about approving it as soon as the requested plans and estimates are available.

Decision about the postulant Albert Sébastien.

6. Fr. Albert Sébastien, from Germany, recently ordained, requests entry to the Congregation in order to go on the German mission. Aged 37, he had formerly been a member of the De La Salle Brothers and was part of Bishop Comboni's missionary team in Central Africa. His adventurous career offers no great guarantee of perseverance. He was refused permission to enter the French Province, but since he could perhaps be of service to the New Britain mission because of his German nationality, he is granted permission to present himself to the Salzburg novitiate where Fr. Hartzler is authorized to accept him if he thinks fit.

7. The young Spanish postulant who left the Capuchins presented new information which was considered not greatly in his favour and, consequently, he could not be accepted.

Excursions approved of for the teachers and scholastics during the holidays.

8. The teachers at the Petite Oeuvre and all the scholasticate personnel requested that they go on a trip during the holidays. It was agreed that this request should be met in as much as it was possible. There was also agreement about extending and developing the Saint Priest property to make it into a holiday house.

9. Work will begin on placing personnel for 1895-1896.

Issoudun, July 28, 1895

Your Grace,

Perpetual adoration in Issoudun and a canonical visit to Chezal-Benoît prevented me from replying sooner to your letter. Because I have to go to Paris this evening, where I am called by the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statue-maker, and being due to go there for sometime to deal with this matter, I cannot go to Bourges until Wednesday next. I shall turn up with an Assistant at Archbishop's house in the morning. I shall make it my duty to respond appreciatively to the honour Your Grace wishes to bestow on us.

With my deepest regard and my grateful acknowledgement of all your kindnesses in C.J.

Council Meetings August 5, 10, 1895

All present

Fr. Miniot's term of office extended. Fr. Suchet placed under surveillance.

1. Fr. Miniot, whose term of office expires on the 14th of the current month, is confirmed in charge of the Paris house for a further three years. He will continue to have under his charge Fr. Suchet who is being especially watched over by him, following a first admonition about the need to bring about a change in his behaviour if he wishes to remain in the Society.

L. Lavalie appointed to the Paris house.

2. In order to fill the gaps created by the death of Fr. Delaporte and Fr. Deidier's illness, Fr. Lavalie is appointed to the Paris house where he will go as soon as possible. The local council of the Paris house will comprise Fathers Brunet, first Counsellor, Lavalie and Chopin.

Permission granted to the Northern Provincial to accept candidates for the novitiate.

2. At his request the Northern Provincial was given permission to accept, together with his Assistants, postulants for the priesthood who wanted to enter his Province's novitiate.

Various permissions granted.

3. Four weeks' holiday were granted to Brother Alexander who is worn out from his work in the office (Issoudun). Three weeks were made available to Fr. Pourquier in order to spend time by the sea at Poulignau. Fathers Mègret and Laliaux, together with Brother Sergent, asked to go and attend Gregorian chant lectures with the Solesmes Benedictines. The advantages and disadvantages arising from the granting of this permission were brought up, and it was left to the discretion of the Superior General, likewise the appointment of someone for the mission procure which it is proposed to set up in Marseilles and, as well, proposed names for different undertakings, something which the Council could not deal with due to the absence of subjects with the requisite qualities for these posts.

Issoudun, August 5, 1895

Your Grace,

I hasten to reply to the letter Your Grace kindly sent me in connection with the second edition of the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and the reservations which you felt should be expressed.

1. The first is concerned with the title Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, which I gave it to be understood as having a supernatural origin. I must be misunderstood as I have always stated the contrary when the question was put to me. One can read this in chapter 1, page 4, and in the second appendix, p.584. I wrote that this title was an appropriate one and met the needs of the time, p.244.

2. In this new edition which I have the honour to dedicate to Your Grace, I find it nowhere stated that devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is the "necessary completion" of Sacred Heart devotion. I didn't use this expression other than in the dedicatory letter to Your Grace, misinterpreting no doubt those words of His Eminence Cardinal Pie in his splendid sermon on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart delivered at our Rome church in Piazza Navona: "involving Mary under this title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is no other than a deduction and an appendix to devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus" (see page 467). I freely disengage myself from this phraseology since Your Grace does not consider it correct.

3. I also withhold myself from saying that the remedy for the present ills of Society, which Our Lord himself has provided in devotion to His divine Heart, must be applicable to his most holy Mother, invoked under the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and that this remedy will not be wholly efficacious until the head of the Church has, officially, by means of an encyclical, placed before the faithful's piety the heavenly treasure of the Heart of Jesus, of which it is the dispensatrix; this is God's secret. In expressing this view, Your Grace, I have no intention of "making the Supreme and infallible pastor feel obliged so to intervene". It was not alone "temerity" on my part, but the utmost folly as well. I quite simply wanted to say that if this remedy made available by Jesus Christ had not yet produced these effects, this was for two reasons: a, our unworthiness because of our failings; b, divine justice not judging us as yet worthy of these mercies. In any event, this viewpoint was only offered in the letter to Your Grace, and most willingly I disengage myself from it.

4. When attributing to Mary, invoked under the title Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, certain Old Testament characteristics in which everything is figurative, as St. Paul says, I didn't think I went too far, following in this matter all the authors who have written about the most Holy Virgin and the greatly varied forms of the devotion, since she is invoked in a variety of ways. I followed in this the example of a great number of bishops and, in particular, the distinguished Cardinal of Poitiers who has seen in Rebecca, Esther, etc., striking anticipations of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart (for example his lecture at which Your Grace was present, also Monsignor Salua, a Commissioner of the Holy Office, and Bishop Lequette of Arras, p.456). If I cite texts from different Doctors of the Church and from a great number of the fathers and some learned theologians, it is only to emphasize the intercessory power of Mary which the Church acknowledges her as having over her divine Son and, concomitantly, over His adorable Heart. I never presumed to say or said in the work that "the very power of Mary found (in all these testimonies) further force and efficacy", something which would be wrong to say. Mary has the power given to her by God, and neither the statements of Doctors or new devotions can add to it. Ab omnipotente Filio omnipotens Mater est effecta. (The all powerful Virgin has her qualities in this respect given to her by her omnipotent Son. Ric. A.S. Laur. De Laud. B.M.V. Lib. 41. C.29, p.170.) She acts more or less according to the circumstances and to whom she wishes, when she wishes, the way she wishes and as long as she wishes: Quibus vult, quando vult, quomodo vult et quantum vult. (St. Bernard. Sermo Pro fest. M.V.L.5., art 1, C.2 de Annunt. Virg.)

The book's conclusion is that of St. Bernard: Quis tam idoneus ut loquatur ad Cor Domini Nostri Jesu Christi, ut tu felix Maria; Loquere, Domina, quia audit Filius tuus et quaecumque petieris impetrabis ( Sum. De Paneg. Virg. N. 7, tom. III, p. 1014, Edit. Migne). (Who is more qualified than you, Blessed Virgin, to address the Heart of Our Lord Jesus Christ. Speak Mary because Your Son listens to you, and whatever you ask for, you will have it given to you.)

Maybe I forgot to mention to Your Grace that the first edition of this book was printed in Rome, and the Master of the Sacred Palace, presently the Archbishop of Florence, Cardinal Bausa, having carefully examined it, found nothing objectionable in it and granted permission to have it printed. Your Grace has, thereby, a serious guarantee. Besides the Remember to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which was in keeping with the meaning of this new title and the doctrine expressed by the devotion, was officially approved by the Supreme Congregation of the Holy Office and that of Indulgences (see page 450).

I add to this letter, Your Grace, a new form of dedication to Your Grace, and you will judge for yourself whether it is acceptable. You have full liberty, let it be understood, to make all the changes you consider appropriate. The priest in charge of the printing press at the Montreuil-sur-Mer Carthusian house has written to say that, due to the lengthy delays, and not being able to leave his printing immobile any longer, he has brought out 1,500 copies with the imprimatur of the Bishop of Arras. If, nonetheless, Your Grace is of a mind to approve this new edition, although it is identical to the first except for the chapter entitled The Royalty of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which I added (on page 249), we shall unhesitatingly sacrifice the 3,000 francs (about 9,780 euros) which it cost us.

If, in Your Grace's view, there are some corrections to be made, I could include them in the dedication. The Bishop of Nantes cannot, to his great regret, be in Issoudun on September 8 because of clergy retreats.

I very much hope, Your Grace, that in this sad crisis period we are passing through because of the statues' issue, Your Grace, together with the Bishop of Parium, will deign to sympathize with us by being with us for our feasts; this would be great support in our time of trial.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Council Meetings, August 26, 27, 1895

All members present.

Gennaro Lacoste requests release from his vows.

1. He does not specify the reasons for his request, but he does say that his presence in the Barcelona house has become impossible. The real reason is better known by Fr. J.B. Perriot who accuses him of putting a Petite Oeuvre youngster in harm's way, continuously disregarding the rules and acknowledging, confessing, nothing to any priest in the house. It was decided that this unfortunate priest should leave the Society, but beforehand he must make a month's retreat in a Barcelona religious community.

A letter from Fr. Védère requesting the removal of Fr. Carrière; a decision about this matter.

2. Védère's letter put forward the wish of the Cardinal Vicar and the good name itself of the Society, that Fr. General and his Council remove Fr. Carrière from Rome, and if this is not done he, Védère, requests that he himself be called from Rome immediately. The Council, taken aback by such a procedure, decided that Védère's letter should be sent to the Cardinal, from whom an explanation will be sought, as well as unveiling Fr. Védère's threats; it was wholeheartedly agreed that he should be recalled from Rome if the Cardinal gives his approval.

3. It was decided that the scholasticate personnel should consist of Fathers Mathieu and Lynch, Brothers Jourdon, Pouvreau and Field. Fr. Laurenti will be made available to the Northern Province to lecture in the scholasticate.

Brother McCabe and Fr. Martin appointed to Glastonbury.

4. It was agreed that Brother Maher should be recalled to the scholasticate and Brother McCabe, who will continue his theological studies and help as an English teacher, sent in his place to Glastonbury. Fr. Martin will be contacted in Watertown and asked to go to Glastonbury immediately.

Plans for the Tilburg chapel.

5. Further discussion took place about the plans for the chapel put forward by Fr. Offermans for the approval of the Council. Fr. Piperon, who knows the situation (having lived there), considers these plans to be based on exaggerated measurements. He was asked to reply to Fr. Offermans and make comments which he thinks are pertinent.

Brothers Gsell, Bach, Bonnaccorsi accepted for final vows, also Brothers Buckley, Burke, Pages and Pouvreau.

6. The Rome scholastics Gsell, Bach, Bonnaccorsi, recommended by Fr. Carrière, were admitted to perpetual vows, although the second-named merited no more than mediocre approval for his behaviour, work and piety. As for the third (Bonnaccorsi), his family is poor and will need to be looked after sometime or other. Likewise, the scholastics in Chezal-Benoît, Buckley, Burke and Pages, recommended by Fr. Vaudon, were accepted, and Brother Pouvreau as well.

Acceptance for three-yearly vows.

7. The following novices from Chezal-Benoît.

Brothers Erback, Winans, Dalschen, put back.

These three, not considered as having satisfactory examination results, were held back and are to be sent to the Salzburg novitiate.

The French novice, Jules Antoine Neveux, leaves much to be desired as regards practical judgment and Latin studies and will, accordingly, undergo fresh examination before the Novice Master and his Assistant, who will decide about his capabilities and whether he should be accepted or sent home to his family. He was accepted.

Brother Esser replaces Brother Laumen.

1. It was decided to replace Brother Laumen, who has returned to his province (Northern), with the newly-professed Brother Esser when he has made his second-year profession, although he belongs to the Northern Province and could be claimed by Fr. Ramot.

Brother Fernando given permission to go and help his family.

2. The scholastic Fernando Lapeña wants to go home and help his parents who are badly in need. A letter requesting information will be sent to his father who, if he needs him, will have his son made available to help the family.

Aid requested at Canet de Mar, Barcelona, to have water provided.

3. As the Canet brothers have a water shortage, they want their wells repaired and propose to meet the expense which will be reimbursed from the interest they will have to pay. It was agreed that their request was justifiable and Fr. Casas was asked to deal with this matter having in mind the best interests of the Society.

Site proposed by Fr. Casas.

4. Fr. Casas has written to say that he is able to rent the two plots of ground he bought and he was given approval to do so for 3 years in the conditions he finds most favourable financially.

Fr. Tabarin refused postulancy.

5. The name of Fr. Tabarin was put forward as a postulant. He had been an oblate of St. Francis de Sales in Troyes and from there he went to the Holy Spirit seminary, which he again left. By majority vote the Council decided not to accept him.

A decision about Jesi; the Marseilles procure.

6. Fr. Carrière, who had arrived from Rome, was welcomed to the meeting on the 21st and, with his approval, the decision to break up the Jesi Petite Oeuvre was taken in order to please the Cardinal Vicar. The personnel for Jesi for the coming year was decided: Fr. Barral in charge of the youngsters entering the Petite Oeuvre; Fathers Ceresi and Laurenti responsible for ministry at Montelaturato and the surrounding area.

The personnel in Rome: Fr. Carrière, Superior, Procurator; Fr. Védère, in charge of the church; Fr. Nicolo, bursar; Fr. Di Luzio, director of the Petite Oeuvre; Fr. Godinoux, director of the scholasticate.

Fathers Blanchet and Pacaud appointed to the Marseilles procure.

7. The decision was taken that Fathers Blanchet and Pacaud, with Brother Eloi, should set up the Marseilles procure and make arrangements with the Ministry of the Missions about purchases.

Survey of Accounts.

Consideration was next given to the accounts of the different houses over the first six months of the current year.

The franc this year, 1895, would be the equivalent of 3.20 euros in 2009.

1. The Mother General House.

Intake: 350,537.25 francs, together with expected intake and assets: 245,545.25 francs, making for assets of 501,083.11 francs. Expenses met: 249,654.95 francs; expenses to be met: 552,572.25 francs; in total 802,227.20 francs. If one subtracts the 501,083.10 francs from the 802,227.20 francs one is left with a deficit of 301,144.10 francs, arising from reimbursements made or to be made. 103,829 francs were made available to the missions and 361,200 francs were in foundation assets. What money was available to increase the foundation's future only came to 141,254.50 francs if one leaves out this amount from that which is owed to this fund, 361,200 francs, a difference of 219,945.20 francs.

2. The Presbytery accounts.

Intake comes to 10,135.85 francs. Expenses met come to 10,021.30 francs, giving a surplus of 114.55 francs. Among the receipts are the sum of 2,532.80 francs taken in the general account, and in expenses there are 2,857.40 francs paid out for the Calvary Chapel.

3. The Sacred Heart Issoudun accounts.

Recent intake came to 40,961.10 francs and expenses were 40,471.91 francs, giving a surplus of 485.19 francs. Since there are still 3,770 francs in contributions to be received and 1,177.80 francs to be paid to different providers, the difference between these two figures, 1,992.20 francs, added to the intake of 489.14 francs makes for 2,481.39 francs in credit.

4. -Benoît accounts for the first six months of 1895.

The intake comes to 30,301.75 francs; expenses met are 30,301.75 francs; since they cancel each other out it follows that there is a 0 equivalence. But since the Bursar acknowledges the 176.85 francs have to be met, when these accounts are closely examined discrepancies are to be discovered. In the intake of 22,711 francs (fees) there is a shortfall of 5,000 francs and yet in the accounts for the second half of 1894 there is no mention of a sum due or owed. As regards expenses in 1894 the sum of 590 francs is mentioned whereas already in the second half of 1894 the sum of 2,266.35 francs is mentioned for expenses as regards installation and running costs. Is there not here a use of double standards? Again it is stated that there is no more than a debt of 176.96 (176.85 above!) francs when it is public knowledge that the Bursar is overdue with all his providers.

5. The Paris house accounts, first half of 1895.

Receipts come to 15,002.04 francs; expenses met come to 12,589.57 francs, giving a favourable balance of 2,412.47 francs. There remains 300 francs to be paid out and nothing as intake. The credit, accordingly, comes to 2,122.47 francs.

6. The Rome house accounts, first half of 1895.

The receipts were 48,798.27 francs; expense met come to 32,473.14 francs, giving a favourable balance of 16,325.13 francs. There remains an intake of 1,855.50 francs to be received and 6,557 to be paid out; the difference between these amounts, 4,701.50 francs, means that there is a cash credit of 11,623.63 francs.

7. The Spanish accounts, first half of 1895.

Intake came to 73,822.96 francs; outlay came to 15,276.10 francs, or a positive balance of 58,546.96 francs. Since one does not foresee any intake or expense to be met, the above figures represent exactly Barcelona's financial state.

8. Glastonbury, first half of 1895.

The accounts are not properly written out, due without doubt to the fact that they were just written out roughly. Receipts total 12,414.96 francs, expenses 12,311.20 francs; this gives a surplus of 163.70 francs. But one only foresees an intake of 1,093 francs yet to come as against a debt of 32,001 francs to be met. These sums indicate an imbalance of 31,902.30 francs.

9. Randwick Accounts, Sydney, 1894.

Receipts were 54,981.10 francs; expenses met 54,779.85 francs, giving a positive balance of 201.25 francs. No details are provided of intake or debts to be met; consequently the cash in hand indicates the financial state of the house.

10. Antwerp Accounts, first six months of 1895.

Intake came to 196,417.83 francs; expenses met were 194,083.82 francs, giving a positive balance of 2,334.01 francs. The amount of money received is not given nor is there any mention of money to be paid out in the columns set aside for these sums. Under "money to be paid out" the figure of 2,031.95 francs is given in the section of "money paid out", but this falsifies the amount paid out if, realistically, the concern is with what amount needs to be paid out. Accordingly the Antwerp accounts are incomplete and, to all appearances, inaccurate.

11. Tilburg Accounts, first six months of 1895

Intake came to 99,897.70 francs; expenses met were 87,249.38 francs. This gives a positive balance of 12,477.32 francs. Since there is no mention of any intake, and on the other hand of any debt to be met, what is in the cash account presents the financial situation, but this is explained by Fr. Offermans in a supplementary note. The house is in debt by 43,834.80 florins on which interest is paid of 4,380.8 or 4 and one third per cent, and, moreover, there is the capital foundation for 6 bursaries of 5,000 florins each for the Petite Oeuvre; together with 30,000 florins towards 24 masses over the year, 1,000 florins and a further 1,000 florins towards a lamp. These requirements are financially met by a cash basis of 6,238.66 florins and an annual interest of 2,828 florins or so, equivalently 4 and 1/3 per cent. This is equivalent to a total of 65,135 florins.

L 18950920

Issoudun, September 20, 1895

Dear Fr. Jouët,

Included here are the three-monthly 600 francs (about 1,950 euros). I am pleased to send you the new edition of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart with that little brochure titled: The Two Statues. I revised this little brochure according to the suggestions you put to me, avoiding anything which could offend and be erroneously interpreted. The requirements of the new decree create a tremendous concern among our 18 million associates. It was to be foreseen. Eventually God will bring good out of evil!

I don't know if the Bishop of Osimo has succeeded in getting some concessions. I have heard nothing further from Sittard or Innsbruck. I read in the paper that Monsignor Fausti, the Holy Office Assessor, has died. I am sorry; he was good to us.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

L 18951013

Vichy, October 13, 1895

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

Very willingly I authorize you to accept the perpetual vows of the three scholastics in question. As for Brother Pouvreaux, for greater assurance have him renew his vows with the others or on his own.

I am in good health and Fr. Carrière is very much better. Fr. Guyot is getting along very well. I return to Issoudun on Tuesday at 3.40pm. Thank you for your concern. Brother Savin wants to anticipate by some days his request to the barracks. Grant him this permission if you consider it appropriate.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours; greetings to all in C.J.

Continuation from 18950912X,

Council Meetings 12,20,21 September, 1895.

All members present.

12. The Salzburg Accounts.

1. The Salzburg accounts for the first half of 1895, regularly kept up to date, were looked at. Intake comes to 72,160.29 florins and outlay was 50,947.31 florins, presenting a favourable balance of 21,212.98 florins. Since no other financial requirement is to be met, the positive balance of 21,217.98 florins represents the assets of the house. However, outside expenses met, there is, besides, a debt of 46,500 florins, from which it follows that the debts to be met come to 97,447.31 florins. The house's debt, then, comes to 25,287.02 florins. If, as was stated at the Chapter, a contribution of 19,800 florins was set against the deficit of the previous six months and if the financial situation continues to be so healthy, Salzburg will shortly have cancelled all its debts.

Brother Neyrous authorized to renew his three-yearly vows.

2. As Brother Neyrous' temporary vows are due for renewal shortly, and since he cannot take perpetual vows because he hasn't done his military service, he may as requested take on new commitments over three years which will link him with the Society during the time he is awaiting his year of service, and during which he can take his licentiate degree.

Brother Muijsers admitted to perpetual vows.

3. At the request and favourable recommendation of his Superior, Brother Guillaume Herbert Muijsers is accepted for final profession at the end of his three years of temporary vows.

Brothers Erbach and Dalschen accepted for temporary vows, also Brother R.Th. Robinson.

4. On the favourable recommendation of Fr. Piperon, two novices from the Northern Province, at the Chezal-Benoît novitiate, were accepted for first vows: Louis Erbach and Ernest Mathias Marie Dalschen. Likewise Richard Thomas Robinson, Watertown, was accepted for first vows at the request and support of his Superior.

The division of the Jesi Petite Oeuvre.

5. Once more the decision to divide the Jesi Petite Oeuvre was approved; the preparatory course pupils will remain in Jesi and the others will return to Rome and study at the Apollinaire.

The theologians in the scholasticate are given permission to keep their text books.

6. Those who leave the scholasticate to study elsewhere in the Society, or when undertaking the ministry after ordination to the priesthood, have the right to take their text books, with which they are very familiar, with them.

D 18951024

Reply to a question in the Ami du Clergé about artistic representations of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

October 24, 1895

Question: What is meant by the Holy Office decree, April 3, 1895, with reference to representations of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart?

Reply: In issue 41 of this year, on page 734, we presented this decree, together with some explanations drawn from the text alone. Fr. Chevalier, Superior (General) of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, has written to inform us about some facts which clearly indicate that his community, when propagating the former picture for private prayer, had followed the advice given by His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, the former Archbishop of Bourges, and which we provide here. His observations, which we are pleased to offer here, will help our readers to smooth over the somewhat harsh observations of the Holy Office document in the exact translation of the 1895 decree which accompanies our article.

Issoudun, October 24, 1895

Dear Director,

I read in today's Universe an article taken from your learned review, the Ami du Clergé, where there is a discussion about the presentation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and the decrees of 1875 and 1895. The facts presented are not quite exact. The first decree, as a result of issues which arose in Galicia, laid it down that the earlier representation should be replaced for worship by a new one in which the child would be held in his mother's arms. But this would apply to the future, in posterum; it would remain possible to allow for the faithful's veneration of all representations which were anterior to the present decree, stating that the Issoudun statue was beyond criticism and in no way whatsoever condemned.

As for private devotions, Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, following correspondence with the Holy See, informed us that we might spread among the faithful reproductions of our statue for their private devotions, a statue crowned by Pius IX in 1869. There were, undoubtedly, breaches of this decree with regard to public devotion. For ourselves, we carefully accepted, and conformed to, its requirements. However, in order to eliminate any confusion, the Holy Office issued another decree on April 8, 1895, where two things are insisted on: the replacing of the former statues by the new one where they have been tolerated up to now, except in Issoudun itself, and all this, so the decree adds: caute prouventerque. Having asked Rome what was meant by this last (clause: cautiously and prudently), the reply I received was that in the event that changing the former statue might create problems for, or scandalize, the faithful, it should be left in place.

The second requirement laid down by the decree is that the former representation must no longer be promoted even for private worship, but rather, and uniquely, the new representation which has the child Jesus in the arms of the Virgin, (Chevalier writes: "Enfant Dieu", literally Infant God.) This is what we are now introducing.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Council Meeting, October 25, 1895

Leaving aside the cloak in the Northern houses.

1. The Northern houses are asking for a general dispensation with regard to the wearing of the cloak as laid down in the Constitutions. It was decided to consult the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. Meanwhile, it was thought best to wait and reflect before getting in touch; the cloak has not been in general use since the expulsions.

The local Councils at Chezal-Benoît and Tilburg.

2. It was decided that the Chezal-Benoît local Council would consist of Fathers Piperon, Vaudon, Mathieu and Renaud; and at Tilburg Fathers Kicken and Wemmers. Fr. Charles Offermans will be considered a consultor as regards issues involving the Petite Oeuvre, over which he is, effectively, the director, since Fr. Kicken, due to ill health, cannot be anything other than honorary director.

Regulations laid down for the Rome scholasticate.

3. Definite agreement was reached about the Rome scholasticate which will be presented for his signature to the Apostolic Visitor. It was decided the Rome Council should comprise, along with Fr. Carrière, Father Védère as first assistant, Fr. Godinoux, director of scholastics and Fr. Nicolo, bursar. The Jesi personnel would comprise Fr. Barral, director, and Fathers Laurenti and Ceresi.

Fr. Miniot appointed Superior at the new Marseilles foundation.

Fr. Brunet appointed to replace him as Superior in Paris.

4. Besides Fathers Blanchet and Pacaud appointed also to Marseilles, Fr. Miniot is appointed Superior and, proposed by Fr. General, Fr. Miniot is replaced by Fr. Brunet, who will continue in his chaplaincy at Saint Ouen aided by Fr. Suchet. Besides, to cope with confessions, Fr. Pierre Perriot will be sent to Paris. The composition of the local Council was not decided.

Bishop Navarre named as religious Superior of the Thursday Island house and Fr. Genocchi as Superior of New Guinea.

5. A letter from Fr. Genocchi was read in which there is reference to a conflict of authority between himself and Bishop Navarre who considers himself to be the religious Superior of all in the Vicariate. To bring this issue to an end, Bishop Navarre is confirmed as religious Superior of the Thursday Island house and Fr. Genocchi is religious Superior of New Guinea, but under the authority of the Vicar Apostolic as regards the exercise of ministry in the Vicariate. This decision will be communicated to Bishop Navarre.

Brother McCabe given permission to ask for dispensation from his vows.

7. Brother McCabe in Glastonbury, referring to his studies, health and personal reasons, requests release from his vows. The decision was taken to grant his request.

18951107X

Council Meeting, November 7, 1895

All present except Fr. Vaudon, detained by his duties as professor.

The break-up of the Jesi Petite Oeuvre.

1. Fr. Carrière, besides leaving newcomers at Jesi, also left there some pupils of the second year who are learning Latin, and he wants to know if this is not in keeping with an equivocal statement sent on to him, requesting that only beginners should be there and those who are not sufficiently prepared to follow the Apollinaire classes. This last is equivocal since all the pupils accepted for the Petite Oeuvre, even the beginners, are well able to follow the Apollinaire courses as all are in Latin. The view was taken that he (Carrière) has adequately met with the wishes of the Superior General and matters are best left as they are.

Fr. Durin asks to return.

2. Fr. General read a letter from Fr. Durin stating that as a result of problems created by his confrères, he was handing in his resignation, preparing to return to Europe and re-enter the Society. Since he was never sent away, although he had asked to leave, it was decided that he could return whenever he wished to do so.

The appointment of Fr. Miniot as Superior in Marseilles and Fr. Brunet as Superior in Paris is provisional.

3. Fr. Vaudon, not being in favour of Fr. Miniot's appointment as Superior at Marseilles and Fr. Brunet as Superior in Paris, it was agreed that these would only be provisional appointments.

No likelihood of a replacement for Brother McCabe at Glastonbury.

4. Fr. Hartzler at Glastonbury is asking for someone to replace Brother McCabe, but there is absolutely no-one who can be sent there. He is to be asked to enquire of the Northern Province if O'Reilly or someone else might not be made available.

5. The Council had previously accepted for vows the novices Henri André Corsten, Laurent François Neuner, Francis Gérard, Pierre Duverois, Louis Bouellat, Constant Isidore Gasperment, Louis Erbach, Ernest Mathias Dalschen and Gerard Joseph Winands.

Complaints from Bishop Navarre and his request for a Visitor.

1. A letter from Bishop Navarre was read, referring, exaggeratedly no doubt, to the sad condition of his mission, offering his resignation as Vicar Apostolic and requesting urgently that a Visitor be sent to New Guinea (someone authorized to look at the situation and circumstances). It was decided that a Visitor should be sent there and Fr. Tréand was named for this purpose. Fr. General will write to him about it.

The lay brothers Van Erven and Constant van Cam accepted for perpetual vows.

2. At the request of Fr. Genocchi the above-named lay brothers were accepted for perpetual vows on reaching 30 years of age.

Northern Province members accepted for Sacred Orders.

At the request of Fr. Ramot, the Provincial, the following were accepted.

Priesthood: Brothers Henri Heines, Henry Cuny, Godefroy von Hasselt.

Diaconate: Brothers Jean Niesten, Aloys Schell, Jean Eberlein, Guillaume Baeten and Louis Vuisters.

Subdiaconate: Brothers Paul Geitmann and Joseph Reichert.

Monthly retreat for the Rome scholastics to take place on the first Sunday of the month.

1. This means that the evening walk by the students will have to be foregone if the retreat begins in the morning and ends that evening. Fr. Carrière wants it to begin, as is the practice in some seminaries, the evening before so that it ends on the Sunday afternoon early enough to have a two-hour walk instead of the usual three. This proposal was agreed.

Parental visits to the Rome students.

2. Since nothing is laid down about parental visits to our Rome students, Fr. Carrière asks for guidelines on this issue. It was decided that he should decide on a suitable time for these visits so that the confrères are not in conflict with the community exercises. They (the visits) should not take place more often than every fifteen days; they are only allowed once a month at Issoudun.

The postulant Albert Vioux and a student of the Pius seminary, Rome, accepted for the novitiate.

3. The postulant Albert Vioux from Bleré, Indre and Loire, about whom there was nothing other than good recommendations, was accepted for the lay brothers' novitiate. Likewise, a pupil of the Pius seminary, Rome, on asking to enter before military service, was also accepted for the priestly novitiate. As he is well advanced in his studies he is wholeheartedly accepted.

The Paris local Council: Fr. Roger, Bursar.

4. It was agreed that Fr. Roger should be Bursar in Paris and become in this capacity part of the local Council, together with Fathers Deidier and Lavielle under the direction of Fr. Brunet, the Superior.

Called to ordination at Christmas.

5. Priesthood: Brother François Boudin

Diaconate: Brother Veckel

Subdiaconate: Brothers Auguste Boudin and Jourdon

Minor Orders: Brothers Buckley, Courbon, Cros, Poupénay, Tatcher

Tonsure and Minor Orders: Brother Pouvreau

Brother Schellekens accepted for renewal of temporary vows.

Brothers Keift, Kaiser and Reichmayer for final vows.

At their request and with the recommendation of the local Superiors, the following were accepted for perpetual profession, having met the requirements of age and training as laid down by the Constitutions. The lay brothers from New Pomerania (later New Britain), Nicolas Keift, Célestin Kaiser and André Reichmayer. The lay brother Christian Schellekens at Glastonbury was accepted for renewal of his three-year profession.

Request from Brother Petrus to be released from vows.

1. A reading of the procedures of the last meeting was heard and adopted, followed by a request from Brother Petrus of Antwerp to be released from perpetual vows, which was not considered opportune for the time being.

Negotiations about the publication of Fr. Delaporte's book.

2. The conditions put forward by Mr. Tequi, the editor of the publishing company, about the printing of Fr. Delaporte's work on the history of the Church were presented to the meeting. He doesn't accept that he should print it at his own expense or even share the cost of printing, requesting 2,000 francs to bring out 1,500 copies of the work and taking 40% from the sales. No decision was reached.

Clarification sought about Fr. Jouët's situation in relation to the Society.

3. Fr. General read a letter sent to Fr. Jouët requesting an explanation for his involvement in promoting the undertaking focused on the souls in Purgatory. He had made over to an editor the proceeds of his work, "A little trip to Purgatory", to the exclusion of our houses, and he no longer uses the title Missionary of the Sacred Heart on the book's cover, a title which in different circumstances he appears to make use of or leave aside as he thinks fit. People outside the Society are asking if he is any longer part of it. It is necessary to seek clarification on this matter.

Permission granted to translate the Constitutions into German.

4. Fr. Ramot, at his request, is granted permission to translate and print our Constitutions in German.

Fr. Tréand complains about Fr. Merg.

5. Different letters from the missions were read and no decision was taken. Fr. Tréand defends Fr. Donze and other Sydney confrères against the complaints made against them by Brother Guillaume. He brings up fresh complaints against Fr. Merg and requests his removal.

The lease of the Cléry property.

L 18951205

Issoudun, December 5, 1895

Dear Child,

I have just read your letter; if I took it seriously it would have shaken me and made me feel sick, but happily I have known you over a long period of time and experienced your friendliness, zeal, devotedness. You put before me either the alternative of being accommodating to you (which is what I want) or disappointing to a good lady in Paris who has offered Saint-Cyr, out of pure devotedness, the St. Anthony of Padua statue. I have no hesitation in meeting your request. The little statue will no longer be in the church. Do not think, dear child, that it was out of speculative or rivalry feelings that the statue of the dear saint was installed in Calvary chapel. Quite the contrary, the purpose being to promote devotion to St. Anthony and please the pious faithful who, for more than one reason, could go to the chapel of the good Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul at the other end of the town. I said to my sister Thérèse when she came to see me, indignant like a worked up little cockerel(!), that my intention in doing so was none other than to be especially supportive of her undertakings and not at all to take from them. A box, to which she alone would have the key, was to be placed at the foot of the statue and she herself would take the offerings as often as she wished. While the monthly meetings would always be held in their own chapel, it was to be understood that nothing, absolutely nothing, would change from what existed up to the present. She appeared to be agreeable to all this and thanked me, even offering to decorate the statue. She, like myself, sees here a new source of blessings for the Issoudun poor. No doubt a Chapter meeting took place at the convent... The dear sisters decided to act otherwise. Very well, very well. I like them too much to cause them any pain. Dear little St. Anthony is no longer ensconced on his pedestal; they can rest at ease and be assured. My intention was to be helpful to them, but they didn't believe it was so; something which is their affair and not mine.

Please accept, dear child, my deepest good wishes and regard in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The Saint Vincent de Paul Sisters' chapel in the Visitation Orphanage was founded by Madame de Bonneval's mother, often mentioned in earlier Chevalier, letters, Madame du Quesne. The issue involving the St. Anthony statue arose about eighteen months before the tragic death of the recipient of this Chevalier letter in a fire at the Charité Bazaar in Paris, May 4, 1897.

Need to exercise restraint on expenses due to diminishing resources.

1. What was discussed at the last financial meeting was approved. Fr. Maillard, who was there, stated that in drawing up the accounts of the general house he had seen in recent months a substantial decrease in the current account, noting that if the expenses continued being so considerable it will be impossible to meet payments. The conclusion was drawn to avoid most carefully any superfluous expenses.

The St. Pierre des Clages undertaking: increase of support.

2. Discussion centred on this Swiss undertaking, the prospects of which do not hold out much promise for the future. Nevertheless, at Fr. Robaden's request, which seemed reasonable, the contribution was raised from 400 francs to 450 francs as the annual contribution for each pupil.

The reason for the omission of the title MSC by Fr. Jouët: a decision about this.

3. A letter from Fr. Jouët informed the Council that he had not put the title MSC after his name and discontinued selling his book in our houses because our French Annals, when referring to this work, left out the title Missionary of the Sacred Heart, suggesting that he, himself, should be contacted if one wished to get hold of the book, and this is something he felt bitter about. It was agreed that the title should be restored to the Annals and continue to be found there, but no decision was taken about taking on responsibility for the sale of the work in our houses as in the past.

O'Reilly, a scholastic at Antwerp, definitively made available to the Northern Province.

4. The scholastic O'Reilly in Antwerp, intended for Glastonbury, requests that he continue his studies at Antwerp and remain in the Northern Province. Besides, Fr. Ramot, who at first refused to accept him, presently agrees to do so. The decision was taken that this brother, who should have returned to the French Province after his studies, is now definitively made over to the Northern Province. As for Fr. Hartzler, who had claimed him, it will be made clear to him that it is impossible to give him any more, that he make do with his personnel and accept what ministry outside the house which he can cope with, without detriment to the needs and running of his school. By so doing he will have quite requisite personnel.

Departure of Brothers McCabe and Petrus Onckels.

5. Since both the above continue to request release from their vows, the view was taken that their request should be met immediately.

The former priest, Gennaro.

The ex-priest Gennaro Lacoste, who has received dispensation from his vows, finds himself suspended and without resources, while the Bishop of Barcelona refuses to find employment for him. Fr. Casas will be asked to intervene in this matter, requesting a dispensation for patrimony if the Bishop persists in his refusal.

6. Besides a little pamphlet on the practice of devotion to the Sacred Heart which Fr. Ramot was given permission to print on condition that he submitted the proofs to the Council, Fr. Ramot, in addition wants to print a series of meditations which Fr. General has given him permission to publish on condition that he makes available the proofs. It is to be regretted that he didn't make available his manuscript before giving it to the editor.

Fr. Merg's report on Bishop Couppé's mission. Fr. Tréand wants Fr. Merg to be removed, but this request is not considered acceptable.

7. Sydney. Fr. Merg, on his return to Sydney, sent a lengthy report about Bishop Couppé's mission. It would appear to have been put together conscientiously. One does not easily understand why Fr. Tréand and Bishop Couppé himself absolutely want to get rid of him. Certainly he has obvious character failings, but are they not compensated for by his positive qualities: his sense of methodical order, his insistence on accountability. Nobody more than himself in the house has these qualities to the same degree. Fr. Tréand, then, will be asked to keep him on despite his drawbacks, making use of his good qualities as best he can.

See further on this, Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, passim.

A plan to establish a novitiate in Sydney.

Consideration was given to Fr. Tréand's request to start a novitiate in Sydney and supported by Sydney's Cardinal Moran. But one hesitates to grant permission straightaway since one cannot see where he will find the personnel for this initiative. He will have to be asked how he will set up this undertaking. If it's a novitiate like that of Watertown, admitting to vows those who come forward and face one year of approval in the house under the guidance of one of the priests, one can acquiesce in this, but if it's a question of a proper canonically set up novitiate, it does not seem possible to approve of this at the moment.

The lay brother Steven accepted for final vows.

8. At the request and recommendation of his Tilburg Superior, Fr. Offermans, the lay brother Jean (Bernard) Stevens, aged 36, finishing his second three-year term at Christmas, was accepted for final profession.

Issoudun, December 19, 1895

Dear Father,

I am sorry to hear that you are unwell. Take good care of yourself. I hope that your exhaustion is only temporary.

As regards the Annals, it is quite impossible, my friend, to work on it in Issoudun where we are weighed down by all sorts of work. I can only think of Chezal-Benoît where our young men in both the scholasticate and novitiate could, under your direction, take on responsibility for it. Discuss this with Fr. Piperon. Call on each one for an article, and all, lecturers and students, whom you consider capable, will make it their duty and pleasure to help you out. It will be an opportunity for them in the first place to put their thoughts into writing, and in this way show their appreciation for what the Society has done for them. They will not overlook the fact that the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and its organ, the Annals, is the foster-mother of the Congregation and the nerve-centre of its undertakings. They should, accordingly, in the present circumstances, bring their generous and devoted commitment where the circumstances offer the possibility of doing so!

Cheerio, Father.

I pray for you.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, December 31, 1895

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I send you good wishes for the New Year, and if the good Lord grants them your health will be excellent, you will become a saint and your Sacred Heart work will be crowned with success. It would appear that a newspaper has made it known that the Marques of Pleu (original name imprecise), who had married Mr. Jouët, willed on her death 100,000 francs to you for your Rome undertaking (about 326,240 euros). She died a little while ago in Monaco. It was Bishop Theuret of Monaco who told me this as something he read in the paper. If it's true, I am pleased for you. You can find out about it from the Bishop of Monaco.

I am forwarding your three-monthly cheque: 600 francs (about 1,955 euros). I add to this letter the cover of "Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart". It's just a proof and you will let me know if there are any changes to be made to it. Following the approval accorded to it by Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne on April 25, 1868, you will add in a footnote that the author of this work reserves to himself all rights of ownership and translation.

It is impossible to support this last assertion, although you yourself wrote "The month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart". The work belongs to the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, on whose behalf it was undertaken. Where would we be, what would we be, if all of us who wrote books or pamphlets for the Congregation and the spread of its works, were to claim ownership? My intention, then, is to leave out this sentence (what is underlined above). You will not misunderstand it, then, as inappropriate in the circumstances.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I am very grateful to you for your New Year good wishes. I offer you mine wholeheartedly, and also to your dear and devoted collaborators, as well as your dearly loved scholastics. Buried under an avalanche of letters, it is impossible to answer all specifically. Have me excused by one and all who will understand my predicament.

Article 2396To Fr. Jules Vandel, MSC, Sydney.*

L 18960103

Issoudun, January 3, 1896

Dear Fr. Vandel,

Thank you for your nice letter which gave me great pleasure. In everything which has happened one can see the hand of good and merciful Providence, knowing how to draw good out of evil and able to make all things work for the good of those loved. That's what has happened with regard to our dear little Society. Occurrences which would appear to be detrimental to it have, on the contrary, consolidated it and turned to its advantage. The Lord be praised! Our dear Sydney house is advancing more and more under the wise guidance of dear Fr. Tréand, and the devotedness of his dedicated and worthy collaborators, certain to become in a short time a very important house. It is clear that, in spite of its trials, the divine Heart of Jesus favours it with His blessing.

I am happy to hear, my friend, that you are settling down in Sydney and that you are keenly involved in all the undertakings. Everything you relate to me about your trip to New Britain greatly pleases and interests me. Bishop Couppé is to be admired for his zeal, piety and dedication. He exercises a great deal of wisdom and tact in this mission field, being the right man in the circumstances. Under his able and firm guidance progress becomes each day more and more obvious. Indeed, if he had 50 missionaries with him at the present time, what results would he not achieve!

Patience, since vocations are many in the Northern Province it will not be long before there are a 100, and two hundred, missionaries. It's only a question of time. As for Fr. Merg, don't worry. I know him very well and I evaluate him like yourself. Nevertheless, I have to say that his report, however emphatic and tendentious, is in fact favourable to Bishop Couppé and his fine mission. I quite understand that the presence in Sydney of this dear priest with his objectionable character is a cross to bear for his confrères. I wrote to Fr. Tréand to avoid, if he could do so, asking us to recall him through a decision of his Council.

I am personally delighted with the Kensington foundation and hope it will develop in time and become flourishing. I sent off to Rome straightaway a request for your novitiate with a favourable appeal. Your plan for a seminary to train priests, and native catechists, is excellent. I wholeheartedly approve of it and would very much like to see it come about. Yet how can we do this at the present time for lack of subjects? The Northern Province to which we have given excellent personnel, French and Alsatian, greatly burdens us in keeping our undertakings going forward. Moreover, the setting-up of a Petite Oeuvre at Jesi (Italy), and a procure at Marseilles where we are sending Fathers Miniot, Blanchet and Pacaud, is greatly burdening us. If the Northern Province could provide you with some personnel, and this would be appropriate, I should be very happy. Get together with dear, appreciated, Fr. Tréand to discuss this matter in Council. You will inform me about your deliberations. Let us hope and pray!

I thank you for your New Year good wishes, reciprocating with my own which like yours I have placed in the Heart of Jesus.

Cheerio, dearly loved Fr. Vandel.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Acceptance of the verbal formula without prejudice to the Sydney novitiate project.

1. A reading was given of the verbal formula with the proviso that the request for a novitiate as forwarded to Rome with the approval of the Archbishop (of Sydney), has only in mind the request to set up this establishment. As for the concrete procedures to be followed, the Council will have to formulate these later when the Sydney Superior will have provided the requisite explanations.

Brother Martin Klerks accepted for temporary vows, Brother Willibrordus for final vows.

2. On the supportive recommendation of Fr. Piperon the scholastic novice Martin Klerks was accepted for temporary profession at the end of his novitiate. On the recommendation of Fr. General his immediate Superior, the lay brother Willibrordus Lammers, aged 31, was admitted to perpetual vows on completing his second term of three-yearly vows.

Permission for Fr. Balzer and Brother Gussenhoven to purchase.

3. Fr. Balzer in Salzburg and Brother Gussenhoven at Antwerp, finding themselves in a position whereby they needed to make a purchase, were given authority to do so by Fr. General.

A request by Father Mathieu to be released from his teaching role and his commitments as head of the school.

4. A letter was read from Fr. Mathieu requesting that he be relieved of his responsibilities as professor at the scholasticate, and also of his office as official director of the school, giving as his reasons: the complaints he undergoes each year; the unexpected changes introduced in the running of the scholasticate which he cannot accept; the promise made to him that the professorial role would be a step towards preaching; the need to get away from his present environment in order to safeguard his vocation.

The Council is of the view that he has to be answered by accepting that his intentions are serious, that time is needed for reflection before reaching a decision and that, for the rest, this decision is not urgent, because we are nowhere near the end of the school year.

François Millioz accepted for renewal of vows.

5. At the request and with the approval of Fr. Piperon the lay brother François Millioz, Chezal-Benoît, is accepted for renewal of his three-yearly vows.

Article 2397

B 18960104

To Pope Leo XIII.

Issoudun, January 4, 1896

Most Holy Father,

At the time of the approval of our Society, the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, June 20, 1874, we adapted for ourselves, with the approval of His Holiness Pius IX and Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, a religious habit comprising a soutane, a large cloak in black wool, a cincture of the same colour and a picture of the Sacred Heart on the chest with this invocation: "May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved". Number 40 of our Constitutions, formally approved by the Holy See on July 10, 1890, Chapter IV, on religious discipline, expressly states that "the habit of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart will be that which has been in use up to the present day". However, the Superiors of the Northern Province, comprising Belgium, Holland, Austria, have set aside this habit over some years. Having taken notice of this during the last canonical visit, we requested that it be restored except on journeys within Protestant countries where the wearing of an ecclesiastical habit is forbidden. The Provincial wrote to us requesting that there should be a total dispensation both within and without. Here are the reasons:

I. Outside the house.

1. Because they are blamed by the diocesan priests whose support and approval they want to retain.
2. Because they place themselves in the way of unpleasant comments and jokes.
3. Because, they say, it is according to the wishes of their bishops.

II. Within the houses.

1. Only for certain gatherings where the community should be fully present.
2. Only for the daily mass and offices celebrated in their chapel, even when they are not at all involved with choir.
3. Likewise as regards communion at the altar where, they state: a, "that the religious habit being in no way a choir habit is not at all acceptable in church; b, because it is contrary to liturgical regulations which forbid being present in a sacred place with the religious habit". (Nevertheless, all religious who have their own habit wear it everywhere, particularly so in church, even in the pulpit like the Dominicans, Franciscans, Redemptorists, etc., except when they are engaged in services at the altar itself.)

III.

They maintain, moreover, that it (the habit) should not be used except for its investiture and on profession day, and that it be left aside even for renewal of vows at the end of the annual retreat. If this is how it is (will be), what is the purpose of a religious habit? Might we not exclude it from the Constitutions where, as indicated above, it is prescribed? Have we the right to do this? We shall be very grateful to have an official reply with regard to these queries so that it can be forwarded to the interested parties.

I prostrate myself at the feet of Your Holiness, etc.

Council Meeting, January 11, 1896

Fr. Blanchet, Assistant (priest) at Nançay. Fr. Mégret appointed to Marseilles, Brother Duclou to the Association's office.

1. At the request of the Cardinal Archbishop, Fr. Blanchet, appointed to Marseilles, is made available to the parish priest of Nançay, who has been laid up for six months, and in his place Fr. Mégret, who has been recuperating, is appointed to Marseilles. Moreover, an assistant at the Association's office being needed, it was agreed that the novice Brother Duclou, who has already worked in this capacity, will be released for some time from the novitiate to undertake this work once again.

Financial arrangements between the General Bursary Office and the Sacred Heart financial office.

2. Since the Sacred Heart house has a considerable financial outlay arising from visitors on pilgrimage or with confrères passing through, Fr. Maillard, accountable to the general bursary, has met the expenses of the Sacred Heart house, and those as well of three resident teachers, Messrs. Huchard, Bertin, Feuillet, but who, beginning with this month of January as employees of the house, will be paid by the bursar of the house (the Sacred Heart). If there is a deficit at the Sacred Heart it will be met by the general bursary.

Brothers McCabe and Onckels leave the Congregation.

3. Both, being dispensed from their perpetual vows, are no longer part of the Society.

Fr. Lynch asks to be released from his vows. Also Brother Cronin. Father Suchet given permission to visit his family.

4. Fr. Lynch, alleging his lack of confidence in the Society, and in those representing it, states that it is his intention to request release from vows. It was agreed that while awaiting this release he should take himself to the Paris house where a priest has been requested to replace Fr. Suchet who has been given permission to spend a month at home with his family regaining his health. Brother Cronin, from the Chezal-Benoît scholasticate, leaves at his own request and is no longer a member of the Society, and the same holds for Brother Beatty in Watertown who has recently been sent away.

Brother Jourdon takes on family responsibilities.

5. Brother Jourdon, accepted for the subdiaconate, has informed Fr. General that he will undertake family responsibilities for the present due to the poor health of his father and the departure of his brother to the Redemptorists. It was agreed that if he is faithful to his vocation, the Society will financially support him insofar as it is possible.

Rome candidates for Holy Orders.

1. The following were considered and approved:

Diaconate: Brothers Vullings, Nyens, Nijsters, Power, Gsell, Bach, Henri.

Minor Orders: Massimei and Orlandi.

Agreement that Fr. Hartzler in Glastonbury should accept new youngsters for the Petite Oeuvre.

2. Fr. Hartzer wrote to say that vocations for the Petite Oeuvre can be found among the poorer youngsters of England (sic! Wales, Scotland?) and requests permission to take in 4 or 5 each year, provided they are carefully selected and that a little fee be paid, which is a guarantee of the good intentions of their parents.

A proposal to convoke a General Chapter.

3. Fr. General proposed the calling of a General Chapter to approve the Directory plan which has been put forward, and also to take the necessary measures to ensure the unity and future of the Congregation. The majority of the Council welcomed this proposal. The unhappy outcome attending previous Chapters undoubtedly of its very nature leads to concern, but the circumstances in which this Chapter will be held are no longer as hitherto, so that one can hope that the result will be different. In any event, the holding of Chapters is regularly done in all Orders and Congregations. It is part of our Constitutions that a General Chapter be held every six years, and the right is accorded the Superior General to call one more often when he thinks it appropriate. In any event, postponing a General Chapter does not lessen the problems, but rather adds to them. It is absolutely imperative that a general consensus about the meaning of the Constitutions and the essential qualities of the religious life, should be established in the Congregation as soon as possible through a general gathering of those who represent it. The delegates who make up the Chapter are not clearly designated in the Constitutions, and they will be appointed with a view to their being representative of as large a grouping as possible. It was likewise agreed that the Northern (Province) confrères should be consulted about the envisaged Chapter and, thereafter, the issue could be referred to the Apostolic Visitor and then to the Holy See, which, moreover, should get the three-yearly report laid down by number 121 of the Constitutions.

All in attendance.

1. The preceding minutes were approved.

An Italian postulant not accepted.

2. The request of the postulant Blanchi was considered, a former student of the Nice major seminary and novice in an Italian Congregation, but lacking any supportive letters. He does not offer serious guarantees to suggest that an indult be sought in his favour.

Fr. Lepère accepted for the novitiate.

3. Fr. Favier, a curate at Ballancourt (Paris), proposes Fr. Lepère of the Tours diocese who has finished his theological studies but has not yet received sacred orders. The recommendations on his behalf are favourable and he is unanimously accepted, but it has to be made clear to him that he cannot be put forward for major orders until he has made final vows in the Congregation, unless, that is, his protector Bishop Renan of Amiens wants to consider him as his subject and have him ordained.

Fr. Durin concerned about his return. A letter from Fr. Durin was considered, expressing his concerns about coming under the jurisdiction of the Congregation's young priests if he returned to France. The Council, as before, is agreed on accepting him and treating him as well as possible, but no initiative will be undertaken to arrange his return which, in all probability, this dear man will very likely regret.

Council Meetings 4, 11, February, 1896

All present.

1. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Fr. Lynch changes his mind and stays in the Society. It was agreed that some money should be made available to Mrs. Lynch.

2. Fr. Lynch has decided not to request release from vows, stating that he is ready to go wherever Fr. General would like to send him provided the family responsibilities, especially financial, are taken into consideration. His mother is recently widowed and, having only meagre resources and with children to look after and educate, needs her eldest son to help her out. He asks what are the resources on which one can hope for and draw on. The view was taken that his mass stipends could be made available to him, and that he should go to Sydney where he is wanted by Fathers Tréand and Vandel.

See also, at length from this time, Twohig, Late But Not Too Late.

Brother Guilbaud accepted for perpetual profession.

3. In virtue of an apostolic indult Brother Guilbaud in New Guinea, whose temporary vows expire at the end of October, is already accepted for perpetual vows in order to be called sooner to sacred orders, especially the priesthood, thereby adding earlier to the evangelical workers which the mission so urgently needs.

Fr. Suchet, due to scandalous behaviour in Paris, changed to Barcelona.

4. Fr. Suchet on a family holiday presently, but having, however, seriously compromised the Paris house so that he can no longer return there, is being sent to the Barcelona mission, as the recipient of a second canonical warning, following which, if he hasn't mended his ways, a third warning will be given before proceeding thereafter to expel him. This decision will be made known to him as soon as possible and also to the Paris and Barcelona Superiors.

Brother Dormann admitted to the diaconate.

5. Fr. Carrière having given a favourable report on Brother Dormann, requests that he, with his colleagues, be promoted to the diaconate. The answer was in the affirmative. Proposed by Fr. Lanctin, Brother O'Mahony was also accepted for the diaconate on condition that he satisfactorily pass his examination.

Issoudun, February 7, 1896

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

1. I am forwarding you the 500 francs (about 1,600 euros) you requested. Is it for your family or the scholasticate? You do not say.

2. Fr. Lynch will return to Issoudun and go from there to Marseilles. I shall let you know beforehand. But here is Fr. Brunet trying to keep him (Lynch) as long as possible until some other priest is sent to him to provide his chaplaincy services. I can only see the former Brother Gennaro as being available; he is doing nothing in Issoudun.

3. Fr. Auvrelle doesn't know the exact date of the canonical examinations.

4. The anonymous letters to Madame La Tite are very much to be deplored. What are we going to do with poor Fr. Suchet? Do you think that the best thing for him would be to have him with Fr. Comte? Would it not be money thrown away and vocations lost? Yes, when there are less demands on me I shall try and get to Paris.

Annals. Mr. Gagnault tells me that there is a surplus of articles available, many yet to appear, and these together with new incoming articles are enough to produce two issues. It is necessary, then, to pare down ruthlessly what is there. Bishop Verjus' article, already available, runs to 15 pages. If the next one is added this will make it a very long article. Besides Fr. Navarre's letter, there are also two letters from sisters, one from Mother Liguori running to five pages, the other from Sister Agnes as long as 15 large pages, without mentioning that from Fr. Cochard. This is too much from New Guinea at one and the same time.

The latter part of Bishop Couppé's letter comes to 9 pages and there's another of 20 pages; this is excessive in one and the same issue for New Britain. In this respect, Fr. Ramot has turned down a very interesting letter from Fr. Lebeau in the Gilbert Islands for the Belgian Annals for the reason that this mission is not theirs (the Northern Province) and inserting such a letter would divert contributions from New Britain. If this is the way it is, would it not be more reasonable to have them print letters about the mission for which they have responsibility, and let us mention only the results achieved in the German mission? Obviously publishing letters from New Britain would make available a great number of contributions to Bishop Couppé to the detriment of New Guinea (present-day Papua and mainland New Guinea) and the Gilbert Islands. This issue needs to be considered at a (General) Council meeting. Do you not think that the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will not soon be saying little or nothing about our cherished devotions if we continue to include each time all the letters which come to us from the missions? Cannot one make a choice?

To the Society's Superiors.

C 18960209A

Issoudun, February 9, 1896

J M J

Dear Father,

We received some days ago a letter from His Eminence Cardinal Rampolla, His Holiness Leo XIII's Secretary of State, informing us that the Holy Father had favourably replied to our request, and was pleased to appoint Cardinal Parocchi, in place of the regretted recently deceased Cardinal Monaco, as Protector of our Society, and he has accepted this responsibility with a wholeheartedness which we gratefully acknowledge.

I am pleased, Father, to share this good news with you and inform you at the same time that our new Protector is taking it upon himself to arrange a General Chapter for our Congregation next July. He is so convinced in assured anticipation of the Sovereign Pontiff's approval, that he asked us to name immediately the two delegates who must replace at the next Chapter Fathers Hartzler and Derichemont, presently Superiors, and other delegates appointed for the Chapter which should have taken place in 1896 and remain eligible for that of 1897.

Accordingly, you would do well to bring your community together as soon as possible in order to elect one delegate, each Province only having the right to elect one individual. We would like to inform you that those of your delegates who would have attended the 1896 Chapter as local Superiors, and who are no longer in office, cannot take part in the Chapter as Superiors as they are no longer such (for example, Fr. Genocchi), but they may, quite obviously, be elected as delegates.

We make use of this letter to forward a decision taken at a Council meeting on the 24th of November last: "All our religious who are title-holders of any Society property will proceed as soon as possible to make a will in addition to the deed of sale and this must be carried out, signed, by all those who are, or will become, signatories. Likewise, for the future, one requires a will on the part of all those who will be nominated title-holders of any property belonging to the Congregation, and also from those, property-holders or not, who leave for the missions. These letters must provide before departure a solicitor's statement as general as possible."

I would appeal to you, Father, to pay particular attention to this issue of great concern to us so that it becomes acted on, and if you yourselves or one of your delegates is a title-holder of some property in the Society, you should write to us and we shall forward the appropriate instructions requesting you to provide the names of the confrères who are being appointed leasees.

In addition, the Council, having been made aware of the issue of doubtful validity prevailing up to now, has decided to set out what follows: The finally professed of second rank (Constitutions page 50, number 90), not in tonsurate or minor orders, will make their will before temporary profession, tonsurate and minor orders. As for those in sacred orders, they always have advantageous rights before those who are professed, but are not yet in sacred orders (November 19 meeting, 1896).

Please be assured, Father, of my respectful good wishes in C.J.

L 18960211

Issoudun, February 11, 1896

Your Grace,

I am pleased to forward Your Eminence a letter from the Ségry Mayor and the cost of the most urgent repairs to be made in the presbytery etc. (Ségry is a little village about ten kilometres from Issoudun.) The Issoudun tradesman who lowered his price in my favour refused the discount I offered him. I asked the Mayor this evening to hand over the work to someone else and to let Your Eminence know when it is finished.

It is quite sometime, Your Grace, since we had a proper Chapter. My intention is to call one for the end of August. Its purpose is the appointment of Assistants and to make our common rules or directory cohere with our Constitutions, something which is lacking.

I have consulted with the Superiors of our two Provinces, who are all agreed on this, as well as the General Council itself. Before sending out the circular, I would like to know what Your Grace thinks. Although, peace, unity, wholehearted agreement prevails among us now, I believe that a Chapter, to which everybody looks forward, would yet further consolidate advantageously our dear Society, giving it a fresh thrust.

Cardinal Moran, the Archbishop of Sydney, who is very interested in our Oceania missions and in our house set up ten years ago in his episcopal see, has been pleased to send me a letter praising most highly my confrères. Convinced that our Congregation, highly regarded and liked by the whole Australian episcopate, has a great future in the country, he has officially requested Rome for a novitiate to meet vocation requirements. His Eminence the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda, has sent me the rescript which approved of it (the novitiate) and I immediately forwarded it to Sydney with the endorsement of the Assistants. Cardinal Moran profited from the presence of 12 or 18 of his Suffragan bishops gathered for a synod to bless the foundation stone of a huge undertaking which the good-will and financial contributions of rich businessmen has made it possible for my confrères to build. All this good news, Your Grace, cannot but please you who are so paternally committed to us.

I place myself at Your Eminence's feet to kiss your hand, beg your blessing and present my deepest regards in C.J.

Your Grace,

I have the honour to submit for Your Grace's approval the circular letter about calling a Chapter, to which I made reference yesterday. I want it to be sent out as soon as possible so that our Oceania colleagues will have time to get ready.

With deepest respect, I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient filial servant in C.J.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

You have forgotten to give your assessment of Brother Valdambri. If you come on Saturday with Fr. Piperon we shall deal with it. Write to Father Field asking him to come straightaway. I don't understand the inconsiderateness of these unfortunate youngsters.

Fr. Pacaud has taken his chalice to Marseilles because there isn't one at the procure. In effect, we cannot allow each one to take away things given to them. By virtue of the Constitutions, all gifts any one receives belong to the Society. This is what they must readily come to understand.

Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.
Until Saturday, then.

May the Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Issoudun, February 19, 1896

Dear Reverend Father,

We sense the need of a Chapter and everybody wants it. It is needed to appoint constitutionally Assistants and a Procurator General in our Society as well as drawing up in a definitive manner a Directory which is in keeping with the Constitutions, completing, explaining, determining, the meaning in an authentic manner.

In keeping, then, with the terms of the same Constitutions, number 107, 7, you are by right a member of the Chapter as local Superior and, accordingly, you will make arrangements to be at Issoudun for the feast of the Assumption, August 15 of this current year, 1896. It's there, then, at the mother house, that the Chapter will open, beginning with a retreat on Sunday, the 16th of the same month. If for some serious reason you cannot come to this gathering, you must let us know the reasons which the Chapter will then consider.

If you have not as yet forwarded your comments on the initial proofs of the Directory sent to you quite some time ago, please do so immediately since it's necessary to prepare the new and final statements before the Chapter meeting.

Besides those by right called to assist at the Chapter according to number 107 of the Constitutions, number 108 lays it down that once the Society is divided into Provinces each must elect three Chapter members to accompany those who are members by right. These three are taken from the Province which they will be representing, being elected by the priests who are perpetually professed members of the same Province, and have no canonical impediment. They themselves must, likewise, be perpetually professed. This election takes place in keeping with number 109 of the Constitutions. The votes are taken by secret ballot in each house by the Superior from the hands of the voters themselves, who have been brought together for this purpose at a house Chapter (meeting). Each vote is sent unopened to the Provincial who, for his part, at a Chapter meeting or, at least, in the presence of those eligible to vote in his house, scrutinizes secretly the votes cast, to which he will add all the votes forwarded to him from the other houses, going through them in detail. The three who have received most votes are elected and this is made known to them and the Superior General also, so that they have ample time to prepare for the Chapter.

You need then to meet these requirements by setting up as soon as possible a process to elect three Provincial representatives. You will give publicity to this letter as soon as you receive it and you will introduce as soon as possible the prayers appointed for the success of the Chapter.

1. Each day until the end of the Chapter at evening prayers before examination of conscience, the Veni Creator with its verses will be recited, together with the response and prayer to the Holy Spirit, followed by the Sub tuum and the normal petition to the Sacred Heart, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph. During this time the priests and brothers of the Society will pray most fervently, either before the Blessed Sacrament, at communion, or in private prayer, for a successful outcome of the planned Chapter.

2. A solemn High Mass will be celebrated in each house on the opening day of the Chapter or on one of the following three days, together with public exposition of the Blessed Sacrament if this is possible. Moreover, priests, whether temporarily or finally professed, will celebrate one mass and all the scholastics and lay brothers will make a special communion begging the blessings of the Sacred Heart on the planned (Chapter) meeting.

Assuring you, Father, of my warm regards and paternal devotedness in C.J.

The letter so ends; no signature.

Issoudun, February 20, 1896

18960222X

Council Meeting, February 22, 1896

All in attendance.

His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges approves the convocation of a Chapter; on his advice the Sacred Congregation will be informed.

1. A letter from the Cardinal Archbishop of Bourges was read stating that the planned Chapter was not alone purposeful but absolutely necessary and he approved its planning. He also advised the Superior General to make this forthcoming meeting known to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, as a result of which His Grace's letter will be forwarded to the Procurator General who will deliver it to the Sacred Congregation who in this way will become aware that a Chapter has been called.

Fr. Lynch appointed to Sydney; a sum of 600 francs has been set aside to help his mother.

2. Fr. Lynch has written once more about the financial contribution promised to his mother and the decision was taken that this amount will be taken from his mass stipends, totalling 600 francs, to be paid into the account of the Sydney house by the mother house. This young priest, besides, requested permission to keep a chalice presented to him by a benefactress on the occasion of his first mass, but it was thought that meeting his request would foster in him a proprietorial (independent) spirit and, accordingly, it would be best to refuse straightforwardly what he was requesting. And this measure would hold for those confrères in similar situations.

For more details on C. Lynch see at length Twohig, Late But Not Too Late. It is not unfair to say that this refusal rankled with Lynch all his life.

The amount stabilized for mass foundations received or undertaken spontaneously is fixed at 30,000 francs.

3. Fr. Maillard, responsible for the general bursary, pointed to the circumstances in which one could find oneself when disposing of assets to meet arrears which could be quite considerable (mass offerings, other amounts destined for the missions, ongoing debts due to building and work at the Sacred Heart). He expressed concern that mass foundations were no longer represented by sufficient capital. It was decided, therefore, that one should make available in reality, or the equivalent, a capital sum of 30,000 francs at least to meet the requirements of these masses, the number of which has risen to 736, and comprising the daily mass for the associates of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the first Fridays of the month, one for the Society's benefactors and another for the Petite Oeuvre benefactors. He didn't have in mind the capital represented by bursary foundations for the Petite Oeuvre because in his view the real estate of the Society (houses, ground) suffices for that.

Pierre Courbon and Joseph Xavier Valdambriini accepted for final profession.

4. At their written request and on the recommendation of the scholastic Director, Brothers Pierre Courbon and Joseph Xavier Valdambriini, Chezal-Benoît scholastics, were accepted for final profession. As well a postulant from Moulins, Bernard by name, who seems well disposed, was accepted for the novitiate.

Fr. Offermans authorized to accept a sum of money which is part of the three van Riel brothers' family heritage.

5. Fr. Offermans, the Tilburg Superior, made it known that the family of the three van Riel brothers, one a scholastic at Antwerp, another a lay brother at Tilburg, the third in the Tilburg Petite Oeuvre, intend to give the Tilburg house straightaway their willed assets, namely 3,000 florins each, which would go to them on condition that it becomes the property of the said house; if, however, one of these young men leaves the Congregation, he was to be given his share without his having to demand from the community any interest accruing from the use of his money. This proposal was found to be worthwhile and Fr. Offermans was authorized to accept it and advise the Provincial.

Accounts for the latter six months of 1895.

6. There followed next a survey of the financial accounts in the second half of 1895 from the following houses: Sacred Heart, Issoudun, Chezal-Benoît, Paris, Glastonbury, Rome, Barcelona, Vichy.

1. The Sacred Heart Accounts.

The intake, almost totally due to mass stipends and student fees, came to 43,662.69 francs, and expenses for the upkeep of 129 people and their hospital care, as well as welcoming a considerable number of visitors, confrères and strangers, came to 42,833.10 francs. This leaves a positive cash balance of 828.99 francs which together with 1,000 francs in fees becomes a positive 1,828.99 francs in credit which, however, does not cover the sum of 2,321.10 francs which has yet to be paid. The deficit of the house then comes to 492.11 francs. The budget for the year 1896 was drawn up on the basis of 70,428.99 francs in receipts and expenses of 71,425 francs for 1895, making a deficit, then, of 996.01 francs.

2. The Chezal-Benoît accounts.

The intake almost totally comes from pupils' fees and mass stipends. It amounts to 24,307.30 francs, while the expenses towards the upkeep of 76 people came to 23,545.38 francs, which gives a positive balance of 761.92 francs, which together with 498 mass stipends entails credit at 24,865.30 francs, which is not enough to meet the continuing debt of 7,191.74 francs which, when added to paid debts, comes to 30,737.12 francs and a total indebtedness, deficit, of 5,931.82 francs. The budget for the year 1896, based on the 1895 receipts, comes to 31,259.99 francs, with expenses for the same year reaching 42,205.25 francs, making for a deficit double that of 1895, that is to say 10,945.33 francs.

3. The Paris accounts.

Intake for the most part comes from chaplaincy work, mass stipends, special ministry, church intake, offerings from the faithful and a financial contribution from the mother house of 19,534.80 francs, as well as expenses made and paid out for the upkeep of 10 people, getting a new statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, interest on debt (about 8,000 francs yearly), rising to 14,725.57 francs, and which gives a cash balance of 4,809.25 francs, which together with cheques yet to be received, provides financial assets of 20,534.80 francs, but not enough to cover paid debts of 14,725.57 francs, together with 5,900 in debt to be met. As between, therefore, outlay 20,625.57 francs and intake 20,534.80 francs, there is a deficit of 90.40 francs (virtually nothing!). The budget anticipates a special, particular, outlay of 6,000 francs which cannot be met except through a contribution from the mother house to meet that sum.

4. The Glastonbury accounts.

Intake comes mainly from mass offerings, student fees and thereafter from the sales of the Annals and stipends from the different ministries, totalling in all 11,414.15 francs, which with 764 yet to be received comes to 12,178.15 francs. Expenses met for the upkeep of 22 people came to 11,363.10 francs which, together with 31,600 in remaining debt and 1,428 francs in fresh debt, gives an overall indebtedness of 43,797.50 francs.

The budget for 1896, based on intake and outlay for 1895, foresees a positive intake of 23,725.53 francs and an outlay of 23,474 francs which, together with the overall debt, comes to a (house) deficit of 54,480 francs. The total house debt is 30,754.30 francs.

5. The Rome accounts

The intake comes for the most part from offerings in favour of the Petite Oeuvre and the scholastics' fees and, secondarily, from mass stipends, from intake through the Annals, etc., making in total 40,830.58 francs, which, with an additional 2,500 francs, provided an intake of 43,330.52 francs. The expenses arising from the upkeep of 46 people, printing costs, mass offerings, subsidies for Jesi (the Petite Oeuvre), amount to 28,741.77 francs which, with 5,550 francs to be paid in debt, provide a total expense account of 34,291.77 francs. This gives a surplus of 9,638.81 francs. The budget for 1896, based on intake, outlay for 1895, anticipates a more considerable intake because of the surplus for the last account, coming to 62,488.81 francs, with expected expenses coming to 55,746 francs.

6. The Barcelona accounts.

The intake is drawn mainly from mass stipends, 13,560 francs, and taken from the sale of furniture, whatever, 4,141 francs, Annals sales 3,622 francs, intake from Canet 2,500 francs, etc., which with a balance of 58,546 francs reaches a total of 87,986.35 francs. The expenses for the upkeep of 18 people come to 4,518 francs, purchases and other expenses 11,222.26 francs, repairs at Canet 7,621 francs, the purchase of furniture 58,018.28 francs, giving an overall total of 82,327.68 francs, which taken from the financial assets of 87,986.35 francs provides a positive credit of 5,598.67 francs.

The 1896 budget based on intake and outlay for 1895, foresees 53,097.67 francs as intake and 38,850 francs as outlay, making for a surplus of 14,248.67 francs. But furniture costing 60,000 francs will have to be paid for with a down payment on it.

7. The Vichy accounts; second half of 1895.

The intake principally comes from the church contributions of 3,277 francs and, secondarily, from mass stipends 760 francs, preaching 700 francs and contributions to the church 624 francs, etc., coming in total to 6,148.45 francs. The expenses met are mainly for the upkeep of 2 people, about 1,800 francs, church expenses 874 francs and a contribution of 2,000 francs to the Society etc., mounting in total to 6,157.70 francs, such that in total there is a deficit of 9.25 francs. The budget for 1896, taking into account intake and expense for 1895 anticipates intake of 5,665 francs and outlay of 5,795 francs, making for a deficit of 130 francs.

J.F. Morisseau, MSC, Sec.
Ch. Piperon, MisSC.
J. Vaudon, MissduSC.

8. The Watertown accounts: second half of 1895.

The main intake comes from mass stipends 3,993 francs; other offerings come to 2,247 francs, church revenue 4,682 francs, contributions 2,594 francs, Annals receipts, 2,522 francs, the whole reaching 18,413 francs. The expenses meeting the upkeep of 17 people mainly comprise: 815 francs in interest; the upkeep and repair of buildings 1,060 francs; bread 200 francs, meat 1,598 francs; printing expenses 4,230 francs; heating, lighting 921 francs; the whole coming to 16,738 francs which, when added to 34,303 francs to meet an overall debt of 25,000 francs, entails negative financial circumstances of 51,042 francs. If one adds the intake of 18,413, above, there still remains a debt of 30,928 francs. The budget was not forwarded.

Issoudun, February 27, 1896

Dear Fr. Ramot,

1. Fr. Carrière has informed me officially that the German part of New Guinea has been given by the Propaganda Congregation to the Steyl Fathers Society. It's an accomplished fact.

2. He also informs me that Cardinal Ledochowski would be in favour of giving you the area of Dutch New Guinea if your Province could shortly send there some Dutch missionaries. Consider without delay this issue among yourselves. It is an important issue. If you can accept the proposal you would provide a great boost to Dutch vocations. If you have presently 5 or 6 missionaries available to send there, I am sure that Propaganda would be very pleased. You would in time add to the numbers in keeping with the requirements. From what Fr. Peeters said to me one day I think this proposal will make your Dutch confrères very happy. This part of New Guinea would be detached from the Batavia Vicariate and be a very attractive Vicariate. It would compensate for the part of the German section being taken from us. As soon as you have discussed this matter in council, let me have your decision so that I can begin dealings with Propaganda about it.

You must also at the same time let me know if you endorse the expectations about our Society greatly increasing its personnel in Holland. You must give me the number of priests, scholastics, lay brothers and Petite Oeuvre youngsters (in Holland). If your Dutch house has not resources, it will be short of subjects over some time at least, so I believe, since Germany does not wish to take them.

To a priest in Rome close to the Vatican with expertise in liturgical matters.

Issoudun, February 29, 1896

Dear Reverend Father,

I have recourse to your expertise to interpret a rescript which the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars has forwarded to us. I send you a copy of my request and that of the rescript. You will consider it and if necessary you may clarify the matter by consulting someone with expertise.

Copy of the letter sent to Rome.

Most Holy Father,

At the time our Society, the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, was approved, on June 20, 1874, we chose a religious habit with the approval of His Holiness Pius IX and our Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne. This habit consisted of a clerical soutane, a long cloak in black wool, a cincture of the same colour and a representation of the Sacred Heart on the soutane with the motto: May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved.

It has to be said, however, that our Northern Province, comprising Belgium, Holland and Austria, laid aside this habit several years ago. Having taken notice of this relinquishing during the last canonical visit, we requested that there should be a return to the former practice, except when travelling in Protestant countries where the ecclesiastical habit is forbidden. The Provincial has written to us requesting that there be a total dispensation from wearing the soutane inside as well as outside the house.

I. As regards the outside:

1. They are criticized by the diocesan priests, and they want to keep their support and approval.
2. Because they put themselves in the way of being the butt of jokes.
3. Because, so they say, it's the wish of their bishops.

II. Within their houses,

1. Not even for certain gatherings where the community comes together as a body;
2. Nor for the daily mass and the different services celebrated in church, and as well when they are not involved with the choir;
3. Nor for going to communion at the altar because, they claim, "the religious habit is not a choir habit, is not acceptable in church, and that it is contrary to liturgical rules which forbid presence in the sanctuary wearing the religious habit".

Nonetheless all religious who have their own habit wear it everywhere, in church, even in the pulpit, like the Dominicans, Franciscans and Redemptorists, etc., etc., except they are involved in the ceremonies whereby they are in attendance on the priest at the altar.

III. They maintain, moreover, that there is no need to make use of it except for formal entry to the novitiate and for profession day, being left aside otherwise even for the renewal of vows which takes place at the end of the annual retreat.

If that's the way it is, what is the purpose of the religious habit? Might we not just as well take out of the Constitutions that number which prescribes it as given above? Have we the right to do so?

We shall be very pleased to have an official reply to these expressed queries so that it can be forwarded to the interested parties.

I prostrate myself at the feet of Your Holiness, etc.

Issoudun, January 4, 1896

J. Chevalier, MSC.

A month later I had the following reply from the Sacred Congregation.

Number 7577/14

Rome Pater,

Usus in Provincia de quo in precibus dimittendi extra domum Instituti habitum a Constitutionibus praescriptum, quatenus existant causae expressae, usque perdurantibus, tolerari potest ; secus vero dicendum, de habitu gestando sive intra domum, sive in Ecclesia pro functionibus peragendis ; quo in casu standum esse Constitutionibus patet.

Hac S. Congregatio Episcoporum et Regularium mandavit significari Paternitati tuae cui omnia fausta adprecor a Domino.

J.Card. Verga Praef.

English translation of the Sacred Congregation's reply:

The practice which has been introduced in the Province, which is the purpose of the appeal, of leaving aside outside the house the soutane prescribed by the Constitutions may be accepted where the alleged reasons hold, and as long as these reasons continue to hold. But something otherwise holds where it is a question of wearing the soutane within the house or during ceremonies in church; in the latter instance it is clear that one must follow the Constitutions. This is the decision which the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars has requested me to convey to your Paternity on whom I ask the Lord to bestow His favours... etc.

Rome, February 26, 1896

Tui studiosus

J. Card. Verga Praef.

Superiori Generali

Mission S. Cordis in Issoudun.

There, Father, is where the problem lies. Two general counsellors out of five, not finding the Rome reply sufficiently explicit, are not of the view that one can enter into negotiations with the Northern Province without new explanations, because they say the rescript goes into no details, stating simply: "Quo in casu standum esse Constitutionibus patet." And then they add that the Constitutions do not lay down the instances – at least within the house – where the soutane has to be worn, stating simply that "the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart habit will be that which has been in use since 1874", the year in which it was approved for us.

But since 1874 the habit was worn by all our religious and novices:

1. at all the meetings where they met as a body;
2. in oratory and church each time they take part in common worship;
3. when preaching the word of God to the faithful;
4. when the scholastics and novices go to communion;
5. while saying or assisting at private masses;
6. while going into town or undertaking a journey.

It seems to me that the Rome reply adequately clarifies all these issues. Nevertheless, Father, since you have expertise in liturgical matters, and are often accustomed to meet Monsignor Boccafogli, be kind enough to find out from him if this is what the Sacred Congregation wishes to state about the six queries put before it and let me have the reply, since our concern is to observe its decisions in every detail.

My deep appreciation and most respectful good wishes in C.J.

Council Meeting, March 3, 1896

All in attendance.

Fr. Genocchi recalled to Sydney.

1. Reference was made to a number of letters from New Guinea which make clear great misunderstandings between Bishop Navarre and Fr. Genocchi. Since there is no likelihood of any lasting agreement between them, because there are faults on both sides, it was decided to recall Fr. Genocchi, by telegram, to Sydney where he will remain until the Chapter.

A fresh attempt by Fr. Tréand to get Fr. Merg removed.

2. A letter from Fr. Tréand was read stating that he was not at all satisfied with the Secretary of the Council's reply requesting him to keep Fr. Merg. He makes new and pressing claims to have him removed, but it was decided however that he would remain in Sydney until the Chapter.

Authorization to sell shares.

3. Fr. Maillard pointed out that it was necessary to meet several debts, reaching as high as 50,000 francs, and as the cash till was empty it was necessary to sell shares to meet this sum. This was approved of.

Brother Thomas Geboers, a lay brother, accepted for final vows.

4. At the request of the above-named, working in New Britain, and on the recommendation of Bishop Couppé, his immediate Superior, this dear brother is accepted for perpetual vows. He will be the required age on the first of May next, as well as having met the seven probationary years.

5. Rev. Bathelot accepted to the postulancy.

This seminarian from La Rochelle whose studies were no more than mediocre during 4 years in the major seminary and who was sent away by his Superiors, will only be accepted in the novitiate on condition that he pays a fee of 50 francs a month.

Council Meeting, March 14, 1896

1. Readings were given to the three latest conciliar declarations and they were approved and signed. There followed a brief exposition by the General Bursar of the financial circumstances of the Northern Province's houses whose accounts had been forwarded to him.

The setting up of a German bursary in the Northern Province.

The 1896 franc would presently (2009) be about 3 euros.

2. Fr. Ramot in his February 25 letter made it known that at the last Provincial meeting it was decided that the German bursary, from the beginning of December, would be separate from that of Belgium, and that from this account one would only withdraw the money for the upkeep of the German students who study at Antwerp, setting aside the remainder for the projected foundation. He added that this division of the two accounts is taking place at a time when intake is greater. Consequently during the current year, 1895, improvements were carried out which were more easily paid from the German account, giving rise to a current debt of 23,000 francs which remain from the last six months, and to be added on to the stable debt of 25,777 francs. Fr. Ramot is of the view that the current debt can be lessened during the present year. One can, accordingly, hope that, given the resources of Antwerp, it will be so.

However, several things come to mind as regards the creation of a German bursary. Assuredly one may look upon it as a wise anticipation of the future, but since it is a procedure quite special in the Province's short existence, it was right and proper to submit it for approval to the central administration. Just the same, why begin this new initiative on the first of December? It would be more reasonable to begin on the first of January which is the date among us everywhere when accounts begin to be set up. In any event, the Antwerp finances would be more appropriately set up. Besides, in setting up a German bursary, there should also be set up an account to be submitted to the General Council, and yet there is nowhere to be seen in the Antwerp accounts any evidence of this account being set up, unless the 1896 budget has receipts which are lesser in keeping with the amounts one foresees accruing to the German bursary, so long as the foreseen expenses remain the same, except for those which the new account must meet.

1. The Antwerp accounts.

Intake for 1895 comes to 188,964.35 francs; there is no remaining amount of money to be banked. Expenses meeting the upkeep of 203 people came to 177,196.36 francs. With current debt at 23,619.72 francs and an overall continuing debt of 85,777 francs, there is a sum of 286,590.08 francs to be met, with the result that the final financial outcome is a debt of 97,625.72 francs.

The budget has in the first place, however, a basic error. The intake of 96,13,429.88 francs (that is how the figure appears in the archives) does not tally with the intake of the previous six months, 11,770.99 francs. The second error is that the fixed debt does not tally at all with the real financial situation, meaning that the deficit is in fact 86,597.97 francs instead of 820 francs.

2. The Tilburg accounts.

The receipts come to 87,702.26 florins, made up for the most part of a 12,000 florin intake, an intake for the Petite Oeuvre of 16,000 florins, 9,000 florins in fees, and money received in mortgages, 13,000 florins. Expenses met come to 78,917.08 florins, mostly for the upkeep of 110 people and meeting the cost, 4,400 florins, of travel, 8,700 florins for print, publishing, expenses, 6,200 florins in mass stipends, etc. This outlay taken from intake leaves a credit of 8,785.18 florins. The permanent debt, borrowings of 44,406 florins, and mortgage capital, 106,113 florins, comes to 150,520.35 florins, but if one leaves aside the 72,587.59 florins which are in the account either on credit or rent, what is there is no more than 77,932.76 florins. There remain 6 burses each secured with a capital of 5,000 florins, that's to say 30,000 in total. There is a 24 mass foundation, one florin each, and a lamp at 1 florin, but the overall sum is not provided. To sum up, the Tilburg finances would appear to be quite healthy. The budget is correct.

3. The Salzburg accounts.

Intake comes to 52,261.91 francs, comprising mainly credit of 19,000 francs, 50,000 francs from rent, 6,000 from mass stipends, 9,000 francs as financial intake for the Petite Oeuvre and 8,000 francs from selling off. Expenses met came to 40,883.50 francs, meeting for the most part the upkeep of 74 people. Expenses for cultural projects came to 7,000 francs; mass offerings are 3,000 francs and new construction work 18,800 francs. On top of expenses met there is a 46,500 francs debt, means on outlay of 87,385 francs. The credit being no more than 52,261.92 francs, there is a deficit, then, of 35,121.58 francs in the financial situation. As the Salzburg budget is not balanced one doesn't know how it is hoped to meet this deficit. There is, however, adequate guarantee in the property.

2. A letter was read in which Fr. Vaudon shared with Fr. General the approaches made to him by Monsignor Bardel about Chezal-Benoît with reference to the fact that the Archbishop would be disposed to sell it, while allowing for all favourable measures in paying for it. Consideration was then given as to whether or not it was advantageous to make this purchase if it wasn't possible to bring together the novitiate and scholasticate in the new buildings at the Sacred Heart which remain occupied. The Council was unanimously of the view that the reasons in favour of removing the scholasticate from Issoudun have been valid for the past two years and will remain so; consequently the acquisition of , if up for sale, would be worthwhile and imperative, so to say. Nevertheless, it was thought that as there were still three years' lease, it was not a requirement to hurry up matters greatly, and that in the first place it was necessary to ascertain what were the Archbishop's plans. Fr. General was of the view that the property, as far as we were concerned, would not be worth more than 50,000 francs or so, but all indications were that having been bought for 76,000 francs and having additions made to it, it will not be let go (sold) for 50,000 francs.

The Sydney account – Randwick.

3. Intake comes from the offerings of the faithful, mass offerings and Annals' intake, the whole coming to 56,693 francs. Expenses involved in the upkeep of 123 people are, mainly, £114 for drink and £171 for priests passing through, coming in total to 27,060.60 francs. As between expenses and intake there is a surplus of 17,655.00 francs.

Brother Alphonse Vriend accepted for final profession.

1. Brother Alphonsus Vriend, cook at the Sacred Heart, who will be 30 years of age on April 14, and more than 7 years in probation, requests perpetual profession. Since he performs his duties with good will and there is nothing serious to be held against him, his request is accepted.

Three requests made to enter the novitiate: that by a parish priest, Fr. Dumas, an Italian priest and an ex Portuguese Jesuit novice.

2. Fr. Dumas is the parish priest of Préault, whose behaviour hasn't always been acceptable and for this reason he has been forced to leave his parish. Accordingly, for this very reason, he cannot be accepted in the Society. The second request comes from an Italian priest who has been accepted for ministry in Paris. Since he is due to present himself personally, he will be informed on arrival. The third request comes from an Alsatian, a former pupil of a Jesuit school, who left their Portuguese novitiate. The information provided is not adequate and one waits until Fr. Piperon gets it before reaching a verdict.

Ignation exercises adapted to the Sacred Heart by Fr. Ramot.

3. Fr. Ramot's proposal is to put together for our use 500 copies of his exercises of St. Ignatius adapted to the Sacred Heart, priced at 130 francs. The offer is accepted, but more to please him than to gain any real usefulness from his work, since many find that the exercises so arranged are disjointed and fragmented, with the replacing of Sacred Heart for Our Lord too common; for the rest, the excerpts from St. Margaret Mary quoted in support of the teachings of St. Ignatius are disjointed and are connected to each other in no way whatsoever.

The Watertown Annals.

4. Fr. O'Mahony makes clear in a letter that the Watertown Annals are not meeting their expenses and suggests that the publication should cease, since it would be easy to have recourse to other Catholic publications in order to promote their work. The view was taken that one should wait until the Chapter before reaching a decision on this issue.

5. The habit issue is not satisfactorily clarified by Rome's reply; the Constitutions need to be updated on this issue, as with the number about Chapter members. This is the view of Fr. Carrière.

Indult for the Chapter.

6. The indult was read endorsing the forthcoming Chapter, an indult which wasn't sought and which in fact is pointless.

A correction of the preceding discussion about the habit.

1. The two previous discussions which were accepted, except for number 5, at the meeting on the 23rd of this month, in relation to the Sacred Congregation's reply, were considered. This reply in answer to Fr. General's request states that the reasons put forward by the Northern Province to be released from wearing the religious habit can be legitimate, but not those alleged against wearing it for the different exercises within the house, in relation to which one must abide by the Constitutions. This reply implies, therefore, that the wearing of the habit within the house is obligatory and should be laid down by the Constitutions. However, since this does not seem to be so, it would appear that the rule is not binding enough to lay down the obligation of wearing the habit within the house. This lack of legal sanction seemed to be almost unanimously accepted at the Council meeting on March 23, but at the current meeting three members were of the view that the document which came from the Sacred Congregation indirectly supported and spelt out sufficiently an obligation to wear the habit within the house.

A life of the novice, Duvernois.

2. Fr. Píperon was given permission to print in brochures biographical articles which he is ready to publish in the Annals about the deceased novice Duvernois.

The Antwerp account and the German financial situation.

3. The Council discussed again the Antwerp accounts, and didn't approve of an account for a future German house which, introduced precipitately, would be detrimental to Antwerp. If through unforeseen circumstances the Antwerp house was unable to meet its current debts, it would have the right to compensate itself from the new (German) account, despite the decision of the Provincial Council.

Brother Fidelis accepted for renewal of three-yearly vows.

4. Brother Fidelis Theodore Andreas was admitted to renewal of vows, his Superiors commendably supporting him.

5. The lay brother Paul Cunin, a former pupil of the Petite Oeuvre who has ended his military service, was admitted to postulancy.

Council Meeting, April 6, 1896

1. Fr. General shared with the Council a letter from Fr. Suchet's sister-in-law stating that her brother-in-law has been made ill by the stifling heat of Spain, supporting what he says with the verdict of Dr. Landrieux, requesting on his behalf a six-month sojourn with his family, which the Dr. claims is absolutely necessary for the restoration of his health. Such a lengthy visit would not seem to be in keeping with our regulations. In any event it will not have an impact on the physical and moral condition of the unfortunate Fr. Suchet. At the same time, given that it is impossible to have him staying in one of our houses, since he would be a burden everywhere, it is the considered view that there is good reason to grant him the requested leave, while again encouraging him to request release from his vows since his state of health is such that he cannot remain with us.

Replacement of part of the Antwerp community.

2. A letter from Fr. Ramot to Fr. General makes reference to the embarrassment in which he finds himself as he tries to break up the numbers drawn together in the Antwerp house. The Council cannot give him any advice on this, other than to say that the German Petite Oeuvre, meant to be sited in Germany, or its neighbourhood, would be best undertaken straightaway rather than to split up the scholasticate. He intends to invite Fr. Guyot for the retreat of those being ordained, there is no problem about this.

Fr. Bellouvet, a former Jesuit, a former Father of Mercy, proposed as a candidate for the Society.

1. A letter was read from Fr. Pesnelle, Superior General of the Mercy Fathers, who commends to our Congregation one of his members, Father Bellouvet, a former Jesuit, a teacher in the third year with the Jesuits, who left to devote himself to preaching, a ministry to which he thinks he is called and in which he didn't succeed as he had hoped he might. Fr. Pipéron, who has given his view in writing, and two others, are of the view that the candidate does not have a sufficient guarantee of constancy in his vocation and that, otherwise, his abilities do not appear to be accompanied by balanced judgment, requisite humility, and candour in his obedience, all of which would make him more burdensome than useful to the Society.

Eight Rome student deacons accepted for the priesthood.

2. On the recommendation of Fr. Carrière the following eight deacons studying in Rome were accepted for the priesthood:

Neyens, Nijsters, Power, Bach, Gsell, Henry, Dormann, Vullings. Orlandi and Massimei were accepted for the latter minor orders. As the deacons Bach and Gsell were not of the requisite age for the priesthood, it was agreed that a dispensation on grounds of age should be sought for them. Priests are needed either for teaching or other ministries. Those candidates for the priesthood who have the ability should prepare to take their degrees before the holidays.

The offer of a parish made to the Watertown confrères by the Bishop of Erie.

3. A letter was read from Fr. O'Mahony, Watertown Superior, in which he made known that a parish in the diocese of Erie was offered, one which seemed to him to be advantageous; he requested permission to accept it. A decision on this was held over until the next Council meeting.

A postulant from Saint-Valérien, Yonne.

4. This postulant was commended by the parish priest of Saint-Valérien, a young man aged 17 who can study but hasn't yet begun Latin. As he agreed to become a lay brother, it's only on this heading that he can be accepted. Further information was sought.

The Bishop of Barcelona offers a permanent post to Fr. Gennaro Lacosta.

1. The Bishop of Barcelona has agreed at last to give Father Gennaro Lacosta a permanent posting in his diocese and, accordingly, it has been decided that he should definitively take his leave of the Society, having stated in writing that he accepts his release from vows and agrees to make no further claims on the Congregation.

Brother Secondien made available to Fr. Guyot for the thermal season.

2. Fr. Guyot having requested an active and pious brother to help him during the thermal season, consideration was given to Brother Secondien who meets these qualities and he is, accordingly, definitively made available to him.

The printing of the Directory proofs.

3. In order to make available the Directory project for consideration by the Chapter members, the decision was taken to make fifty copies available.

A parish offered by the Bishop of Erie to the Watertown confrères.

4. The proposal of a parish by the Bishop of Erie to the Watertown Superior was considered. The Congregation being already responsible for quite a number of parishes, the Council is not disposed to accept another. Nonetheless, since

Watertown needs an additional house in order to make available to its members, when needed, a change of residence, climate, the Council is willing to accept the offer, but before reaching a definite conclusion it needs certain assurances which Fr. O'Mahony must make available when presenting the contract proposals which he intends to make with the Bishop of Erie. It is only then that a decision can be reached, and go on from there to request the statutory indult for acceptance of a new parish, an indult which will be requested by the Bishop or with his co-operation.

Decision concerning Fr. Espérance.

5. Since Fr. Espérance's health necessitates a change of climate, he is invited, if his Superior agrees, to come to Europe. Fr. O'Mahony will bring him with him when he comes to the Chapter.

Buying out the rent on the Barcelona house.

6. Fr. Casas is proposing to redeem the rent on our house and the property right which means that with each change of ownership we could disengage from the house or be liable to pay 1% of its estimated value. He is wholeheartedly authorized, if it is possible, to act in this respect when the sum being loaned is negotiated.

To Cardinal Jean-Pierre Boyer, Archbishop of Bourges.

L 18960430

Issoudun, April 30, 1896

Your Grace,

At the end of the short preface which comes at the beginning of the proofs which I have the honour to commend to Your Eminence, there is to be found that declaration of full and entire submission to Rome's judgment, which you advised me to make.

Before I sought Your Eminence's approval, I presented my work to Fr. Daume, a theologian of merit, a lecturer at the French seminary and, I believe, also a consultant on the Index (of forbidden books). Having carefully considered the work and made some corrections which I took note of, he greatly encouraged me to publish it. I then presented it to a serious-minded editor and practising Christian in Paris who, before accepting it on his own initiative, had it also looked over, and following which he replied for his part that he quite willingly accepted this work, the success of which seemed to him to be assured because of its freshness and boosting viewpoints. It was after these initiatives had been taken, Your Grace, that it became a matter of duty to submit these final proofs to Your Eminence, taking the view that a quick survey would be enough to give an idea of the work and help to form a judgment. (The doctrinal part has no more than 234 pages.) As Your Eminence would like to consider the work unhurriedly, I am about to ask Mr. Reteaux to print only a small number of copies which will be quickly snapped up, and then, in another edition, I shall, Your Grace, make all the changes and corrections which the wisdom, piety and superior knowledge of Your Eminence will suggest.

I have received from His Eminence the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda, the official news of the Gilbert Islands' elevation as a Vicariate Apostolic. Cardinal Ledochowski sent me a questionnaire asking me to put forward three candidates. I placed Fr. Bontemps foremost, you will understand, because he has all the requisite qualities to be invested with episcopal dignity. Bishop Couppé, Apostolic Vicar of New Britain, sends me very favourable reports about his mission. His relationship with the German authorities could not be better; they aid him but leave him full exercise of his powers. Besides, conversions are becoming more and more abundant. Since last August he tells me that more than a thousand natives have been baptized, 800 of them adults. From every quarter village chiefs, even from the most remote places, are arriving looking for missionaries. The same thing is happening in New Guinea (later Papua) and the Gilbert Islands. It's wonderful!

The Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, who are about forty or so in these lands, provide wonderful support for our confrères and do marvellous work among the natives. In this respect, Your Grace, I believe the hour has come, if it is what Your Grace also thinks, to mention them to the Holy See and get a brief in their honour praising them. Their tiny Congregation is a model of piety and devotedness.

I place myself at the feet of Your Eminence, requesting your blessing and assuring you of my deep regard and filial submission in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I add the programme of our conservatives for Sunday's elections. It's a great advance; Your Eminence will be very interested in reading it.

Decision about Fr. Robadez's preparatory school.

1. A letter from a teacher, aide to Fr. Robadez, Rector at Saint-Pierre-des-Clages, who has left the preparatory school, was read, and gives his reasons for doing so. According to him, the school is very badly run. Fr. Robadez, leaving his deafness aside, hasn't the commitment and necessary involvement for a work of this nature. The youngsters are not sufficiently well chosen, most of them having no interest in a Church vocation, or at least in our Congregation. The conclusion was drawn that the Saint-Pierre-des-Claies (also Clages) has no future, and that it should be visited as soon as possible to verify matters and have the school transferred elsewhere if there is reason to do so, or else close it down altogether.

Letter from Bishop Couppé revealing widespread conversions.

2. From the Bishop's letter one gathers that conversions are marvellously increasing in his Vicariate, baptisms more and more frequent, and in hundreds.

Brother Edouard Willecome admitted to vows.

3. With the favourable recommendation of the Novice Master, the lay brother novice Edouard Florentin Willecome was accepted for first vows.

May 15. All members present.

Proposal to purchase Chezal-Benoît.

1. The Superior General made it known that Monsignor Bardel, acting on behalf of His Eminence the Cardinal Archbishop of Bourges, had put it to him that the Chezal-Benoît property could be bought for 60,000 francs. The Cardinal will take it upon himself to get the government's approval for this sale and, on the other hand, he will be accommodating as regards the means of payment. The Council once more acknowledged that this property was very useful, if not indeed necessary, to the Congregation as regards its facilities since some of them could not be possible at Issoudun. As for the price, it is not at all excessive if one keeps in mind the absolute value of the buildings and, accordingly, every effort will be made to get a reduction. However, if the Monsignor firmly insists on these conditions, they will have to be accepted. As for payment, there is need to have recourse to borrowings guaranteed by the property itself or by other properties of the Congregation.

2. Fr. Henri Peeters in Antwerp requested permission, granted to him, to publish a Dutch translation of our Constitutions, thoroughly considered and found to be accurate by Fathers Linckens, Offermans and Kicken.

1. The preceding meeting was approved as read.

Fr. Genocchi recalled to Sydney.

2. The differences of opinion and opposition between Bishop Navarre and Fr. Genocchi make it impossible for the latter to remain any longer at Yule Island and he is recalled to Sydney by telegram, where Fr. Tréand will find something for him.

As a result of his departure, the priests in that mission are without a Superior, and this role has been given to Bishop Navarre who, in addition to his role as Vicar Apostolic, will now add that of local Superior for all the missionaries of New Guinea. (This does not include New Britain.) Since the fusion of both functions is not canonical, the above-named appointment will be presented for approval to the Archbishop (of Bourges) in his role as Apostolic Visitor.

Brother Gustave Peeters, a scholastic in New Guinea, accepted for final vows and holy orders.

3. At the request and recommendation of Bishop Navarre, Brother Gustave Peeters, presently at Thursday Island, previously put aside for lack of intellectual ability, becomes finally accepted for perpetual vows and is also called to sacred orders.

Fr. Renouf accepted for first vows.

4. At the request and favourable recommendation of Fr. Piperon, Fr. Renouf is accepted for first vows at the end of his novitiate.

The opening of a novitiate in Sydney.

5. Fr. Tréand having decided, with the approval of Cardinal Moran, to begin a novitiate in a rented house while awaiting the projected constructions to be completed, the names put forward are those of Fr. Vandel as director, under the authority of Fr. Tréand as Superior, and Fr. Lynch as socius (assistant). The latter not yet 30 years of age, needs to have his appointment submitted for approval to the Apostolic Visitor (The Archbishop of Bourges).

June 1 Meeting.

1. On the recommendation of Bishop Navarre, the Australian Brother Placide Shaw is accepted for first vows, having made his novitiate under His Lordship, and it was decided that he could make his studies in Sydney.

Proposal to have a loan in Europe with Fr. Tréand engaging himself with Fr. Ramot in order to so do.

2. Fr. Tréand needs a loan of 100,000 francs to meet the cost of his new buildings and cannot do so (in Australia) due to the 5 or 5 and a half per cent interest, whereas in Europe he could do so at 4 to 4 and a half per cent, and wishes to do so in Belgium with Fr. Ramot as intermediary who will submit the matter to the General Council's decision. To meet Fr. Tréand's wishes, permission from Rome is needed according to the terms of our Constitutions. However, it was thought that it wouldn't be right to seek this permission because the loan could not be undertaken unless it was covered by the Antwerp house assets. It does not seem wise to allow a house to become so burdened on behalf of a house situated abroad, and be at the risk of no longer being financially able to look after itself if necessity arose. It would be otherwise if a loan was possible without any financial strain or concern for the Antwerp house.

Postponed decision about the Mercer foundation (Erie).

1. The decision about the Erie foundation was postponed until the forthcoming Chapter when one can hear Fr. O'Mahony's submission.

Brother Alexis Henkelman admitted to renewal of vows.

2. At the request of Fr. Buisson, Brother J.B. Alexis Henkelman's request for renewal of his temporary vows on April 24 was accepted, except for the endorsement of the local authorities which has not been forwarded.

Brother Claude M. Lathuillière, a lay brother novice, accepted for first vows.

3. With favourable reports this lay brother is accepted for first vows. It was decided, moreover, that in order to accept in the novitiate for lay brothers a postulant commended by Fr. Toublanc, all the necessary information must be sought.

10 rhetoric (senior) students from the Petite-Oeuvre and three others accepted as postulants.

4. Given a favourable report, the following rhetoric students were accepted for the scholastic novitiate: Jos. Caspar, Auguste Cadoux, Jos. Your Lordship,

You are aware that the issue with respect to Mademoiselle Baptiste and the Little Sisters of the Sick Poor was negotiated between her and Your Excellency without our knowing about it. It was only at your suggestion that she spoke at some length about it to me yesterday. She wanted to act on her own accord, she told me, so that her family would not think that I influenced her. Before contacting the good sisters in order to find out what their views were, I thought it my duty to advise the Archbishop about the circumstances of Mademoiselle Baptiste. I accordingly stated in my letter that there were deep divisions in the family because of the only nephew in the family's marriage in Issoudun to a young working class girl. Following the legal depositions, against the father's and aunt's wishes, both (the father and aunt) made it known that if they were to go ahead with the wedding they wouldn't get a centime from either of them, and they would dispose of all their assets in the diocese's favour. And that is more or less what they have done, despite my efforts to bring them together. I wrote to Your Excellency, o Father Béguinet and to the uncle Fr. Baptiste, the parish priest of Civray (Cher) (see article 2413 above). There could be no way of going ahead. The Clermont-Ferrand Sisters haven't personnel available to begin this undertaking next winter, and I accordingly contacted the Little Sisters of the Poor, whose mother house is at Mauriac (Cantal). Having acquired all the necessary information from the parish priest of Saint-Benoit-du-Sault, where one of their houses is to be found, I gathered the following (the original text creates problems of deciphering): a permanent foundation by the Superior General, in addition to the house and some furniture, would entail 12,000 francs (about 38,410 euros). I managed to find that amount. Everything was in order and the good sisters were due to go there this coming October. However, what I had foreseen came to pass. Fr. Baptiste (see letter 2413 above) wrote, or had a letter written, to His Eminence protesting and threatening litigation. In the face of this raising of temperatures and fearing a scandal, the Cardinal wrote to Mademoiselle Baptiste advising her to withdraw her plans, and to me requesting that I end all negotiations. I replied to His Eminence stating that I would do as he wished. Mademoiselle Baptiste, whom I had persuaded to will the rest of her fortune to her nephew, is most unhappy about this development, and more dissatisfied than ever with the uncle and nephew. As for myself, who did nothing at all in this matter as from myself, you may judge for yourself, My Lord, what my situation is like!! The whole town now knows of this foundation and approves of it. I must return the money which had been given to me and tell the sisters that they are not to go there. I shall unhesitatingly do so because that is what His Eminence wishes and I must not be preoccupied with the consequences. For me obedience is better than sacrifice. In order to give you some idea of the parish priest of Civray's state of mind, I am forwarding to you the letter he sent to me.

I have the honour to be with deepest respect Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Your Distinguished Grace,

I am requesting Your Grace to grant the "exequatur" for the enclosed rescript dispensing one of our confrères in the Northern Province from a canonical irregularity. In addition I would ask Your Grace to endorse the appointment of our Apostolic Visitors in New Guinea and New Britain as local Superiors of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart in their respective Vicariates. Since bringing together these roles is not in conformity with law, the lack of suitable personnel, however, makes it impossible for us to have separate individual appointments. Accordingly we requested a dispensation from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, which in an indult of September 30, 1891, granted the Archbishop of Bourges permission to authorize our Apostolic Vicars to exercise the charge of local Superiors. They were then, in keeping with our Constitutions, appointed for three years and this could be extended for a further three years. Since the second three-year period ends this year and as the lack of subjects continues to be the case, we are asking Your Eminence to sanction a further concession.

With deep respect I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

L 18960529

Issoudun, May 29, 1896

Your Grace,

Mademoiselle Baptiste, aged 72, a teacher in Issoudun since 1854, has come and spoken to me about her wish to give her house over to some good work, having obtained in word and writing the Archbishop's approval. It was also on that occasion that she told me she was undertaking these initiatives on the advice of Monsignor Bardel. His Lordship had already been in contact with the Clermont Sisters who in principle approved of a foundation. Before I could become engaged with this issue, I believed that it was my duty to make the Bishop of Parium aware of Mademoiselle Baptiste's circumstances. I informed him that she had a nephew without any financial means, married over the past year to a young worker in Issoudun who, on hearing of this bequest, loudly protested as did his uncle, Fr. Baptiste, the parish priest of Civray, who welcomed his marriage against the wishes of his father and aunt, both of whom didn't want the marriage at all, making it clear to the young man that they would disinherit him if he went that far. He fulfilled his legal requirements and got married, giving rise to great disappointment for both the father and aunt, both of whom immediately put their assets up for sale. I did everything to bring about a reconciliation, but my efforts came to nothing. It is in this context that Mademoiselle Baptiste went to Touvent at my suggestion to put a proposal to Your Eminence which, so she tells me, you accepted. As regards these notifications given confidentially to Monsignor Bardel, the response was that since Mademoiselle was under no obligation to her nephew and was at liberty to dispose of a house for a charitable purpose, I could, accordingly, negotiate according to her wishes in this matter and make every effort to bring about a prompt outcome.

I, accordingly, wrote to the Mother Superior of the Clermont Sisters, with whom the Bishop of Parium had got in touch in the first instance; she replied that while accepting this foundation she could not, due to lack of personnel, offer a fixed date. Since it could remain in a vacuum, I made overtures to another similar community. Knowing that at Saint-Benoît-du-Sault (Indre) there were sisters who cared for the sick poor, I wrote to Fr. Monchaussé, the parish priest, for advice and he provided me with very good information. I then got in touch with the Mother General of the sisters in Mauriac (Cantal), offering her Mademoiselle Baptiste's house with a modest amount of furniture and, in addition, 10,000 francs on condition that she should maintain in perpetuity three sisters in Issoudun. She replied that, while accepting wholeheartedly the offer, the income of 10,000 francs was not, in her view, enough, asking me, therefore, to add some further thousands of francs and the matter would be concluded. In addition to the 10,000 francs which I had procured, I was able to add two thousand more. Some days ago she replied, accepting the foundation under these, set out, conditions and in October next she would come to install her sisters. It is, then, a fully arranged matter unless Your Eminence thinks otherwise. These good religious care night and day for the unfortunate sick, look after the running of the house and take care of children, etc., etc., and all without reimbursement. A work of this nature can only do the greatest good in our town and draw people to the Lord. I have always longed for something like this ever since I became parish priest here.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient son in C.J.

July 1896

Dear Fr. Superior,

We were very pleased that we were about to have a Chapter, the Apostolic Visitor having acknowledged that we needed one, with the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars approving it with a rescript. But reclamations against it were presented to the Bourges Cardinal while he was in Rome, coming in particular from Bishop Couppé, asking him (the Cardinal) to postpone the Chapter because of his fear that Assistants will be taken from the Northern Province, thereby having an adverse effect on his administration and having a harmful impact on his New Britain mission. His Eminence (the Cardinal), on the eve of his return, saw the Pope, made known to him the concerns expressed and, therefore, Leo XIII told him to inform me that the Chapter should be postponed. On your arrival the Apostolic Visitor's letter will be made available to you in keeping with his wishes. Despite the way things are, you will come to Issoudun at the time already arranged and we shall take things forward from there. Following our retreat in common we shall together consider the Directory and other issues which concern the Congregation.

Council Meeting, July 1, 1896

All members present.

1. Proceedings began with a reading of the preceding minutes which were accepted.

Bishop Couppé's letter against the convoked Chapter.

2. Bishop Couppé's letter was read in which he stated that he was sending a memorandum to the Cardinal (Boyer) protesting against the Chapter taking place under the pretext that a certain individual could be withdrawn from the Northern Province who was needed by it, but who he himself (the Bishop) would not hesitate to call for as his coadjutor. If the reading of the letter was either acceptably or indifferently received by some, it led to a painful impact on others who feared that the projected Chapter might have the same fate as those preceding it.

The sale of postponed.

3. A letter was read from Fr. Vaudon on behalf of Monsignor Bardel stating that the sale of Chezal-Benoît by the Archbishop would need State approval and should be put up for auction, His Grace hoping that the legal formalities would be completed by the coming autumn, and that the publicizing of the sale (by auction) would be as curtailed as possible.
4. The Council voted in favour of setting up a German Petite Oeuvre at Münster, but the latest information is that such an enterprise is not possible for the time being.

Brother Bonaccorsi called to the subdiaconate.

5. At Fr. Carrière's request, Brother Bonaccorsi, teaching at Jesi, is called to the subdiaconate.

The lay brothers Brothers Basilius and Arnoldus accepted for renewal of three-yearly vows.

6. At the request and with the support of their Superior, Brothers Basilius Maas and Arnoldus Zwarhoed were accepted for renewal of their vows which expire on August 15.

The novice Fr. Doutre accepted for first profession.

7. At Fr. Piperon's request, Fr. Doutre is accepted for first vows. In addition, at the request of Fr. Toub Blanc, a postulant is accepted for the lay brothers' novitiate.

Issoudun July 4, 1896

Your Eminence,

Bishop Couppé, Apostolic Vicar of New Britain, a German colony, has written to me stating that he sent a memorandum to you requesting Your Eminence to postpone indefinitely our Chapter meeting which had been fixed for the first fortnight in August. The reason he alleges is his concern that one of his staff, whom he considers absolutely necessary to him, at least for the time being, for the smooth working of the Province of which his mission is a part, might be appointed Assistant or Procurator General.

This Chapter, the need for which is recognised by Your Grace, only meets for a twofold purpose: 1, that of appointing members of the Administration or confirming those in charge; 2, drawing up definitively those parts of our Rule or Directory, the need for which is felt to be necessary. We do not see any possibility of postponing at this stage the Chapter meeting and this for a number of reasons:

1. our confrères from distant countries are already on the way to it;
2. all our Superiors who are part of it have already accepted wholeheartedly its convocation, making no complaints;
3. adjournment would create a very bad impact, weakening authority or belittling it;
4. Bishop Couppé exaggerates the issues, only paying attention to the particular concerns of his own mission which, in fact, is in no way compromised. He presupposes that the Chapter has in mind to interfere with the administration of his Province, and it's nothing like that. Quite clearly the Chapter members who are conversant with the situation in the Northern houses will not take away from them people who are indispensable. It will be the same in Sydney where the Cardinal wishes the present Superior to stay on, at least for some years. My duty at the opening of the Chapter would be to make known the wishes of Bishop Couppé and the Archbishop of Sydney, and everything leads one to believe that their wishes will be respected.

In any event, if the Sacred Congregation of Bishops thinks that it should intervene and advise the Chapter members not to take any personnel from the Northern Province into the General Administration, they will all the more act in keeping with this because everything issued from Rome is sacred for them. Accordingly, the Chapter will have no other purpose than the revision of our common, general, rules which remain incomplete and, as well, giving definitive expression to the General Directory, which is really called for and which everyone considers to be an absolute necessity, in order to bring conformity to our houses and avoid any recourse to what is arbitrary and entails abuses.

Once more I prostrate myself before Your Eminence, seeking your blessing and offering my deepest respect and filial submission in C.J.

PS: Your Grace,

Thinking you were still in Rome, I went to post this letter and the postman handed me the letter you kindly wrote to me. I have nothing further to add except that time is not on our side because those from Oceania who are coming to the Chapter have already left. Knowing the personal views of the Holy Father, matters will remain as they are in the present status quo, meaning that the Assistants and the Procurator General will not be changed.

As for ourselves, we look upon it as an advantage that the Superiors can come to Issoudun and give an account of their administration, the disciplinary and financial state of their houses, as well as examining together the new Directory. We are persuaded that this reunion, keeping within its appropriate parameters, can be very worthwhile and doesn't create any problem, unless Your Grace, having consulted with Rome, was to decide otherwise.

Copy of a letter from Fr. Chevalier to Bishop Couppé in reply to his.

My Dear Lord,

I rejoice with you on the latest successes which you describe in your most recent letter. When you get this letter your 650 new catechists will be baptized. It really is most heartening. The good Lord is showering your mission with his blessings. It gives great promise for the future. I doubt very much if you can get Fr. Meyer. The Northern Province is about to open a new house in Germany and the Berlin government has given its consent. The decision has been taken, but to found a house requires experienced and serious men. It will be very diminishing for the Antwerp house, already all too lacking in personnel. Where are they going to find people? Already they haven't enough for themselves. And if they were to make Fr. Meyer available to you, and he is a key personage, it would lead to a collapse of an undertaking which is already shaky. You write: "Fr. Vandel can go and replace him." The Cardinal Archbishop of Sydney would never consent to that. Fr. Tréand is irreplaceable at Randwick because of the novitiate and the new buildings; he is the heart and soul of this house; if he were to leave everything would crumble. It is, then, pointless for you to count on his availability.

Cardinal Moran, in connection with the Chapter, wrote requesting me to leave Fr. Tréand in Sydney where his presence was greatly needed. If Tréand were to be made an Assistant at the Chapter, the Cardinal would appeal to the Pope to have him remain in Sydney. You are compelled, then, to await until the Northern Province has capable subjects to come to your aid. Meanwhile you will do your best and the Lord will continue to bless your undertakings as He has already done. One must learn to wait when one cannot do anything better for the time being. The good Lord does not demand the impossible.

I carefully read, my good Lord, your protestations against the Chapter which, nevertheless, all the confrères keenly wanted to take place, the Apostolic Visitor thought was greatly needed and the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars had endorsed in a rescript. If you had shared your concerns and wishes with us requesting that they be made known to those at the Chapter, nothing would have been more appropriate. We would have ourselves considered them carefully, and our intention would have been to make them known to the delegates, all of which would be most proper. We had foreseen this and it was our intention to present the issue at the preliminary meeting, asking the confrères to take the matter into consideration, either by confirming in office the Assistants and Procurator General, or by bringing into the French Province other counsellors if it was thought there should be replacements of those in office. Then we could have brought about the definitive drawing up of the Directory which everybody feels is absolutely necessary. There you have the appropriate, orderly, circumspect way forward which Your Lordship should have followed. But not so; he sends his protest directly to His Grace the Apostolic Visitor, requesting him to postpone the Chapter until the Northern Province is solidly established. When will this be the case, with its varied undertakings and its lack of experienced and competent personnel?

In so acting:

1. you have demonstrated a lack of confidence in your major Superiors;
2. you have made them look uncaring or irresponsible;
3. you have, thereby, given bad example in the sense that you support and endorse inferior subjects, if one assesses rightly the situation, in appealing to higher authority against the decisions either of the Superior General himself or his Council, without a valued or satisfying explanation.

I am very taken aback, Father, that, despite the wisdom I associate with you, and your mature age, you have not realized that you are bringing into our Society, already shaken, a principle of unrest and insubordination. Past examples should have been very much an abject lesson to you.

What has all this led to? It is simply this: your protest was forwarded to Rome where the Cardinal Visitor (Boyer) was on a visit. He, on the day before his return, expressed his concerns and wishes to the Pope, who straightaway took note of them and, after the meeting (with Boyer), ordered the Chapter to be postponed. And this, let there be no mistake about it, is what we shall do as the Pope's wishes are sacred for us. What then are the consequences of your intervention? A serious weakening of the principle of authority among us, and a depreciation of the running of our institute in the eyes of the Holy See and its Roman Congregation. This appears certain to me.

Please accept, my dearly regarded Lordship, my best wishes in C.J.

Signed: J. Chevalier, MSC.

Your Eminence,

In keeping with the orders received from Rome and Bourges, I hasten to present to my gathered confrères the letter you were pleased to write to me in the Holy Father's name ordering the postponement of the Chapter. This decision was accepted with deep respect and total submission, but also, I have to tell you, with astonishment, which became all the greater when I read the rescript from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars which I had just received. Here is what it says:

Dear Father, etc.

Bishop Couppé has in this way abrogated to himself a right which goes against all normal procedures. A religious of the Sacred Heart, he thereby gives a very bad example to his Congregation which, if others were to follow, would lead to the ruin of the authority to which everyone adheres for the general good. He takes his personal inclinations directly to the supreme authority, without even as much as consulting his Superiors. With such procedures a Society becomes no longer governable.

There you have, Your Grace, a copy of the letter which, in agreement with the Assistants, I thought should be forwarded to Bishop Couppé.

The view was taken that this practice should not be allowed since the likely unbecoming quality of it cannot be compensated for by any advantage.

Letter from Fr. Guyot about the completion of the Vichy chapel.

4. He insists on bringing to a conclusion the work on the Vichy chapel, giving as his main reason the frustration of the Vincentians, who are about to leave Saint Louis and set themselves up nearby. The financial costs of the Paris house and the purchase of Chezal-Benoît do not favour a satisfactory answer to Fr. Guyot's request. Nevertheless, one must ascertain what amount is left over from what has been given for the Vichy church by Mademoiselle Thibault, and the architect must be asked what the cost will be to finish the chapel, following which a definite decision will be taken.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I am delighted that you already feel well and I hope that at the end of your session (at the spa) you will come back absolutely better. I am very moved that the Bishop of Blois remembers me (Charles Laborde) and also Fr. Sellier, Vicar General of Tours. Offer my humble respects to them and remember me also to the worthy deans of Beezançais and Levroux (two parishes of the Bourges diocese in the Indre). If you see Fr. Sellier on his own ask him if there is any truth in the rumour that the Archbishop of Tours would like to put us in charge of the Holy Face (devotion) since it is in perfect conformity with that of the Sacred Heart, of which we are the Missionaries.

Perhaps the individual who told me about this acted from the heart and out of the interest he shows in us, rather than the wishes of the Archbishop.

Try to get the Vicar General to organize a Tours pilgrimage to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart (Issoudun).

Keep going and hurry up with the life of Bishop Verjus without failing to include a chapter on his penances since it is a good thing that in our century people become aware that there are expiatory souls. You will find in the Annals' proofs, which have been forwarded to you, some pages given to the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. If there is a surfeit of material you can take out parts of Brother Devernois' sermon on Our Lady. It is a pity that nothing is mentioned about 3 other little pilgrimages which are taking place in the months of June and July.

Council Meeting, July 12, 1896

All present except Fr. Vaudon, still at the spa.

1. The minutes of the previous meeting were approved.

Observations on the postponement of the Chapter.

2. The majority of the Assistants, asked to give their views on advising Superiors about the postponement of the Chapter before their arrival in Issoudun, were in agreement.

A letter from Fr. Carrière about this postponement.

3. A letter following his hearing about the postponement expressed his great disappointment; the dossier about the issue will be sent to him.

Brother Bonaccorsi called to the subdiaconate.

4. He finds himself, however, threatened by his family's creditors, and his ordination can only become possible when these issues have been taken care of and he is safeguarded against any claim.

The sending away of Brother Héraud.

5. The scholastic Héraud, having confidentially told his sister in a letter, which by chance came into the hands of his Superiors, that he did not intend to stay in the Congregation, will be told to leave as soon as possible.

Approval of construction work at Hiltrup near Munster.

6. Fr. General made the Council aware of a letter from Fr. Ramot announcing the purchase of ground at Hiltrup near Munster for 24,000 marks, with the construction plans envisaged (foundation, two wings at the side, chapel in the middle), all at a cost of 230,000 marks, according to the architect's estimate. The Council, having looked over the plans, approved the construction.

The Saint-Pierre-des-Clages preparatory school.

7. This preparatory school in Switzerland was considered at length, Fr. General suggesting that two of our members should join the rector, Fr. Robadey (earlier referred to Robadez), in order to maintain and develop the school, but as against that it was pointed out that there was a need for capable personnel for undertakings more necessary than that and, as well, there would be the anomalous position of two confrères under the authority of a secular (priest) who would necessarily be in charge, and there was the likelihood of no future for a work not well undertaken from the beginning. In this context regrets, unfortunately pointless!, were expressed about the small number of members, the lack of religious formation, or rather that of the wrong kind, one of the reasons being the excessive onset of undertakings.

To Father Jean Vaudon, MSC, at the spa.

Issoudun, July 19, 1896

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I hope you have at Caeterets the sun which for more than a month burns us here. Your treatment should be making you much better and, meanwhile, I hope you are really finding it advantageous.

The Bishop of Blois has been kind enough to write me a nice letter thanking me which I don't deserve. I am not in the least astonished by the reply of the senior Vicar of Tours. I am delighted to hear that you are the subject of good will and congratulations on the part of the priests in Caeterets.

The regard and approval extended to modern Congregations, and ours in particular, seems to me to be quite excessive. Undoubtedly, we have before us a hopeful future focused on the Sacred Heart of Jesus, but it is imperative that we know how to make the most of it and for this, as you say, we need to be men of self-denial, discipline, obedience, study, prayer. Oh! How far away are we from this! I am fearful indeed when I note that our young men have so little generosity, liking their ease and independence. Sacrifice is costly for them and the yoke of religious life weighs on them. It is time to react and have (create) true religious worthy of the name. Let us pray to the Sacred Heart and Our Lady to come to our aid and we can succeed; we shall bring about marvels.

Cheerio, Father. Nothing new here.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Council Meeting, July 23, 1896

1. All members present except Fr. Vaudon at the spa.
The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Request from the former Brother Hêrault for financial help.

2. A letter from the ex-brother, Hêrault, in financial straits, was read, asking for help. The view was taken to give him some support until he found employment, but nothing beyond that.

An issue with regard to poverty.

3. Fr. F. Boudin presents a proposal to add to capital of 600 francs in the Picquet bank the annual rent of 30 francs which it created. The counsellors saw this as an infringement of religious poverty which, they said, does not allow a religious to have his capital appreciating while at the same time his expenses have to be met for everything in the house. At the same time our Constitutions, number 42, state that a novice, before taking first vows, should transfer the administration and interest of all he has to whatsoever good cause he chooses, which would appear to exclude the interest from accruing to his own advantage. Nevertheless, there are some who do not altogether clearly see this as being excluded, all the more so when an individual can make capital out of his revenues less for his own proper advantage than for the enhancement of certain specific or unspecified undertakings.

Decision as regards the completion of work on the Vichy chapel.

4. The Council acknowledges, given Fr. Guyot's observations, that the bringing to an end of this work could impede the Vincentians from setting up in the neighbourhood, and in any event it would be conducive to the achievement of good on a greater scale. It was thought that if borrowing could take place at a lower rate, around fifty thousand francs, the work could begin in the expectation that revenue from the completed chapel, greatly increased, would help to pay interest on the money borrowed.

5. Fr. Blanchet has asked to leave the Congregation and he is free to request release from his vows.

A decision as regards Brother Legardeaur.

6. As he is in poor health and needs a season at the spa, it was thought that it might be more worthwhile for him to go home to his family.

Council Meetings, July 26, 31, 1896

All present except Fr. Vaudon.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read, approved, signed.

Decision about Brother Legardeaur approved.

1. He will return to his family to restore his shaken health so that he can meet the requirements of community life.

The delegates will be called, together with the Superiors, to meet before the Chapter.

2. This meeting will replace the postponed Chapter.

Fr. Michel granted permission to visit his uncle at the Glandier Chartreuse.

3. Fr. Boutrais, Prior of the Glandier Chartreuse, has a brother, a lay brother, who would like a visit from his nephew, Fr. Michel, whom he has never seen; there is nothing in the way of meeting this request and it will be an occasion for the holiday he needs.

The preaching of a mission made Fr. Guyot's responsibility.

4. The request for a mission involving two people, due to last at least fifteen days, made by the parish priest of Trèves (Rhone), has been made over to Fr. Guyot.

A contribution of 600 francs allocated to the sister and brother-in-law of Fr. Lanctin.

5. Fr. Lanctin, having made the case that his sister and brother-in-law were in penury, sought an annual contribution of 600 francs which was approved.

A petition to set up stable personnel to run the scholasticate.

6. Hopes were expressed for the provision of stable personnel in charge of the scholasticate, providing assurance as regards the direction of the scholastics.

Fr. General and Fr. Maillard put forward for a visit to Switzerland.

7. Both agreed to visit the preparatory school of Saint-Pierre-des-Clages.

July 30 meeting.

1. Fr. General, finding himself unable to travel, Fr. Batard will go to Switzerland with Fr. Maillard.

The request of Fr. Casas for exemption from the pre-capitular meeting turned down.

2. Fr. Casas, having requested exemption from the pre-capitular meeting, was not exempted.

Fr. Miniot's request to buy nearby property.

3. Finding that the house was not large enough to provide adequate hospitality for missionaries on passage through Marseilles, Fr. Miniot recommends purchase of a nearby house due to be sold by auction (at a deposit of 1,500 francs) and which has been sold twice for 26,000 francs. It was agreed that the house should be bought if what is borrowed does not go over 4%, or if the Jullien residence presently occupied can be mortgaged making possible a loan of 4 and a half per cent of available credit.

To Cardinal Jean-Pierre Boyer, Archbishop of Bourges.

L 18960807

Issoudun, August 7, 1896

Your Excellency,

Within a month we shall be celebrating the 27th anniversary of the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. This solemnity is always impressive in Issoudun. Our joy will be complete if we can be in expectation of Your Excellency's presence to add to the splendour of the occasion. An announcement like this in our Annals would draw huge numbers of people from all parts of France. Would it be acceptable to Your Excellency if we were to invite to the ceremony some bishops whose names you might care to give us?

This lovely celebration is always preceded by a preaching triduum. I thought of inviting the archpriest of Chambéry Cathedral who preached last year at the St. Martin of Tours novena, with great success, so it is said. Would Your Excellency ratify this choice?

I kiss Your Excellency's hand, seek your blessing and offer my respectful good wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Chevalier, in his confidential observations (Notes Intimes, p.71), would write that the Cardinal, unlike his immediate predecessors, was not greatly sympathetic to the devotion, "and I don't know why this is so".

In the event Cardinal Boyer was not present on September 8, when Fr. Chevalier read the following telegram:

"I THANK YOU FOR YOUR GOOD WISHES AND THE FERVENT PRAYERS WHICH ARE COMPENSATING FOR MY BEING UNABLE TO BE PRESENT WITH YOU. I GIVE MY BLESSING TO PRIESTS AND PEOPLE. CARDINAL BOYER."

18960811X

Council Meeting, August 11, 1896

All present except Fr. Vaudon.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Request to be released from assisting at the pre-Chapter meeting.

1. A letter from Fr. Ramot was aired in which he requested Fr. General to dispense his Provincials from attendance at the planned pre-Chapter meeting, the purpose of which he is at a loss to explain and which could give rise to regrettable quarrels. The Council was of the view that if the meeting hadn't authority to endorse the projected Directory, it could at the very least consider it and prepare for its acceptance in a normal Chapter. He was to be sent a reply in this sense, stating that at the very least all Superiors should be present. Fr. Hartzler from Salzburg asked how he should set about making known that a normal Chapter was not to take place, and the view was taken that it was enough to inform the confrères on his return about the meeting.

The purchase of a house in Marseilles.

2. A letter from Fr. Miniot made it known that he had made a bid of 21,000 francs for the neighbouring house which he wants to purchase and it will remain bought at this price if there is not a higher bid.

29 Salzburg novices accepted for vows.

3. Fr. Ramot has forwarded the list here given of 29 novices accepted by the Provincial Council for first vows on September 8, 1896.

Arnold Jansen	Joseph Filbry
Léon Kieffer	Constant Van der Kerkhof
Fritz Schlund	Joseph Lebrun
Bruno Schinke (1st October)	Joseph Wendler (1st October)
Antoine van den Bogaard	Charles Machner
Louis van Heukelom	Henri Bleeker
Joseph Oberreiter	Alphonse Van de Wouwer
Charles Huss	Jean van der Bergh
Joseph Winthuis	Alphonse Fréson
Joseph Ulrich	Jean Stehlin
Adrien Muskens	André Fritsch
Xavier Baindl	Léon Grummeninger
François Ott	Léon de Roover
Edouard Reichl	Richard Schunim
Gérard Vesters (1st November)

New organization for the Northern Province's scholasticate.

4. In addition, Fr. Ramot presents the new arrangements made by the Provincial Council for the school year about to begin; the scholasticate is divided into two sections: one, the theological, being set up at Rosenhof near Contich under the direction of Fr. Ramot, Provincial and local Superior; the other, for the philosophers, remaining in Antwerp under the direction of Fr. Meyer, local Superior. In addition, Fr. Kuntz, socius to the Novice Master, is appointed professor of dogma and being replaced by Fr. von Hasselt who, not having the canonical age for this post, will need a dispensation on grounds of age. All these depositions were approved of by the Council.

5. A report was read in which Fr. Casas assessed the personnel in his house.

6. Fr. Gotteland was approved of to help out in the Paris house during the holidays.

Finishing work on the Vichy chapel.

7. Fr. Guyot again made a request that work be completed on the church, mentioning a sum of money he had put together to commence the work. Fr. General will discuss this matter with the architect.

To Fr. Jules Vandel, MSC, Sydney.

L 18960811

Issoudun, August 11, 1896

Dear Fr. Vandel,

Calm down, Fr. Tréand will be returning. When calling the Chapter our intention was indeed focused on advising Chapter members not to touch Fr. Vandel or the Superiors in the Northern Province, since these individuals are greatly needed where they are at the moment. One would indeed have taken this into consideration either by ratifying the status quo or by acceptance within the French Province.

But lo and behold, someone fearing otherwise (Bishop Couppé), wrote to Rome requesting that the Chapter be postponed. Accordingly, last week, I received a rescript from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars requesting me to postpone the Chapter for another year, and that's what has happened.

But it is unacceptable that mere subjects should act in this manner without taking pains to consult the Congregation's major Superiors beforehand. In order to satisfy one individual, one unsettles everyone else, since all keenly wanted this Chapter to finish off work on our Directory and make firm our undertakings. Rome has spoken; we shall obey. Cheerio, dear friend.

My regards to all in C.J.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Council Meeting, August 16, 1896

All present together with Fathers Batard and Maillard.

The visit paid to the Saint-Pierre-des-Clages preparatory school.

1. Fathers Batard and Maillard spoke about their visit to the above-named school, providing an excellent account of the management of the school and Fr. Robadey, who is in charge. The students this year are better chosen than those of the previous year, eight seemingly certain to come at the next intake.

Rescript from Rome postponing the Chapter.

2. The rescript was read which, meeting the wishes and concerns of Bishop Couppé, laid it down that holding a Chapter was not expedient at the present time.

Proposal to request the Cardinal Visitor to hold a Chapter.

3. This request has particularly in mind a survey of the Directory. The issue is held over for debate and decision when the Chapter members arrive for the retreat. There was no unanimity, however, for making a plea to the Archbishop and the proposal was abandoned.

Your Excellency,

We are pleased to share with you the joy we are experiencing as we all find ourselves gathered together in our cherished mother house under the welcoming regard of our venerated Superior General and Founder. We may indeed endorse the Psalmists: "Ecce quam bonum et quam jucundum habitare fratres in unum." (How good and delightful it is to be with each other and united, Psalm 133.)

The retreat, which is just finished, will, it is to be hoped, give rise to good results, measures of peace, unity and holiness which will bring joy to your heart. In addition, Your Grace, before we leave we would be pleased, your health permitting, to have you among us to discuss the concerns of our dearly loved Congregation. If Your Grace cannot come to us we would greatly appreciate, if you thought it opportune, a meeting with you on a date and at a place where we could meet you either altogether or in groups.

Please accept Your Grace our deep regards and respect and bless your cordially submissive sons in Corde Jesu.

I shall be grateful if you were to favour the gathered Superiors the request they are making of your paternal good will.

18960902X

Council Meetings, September 2,3, 1896

All present.

1. The proceedings of the previous two meetings were read and ratified.

The issue raised in number 2, immediately following, was made irrelevant at the September 9 meeting; see below 18960909X.

2. The issue of scholasticate personnel was raised, arising from an issue which leaves it to be understood that the present Director, Fr. Vaudon, has lost overall confidence in regard to its direction. He asked to leave the meeting in order to give the members full freedom to discuss the issue.

In principle the members of the Council would appear to be agreed on changing Fr. Vaudon, but were not unanimous about the way and the time it should come about. Some thought that it should, in the interests of the place, happen straightway. While appreciative of his talents and his commitment, they thought that he did not provide his students with a training which was sufficiently religious and, besides, did not exercise over the professors the requisite impact of leadership, while it seemed to be a problem to provide him with others (staff) who would be competently suitable as lecturers in theology and philosophy.

Others (at the meeting) thought that this change should be held over, continuing with the present status quo for this school year now about to begin:

1. because there is no experienced individual available to take charge of the scholasticate;
2. because Fr. Vaudon has made praiseworthy efforts this year to guide his youthful charges;
3. because, given the inadequate material (people) to hand, in no way could he do any better; would someone else in his place have had more success?

Given this exchange of views, the Council decided to refer the matter to His Eminence the Apostolic Visitor. This would be done while the meeting was taking place. Meanwhile, the Council would deal with other issues.

Fr. Genocchi called to Sydney.

3. The decision was taken to recall Fr. Genocchi to Sydney, either for work in the scholasticate or elsewhere.

The following scholastic novices admitted to first vows.

4. After a satisfactory survey of the reports, at the end of the present month (September) or the month after, the following will be admitted to first vows: Brothers Desnoës, Smith, Tissier, Aliotta, Branger. Brothers Valdambriani, Maher, Fauvet, who have not fully satisfied the Novice Master, have been held back for six months.

A decision to continue with the Mercer Foundation, Erie Diocese, USA.

4. Having listened to Fr. O'Mahony, Superior, Watertown, and having had fresh comment from him about the foundation at Mercer in the diocese of Erie, it was agreed that this undertaking should continue without, however, making any definite arrangement with the local bishop. This arrangement will continue until a fresh survey is taken. Fr. Derichemont is appointed Superior of this new initiative.

A decision taken that the Glastonbury house will be just a residence, with pastoral work undertaken at Burnham.

5. Having been provided with a report by Fr. Hartzler and another by Fr. Derichemont, about the situation in the Glastonbury house, the conclusion was drawn that the little school could not continue if it was unable to meet its expenses and where, in any event, one did not have the requisite personnel. The decision was taken, accordingly, to continue with this house as simply residential, where one would promote devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, look after the Burnham pastoral district and whatever special ministry could be taken on. Besides, if the opportunity arose, one could prepare some youngsters for entry to the Petite Oeuvre. Personnel would be limited to Father Fernand Hartzler, Superior, Fr. Martin, Bursar, Fr. Calloway and two lay brothers. Fr. Audouy will be recalled at the end of the month and made use of either at or Issoudun as science teacher.

Permission granted to Fr. Ramot for acceptance of a property in Belgium as a gift.

6. A statement was read out in which Fr. Ramot stated that an individual in Belgium wished to leave a small property to the Congregation, and he thought the most expeditious way to receive this gift would be by means of a fictitious sale carried out by the donor. He requested approval for this gift in favour of the Society and it was granted, on condition that once concluded he would see to it that, in the event of his dying before the donor, the property acquired would not in any way go to outsiders (by re-sale or a will in somebody's favour; this last, a will, would have to be in favour of someone in the Society).

Various decisions as regards the Rome house.

7. Having discussed matters with Fr. Carrière and listened to his expectations, a number of decisions were taken as regards the Rome house.

1. The proposal for a novitiate.

The Council approved a little novitiate in principle to be set provisionally for the Italians in the house under the direction of the Superior. Since this project cannot be carried out immediately, it will be realized next year.

2. The Petite Oeuvre returns to Jesi.

The Cardinal Visitor being of the view that the Petite Oeuvre of Jesi, partly moved to Rome the previous year, should not remain there and there is every reason to hope he will place no obstacle against moving it once more to Jesi. Measures will be undertaken to bring this about.

3. A benefactress has presented Fr. Védère with a sum of 14,000 francs on condition that rent will accrue to her of 4% during her life. It was agreed it should be accepted with its conditions, and the money used for the betterment of the Church, the construction of new altars to replace the present ones which are no credit to the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart sanctuary. Since the amount here in question is not sufficient to meet the necessary expense (of the work) an appeal will be made to the generosity and good will of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart associates through the Italian and French Annals.

A decision taken to send two students to Rome.

4. While the Procurator's wishes cannot be met by making available to him the number of students he requests for the Rome scholasticate, it was decided that the Northern Province should give him one and France would do its utmost to send two.

5. Brother Bonaccorsi, supervising at the Jesi Petite Oeuvre, is accepted for the subdiaconate and will return to Rome for his theological studies, replaced by the newly-professed Aliotta.

Brother Massimei Agelo accepted for final vows.

6. At the request and recommendation of Fr. Carrière, he is accepted for final vows.

To Father Jean Vaudon, MSC, Chezal-Benoît.

L 18960902

Vichy, September 2, 1896

No greeting.

Thank you for your kind letter.

1. Ask Fr. Piperon in my absence to get in touch with Fr. Field and inform him that he will be going either to Glastonbury or Watertown. I don't know which of these houses it will be. Let him take care to give him good advice before he leaves! He will do the same as regards Fr. Mathieu, who could stay at the Sacred Heart and wait until I return on Friday morning.

We are having a Council meeting on Saturday. Come early as we have a great deal to consider.

In the event, Field went to Glastonbury.

2. The discussions to which you refer can be easily counteracted or laid aside, whichever would be best. Our good fathers, whom you know, have allowed themselves to be all too readily impressed by exaggerated reports and comments, and still more by the less pious. But they would appear to have laid aside these impressions.

Chevalier refers here to the Council meeting, described above (18960902X), which dealt with the scholasticate staff and, in particular, Vaudon himself, who could well have been replaced, but remained in post to avoid a reaction on his part which would be damaging to the Society.

3. I think myself, dear friend, that you would have done better if you had said nothing to the lecturers about the new programme which we are putting together before God for the good of all and without favouritism. Abuses have cropped up at times; that is certain. They must be stopped, since otherwise the mediocre religious would look upon them as established custom which authority has no right to get rid of. From this (mentality) there arises indiscipline and a bad attitude. At all costs we must seriously endorse and insist on the rule and offer a good example of all the virtues. Only in these circumstances will the good Lord bless us.

Chevalier here refers to insufficient religious direction and intervention in Vaudon's direction of the scholasticate.

I hope that Fr. Piperon will shortly have completed his work on the running of the scholasticate such as we had set it out. We shall look at it again and if we think it is worthwhile to promulgate it, and also Rome, we shall have it approved by the Apostolic Visitor. I do not think that your young charges, pious and submissive as they are, will have anything more to say; in any event we shall weigh up what is for and against Until Saturday morning, then.

Cheerio, my friend; nobody more than myself gives you a fairer hearing. You can count, more than ever, on my regard for you, my feelings and warmth for you in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

You will be well aware, my friend, that in all the issues brought before the Council, I am only one voice and I don't wish to impose my view. Over 4 years, if not to say all the time, this is the way of proceeding to which I committed myself, whatever has been said otherwise. Please do not make me responsible for the decisions taken.

J.C.

Issoudun, September 5, 1896

Dear Friend,

Yes, come to Issoudun with your scholastics on Tuesday. (The scholastics contributed to the singing at the 11am mass in the open on September 8.) On Wednesday we shall begin Council meetings which will last all the week. Make your preparations, accordingly, also Fr. Piperon. I am thinking of going to Vichy on the 14th. I am bothered, tired, sick from all these goings-on. If there are some who are opposed to you, you can count, nevertheless, on many friends, among them Fr. Piperon and myself, etc. who will see to it that the justice you merit is done to you. Be assured: this unwelcome storm will blow out like so many others more serious, and contribute towards the glory of God and the general well being of our dear Congregation. On Tuesday I shall speak to you in more detail. Meanwhile, everything I have written and said to you is for yourself alone and make absolutely no reference to it. I do greatly hope that you will continue to remain in charge of the scholasticate. He would do so until the end of the July-August Chapter, 1897.) The decision rests with the Cardinal (Boyer); the reasons which are in your favour should make an impact on him. In any event, my friend, you are an Assistant and so you will remain; it's your rightful place and I greatly want it so. You have shared our trials, fought the good fight and continue to do so.

The forthcoming Chapter will bring about what it wants, but while awaiting it let us be united and in rank like an army ranged in battle. We are only seeking the best interests of our little Society; the Sacred Heart will reward our efforts.

Cheerio, my friend.

Totus tibi ex intimo corde.

18960909X

Council Meeting, September 9, 1896

All present. The letters of the previous meeting were read and accepted, except one cancelled issue.

1. Fr. Vaudon, having provided the Council with satisfactory explanations, the decisions taken about him were foregone. It was decided that His Grace the Apostolic Visitor should get a letter stating that the expectations are to remedy the failings noted in the scholasticate, removing several lecturers, and introducing certain regulations which will be submitted for approval to His Grace. For this reason, and others already broached, he (Fr. Vaudon) will continue in charge of the scholasticate.

Fr. Dorgère, dismissed from the Tours major seminary for lack of ability, is turned down as a postulant.

2. A discussion followed about accepting Fr. Dorgère who has made interrupted studies since the age of seventeen, at first with the parish priest of Savonnières (Indre-et-Loire) and then on being admitted to the major seminary, Tours, aged 20, he did a year's philosophy to no avail whatsoever. Some members of the Council were of the view that nothing would be lost by accepting him on trial, but the others, faced with the comments provided by the Superior of the Tours major seminary, were not at all favourable to him, concerned that his acceptance could lessen regard for the Society, not being willing to accept him even if he promised to pay. This latter viewpoint prevailed.

Acceptance to first vows.

3. At the request and support of the Novice Master, Brother Ducloux was accepted for first vows as a lay brother.

4. The Novice Master, following further reflection, thinks that the decision to postpone Brother Maher's vows was too severe and he thinks that he can be accepted. This decision was approved.

Fr. Durin appointed chaplain at the Sacred Heart.

5. Fr. Durin is appointed chaplain to the basilica.

6. The appointment of personnel for the different houses in the French Province for the school year 1896-1897 now took place:

Sacred Heart House

Fr. Lanctin, Superior and officially in charge of the school, comprising the Petite Oeuvre and the day school. Bursar: Fr. Batard; Assistant Bursar: Fr. Weckel. Petite Oeuvre teachers. Fr. Pourquier, rhetoric; Fr. Bernard, second year; Fathers Michel, second year; and Fr. Guillaume, fourth year; Fr. Gotteland, fifth year; Fr. Meunier, sixth year; Fr. Audouy, history; O'Mahony, English; Brother Esser, German; Mr. Bertin, science and French courses in the day school; Fr. Weckel, a preparatory class for the newcomer students from Alsace. Supervision: Brothers Esser and Gaspermans. Day school teachers:

Laliaux, in charge, and teacher to the fifth; Aug. Boudin, the sixth; Régis Rasclé, the seventh and eighth; Mr. Feuillat, elementary class. Supervisor, Fr. Quoirier, who will, if necessary, provide French classes.

The Chezal-Benoît House

Fr. Mathieu, professor of moral theology, will receive another appointment and be replaced as official director of the house by Fr. Cochet. Fr. Field will, likewise, finish as professor of philosophy and be sent either to England or the USA. The personnel will comprise the following: Fr. Vaudon, Director; Fr. Genocchi, professor of moral theology; Brother Jourdon, dogma (!?); Fr. Alain de Boismenu, philosophy; Fr. François Boudin, scripture; Fr. Cochet, Church history and university philosophy (sic!); Brother Pouvreau, sciences.

The Paris House

Fr. Renouf is to be left there, Fr. Coutre is to be sent there and, perhaps, Fr. Pierre taken away.

The Marseilles Procure

Fr. Deidier will remain on there and, perhaps, Fr. Toubanc will be sent there. Finally, it was decided that Fr. Bazot would be called to Antwerp where he would work in the office or elsewhere. Likewise one of the three brothers in Glastonbury, a superfluous number in this house, will be withdrawn and sent to Barcelona.

Council Meeting, September 26, 1896

All present.

1. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and signed.

A change in the Vichy building plan.

2. At the request of Fr. Guyot, a change was introduced in the plan. In place of laying the foundations for all that side of the chapel which remains to be finished, there will be a limiting of the work to two sides which straightaway provides more space and room for a greater number of people. In consequence of which, financial intake will be greater and thereby one can proceed to the completion of the building.

Fr. Pacaud appointed to Marseilles. The request of Brother Eloi to go on the missions taken into consideration.

3. Fr. Pacaud, neither well enough to go on the missions or be involved in active ministry, is, at his request, to stay on in Marseilles. Brother Eloi, for his part, again requests that he be sent on the missions. He wants to be helped by someone who could replace him and help him to put things in order in the recently-purchased house (Marseilles). It was decided to meet his wishes.

The acceptance of the young postulant Goirand.

4. He has been recommended on a number of occasions by Fr. Maugenest and Fr. Caseneuve. He is illegitimate, but persists in his request to be accepted and the qualities he exhibits would appear to be a sufficient reason for him to prove himself.

Brothers Louis Gouffé and John William Maher accepted for final vows.

5. With the recommendation of Fr. Vaudon, the above-named were accepted for final vows. As for Fr. Pourquoi who also asked to be accepted for final vows, a definite decision was not reached because his Superior did not present satisfactory information.

Fr. Mathieu appointed to Paris.

6. Fr. Mathieu was, then, appointed to Paris. Then different issues were discussed on which no definite conclusion was arrived at, among them the proposal for a college (San Miguel, Barcelona) made to Fr. Casas. The meeting ended with a reading of regulations drawn up by Fr. Piperon for the scholasticate.

Council Meeting, September 29, 1896

All present.

Proposal to sell the Canet property to the Marist Brothers, or buy, on behalf of the Congregation, ground which is the necessary source to provide water for the property.

1. A letter from Fr. Casas was read in which he pointed out that the Canet property lacked water either because there was a drying-up or because the water from certain springs was impeded from getting through by other owners of ground where there were wells. This ground (where the wells are) is for sale at 20,000 francs and it would be necessary to buy it if sufficient water for the said property is to be assured for the future. If we do wish to buy, our lessees, the Marist Brothers, are offering to do so if we agree to sell our property to them. The view is, however, that it wouldn't be appropriate to sell Canet. As for acquiring the ground where the wells are, one must find out if it's really necessary to buy and if the price of 20,000 francs isn't excessive.

Fr. Carrière delegated to visit the places mentioned immediately above and take note of the college offered to the confrères.

It was agreed that Fr. Carrière, who knows the country (Spain) and its customs, should pay a visit to see for himself what is involved. Moreover, he will give consideration to the college being offered to our Barcelona confrères and find out for himself if it is as easy as is being said to set it up there and who would be in charge.

Fr. Linckens, Dezpresse and Lindeboom appointed consultants in Antwerp.

2. At the request of Fathers Ramot and Meyer, Fathers Linckens, Dezpresse and Lindeboom were appointed members of the local Council, three being named because Fr. Linckens, involved with setting up a house in Germany, will be away very often.

3. The lay brothers Edmond Zwarthoed and Andreas Carls were accepted for final vows on the recommendation of Fr. Jullien, replacing Bishop Navarre in New Guinea, both of whom are thirty years of age and have had seven years of probation.

4. On the recommendation of Fr. Offermans, Tilburg Superior, the scholastic Rutten was accepted for final vows on the expiry of his temporary vows on November 21.

The construction of buildings along the side of "the fields of love".

5. To end, Fr. General made it known that well-wishing friends were providing the necessary funds to build along the side of "the fields of love" where it was proposed to set up offices. The expense involved according to the architect would, approximately, come to 30,000 francs. The Council, giving consideration to the fact that this new building is more needed than all those already completed, believes that the financial offer should be accepted very appreciatively and that work should begin as soon as possible.

Circular letter as regards Rules and Regulations.

C 18960929

Issoudun

Feast of St. Michael, the Archangel
September 29, 1896

Reverend Father,

It is very consoling for me, following the work and trials of a long career, to leave behind me, when leaving this world, for our well-loved Congregation, a more complete Directory than what is in our former regulations which, drawn up in the early years, were sufficient to meet the needs of that time. But the tiny seed sown in benign soil where it germinated has developed within a garland of divine blessings and that which was adequate in the first instance is by that very fact incomplete (nowadays). We have then, aided by our Assistants, prepared a more complete and explicit Directory which we have presented to you, dear Father and to all the Superiors of the Congregation's different houses. It was our wish to present it for approval to the General Chapter, but you are aware in what circumstances our hopes could not be realized. We accept this postponement resignedly, having reason to hope that it will not be lengthily prolonged. While awaiting it, it is our duty to encourage you to observe with fidelity the existent regulations which have been in force since the foundation of our institute. It has been brought to our notice that doubts have arisen among some of our confrères about our former rules and regulations being no longer obligatory and the new ones – which are not substantially different from the previous ones – not yet sanctioned, unable, for that reason, to be imposed on the Society's members. This gives rise, according to these confrères, to an absolute void of rules and regulations until the Directory makes explicit what the Constitutions can only refer to in a general way.

I can only with great difficulty accept that this kind of reasoning can come about or, to say the least, that reflection gave rise to it. In any event, it would be very objectionable for anyone who thought like that, and it would be for those with whom it was shared. If regulations are a prerequisite for every society, all the more so are they necessary for every religious society whose members need to be linked to each other through bonds of common observance, since otherwise all too quickly confusion and disorder would come about.

Fr. Ballerini (Jesuit, 19th century moral theologian) succinctly gives his reasons for this requirement (Tract. IX de stat. part. C.1. No.82): Jam diximus ordinem religiosum absque aliqua regula quae normam praescribat vivendi ac servandi vota modumque praestituit, quo specialis finis religionis sit consequendus, esse non posse, tum ex rei natura, quae communitatem aliquam sine aliqua communi et stabili lege diu vivere non permittit, tum ex voluntate apostolicae sedis quae, non permittit professionem religiosam nisi in Communitate vivente sub regula quam ipsa probaverit. This rule approved by the Holy See is identified with our Constitutions. They are in their importance and authority the primary and fundamental law, endeavouring to set out the main and characteristic features of the institute. As for entering into the details of the religious life, this is necessarily the Directory's function and since it hasn't yet appeared our foundational rules and regulations must take its place.

These have, in fact, been in vogue since the beginning of the Congregation. All who make religious profession accept them and if, before taking vows, someone made it known that he was not willing to abide by them, his Superior would have expelled him from the Congregation as someone unable to become a member. Most assuredly these rules have not, from the beginning, been abrogated neither by the Superior General, the Holy See or a General Chapter. Consequently, they have the force of law until a new Directory has been promulgated by the competent authority.

Accordingly, in the event of anyone becoming subject to some dangerous illusion on this issue, see to it, Father, that this letter is read by the members of your community and viva voce if necessary. The obligations of our office enjoin us and make it obligatory for us, once more, to insist on observance of these general and particular regulations, such as they have been expressed in the past. As for yourself, Father, see to it that all the religious in your house are faithfully submissive to it and do not forget that this is part of your responsibility. Note what Craisson has to say in his elements of Canon Law (L. III, art. IV). "Etsi regula non obliget sub peccato, superiores tamen tenentur transgressiones ejus, etiam leves, prudenter corrigere, et quidem sub gravi si exinde magna disciplinae relaxatio oriri potest."

Lehmkul speaks in the same vein: "Superior ex officio bonum commune Ordinis curare debet ; quod maxime consistit in instituto et observantia regulari sancte custodienda. Quare notabilis negligentia in permittendis subditorum defectibus, in ipso gravis culpa est. Neque solum quae videt corrigere, sed etiam, ut videat, inquirere debet. Nihilominus debet etiam plura nosse dissimulare et cum prudentia corrigere ne nimia severitate plus noceat quam proficiat." (De oblig. Rel. No. 158) If then the Superior is obliged, and sometimes sub gravi to oversee the observation of the rules, can it then be likely that a religious who habitually offends against them could imagine that he was above and beyond all reproach? Such a one can only be a laid-back, half-hearted, religious on his way to losing his vocation and putting himself in danger of being dismissed from the institute, something which is a very serious matter, very threatening to one's salvation.

If the future of the Society and its well being depend on faithful adherence to the Constitutions and Rules, then the spirit of independence and irregularity which is coming about would be its ruin in a short while. To be rid of this likelihood for good I would ask you, Father, to make known to us those who are habitually falling short in this respect, and who have not been brought back to the appropriate standards of regularity by your fatherly admonishments, which are part of your role and duty as Superior (No. 52). Such-like, according to the Constitutions, should be removed from the institute (Cons. No. 183). As this obligation, however, is one of the most painful to discharge, you will make every effort in sparing us this calamitous circumstance by having your subjects understand that the basis of all holiness for a religious is to be found in the devoted and exact observance of the Rules, this being the basic and primary obligation of his vocation.

Blessing you, dearly loved fathers and all your confrères in the house, I am happy to declare wholeheartedly that I am warmly, devotedly yours in Corde Jesu.

Financial Statements of the Society's houses, first six months of 1896 and 1897 Budget

1. Sacred Heart (Issoudun).

The normal intake almost exclusively comprises mass offerings from clergy and pupils' fees, totalling in all 48,780 francs. Normal expenses met for personnel come to 46,570.45 francs, making for a surplus of 2,209.55 francs. But there is a debt of 2,544.10 francs outstanding, which means an overall deficit of 339.55 francs. Budget. Given what is stated immediately above, there is no need to provide a budget distinct from the accounts.

2. -Benoît.

The intake is similar to that at the Sacred Heart, comprising a total of 21,022.16 francs. The expenses met for personnel of 60 people come to 21,022.16 francs, leaving an even balance, but 3,677.75 francs have to be paid, which is to say that there is a deficit for that amount. The Budget. Intake comes to 30,498 francs with outlay at 37,251.90 francs, making for a deficit of 6,753.90 francs.

3. The Paris house.

Normal intake comprising contributions to the church, mass offerings and financial contributions, came to 20,652.26 francs. Other special contributions came to 1,399 francs making in all an intake total of 22,651.21 francs as against 18,944.59 francs paid out in expenses covering a personnel of 9 people and not with reference to people going from and coming to the house. There is a surplus, then, of 2,106.74 francs, but 250 francs are due to be paid out as ordinary expenses. But there is an overhanging debt of 125,000.25 francs which added to the above 18,944.59 francs of normal expenses gives a total debt of 144,194.52 francs against intake of 22,051.21 francs, making for an overall deficit of 122,143.26 francs. The budget was not forwarded.

4. The Marseilles house.

The intake comes for the most part from subsidies made available by the mother house (4,356 francs), making a total of 6,705.65 francs. Expenses for 6 people comprise, mainly, the purchase of furniture (2,052 francs) and construction costs (1,973 francs), giving a total of 6,585.80 francs, the whole comprising a balance of 119.85 francs. There is no budget.

5. Rome.

The main incoming financial assets are a cash account of 12,088 francs, different financial assets totalling 12,481 francs; mass offerings and receipts from the lighting of candles 8,721 francs; contributions towards the Petite Oeuvre 10,190 francs, making a total of 43,482 francs. Since an additional special intake adds a further 1,120 francs, the total in receipts comes to 44,102 francs, to which one can add an indemnity which is due of 15,000 francs, but as of now the total is 44,602 francs. Normal expenses met are mainly the cost of living for 46 people, the Jesi Petite Oeuvre included (6,568 francs), and there are costs outside the house totalling 8,529 francs and other expenses totalling 7,612 francs, bringing up a total of 28,133 francs. Extraordinary expenses met came to 2,273 francs; in total the expenses met come to 30,406.29 francs and if one adds to this 2,792.62 francs in normal expenses the whole sum comes to 33,198.91 francs, of which 14,196.44 francs is to hand with a surplus of 12,903.82 francs. The 1897 budget foresees normal and special intake of 61,208.81 francs and expenses, both normal and special, at 53,650 francs, giving a favourable balance of 7,558.81 francs.

6. The Glastonbury house.

Intake from salaries and contributions come to 5,195 francs. Mass offerings provided 3,510 francs and these figures add up to a total of 10,334 francs if one adds a special intake of 3,750 francs, making a total of 14,084.75 francs, which when added to 2,081.70 francs provides a positive total sum of 16,166.45 francs. Expenses met for 21 people come to 10,233.05 francs, of which 2,929 met the cost of living and 3,099 francs were spent on outside requirements and 1,648 francs were paid out for diverse expenses. With 3,750 francs paid for special, specific, expenses, this leaves a total sum of 13,983 francs paid out and if one adds 2,863 in normal expenses and special expenses of 27,256 francs, the whole to be met comes to 44,103 francs. Consequently, there is a deficit of 27,936 francs. The budget was not forwarded.

7. The Spanish house.

Normal intake came to 37,502 francs, inclusive of a cash reserve of 5,598 francs. The bulk of normal intake comes from mass stipends (12,402 francs). Special indemnities to be met come to 40,000 francs at 5% interest. The total intake to be met comes to 77,522.69 francs.

Expenses for 17 people:

1. Normal expenses met come to 13,121.72 francs.

2. Special expenses met, principally the purchase of ground, at 54,171.92 francs.

This gives a total of 72,293.64 francs, leaving a surplus of 5,208.45 francs. If one adds to expenses met a loan of 40,000 francs to be reimbursed, there is a short-fall of 112,293.64 francs as against credit of 77,502.99 francs, giving rise to a deficit of 34,791.55 francs. Expected normal expenses: 51,600 francs; special expenses: 2,808 francs, together with a continuous debt of 40,000 francs making in total a debt of 94,408 francs as against credit of 57,208.44 francs and, consequently, a deficit of 37,199.56 francs.

8. The Tilburg house.

1. Normal outlay: 68,525.19 francs; special outlay: 51,291.76 francs, making for a total of 119,543.75 francs.

2. Normal expenses met for 110 people: 50,790.45 francs; special expenses: 51,492.06 francs, making a total of 119,543.95 francs, in total 102,284.31 francs. Since there is neither intake due or expenses to be met, there is only normal and special intake as against expenses met, giving in total a surplus of 17,259.64 francs. No budget for 1897.

8. Salzburg.

Intake, normal, 111,506 francs; no extraordinary expenses; no other financial assets or intake envisaged.

Expenses for 75 people:

1. Normal expenses: 79,167.24 francs

2. Special expenses: 98,976.96 francs making a total therefore, of 177,814.20 from which 84,814.20 has been paid out, while 93,000 francs remain to be paid out.

This means the availability of 29,961.80 francs and a deficit of 66,308.20 francs. No budget for 1897.

L 18961002

Issoudun, October 2, 1896

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I am forwarding the 600 francs (about 1,920 euros), your three-monthly allowance. Fr. Durin has left America for good. He returned to Issoudun three weeks ago. His health has improved. He asked me for permission to go to the Trent Congress and I granted it. He wrote a letter to me from there full of enthusiasm.

Cheerio, Father. Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Joseph Ferdinand Durin, 1836-1897, was the founder of the MSC Association St. Joseph of the Deliverance in his Moulins diocese parish, Nocq-Chambérat, in 1863, and from 1864 he was a member of the Association of Diocesan Priests of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun. He went on to become an MSC on June 24, 1871. For two years he was bursar at Issoudun before leaving to found the Watertown house in 1875; leaving France on April 12. He left Watertown in 1881, taking charge of the first group of missionaries to go to Oceania, but ill health forced him to return to the USA. Again, in 1885, he left from San Francisco for New Guinea, but he didn't stay more than two years before returning to the USA to work on his own initiative at West De-Père, Wisconsin, where he set up the confraternity called "The Saint Joseph Association" and its monthly magazine "The Annals of St. Joseph". In 1896, very tired physically and mentally, he left his parish having it in mind to spend his final years in France. However, two months after his arrival in Issoudun, feeling much improved, he returned at the end of October to the USA where, very soon, he launched a new publication "The Messenger of the Poor Souls", the first number coming out in December 1896. He once again experienced a crisis in his health, but this time of a fatal nature, dying on January 9, 1897 at the age of 61.

18961003X

Council Meeting, October 23, 1896

All present.

Changes of personnel.

1. The changes made at the September 9 Council meeting have been modified as follows: Fr. François Boudin is made available to Fr. Laliaux for the higher French course at the college (Issoudun) for lay students. Fr. Pourquier is replaced as rhetoric teacher at the Petite Oeuvre by Fr. Bernard who is replaced by Fr. Bazot for the second year class. Fr. Guillaume moves to the third year, leaving the fifth year to Fr. Gotteland. Fr. Michel remains with the fourth year. Fr. Matthieu is made available to the Paris house and is appointed curate at Saint Ceyr; Fr. Field is appointed to the Glastonbury house.

A discussion about the missions. Fr. Bontemps: his unsuitability for the episcopacy.

2. Consideration was given to the missions in the presence of Fr. Maillard, who deals with the missions, and Fr. Tréand, Superior of the Sydney procure. From a number of comments made by Fr. Leray, Fr. Fillodeau and Fr. Tréand himself, it became clear that Fr. Bontemps was generally disapproved of (as a candidate) because of his singular manner and eccentricities which, in consequence, made him unsuitable to be appointed bishop. Consequently, the Procurator General in Rome will be requested to petition Rome to appoint another, Fr. Leray that is, as Propaganda's candidate when appointing an Apostolic Vicar for the Gilbert Islands.

The need to consult with missionaries before naming an Apostolic Vicar.

Fr. Tréand stated that what is practised in other Congregations should be also introduced by us, namely consulting the missionaries working in the Vicariate to find out from them whom they thought should be considered the most likely candidate. Many agreed with this observation and thought it would be helpful also to appoint someone who could support Bishop Navarre and replace him if he couldn't exercise his duties any longer as Apostolic Vicar; this would have to be done in a discretionary manner without giving offence to the venerable office-holder.

Thursday Island Catholics neglected by Fr. Buisson.

Fr. Tréand in addition stated that the Thursday Island Catholics were very neglected by Fr. Buisson who neither preached or heard confessions. If someone from there complained to the authorities it is quite possible that the ministry in this island would be taken away from us and handed over to the Augustinians who are quite nearby on the northern coast of Australia. It is, therefore, imperative to let Bishop Navarre know that he must meet the needs of the Thursday Island Catholics by appointing one of his missionaries there who can administer the sacraments.

The Saint-Pierre-des-Clages preparatory school.

3. Fresh complaints and concerns have been raised about the behaviour of Fr. Robadey in regard to ourselves and his preparatory school. This good confrère does not seem to understand the purpose of the Petite Oeuvre which is to educate youngsters who are meant to become Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, whence the need to write to him.

Fr. Offermans appointed Superior for a further three years.

4. Fr. Offermans' first three years having ended during the month of September, he is confirmed in office for a further three years.

The promulgation of the scholasticates' time-tabling postponed.

5. A synopsis of the scholastics' time-table drawn up by Fr. Piperon was read, but several Assistants, while recognizing the need and value of this time-table, found its promulgation to be inopportune given the attitudes of the lecturing personnel. It was decided to postpone the matter for the time being.

Fr. Pourquier accepted for final vows.

6. At his request Fr. Pourquier was accepted for final profession despite the unfavourable views of Fr. Lanctin, his Superior.

The scholastics Lecoq, Paravy and Wildy accepted for final vows.

The Chezal-Benoît scholastics, Josef Lecoq, Antoine Paravy and Emilde Wildy are accepted for final vows. Brother Auguste Villard, who has also completed his novitiate and sought admission, is shortly due to spend one year in the army, but since he is otherwise light-headed and hasn't made keen demands for admission, it was thought best to hold him back for the time being.

The lay brother Stanislaus Van Horenbeck.

8. The above-named brother was put forward and commended by Fr. Piperon, despite his limited intelligence.

Council Meeting, October 10, 1896

All present except Fr. Vaudon, unable to be present.

Barcelona Visit.

1. Fr. Carrière present at the meeting spoke about his Barcelona visit. He was also delegated to visit our other Barcelona house, the St. Michel College, offered to the Society, and the Canet de Mar property which the Marist Brothers would like to buy.

a. The San Miguel (St. Michel) College.

It is overseen by a layman and a staff of fifteen or so teachers whose mean salary comes to 60 francs monthly for an hour's class each day. The college had 200 pupils last year. At the beginning of classes there would only be 80 entering and the director thinks that last year's number of entries will not be arrived at this year. Over a number of years there has been a falling off, because of the setting up of new colleges in the best of circumstances in the new part of the city and because of the impact the Havana war has had on business families. The locality in any case is in the worst of quarters, so much so that one cannot dream of setting up there in order to keep the college going. The Official Visitor (Fr. Carrière) thinks that it would be best to transfer it to our house in the Calle de Rosellon which can be easily adapted for this purpose. The present head of St. Michel would be prepared to give up his effects (assets) and clientele for 7,000 francs. All the pupils would not transfer to the Calle de Rosellon no doubt, but a certain number would be drawn to the place. Moreover, in the de Gracia district a priest named Joseph Casas runs a fee-paying school of fifty or so pupils, and he would agree to make these over by means of an appropriate fee which remains to be negotiated. The two houses brought together would surely provide a sufficient clientele to start off the new enterprise, which could come about next year.

The Council was of the view that these proposals merited being taken under consideration and that Fr. Casas can be authorized to get his house ready, in order to receive a good number of students at the beginning of the next school year.

b. Visit to the Canet property.

The lessees are complaining about the lack of water and fear that it is likely to become still worse if the owner of the lands where the wells are, and which for the most part flow to the house, were to alter the flow by legal means, however unjust. Accordingly, it is being proposed that this land should be purchased at the price at which it is being offered, 20,000 francs. If the Congregation refuses to purchase and avail of this offer, the lessees themselves would be prepared to do so if there is agreement about selling our property to them.

The Council, in consideration of the presumed intentions of the proprietor of the land where the wells are, is inclined to think that pure suppositions are involved and that, for the rest, one could avoid any shortage of water by planting the whole area with vines which would involve no more water than a garden. Besides, there is a well there with assured sources which cannot be destroyed and would always supply water for the use of the house. The Council then comes to the conclusion that there is no compelling reason to buy the property containing the wells or to sell our house to the Marist Brothers.

c. Canonical visit to Barcelona.

It was carried out with the accepted procedures; each community member was privately met and invited to make his observations about the discipline and management of the house, his relations with the Superior, confrères, etc. In general tribute was paid to Fr. Casas who is always very zealous about the chapel, the Annals and everything which concerns the association. Fr. J.B. Perriot is wholly involved with the Petite Oeuvre, replaced sometimes for supervision by Fr. Delmas. The latter also exercises a minor ministry with the Dames of Saint Maur Sisters. Fr. Suchet celebrates mass in a convent and attends the community exercises, except at morning prayer. He seems to be happy with the way things are. Fr. Benedetti has a schedule like Fr. Suchet, but he uses his time better and gives some classes, three hours in the week. The lay brother, Martinus, is exhausted from work and he should have at least someone helping him. The house is advantageously well kept; in effect, it is well looked after.

Fr. Casas given permission to borrow 50,000 francs at 5% interest.

Fr. Casas, finding that the ground recently acquired is not enough to build the church he would like to see there, requests permission to add to what he has and is given permission to borrow 50,000 francs at a rate of 5%.

The scholastics, Brothers Brocken, Kleintitschen, Baumann and Cziczikowski, accepted for final vows.

6.(sic) The General made it known that an offer of ground in Paris at 1,500,000 francs had been made to him.

Dear Fr. Durin,

I am forwarding the certificate you were looking for. I hope it will be of use to you and that you can live in keeping with your wishes. There has been your precipitate decision to leave us and live outside of vows in the USA without being appointed there by your Superiors. (Original difficult to decipher here; the ink has virtually run out. A verb expressing regret seems to be missing from the original.) Let me know straightaway when you have found a bishop who accepts you. You have only one cogent reason in your request, which is that your health, such as you have experienced it, does not make it possible for you to live in community. That is what you wrote to me yourself in your letter dated (again illegible here). This reason on its own is enough. You will forward your request to me and I shall endorse it and send it to Rome. Then I shall come back to you with your release from vows; your situation will then have become regularized, depending thereafter on yourself alone and your bishop.

I shall continue to keep you in my prayers as I like you and am concerned for you more than I can say. For your part do not forget me either.

Cheerio, my friend; have a good journey.
Wholly yours in C.J.

I have the honour to certify that Fr. Durin is a pious priest, very attached to the Holy See and the teaching of Rome; his zeal for the salvation of souls untiring, his commitment without limits. He is worthy of support from their lordships, the bishops, and will be able to provide valuable service to any diocese which would employ him. He has, moreover, excellent references from the bishops in those areas where he exercised sacred ministry.

Council Meeting, October 14, 1896

All in attendance.

Decision on Fr. Durin. His departure from the Society.

1. Fr. General made it known that Fr. Durin, having gone with his approval to the anti-Masonic congress (Turin), wrote from there to him to say that as he was unable to accommodate himself any longer to the demands of community life, he had decided to return to the USA. The view was taken that, given these circumstances, he could no longer be a member of the Society. Accordingly, Fr. General had made it clear to him that once he returned he should request release from his vows.

A proposed letter to Propaganda counteracting the choice of Fr. Bontemps as Vicar Apostolic.

2. Consideration was given to a letter which would be sent to the Prefect of Propaganda to forego its choice of Fr. Bontemps as Apostolic Vicar in favour of Fr. Leray. Information from several sources make it clear that Fr. Bontemps' health, his eccentricities, his way of dealing with his confrères as well as his lack of credibility with people (outside the religious sphere) make it impossible for him to be appointed bishop. Consequently, so far as he is concerned, it is considered necessary to advise Propaganda. As for Fr. Leray, it is thought that, with his zeal and piety, he merits being made bishop, but one does not know if his knowledge and administrative capabilities are sufficiently commensurate with this dignity.

A letter from Fr. Guyot proposing a change in the Vichy construction project.

3. He suggests that one can give the walls in what is planned for the Villa des Lilas residence a lesser thickness than that suggested by Mr. Tarlier (the architect) and, thereby, economize. The letter will be forwarded to the architect.

4. New confessors being needed for the Petite Oeuvre and day school, Fathers Guillaume and Boudin were assigned to this role.

5. Fr. Robadey's (Swiss) schol.

He is accepting youngsters who are not meant to be part of the Petite Oeuvre. A letter of Fr. Maillard's taking serious exception to this was approved of.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, October 15, 1896

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I read carefully the P.S. in your last letter dated October 11, but:

1. if you had read at the beginning of the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, latest edition, the letter addressed to His Grace Archbishop Boyer of Bourges, you would have seen that I clearly said this (book) was a reproduction of the first edition (Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, according to the Scriptures, the Church Fathers and Theology, by Fr. Jules Chevalier, Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. 4th edition. St. Paul, Paris, 1895, p.544), except for the chapter: The Royalty of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which I submitted, together with the rest of the work itself, to His Excellency.

2. In this chapter, which I have read over again, I do not think I support the teaching which you state has been condemned in England. May God preserve me! One is as greatly misconstrued about the text as about my thoughts. I do not hold in any way to the view that the Blessed Virgin eases the pains of hell. Here is the passage in question: Let us add, then, that the most Holy Virgin still comes to the support of lost souls, that is to say certain among the guilty with whom, according to St. Thomas, she is concerned in really softening their sufferings. This is a common view among theologians. Through the infinite mercy of God, they say, together with Mary's tender compassion, the pains and torments of these unhappy creatures are not in keeping with their misdeeds, that is to say they desire to be punished less since they so merit it. Without, at the same time, being in conflict with the rights of divine justice, at the request of his mother, the Saviour knows how to be merciful and just: "Quantitas paenae damnatorum ex Dei misericordia et intercessione B. Mariae Virginis, citra conditionem taxatur". (Rutilius Beuson. Cop. XXXIII, p.257) (Due to God's mercy and the intercession of the Virgin Mary, the overall punishment of the damned becomes less than what they deserved.)

If I speak of a lessening, what follows here will explain in what sense I should be understood. It is not an overall, or progressive, easing of punishment which is here in question, since, as I understand it, this view has been condemned, but rather a less harsh punishment, less in relation to the wrong-doing of certain sinners, and involving those who would have witnessed to Mary in their devotions during their life, and because of which she is sensitive to this on their death, divine justice for all that being safeguarded.

For the rest, I do not offer this thought as my own, but that of several theologians. In no way do I endorse it myself. As the work was soon out of print, only a small number of copies were reproduced, and in the next edition I shall remove quite willingly this passage. But if you think it's more prudent to eliminate these (debated) sentences in the copies still available, I shall immediately do so by covering them with sheets of blank paper. In any event, I would ask you, if you wish, when referring once more to anything of a questionable (theological) nature, to provide an explanation (for what you say) beforehand.

Cheerio, Father. Thanks with all my heart.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Council Meeting, October 20, 1896

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Lanctin and Vaudon; absent: Father Piperon, unable to be present because of work; Fr. Morisseau, indisposed.

Father Durin's release from vows.

1. The General presented a letter from Fr. Durin in which he stated that he couldn't request release from vows before coming to know the views of the majority on the Council about this, adding that when this ensues he will immediately get in touch. While waiting he is strongly advised to get a posting in America.

Two lay brother postulants accepted.

2. Fr. Lanctin read a letter from Joseph Deparis, a recently-arrived student at the Petite Oeuvre, who, not considering himself to have any aptitude for studies, requested acceptance in the novitiate as a lay brother. His request was granted. Henri Jabenot from Neuvy-Pailloux, proposed by Fr. Maillard, was also accepted as a lay brother.

Request by a youth from Touly to go on the missions not accepted.

3. Fr. Lanctin read another letter from a young man, in the rhetoric year at the Petite Oeuvre, who would like to go to Sydney before he is 19 years of age in order to avoid military service. Since he has a brother who has been accepted in Saint Cyr (the military academy) and as a result will have no more than one year of service, it was not thought appropriate to meet his request. In any event, his good qualities which make him suitable for work in Europe are reason enough not to get rid of him that easily.

An annual contribution of 200 francs made available to Fr. Merg's mother.

4. Fr. Merg has written from Sydney asking the Council to provide financial help for his aged mother who is laid low by illness. He is granted an annual sum of 200 francs to be taken from his mass stipends.

A lack of detailed information about 5 youngsters requesting entrance to Fr. Robadey's school.

5. Questionnaires and certificates of five Swiss youngsters presenting themselves for entry to the preparatory school, Saint-Pierre-des-Clages, were considered. The information provided was not adequate and it was decided to ask Fr. Robadey to supply more information.

D 18961024

To Mr. and Mrs. de Bonneval, Issoudun.

On their Silver Wedding.

My Brothers,

It's 25 years ago, the same day, the very same hour, since in this church two young spouses coming from leading Berry families were united in a sacred, indissoluble, union. The Lord blessed this marriage within which one meets all at once the coming together of illustrious family names, grandeur of outlook and the most sincere and genuine piety. Proud of their glorious ancestors, they promised to walk in their steps and make them come alive in their own lives. This family heritage they have jealously and carefully preserved as the most precious of treasures, which they in turn would pass on to their descendants. Over all this time, and due to their early education, we have watched them moving forward unflinching in the way of honour and duty. From such a life-style two main virtues stand out as having thrown into bright focus their actions, lighting up their whole life. I am referring to faith and charity.

I

Their religious convictions, far from being weakened through contact with the splendour of a frivolous world, were only advantageously strengthened.

They very well understood that the more people alienated themselves from God, and the more impiety was in the ascendant, all the greater would be the respect they themselves had for the divine law, and their fidelity to the precepts of the Church.

Accordingly at our religious ceremonies, they were never shy about being present and sharing their prayers with those of the ordinary faithful. Birthright, money, splendid circumstances, distinguished family, wonderful memories, ancient traditions, all of this gives way before these words from the lips of Our Lord himself: Search first for the kingdom of God and His justice, and all the rest will be added to you. And wholeheartedly they would cry out like Solomon in the midst of all his wealth and splendour: Vanity of vanities, all is vanity other than serving God and Him alone.

II

The faith in which they were nurtured in the family home was not the only gift made over to them by their illustrious parents. No, they were further endowed with the gift of charity. The Bonneval family was always, as it still is, supportive of Catholic undertakings and providing for the poor in the area where they lived, making it a concern to seek the needy, support them in their impoverishment and wipe away their tears. The youngsters (in the family) very early on learned to be open-hearted and helpful.

Brought up in this way Fernand de Bonneval shaped his future with Mademoiselle Marie du Quesne who, herself, also witnessed right from her earliest years the concern of her good mother for those who suffer, her generosity, her numerous contributions which she loved to bestow on everyone when recourse was had to her well-known generosity. Not only was she active in this respect, but there is yet more to admire her for in supportive undertakings, raising the moral tone and the level of Christian education and its enhancement in an Issoudun which is greatly indebted to her.

And the young couple, like two branches which strengthen each other in their intermingling, were to find in their complementary union a twofold thrust towards doing good. Not just content to imitate those who had brought them into this world, they went further in spreading their good will and support. I do not know of a cry for help, or any request whatever, which did not find a response in their wholeheartedness. It mattered not at all to them what the views were of those who had recourse to their good will, since it was enough for them to know that they were ill-circumstanced and that their needs should be met. Neither indifference or hostility on the part of some, or others being ungrateful, came in the way of the thrust of their generosity. How explain this greatness of soul, this disinterested concern? Ah yes! It is because they were aware that their contributions made over to the needy and often unadverted to and forgotten about, were made in the sight of God who rewards a hundred-fold all they have done on his behalf.

There my dear Bernard and my dear petite Alette, you have before you a wonderful example and you in your turn will have to give witness. May Heaven see to it that you will have them with you for a long time yet! And may you celebrate altogether the golden, and even diamond, Jubilee of your dearly loved parents.

This is the hope and prayer of us all from the bottom of our hearts for your happiness, Amen.

The minutes of previous meetings were read, approved and signed, following some observations and changes.

Admission to final profession.

The following Antwerp scholastics were accepted:

Van Hoogstraten; Van der Heyden; Stettner.

The following lay brothers were accepted for renewal of three-yearly vows:

Jerome Van Vetten and Modeste van der Eyken from the Rome house.

Fr. Maillard appointed to the office of Secretary General.

Fr. General, having adverted to the workload of Fr. Morisseau, his tired condition and age, proposed to the Council that he should be replaced as the Society's Secretary General by Fr. Maillard. This was agreed and he (Maillard) was appointed at this meeting.

Issoudun, November 2, 1896

Dear Father,

Fr. Morisseau does not recall if he sent on to you the decisions of the General Council taken after Fr. Carrière's canonical visit to Barcelona. In the event that these decisions have not been communicated to you they are as follows:

1. You are authorized to enter into discussions with Mr. José Casas, the head of the college in your part of Gracia (Barcelona suburb), about the amount of rent he requests of you in order to rent out his college to you. You will make Fr. General aware of the proposals he puts to you and which will be approved of by the (General) Council if they are not outlandish. When presenting to us the sum he is requesting, let us know what Mr. José Casas' age is. If there is an understanding reached with him, the proposal of the director of the San Michel College will also be accepted, that is to say he will be given 7,000 francs (about 22,405 euros) in order to come by his assets and clientele. When these two schools are made into one by you, it becomes possible right from the beginning to have a sufficient number of students to guarantee a stable financial situation. See to it then that you discuss the matter as one of urgency and forward to us your findings, so that you can begin as soon as possible to prepare for the start of the school year in the autumn of 1897, all working out well.

2. You are authorized by the Council to borrow 50,000 francs (about 160,000 euros) in order to buy the ground adjacent to that you bought last year and which adjoins the right of your house on entry.

3. In the light of Fr. Visitor's report, it would appear that Fathers Suchet and Benedetti (a future bishop in Italy) do not come to community prayers, giving their health as the reason for this. Perhaps by being a little more energetic they might, given that their work is not too tiring, begin to live according to the community regulations once more. In any event, they should make their meditation each day, and if you do think that their health really does require a later hour for rising than that of the other confrères, at the very least see to it that they give an hour in the morning over to prayer, making certain that they fulfil this exercise which is essential to the religious life.

Please accept my warmest regards in C.J.

Issoudun, November 4, 1896

Dear Count,

We would need to consider several issues with regard to the building. If you bring together the gentlemen either on Friday or Saturday next it would be very desirable. We shall also have to consider the position of Albert Blanchard, the organist. You are aware that Mr. Paul, the dentist, committed suicide and, moreover, cohabited, with public knowledge, for many years. I, accordingly, refused, in keeping with the diocesan statutes, to give him religious burial. Albert knew this as he was present when I refused and yet, despite the absence of the clergy, he had the audacity to go with the coffin to the cemetery, scandalizing greatly all Christian people. For a Church employee this is not to be overlooked or pardoned. He must know before Sunday what we think of his behaviour.

Please accept, Count, my respectful good wishes in C.J.

Council Meeting
Thursday, November 5, 1896

All present except Fr. Vaudon, travelling (see below, article 2443).

The appointment of a local Council at Contich.

A letter from Fr. Ramot was read, requesting the appointment of a local Council at Contich, Antwerp, and putting forward a query as to whether or not it would be appropriate to request an indult from Rome to appoint Fr. Hartzler at Salzburg for a third term of office as Superior. It was decided, as regards the first query, that Fr. Ramot should discuss with the Provincial Council what candidates might be appointed councillors at Contich, and then the General Council will confirm their choice. As for the second query, the majority of the Council thought that the Constitutions were sufficiently clear and explicit about the issue brought up and that it was pointless, therefore, to ask Rome for an indult which, in any event, has never been requested on comparable occasions up to now.

Antwerp scholastics presented for orders.

At Fr. Ramot's request the following were called to orders:

Brother Reichert to the priesthood; Brothers Smits, Schmitz, Geitmann, Nollen, van Riel, Viegen, O'Reilly and Bögerhausen to the diaconate; van Hoogstraten to minor orders. Brother Braun, a subdeacon whose reports leave something to be desired, will have his request postponed if the Provincial thinks that this decision would be helpful in relation to other scholastics.

The prospect of a foundation in Fribourg, Switzerland.

The Council now began to deal with the Saint-Pierre-des-Clages school, giving consideration to Fr. Robadey as a teacher and, as well, the poverty and health conditions prevailing in the Valais which suggest that it might be better to set up the little Petite Oeuvre near Fribourg where a property has come up for sale. Fathers Piperon and Maillard were asked to visit this property and take the necessary procedures to set up a foundation in the country, if the prospects after their visit seemed worthwhile and likely.

Please, Count, accept my respectful good wishes in C.J.

Council Meeting, November 15, 1896

All present except Fr. Vaudon.

Raising the pupils' fees at Saint-Pierre-des-Clages.

Attention was first focused on the Saint-Pierre-des-Clages school where Fr. Robadey is not prepared to limit to eight the number of pupils since he says that this is not financially viable, but the Council was of the view that it would be best to go along with this number for a monthly fee of between 33 and 40 francs for each student until Easter.

Report on the trip to Switzerland, Fribourg, to find a house.

Fathers Piperon and Maillard reported on their Swiss visit. They inspected a number of houses, either for sale or to be rented, one being in a Fribourg suburb, the others outside the city, but within the canton. The Council took note of their observations about the property called Bellevue in the parish of Font, near Estavayer on Lake Neuchatel.

Proposal to rent the Bellevue property near Estavayes on Lake.

Fr. Piperon was given the task of beginning negotiations towards renting the Bellevue house and, if possible, become assured that the whole property will be sold to us if the Council decided in the near future to buy it.

Brother Régis Rasclé was accepted for final profession and as soon as possible he will be sent to the scholasticate.

Fr. Teste was accepted for the novitiate. He had, when he was young, taken the Franciscan habit of the Third Order, but left after some months for health reasons, including the early stages of diabetes.

A contribution of a mortgaged sum accepted.

The offering of 10,000 francs at a mortgaged rent of 5% by an elderly lady from Marnant, Rhone valley, was accepted.

Council Meeting, November 17, 1896

All present.

Saint-Pierre-des-Clages.

This issue is being re-visited because of a letter from Mr. Bouellat which might mean a change in the decision taken on the 15th (above), but the decision still holds. Nevertheless, it is to be repeated that precise and official reports are to be made available about each pupil in order to refuse entrance to those unable to offer the requisite guarantees.

Brother Régis Rasclé appointed to the scholasticate.

It was decided, next, that Brother Régis Rasclé should be sent to the Chezal-Benoît scholasticate, replaced as a teacher at the outsiders school (in Issoudun, as distinct from the Petite Oeuvre) by a scholastic who will be named at the next (Council) meeting.

Fr. Michel appointed to Paris; Fr. Doutré called to Issoudun.

Fr. Brunet needing someone to replace himself in his role as chaplain to the convent in Rue Saint-Ouen will be given Fr. Michel who will be replaced by Fr. Girerd at the Petite Oeuvre. Fr. Brunet will keep the title of official chaplain as far as the Archbishop of Paris is concerned. Fr. Doutré will be called back to Issoudun.

Changes of addresses for Brothers Arnold Zwarthoed, Jean Pluymakers, Walter Corsmit and two Chezal-Benoît brothers.

Fr. Brunet, having requested a lay brother and Fr. Hartzler a change for Brother Walter Corsmit, the Council decided as follows:

Brother Andre Zwarthoed will go to Paris; Brother Jean Pluymakers to Glastonbury; Walter Corsmit to Chezal-Benoît; while Fr. Piperon will make available to the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, 2 newly professed brothers who will replace Brothers Arnold Zwarthoed and Jean Pluymakers.

Refusal of a lay brother postulant at Watertown.

Fr. Cornelius O'Mahony wanted to know if he could accept in the lay brothers' novitiate a married man whose wife has been in a mental hospital for a number of years without any hope of recovery. The decision was taken that he could not be accepted while his wife was alive.

Benediction at the Issoudun (outsiders) school.

Fr. Laliaux wants to give Benediction in the chapel on the days noted in the list accompanying his request. The Superior General granted permission, following some changes made to the list.

18961119X

Council Meeting, November 19, 1896

All present except Fr. Batard.

The minutes of the three previous meetings were approved and signed. There followed discussions about religious discipline and good order.

Ranking.

The decision was taken that the finally professed, not tonsured or in minor orders, would rank before tonsured temporary professed or in minor orders. Those in sacred orders always rank, as the rule says, before those in final vows.

Religious discipline as regards photographs, binoculars, watch chains, walking sticks.

As regards whether or not it is permissible for Missionaries of the Sacred Heart to have their photographs taken, to carry binoculars, watch chains, walking sticks, the Council replies:

1. One cannot have one's photograph taken except in exceptional circumstances, when one must get permission from Fr. General or Fr. Provincial.
2. One may accept binoculars instead of spectacles, especially among those already accustomed to this, but the string to hang the binoculars on is not allowed.
3. The chains holding the watch should not be visible.
4. One may in case of necessity use a curved handle walking stick, but otherwise walking sticks are not allowed.

The lay brother de Cocq has permission to give some money (of his own) to the Tilburg house.

He wrote to Fr. General stating that he had come into a certain patrimony, a share of what was divided between four brothers and sisters still minors, but there is, besides, a certain amount of his own money, 1,472 francs, which he would like to give the Tilburg house on condition that it be returned to him if he were to leave the Congregation. This request was granted, specifying, however, that he could not lay claim to any interest on this sum the day it would be returned to him because of the vow of poverty.

The offer of a college by Bishop Jacquet of the Jassy diocese in Romania turned down.

A letter from Fr. Carrière was read in which he stated that Bishop Jacquet would like the Society to set up a Catholic college in the town where he lives. Given the lack of competent personnel, the Council decided that it was impossible to meet Bishop Jacquet's wishes.

Taking out a loan of 200,000 francs from a credit agency.

Having in mind on the one side expenses accruing from purchases and rebuilding involving the Society at Issoudun, Chezal-Benoît, Vichy and, maybe, Switzerland, and on the other hand the advantage that can accrue at a time of persecution, if the properties of the Congregation are legally assured and, thereby, a barrier to confiscation, the Council has decided to take out a loan of 200,000 francs or so from the credit agency on the Issoudun properties and elsewhere if necessary.

The accounts and the pupils' fees at the Glastonbury Petite Oeuvre.

An explanatory letter from Fr. Hartzler in Glastonbury was read, in which he explained the accounts for the first six months of 1896, and also requesting a sum of 424 francs to meet the expenses incurred when he accepted youngsters a year ago and who didn't stay. The Council acknowledged that it had agreed to contribute to the support of these youngsters, but since the mother house is already over-burdened financially and none of these youngsters have remained, Fr. Hartzler is requested not to press for the payment of this amount. If he cannot in any way balance his budget without getting this money it will, then, be sent on to him.

Fr. Audony appointed to Paris as Fr. Field's replacement.

Attention now focused on the appointment of Fr. Michel as chaplain to the convent on Avenue Saint Ouen, Paris. As a replacement for him at the Petite Oeuvre is creating problems, it has been decided that he will stay on there and continue teaching, while Fr. Audony will be sent to the Paris house to help Fr. Brunet in the chaplaincy.

Brother Auguste Boudin appointed teacher at the Issoudun day school, replacing Brother Régis Rascle, and Brother Antoine Neveux replaces Brother Boudin at the office.

The college of Dom Jose Casas accepted; that of San Miguel not so, or put back until later.

Following perusal of a letter from Fr. Casas in Barcelona as regards a college to be set up at Calle de Rosellon 45, Gracia, the decision was taken to accept the proposal of Dom Jose Casas, offering students, staff, furniture, at a going yearly rent of 720 francs. As for the proposals of the San Miguel college's director, they do not appear to be acceptable at the present time, given that Fr. Casas says that one cannot be sure if there will be students for this college.

All in attendance.

Readmission of Brother Fernando de la Peña.

The above-named has asked to re-enter the Society. Nonetheless he will have to: 1, pay his travel expenses; and 2, spend three years in temporary vows before being considered for final profession.

All those who have titles to property in their name and are in the Society, must make a will as soon as possible, insofar as they are or will be titled to or responsible for property. Likewise a statement will be required for the future from all who are property title-holders of anything belonging to the Congregation, and this also applies to those leaving for the missions who, besides, should before departure leave behind them a solicitor's will as broad as possible.

The Tilburg Superior given permission to buy land near the house.

Fr. Offermans, the Tilburg Superior, is given permission to buy the houses and ground circling the land already owned by the community, or which will be later owned following from the gift of their employee.

Brother Jacques Neyroud given permission to follow the courses at the Institut Catholique, Paris.

It was finally decided that Brother Jacques Neyroud, given the length of his studies yet to come, and the many examinations which he has to pass before he takes his licentiate in sciences, will be sent straightaway to the Institut Catholique, Paris, so that he can obtain his diploma before reaching the age of 26, thereby avoiding the two years of military service he would, otherwise, be required to make. At the appropriate time a decision will be taken about his request to be perpetually professed.

A request is to be made to the Sulpicians to accept in their scholasticate our young men who are following courses at the Institut Catholique, their own students' house quite near the Institut building.

Issoudun, December 1, 1896

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I am very much indebted to you for notifying me in advance about the 25th anniversary of France's consecration to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. If you were to write an article making this known to the faithful, it would greatly please me.

It is not possible for us to take on Lenten preaching at Saint-Symphorien, Tours. Those who would be likely to do so are already committed elsewhere. I already informed Mademoiselle Tamisier about this when she spoke to me and she was due to inform the parish priest. Thank you for your good wishes; I reciprocate mine to you.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, December 11, 1896

Dear Father,

I sympathize with you on the death of your dear mother; no matter what the age, it's always a special link which becomes broken and leaves a family void. Happily there is heaven where we shall meet again.

I am forwarding 50 francs for Brother de la Peña whose perseverance touches me. I do not know if this will be enough. Perhaps he can find and make up the rest. In any event, I shall ask Fr. Casas to give him whatever he is lacking.

We shall fervently pray for the repose of your mother's soul.

Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Prayer composed by Fr. Chevalier.

My God, I am in your hands.

I give myself over to your wishes; do with me whatever you wish.

I am not going to cry out against the designs of divine Providence;

You are the master of life and death; you do not strike unless it is to heal, and you do not make people go through trials without rewarding them.

I accept, then, in advance all it will please you to send me; the sorrows, disappointments, regrets, all the bitter experiences, isolation, heartbreaks, for I know that one day my tears will change into diamonds and my sorrows will be crowned in glory.

I wait for everything under your care, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Make it so my God, that I shall see the glory of heaven one day with all who are mine,

Let it be so.

The above prayer was sent by Madame E. Rigault, Sonzay, to Fr. Arthur Lanctin, who succeeded Fr. Chevalier as Superior General, on January 11, 1928; she wrote:

"I came to see him one year after the death of my dear husband and I asked him to write a resignation prayer specifically for me. He took up his pen and there in my presence composed these lovely words which I say every day. All those to whom I gave the prayer were delighted; it's the prayer of a saint... I have then a prayer written by him..."

Council Meeting, December 19, 1896

All in attendance.

The lay brothers Albert Vioux in Chezal-Benoît and Hermann Müller in New Britain were admitted to vows. Vioux to temporary vows, Müller to final vows, Vioux at the November 30 meeting, Müller at that of December 10, both now announced finally at this meeting.

The Saint-Pierre-des-Clages Petite Oeuvre.

The purchase or renting of it is held over for the time being. An attempt will be made to find parish priests who will put forward youngsters. The Council doesn't see anybody from the Society who could be put in charge of this undertaking and, accordingly, does not consider buying or renting for the time-being, but will, however, continue with its presence there until next July. From now until then an attempt will be made to find some Swiss priests who would engage themselves to find some candidates for the school in their parishes, and send them on to us after a little preparation.

Letters were then read from Fr. Ramot relative to:

1. calling a Provincial Chapter;
2. a plan for a Dutch mission in New Guinea;
3. a canonical visitation to be carried out by the Provincial in the Province's houses;
4. lastly, a dispensation from vows for Fr. Ilge.

It was decided that all these issues would be dealt with when Fathers Ramot and Meyer, who are due to arrive at the end of the month for a meeting of the commission appointed to draw up the Directory, are present.

Fathers Casas, Batard, Mathieu title-holders of a new holding in Barcelona.

Fr. Casas requested title-holders for the new property which he is shortly going to purchase. It was decided that Fathers Batard and Mathieu, already title-holders of the property bought last year, will have the same role in the new one. Consequently, a document will be drawn up, signed by them and then sent to Fr. Casas who will be the third title-holder.

Fr. Velasco, a former Spanish scholastic who left the Society, has asked to be re-admitted, but he has not been accepted.

Proposal to purchase new ground in Vichy.

The decision was taken to buy ground owned by Dr. Koenig at Vichy following on that purchased from Madame Glénard, which is about 600 square metres and it is hoped it can be acquired at 40 francs a metre.

To the MSC Superiors of the Congregation's different houses.

Issoudun, December 30, 1896

Dear Father,

You will have gathered from the papers news of His Eminence Cardinal Boyer's death, our Visitor Apostolic.

The situation could not be more opportune to petition Rome for the Society's return to common law procedures, particularly so now that peace and concord prevail in the Congregation. Accordingly, we would request you to be good enough to sign and return to us the accompanying formula, which we shall present to the Holy Father, and which the fathers present at Issoudun have already signed.

Please accept, Father, my religious commitment in C.J.

Jean-Pierre Boyer died a fortnight before Chevalier's letter, on December 16, 1896. He had been appointed to Bourges on January 19, 1893, becoming a Cardinal at the November 29, 1895, consistory. He had been ordained auxiliary Bishop of Clermont on August 24, 1878; he was, therefore, a bishop and coadjutor much longer than he was an archbishop, dying at a comparatively young age, sixty-seven. Born in Paray-le-Monial, July 27, 1829, he was ordained bishop at Aix on August 24, 1878, then becoming coadjutor to Bishop Féron at Clermont. See further, the Annales, 1896, p.6.

1897

18970105X

Council Meeting, January 5, 1897

First meeting in the morning at the presbytery.

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Lanctin, Vaudon, Maillard.

Accepted for vows.

The lay brothers Antoine Tauber and Didacus Maierhofer from the Salzburg house were accepted for perpetual vows and Brother Egiddi, from the Chezal-Benoît novitiate, to temporary vows.

The second plot of land at Vichy.

A letter was read from Mr. Poncet, a Vichy solicitor, stating that Dr. Koenig wanted to sell his land (discussed at the last Council meeting) at 60 francs a metre. It had been decided to offer him 50 francs, but the Council now authorized Mr. Poncet to raise the offer to 55 francs.

Two pupils from Saint-Pierre-des-Clages accepted at the Petite Oeuvre.

Fr. Robadey asked if he could immediately send to Issoudun two of his students who would seem to have the qualities to be Missionaries of the Sacred Heart in the future. They were accepted.

The San Miguel College, Barcelona.

Letters were read from Fathers Delmas and J.B. Perriot, who insist that the chaplaincy of the San Miguel College be immediately undertaken and, as soon as possible, the overall direction of the school. It was decided to get Fr. Casas' own views and those of the community.

Afternoon meeting. The Council met again at 2pm, but this time at the Sacred Heart where Fr. Morisseau was indisposed. All the members were present.

The Sydney novitiate: Fr. Tréand, Novice Master; Fr. Vandel, Socius.

The Sydney novitiate was then discussed. Having considered a letter from Fr. Merg and taken into consideration Fr. Tréand's views, the Council came to a decision that the latter should be Novice Master with Fr. Vandel as his Socius (assistant).

A discussion about founding a house in Beirut or Montreal for scholastics compelled to do military service.

The issue already broached at the morning session about setting up a house either in Montreal, Canada, or Beirut, Syria, came up again with reference to those of our young men compelled to do military service. A letter has already been sent to Beirut and one will also be written to the Sulpicians' Superior in Montreal, as well as to Fr. O'Mahony in Watertown.

The expulsion of Fr. Ilge.

Finally, the vowed status of Fr. Ilge was considered. Given his background and the serious accusations with which he is faced, the Council unanimously again insisted on his expulsion from the Society, agreeing to ask Fr. Carrière to obtain from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars the release of his vows for once and for all despite his inability to find a bishop who is prepared to accept him in his diocese.

Issoudun, January 5, 1897

As between the undersigned, Fr. Hériault of Issoudun (Indre) on the one side and Mr. Pierre Genète and his wife, owners of the Villa des Lilas residence, Vichy (Allier), on the other side, what follows has been agreed:

The former leasing arrangements are given here.

Besides, Mr. Genète commits himself with a contribution of 40,000 francs (about 128,000 euros) as forfeit to carry out the envisaged work in keeping with the plans and details drawn up by Mr. Tarlier, the Bourges architect.

This work involves the following:

1. Raising one storey, with attic rooms above it, around the two wings, and overlooking Rue Bintot, the other giving on to the garden and towards Rue Petillot at the corner.
2. Continuing this wing towards the old, present, house and as far as the sacristy of the new chapel.

3. To get rid of, to his financial advantage, all the surplus elements of the said old house. Mr. Genète can, however, use for the new building any material thought worthwhile by the architect.

4. He is also committed to furnish all the rooms and attics of the buildings for which he has responsibility. It goes without saying that the furniture he will supply is his own property.

5. He will be responsible, as well, during the duration of the lease, 15 years, for all the repairs, changes, as to furniture or whatever, to be made since he is the lessee, and also for the furniture in the hotel, the cost of which, if it needs to be replaced, must be met by him without any compensation.

6. He will convert, if he thinks it worthwhile, the present dining room into rooms and, moreover, if it is agreeable to him, he will build above the kitchen a matching wing of the same height as the rest of the house.

7. In the event of Mr. Genète's death or his wife, or the onset of serious illness, he will, with the proprietor's consent, have the right to sub-let.

8. If during the course of the leasing new constructions are deemed to be necessary, with the agreement of the owner, Mr. Genète will pay interest on the money being spent at a yearly rate of 10%.

9. The cost of the annual lease, being 10,000 francs (about 32,000 euros), will not be increased because of the work mentioned above which he undertakes to carry out.

10. In addition, the 40,000 francs which Fr. Hériault undertakes to provide for the new additions will be made use of as follows: 10,000 francs while the work is reaching the half-way stage and 10,000 when it is completed. As regards the remainder of that money, Fr. Hériault will put by each year for Mr. Genète towards his lease of the Villa des Lilas 5,000 francs until the complete payment of the agreed 40,000 francs is reached.

The architect, given his contribution, requests a 7% share of the expenses as his fee.

All this work will be carried out in the required conditions under the supervision and management of Fr. Guyot.

Copies for interested parties, etc.

18970114X

Council Meeting, January 14, 1897

All present except Fathers Batard and Maillard.

Acceptance as of now of the chaplaincy of San Miguel College, Barcelona and the overall charge of the school shortly. A letter from Fr. Casas provided the views of all the community's priests about San Miguel, and there was unanimity about taking over the direction of the school as soon as possible. The Council thereupon decided that the Barcelona priests take over the chaplaincy straightaway and as soon as possible the overall direction of the school, at least for one year's trial. The mother house, however, could not provide them with staff before the end of the school year, but they might request the Provincial of the Northern Province to let them have Fr. Pauly.

Acceptance of a 5% rent.

A gentleman from Rambervillers-Vasges, aged 73, has offered a life-mortgage at 5% which has been accepted.

-Benoît scholastics called to orders:

Priesthood: Brothers Jourdon and Auguste Boudin;

Diaconate: Courbon, Buckley, Burke, Cros, Pages;

Subdiaconate: Brothers Pouvreau and Régis Rasclé;

Minor Orders: Brothers Brumbt, Lacunza, Maher, Merg, Vivès;

Tonsure and Minor Orders: Brother Wigishoff.

18970119X

Council Meeting, January 19, 1897

All present except Fr. Batard.

Saint-Pierre-des-Clages: conditions unacceptable; closure of the school.

1. Since Fr. Robadey is putting forward unacceptable conditions, and the present pupils do not appear to be providing satisfactory guarantees, it was decided that the school should be closed immediately. Consideration was then given to a Fribourg foundation where our young men due for military service might like to be made Swiss nationals (thus avoiding military service). The matter will be given further consideration.

The money to pay for the Marseilles house, 85 Rue Thiers, will come from the missions' fund.

2. The balance of payment for this house, bought in Fr. Jullien's name, is due to be met on the 7th of February next but, as the leeway for the title's payment can yet be held over for quite some time, the Council decided that it cannot borrow 28,000 francs at 4% before that date, and once more will have recourse to the money made available by the Propagation of the Faith for the missions, paying the missions an interest of 4% on the amount made available until the said sum is reimbursed.

The Koenig ground at Vichy purchased.

3. The Council decided to buy Dr. Koenig's ground at Vichy at 60 francs a metre if the price cannot be lowered.

Issues in relation to the next Chapter. The appointment of delegates. The issue of those called in 1896 as local Superiors but who are no longer such.

4. A letter from Fr. Carrière referring to different issues was read, the first concern being that of the Chapter. Cardinal Parocchi, who has agreed to be the Society's protector, thinks that those delegates should be immediately appointed who are replacing those who were named for the 1896 meeting and became Superiors: Meyer, that is, now Superior in Antwerp, and Derichemont, Superior of the second house in the USA. Besides, Rome would be consulted about those called to the 1896 Chapter as local Superiors but are no longer so, for example Fr. Genocchi.

A Foundation at Oleggio.

A second proposal from Fr. Carrière, which engaged the Council, concerned a new foundation in Oleggio. The problem to cope with is that of personnel if the proposal from the Bishop of Novara was accepted. Fr. Carrière will be consulted about this matter. Meanwhile he (Carrière) is given permission to commence work on the two altars to be placed in the Our Lady church, Piazza Navona (Rome), using as payment money which has accrued to him in interest.

The lay brother Fahrman accepted in the Watertown novitiate.

5. Fr. O'Mahony, Superior at Watertown, New York State, is, at his request, given permission to accept the lay brother candidate, Lambert Fahrman, aged 37, into the novitiate; he has already spent, to his Superior's satisfaction, three months in the community. Next, at Bishop Navarre's commendation, the lay brother Philippe Van Erven was accepted for final profession and the scholastic Gustave Peeters for the priesthood.

Personnel at the Glastonbury Petite Oeuvre.

6. The Superior, Fernand Hartzler, requested Fr. Denis O'Mahony as teacher and supervisor at the English Petite Oeuvre. Since one cannot, given that the school year is well under way, deprive the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre or any school of its English teacher, Glastonbury will have to get by with its present staff. Fathers Field and Martin will be written to, requesting that they make themselves available to the Petite Oeuvre then, in keeping with the requirements of their Superior.

Decision about those following Institut Catholique courses.

7. Those following the Paris Institut Catholique courses will from now on be in dependence for all their requirements on the Superior at Rue de Calais.

18970130X

Council Meeting, January 30, 1897

All in attendance.

Decisions and explanations from Rome with reference to the Provincial Chapter and the next General Chapter.

1. A letter from Fr. Carrière was read, being a reply to those questions put to him about the forthcoming Provincial Chapter at Antwerp, and the following General Chapter. The decision was taken:

1. to send this letter to Fr. Ramot, stating that the Council approved of the proposals in Fr. Carrière's letter;
2. that a circular be sent to all the Society's houses requesting that they appoint as soon as possible two delegates to replace Fathers Meyer and Derichemont who had become Superiors.

In this circular it will also be made known that those who were called to 1896 Chapter as local Superiors and are not so any longer (such as Fr. Genocchi) cannot be part of the Chapter as Superiors since they are no longer so, but they may be elected as delegates.

Fr. Faure, parish priest of Ides Saint-Roch, not accepted for the novitiate.

2. Fr. Faure greatly insists on acceptance in our Congregation and the Council discussed his request but, having thought about it, it was decided that due to his health, which gave serious concern for the future, he should not be accepted.

Fathers Pauly and von Hasselt in Salzburg title-holders of newly-bought ground.

3. Fr. Léopold Hartzler writes from Salzburg to say that as he was on the point of buying the ground as authorized by the Council, he thought it would be more appropriate to have two title-holders instead of one, adding Fr. Pauly's name to that of Fr. von Hasselt. The Council approved of this.

Part approval given to Brother Tatcher for the disposal of his maternal patrimony.

4. Brother Tatcher in Chezal-Benoît requested permission to give his father, during the latter's lifetime, the interest on what is accruing to him from his mother's estate and thereafter, following his father's death, to his sister if she becomes a nun. The Council accepted the first request, but held over as regards the second, since on his father's death Brother Tatcher should make a fresh request which the Council at that time will decide.

The death of Fr. Durin.

5. Mr. Fernand Durin wrote on January 17, 1897, from Indianapolis with news of his uncle's, Fr. Joseph Fernand Durin, death on the 9th of the same month. This news will be conveyed to all the Society's houses, with the customary prayers for the dead requested for him.

Decisions of the Council about Fr. Lavielle to be brought to his attention.

6. Due to serious complaints from outside about Fr. Lavielle brought to the General's notice, the Council decided to send him an official letter forbidding him in the name of holy obedience: 1, to preach retreats or sermons to any sisters whatever, or to go and give any counselling whatsoever to them; 2, to cease from any correspondence giving counsel, or having any correspondence with any woman; 3, to make no visit unaccompanied to sisters or women, or meet them other than in the parlour of the community house where he lives; 4, to give over spreading his erroneous teaching on Our Lord's humanity. He is also warned that if he does not act in keeping with the first admonition (above) the Council will find itself compelled to undertake more severe measures against him.

A proposal about founding a house in Vendée.

7. Fr. Bosques, parish priest of Saint-Hilaire-du-Bois, Lower Loire, has written to Fr. General to bring to his notice that Canon de Suyrot at Mellay, near Montaigu, in the Vendée, has a property which he is willing to give our Congregation. He adds that this would be an opportunity to set up a house in a very Christian part of the country near Brittany which could provide many vocations. The Council, acknowledging gratefully Fr. Bosques' interest in our Society, agrees that the offer is very enticing but, given the likelihood of a foundation in Switzerland, it is impossible to accept it for the time-being. Accordingly, the good Canon is requested to be patient for a little while and if the proposal for a foundation in Switzerland comes to nothing, one can turn instead to the prospects in Vendée.

A contribution in favour of the parish priest's church at Saint-Priest-sur-Aixe.

8. The parish priest of Saint-Priest-sur-Aixe asks Fr. General for help (financially) in repairing his church as well as support in setting up a school (free, Catholic) for girls in his parish. One cannot for the time being become involved with this latter project, but as for the repairing of the church the Council supports it with a sum of 500 francs.

Cardinal Parocchi appointed Protector of our Society.

9. At the beginning of the meeting Fr. General read a letter from Cardinal Rampolla, Secretary of State, appointing Cardinal Parocchi as our Society's Protector, replacing Cardinal Monaco de la Valetta who died in July 1896.

To Pope Leo XIII.

Most Holy Father,

Four years ago, because of problems which had arisen in our little Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, Bourges Archdiocese, Your Holiness was pleased in his paternal concern to give us an Apostolic Visitor, His Eminence Cardinal Boyer, Archbishop of Bourges, whose recent death is greatly regretted in our religious family which he liked and looked after, as well as in the archdiocese itself, which he was in charge of for a number of years and where he was most paternally committed.

While regretting his demise, it becomes an occasion for us to place before you our deeply-felt gratitude and trusting acknowledgement of the happy outcome brought about by your concerned and helpful intervention. In consequence, since that time, things calmed down little by little, people became pacified and hearts became bonded by ties which could no longer be broken. We can testify to the fact that at the present time there is understanding and perfect unity between Superiors and subjects and between all the Congregation's members.

Accordingly, most Holy Father, confiding in your paternal goodness and appealed to by the Superiors of the institute's different houses, all of whom have expressed the same wish, we come to ask Your Holiness to be kind enough to give the Superior General and his Council the rights conferred on them by the Constitutions, long since approved by the Apostolic

See. This request, if granted, will meet the wishes of all and make normal and easier, by that very fact, the government of the Society.

Moreover, in virtue of an indult granted a year ago by the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, and with the approval of our regretted Apostolic Visitor, we need to have that Chapter meeting which, for a variety of reasons, was postponed. As it happens, this Chapter gathering would have very worthwhile advantages for the general well-being of the institute and the specific well-being of each house in the Society.

And since there was no reason not to convoke it, Cardinal Boyer made it known that it was his view that the Chapter should take place during the current year. Everything was ready when his expected death interrupted plans. I petition then with due humility Your Holiness to be kind enough to favour our going ahead with this Chapter meeting during the month of July next.

We prostrate ourselves humbly at your Holiness' feet, respectfully kissing them, declaring ourselves to be your humble sons in N.S.

*Circular written by Fr. Maillard, signed by Fr. Chevalier.
To the Superiors of MSC houses.*

+ J M J

Issoudun, February 9, 1897

Dear Father,

We received some days ago a letter from His Excellency Cardinal Rampolla, Secretary of State to His Holiness Leo XIII, informing us that the Holy Father had favourably received the request we made to him and was pleased to appoint as Protector of our Society, in place of the regretted Cardinal Monaco, His Excellency Cardinal Parocchi, His Holiness' Vicar, who has graciously accepted this charge and for which we are very grateful to him.

It gives me pleasure, Father, to share this good news with you and let you know at the same time that our new Protector engages himself to make possible the summoning of a new General Chapter for our Congregation next July. His Eminence is so assured already of the Pope's approval that he has asked us to name straightaway the two delegates who will replace Fathers Meyer and Derichemont at Chapter since they have become Superiors. The other delegates who were nominated for the 1896 Chapter, which did not take place, remain chosen for that of 1897.

Accordingly, your community should meet as soon as possible to elect one delegate since each Province can only put forward one alone. We would want to say to you that those who were called in 1896 to the Chapter as local Superiors, and who are no longer in office, cannot take part in the forthcoming Chapter as Superiors if they are not so any longer (for example, Fr. Genocchi), but they may be, it goes without saying, elected as delegates.

We also take occasion from this letter to pass on to you a decision taken in Council at the November 24 session: "All those of our religious who are title-holders of any property belonging to the Congregation need to make a will as soon as possible in relation to selling dues, such a document to be drawn up and signed by all who are, or will be, title-holders. Likewise, one needs to have in future a will drawn up by all those who are designated as title-holders of any property whatsoever belonging to the Congregation, and this also holds for all, title-holders or not, who leave for the missions. The latter also should provide before departure a power of attorney's document made as unspecified as possible."

I would ask you, Father, to give the utmost consideration, insofar as it pertains to you, to the execution of this decision. If you yourself, or one of your community, is a title-holder for some property belonging to the Society, you should write to us and you will be forwarded the necessary information and instructions, asking you, besides, for the names of those confrères who might be appointed lessees.

Moreover, the Council, having taken note of what has been a questionable procedure up to now, has taken the following decision: "Finally professed of the second class, without tonsure or minor orders, take precedence before temporarily professed who are tonsured and in minor orders. Those in sacred orders have precedence over the perpetually professed who are not yet in sacris" (sacred orders). General Council meeting, November 19, 1896.

Please accept, Father, my renewed, respectful good wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

18970213X

Council Meeting, February 13, 1897

All in attendance.

Accepted for profession.

1. The lay brother in New Britain, Kieft Jacobus, was accepted for final profession, and Brother Philibert Roestenberg of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, Jacobs Vitalis, Paris, and Alphonse Vriend of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, were accepted for renewal of temporary vows. The last-named wanted to make final vows, but the Council thought that it could not meet his wishes without knowing whether or not lay brothers could be accepted for final profession during the current (statutory) three years, an issue to be resolved either by Rome or the General Chapter.

Permission granted in regard to Brother Dehm's patrimony; the approval of a donation made by Fr. Offermans.

2. The Tilburg lay brother Fridolin Dehm asks permission to distribute the 197 florins which came to him from his patrimony, taking the form of 50 florins towards the new community chapel in Tilburg, 47 florins for the house being opened at the present time in Germany and, finally, 100 florins made over without interest to the Tilburg house. The Council approved of this request, ratifying at the same time Fr. Offermans' gift of 70 florins from the same Brother Dehm's assets to a member of his family who was pleased to have it.

The brothers (blood) Eichinger in Salzburg.

3. Fr. Hartzler in Salzburg likewise requests, on behalf of the two lay brothers, Vaudelin and Joseph Eichinger, permission to accept 1,000 florins made over to them in a will and set about administering the money. Permission was granted.

5. There followed the perusal of a federal law with regard to Swiss nationalization. Article 2 requires that anybody wishing to become naturalized should live for two years beforehand on Swiss soil. It was decided to make enquiries as to whether or not it would be possible to have an exemption from this requirement.

The Mellay, Vendée offer.

5. Canon Suyrot's proposal was next considered. He, from Mellay near Montaigu in the Vendée, had offered the Congregation the direction of a boys' orphanage set up by himself on a family property, with certain conditions to be met. The Council left this issue over for further consideration before dealing with it again at its next meeting.

A concession of 4% made in favour of Joseph Bouellat.

6. Joseph Bouellat writes in order to be rid of an embarrassment in which he finds himself, being without a post on leaving Saint-Pierre-des-Clages school. It has to be kept in mind that he gave himself with commitment to this work, and rendered service to the Society in making it known that the expenses there were purposeless, ending his letter with a request that he be given either a continuation of his salary, or be granted at the rate of 4% a sum of money until such time as he found another posting. This latter proposal was accepted.

The purchase of ground belonging to Dr. Koenig in Vichy.

7. The decision already taken to buy Dr. Koenig's ground in Vichy was confirmed. It will cost 55,000 francs.

Barcelona will have to accept that only two priests can be made available for the San-Miguel college.

8. Fr. Casas, in a letter of February 4, made the Council aware of Fr. Ramot's negative reply to the request made to him about making Fr. Pauly available for the San Miguel college. Since Issoudun could only provide two people this coming autumn, Barcelona will have to continue with such personnel as there are or find a teacher from outside.

A Canonical Visit to Glastonbury decided.

9. Letters were now read from Fathers Hartzler and Martin in Glastonbury, and from both letters it follows that, as things are not going very well in that community, a Canonical Visit is called for. Since Fr. Tréand cannot undertake it, the decision was taken to appoint visitors towards Easter.

The requests made by Fr. Brunet on behalf of Fr. Laviolle not granted.

10. Fr. Brunet asked on behalf of Fr. Laviolle that he be given two interviews in the year with the Sacred Heart Sisters; that he preach the retreat agreed on with the Auteuil Sisters and pay a visit to the Reverend Mother of the Nantes Claretians. The Council felt that it was unable to give permission as regards any of these requests.

11. Following certain declarations and explanations about the financial interests of the Society, the Council decided:

1. To give over dealing with Crédit Foncier since they are only offering 30,000 francs' valuation against the Issoudun property in place of the 200,000 francs for which they were asked.

The setting up of an anonymous society.

2. If this were set up, all titles to properties would be entered, and some outside associations would be asked to help out in setting up such a society by subscribing either one or several contributions of fifty francs each.

The purchase of the Jolivet house near the basilica.

3. It was agreed that the Jolivet house near the Sacred Heart should be bought. However, before proceeding to do so, an effort will be made to obtain from Joffroy either the purchase of what he owns adjoining the Jolivet property or else the renunciation of his right of way within the Jolivet forefront, all this in a financial arrangement to be determined. One needs to ascertain also if the town council would sell the footpath between the basilica on one side and the Joffroy, Jolivet, houses on the other.

The need for Fr. Carrière to consult the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars about the lay brothers' vows.

1. The question arises as to whether or not lay brothers, having fulfilled two three-yearly terms, might not take final vows if they are aged thirty, even if they have begun another three years which, on the supposition proposed, would not be completed.

Circular to be made ready announcing: 1, the General Chapter, and 2, the habit.

2. There followed a presentation of the rescript from the Congregation of Rites with regard to the habit and, in particular, with regard to the cloak worn by the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. There followed the Cardinal Protector's reply making it known that the Pope had approved the convocation of a General Chapter. It was decided to make available to the Congregation both these news items.

3. Brother Charles Pfeiffer, New Britain, was accepted for final vows.

Fr. Ramot's report on his Province.

A discussion about the votes of the student priests in Rome.

4. Two letters from Fr. Ramot were considered, containing a report about his Province's houses and especially about those of Antwerp and Tilburg where he has carried out a Canonical Visit. As regards one issue brought up by him, it was decided that Fr. Carrière should be asked if the priest scholastics in Rome could vote in the election of delegates for the General Chapter and, if in the affirmative, what Province should they vote for.

Fr. General makes funds available for the purchase of the house in Marseilles.

5. The Marseilles house not finding it possible to get a loan of the needed finance to pay by the first of March for the property at number 85 Rue Thiers, and on the other hand having immediate need of the money allocated by the Propagation of the Faith (office, Rome), the General informed the Council that he wished to make available, in addition to what was already available for the new Sacred Heart building, the amount needed to pay for the Marseilles purchase.

Brother Aloys Pooyer to return from Spain.

Fr. Martin given permission to visit his family in Geneva.

1. Not being able to return to France because he avoided being called up for military service, he requests permission to spend two or three days in Geneva to meet his parents whom he hasn't seen since he left for the USA and, in effect, since he became a priest. The Council gave him permission and 300 francs to cover the expenses of the journey and his visit.

A proposal to set up a house for those avoiding military service either at Montréal or Beirut.

2. A letter was next read from Fathers Derichemont and O'Mahony about their Montreal visit for the purpose of setting up a house there for those who wanted to avoid military service. It becomes clear from the letter that no negotiations can proceed until the appointment of a new bishop since the See is vacant at the moment. On reading another letter sent from Beirut to Fr. General by Fr. Briaux, who is in charge of an orphanage in that city, it was thought that it might be better to look in that direction than towards Canada and the decision was taken to get in touch with Fr. Catin, SJ, the rector of the medical faculty in Beirut.

Fathers Vaudon and Maillard to visit Mellay, Vendée.

3. Consideration was next given to Mellay, near Montaigu in the Vendée, and the decision was taken to send Fathers Vaudon and Maillard to look at the properties in charge of Canon de Suyrot, and discuss with him the conditions under which he would come to terms with the Society about the running of his orphanage and the setting up of a little Petite Oeuvre in his property.

The setting up of an anonymous society.

4. Following a number of explanations provided by Mr. Etave, a solicitor, about the planned anonymous society, the Council confirmed its decision taken on the 13th of the month to set up the society.

Approval of Fr. Guyot's Vichy accounts.

5. Finally, Fr. Guyot's Vichy accounts for 1896 were approved, also his budgeting for 1897.

Council Meeting, March 3, 1897

All in attendance.

Fr. Carrière's request to sell certain items in the ancient church of Saint-Jacques adjourned.

1. He asked if he could be authorized to sell for the purpose of using the proceeds to decorate the church certain items which were part of the ancient Saint-Jacques church such as paintings, ancient statues, marble pieces, etc., which have a certain value, but which would cost a great deal to be prepared, or which would have no place in the decoration now going on. The Council, before pronouncing on this matter, would like to have the views of experts in this respect. Accordingly, Fr. Carrière is requested to consult with experts and forward their views to us.

Final profession of brothers aged 30, and the voting of the Rome priest scholastics with respect to the General Chapter.

2. A second letter from Fr. Carrière gives a reply to two questions that the Council at its February 20 meeting decided to submit to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars as regards lay brothers' perpetual vows and, also, the voting rights of scholastic priests in Rome with respect to Chapter delegates. The Council submits itself to the conclusions of this letter which remains linked to the present talks going on.

Brother Emile Bertin given permission to stay at home for 6 weeks in order to get back his health.

3. It appears from a letter of the Eudist priest Fr. Durel, teaching at the Saint-Leo college, that Brother Emile Bertin, making his military service in that town, and because of his health unable to carry on, still remains too exhausted and weak to continue with his studies and live in community. Accordingly, it was decided that he should go and stay with his mother until Easter to rest and restore his health. He will have funds made available to him if his mother's means are such that it is not easy for her to look after him financially.

A question of precedence.

4. Fr. Pauly in Salzburg puts forward the following question about precedence. These two religious who made their perpetual profession at the same time are in a situation where the younger of the two is called to orders before the other, although both in the same year. Reply: the older comes before the other in rank.

Request from Brother Jos. Moorees to be released from his vow of chastity.

5. The elderly lay brother Joseph Moorees who has left the New Guinea mission and the Society, has again written requesting his release from vows. A copy of the Rome rescript releasing him from his vows of poverty and obedience was already forwarded to him last summer, but as it seems he hasn't received it a fresh copy will be sent on to him. However, it appears from his letter that he wants in particular to be released from his vow of chastity. It will be made known to him that this is in the competence of his confessor, and that it is through him that he should request the new dispensation he is looking for.

The Melay-Vendée offer postponed.

6. Fathers Vaudon and Maillard spoke about their trip and the meeting they had with Canon Suyrot, laying before the meeting his proposals and plans for the house he is putting at the Society's disposal for the apostolic undertaking which would be set up there. The Council for the most part was in favour of these proposals, but a definite decision was left to the next meeting.

Circular calling for Chapter.

7. This circular will contain a list of issues to be discussed at the assembly, the majority of which were now set out, one of the most important issues being that of revising certain obscure sections of the Constitutions. To avoid working in the abstract, it was decided that each Council member would again read the Constitutions and indicate at the next meeting those parts which seemed vague and ill-defined to him.

Subsidising those on military service.

8. Following remarks made by one of the Council members about money sent to those on military service, the decision was taken to lower to ten francs the monthly allowance made available to them, given that the 20 francs presently available to them is such as to give them the opportunity of becoming unsettled.

The process invoking Fr. Ilge's expulsion.

9. There followed the presentation of a letter from Fr. Carrière about the continuing issue of Fr. Ilge, with a rescript accompanying this letter through means of which the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars granted the Superior General the right to expel this religious, having first set up a tribunal and made due process possible for his legal defence. The meeting then became a tribunal consisting of Council members with Fr. Lanctin appointed as his legal defender.

Fr. General then put forward the main complaints levelled at Fr. Ilge.

1. There was his independent attitude when he was part of the Salzburg community, absenting himself for one reason or another, giving no address when away and only returning when he felt like it.
2. There were the serious complaints brought against him by the Archbishop of Salzburg who requested his being removed under threat of canonical proceedings going ahead, which, in the Archbishop's view, would have certainly held against the accused.
3. An interdict placed on him by the Archbishop of Cologne because of serious public forum misdemeanours against the moral order.
4. Likewise there was an interdict placed on him by the bishop of his native diocese.
5. The administration in Berlin likewise brought an interdict against him, as always for the same reasons.
6. The Bishop of Coire, Switzerland, who had taken him into his diocese, had to send him away following complaints from dioceses where Fr. Ilge has been and where he had been accused of very serious misdemeanours, in particular solicitation in the confessional.
7. Fr. General on several occasions insisted by letter on his coming to Issoudun; he never came and nor did he rely to the letters.
8. Moreover, this unfortunate stray, wherever he is, passes himself off as a Missionary of the Sacred Heart, thereby seriously prejudicing the good name and honour of the Society.

Fr. Lanctin in his reply stated that up to the time of his final profession he (Ilge) was always pious and conforming, reckoned to be a good religious, while at the beginning of his priestly ministry he was pastorally zealous and preached successfully. He then lost his way and, consequently, he could not defend himself against the serious charges brought against him. He pleaded extenuating circumstances. Accordingly without questioning or calling into doubt in any way the good will, prudence and justice of the distinguished bishops who placed him under interdict as noted (by Chevalier), it seems to be the case that, despite everything which has been brought against him, it does not seem to be the case that he, the accused, was ever given a hearing. It is also to be queried if Fr. Ilge's Superiors adequately used all possible means to turn him away from discreditable actions in the first place and, thereafter, to acknowledged regret for his actions following his earlier escapades, and whether, even now, it might not be possible to bring back this straying sheep by extending a helping hand towards him. He concluded by stating that, given his natural gifts, the services he had rendered the Society in the past, and what he could still offer if he wanted to return to the order, it would be in the event more appropriate, perhaps, to be accommodating rather than deliver a verdict of definitive expulsion.

The others replied: whatever is to be said from the past in favour of Fr. Ilge, it is presently an issue involving serious misbehaviour identified with him for a good number of years. When he began to react against the yoke of the religious life, the Superiors did their best through observations, warnings, etc., to mend the delinquent's ways; the many warnings which were delivered by letters or otherwise, even from the Superior General, had no impact. As for the interdicts placed on him by bishops, he paid no attention to them, and when he did not think he was blameworthy he did not fail to defend himself. His defender (Fr. Lanctin) appeals for considerateness on the part of the Society, but there has long since been more than enough of this for someone who, over a long period of time, has merited condemnation for his resistance to authority, without mentioning other things which could be held against him. For the rest, he has not himself asked to be indulgently treated, and perhaps in some way he is contemptuous in doing nothing of the kind, since he does not deign to reply to letters inviting him to come and discuss matters with his Superiors. Consequently, he can be looked upon as having broken away from the religious life, and is given to contempt for authority, rebelliousness towards his Superiors, being outside a Congregation to which he does not, except in name, belong any longer, and on which, contrary to all justice, he brings discredit and indeed dishonour. For these reasons the Council, unanimously, confirms the verdict of expulsion already served against this unhappy priest.

A letter from Fr. Carrière.

Rome, February 25, 1897

My Dear Father,

If the Council so wishes, I shall put the two questions to which you refer before the Sacred Congregation, but I do not think it would be helpful. In effect:

1. With regard to the lay brothers' vows, the reply given to me in the first instance by the consultor not being to my satisfaction, I returned and submitted the query to him again. Accordingly, either because he now understood better what was at issue or had given it more mature reflection, he gave me an answer contradicting his earlier one, namely that, according to him, one may on reaching thirty years of age renew vows for a limited time, even for some months. For the rest this explanation is more in conformity with the letter and spirit of the Constitutions. One may, if so wished, at the Chapter, change the wording to make the matter clearer, submitting the text thereof to the Sacred Congregation. While awaiting this, I am certain that one can act in this way.

2. As for the second question, I do not rightly see why it should be submitted at all to the Bishops and Regulars, since it is not Rome which decides that the priests of our house are 'nullius provinciae' (belonging to no particular Province), but the Council and, consequently, it is for the Council to deal with the problems which could arise as a consequence of this decision. If I may be permitted, for the rest, to offer my humble view on the matter, here it is: the Rome scholastics, not belonging to any Province, one understands that they do not take part, directly or indirectly, in the Provincial Chapter. Nevertheless, they are members of the Society and in this respect it is only just that their rights should not be lesser than others as far as the General Chapter is concerned because it involves the whole Society. But what Province would they vote for? Here the Council must intervene. For myself I think it's more reasonable and satisfactory if they were to vote for their respective Provinces since knowing it better their vote would be more relevant. I do not think there is anything contradictory here, all the more so since it was the purpose of the Council when declaring these Rome students to be 'nullius provinciae' to make them administratively its subjects under the direct authority of the Superior General. This purpose, however achieved, does not mean that they are deprived of all their other rights, since I do not think that one necessarily implies the other.

If the forthcoming Chapter accepts the new text which I shall be putting forward about the election of delegates, all will be resolved thereby for the future and the problem only becomes an issue this one time (at the forthcoming Chapter). The Council, however, I am convinced, has complete authority to resolve the issue in the present circumstances.

I received the 25 francs and took good note of it. The mass requested will be said.

Please accept, Father, my best wishes in C.J.

Fr. Carrière, MSC.

Council Meeting, March 6, 1897

The Melay-Vendée foundation decided in principle.

1. This involves, principally, taking a decision about Canon de Suyrot's proposals. The views expressed were very diverse. Some Council members thought it was unwise to start a new undertaking since there were already in the Society so many undertakings which were becoming hazardous due to lack of personnel. Others, while acknowledging the absence of well-trained personnel who were likely to become Superiors, thought it was a good idea to have undertakings to engage the young men who, this year and in the years thereafter, are coming out of the scholasticate. That it would be, for the rest, regrettable to allow a special opportunity go by default, only calling for few sacrifices from the Congregation in order to set itself up in a part of the country which is Christian in practice for the most part, and where one can certainly come upon both resources and serious-minded vocations all the more attractive when there is no definite commitment, and there will be at least three years to take stock of the situation. Moreover, one does not see how by refusing this foundation, which could have great advantages, one readily solves the problem referred to above, what is lacking in the formation of members, since if no new undertaking is taken on, one will, of necessity, place young members in old undertakings shakily viable and where, in consequence, they become unsteady (in their vocation) more so than in other places. In effect, the new undertaking does not require as an orphanage more than two lay brothers and a priest who, while not being able to do a great deal elsewhere, could very well do so there. As for the Petite Oeuvre, which we are free to start sooner or later, it will not need more than a serious-minded person in charge and two young men who will not be hard to find. Because of the quite sharp divergence of opinions, Fr. General called for a secret vote which was accepted and gave rise to the following result: three affirmative votes, one neither for or against; one blank voting page (!). Consequently, the new foundation was approved.

The appointment of a budget and accounts commission.

The Council then appointed a commission comprising Fathers Morisseau, Batard, Maillard, to examine and approve, if required, the half-yearly accounts of the Society's different houses.

Consideration was given, thereafter, and lengthily, to the absence of a religious spirit among much too great a number of our subjects. This problem has, without doubt, many reasons, explanations, but it is difficult to be precise about it or indicate a remedy. Each will seriously consider this issue before the Lord.

*Circular letter written by Fr. Maillard, signed by Fr. Chevalier.
To the Superiors of MSC houses.*

Issoudun, March, 10, 1987

Reverend Father,

As we intimated to you in our circular of the 9th of February last, Cardinal Parocchi, our new Protector, has had Papal approval for our General Chapter at a time which will seem most convenient for us. Undoubtedly the sooner the better, but the needs of the different houses will have to be given consideration. As it happens a good number of those taking part in the Chapter are teachers and it would be desirable then to wait for the holidays or, indeed, have them sooner this year.

You are requested, then, Father, to be at Issoudun on Sunday, July 18, so that we begin that evening itself the retreat triduum which must precede the Chapter. If, for serious reasons, you cannot attend this meeting, be good enough to let us know as soon as possible, giving us your reasons.

If your community has not yet elected a delegate, as referred to in our last circular, you are requested to do so straight away, letting us have as soon as possible the result of the election.

In order to draw down upon the forthcoming Chapter heavenly blessings, there will begin in each house of the Society on Friday July 9, the feast of Our Lady's miracles, the prayers listed in number 147 of the Constitutions. They will consist of the Veni Creator's recitation with verse and prayer, and the Sub Tuum, followed by the customary invocations to the Sacred Heart, Our Lady and St. Joseph, all this each day at the end of evening prayers, and continuing until the Chapter ends. Over the same period all members of the Congregation will duly commend to the Sacred Heart and Our Lady in prayer, communion, masses, the successful outcome of this Chapter.

The following are the issues which will be considered:

1. The examination and approval of the new Directory.
  2. The revising of certain parts of the Constitutions not sufficiently explicit, for example a, the composition of the General and Provincial Chapters; b, clarifying what the third degree signifies in the Society; c, making clear certain passages which appear contradictory; d, dealing with other issues as they come up.
  3. The appointment of Assistants and a Procurator General.
- In the hope that this Chapter will bring about much good, providing a fresh impulse to our dear Society as it works more and more for the greater glory of God, the good of souls and our own sanctification, I ask you to accept Father my best wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

PS: Enclosed is the rescript of the Sacred Congregation in reply to the query we placed before it about our habit arising from our meeting last August.

Election of a Chapter delegate to replace Fr. Compte.

1. A letter from Fr. Carrière was read stating that Cardinal Parocchi (Protector) favoured the replacement of Fr. Compte as a delegate since it is most likely that he will have to remain in Paris to take his licentiate examinations when the General Chapter is taking place, itself beginning on July 18 next.

Fr. Carrière authorized to sell the ancient marbles in the St. James Church (Rome). Paintings held over.

In this letter Fr. Carrière insists on having permission to sell the effects in the church of St. James, something which was discussed already at the Council meeting on the 3rd of this month. He is given permission to sell the marble fragments, but the paintings are to be held over, and about which he will consult an artist in order to ascertain their present value and what it would cost to restore them if it was decided to do so.

Fr. Dormann given permission to have his photograph taken.

2. This priest scholastic in Rome requests that his photograph be taken for his aged and laid-up benefactor who would like to have it because he no longer expects to see his protégé before he dies. Granted!

The Fribourg naturalization legal requirements. An urgent need to have a house for those required to do military service.

3. Information was provided about the Fribourg naturalization law in that canton. There was also a letter from the Fribourg Chancellor, as well as one Mr. Blanc, a solicitor there, about the same issue. The upshot of all this is the fact that whoever is looking for Swiss nationality must have lived in the country for two years before he can make his request. In consequence, one was again drawn to the need for a house outside Europe for those young men required to do military service and it was decided to write once more to F. Catin (in Beirut).

The San Miguel College (Barcelona) definitely taken on.

4. Mr. Hibos, director of the college, has written to Fr. General about the take-over of the establishment by the Society, looking for a definite answer, something which he says he has not been able to get up to now from Fr. Casas. He will be notified about the Council's (favourable) decision on the 14th of January last, and Fr. Casas will get a letter requesting him to bring matters to a definite conclusion.

Acts of the Northern Provincial Chapter; accompanying requests.

5. A letter from Fr. Ramot accompanied the acts of the Provincial Chapter, and two requests to be forwarded to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. The first requested the putting right of irregularities which the Provincial thought had arisen through insisting on requirements without Rome's permission. The second involved irregularity in voting among the priests of the house when choosing Chapter delegates, either General or Provincial.

A second request sought approval for the borrowing of 250,000 marks for the new German house. Having read these three requirements, the Council decided to withhold approval of the Chapter Acts until Fr. Carrière, who would be forwarded a copy, provided us with the views of a specialist in these matters. As for the two initial requests (from Fr. Ramot) it was thought that the first was not a requirement as regards its main purpose, and as for the second, the despoiling of votes cast, the issue is doubtful. The request to authorize the loan is more relevant and necessary. Fr. Carrière will be requested, however, not to present it (this last) with the others until he is certain, through consultation, of the need to do so. He is, moreover, requested to ask for an explanation about the issue of debts which, according to number 173 of our Constitutions, cannot be undertaken without the Holy See's permission and particularly so if borrowing is by way of loan only; for example, Credit Foncier (a bank) requires obligatory recourse to the Holy See.

Fr. Ramot's letter also makes reference to meeting of a sort among some scholastics with regard to the content of an examination. Both Fr. General and Fr. Piperon had letters from two of these scholastics. This matter will engage attention at the next Council meeting, as well as the thrust of the letter approving the Provincial Chapter's Acts.

Fr. Guillaume granted permission to go home.

A replacement for Brother Aug. Boudin while on retreat.

1. A letter from Fr. Laliaux requests someone to replace Brother Aug. Boudin when he is away on retreat for ordination from the Issoudun school (that for students other than those at the Petite Oeuvre). Brother Neveux will take his place, but he must continue with his work at the office.

2. Brother Louis Bernard is accepted for temporary profession.

The Bishop of Luçon refuses to have us at La Roche-Thévenin.

3. A letter from Canon de Suyrot was read as well as one from the Bishop of Luçon refusing to give approval for the setting up of an apostolic school at la Roche-Thévenin because, he claims, this would hamper recruitment for the minor seminary. It needs to be said that our intention is not to take in many youngsters in the area, but rather only a few each year, coming as much from the lower Loire as from the Vendée. Besides, the youngsters we would be taking in are precisely those who would not be entering the seminary due to lack of resources. If the Bishop remains adamant in his refusal, we shall give over the idea of a Vendée foundation, the orphanage being no more than an accidental aim in our plan to set ourselves up in the area.

Proposal to accept the St. Peter College in Chateauroux.

4. The parish priest of St. Fauste, who would like us to take charge of the St. Peter College in Chateauroux, has written asking if overtures could be made to the mayor, one of the most influential of the committee, so that we could be accepted by it. Following a rather lengthy discussion in which views were quite varied, it was decided to inform Fr. Delaignes that in principle we would not be against accepting this college, but the time has not yet arrived to make a definitive decision. If the committee puts proposals before us they will be taken into consideration and then we shall proceed to examine the issue before giving a definite answer.

Letter from Fr. Carrière with reference to the Acts of the Chapters and requests.

5. Fr. Carrière's letter in reply to questions, which the Council at its meeting on the 13th of the current month forwarded to him about the Acts of the Northern Provincial Chapter, and its accompanying supplications. It was noted that the Procurator General's comments were in agreement with those already made by Council. They will be formally put together in a letter which the secretary general will prepare and present to the Council at its next meeting.

The issue of the five scholastics who refused to complete an examination.

6. Attention now focused on the issue of the five Contich scholastics who refused to complete in its entirety a moral question at the latest examinations. From the many letters which have arrived about this issue, either to the Superior General or to other Council members, it is being stated that:

1. these scholastics were not correct in refusing to reply to the question as presented by the professor, and if there wasn't formal disobedience there was evidence of an independent spirit;
2. for his part the lecturer acted arbitrarily and without sufficient discretion and judgment;
3. there was a lack of understanding and unity of purpose between the lecturer and the Superior, something which establishes attenuating circumstances in favour of the accused (students);
4. the Provincial and his Council were very wrong in these circumstances to take a decision without having recourse beforehand to superior authority, inflicting punishment which exceeds their powers.
5. The young students who are involved and are convinced that they are in the right could write to Rome, if the decision against them is maintained, their being held back from orders, which would be deeply regrettable at this moment when we are being allowed to go ahead with a General Chapter, because the conviction is that we have become relaxed and settled down among ourselves. For all these reasons the Council considers that Fr. Ramot should do his utmost to get those involved to ask pardon and, if it is acceptable, to forego the punishment. Then, when this matter will be brought to an end in this way, God willing, he shall get another letter to let him know that the Provincial Council had overstepped its rights.

Renovation work in Vichy; half the expenses met by us.

7. At the request of Mr. Genête in Vichy, it was agreed that we could meet half the cost of the expenses involving necessary repairs to the house in Avenue Victoria, which will cost about 500 francs.

Permission granted to Brother Legardeur to go home while revising.

8. He will shortly go to Besançon for the revision process and, at his mother's request, he can spend eight days with the family.

Fr. Mégret granted permission to spend some time in Cannes.

9. Fr. Miniot proposed that Fr. Mégret be given permission to spend some time in Cannes where no more financially is required of him than his mass intentions.

The accounts for the second half of 1896.

10. Finally, the report was read from the commission appointed to examine accounts for the second half of 1896. It was approved as presented herewith:

Report from the Budget Accounts Commission

On Tuesday the 9th of May 1897 the Commission appointed by the Council at its March 6 meeting came together to examine accounts from the Society's different houses over the latter six months of 1896. It was, first of all, noted that no accounts had been provided by the following houses: 1, the Issoudun Parish; 2, Sydney; 3, Watertown; 4, Glastonbury; 5, Salzburg.

Then it proceeded to consider the accounts made available and made the following remarks.

1. General observations: from perusal of the accounts sheets, the details are generally well kept, although some bursars are not yet in the habit of drawing up their accounts.

The General Bursar is requested to make the appropriate comments in the case of each one.

Specific observations about each house:

- a. Sacred Heart (Issoudun). The books are well kept; the accounts well made out. Satisfactory financial situation. At December 31, 1,323.60 francs to hand; surplus 832.25 francs.
- b. -Benoît. On December 31, 868.98 francs to hand; deficit: 3,605.77 francs. These figures would appear to be somewhat too high. It would, perhaps, be more convenient by way of diminishing the debt in this house to allocate a yearly sum with respect to: 1, the scholastic library; 2, the physics room; 3, the Issoudun visits by the two priests on the General Council.
- c. Paris. Satisfactory financial situation. Intake December 31, 2,658.79 francs. Expenses 3,109.79 francs. Fixed debt: 128,000 francs.
- d. Marseilles. This house does not seem to have an accounts register or, if it has, it is not very well kept, since on the evidence of the accounts sheet there is a deficit and yet this is not possible. Deficit foreseen for the end of 1897: 2,115.30 francs.
- e. Rome. Satisfactory financial situation: cash available December 31, 19,829.90 francs. Expenses to be met: 15,329.80 francs.
- f. Tilburg. Accounts, as always, very well kept. Excellent financial situation. Money to hand, December 31, 38,697.74 francs, the house, presently, having one current debt to meet.
- g. Antwerp. Satisfactory situation and it will get better. Cash to hand on December 31, 4,976.29 francs; total deficit no more than 98,440 francs.

h. Contich. This house only gets by financially from the contributions for the scholastics and special financial arrangements made by the Province. Money to hand on December 31, 19.61 francs which is at the same time expenditure.

Council Meeting, March 25, 1897

All present.

Again, the expulsion of Fr. Ilge.

1. In a letter of the 19th of the current month sent to the Superior General, Fr. Ramot made it known that the procedure to which there had been recourse in the expulsion of Fr. Ilge was not correct, given that his defender (Lanctin) was himself part of the Council and acting in judgment at the same time. Fr. General then appointed, with the approval of the Assistants, Fr. Genocchi as Fr. Ilge's advocate. At the beginning of the day's meeting, having taken an oath on the Gospels to fulfil his role conscientiously, he briefly recalled the main complaints levelled against Fr. Ilge, and then pleaded in his favour. His conclusions were the same as those arrived at by Fr. Lanctin at the March 3 meeting, but more accentuated.

Following further discussion, the Council endorsed Fr. Ilge's expulsion, with this softening of the blow however: that he be invited to enter, over the time assigned to him, at least for a few months, a penitential house, for example one in the care of the Trappists or Capuchins, where he would commit himself to return sincerely to the practice of the regular life, and go on to accept all the tasks, however humble they might be, his Superiors might assign to him. If he accepts these conditions the verdict expelling him will be suspended, and could be done away with altogether if he has really had a change of heart. If, on the contrary, he does not accept the conditions laid down above, they will immediately become fully effective.

The San Miguel College contract.

2. A copy of the contract between the Barcelona community and Mr. Hibos, director of the San Miguel College, was now read, as well the inventory, somewhat too brief, of the furniture which Mr. Hibos left to the community.

Comments from Fr. Merg on the Sydney house.

3. There was also a letter read from Fr. Merg in Sydney. The Council, while having in mind what could well be exaggerated (unbalanced) in Fr. Merg's assessment, accepts that this house, such as it is at present, is not a house of formation, and if one wishes to set up something of a serious nature, then one must also provide some capable men to help Fr. Tréand.

Issoudun, March 28, 1897

My Dear Child,

I received your letter and took serious and full note of what you had to say. The result is that in my view you were wrong to act as you did. Without wishing at this moment to ascertain if the procedure you mention has the force of law or not, your duty, my good man, was to give way and then, afterwards, bring up the issue, which we would have considered and then gone on to take a decision. But in acting precipitately you have anticipated this decision, placing yourself in a false position, giving rise to a situation which at the present moment causes you a lot of regret, and myself also, who sincerely loves all the children of our dear Society. I hope that very soon calm will return to your spirit. Go and see Fr. Provincial and come to an understanding with him; everything leads me to believe that things will work out for the best. My prayers are for you, dear child; I bless you in C.J.

Issoudun, March 31, 1897

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I am forwarding to you the 600 francs (about 2,035 euros), your three-monthly allowance.

I included your name in the 1897 register of personnel as a member of our Congregation, but several Assistants and some confrères have heard it said by serious-minded, well-informed people that you have released yourself from your vows and are no longer one of us. What has confirmed them all the more in this view is that you sign yourself R.P. Jouët, Mis<sub>a</sub>SC. Is not this letter 'a', without doubt, meant to be understood as 'apostolic'? I have informed them in reply that His Eminence the Cardinal Vicar had requested to have you available for work in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Prati (a Rome suburb), benefiting the souls in Purgatory, and since that time you are outside the jurisdiction of your Superior General and come under that of the Cardinal Vicar, as long as your presence is needed for the work which has been made your responsibility. But in the internal form you continue to remain a religious of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun.

The Assistants, who have a high regard for you and like you very much, are happy with this explanation, since you have been so involved with the beginnings of our Society; as we and the public see it, they would be baffled if it was otherwise. However, to cut short all comment, I have been requested by them to put the question officially to you, so that they can provide a reply to queries put to them about you as to whether or not it is really so, and if you still consider yourself to be a Missionary of the Sacred Heart belonging to our Congregation. For myself I have no doubt that you are and I would be very upset if it were otherwise.

Please accept, dear friend, my best wishes.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Council Meeting, April 1, 1897

All present.

Approval of the Provincial Chapter's Acts.

1. The secretary began by reading a document to be sent to Fr. Ramot with reference to the Acts of the Provincial Chapter, which was approved as presented.

Antwerp scholastics accepted for ordination.

2. The Antwerp scholastics were accepted for various orders at the request of Fr. Ramot whose letter is given below.

Brother Fusshöller remains in the Northern Province.

3. Fr. Provincial (Ramot) has sent the lay brother Jean Baptiste Fusshöller back to Europe since he can no longer keep him on the missions and he (Ramot) wants him accepted in the French Province. It was decided that he should remain in the Northern Province.

The Petite Oeuvre at Saint-Pierre-des-Clages closed down.

4. Fr. Jos. Bouellat in a letter written on behalf of Fr. Robadey and in his own name requests that the place should remain open until the autumn or at least until Easter. It will close on April 15 as was in principle already agreed.

The proprietorial body at Tilburg agreed on.

5. Fr. Offermans, Superior in Tilburg, requests that Fathers Piperon and Klotz, who have resigned, should be replaced as title-holders of the house and property by Fathers Okhuijzen, Nieuwenhuis and Charles Offermans, bringing the moral group to seven members, the three new members here together with Fathers Clément Offermans, Henri Peeters, with Linckens and Kicken already involved. The Council gave its approval.

Mr. Martineau de Mehun unacceptable as a lay brother.

6. Mr. Martineau from Mehun-sur-Yèvre wrote asking to be accepted in the lay brothers' novitiate, but he cannot be accepted because of a medical condition which makes all work of a serious nature impossible.

Fr. Comte replaced as a delegate at the General Chapter.

7. Fr. Comte wrote from Paris asking to be replaced as a delegate to the forthcoming General Chapter because his licentiate examinations coincide with the Chapter. Accordingly the decision was taken to send a circular to Superiors in the French Province requesting them to vote as soon as possible for the election of another delegate.

The Vendée foundation definitively shelved.

8. A letter from Canon de Suyrot was read stating that the Bishop of Luçon stood by his decision about the proposed apostolic school at la Roche-Thévenin. In this respect it was asked if it might not be helpful to take up the matter with Fribourg in Switzerland about the need for a house where young men can be sent to help them avoid military service. The following is a summary of the different views expressed.

Proposals for foundations at Beirut and Fribourg; different observations about the way in which military service could be avoided for our young men.

Beirut seems to be the favoured choice for our scholastics who are subject to military service since, apart from following the university courses, they would need no more than two priests to look after them. The problems presented by this proposal are finding a Superior for the new house, being deprived of financial support for these young men over 12 years, and finding something for them to do after their ordination until they reach the age of thirty.

These are real problems, but are not insurmountable because a Superior will be found and then when the scholastics will have finished their studies and there is no work to engage them, they could be sent to our American or Australian houses before it becomes possible for them to return to France. Those who want to go on the missions could be sent there on finishing their studies. There remains the problem of recruiting for our houses in France during the forthcoming twelve years, that is to say until such time as Asia will provide us with personnel. It would appear that there are two ways of resolving this question.

b. sic The first would be a foundation in Switzerland, for example in Fribourg. There is also a university there where our scholastics could follow the courses. One could send there our young men who would willingly accept Swiss naturalization. Following a 3- or 4-year sojourn in Switzerland, they could return to France without any concern and be available for every kind of ministry except, perhaps, teaching, and even there it is not unlikely that they will get permission to teach. Here again (in Fribourg) two priests would be enough to look after this foundation which, after a certain amount of time, would be financially self-sufficient.

c. The second way to get subjects, even for teaching, during the first twelve years of the Beirut foundation, would be to enrol for the licentiate all those with the capacity to qualify in it and who, otherwise, offer serious evidence of a religious spirit, and provide hope that they will spend a year in a military camp without serious detriment to their religious spirit and vocation. In consequence, we would have teachers with degrees who could render valuable service later in colleges or even our apostolic schools.

Brother Hinard's will.

9. Brother Hinard's will again came up for discussion and the Council hands it over to the accounts' commission.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Antwerp-Borgerhout, March 29, 1897

Dear Rev. Father,

As the Chapter is to be held on July 18, we need to anticipate the ordinations at the end of the (school) year. I think that they will take place on July 11, with the examinations being held at Malines at the end of June. Since a number must take an examination in the whole theology course for diocesan faculties, it is time for them to know by now if they are being brought forward. I, accordingly, send you the list of those whom we are putting forward for different orders. I provide an assessment of those being put forward for the priesthood and subdiaconate.

Priesthood:

Brother Geitmann. Good religious attitude; nothing disfavoured to be said about his intelligence and health. As he is a good character, one can make the most of it.

Brother Nollen. Good attitude; pleasing simplicity; pious; good normal intelligence; remains adamant about going to the missions.

Brother Viegen. Quiet and submissive in character; highly sensitive; average intelligence; he is satisfactory.

Brother Braun. Knows how to cope in the midst of problems and delicate issues; neither says or does anything compromising. He is not open with everyone, but I do not think he deceives people. Quite intelligent, but of somewhat delicate health. He can provide worthwhile service.

Brother Schmitz. Good attitude; keen to be helpful; would like to go to the missions; quite ordinary intelligence; has a strong supernatural spirit. He is the only one who has asked this year to go on the missions, leaving in September.

Subdiaconate:

Brother van Dinter. Good candidate; intelligent; orderly; likely to be very helpful and available.

Brother van Hoogstraten. A good religious; limited in the scope of his views; very ordinary and slow intellectually. He is a good character and pious.

Minor Orders:

Brothers Geerts, Meier, van der Heijden, Stettner, Kleintitschen, Brocken.

Tonsurate:

Brothers Vogl, Nivard, Rutten, Wienants, Graf, Erdland, Müller, Van Neck, Gründl, Galiard, Maywee, Kolterman, Geurtjens, Olaerts, Bayer, Nauer, Dalscheb, Corsten, Klerks.

When there were last ordinations, as many presentation documents were sent as there were candidates. This time we are only providing one page alone for each order, providing on it the names of those receiving the order. I have here then quite a large number of sheets signed by you. It will be enough to let me know that the candidates are accepted, inclusive of the reservations there may well be. Then I shall write in the files the names of the accepted candidates.

Please accept my respectful good wishes in C.J.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Issoudun, April 3, 1897

Dear Mademoiselle, Benefactress,

You have forwarded to Fr. Miniot for the annual collection on behalf of our undertakings the splendid contribution of 245.30 francs. He has passed on to us your contribution, also the document providing the details of this amount.

Fr. Chevalier takes occasion through me to thank you most sincerely once again for your admirable zealous work, your unfailing and dedicated devotedness to the well-being of the Petite Oeuvre. May the divine Heart of Jesus, to whom we confide your care and protection, since He alone can only do so adequately, reward you from all the richness of His divine Heart!

Please convey as well our deep gratitude to the committed supporters and other kind, generous people who have sent their contributions to you, in particular Mademoiselle Maurel and Mademoiselle E. Périé. On their behalf and on yours, we continue to offer our most fervent prayers to the blessed throne of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph, confiding to both of these powerful intercessors the request to bring down on you all the spiritual and temporal graces which you wish for yourselves and those dear to you. We pray assiduously for the special needs of all our friends who are appreciative of our work.

We shall forward the Annals' subscriptions in keeping with the notification you have given us.

Again our sincere thanks for all you do in support of our undertakings. We reserve for you a special place in the many prayers we say each day for our benefactors, offering to the divine Heart of Jesus all your intentions and concerns. Be well assured of this gauge of our acknowledgment, the very best we can offer you.

Please accept most committed benefactress with our deepest regards this latest expression of our most sincere gratitude in C.J.

Issoudun, April 9, 1897

Dear Father,

In the name of our venerable Superior General I take it upon myself to write to you. Knowing the regard in which you continue to hold our little Society, and the interest you have always shown in it, I do not hesitate to put before you the plan we have in mind to set up a little centre in Beirut where we could place those young men of ours who are liable for military service. You will be aware that the 1889 law exempts from service those young men who are outside Europe before their 19th year, with a regular occupation, and remaining there (outside Europe) until they are 20 years of age. It is because of this article (proviso) that a number of religious societies have set up houses in Asia, or elsewhere, for their scholastics. Since September last we have been thinking of doing the same, but up to now we haven't been able to put our plans into action. At the present moment we are resolved to do our utmost in whichever way we can to avoid army camps for our young vocations and we have cast eyes on Beirut because of its university.

Do you think, Father, that we could find in the city, in the vicinity of the university, a rented house where we could lodge 20 or 30 scholastics? It is likely that in 12 years the number will be more than this, but over 3 or 4 years the number will be below that, and from now until then there will be ample time to study better the situation. It is necessary that there should be a courtyard for recreation. On the supposition that such a rented building would become available, what would the price be, approximately, for a year?

Might what is happening at the moment in Crete have repercussions as far-reaching as Syria and, particularly, Beirut?

There are, it goes without saying, other issues to be considered, but if you will be kind enough to reply we shall then go into further details.

In expectation, with anticipated thanks, I send you our appreciative and religious regards in C.J.

On behalf of the Superior General,
F.X. Maillard, MSC, Secret.

Council Meeting, April 10, 1897

All present.

Brother Allessie Mauritius, a lay brother in Tilburg, accepted for final vows.

1. He is put forward by Fr. Provincial, with good accompanying reports from Fr. Offermans.

2. Brother Henri Tissier, a Chezal-Benoît scholastic, has been accepted by the advisory council as a likely candidate for military service and, consequently, has 3 years ahead of him which he would like to spend in the Issoudun garrison, but in view of certain information which has reached him, he cannot choose his company unless he commits himself for four years. He would like to know what he should do in the circumstances. The Council does not wish to undertake any responsibility in regard to this subject, but nevertheless it will seek information from a high-ranking officer about the validity of the information given to it.

Brother Soucillé released from vows.

3. Brother Jean Soucillé has written to Fr. General asking him to be released from perpetual vows. What is needed for this will be carried out.

Brother Erbach sent home to his family.

4. Fr. Meyer, Superior in Antwerp, has written to say that the scholastic Erbach has been sent home for good to his family for health reasons. Since his temporary vows have not expired, and since for the rest Fr. General has not been consulted about his being sent away, an explanation will be sought.

Leases of property – Salzburg.

5. Fr. Hartzler, Superior in Salzburg, asks for Fathers Pauly and von Hasselt to be named lessees, also Fathers Eberlein and Reichert, and as lessee for himself, in his place, one of the following: Fathers Dormann, Lotter or Kuntz. Request granted.

Father Lavialle's trip to Nantes cancelled.

6. The Mother Abbess of the Nantes Claretian Sisters wants Fr. Lavialle to visit them. Because the decision taken at the Council meeting last January 30 should not be over-ruled, it is decided that a letter should be sent to the Rev. Mother stating that the Bishop of Nantes is so opposed to Fr. Lavialle that it is in the interests of both the Claretians and ourselves that he does not go to Nantes.

Inventory to be made at Saint-Pierre-des-Clages.

7. Fr. Robadey having arranged with Fr. Bouellat that he should keep the furniture, books, linen, etc., bought for the school until the Society (MSC) disposes of it, the decision is taken to have an inventory made by Fathers Robadey and Bouellat, acting in our name, describing and assessing everything belonging to us; a document detailing everything, signed by both, should be sent to us.

Brothers Poupény and Tatcher accepted for final profession.

8. The scholastics Tatcher and Poupény at their request were accepted for final profession on the 3rd of May next, having made beforehand the customary retreat of eight days.

Mr. Alexander Blet from Chateauroux as a likely postulant.

9. He is a young soldier from Saint-Flavier in the diocese of Tours who has spent 2 years in a church school and 2 more years in the minor seminary. He has just now completed his 4 years of military service at Chateauroux and requests entry to our novitiate as a candidate for the priesthood. The testimonial letters from his parish priest and mayor are very favourable to him and his respected family, but his letter indicates that he is not very advanced in his studies. Information about him must be sought from Fr. Pavillard who has religious responsibility for the Chateauroux military camp.

Permission granted to Father François Boudin to go home with his brother Auguste.

10. Fr. François is given permission to preach at his brother Auguste's first mass at Lovaguy (Calvados) in Easter week. This permission is granted, having in mind the proximate departure of Auguste for the missions and also in view of the fact that all the family members will have the benefit of being altogether once more before the departure.

Petite Oeuvre pupils and avoidance of military service.

11. Fr. Lanctin provided a list of Petite Oeuvre students about whom it is urgent to take a decision if they are to avoid doing military service; for some of them who are about to be 18 years old in a few days or weeks, it is too late to be thinking about their entering the novitiate before sending them abroad. Accordingly, one is left with two alternatives only: either send them to America or Australia for their novitiate, or hasten the Fribourg foundation so that they can go there to study philosophy at the university and then, after three years, return to France to do their novitiate. The Council will study the matter and offer a decision on it at its next session.

Issoudun, April 12, 1897

Dear Reverend Mother,

Fr. Brunet has passed on to me your wish to see Fr. Laviaille after Easter. You know, dear Mother, that we are always only too happy to meet your wishes in recognition of all you have done and continue to do for us poor Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. But we know that at this particular moment in time we are far from being considered favourably by the Bishop of Nantes and we do not know why. But it does appear that he has particularly in mind the measures taken against dear Fr. Laviaille. We think it best then, dear, kind Mother, that in your interest and ours Fr. Laviaille should avoid going to Nantes. This will certainly be hard on him as it will be for you, just as it is also for us when we cannot accommodate ourselves to your wishes.

We hope the good Lord will reward these sacrifices and bestow in return on your blessed house as on our little Society the most rewarding and supportive blessings of His divine Heart.

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Piperon, Vaudon, Maillard.

The lay brother L. Dörfler in New Britain accepted for final vows.

1. His request was supported by Fathers Ramot, L. Hartzler and C. Offermans.

Punishment withdrawn.

2. The (Northern) Provincial writes to say that he has withdrawn the punishment handed out to the unsubmitive scholastics. He, as agreed, held back from punishing the five scholastics who refused to complete the moral theology examination in its entirety, offering his and the Provincial Council's reasons for doing so in these particular circumstances.

Fr. Royet requested to avoid bringing up the issue of his military service.

A second letter from Fr. Royet, Watertown, makes known his wish to go before the Consul to face a revision committee and have himself excused from military service. Since this initiative is dangerous and could have serious implications for Fr. Royet and the Congregation, he will be written to and asked to forego his plan.

The departure of Brother Antoine Neveux held over.

3. This scholastic is no longer needed at the office (Issoudun) and one of the members proposed that he should return to the scholasticate, but another said that his backward intelligence gave good reason to be concerned about his ability to cope with his studies for the priesthood. It should be suggested to this young man that he become a lay brother. Since this issue is quite a serious one, the decision was taken to hold it over until the next meeting.

Dear Fr. Peeters,

I sincerely thank you for your feast-day good wishes and those from your good scholastics. May the Lord give ear to them. For my part I pray a great deal for you and all the others.

I attentively read your work. There is, so it seems to me, some exaggeration in the application of your principles. And then, my friend, you seem to have overlooked certain texts in our Constitutions which set out our procedures in relation to the vow of poverty and its implications, and this is what should be regulatory for us on this issue. In any event, the Chapter will decide. You will shortly have to hand, like all the Chapter members, the work of the commission on the Directory, which you can examine at your leisure and make your observations.

Council Meeting, April 24, 1897

All present except Fr. Vaudon, away on his travels.

Fr. Carrière authorized to undertake the following:

1. The negotiations about Boca with the Bishop of Novara. Present in person at the beginning of the meeting, he explained that the Bishop of Novara (Northern Italy) is prepared to offer us a church which at this time is being built in Boca within his diocese, and already a centre of pilgrimage which is quite frequented. His Lordship, in agreement with the commission set up for this work, will hand over to us the dwelling house attached to the church. The Council authorized Fr. Carrière to enter negotiations with the Bishop to clarify the as yet unclear aspects of the offer and then communicate with the Superior General and his Council.

2. Fr. Carrière is also requested to sell the church marble, paintings and gallery, having first provided the requisite information about all of this at the March 13 meeting (of the Council) and also with reference to a gallery which is not in keeping with the style of the church, which the client buyer agreed to replace with another more in keeping with the overall style of the church, also offering, moreover, to decorate the church at his own expense.

Brother Cantoni accepted for final vows; Brother Renoult for temporary vows.

2. Jacques Cantoni, a lay brother at the Jesi house, is admitted to final vows, and Fernand Renoult, a lay brother at Chezal-Benoît, is accepted for first vows. Likewise, a young man from the Jesuit school at Amiens is also admitted to the novitiate.

Fr. Gsell given permission to visit his family.

3. A scholastic in Rome, in a letter to Fr. General, expressed his wish to go to the New Guinea mission this coming autumn, and requests permission to spend some time with his family in Alsace. This request was legitimate and in keeping with established custom. However, the date of the next departure for the missions is not certain and it was agreed not to have the visit coinciding with the return of his brother in the army, which is not due to take place until the middle of September.

Brother Antoine Neveux appointed to the (Issoudun) school.

4. A letter from Fr. Laliaux was read requesting Brother Neveux as science teacher for the school, given that the classes being given at the Petite Oeuvre, followed also by those from the school, are not satisfactory enough to lead those in the school to achieve the purpose of their education. He (Laliaux) has Brother Neveux made available, but only for this term (three months) since at the end of the school year he will be going home to his family due to insufficient intelligence and, particularly, lack of judgment.

18940503X (mis-numbered, should be 18970503) Council Meeting, May 3, 1897

Held at the Sacred Heart (Issoudun). All present except Fr. Piperon.

The Spanish scholastics must stay in Spain until the end of their military service.

1. It was decided that the Spanish scholastics, who are frequently asked to meetings involving revision, should remain in Barcelona until such time as their military service is over.

Ground to be rented in Fribourg. Father Vaudon's report on his trip (to Switzerland).

2. Fr. Vaudon reported on his visit to Fribourg. Given the welcome already shown to us in the country and the possibility of setting ourselves up there, the Council took the decision that it was appropriate that we should do so as soon as possible and rent a house there straightaway, four of which are possibilities and about which one needs more complete information, which, it is hoped, will be available at the Council's next meeting when a definite decision will be taken.

Brother Antoine Neveux goes home to his family.

3. He went home a few days ago to his family prior to military service and he will be asked, in keeping with the observations made about him at the April 24 meeting (see above), to enter a seminary or do something else.

Election of a General Chapter delegate.

After the (Council) meeting, about 10.30am, the General brought together all the priests of the Sacred Heart community, and those of the presbytery who were available, the rest having voted already, to elect a delegate who would replace Fr. Derichemont, presently Superior of Mercer (USA), at the forthcoming General Chapter. Those present numbered 21 and they proceeded first of all to elect 3 scrutineers: Fathers Quoirier, Auguste Boudin and Bazot, the youngest in the community, were unanimously elected and the next two youngest, Fathers Villoud and Meckel, were appointed secretaries.

Each having voted, the pieces of paper were placed in an urn and then all the votes from the different houses besides those of the 21 present, except Sydney and the missions yet to arrive, making in total 53:

Paris 7, Marseilles 4, Chezal-Benoît 8, Glastonbury 4, Watertown 6, Mercer 3, Barcelona 5, Rome 12, the Issoudun presbytery 4; making a total of 74.

There followed the voting for individuals, with the following results:

Fr. Genocchi 35, Fr. Barral 10, Fr. Védère 4, Fr. Hériault 4, Fr. Mathieu 3, Fr. Lehane 3, Fr. Roger 2, Fr. Raynaud 2, Fr. Tierney 2, Fr. Laviaille 1, Fr. Pourquier 1, Fr. Audouy 1, Fr. Boudin 1, Fr. Field 1, Fr. Vandel 1, Fr. Cochet 1. There were two blank votes.

Issoudun, May 4, 1897

Dear Fr. Peeters,

I am far from questioning your work which, generally speaking, has considerable merit, but I would query it for its being in disagreement with different parts of our Constitutions as approved of by the Holy See.

There we have our blueprint, the rule governing our religious department. What we do should strengthen rather than hamper (the rule), not weaken it by being too supportive of individual freedom which already, anyway, is much too inclined of its own accord to leave aside whatever it doesn't like. This is also the view of the Council priests and of Fr. Genocchi. Present this work of yours, which I have given to Fr. Meyer to return to you, to him (Genocchi); he is someone who will appreciate it. We shall discuss it in a serious manner when you come to Issoudun. A Directory is urgently needed, being nothing other than a continuation of our Constitutions.

I hope all will be in readiness this October for the reception of our German scholastics in Munster. I think the same as you do; this separation has become necessary. Let trials be praised! Courage, dear friend; the Sacred Heart will reward your efforts.

Oremus pro invicem.

Dear Fr. Brunet,

Thank you for sending on your programme which is very good. I hope there will be a response to your inviting appeal.

This evening I met the manageress of the Jerusalem hotel who informed me that she asked you for 4 francs each day for meals and 1 franc 50 for each room (roughly 13 euros and 5 euros). I made arrangements with her for 4 francs, all founded(!). She can accommodate up to thirty people and provide meals for at least a hundred, this at 4 francs daily; these prices are very reasonable.

Issoudun, May 8, 1897

Dear Father,

Simultaneously with this letter you will receive the Directory approved by the commission appointed for this purpose at the meeting held last August. We hope that this work will meet your expectations and can serve as the blueprint for a definitive common Directory at the forthcoming Chapter. Of course, the Chapter will be free to change this work if it considers it to be more appropriate for the good of our little Society. Nevertheless, in order to avoid, in discussion of this text, drawn out interventions which might come in the way of bringing the undertaking to a satisfactory conclusion, we have thought it necessary, the Council in agreement, to set out the procedures for the debate:

1. The text of the Directory will not be read at the meetings; everyone should study it before the Chapter. It will suffice to take the text, article by article, paragraph by paragraph, asking if there are comments or changes to be made. Those who have something to say will stand up and be noted, and the president will in succession provide an opportunity for each to speak.
2. Nobody is allowed to put forward an amendment or any point of change in the text without having beside him the Latin text which must replace that of the Directory.
3. The new text should as perfectly as possible conform to that which preceded it and that which follows it, both as to compatibility of ideas and stylistically.
4. In order to make it possible for all the Chapter members to assess better the new text, everyone who has changes to put forward will submit his manuscript in the first place to the copyist appointed who will then reproduce the text for each member to have a copy. This will be done before the meetings. Everyone will see to it that this new wording is made ready in time for distribution before the discussion. If, however, nothing more is needed than to replace some words, this last procedure will not be necessary.

The following is the procedure for dealing with issues at the forthcoming Chapter:

1. The election of the Assistants and the Procurator General;
2. Debate and approval of a general Directory;
3. Discussions about changes to be made in the texts of the Constitutions.
4. General measures to be undertaken for the good of the Society;
5. Specific issues which each one would like to put forward;
6. Finally, the appointment of a commission responsible for drawing up particular, specific, directories.

Please accept, Father, my best wishes in C.J.

18970515X

Council Meeting, May 15, 1897

All present.

Subsidy made available to Brother Neveux's family.

1. At Fr. Laliaux's request, Brother Savin, who had come to replace Brother Neveux, is to stay on, but given the precarious financial situation of the latter's parents, it was decided that the sum of 400 francs should be made available to them until their son, Anthony, finds work.

The novice Bodem accepted for profession because he is fatally ill.

2. Fr. Hartzler, Superior and Novice Master at Salzburg in the Northern Province, wants the novice Pierre Bodem, dying at home from tuberculosis, to be professed. The proposal was accepted, but at the same time Fr. Hartzler was notified that if he got better he must, nevertheless, complete his year's novitiate, the profession anticipated in the case of the sick only relating to the individual and not to the Society (hence the need to meet the requirements of the novitiate year).

Brother O'Reilly as well as Brother Fuschöller remain in the Northern Province. Brother Sylvain Gravez in the French Province.

3. Fr. Ramot proposes that Brother O'Reilly should enter the French Province. He wishes to leave for Sydney with Fr. Tréand and he wants in return Brother Sylvani (sic) Gravez, who would be very useful for the recruitment of vocations in the Walloon part of Belgium, to replace him (O'Reilly). The Council does not accept the proposed change and, moreover, it was decided when the Provinces were divided that the French-speaking part of Belgium should belong to the French Province.

Proposal to increase the Chezal-Benoît financial contributions.

4. Fr. Piperon suggests that the contribution given to him each month for the Chezal-Benoît novices and scholastics should be increased, since given the small number and the high level of general expense, he is unable to balance his budget. This issue is held over for a future meeting.

Problems in the Sydney community.

5. It appears from a letter of Fr. Vandel's to Father Lanctin, and from those of Fr. Merg to Fr. General and the General Secretary, that there is division and antipathy in Sydney between Fr. Merg and most of the other members of the community. Fr. Tréand (still in Europe) will be called to the next meeting to give his views on the matter, and an attempt will be made to come to a decision which will remedy the situation.

A request (for money) from the Procurator General of the Mercy Fathers.

6. Fr. Marin, the Procurator General of the Mercy Fathers, is laying claim in the name of his Congregation to a sum of 500 francs by way of author's rights relative to the book titled 'The Imitation of St. Vincent de Paul', written by Fr. Delaporte. The book has had 5 editions since he came to us and since each edition cost 100 francs, this means that it is as much as 500 francs which Fr. Delaporte owes to the Mercy Congregation because he ceded his authorial rights to them in relation to this work. The decision was taken to ask for the letters which give rise to this right, following which a decision can be arrived at.

Scholastics called to orders.

7. At Fr. Vaudon's proposal the following scholastics were accepted for orders and ordination on June 29:
 Brothers Buckley, Burke, Cros, Pagès, Pierre Marie Courbon: priesthood.
 Brother Pouvreau: diaconate.
 Brothers Poupenay, Thatcher, Valdambrini: subdiaconate.
 Brother Egidi: minor orders.
 Brothers Bouellat, Girerd, Gravez: tonsurate.

A decision about priests to be sent to the San Miguel college, Barcelona.

8. Finally, a letter was read from Fr. J.B. Perriot who accepts, as an obedience, responsibility for the San Miguel college, but requests that he be given the necessary means to make it work and succeed and, particularly, that Fathers Pourquier and Audouy be sent to him as soon as possible so that they can be trained in the language and teaching methods of Spain. He also requests that Brother Thatcher be ordained priest before he leaves France. Everything will be undertaken to meet his needs and requests as soon as possible.

Council Meetings, May 18 & 21, 1897

All present except Fr. Batard, absent from the May 18 meeting.

Proposal for a change of personnel at the Sydney house.

1. As Fr. Tréand was present (at the meeting) the issue of Sydney was addressed. From all that was said it followed that, given his personality, Fr. Merg could only with great difficulty and concern remain in that community. He might, then, be sent to the Marshall Islands where a missionary is being sought with great urgency and where he himself, according to Fr. Tréand, would be glad to go. The Sydney house would then have made available to it Fathers Gsell, Buckley and Pierre Marie Courbon. This is only a provisional arrangement, however; the Council will come back to it later.

Fr. Ilge accepts the verdict brought against him.

2. A letter was read from Fr. Ramot stating that Fr. Ilge accepted the decision brought against him requesting that the material obligations he may need to meet in relation to the Antwerp community should be brought to his attention. He will be informed that, not knowing what he might owe, the issue is left to his own conscience.

May 21: All members present.

Mr. Blet not accepted for the novitiate.

1. Mr. Alex Blet from Chateauroux had his request to enter the novitiate turned down, given the information made available about this young man.

Fr. Ramot re-elected Provincial.

2. Fr. Ramot is re-elected for a further three years as Provincial.

Special grants to .

3. Returning to the request made by Fr. Piperon for supplementary financial contributions at the May 15 meeting, it was decided that matters should go on as before, meeting the deficits exposed in the six-monthly accounts.

Fr. Doutré appointed to Vichy. A room to be set up for a third person.

4. The decision was taken to send Fr. Doutré to Vichy during the first week of June to help Fr. Guyot who is requested to set up in the premises recently bought from Dr. Koenig a room for those confrères who would need to spend some time at Vichy.

Notification of a new building to the Mayoralty.

5. The General Bursar made it known that he had, through Mr. Martin the builder, officially made it known to the Mayor's office that there was construction work proceeding presently at the Sacred Heart. This notification will make for tax exemption during the three years which immediately follow on the construction.

The sale of the Lingfelden property in Salzburg.

6. Fr. Hartzer is authorized to sell the Lingfelden property and Fr. Carrière is requested to get permission for this as soon as possible from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

The right of ownership to the (book) Imitation of St. Vincent de Paul granted to the Mercy Congregation.

7. Fr. Pesnel, Superior General of the Mercy Congregation, wrote stating that he gives over his requests for the amount of money received by Fr. Delaporte for his book, The Imitation of St. Vincent de Paul, but he does want the ownership of this work to belong to his (MSC) Congregation, which Fr. Delaporte himself would have granted. The request is granted.

The Glastonbury deficit.

8. A letter from Fr. Hartzer, the Glastonbury Superior, makes it clear that the mother house will be asked in the very near future to meet the considerable debt arising from the upkeep of 9 youngsters for whom no fees are being paid. Details of the accounts will be requested from the Superior and Bursar and then measures will be taken to avoid any increase of the deficit.

9. The secretary read the latest report of the budget commission and it was approved as follows:

At the end of April the commission met to examine the accounts for the second half of 1896 of the Issoudun parish and the Salzburg house. No significant comment was necessary and the accounts were approved.

1. Salzburg.

Intake on the 31st of December came to 7,714.36 francs; the net deficit presently comes to 85,285.64 francs.

2. The Issoudun parish.

The intake for the six months comes to 6,998.53 francs with expenses at 5,009.05 francs. The positive balance on December 31, therefore, was 1,989.50 francs (in credit).

3. Brother Hinard's will.

The commission also gave consideration to Brother Hinard's will.

"It is, it has to be said, somewhat complicated and putting it into effect will call for a certain amount of work and particular care on the part of the executor; moreover, he commits the Congregation to certain responsibilities. Nevertheless, the commission is agreeable to accepting the will as it is, having in mind: 1, the advantages which will follow for the Society from the execution of this will; 2, the pleasure it will give a good and pious confrère in accepting it; 3, the fact that the conditions will not be obligatory in the case of a higher claim (force majeure); 4, and then the fact that the attention required in the execution of this will does not go beyond the normal attention necessary in the material and financial running of the Society." The Council accepted the commission's conclusions.

Fr. Bach given permission to go home.

1. This scholastic priest in Rome, who hasn't yet visited his family following his ordination, requests permission to go and visit them when he has finished his doctorate examinations in July. Permission granted.

Anonymous society; the signing of the deed.

2. The General Secretary made it known that the deed (for the anonymous society of the Indre) will be ready for signature in the office of Mr. Etave on Thursday, June 3. It was decided to put it back to Tuesday, the 8th.

Fr. Renouf appointed to Issoudun, Fr. Field to Paris.

3. Fr. Renouf at both his own request and that of Fr. Brunet, will be brought back from Paris. As well, Fr. Audouy will likewise leave this house to go to Spain. Consequently, it will be necessary to provide at least one priest for this house to replace the two who are departing. Fr. Field in Glastonbury seems to be the only one available at this moment. In any event Fr. General will deal with this issue when he meets Fr. Brunet who is coming here next Tuesday with the Paris pilgrimage.

Concerns submitted to Fr. Carrière about Superiors remaining in office longer than 6 years.

4. Some members of the Congregation interpret number 142 of the Constitutions in a manner different to the Council, stating that those Superiors who remain in charge more than six years without an indult have not the right to be present at the Chapter. Fr. Carrière will be asked to take advice on this and, if necessary, request validation.

Priests appointed to the missions.

5. The decision was taken to appoint the following to the missions:

Fr. Toubanc to Thursday Island; Fathers Pagès and Burke to New Guinea (Papua); Fr. Quoirier to the Gilbert Islands. At a forthcoming meeting the lay brothers who are to leave with the above will be named.

6. Three indulgences from Rome were read: one released from vows Brother Soucille; the second validates the credit loans on the Sacred Heart and Vichy properties; the third authorizes the General to give permission to local Superiors to sell or borrow to the limit of twenty-five thousand francs at any time.

Petite Oeuvre students admitted to the novitiate.

7. The following were proposed by Fr. Lanctin:

Jacques Roulier	Lucien Breton	Paul de Touly
Alphonse Clauser	Adrien Paille	Robert Grob
Ernest Casals	Félix Sergent	Augustin Meraud
Charles Trautwein	Antoine Deguillaume	Jean Galmot
Joseph Troillé	Eugène Michaud	Paul Fastré
Elie Werth	Jean Marie Quileuff	Charles Forest

The election of a second delegate to the General Chapter.

On June 4, about 5.30pm, the General brought together in the common room all the priests at the Sacred Heart and those of the parish who were available, the others having already voted, and they then proceeded to elect a delegate who would replace Fr. Comte who was unable to be present because his licentiate examinations coincided with the Chapter. Those present numbered 22. Three scrutineers were first elected and two secretaries. Fr. General having proposed to elect in the same manner as at the May 3 election, the great majority with hands raised agreed. The votes were taken and placed in an urn, to which were added the votes of all the houses except that of Sydney and those from the missions which hadn't yet arrived. Besides the 22 votes of those present, there were 52 from the other houses, comprising 6 from Paris, 4 from Marseilles, 8 from Chezal-Benoît, 4 from Glastonbury, 6 from Watertown, 3 from Mercer (USA), 5 from Barcelona, 12 from Rome, 3 from the Issoudun presbytery: 73 in total. There followed the counting and the following results:

Fr. Barral	20	FR. Matthieu	8	Fr. Védère	6
Fr. Hériault	5	Fr. Raynaud	4	Fr. Field	3
Fr. Genocchi	3	Fr. Godinoux	2	Fr. Benedetti	2
Fr. Lehane	2	Fr. Cochet	2	Fr. Bernard	2
Fr. Vandel	2	Fr. Guyot	1	Fr. Audony	1

1. The lay brother Jacques Robel, from the Salzburg house, accepted for perpetual vows.

Improvements to the Marseilles house.

2. An apparatus described by Fr. Miniot and devised by Mr. Ollive the architect, dealing with needed repairs to the Marseilles house, was approved of in relation to the disposal of refuse in the city's refuse system. It will cost 1,600 francs.

Permission sought by Brother J. Schmitz in matters pertaining to poverty.

3. The scholastic Jacques Schmitz at Contich, shortly to be ordained to the priesthood and then leaving for the New Britain mission, requested permission on a number of issues which are relevant to poverty. The Council forwarded his requests to the Provincial.

4. The lay brother Aloysius Pooyer at the Sacred Heart (Issoudun) requests permission to go home. As his reasons are not valid, the Council does not consider it appropriate to grant permission.

5. Fr. Donzé in Glastonbury complains in his own name and on behalf of his two confrères, Fathers Field and Martin, that the Superior, Fr. Hartzler, even when away for a number of days, leaves nobody the key to the mail box. The decision was taken to write to Fr. Hartzler and tell him to leave the key with Fr. Donzé if he has to be away more than 24 hours.

Fr. Neijens given permission to study Canon Law in Rome.

6. He asked to remain in Rome longer in order to take a degree in Canon Law. Fr. Carrière supported this request, going on to say that Fr. Neijens would be an advantageous replacement for Fr. Godinoux with the scholastics. The Council approved, deciding to send Fr. Godinoux to the Paris house.

The Chezal-Benoît sale: a decision to be made.

1. Attention was first focused on the Chezal-Benoît property, put up for sale by the episcopal administrator. Following mature reflection, the Council decided to make no effort to get the property by private agreement, leaving the decision to take its course. It is likely that the anonymous private property sector of the Indre will be set up before the day of the sale, in which case one will decide if the conditions are favourable for purchase by the Society.

A letter from Fr. Carrière.

2. A letter dated the 8th of the month was read as relevant to the present discussion, stating that Fr. Neijens, on the supposition that he was staying on in Rome, could not supervise the scholastics until the holidays were over and, consequently, Fr. Godinoux was needed there for the time being. Given these facts the Council returned to its earlier proposal to send Fr. Field to Paris replacing Fr. Audouy who needs to leave for Barcelona as soon as there is a replacement for him. Fr. Pourquier will leave for Spain on Monday.

The letter from Fr. Carrière referred to in the immediately above Council meeting.

Rome, June 8, 1897

Rev. Father Superior General,

1. Accompanying this letter is the remedying of the irregularity involving spoiled voting in the Northern Province, and other irregularities likely to have been occasioned by lack of awareness and in good faith in the election of delegates.

2. Until the 14th of the present month the Pope will not be having audiences with the Congregations' prefects. In consequence, before that date you will not be able to procure the indult setting up the private society (the minutes of the June 12 Council meeting above, number one). Once I come to know anything positive about this, I shall send you a telegram. A reply from the Cardinal Vicar will not be enough. It would be simply his approval as Cardinal Protector.

3. I am sending Fr. Barral official notification of his appointment as delegate to the General Chapter.

4. Fr. Maillard has asked me in your name to send Fr. Godinoux immediately to Paris. Before doing so I believe it my duty to let you know, Father, that it is impossible at the present time to do so.

I said, it is true, that next year I thought that I could do without Fr. Godinoux, but what are we going to do during the holidays? The scholastics who will remain on cannot this year go to Jesi on holiday, the house being full with priests, brothers, youngsters. We are thinking, then, of sending them to Anzio, but I would not want to put them in the charge, away from the house, of Fr. Neijens who, let it be said, would not have moral authority over those who up to now were his fellow students. Here we are present in the house and in a position to take note of everything. Besides, I am well aware that you do not need the approval of the Northern Province to leave Fr. Neijens here, but when the Provincial becomes aware of your decision he will, perhaps, find reasons forcing you to change your mind and send Fr. Neijens up there.

Then when I am in Issoudun I shall suggest to you that you put to the test the vocation of our Italian scholastic about whom I have more or less serious doubts. In this respect you might, since he is not a priest, send him to teach in Barcelona and, otherwise, take advantage (on his behalf) of Fr. Audouy's presence there. The situation is that with Fr. Barral and myself going to Issoudun, and three priests being needed in Rome to look after the house and deal with the necessary undertakings, we cannot do without Fr. Godinoux since, otherwise, the scholastics will not be able to go out during these three months...

5. Fr. Genocchi has raised a query, and not without reason. In the Provincial Chapters the Superiors have neither an active or a passive vote until they have presented a signed declaration, from all the priests in the house, attesting on oath that all the mass obligations have been met and those not yet met (but mentioned) will be seen to as soon as possible. This has been done in the Northern Province, but not yet in that of France.

I then come up with two questions:

- Are we compelled in France to have a Provincial Chapter?
- If not, how do we meet the requirement expressed above which is considered as being so serious?

I have enquired officially about the matter and the following is what has been given in answer to me: when the General is Provincial at the same time, the General Chapter takes the place of the Provincial Chapter. I objected that the General Chapter only takes place every 6 years, whereas the Provincial Chapter has to take place every three years, according to the Constitutions. The reply was that in such a case the Provincial Chapter follows the regulations for the General Chapter, taking place every 6 years. Consequently, all the Superiors of this Province must present to the General Chapter information about mass offerings which I referred to above, whereas the Northern Province's Superiors need not do so since they have already done so in their Provincial Chapter.

Consequently, you must notify as soon as possible all the Superiors of your (the French) Province to bring this declaration with them to the forthcoming General Chapter under pain of being deprived of the right to vote. This declaration must be signed by all the priests in the house. This will only be a problem for Fr. Tréand because of distance, unless a communication is telegraphed to Sydney.

6. Fathers Maillard and Genocchi also query if there is not a validation needed for those Superiors who have been in office more than 6 consecutive years. Again I made enquiries and the reply was in the negative since the words in the Constitutions "si fieri potest" are to be understood as they have been up to now. And they have been added because Rome is aware that recently-founded Congregations have not numerous personnel at their disposal. But this does not mean, once it can be reasonably given effect, that Superiors should not change after a second three-yearly term in office.

7. There also needs to be a validating process for Fr. Tréand because of the loan taken out without the Holy See's approval, but I cannot make this request (of the Holy See) without knowing the total extent of this loan.

8. More than ever I beg you to clarify Fr. Jouët's situation. I believe that in place of exchanging pointless correspondence with the said father it would be more simple and expeditious if you were to write confidentially to the Cardinal Protector, making known to him the drawbacks arising from this lack of clarification. It is a matter for him to make things formally known to you by getting a specific positive statement from Fr. Jouët.

Bless, Fr., your humble child in C.J.

Fr. Carrière, MSC.

PS: Brother Modeste requests permission to go on the missions. I asked him to write to you and he has done so. My advice would be that he waits until later since we need him, and a number of others, I believe, are putting themselves forward for the next departure.

The following, perhaps, is a formula which could be used in regard to responsibility for masses:

Ego infrascriptus, superior domus... testor et juro satisfactum fuisse pro maxima parte, sive per me sive per sacerdotes communitatis mihi commissae, oneribus tum perpetuis tum manualibus missarum, tempore mei regiminis, et illis quae remanent (the number) brevi tempore satisfieri posse.

In fidem...

Pro mea parte, suscribo et juro.

Superior's signature
Signature of each priest

If all the conditions of the masses have been met, change accordingly.

Fr. Hartzler re-elected Superior at Glastonbury.

1. Having ended three years in office and the Council having no one to replace him, he is confirmed in office so that the community becomes represented at the forthcoming General Chapter.

The decision is once more taken to buy Chezal-Benoît

2. Several members of the Council were agreed that the college was needed by us to develop our vital undertakings, such as the novitiate and the scholasticate, and the decision was, accordingly, taken to write to Monsignor Bardel, the Vicar Capitular of Bourges, in keeping with the wishes he himself expressed about the place, that we continue to make the same bid as last year to Cardinal Boyer of 54,000 francs for the whole property.

Mr. Canard accepted as a postulant.

3. A letter was read from Mr. Canard, a soldier in the 6th regiment presently garrisoned at Blanc, and before that at Issoudun for two years, requesting entry to the novitiate as an aspirant to the priesthood. Given the good recommendations about this young man, and his perseverance in vocation which he has kept intact during the three years he has spent in the camp, the decision was taken to accept him, though he will be very late commencing his studies. In any event he will not go to the novitiate straightaway, being employed for a year or two for surveillance, either at the Petite Oeuvre or the public school (Issoudun), giving classes in French and Latin.

Fr. Éspérance given permission to visit his family.

4. Fr. Éspérance in Watertown is granted permission to go home to deal with family matters if Fr. O'Mahony, his Superior, approves of this trip.

5. The lay brother J. Winkler in New Britain accepted for final vows.

A letter from Micronesia (Gilbert and Ellis Islands) about Fr. Bontemps.

6. Fr. Bontemps' letter was read in which he justified himself against statements made by Fr. Leray and other confrères.

The visit home of Charles Trautwein paid for by the mother house.

7. The Council at the request of Madame Trautwein, Fribourg, Switzerland, agreed to pay half the expenses of his family visit before he enters the novitiate.

Indult granted to Fr. Ramot in relation to the General Chapter elections.

8. An indult was read regularizing the issues which had arisen in the Northern Province due to votes becoming invalidated when three delegates of the Province were being elected to the forthcoming General Chapter. A copy will be sent to the Provincial (Ramot).

Permission granted to Brother de Jong.

9. Brother de John, a scholastic at Contich, requests through Fr. Ramot permission to make a will in his mother's favour giving her an item of furniture which came to him from his father. Permission granted.

To Monsignor Claude Bardel, Vicar Capitular, Bourges.

Issoudun, June 15, 1897

My Lord,

I am sorry that I haven't replied sooner to your proposal; I needed to reflect and consult on the matter. Having been made aware in the papers that the Chezal-Benoît property was about to be put up for sale, I took the liberty to get in touch with you about an offer of 54,000 francs (about 183,990 euros) which I had made to His Eminence the Cardinal Archbishop of Bourges as regards the college and its assets. If the government, then, would wish to favour me with this property at this agreed price, I am always available with the same offer. I take the liberty to say to you that this price does not include the cost of a building by a society of former teachers in the college with the legal approval of His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, then Archbishop of Bourges. Furthermore, you are aware that I myself am the lessee of all the property and that my lease does not end for two months and four months.

I would request that money should not be made available until the end of my lease. I would also want the government to undertake responsibility for the current credit debt (6,000 francs, I believe) (about 20,440 euros) or the registration fees since you must be aware of the poor condition of this building and the considerable amount of money spent on it for repairs.

Issoudun, June 16, 1897

Dear Fr. Hartzler,

I am pleased to inform you that the Council has reappointed you Superior. I hope that you will justify its expectations. Again see above, minutes of June 15 Council meeting.

I am forwarding 100 francs (about 341 euros) to meet the expenses of Fr. Field's journey. When in a month's time you come to the Chapter someone will be sent to replace you. From now until then you will have a little more work to get through... but you say, like St. Martin: non recuso laborem. I hope that Burnham will not suffer (this is a reference to the pastoral engagement involving Glastonbury; on this see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, passim). Be assured, Father, that the Council cannot always do what it would like. Your good co-workers, far from being discouraged by this set back, will increase their zeal and good will so that nothing suffers and I shall be especially grateful for this. Accept, Father, all my good wishes and be assured that I am very mindful of all your concerns. Oremus pro invicem.

Please be assured of my best wishes in C.J.

When do your youngsters begin their holidays? And will you bring some of them with you?

Council Meeting, June 19, 1897

All present.

Appointment of brothers for the missions.

1. New Guinea: Brothers Fernand Arnoult and Stanislaus van Horenbech from Chezal-Benoît, Arnold Zwarthoed and Aloys Pooyer from the Sacred Heart, Issoudun.

Micronesia (Gilbert and Ellis Islands): Brothers Eloi van Adrichem from Marseilles, Martin van der Zanden from Barcelona and Wilhelm Schmitz from Sydney.

The appointment is confirmed again of Fathers Quoirier and Auguste Boudin for Micronesia and Fathers Burke and Pagès for New Guinea. Besides, at the urgent request of Bishop Navarre, it was decided to persuade Fr. Derichemont to accept the Thursday Islands posting since His Lordship will disengage from it if there is no-one capable to be sent there.

Permission granted to Brother van Berkel on a poverty issue.

2. This scholastic is granted permission, the Provincial in agreement, to give, over three years until his brother who is at the Tilburg Petite Oeuvre reaches his majority, the revenue from his estate (about 200 francs) to the Tilburg house.

Brother Eloi given permission to go home; Mr. François sent to Marseilles; Brother Claude Lathuillière to Paris.

3. Brothers Eloi van Adrichem asks to go and see his mother, who has had a serious operation, before he leaves for the missions. Permission is granted, but he must wait until Fr. François Rondet from the Paris house can come to replace him and Brother Claude Lathuillière can go and replace Fr. François in Paris; this matter will have to be taken up immediately with Fr. Brunch.

Two youngsters for the Petite Oeuvre, Fardel and Vial, accepted for the lay brothers' novitiate.

4. Albert Fardel, aged 18, and Gustave Vial, aged 10 and a half, both Swiss and arriving from Saint-Pierre-des-Clages last September, and without the intellectual ability to continue their studies, request entry to the lay brothers' novitiate at Chezal-Benoît. Given the good recommendations of Fr. Lanctin they are accepted.

Newly-ordained priests may visit their families.

5. Those appointed to the missions may stay a month, the others only a fortnight.

The representation of the Congregation at the Paray-le-Monial Congress and the need to be prepared for this meeting.

6. It was decided that someone should represent the Congregation at the Paray-le-Monial Eucharistic Congress next September. It is necessary, then, to get ready for this occasion a report on the connection between the Sacred Heart, Our Lady and the Eucharist. Already Fr. Superior has written to Fathers Ramot and Meyer to prepare a paper on this issue, while Fathers Piperon and Morisseau are also asked to do the same, and Fathers Mathieu and Bouvier will also be asked. Finally someone will be appointed to put together as an ensemble the conclusions of each particular undertaking.

To the Superiors of the Congregation's different houses.

+ J M J

Issoudun, June 23, 1897

Dear Father,

We are in receipt of the following communication from Fr. Carrière: "At Provincial Chapters Superiors do not have active or passive votes until they have made a declaration signed on oath by all the priests of their houses, stating all mass obligations have been met, and that all those not yet accounted for (number to be given) will be fulfilled in a short time."

This has been carried out in the Northern Province but not in the French one. This, then, gives rise to a twofold question:

1. are we obliged in France to have a Provincial Chapter?
2. if not, how are we to meet the requirement expressed above, which is regarded as seriously binding?

I have made enquiries and the following is what has been said to me: when the General is at the same time Provincial, the General Chapter takes the place of the Provincial Chapter. I replied that the General Chapter does not take place except every six years, while the Provincial Chapter must take place every three years according to the Constitutions. The reply was that in this instance the Provincial Chapter followed the pattern of the General Chapter and would be held every six years. In consequence, all the Superiors of this Province must present to the General Chapter an attestation about the fulfilment of masses which I referred to above. "Accordingly, Your Reverence should contact as soon as possible the Superiors from the Issoudun Province to be in readiness to offer this statement of clarification about mass offerings to the General Chapter under pain of being deprived of their vote. This statement must be signed by all the priests in the house." Consequently, Father, you will be good enough to sign the enclosed document and have it signed also by all the priests in the community. If you wish you may write it out with the modifications considered requisite, but in that case the copy you draw up must be signed by you and all your priests.

I would ask you to let me know that you have received this communication.

With renewed good wishes in C.J.

To Cardinal Parocchi, Protector of the MSC Congregation.

This letter is not dated. It must, however, be before July 12, 1897, the date of the Cardinal Protector's response. See 18970612X, Council Meeting of June 12, 1897, above.

Illustrious Protector,

A large number of my confrères continually ask me if Fr. Jouët still remains a member of our Society. Since I have no official confirmation to the contrary, I am at a loss to reply.

Fr. Jouët became attached to our Congregation when he took perpetual vows on September 28, 1869 with the approval of Pius IX of blessed memory. In the official records the date of profession is given as September 15, 1865. Each year at the end of each retreat he freely renewed his vows.

In 1874, on the occasion of our institute's approval, Father Vandel, Father Jouët and myself were at the feet of Pius IX commemorating the birth of our little Congregation, which he greatly loved. At our request the Sovereign Pontiff was greatly pleased, in a document signed in his own hand, to accept the title of founder and first Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. It was at that moment that we asked him to renew, as we clasped his hands, our perpetual religious vows, which he accepted and confirmed most graciously. There cannot be any doubt whatsoever about the validity, genuineness, of Fr. Jouët's vows.

In 1893 at a Chapter which wasn't completed, Fr. Jouët was not confirmed in his role as Procurator and, thereafter, this dear confrère accepted no further appointment. It was at this time that he informed me that he had placed himself at Your Eminence's disposal to build a church in the Prati quarter (Rome) in order to set up a new parish. I regrettably approved his decision for the greater good, but intimating to him that our Society would take no responsibility for this undertaking. He wanted freedom of action in dependence only on the Supreme Pontiff and Your Eminence, while remaining part of our Congregation, and he adds that it is on its behalf that he works, overseeing himself the direction of this undertaking with the authorization of the Holy See.

Matters being so arranged, we provided him with 2,400 francs each year (about 8,177 euros) in appreciation of his services and our regard for him. We have always continued up to this moment to put this amount at his disposal.

It has been said to us from different quarters, even from Rome itself, that Fr. Jouët no longer sees himself as a member of our Society and has requested, and been granted, release from his vows, and this is so much a fact, we are informed, that he now signs himself: Victor Jouët, apostolic missionary of the Sacred Heart. Very much taken aback by these initiatives, I have written on several occasions to Fr. Jouët in order to get at the truth and he has always avoided answering me on this issue. Since very soon the time for our Chapter comes upon us, its participants will, quite obviously, put questions to me! I would respectfully ask Your Eminence to be kind enough to inform me on this matter. I very much like Fr. Jouët who, right from the beginning, has been one of our most committed collaborators and has done so much for our Congregation, as well as always demonstrating his great commitment to it. I shall, therefore, be very upset if he no longer belongs to it (the Congregation). His departure from us would have a disastrous impact on the public and bring on himself quite considerable harm and ill-feeling.

It occurs to me that the new charge for which he is made responsible could be very well accommodated with his title of religious of the Sacred Heart. It would be comparable to the position of our Apostolic Vicars who are exempt from the jurisdiction of the Superior General in keeping with the regulations laid down by the Holy See. If he separated himself from the Congregation he would be depriving himself of a support which could be helpful to him. Who can foresee the future? If Fr. Jouët has really withdrawn from us, or if he no longer absolutely wishes to be a member of our Society, we shall sadly be obliged to inform our members and likewise so inform people who ask us about him.

I beg Your Eminence's pardon for this lengthy letter. I respectfully kiss your sacred purple, going on my knees to request your blessing and offer my humble regards in C.J.

Permission granted to Fr. Merg concerning the family estate.

1. Fr. Merg in Sydney makes a request to leave his brothers and sisters those assets which would be made available to him from his parents. The Council was of the view that it would be wiser for Fr. Merg to keep control of his assets and give the interest to his family. It is with this understanding that his request will be met.

The Provincial's (Northern Province) report on his canonical visit.

2. A letter from Fr. Ramot was read following his visit to the Salzburg community and the house under construction in Hilstrup. This report, while very succinct, is incomplete and, consequently, does not call for serious observations.

Brother Alphonse given permission to visit his family.

3. Brother Alphonse Vriend, cook at the Sacred Heart, requests permission to spend 15 days at home. As he is quite clearly exhausted his request is granted.

Brother Tissier also given permission.

4. The scholastic Henri Tissier was also granted permission to spend 15 days at home before starting military service.

Brother Philippe in Watertown makes a request to study in Europe.

5. Brother Jean Philippe, a scholastic at the Watertown house, asks to do his scholastic studies in Europe. This request will be discussed with Fr. O'Mahony when he will be here for the Chapter.

The scholastic priests in Rome given permission to visit their families.

6. The Rome priest scholastics who have asked to go home, also Fr. Power who up to now has not made this request, must remain in Rome until the Chapter is over.

The following letter is signed by Piperon and Chevalier. In the original the latter's name is scratched out. Issoudun is blotted out and replaced with Chezal-Benoît. Two notes by Chevalier are at the beginning and end of the original document in the Rome archives.

-Benoît, July 5, 1897

Dear Sir,

Following a decision taken by His Excellency the Minister for Religions, you will be aware that the former Benedictine monastery of Chezal-Benoît (Cher), part of the Bourges ecclesiastical property, is due to be sold by auction on the 18th of this month. While reading the booklet advertising it I was greatly astonished, likewise my associates, that there was no mention of a row of buildings which we had built at our expense with the approval of Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne of Bourges, who was administrator of the property and legally acknowledged the sum of forty-seven thousand francs spent in the construction, doing so with a supportive memorandum. He stated therein that if in the future we were to leave Chezal-Benoît for one reason or another, the Archbishop should reimburse us for this amount over a period of 20 years, taking into consideration on our account the legal interest.

When in 1869 the Chezal-Benoît college lacked pupils, the Archbishop asked us to add to their number those we had in Issoudun, but since the building wasn't large enough we were obliged when meeting His Grace's wishes to build at our expense the building which is at issue in what is discussed above.

We are drawn then, Sir, to appeal to your sense of justice, as well as your impartial qualities, to request that you have it inserted in the list of charges that the new building, which belongs to us, is not part of the episcopal property and cannot be included in the sale due to take place on the 18th of this month. It is with this expectation, Sir, that we also convey to you our respectful good wishes.

Dear Fr. Michel,

In order to write to you it is necessary to have your address, but you didn't leave it with anyone. It seems to me that it is an obligation on your part to let us know where you are. The General Council, aware that Issoudun needed a curate, thought of you. It requested you to return to your post and you refused to do so. Again you had a letter asking you to meet the wishes of your Superiors in virtue of your vow of obedience, making you aware of the serious consequences arising from your insubordination, to which you replied stating that you wanted to leave the Congregation.

You will accept, my dear child, that your insubordination is not becoming for a religious who freely undertook perpetual vows and renewed them each year. You will appreciate that if you persevere in your resolve, you are placing yourself in a state of revolt against your Society and it will reject you from its midst, no longer obliged to concern itself with you. Is this the thanks which it must expect from you after gratuitously educating you since your early years? Do not try to say to us that you have no vocation since you would have stayed with us if you had been left in Paris or at... (the ink has completely disappeared; the word is illegible) ...or at Montargis.

Think again, my friend, since it is in your interest that I speak to you, as I foresee bitter disappointments ahead of you. I give you until next Sunday, and if by then you continue to absent yourself from the Issoudun presbytery and do not take part in the second retreat which Fr. Lanctin will preach at Chezal-Benoît, you will face the consequences of your insubordination: I speak to you in the name of obedience. What have you to fear in coming to Issoudun? You will find there a presbytery of kind and excellent confrères and in myself a father who loves you. I am forwarding 50 francs to you for 25 masses which you will offer for my intentions.

L 18970715

July 15, 1897

Dear Mr. Loyauté,

To avoid your being in receipt of an assignment set down for you by the architect, you had in all seriousness promised that by today, the 15th of the month, you would have all the work undertaken at the Sacred Heart completely finished. However, your carpenter has not yet finished work; when will it be? Your first floor is a fraction out of joint and the ground floor is yet to be done. Your workmen have been absent from the site for the whole of the last month. You are holding up those working on the roof, and the plasterers etc. You will be responsible for the fact that this work will not be finished by the end of August, which is absolutely imperative if we are not to undergo considerable losses: patience has its limits.

Consequently, I am forewarning you that I intend to act firmly and decisively. You have abused our good will. If you cannot meet your commitments, the work should not have been undertaken. Being laid up is not a satisfactory excuse. You must add to the number of your workmen. I am giving you notice that if your work is not begun and pursued vigorously straightaway, you will get a solicitor's letter on Monday.

Your most humble servant,

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Article 2473To the 1897 Chapter members.*

D 18970719

1-19 July, 1897
Conference at 3pm

Dear Fathers,

The three days of recollection, to which we are held by our Constitutions, before the Chapter begins, are aimed at bringing down on us the support and enlightenment of the Holy Spirit in order to provide our decisions with an impartial quality, quite supernatural indeed. Before all else we must aim at the glory of God, the general and particular interests of our Society, as well as whatever can help us to advance in virtue and lead us to that perfection which is a prerequisite of our sublime vocation. Having at the foot of the tabernacle engaged with the divine will, we say to ourselves: "If Jesus Christ was in my place, what would He do?" We follow on, then, from his inspiration: sentite in vobis quod est in Christo Jesu.

We have principally come together for two important undertakings: the appointment of personnel who must support the Superior General in leading the Congregation, and the final drawing-up of our basic Rules, called the Directory. Each of us appreciates the specific importance associated with these two major issues.

I

Aware that God makes us accountable for our voting, we understood all too well that we are bound by strict obligation to elect those men who are blessed with the qualities called for by the Constitutions. We must, therefore, lay aside our natural inclinations and certain supportive feelings which could take us off course, or any sympathetic support which might arise from a less than wholesome source, such as for example recognition of services rendered, etc. We need to divest ourselves of our prejudices, our personal predilections, antipathies, in order to choose individuals who have the ability to be helpful to the Society through their piety, judgment, good will, maturity, learning, zeal and their commitment to religious discipline.

II

The second undertaking which will engage us is that of the final edition of our common Rules. A Directory is, as you know, a succinct and basic presentation of the Constitutions. We need, then, to make it clear, precise, substantial, leaving nothing, insofar as it is possible, to arbitrariness, something which would open the way to abuses, laxity and indiscipline. Last year you appointed a committee of 5 members to draw up this document, and they gave themselves over to it as well as they could, sending you all a copy of their work, which you will have examined and studied carefully. If, however, some Chapter members have something to say or issues to be reassessed, they should have them typed in Latin with as many copies signed by them as there are Chapter members. As was said in the circular which was sent to you on May 8 last, you will be good enough to send me these pages before the meeting so that in turn I can present them, and the Chapter will then assess fully independently the validity of the observations and whatever texts it would want to substitute in place of those of the commission. In this way we shall gain time and our discussions will become more worthwhile. We shall not be trying to prolong discussion by subtle arguments or attempting to win out against all and sundry.

We must not lose sight of this assembly as an event of major importance. We do not work in the perspective of ourselves alone, but also for the future. In creating this Directory we must leave aside ourselves, avoid being at the mercy of our personal likes and dislikes, being intent only on the well being of our dear Society and those who are part of it. The monument we raise up today will pass on to posterity, such-wise that the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart who come after us will respect it and look upon it as a rampart which shields them from the onslaughts of the enemies of our salvation, and these last are many!

Our humble Society is a mystical city built like Jerusalem on Mount Sion, that is to say on the adorable Heart of the Saviour. Urbs fortitudinis nostrae Sion Salvator.

Our Constitutions are the enclosing fence, the sacred, inviolable wall that nothing can shake, but this wall which must remain intact and upright needs itself to be protected by an outer wall which defends it and keeps it intact from any breaches being made in it: Ponetur in ea murus et ante murale: this outer wall is the Directory. If, then, we want our Congregation to be resistant against attacks from hell, and these attacks will be all the more fierce and numerous as they present themselves in the future ... (some words are missing here) If we wish, I say, the Society to pass without ever collapsing through the most violent of persecutions, remaining ever upright and more and more thriving, let us provide for it the support of strong Rules, wise and serious enough to curb the forces of nature and avoid the hazardous threats of sensuality and independence. Let us never forsake this principle that a truly religious life is a life of sacrifice and immolation in which nature must be crucified together with all its covetousness. Our Directory must reflect all these important truths.

The more our life is serious and in contrast with that of the secular world, the more shall we be distanced from the spirit of the world by unceasingly giving ourselves to that perfection which is the essence of the state of holiness we have undertaken. The more we imitate Christ in our lives the greater the blessings of Heaven on us and the prosperity of our Society. Steadfast vocations, privileged vocations, will accrue in keeping with our holiness, and our zeal in keeping discipline. The Holy Spirit, who breathes where he will, will thrust choice souls towards our dear well-loved Society, saying to us like the prophet Isaiah to the city custodians: Aperite portas et ingrediatur gens justa, custodiens veritatem. Vetus error abiit; servabis pacem; pacem, quia in te speravimus (Is. 26. 1). (Open the gates! Let the upright nation come in, she the faithful one whose mind is steadfast, who keeps the peace, because she trusts in you. Jerusalem Bible.)

Yes, divine Heart of Jesus, you will keep this peace in us because we have hope in you, servabis pacem, pacem quia in te speravimus. Our work, Fathers, is not man's work but God's work. It is He who set it going and oversaw it. You are aware of its beginnings, the crises which it had to meet, the problems it had to face, and the divine protection made over to it. Our Congregation, willed by heaven, has a special mission, that of spreading everywhere devotion to the Sacred Heart: Ametur ubique terrarum Cor Jesu Sacratissimum, and that to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which is its corollary and completion. With this twofold thrust we can awaken the world if we co-operate with the plans of divine Providence. Our Lord, two centuries ago, presented His adorable Heart to modern society to withdraw it from the abyss of perdition. For this Heart, source of all blessings, there needs to be missionaries to make Him known and loved and, thereby, spreading His cult with all the treasures of grace enshrined therein.

Rome, despite our unworthiness, has officially confided this mission to us. We can be, if we so wish, the apostles of these latter times, announced by the Blessed (now Saint) Gregory of Montfort, with zeal and sanctity which nothing can resist. In order to bring this about, dearly loved Fathers, let us prepare the way for those who come after us by setting out laws expressive of the love, the commitment and the self-offering of the Heart of Jesus.

This first talk of the Chapter so ends.

Fr. Suchet refused permission to visit his aunt in the Drôme.

1. Fr. Suchet in Barcelona requested that he visit for three weeks his aunt at Poyels, Drôme. As he provides no good reason for this trip, the Council does not consider it appropriate to grant his request.

Brother Philippe at Watertown given permission to study in Europe.

2. His request, supported by the approval of Fr. O'Mahony, is granted.

Both Dupuy and Hahn accepted for the novitiate.

To the 1897 Chapter members.

D 18970721

July 19, 1897
Day 3 of meeting

Dear Fathers,

In our preceding meetings we ratified two issues: the need for a Directory drawn up keeping the Lord in mind and, impartially, its aim of facilitating the putting into practice of the Constitutions and making ourselves, and those who come after us, saintly religious. But the Directory, we remarked, if it is to have an impact, must be faithfully carried out. Why?

Given the state of our fallen and morally weakened nature, we need a sure guide to map out the way for us and to point out its dangers, a faithful safeguard which concernedly watches over us and protects us. Accordingly, this Directory provides us with all these supports and many others of which we are aware. I spoke as well to you of the dangers arising from violating the Rule both for those who do so and for the community of which they are a part. Finally, I ended the conference by noting the excuses put forward for exemption from the regulations which cause annoyance and from which one wants to be freed. But whose responsibility is it to maintain discipline, to forestall abuses and get rid of those which may be present? Principally, the Superiors.

I

What do the Constitutions say about this? "For the most part the faithful following of the rules depends on the wise guidance of the Superiors; it is imperative, then, that they see to this concernedly." (N. 143; VI). In the first place you are aware, like myself, that the Superior himself gives good example by his own regularity: exempla trahunt. If the subjects take notice of him as being the first in attendance at all the exercises and note in him a real love of discipline, it is difficult not to see his example having a salutary impression, engaging them to follow his example.

I am well aware that in almost all houses there are difficult characters, naturally rebellious and independent, liking their ease, and in whom the religious spirit is so weak that they no longer know how to obey. I pity the poor Superior; nevertheless his procedures are all mapped out for him. He must take aside the wayward confrère, draw his attention to his laxity, the bad example he gives, and the problems to which he gives rise in the house. If this first warning has no effect, a second one will be given in the presence of the members of his (the Superior's) Council and if after that he notices no improvement, he will bring the matter to the attention of superior authority which will in its wisdom give advice.

According to specific regulations always availed of in the Society, and which I have to say have never been abolished, local Superiors must on a number of occasions during the year make a detailed report about each of their religious, as regards their character, regularity, virtues, etc. If there was adherence to this requirement, the Superior's authority would be well informed about the quality of his subjects, and less disadvantaged in giving each one the appointment which best suited him.

I invite, therefore, our dear and respected Superiors to read frequently these particular regulations and see to it that the priests, preachers, confessors, bursars, teachers, lay brothers take note at least every three months of what is relevant to them. If you do not have these particular regulations to hand any more, it would be easy to get them for you. I invite the Chapter, if it considers it opportune, to state that these regulations are always binding while awaiting particular directories, since otherwise we would be at the mercy of arbitrariness and confusion.

II

There is one aspect of our regulations which betrays a weakness and to which I want to draw your attention: that which sets down family relationships.

In becoming religious we have left father, mother, brother, sister to follow Our Lord, renouncing all and leaving to them responsibility for burying their dead: sequere me et dimitte mortuos sepelire mortuos suos. Nevertheless, by way of accommodating human weakness, a paragraph in the 'journey' section states: "Nobody will visit his family unless it is greatly necessary to do so or without getting permission. This restriction, being an absolute requirement, has become, for many, unsatisfactory. What is their reaction? They get their parents to write to them that the mother or father is very ill and wants to see them before they die, or that there are wills to be made, documents to be signed and, consequently, their presence at home is obligatory. On another occasion it may well be the parish priest who writes at the parents' instigation, or indeed that of the individual himself, and wants to have such and such of our confrères to give a sermon or retreat, or I know not what else. If the Superior, in this way hoodwinked, believes that he should give way to reiterated requests, the religious called home in this way will leave with as much urgency as delight. His return may, I suppose, be laid down for 8 or 15 days, but he will not be slow in writing that the illness is prolonged, that matters to be seen to are drawn out and, accordingly, the prolonging of his visit is necessary; this is everything he wants to happen. He eventually returns following several letters recalling him, but in what state of mind? Thoughts of his family continuously take over and he is bored to the point of being disillusioned with the religious life. Several have in this way lost their vocations or are on the way to do so. Since the new Directory deals with this matter, I would ask the Chapter members to consider this issue seriously and express themselves with severity on this disciplinary issue, the consequences of which are often disastrous.

III

I note also, Fathers, that there is a tendency, specially among our young religious, to request trips during the holidays on one pretext or another. It would be a dangerous procedure to pay attention always to these requests. Discipline and religious life would greatly suffer. If exceptional circumstances are encountered or individuals are really exhausted and need rest, then the local Superior should refer the matter to the Provincial and take his advice.

IV

I end by requesting those of us who are, or will be, involved in any administration to be particularly discreet in sharing confidences, since indiscretions in these circumstances bring with them the most serious consequences. Subjects in whom one thinks one can confide rarely keep a secret, with the result that the administration is often hindered in carrying out measures which it would like to undertake. As a result there follows inopportune observations, criticism, blame laid at the door of Superiors, and a bad atmosphere (attitude) begins to prevail little by little in the community. One wants to know everything and there's recourse to a thousand and one ways in order to find out what's going on and being decided.

I would ask, therefore, our good Superiors, and those who are part of their deliberations, to be as prudent and as discreet as possible in all circumstances. For the rest, at meetings of this nature, natural secrecy is obligatory, and each one should be bound to it until the moment decisions taken in committee are promulgated by the Superior whether local, provincial or general.

I sum up. Tomorrow we begin the Chapter, the first procedure of which will be to appoint the Assistants and Procurator General. Acting under divine impetus and concerned with promoting the general and particular well-being of our dearly loved Society, we elect only men with the qualities required by our Constitutions who can provide for it those services it expects in the first instance from their piety (integrity) since this is helpful for all: Pietas ad omnia utilis est, their judgment, a quality so much needed for administration, their intellectual acumen to help fully clarify issues, their commitment towards spreading the reign of the Sacred Heart and the Congregation's works, their optimistic attitude and sensitive concern for regularity and religious discipline.

Then we shall have to engage ourselves with the definitive edition of our common Directory, an undertaking of the utmost importance. We shall bring to it as well all the serious concern it calls for; in this way we shall be helping to place on a solid and lasting basis our Congregation, founded by, and under the inspiration of, God Himself, made fruitful by the divine Heart of Jesus, appealed to by her whom we call Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and under the protection of wonderful St. Joseph, the model and patron of the Sacred Heart's friends.

Amen.

Council Meeting, July 22, 1897

New Assistants.

1. The General Chapter at its meeting on the morning of July 22 elected the General Assistants and Procurator General. The Superior General met the new Assistants who were present that evening, namely Fr. Ramot, First Assistant, and Fathers Lanctin and Meyer, Father Piperon being absent.

The secretary to the Bishop of Novara accepted for the novitiate.

2. Fr. Carrière, re-elected Procurator, was present at the beginning of the meeting, putting forward a young Italian priest for entry to the novitiate, presently secretary to the Bishop of Novara. The Council approved.

A change of General Secretary postponed.

3. The General Secretary asked the Superior General to replace him with one of the Assistants, but the Council was of the view that before agreeing to such a request one must await changes of personnel.

Consideration given to the requirements of the French Province as regards personnel.

4. Fr. General explained the situation with respect to personnel in each of the French Province's houses, and the need to reorganize, requesting the Council Fathers to give thought to decisions which might be taken in this regard.

Council Meetings, July 26, 27;
August 5,6,7,10,11,12, 1897
Meetings of July 26, 27 at the Sacred Heart

All in attendance.

The offer of a country house for the Paris priests not accepted.

1. Fr. Brunet made it known that a rich Parisian lady had offered the Rue de Calais community her country residence where she would set up a chapel. The rooms for the priests would be in a part of the house separate from her own, but the courtyard and garden would be in common. The Council, having given consideration to the serious disadvantages likely to arise from this arrangement, did not think that it could accept this lady's offer while acknowledging the good-will shown in this way to the Paris community. If the Rue de Calais Fathers need a country residence, which seems not unlikely, Fr. Brunet is authorized to rent a house where the community can be on its own.

Fr. Maillard authorized to sell bonds worth 50,000 francs.

2. The Council gave permission to Fr. Maillard to sell, for 50,000 francs, bonds in the financial safe of the mother house, and make available this amount to the Indre Insurance Society to meet the expenses of purchasing the Paris house, the sale of which is due to be concluded in a few days.

3. There followed a discussion about the organization of the Northern Province's houses, but no positive decision was reached.

Holidays approved for Fr. Courbon and the lay brothers who are due to leave for the missions.

4. Fr. Courbon, newly ordained, was granted 15 days' holidays at home and 15 days also for the lay brothers who are shortly leaving for the missions.

August 5 Meeting at Cléry

All present.

A new Province created in Germany comprising the Hilltrup and Salzburg houses.

The Northern Province reduced to two houses, Antwerp, Tilburg.

The organization of the Northern houses was again considered. Following the presentation of Fr. Linckens, supported by Fr. Carrière (in Rome), it would appear certain that the Hilltrup house should be looked upon as constituting a Province, not alone in the view of the Prussian state but also as the Propaganda Congregation sees it, and since it is Fr. Linckens who is named in the Propaganda rescript, it follows that he is effectively Provincial.

Given these facts it seems appropriate to attach the Salzburg house to the German Province since its personnel and language are also German. In these circumstances Antwerp and Tilburg would alone remain in the Province up to now called 'The Northern Province', but since in keeping with the canonical regulations there needs to be three houses in order to constitute a province, an indult will be requested from Rome to make these two houses in Belgium and Holland form one Province which would keep the name, Northern Province. Hiltrup and Salzburg would form the German Province, Fr. Linckens becoming Provincial of the latter and Fr. Offermans of the Northern Province. Fr. General will consult with the latter two and, in keeping with their observations, definite arrangements will be reached about this matter, with Superiors appointed for each house in these two Provinces as well as Provincial Councillors.

Two candidates accepted for the Watertown novitiate.

2. Fr. Ramot put forward, at the instigation of Fr. O'Mahony, two postulants for the Watertown novitiate. One, Jean Krebs, aged 35, has been in the Watertown house for three years and been satisfactory in every respect. He previously took the habit of the Brothers of the Christian Schools, but a dispensation will be sought from Rome. The young Albert Zimmermann, aged 18, was also accepted; he had studied at the Watertown Petite Oeuvre.

Mr. Tuer accepted as a postulant.

This Englishman came from Glastonbury and asked to enter the Chezal-Benoît novitiate. He is accepted as a postulant; later his acceptance as a novice will be considered if appropriate.

The request by Fr. Comte to visit his family turned down.

3. He requested a three-week holiday with his family, but the Council did not think there were sufficient reasons to grant his request. He will spend his holidays either at Issoudun or Chezal-Benoît preparing himself for the November examinations, which he failed in July.

August 6 Meeting at the Sacred Heart

All present.

Request for an indult on behalf of the 2 Provinces, that of the North and Germany.

What was agreed yesterday about the two provinces of Germany and the North was confirmed. Accordingly, an indult will be requested from the Holy See that the Northern Province remain as it is at present and with its name, comprising the two houses of Antwerp and Tilburg.

Fr. Offermans appointed Northern Provincial; Fr. Linckens, German Provincial.

The first-named will be Provincial once the indult arrives. While waiting he is Superior of the Tilburg house and administrator of the Province with full Provincial powers. Fr. Linckens is German Provincial in accordance with the Propaganda decree, taking over the office on September 1 next, the day of the canonical setting up of the Hilltrup house of which he will at the same time be Superior. Meanwhile, he has all the powers a Provincial needs for the guidance of his Province. An indult will be requested from Rome to associate the Salzburg house with the German Province.

August 7 Meeting at the Presbytery.

All present.

Fr. Alain given permission to go to Lourdes.

1. Fr. Alain de Boismenu is given permission to go to Lourdes on pilgrimage, the cost of which is being met by his family.

Permission refused to Fr. Ilge to re-enter the Congregation.

2. Fr. Ilge asked to return to the Congregation; the Council did not think it opportune to re-admit him.

Fr. Casas refused lay brothers.

3. Fr. Casas requested 3 lay brothers for Barcelona, but due to shortage of subjects he had to be refused.

Brother Tatcher given permission to spend 8 days at home.

4. He will be returning with Fr. Casas to Spain and he is allowed 8 days with his family.

A loan for Fr. Tréand from the Diepen Bank, Tilburg.

5. Fr. Tréand, at the beginning of 1896, asked through Fr. Ramot for a loan of one hundred thousand francs through a mortgage of the Antwerp house. At its June 1, 1896, meeting the Council refused to have the Antwerp house mortgaged, but it allowed a borrowing if it could be done without mortgaging. Fr. Tréand in the light of this decision borrowed, on May 1, 1897, 60,000 Dutch florins or about 125,000 francs, from the Diepen Bank, Tilburg, without any other guarantee than permission to meet every 500 florins with 120 shares, all carrying the signatures of Fr. General and Fr. Tréand. The Council, however, was of the view that Fr. Tréand, before committing himself to Fr. General's signature, should have asked for his explicit permission, and is now hesitant to grant the requested signature. Nevertheless, looked at in another way, the General's signature does not imply or endorse responsibility for the loan since it entails no more than moral support. Likewise, taking into consideration the commitment shown by Fr. Tréand in advancing the prospects of the Sydney house, the Council approved of the requested signature, on the condition formally laid down that this arrangement and its acceptance in no way involves anything else in the future, that what is being granted at the present moment does not constitute a precedent on which specific Superiors could draw in order to request a like favour.

August 10 Meeting at the Presbytery

All present.

Fr. Genocchi appointed Superior of the Rome house.

1. This was definitively decided.

Fr. Hartzler given permission to grow a beard.

2. He hopes that in so doing he will be relieved of what makes him feel so tired over a long period of time. This reason, seeming serious in the Council's view, met with its approval.

Fr. Boudin's request to go to Paris not granted.

3. Fr. Auguste Boudin asked to go to Paris on a holiday rather than for any other reason. The Council did not see its way to give permission.

Issues in relation to poverty as regards those leaving for the missions.

The following principles were laid down: they must make available to the missions' office all the money given to them, even on a personal basis, for the missions, and it is the priest in charge of the missions who will make available to them what is needed on departure. If they have money which is proper to themselves they cannot exercise autonomy over it without Fr. General's permission.

The claim of the Archbishop of Bourges as regards the purchase of Chezal-Benoît.

4. Fr. General reported on the interview he had the previous day with Archbishop Servonnet, newly in charge at Bourges.

As regards the purchase of Chezal-Benoît, His Grace seemed to demand that the terms of the contract with Monsignor Bardel, acting in the name of Cardinal Boyer in May 1896, should be met and, consequently, the differential between the amount agreed on last July, the 21st, and that agreed to by the Cardinal last year, that is to say 50,100, should be met in favour of the Archbishop. The Council will reflect on this and return to it before it replies to the Archbishop. Meanwhile, awaiting his verdict, nothing conscientiously is due, the Chezal-Benoît property having been largely paid for to the very last penny. Accordingly, if something more is given to His Grace it will arise only through regard for and commitment to the diocese which is short of money.

Salzburg novices accepted for first profession.

5. These are lay brother novices who finish their novitiate year on September 8. Brothers Klein, Ritter, Zeus, Pielmeyer, Zybalski, Müller François, Knaps, Meyer Otto, Lacoff, Pohs, Kunzmann, Peekel, Lambrichts, Eysermans, De Poorter, van Keukelom, van Riel, Van de Wouwer, Breckelmans, Brunooghe, Van Eyl, Engelen. Fr. L. Hartzler, Novice Master, is given permission to prolong the novitiate for some, in particular the three last-named if he considers it opportune to test further their vocation. The following are accepted for vows on the first of November at the end of their novitiate, the same process as immediately above holding for the Novice Master: Brothers Abel, Sobel, Cappers and De Wildt.

Meetings 11,12,13, August at the Presbytery.

All present.

Fr. Meyer is appointed General Secretary in place of Fr. Maillard who replaces Fr. Batard as General Bursar.

2. Sacred Heart.

3. Office: Fr. Bazot, Director.

4. -Benoît.

It has now become a canonical house.

Superior: Fr. Ramot, with Fathers Piperon and Cochet as Councillors; Fr. Piperon Bursar; Fr. Cochet Head of the school.

Scholasticate: the theology students will be sent to Rome and the scholasticate will only comprise philosophy students.

Director: Fr. Ramot; Lecturers Fathers Cochet, Henri, Jourdon and Brother Pouvreau.

Novitiate: Fr. Piperon Novice Master; Fr. T. [sic] will carry out the functions of socius.

5. Paris.

Superior: Fr. Brunet with Fathers Godinoux and Michel as councillors. Other priests in the house: Lavialle, F. Hartzler, Laliaux, Sergeant.

6. Marseilles.

Fr. Miniot Superior; Fathers Deidier and Toubanc as Councillors; Fr. Pacaud; one waits to send other confrères. (See below, September 11.)

7. Glastonbury.

Superior: Fr. Field; Councillors Fathers Martin and Power. Also Fathers Donzé and O'Mahoney.

8. Rome.

Superior Fr. Genocchi, also Novice Master; Councillors: Fathers Védère and Nicolò; also Fr. Di Luzio. Fr. Genocchi in charge of the scholasticate; Fr. Nicolo Bursar.

9. Jesi.

A canonical house will be set up if definitive arrangements can be made with the Count and Countess.

10. Sydney.

Fr. Tréand will have Fr. Gsell made available to him as Bursar of the house and Mission Procurator in place of Fr. Merg, who will be recalled or sent to the Marshall Islands. Fr. Tréand in addition will have with him Fr. Buckley, Fr. Gsell and the lay brother Fernand Arnoult.

11. Missions.

The Council then proceeded to take into consideration the needs of the New Guinea mission where people are beginning, in the light of some letters, to be discouraged. It was decided to send Fr. Alain de Boismenu there and he will remain on Thursday Island while learning to speak English satisfactorily, and then become Superior of this mission when Bishop Navarre ends his three years in office (as Superior).

Ten thousand francs given to the Archbishop of Bourges in addition to the 50,000 francs paid for the purchase of Chezal-Benoît. All these arrangements having been agreed, a proposed letter to be sent to His Grace Archbishop Servonnet in relation to Chezal-Benoît was put before the meeting. It was made clear first of all that the agreement reached with Archbishop Boyer ended with the Cardinal's death and, consequently, from the legal point of view or that of conscience, we are no longer under an obligation to give more than the 50,100 francs agreed on. Besides, accepting that the agreement remains valid, we are not obliged to make over other than the difference in addition to what we are now providing, that is to say 56,000 francs topped up by a further 6,100 francs, in total almost 62,000 francs. However, out of deference to the Archbishop and commitment to the diocese, we are happy to give His Grace 10,000 francs as a gift to mark this happy occasion, and a letter marking this decision will be sent to the Archbishop.

There followed the reading of a letter from Fr. Laliaux to Fr. General in which he asks to leave the Society and be released from his vows. He will be asked to make his own application and, if the reasons he will submit are canonical, the General will endorse his request.

Dear Fathers,

Before we leave, I want to thank the (General) Assistants who have now been replaced. I cannot but thank them for their devotedness and love for the Congregation, their dedication to the maintenance of discipline. They have demonstrated great wisdom in difficult issues, as well as remarkable foresight. Their support and counsel throughout the issues we have been through were of great comfort to us. I am drawn to state this publicly, making them aware of my utmost appreciation.

Reverendo Patri Superiori domus ...

Reverende Pater,

Quum Superioribus localibus non minima pars in regimine nostrae Societatis commissa sit, et ab eis maximopere pendeat fidelis regularum observantia, ideoque verus Istituti profectus, nihil mirum quominus generale Capitulum nuper coadunatum plura peculiariter statuerit, quae illos in suo munere adimplendo efficaciter adjuvare, eorumque auctoritatem communire queat.

Haec tibi, Reverende pater, fideliter transmittimus statuta, ut fiant norma regiminis fructusque tui ministerii apud Societatis membra tibi commissa augeant.

1. Pensiones perpetuae fundatae pro sustentandis alumniis scholarum apostolicarum ad eas fundationes pertinent, quae juxta n° 174 Constitutionum accipi nequeunt absque licentia Praepositi Generalis.
2. Prohibetur ne Benefactoribus et Benefactricibus Scholarum Apostolicarum deinceps addicantur, tanquam pupilli, aliqui ex alumniis in individuo; quia inde fluunt gravia incommoda.
3. Soli Provinciali licet acceptare pro tota Provincia conciones sacras aliaque hujus generis ministeria exercenda, mittendosque destinare, nisi tamen agatur de concione aliqua in vicinis habenda locis; tunc enim sufficeret licentia Superioris localis. Nimis vero quum distent nunc ab invicem domus nostrae, Superiores locales facultatibus necessariis se communire ne negligant.
4. Scholarum apostolicarum Rectores instituantur a Superiore locali; at ejus electio ratihabeatur a Provinciali.
5. Suum concilium bis in mense convocet Superior localis, qui unum ex consiliariis eliget in Secretarium. Hic vero gesta referat cavendo maxime a maledicentia, nec uniuscujusque referat sententias. Nil nisi a Superiore probatum inscribatur Codici, qui novus adhibeatur ubicumque novus eligitur consiliarius penes solum Superiorem manente priore codice.
6. In posterum iterum edentur quae olim habebantur accepti et expensi tabulae, quippe quae adamussim consonant Codici majori, cujus exemplar ad omnes domos, aliquot abhinc annis, missum fuit.
7. Expensae pro cudendis Analectis, Calendariis, statu personali solventur a singulis domibus. Pretium vero solvendum demetiat juxta tabulas ipsius typographi.
8. Arduum sane foret definire quid solvendum sit a sodalibus qui ad tempus in aliqua domo Societatis non sua versantur. Aequum visum est ut Superior peregrinanti proprio motu expensas hospitii solvat; quod si omiserit, Superior, qui hospitio recepit, debiti memorem facere poterit debitorem.
9. Pensiones alimentariae pro alumniis scholarum Apostolicarum, Novitiis aut Scholasticis impares si fuerint expensis communibus, quod defecerit proportionate pro numero suorum subditorum a respectivis domibus erit supplendum.
10. Enixe rogantur Superiores ut bis in anno suas transmittant rationes, et quidem quam primum post elapsam semestre, neque ultra menses Januarii et Julii differant unquam.
11. Haec vota ad Superiores diriguntur:
  - a - Ut impensor alacriorque adhibeatur industria in diffundendam devotionem erga Dominam nostram a S. Corde evulgandamque Archiconfraternitatem sub eodem vocabolo.
  - b - Ut propagetur Associatio Sacerdotum saecularium et Christi fidelium.
  - c - Ut Superiores domorum in quibus eduntur Annalia in augendum lectorum numerum magis incumbant.
  - d - Eo fine ut communi quodam vinculo inter se diversarum regionum et loquularum Annalia ligentur, preces novemdiales quoque mense nuntiandae ubicumque vulgentur.
  - e - Ut invigilent Superiores ne introducantur precandi formulae in Decretis S. Congr. Rituum et S. Officii non approbatae, et notanter Litaniae S. Cordis, Dominae Nostrae a S. Corde, S. Vultus etc.

12. Voto, quod Analecta ad usum Missionariorum S. Cordis Jesu instituantur, quamprimum Concilium Generale satisfaciet.
13. Prolatum fuit sequens votum: ut magisteri custodesve qui suam dant operam in Scholis Apostolicis vel similibus quarum nempe alumni, ferias autumnales celebrandi causa, domum paternam non repetunt, per tres circa hebdomadas mittantur rus, ut, a consueta relevati opera, quieti sufficienter indulgere valeant, ut ferias celebrandi modus apud scholasticos juxta rationem agendi Congregationum quae nostrae fere similes sunt instituat, interea villam acquirere satagant Superiores, in qua saltem plures, si non omnes simul, aliquod temporis spatium transigere possint; quod si Patrem contigerit defatigari, Superiori locali deputetur cura, ut otiandi causa aliquo mittatur, e tamen lege ut, caeteris paribus, potius ad domum aliquam Societatis mittatur.

Quod ut votum ad praxim deducatur nos de consensu Concilii nostri haec statuimus. Hortamur Superiores Provinciales ut pro domibus educationis aliquam rusticationis domum acquirant vel mutuo locent, si fieri potest, in quam mittant scholasticos vel dictos professores. Ad hanc rusticationis domum poterunt Superiores locales etiam sacerdotes defatigatos mittere, vel in aliquam ejusdem Provinciae domum, quae non sit nimis remota a sua, praevio consensu alterius Superioris localis; solus autem Provincialis potest tales sacerdotes defatigatos alio mittere.

Haec solis superioribus promulgare intendimus et eorum curis demandamus. Illa, Reverende Pater, statuta tibi nomine totius Capituli transmittimus, hortantes te ut toto nisu cures, simul cum Directorio a membris tuae Communitatis fideliter servari: sic amplam apud Deum et homines mercedem tui ministerii reportabis.

A draft letter to His Grace Pierre Paul Servonnet, Archbishop of Bourges.

B 18970812A

Issoudun, August 12, 1897

Your Grace,

I hastened to put before the members of the Congregation's General Council the questions and wishes of Your Grace as regards Chezal-Benoît. They were received with the respect due to your lofty authority and fatherly kindness, but at the same time there are the hopes that Your Grace would kindly favour the observations which they, wholeheartedly, presume to bring to your notice.

I. It is impossible for us to accept as following from the meeting with Cardinal Boyer the lesser actual value either in the external ecclesiastical forum or in that of conscience; I make no reference to civil law since the issue is all too obvious. In effect, this meeting had as its main, definite, object, a personal and special arrangement to be amicably undertaken between His Grace and ourselves. To be persuaded of this it is enough to know the intention of the contracting parties which is the primary basis for legal interpretation. Accordingly, Your Grace, all the negotiations, and the deed itself, make it clear that all those who signed the document understood that they were involved within these two limitations. Besides, the reasons drawing us to undertake this process were, likewise, wholly personal to Cardinal Boyer. He was our normal authority, his explicit wish being the sale of the Chezal-Benoît college and we ourselves, as his subjects, would have seen ourselves as in very bad grace if we opposed his wishes. When, accordingly, this particular arrangement became impossible due to the Cardinal's death, the agreement became null and void. This was so obvious that Monsignor Bardel, who carried out all the negotiations on behalf of His Eminence, was obliged to acknowledge this formally. He did not, in effect, declare the agreement null and void, simply stating in his role as Vicar Capitular that His Grace's death had released him from any obligatory effect and, as a result, he invited us to take up the issue again with the administration. As a result the priest in charge of this matter put new proposals before him in a letter, an exact copy of which we are forwarding to you. The Bishop of Parium did not think it opportune to reply unless on one side and the other there was full freedom. It was with full and complete consciousness of this freedom that the Chezal-Benoît college was purchased. We would have acted otherwise if we felt we were restricted by a prior arrangement. For the rest we also, Your Grace, have agreements signed by your eminent predecessors and which we would be at liberty to call upon. We have a document from Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne in which he acknowledges the monthly payment of a sum totalling 47,800 francs arising from payment of the workers, paid by us for a new building on the college ground. Besides, when, during the course of the year 1890, we rented the Chezal-Benoît houses, urgent repairs were called for. When Bishop Marchal couldn't carry these out due to lack of financial resources, he asked us to take on financial responsibility and committed himself to take into account later the enhanced value of the building as a result of these repairs. These basic and urgent repairs, alone, reached the enormous figure of more than 17,000 francs which our files and the bills of the workmen confirm. From all this, Your Grace, it will be easy for you to be reassured that if we had an obligation in law or in conscience to meet, we have more than met its requirements.

It might, perhaps, be said that we bought the college at a price well below its real value, but we believe, Your Grace, that any impartial person, aware of the situation, would acknowledge that the value of the property does not exceed the price paid for it. In effect, the diocese in 1860 paid 45,000 francs for the Chezal-Benoît house. (In addition, 20,000 francs were spent on furniture, pieces, etc., from which the archdiocese benefited as a diocesan property.) The farm, presently attached to the college, is, in the view of those knowledgeable, worth no more than 20,000 francs. We have, then, paid the college alone 30,100 francs and if to that amount one adds 27,000 francs in repairs, the total for us comes to 57,100 francs: or 12,100 more than what the diocese paid when purchasing it. Who is to say, as well, that the value of the buildings in the countryside, far from increasing over 40 years, has not diminished by near a third? Not only have we caused no (financial) problems for the Bishop's assets, but we have rather, on the contrary, provided a significant financial outcome over seven years, having paid a very high rent and, moreover, taxes as well. On the other hand, those needed repairs we carried out because, otherwise, it would be today nothing less than a ruin, for which no buyer could be found except at a derisory price, leaving the Bishop's office without any income from the place over these last seven years. Again, from this perspective, our conscience confirms that we have been more than helpful to the diocese's interests, far from being disadvantageous to it.

II. If meanwhile, Your Grace, we were to suppose momentarily that the agreement with Archbishop Boyer was null and inoperable, but at the same time preserved an obligatory quality, it would be easy to establish the exact meaning of this agreement. Monsignor Bardel, in the name of His Eminence, proposed the purchase of Chezal-Benoît to us under the following conditions: we would pay 54,000 francs and, moreover, undertake to meet the current debt of almost six thousand francs, so His Grace assured us. Moreover, we would be handing over 24,000 francs hand to hand, as stipulated in the 30,000 francs act of sale. Expenses at 8% amounted to 2,400 francs, with 200 francs added for valid expenses or 2,600 in all; this makes the following total: 54,000 + 6,000 + 2,600 or 62,600 francs in all.

Never, Your Grace, was it intimated to us that the current debt came to 16,000 francs and, likewise, we would never have accepted such burdensome conditions. Here in any event is the decision of our Council at this time: "Fr. General made it known that Monsignor Bardel on behalf of His Eminence the Cardinal Archbishop of Bourges, had offered the Chezal-Benoît property to us for 60,000 francs. This price seems unreasonable if one takes into consideration the overall value of the property; as well, every effort will be made to obtain a rebate." (Decision file, May 1896.) Accordingly, Your Grace, we bought the college at the July 25 meeting for 50,100 francs. But the sale expenses in purchases of this nature are 12% or 6,012 francs. We paid, then, 56,112 francs for the property with the difference between the agreed price and the purchase price not being more than 6,488 francs. In addition, in accordance with procedures, we should have had all favourable facilities as regards payment, whereas we were obliged to take out a loan to meet the amount, meaning significant difficulties for us and more expense.

You can gather from all this, Your Grace, that things have been greatly exaggerated when it is represented to you what the Congregation would have gained from the breakdown of the agreement and, consequently, we are not to be faulted either for unfairness or insensitivity with regard to the (archdiocesan) coffers. On the contrary, those who criticize our behaviour should be thankful to us for having safeguarded at our expense the (financial) interests of the diocese.

III. Despite all this, Your Grace, aware of the crushing (financial) burdens weighing on the diocese, and the many undertakings which Your Grace must direct, support and cause to prosper, we are prepared according to our means to contribute towards these large and splendid undertakings. We accordingly offer wholeheartedly to Your Grace the sum of 10,000 francs as a gift celebrating your joyful arrival (at Bourges) and as a pledge of our filial devotedness. We would like without delay to place this sum in your hands, but the abnormal expenses which presently weigh on our mother house make it impossible for us to do so at the moment. But we commit ourselves to pay it by way of annuity over 5 years.

Please, Your Grace, etc.

Issoudun, August 14, 1897

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I am returning Canon Darbon's very kind letter to you (see end of this article). It's full of good sense and truth.

We are bringing about some changes in the Marseilles house, but not as many as there should be. This is all we can do for the present year. Fr. Miniot will come and stay in Issoudun, with Fr. Raynaud replacing him as Superior. (In reality not so: the latter remained with Fr. Piperon as his assistant, socius, and Miniot remained in charge of Marseilles.) The change only half pleased Fr. Piperon. Fathers Deidier, Pacaud and Toub Blanc remain in Marseilles.

We are sending the Chezal-Benoît theological students to Rome, with Fr. Genocchi becoming Superior of the house. We are keeping philosophy and the novitiate at Chezal-Benoît, with Fr. Ramot in charge of the philosophers and Superior of the house. Fr. Piperon remains Novice Master and Bursar, Fr. Teste becoming his socius. (At this time the latter was himself a novice at Chezal-Benoît, not due to be professed until December 25, 1897; he could not be socius given his status as a novice.)

Fr. Field becomes Superior at Glastonbury in place of Fr. Hartzler (Fernand). Fr. Meyer becomes Superior of the Sacred Heart house (Issoudun) and in charge of the school (public, as distinct from the Petite Oeuvre). Fr. Boismenu leaves for New Guinea, becoming second in charge to Bishop Navarre. As for yourself, my friend, this is your new posting: you will live at the Sacred Heart, be editor in chief of the Annals, having responsibility for the committee, also becoming director of the priests of the Sacred Heart (association), the tertiaries and promoters of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association which you will go and visit to stimulate the members. Besides you can form, according to the basics of preaching, those young religious whom we shall be choosing for that important ministry, and it is our thinking to set up a residence for missionaries in Vichy, separate from the guest house, but we must wait until the house is built. Come back to us in flourishing health and fully cured.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I am forwarding a copy of our common rules and regulations to you which I am presenting as of today to be put into immediate effect.

Canon Esprit Darbon was the archpriest at the Marseilles Cathedral and very friendly with the MSCs. In his letter to Vaudon, and referring to the Marseilles procure, he says that:

...it seems to me that the Bishop stays withdrawn and doesn't favourably look upon the arrival of five religious from the outset, and all out of sorts and unable to exercise any ministry. The Superior is a very able man, even saintly, but this is not what is required at Marseilles. He doesn't want to do anything more than hear confessions, lacks the quality of drawing people to him with good will, failing to understand in any way whatsoever the Marseilles character. He bought the house next to the procure without saying a word to the Bishop. One came to hear about it and imagined, erroneously no doubt, that the Sacred Heart Fathers were about to invade Marseilles. It would have been better to begin more modestly and gently there. As it happens, the whole approach right from the beginning was unfortunate: the Superior was not the man for the circumstances, too pious, not sufficiently smart and resourceful. To deal with our administration, one needs to be resourceful and have tact, be able to say what you want and need to say, and prepare the ground well in advance before acting. The only remedy in this situation, and I speak conscientiously without trying to hoodwink you, is your replacement of the present Superior; you yourselves can only sort out this situation which should not be allowed to continue. There are prejudices at work which need to be laid aside, and it's not the worthy Fr. Miniot who, looking about him, will have the desired effect. A more astute and intelligent man is needed at Marseilles. One day Mr. (Fr.?) Payan said to me: he is a very odd character that Fr. Miniot! One doesn't know what he thinks or what he wants! In a word, if there's a wish to build up the Procure, it is absolutely necessary to have another kind of direction (leadership). There you have, Father, quite simply, what I know and have to say about the Procure and which I put before you in confidence. Fr. Jullien will arrive in Marseilles next January and this would be the occasion to strike the anvil advantageously at Château Gombert. I think that you will be on our side and you should be; you will be in the company of the worthy Charles Nicolas, who has just finished his licentiate in literature, and you will do a little literature under the large pine tree, etc., etc., etc. Come, come, come, you will see after everything and I am sure it will be so. Being close to the administration I see and hear a great deal which compels me to say to you: 'come, come', as it is the right time to be here, and you will see things clearly for yourself and be confirmed in your view once more that I have acted as a true and committed friend in S.C.J.

F. Darbon Ch. Superior.

To His Grace Pierre Paul Servonnet, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, August 15, 1897

Your Grace,

I read to the Council the very kind letter, so full of good will, which you paid me the honour of writing. Most assuredly, never will the bonds of the proven 'entente cordiale' and absolute commitment become weakened as between our little Society and our well-loved Archbishop and father; we shall be impelled all the more to submit ourselves to all possible sacrifices.

We note with surprise, Your Grace, that you have not been as fully informed about the Chezal-Benoît issue as you should have been, or about the arrangements between Cardinal Boyer and ourselves. Allow me to recall it to you and you may judge for yourself. Let us concern ourselves only with the part of the agreement which Your Grace accepts as valid. We agreed about the price of 60,000 francs for the college and buildings (1897 one franc = modern equivalent of approximately 3.50 euros); this is a fact not to be gainsaid. We would not want to go beyond that figure which is already quite high given the poor state of the buildings. If matters had been agreed on we were committed to pay 54,000 francs and be responsible for the current debt. Before signing I asked Bishop Bardel, and he influenced us when he assured us that in total it did not go beyond 6,000 francs or so. It was because of this convincing statement, repeated more than once, that we gave our approval and went on to give our signature.

Our good faith cannot be questioned, Your Grace; we are all alive and well and we can attest to the fact by oath. It is not for us to adjudicate if a mistake in what is indebted to the bank is not attributable to us, or the responsibility of the negotiating body; we have no obligation to meet it in this respect. What is beyond doubt is that we have committed ourselves to 60,000 francs as the agreed amount and not a centime more. Meanwhile, if this sale on good terms hadn't taken place in these circumstances, you must agree, Your Grace, that in no way is it our fault. Arising from the proposal of Your Grace's delegate, only 30,000 francs is involved in the deeds of sale, the remainder given from hand to hand. The registration fees at 8% become lowered then to 30,000 inclusive of the solicitor's fees. The total expense for us, then, comes to 62,000 francs. In all fairness, it is impossible to ask more from us. If Your Grace has the slightest doubt about our assurances, he may refer the issue to Monsignor Bardel. We do not have any concern that we are mistaken. The last time it was put up for auction, Chezal-Benoît was made over to us for 60,100 francs. If one adds to this amount the 6,000 francs for registration fees and 12% for the solicitor's fees, this building will have cost us 56,100 francs. If from this amount of 62,600 francs we subtract 56,100 francs, there remains to our credit 6,500 francs. However, in offering 10,000 francs to Your Grace, it is again with this amount of 6,500 francs that we extend our favour and good will to you.

We humbly prostrate ourselves at the feet of Your Grace requesting your paternal blessing and acceptance of our filial homage in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The Viscount de Bonneval of Issoudun, who was honoured to meet Your Grace recently, informs me that you stated that our renting of Chezal-Benoît, at 2,800 francs, was fictitious, arising from having the parishes of Chezal-Benoît and Dampierre whose revenues we take. This, Your Grace, is totally wrong, since over 20 years it has been the secular priests of your diocese who have been the recipients of these contributions. Ask Canon Paternau, Archbishop's secretary, who was parish priest of Chezal-Benoît, about it and he will clarify this issue for you.

Council Meetings, 21,26,30
August 1897

All present except for Fr. Meyer.

Meeting August 21

1. Fr. Genocchi requesting Brother Secondien for the Rome House. After the departure of those going on the missions, consideration will be given to what possibilities there are.
2. Brother Kopp requests that he make perpetual vows. One waits before reaching a decision about this until he gets to the month when he requested entry to the novitiate.
3. Fr. Brunet (Paris) writes to say that the house at number 19 Rue de Calais which is beside our church is for sale at 300,000 francs. The owner is prepared to rent it, to it seems, for 3 years for 10 or 12,000 francs a year. We cannot, obviously, buy it, but if Fr. Brunet can find a way to rent it, either by sub-letting or by collections for this purpose, he is authorized to rent it for 3 years if he thinks he can more or less meet the major expense of renting it.
4. The lay brothers Paul Cousin and August Lainé are accepted for first vows.
5. Fr. Raynaud in two letters sent to Fr. General makes plain the detrimental results ensuing for him and the novitiate if he were to leave Chezal-Benoît. His reasons appear credible but, nevertheless, there is no-one who could replace him in charge of the Marseilles house. This issue will again be considered.
6. Fr. Comte has handed to Fr. General an application to be forwarded to Rome requesting release from vows. The reason given, the need to help his father, lacks credibility because the Society already supports his father and, consequently, Fr. General cannot endorse a request based on this motive alone. Fr. Comte is recommended to make first of all his retreat, after which the issue will again be considered.

Second Meeting, August 26

All present except Fr. Meyer.

1. Fr. General, having made a trip to Lourdieux-Saint-Michel at the invitation of Mr. Tardivau, head of the institution set up in this area, gave an account of his meeting with Mr. Tardivau who is offering the Society his establishment and all that goes with it, fully willing to contribute everything to the Indre Société Immobilière. As he lays down no condition with regard to this offer, the Council considers that it cannot well refuse, but meanwhile, since the issue isn't urgent, it will be taken up again later. Besides, one will consider with Mr. Etave what formalities would have to be undertaken for this property to gain entry to the Anonyme Society.
2. The novice Léon Gouiron, considered inadequate to continue with his studies, requests permission to remain in the Congregation as a lay brother. The Council accepted his request.
3. The sister bursar at the Visitation Convent, Fribourg, Switzerland, writes to say that the Villa Torry, no longer in lease, is at our disposal, requesting us to indicate when we would be in a position to take possession of it. The Council, in consideration of the fact that at present there was nobody ready to run the Fribourg house, decided to hold over again for the time being and, as a result, a letter will be sent to the sister stating that if she can find a lessee for one year she should go ahead, but if not we shall meet the cost of renting.

Third Meeting, August 30

In attendance: Fr. General; Fathers Ramot, Piperon, Maillard.

1. Fr. General made it known that Fathers Comte and Laliaux have at the end of their retreat withdrawn their request to leave the Society.
2. The scholastic Jules Merg and the lay brother Martin van der Zanden were accepted for perpetual vows. The lay brother Alloys Pooyer, having completed the second three-year phase of temporary vows, but not yet aged 30, is accepted for temporal profession while waiting his thirtieth year and final profession.

3. The decision was taken to get an indult in order to set up a novitiate in Rome. Fr. Miniot is to continue as Superior of the Marseilles house. (! see above, 2479.)

To Father Joseph Leray, MSC, the Gilbert Islands.

Issoudun, September 1, 1897

Dear Fr. Leray,

You are perhaps already aware that from the three candidates I presented, Propaganda chose you as Vicar Apostolic of the Gilbert Islands, etc. You were, however, the second in the list of candidates I put forward, which means that the Holy See had its reasons for giving you preference over Fr. Bontemps. Let us respect the designs of divine Providence. I am forwarding to you the bulls (documents) for the confrères who are with you. You are at liberty to be ordained by Bishops Couppé or Navarre, or Bishop Vidal in Samoa, the Archbishop of Sydney, or in France itself. You can gauge for yourself what will be the most opportune and least expensive and also the quickest. I like to think that you will justify the confidence placed in you for your piety, prudence, zeal and good administration. You will be good and fatherly for your confrères. You will carefully see to it that they will keep the religious spirit in the faithful maintenance of the Constitutions and rules as much as possible. You will make it come about that they will not stay too long alone in the postings you assign to them. Vae solis (unhappy those who are alone, on their own). You will visit them often, stimulating their zeal or moderating it in accordance with the circumstances. See to it that they are never lacking in what is needed. Support the evangelization and conversion of the natives. Be on good terms with the village chiefs and government officials without compromising your principles. Always send a copy of the reports you send to Rome to the Council of the Propagation of the Faith, and the Holy Child.

You will need a good bursar. I think that Fr. Merg in Sydney would gladly go to work for you if you wanted him. You are aware that according to canon law you cannot be Apostolic Vicar and religious Superior at the same time since these two roles must be separate, unless it cannot be otherwise, and in this latter event an indult is required from Rome. Who among your confrères do you think could be Superior for his piety, good will, concern for the rule and religious discipline? Has Fr. Bontemps these qualities? If the answer is in the affirmative, he would fulfil this role. If not, who do you think would be suitable? In any event, Fr. Bontemps will remain Superior until your consecration. From now until then, you will have time to inform us.

Cheerio, dear, kind Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

To Father Jean Vaudon, MSC, at the Sacred Heart.

Issoudun, September 3, 1897

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

In the event that I cannot go to the Sacred Heart, I am replying to your letter.

1. The rumours which have been brought to your attention are all incorrect; there was no question of your being at the Council, nor of those you met with at the Sacred Heart. You quite obviously have the right to walk with all who make up the Sacred Heart community. To have to repeat this is nothing more than ridiculous!
2. Fr. Meyer confirms that in no way did he speak to Fr. Wickel in words the latter attributes to him. In any event Fr. Meyer himself will have to talk things over with you. Put those telling tales in their place.
3. I have spoken to all the members of the Council and also to Fathers Maillard and Batard, every one of them indignantly asserting that they never uttered an unfavourable word against you to any representative of the Archbishop. I myself praised you most highly to the Archbishop and to Fr. Mortel when I spoke a little to them on the feast day (September 8). Who could have conveyed to you such false and unfair stories? There is no need whatsoever, then, for you to go to Bourges to justify yourself because all these dignitaries have the utmost regard for you.
4. All the Council Fathers want you to follow the community retreat as one of the older people and by way of good example. If you have to look for advice from Fr. Dehon of Saint-Quentin you may write to him, and both your letters will not be opened. Please, dear friend, pay no heed to any gossip to which you are subjected. If there are among us those sowing ill will they deserve to be scorned.

You are more regarded and liked among us than you think. As for myself, you know how close I am to you; you have my regard and support; you cannot doubt this. I repeat what I already said to you: 1. (there will be no 2 or 3) You remain director of the Annals, to which you have given excellent impetus. You will have three or four helpers to support you in this important work. Moreover, you will be the director of our associated (diocesan) priests and of the Third Order, something which greatly pleases me. You are fully free to go and visit when you think it opportune, arrange meetings to stimulate interest and make new recruits. I regard this work as very important and in keeping with your zeal and commitment to our Society.

In conclusion, I want to tell you that the Council has unanimously appointed you counsellor at the Sacred Heart house.

Cheerio, dear friend, more than ever believe me that I am wholly yours in C.J.

My Dear Boy,

I read attentively your letter and I can see very well the great moral sufferings you are experiencing. Just the same, do not be discouraged. What you are going through is not in any way sinful. The good Lord is subjecting you to these trials as he did with the saints and with St. Paul himself. Three times the great apostle asked to be released and three times the Lord replied that his grace was adequate, supportive, for him. Do not be depressed then.

Reject these unworthy thoughts and you will merit heaven. Temptations, as St. James remarks, are necessary so that God comes to know what we are like and can undertake. It is in this crucible that the soul cleanses itself, becomes strengthened and acquires merit. Vigilate et orate. There you have the remedy. To go home to your family, even for just a few days, would not help. Moreover, it would constitute a bad example for others who would not understand the reason for you being absent and it would be a breach of religious discipline. Stay where you are then without fear or concern. I shall pray for you and you also for me.

Cheerio, my child.

I bless you; wholly yours in C.J.

My Dear Father,

The Council wants you to send to Rome a number of scholastics from your Province. Our Southern Province is sending 7 scholastics from Chezal-Benoît. We are requesting the German Province to make a choice of a number to send there. We are hoping to have a scholasticate in Rome which will do honour to our Society and provide it with serious-minded and well-educated subjects. It is, besides, the wish expressed to us by the Cardinal Vicar, our Protector, and we believe it appropriate that we should meet his wishes. If it is at present too costly and demanding to make this sacrifice, be assured that you will be happy later on and your Province will gain advantage.

Please accept, Father, my best wishes.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I have written to Fr. Ramot about the monthly novena. Has Fr. Bouvier given up on this little task? The Archbishop is carrying out the confirmation ceremonies in the archdiocese and he informs me that he will shortly come to Issoudun to carry out confirmations in the Vatan canton. You might have a word with him, which would perhaps be more opportune than writing to him.

I am very sorry that you weren't at the dinner. His Grace was really very kind.

I wrote to Fr. Carrière requesting him to petition Rome for some worthwhile favours on behalf of our affiliated priests and for the Third Order, as well as our supporters, in order to give our undertakings fresh impetus. I continue to be convinced that you are the man for this situation. I also spoke to the Archbishop about the plan for an Issoudun congress and he very much welcomed this proposal. He asked for time to reflect on it in order to consider how best it could be put into practice. Let us wait and see.

Issoudun, November 16, 1897

Your Grace,

You are aware of the military law enacted by the French Government stipulating that young religious should be sent on military service for three years. It is ruinous for vocations; we have already sadly experienced this. The law allows young men not yet 19 years the freedom to expatriate themselves outside of Europe for ten years. When this time has elapsed they can return home without any concern, not being required to meet any obligations other than two phases of 28 days, such as others of their age.

Aware, Your Grace, of your concern to safeguard vocations, we are appealing to your great good will and your very French heart, requesting that you kindly give us permission to send to Quebec our young religious who are subject to military regulations who could take courses at your renowned university in philosophy, theology, canon law, all so well organized. One or two of our priests would accompany them. In Quebec French is spoken and our young men would be spared learning another language which is always difficult. It is on the recommendation of Monsignor Laflamme, the university's Rector, that we are putting this request to Your Grace. I hope that we can easily find in the city, and near the university, under favourable conditions, a house for our little group. I shall meet, it goes without saying, all the expenses for upkeep and whatever else.

It is in consideration of our undertakings in France, our three Vicariates in Oceania which have so much need of missionaries, and of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart so well known and appreciated in your lovely diocese, that I am drawn to present this humble request to you.

In expectation of your favourable response, I place myself at your Grace's feet requesting your blessing as I offer you my most respectful good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, November 28, 1897

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I would have replied sooner to your kind letter if I had known your address. I read most eagerly in the Universe your different reports on the Lille Congress, masterpieces of conciseness, clarity, style and eloquence. You have well merited the appreciation of God and man: bene dixisti. All those who have read the reports are of the same view, and I forward to you, then, my unstinted thanks and appreciation.

I am also grateful to you for your commitment in promoting our undertakings in such Catholic areas as the north (of France). Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will there find glory and honour and our dear Society a boost. As I see it, your presence at the Paris Congress would be greatly advantageous to us since you would be in place to say a word about Our Lady, the pilgrimage (to Issoudun), our undertakings, particularly so our wonderful and morale-boosting missions which are our pride. You will make every effort to initiate constant pilgrimages to Issoudun, at the heart of France and the centre of so many blessings.

Fr. Ramot has taken it upon himself to stimulate and revitalize the apostolate of the Sacred Heart priests among diocesan clergy. He has enrolled 500 and read his circular project to me which is really very good. He has it also in mind to send it to the bishops and major seminary rectors. I hope that, with the support of the Sacred Heart, this association will come alive and prosper since it meets a genuine priestly need. While it is being re-organized in view of a greater impact, you will take charge of it and be in your element. The direction of the Sacred Heart Third Order is not in any way handed over to Fr. Bouvier. It awaits a suitable director. We shall see. Fr. Polo's work is not yet to be despaired of. Bishop Oury is dealing with it and he himself wrote saying so to Fr. Doutré. Just the same, I doubt if the Bishop of Nantes will go back on his decision.

The Archbishop of Bourges is enraged as never before with Mr. Marchain and the Châteauroux committee. His Grace 8 days ago, writing in the Semaine Religieuse (diocesan weekly), accused Mr. Marchain of bad faith and disloyalty, adding, in conclusion, that if he is forced to do so he will say more. This affair is regrettable in every respect. The house opened by the Archbishop of Châteauroux is closed. Mr. Marchain was a great personal friend of Fr. Chevalier and also of the deceased Jean-Marie Vandael.

Cheerio, my friend, every success.
Fr. Mathieu is off to be with you.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Fr. François Barral, who is at Immensee, writes to say that his brother wants to re-enter negotiations with you and asks me to send Fr. Meyer to him. It is a very complicated business. Fr. Chopin has not left the Congregation; he has been granted leave of absence for a year to see if his health can be restored. Enfeebled truth, ever oblique, has the mystification it deserves. Loches remains as ever a good parish; Our Lady of the Sacred Heart remains greatly loved there. If your health makes it possible for you to preach the retreat which the archpriest requested, you will do a lot of good by doing so. The church is not very large.
Again my best wishes in C.J.

B 18971201

December 1, 1897

Your Grace,

As regards the eucharistic gathering, we only want what Your Grace wishes. The issue of the parish church's completion preoccupies me more than I can say.

I would very much like to have this work done before I die, but to be quite candid with you I do not see any possibility of doing so for the time being, unless a considerable and unexpected contribution becomes available. For the front and two sides a sum of 200,000 francs (about 678,398 euros) would be needed, at least according to the architect's plans, without taking into account acquiring a house, something which would be absolutely necessary.

When I was appointed parish priest of Issoudun in 1872, the parish church was like a broken-down barn and my first concern was to start renovating it. I found I had support and was able to collect 200,000 (francs) despite the sectarian opposition of the municipal council and the government's obstructive tactics. The Sacred Heart contributed 50,000 francs on this occasion (about 169,600 euros). The renovation of the church was a large and quite beautiful undertaking and the services take place with a great deal of dignity and solemnity. It greatly pleases the faithful. As for reconstruction of the façade, I do not think that it preoccupies public opinion to such an extent that it needs to be mentioned to Your Grace. It is amazing that while being here myself I am the first to take no notice of it. I shall be very much obliged to Your Grace if you would be kind enough to let me know what numbers there are of people in high places who are calling for this repair work, since I would be prompt to draw on their generosity. Since 1880 when the restoration of Saint-Cyr finished, our rich families with the capacity to come to our aid have disappeared, some through death, others by departure from the town; besides the phylloxera plague came along and destroyed the vineyards, the main source of wealth in the area. I found myself then faced with a population deprived of resources.

Moreover, Your Grace, I had to see to the up-keep of our free (independent of the state) schools for girls and boys and on behalf of which I had to find at least 6,000 francs each year. Last year I set up a house of the Little Sisters of the Sick who look after, night and day, gratuitously, those in need. There are five sisters at present. The good they accomplish each day is incalculable and this foundation is permanently assured, so much so that my successor will not be required to contribute anything financially.

Besides, Your Grace, I have five curates with me looking after the parish of whom only two are paid expenses and, given the circumstances, each only receives 600 francs yearly, nothing being contributed either by the local authority or the state. I have to see to the upkeep of the rest, these three being wholly my responsibility.

You must not be under the impression, Your Grace, that I have remained until now silent about the need, or at least the convenience, of completing the outside of the church. The people to whom I mentioned this replied that the time was not right economically and they did not have disposable resources from their incomes. What is one to do? I wish for nothing better than to undertake this work. If Your Grace were to get from the government a guarantee of helpful financial aid it would be encouraging. I hope in the very near future to meet Your Grace and discuss these various issues with you.

Please etc.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

Thank you for letting me have your news. I am pleased for the success following on your preaching: the Sacred Heart will bless it and make it bear fruit. Take occasion from your presence there to invite the people of Loches to come in large numbers on pilgrimage to Issoudun. The clergy and people will be responsive to your appeal. The 31st of May would suit very well as they would be there to close the month of May at the shrine of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I understand that you cannot accept the invitation from the parish priest of Châteauroux. On Tuesday next we shall be delighted to receive dear Fr. Tardivoux. If Fr. Renaudet can accompany him, that would be perfect.

Our Council confrères do not wish to take the initiative with regard to the Châteauroux issue, wanting the request to come directly from the Archbishop, and, moreover, in this instance they don't want to hear any mention of auxiliaries (bishops) which, as they see it, would sooner or later give rise to serious problems. Moreover, they are persuaded that the Saint-Pierre civic society would not itself agree to this arrangement.

Dear Father,

I am delighted that you are feeling better. You will, I hope, return to us fully cured.

I have given orders to have the gaps, to which you drew attention, filled.

My trip took longer than I thought. I arrived at Hiltrup feeling well, but next morning I experienced awful pain in my bowels with retention of urine. I cannot tell you how I suffered. It remains inflamed and I cannot urinate up to now without a catheter. Being worn out from all these journeys, one after the other from Spain to Germany, is the explanation for this. I only arrived back here yesterday from what was a painful journey. At last here I am at Issoudun. I need rest and looking after, but I have less pain, and there's a slight improvement. But I need to have continuous recourse to the catheter.

The doctor leads me to hope that in eight days everything will become normal – fiat. Pray for me. Cheerio, my friend.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

Thanks a thousand times over for your kind letter and everything you tell me about Go... (an ink blotch obscures the name) to Saint-Hilaire and elsewhere.

I never did anything to merit the good wishes of Mr. (Fr.?) Beauquin, whom I scarcely knew. The matter cannot be explained other than you describe. If he puts my name in his will, it would be prudent to have him add these words: "and in his absence (place) Fr. Jean Vaudon, preacher, living at Issoudun", or if you prefer: "Fr. François Xavier Maillard, residing at Issoudun". Fr. Jouët's present circumstances do not allow for his being mentioned in this document.

I am getting along much better, but a swollen bowel at my age is a bad omen and I shall need to take great care. Our dear Fr. Roger is dead; he was buried this morning, being taken by typhoid fever, dying like a saint. Yesterday I had a telegram from Sydney bringing me the news of Brother Grippa's death. Dear Fr. Lavialle is very ill; his heart condition is much worsened, making him very bloated. The doctor doesn't think that he will last out the year.

Cheerio, my friend; my regards to the kind Pouvreau family, to Fr. Beauquin, to the dear Claretians (sisters) and the venerable Fr. Roger.

Issoudun, September 11, 1898

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I was not aware of the letter Fr. Piperon wrote to you nor of your reply; it's you, yourself, who lets me know about this correspondence. I have to tell that over the past 6 weeks, since I began visiting the Northern houses, I was very much cut off and couldn't occupy myself wholeheartedly with the Congregation's affairs. For some days now I feel better and my health seems to be more stabilized. Consequently, I shall profit from this to draw the Council's attention to the issues which you bring to my notice.

The Jesuit Fr. Bouvier has not, so far as I know, left here the text of his last talk. I went into the room during all the festivities (surrounding September 8) and saw nothing. I shall look into this further. I think that notes were being taken for an article on our feasts. Tomorrow I shall go further into this matter.

Ys, my friend, a committee is needed for the direction of the Annals, but it is my contention that you yourself must keep control of it if we want it to be appreciated as in the past.

As for Chateauroux, nothing has been decided on the Archbishop's side. I have heard no mention of the gentleman in the St. Peter committee wishing to talk with the Archbishop in November and I think they will again put off this initiative. When you return we shall discuss all of this.

We cannot do other than make Fr. Pouvreau take charge of Chezal-Benoît (in name) for this year at least. Next year Fr. Jourdon, or someone else, will take over. We shall see to it at that time.

It is true that there are changes in personnel. Fr. Piperon, for example, is appointed Superior of the Sacred Heart house. Fr. Meyer remains director of his college. Fr. Ramot becomes Novice Master and Superior of Chezal-Benoît and Fr. Barral from Jesi becomes his socius. Fr. Jourdon becomes director of the scholasticate which comprises philosophers only. The theologians have been sent to Rome. This, I believe, was your thinking.

Only you, my dear friend, can finish the life of Bishop Verjus. You have the quality and aptitude to do so.

You must know that I shall do everything to make you happy and place you in a setting where you can fulfil yourself and offer the kind of service which your pity, zeal, talents and commitment to the Society lay claim to. I have the same expectation of you as I have of myself.

Cheerio, my friend.

Issoudun, October 10, 1898

Dear Father,

I thank you most warmly for your kind letter and the confidences you share with me which I shall keep to myself. The worthy Archbishop is unfathomable. The complaints directed at us do not stand up. We are reproached for being abroad... and who chased us out of France? Our buildings are imposing like the mother house... but they are in no way luxurious. They didn't cost the state or the diocese anything. As for the paintings, the artist who is from this area requested me to take them in order to make him known, only asking me to contribute towards the materials. He worked on and completed them for 800 francs, the amount agreed with him (about 2,725 euros). What's wrong with that?!

To say by way of reproach that the parish church has been left to deteriorate and get into disrepair is as unjust as it is absurd. When I was appointed parish priest, Saint-Cyr was not a church but an unbecoming barn, a revolting mess falling into ruin. My predecessors never ventured to undertake any improvements although the times were favourable. I set myself to work despite the opposition coming from the radical freemasonry town council. I put together 220,000 francs (about 749,925 euros), and there were 50,000 francs (about 170,438 euros) made available for the Sacred Heart (church). Today this church is very beautiful and spacious and the services take place there just like they would in a cathedral. The sacristy vestments and furnishings were in tatters and I found a way to replace them with new ones, quite a number of them. The sacristy had no cloakroom and I spent 1,500 francs setting up what is still there today. I renovated the Holy Rosary Chapel and painted that of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart as well as the St. Joseph Chapel. I had its former sacristy restored to the church which the town council had commandeered as a fire station. From the lumber room, called Calvary in this old sacristy, I created a little chapel with quite beautiful stained glass at a cost of 5,000 francs.

I decorated the choir and main nave of Saint Cyr with a large number of chandeliers which make for a lovely decoration. I had sculptured at my own expense the capitals at the base of the nave columns and the lamp sockets in the side chapels. I took away all the stalls accumulated like an eyesore, standing there in the oldest part of the church. I gave to our ceremonies a sense and measure of grandeur which one would look for in vain throughout the diocese; and after all this it is thrown into my face that I did nothing to embellish the interior of the church! And I do not mention the stations of the cross in oil, and quite beautiful, which cost 3,000 francs; the former unbecoming and worn out. I had to set up our free schools (as distinct from state schools) and put together each year 9 to 10,000 francs for the upkeep of those run by the sisters and brothers. Founding the Little Sisters of the Sick cost 22,000 francs, and so many other undertakings. All this is considered as nothing and we have done nothing for Issoudun.(!) You will agree that it is heartbreaking to hear (read) language like this following 27 years of a committed and sacrificing life. One is effectively saying, then, that the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart are detested and they are no longer wanted!

As for the church façade, is it reasonable to expect that I take it in hand as the present moment after all the sacrifices we have made, and for such an undertaking 200,000 francs would be needed without taking into consideration the taking-over of a house as a necessity. Where are the financial resources to come from? The offerings, which are the Sacred Heart revenues, are for its works and not for the parish church; it would be criminal to deflect them from their destination. This is what should be understood in high places and I haven't been able to succeed; it's a biased issue. Perhaps you would be more successful than I am. I am exhausted from this deaf, prejudiced, unjust altercation.

Cheerio, dear friend.
My deepest regards to the Caseneuve family.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The painter referred to at the beginning of this letter was Fernand Maillard, 1862-1948, who spent some of his younger years in Issoudun where he executed some of his first major assignments such as the frescoes in the refectory, no longer surviving except as sketches. Maillard only lived off and on during the summer weather at Issoudun between 1885 and 1921, years during which he painted the town, the monuments, squares and a variety of scenes, like those of the market which he greatly liked.

Issoudun, October 28, 1898

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I am forwarding to you a draft of the book I am writing on the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for the work titled: "The Religious History of Issoudun and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" and which is at the printers. I don't know if you will be able to read it.

Mr. Gagnault, whom I have seen, attributes all the delays in the Annals to you, telling me that you kept for 8 days the proofs he forwarded to you and, moreover, you changed the page order and this resulted in his having to do a fresh reprint. Moreover, some days ago he was sent a first mass homily for printing; only yesterday did I see the proofs and the upshot of all this is that he is the complainant. He wants completed work to be sent on to him sooner and not await the last moment to bring about additions or changes.

Fr. Mathieu, whom I have seen, will provide an article in December, but he wants you to supply the subject matter and to do the same for all your collaborators, in order to avoid confusion. He has spent 8 days at Chezal-Benoît on his annual retreat.

The inspector of Academies in Cher has paid a visit to Chezal-Benoît where he has objected to Father Pouvreau as head of the school, going to see the Archbishop in order to find out if he belonged to the diocese or a Congregation. The Archbishop wrote to me straightaway to ask me what form his answer should take. I sent him the Rome document which authorizes us to be incorporated in the dioceses where we are and place ourselves under the Bishop's jurisdiction for pastoral ministry. His Grace, with the matter clarified in this text, was pleased to give us letters incorporating us, treating us as his subjects. It was with this understanding that he replied to the inspector. This procedure will greatly help negotiations and cut short a lot of problematic issues.

My good wishes to Fr. Jullien.
Cheerio, my friend.

I have found a very sympathetic letter from the Bishop of Marseilles authorizing us to set ourselves up in Marseilles and undertake ministry there. If you think it would be helpful, I could send this letter on to you.

Dear Father Jullien,

I am shattered by what has happened to Fr. Vaudon and I hope that he will very soon have his sight back as it was before. We shall fervently pray for this.

Yes, I have the same view as he; there are too many people giving orders to the printer. Only the director (editor) is entitled to do this. Mr. Gagnault should put nothing on the page without the approval of Fr. Vaudon. I hope that all these misunderstandings will not arise any longer.

I think that it is not a good procedure to allow each contributor pick his own subject matter since there needs to be an overall plan with specified subject matter as, otherwise, there will be confusion. Fr. Vaudon is at liberty to improve, change, hold over or leave aside articles forwarded to him and the right to know the authors' names.

Bishop Leray and his companions are leaving us this evening for Marseilles.

I am delighted to have your good news about getting better, but I wish, nevertheless, you were fully better. Let us hope and pray. Poor Madame Petite in Paris is very ill and has been given the last sacraments. I am not in favour of intervening in the direction of the Annals. I only look over the proofs and I have always believed that nothing should be done without your approval. I have seen Fr. Meyer and passed your observations on to him. He said to me that very often there is not enough time to send you the proofs and on your return everything would be put in order, as you would want it. In any event, he intends to write to you. Mr. Gagnault isn't to be overlooked in all this.

I submit for your consideration some pages from Fr. Blot and you will judge for yourself their inclusion in the February Annals. As well, we have been asked to include a review requested by Mr. Berton of Issoudun. The book is by his brother-in-law and it's Fr. Piperon's review. You are fully at liberty to change or take out.

Issoudun, December 16, 1898

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

Since my return from Münster to Issoudun on August 20, when I arrived so laid up, I could in no way whatsoever be taken up with the Annals until today. However much I would have liked to do so, it was not possible for me. I am somewhat better, but I am very shaken just the same. The bladder complaints have not gone; they remain and continue to be serious. Each day I am forced to have two catheterizations and cleansings at the same time. I was wholly convinced that the manuscripts were being sent on to you. Who is, or who are, responsible for this chaos? I still don't know. Mr. Gagnault senior, continually laid up, doesn't look after the Annals any longer, so I am told. I shall contact his son and nephew and, perhaps, I shall get at the truth. In any event, I don't believe that any of our confrères who so acted were intent on causing you problems. Their behaviour was precipitate and thoughtless. Yesterday, Mr. Henri Gagnault came to see me asking if they should go ahead with the arrangement of the pages and print the Annals in order to avoid being late. I told him that he should send everything on to you and that you alone had the authority to give the word to print. This is what he will do. Once again, my friend, it is to be hoped that this mess is not repeated. I am as annoyed as you are with these hitches which, I hope, will not happen again. Wait a little longer before you advise Mr. Morelle of your intentions. We shall discuss all of this in Issoudun.

Oh! my dear friend, if you have shed tears over what has affected you, my own heart has quite often shed tears of blood, something which has in no small way contributed to the painful illness I am undergoing at the present time. Nevertheless, fiat! (let it be so). Let us stay on the Cross until the end; following the humiliations, there is the glory; after Calvary, victory.

Courage, perseverance: God is merciful; He will come to our defence. When you were on the General Council and I aligned myself on the side of your judicious views, you were looked upon by some as leading me and guiding me (influentially). This incorrect view has spread and prevailed. You have been a victim and myself also. Everything I did came to nothing; the rules and Constitutions had to be re-formulated. You will have noticed that at the last Chapter there was a current (a mood) against yourself and myself. I didn't even have control of the deliberations, exercising no more than a presidency of honour. I kept silent in the interests of peace and I suffered within myself.

I wish to confirm, dear Father, that from the beginning you were being put forward as part of the local council; it was through over-sight that your name was not announced. This omission was remedied later when it became obvious. I can understand that all this accumulation of facts has hurt and offended you and I felt sorry for you and for myself. But as of now justice is being meted out to you in many issues. You are more liked, appreciated, than you think you are.

The Bishop's Council which interests you is not, so you say, in keeping with the spirit of the Lord and you have done well not to take any notice of it. I believe that the statements lacking in charity of certain major Superiors were conveyed to you in an exaggerated way. Let us be on guard against those who tell of and sow ill feelings. One may at leisure examine my undertakings, my address, my visitations. I have nothing to be ashamed of; everything happens in the open. I can be subjected to calumny as much as they wish, my words and actions twisted, to all of which I am accustomed for quite a long time. Hate, jealousy, ingratitude are likely to lead to anything. If our Lord did not escape lying and diabolical inventiveness, we should not in the least be surprised if treated in the same way. I follow the Evangelical counsel and pray for those who defame me. Nevertheless, I shall be obliged to you if you dot the "i" and let me know his name or the names of those who are monitoring me so that, at the very least, my suspicions are not falling on such and such a one. You, thereby, will be performing a worthwhile service in my interests. You may be assured of my discretion just as I lay store by yours.

Issoudun, December 25, 1898

Dear Father,

You will find in the Analecta the decree from the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences where the Sovereign Pontiff grants our Society the privilege of reciting publicly the Litanies of the Sacred Heart of Jesus under the same heading as the Litanies of the Holy Name of Jesus and the Blessed Virgin.

Since, however, as at the last Chapter, the Litanies of the Holy Name of Jesus were substituted for those of the Sacred Heart, because the latter, simply, had not been approved by the Holy See for public recitation, it seems to us that the spirit of our vocation and the very name we bear necessitates an obligation to profit from the favour now accorded us by the Holy See.

Nevertheless, before reaching a decision, we would like to ask each member of the last Chapter for his views on the matter and we would like to have your verdict as soon as possible, quite sincerely and simply.

Please accept, Father, this assurance of my deep regards in N.S.

Dear Mr. de Bonneval,

I am forwarding a copy to you of the letter sent to me today by His Grace: he either doesn't understand the issues or he doesn't want to engage in order to do so. You can present this (copy letter) to all interested parties, and our reply which is also enclosed. What do you think of his attempt to stop me from mentioning his correspondence with us? To Father Pasquier, Superior of the Bourges Major Seminary.

Issoudun, March 20, 1899

Dear Fr. Superior,

Fr. Maillard brought us news of your conversation and the proposal you put to him as a way of bringing about an understanding which could settle all our differences. Be quite assured about this, Fr., that on our side we all want to be acceptable to the Archbishop, safeguarding his legitimate authority in the eyes of the clergy and the public. We understand the need for this.

The arrangement thought about, although far from perfect, would set up two authorities, and two authorities in the same house is not normal, likely to create, you must understand, serious problems. Nevertheless, by way of showing good will on our part we are prepared to accept, as we stated, the title of Prefect of Studies, making every effort to put it into effect when dealing with the youngsters and families. We are the first to admit that the authority of the Archbishop must be safeguarded. His Grace would officially appoint and name the personnel in the weekly religious papers, and everything would appear to come from His Grace's initiative in the eyes of the clergy and public. He would be looked upon as the organizer of this new college.

If we have rightly understood your thinking, therefore, one of confrères would have the official title of head, as regards the establishment and in the eyes of the academy as a whole, and at the same time be the Superior of our confrères working there. Fr. Vaudon would be the head of the college in the eyes of the Archbishop and the public. If difficult issues cropped up, the Superior General would contact His Grace to smooth matters over or eliminate them, and the same would hold for the dismissal of teachers who were not meeting expectations.

All things considered, we see nobody other than Fr. Lanctin, an Assistant General in the Congregation, who is in charge of our apostolic school and presides over our little (public) Issoudun college, who can meet these requirements. He is someone who is calm, prudent, balanced. Once matters are agreed on, Fr. Vaudon will get on perfectly well with him. Another advantage in having Fr. Lanctin in titular office is his being an Issoudun native. Fr. Meyer, whom you mention, is for the past year in charge of our little college and changing him now would be detrimental to that institution. We would appoint Fr. Batard as bursar and with responsibility for the house. As for teachers, it will be easy to find them. If we cannot provide all of them, we shall draw on the Archbishop's good will.

Be assured of this, Father, that we shall do our utmost to give pride of place to the Archbishop, respect his authority, follow his advice and exhibit a devotedness without qualification.

If the Archbishop agrees with these proposals you will be kind enough to let us know and we shall deal in a definitive way with the Saint Peter Society.

Hoping that these arrangements will be accepted by the Archbishop, we ask you to be assured of our respectful good wishes in C.J.

To Father Pasquier, Superior of the Bourges Major Seminary.

Issoudun, March 20, 1899

The Superior of the Major Seminary proposes that there be two Superiors:

Fr. Vaudon for the college, pupils, parents; and one of ours for the religious the immediately above lines would appear to be written by Fr. Chevalier; the rest of the letter comes from E. Meyer, secretary to the General Council.

Fr. Superior,

Fr. Maillard has conveyed to us what passed between you in conversation, the proposal which you articulate about finding a way to come by an agreement which would satisfy everyone.

The arrangement suggested offers too much in the way of what is inconvenient for us to accept, since it would set up two authorities in the one house, leading to serious problems, you will understand, and thereby hindering the advancement of the new college.

But we are agreeable, insofar as it is possible, to have Fr. Vaudon appointed prefect of studies, making every effort to publicize and support this among the pupils and families. But there can only be the one Superior, since that is absolutely necessary for the smooth running of the establishment. As for teachers it will be easy to find them. If we cannot provide all of them, we shall call upon the good will of the Archbishop. Be assured, Father, that nobody more than ourselves wishes to be acceptable to His Grace, safeguarding his authority among the clergy and the public at large. We regard it as a duty to support him on all occasions, follow his advice, respect him and exhibit commitment without reservations.

The Archbishop himself will officially name the new personnel in the religious weekly and everything will look as if it came from his initiative, being looked upon by the whole diocese as the organizer of this college, and thereby full satisfaction will be given to the gentleman involved with administration from the Saint Peter Society, as well as the inhabitants of Châteauroux. All opposing attitudes will cease and His Grace will, in one and the same arrangement of circumstances, regain all his legitimate, requisite, influence. We shall be very pleased to have helped in bringing this outcome about.

Hoping, Father, that you will be able to endorse and complete this proposal, we ask you to be assured of our respectful good wishes in C.J.

On behalf of the General Council,
E. Meyer, Secretary.

Father Superior,

I cannot thank you enough for all the interest and concern you so kindly have for us. Permit me to speak quite frankly to you and for yourself alone. I do not rightly understand why our Congregation should have to suffer because of our refusal to take charge of the Châteauroux college under the conditions laid down. You leave us to understand that the Archbishop, committed wholeheartedly to regular religious in the religious Congregations of his diocese, would be drawn to vengeful actions, unbecoming to his character. No, the Archbishop is too good and loyal for such-like attributes to be associated with him by us. If he had acted in a fatherly, considerate, way from the beginning, matters would have not reached the crisis stage where we see them today. Nothing would have been more easy than for His Grace to bring us together with him and let us amicably know his wishes. But not at all! As soon as I sent His Grace the official document from the St. Peter committee offering us the college, His Grace replied: "Since at their last meeting these gentlemen requested that I myself appoint the director of the college, I named Fr. Vaudon as Superior and Fr. Pouvreau of Chezal-Benoît as having administrative tenure. I made this decision known to the president of the committee. Mr. du Vernay replied that the meeting never thought of giving such a right to the Archbishop, they did not wish to place the establishment under the immediate control of His Grace, and would not accept a Superior as director just like that. The upshot of all this was that they preferred to postpone the opening of the college."

From the other side my Council confrères, seeing that they were being deprived of the right conferred on them by the Constitutions, refused to accept Fr. Vaudon's appointment for the reason that, despite all his qualities, he did not (for them) have the requisite aptitude for taking charge of a college. They offered him to the Archbishop, by way of being agreeable, in the secondary role of prefect of studies. His Grace turned down this proposal.

Seeing that matters had taken a wrong turn, I confidentially wrote to the Archbishop asking him to send Fr. Martel to Issoudun in order to find common ground. His Grace did not reply to me. Why does His Grace place so much faith in Fr. Vaudon? What advantages are to be gained by having him? He is, you will say, his man, and he has confidence in him, which is to say that His Grace is not worried about us! Fr. Vaudon, however committed he may be to the Archbishop, is not bigger than us. We understand that His Grace's authority must be safeguarded, and nothing should have stopped him, having discussed matters with us, from officially appointing, and publicizing in the religious weekly, the college's teaching personnel. By providing letters of incorporation for those of my confrères who would be employed there (in the college), everything would be safeguarded with respect to the Government, and His Grace could have looked upon this establishment as his own. Accordingly the same advantage would ensue in permitting us to appoint the personnel, with nothing disadvantageous likely to arise. Every problem would have disappeared.

We didn't ask for the Châteauroux college, since it is a burden on us. If we were prepared to accept it, it was principally to be helpful to the Archbishop, to take him out of the impasse in which he found himself in relation to the Indre and bring over to his side alienated people. We are without any reason placed in this false situation for us insofar as it is directed at His Grace. It would be unjust and unjustified for us to become victimized. If, therefore, matters fall through, we disengage from all responsibility. Fr. Maillard will take those for ordination to Bourges on Friday, going directly to the major seminary. He will deferentially hear from you whatever you may wish to say to him and pass it on to us. May it be conciliatory!

No date, but relevant to the present state of letters.

Your Grace,

We gratefully thank you for supporting the wishes of the lay society of St. Pierre, that our Congregation be given charge of the Châteauroux college, and the confidence you place in us. We accepted from the beginning, but under the expressed condition that we ourselves, as our Constitutions lay down, would appoint the teaching staff, particularly so the Superior. This is how we dealt with our Issoudun college and that of Chezal-Benoît which are, both one and the other, under your kind patronage. It will be like this, also, with regard to the Châteauroux college if Your Grace endorses our legitimate wishes. He must by now know us well enough to be aware that he can depend on our commitment, and that we would never do anything which could lessen his authority, rights; quite to the contrary in fact.

Arising from our correspondence, Your Grace, it is easy for you to gather that we always stated that in keeping with our Constitutions it was our right to appoint ourselves the Superior of this new foundation, whoever among us we would think the most suitable, and that, as well, we would request Your Grace to supplement our teachers with one or two young priests of his choice so that the diocese would be represented there. In this arrangement, Fr. Vaudon would take his place as prefect of studies.

Becoming aware, Your Grace, that you absolutely hold to your contention that Fr. Vaudon be the Superior, we wrote to you that we would rather not take over the college than accept it under these conditions. In the event that the college would pass into Your Grace's hands, and that we would pass over its direction, we stated that we would not oppose a request from you to have Fr. Vaudon and would be willing to make him available to you, in which case he, in your name and specific responsibility Your Grace, would be in charge in every respect, that is to say material and moral leadership.

But made aware from Your Grace's reply that we have not been understood, we were at pains and in haste to write on February 25 a letter in which we set out clearly our thinking, which has never deviated since the beginning of this discussion, since it is a question of principles from which we cannot deviate. If, then, Your Grace wants, and we do not doubt it, the Saint Pierre undertaking to be taken on by us, meeting the wishes of the town council and the people of Châteauroux, we are completely willing to undertake it on condition that we, ourselves, appoint the personnel and that includes the Superior, making exception for one or two young clergy whom Your Grace might wish to associate with us. We would do everything possible, Your Grace, to see to it that you would never have anything to regret. We would be the first to pay His Grace all the deference merited and make him aware of everything which would be of interest, and concern, to him following from this undertaking. We do not think that his authority or influence would suffer in any way. Needing to reply to the kind invitation which the St. Peter Society formally made to us, with Your Grace's agreement, you will readily understand that we cannot act otherwise than to let the President know about the state of the negotiations, writing to him about the unexpected difficulties which have arisen and inform him that, if Your Grace persists in his resolve, we shall be obliged to disengage from the Châteauroux college offer.

From today, Your Grace, aware of your formally expressed wish, we shall no longer enter into any communication with the Saint Peter Society. As for the public at large, they will never get to know anything from us.

As for the past, we are sorry that we cannot go back to where we were before.

We have not included here any personnel assessment. If Your Grace wants it so, we shall remain silent and leave until later any negotiation with these gentlemen.

So the letter abruptly end.

Paris 1899

Specific day unknown, but following on the previous letter.

Your Grace,

The letter Your Grace wrote to me, with its refusal to assist at our September 8 feast, or even be represented there by one of his senior vicars (deans), greatly and deeply depressed me. It is the first time, Your Grace, in 30 years that the great Our Lady of the Sacred Heart pilgrimage, which your distinguished predecessors regarded as one of the glories of the diocese, will not lay eyes on its local Archbishop.

It has to be, Your Grace, serious reasons for being displeased with us which led you to behave like this. Is it our refusal to make available to you Fr. Vaudon as Superior of the Châteauroux college? Your Grace knows that it was nothing like capriciousness which influenced us in these circumstances, but rather conscience alone. This decision which we humbly put before our Cardinal Protector met with his wholehearted approval. If we accepted the direction of the Châteauroux school which we at first declined, Your Grace, it was due to the repeated insistence of Father Pasquier, head of the major seminary, who made it clear to us that it was the only way of drawing towards you the more important families of the Indre, and make possible for the authority of the primary religious leader that prestige and influence to which he has a right. It was, then, out of regard for, and deference to, Your Grace, whom we esteem as a father, that we gave our word to the Saint Peter committee. We were far from thinking that this act of commitment would one day be held against us and make us victimized.

Fr. Pasquier has again written to me stating that "the Archbishop would be making another proposal to you by which he places great store: fall in with his wishes if you are to regain his good will". Your letter, Your Grace, requesting me to let you have Fr. Vaudon for as long as Your Grace needs him arrived at this juncture. Happy to be accommodating to Your Grace, and without disregarding our Constitutions, we hasten to meet your wishes, hoping in this way to overlook the past insofar as it displeased you and regain your good will, which we place great store by from the depths of our being. You may have, perhaps, thought, Your Grace, that we instigated the approach which the Saint Peter committee thought it should put before Your Grace to make you well disposed to their project. These gentlemen acted on their own initiative and we have always been kept in the dark about their visit to the Archbishop and appeal to Rome.

I would be very upset, Your Grace, if you thought that we were involved in any way as regards all that has taken place. It would be painful to think that he who represents the Lord on earth and is our father would completely reject us and refuse to look upon us as his children. We have always insisted, and again do so, that we shall accept nothing in your diocese without Your Grace's formal approval.

I hope that Your Grace in the light of these explanations, as frank as they are loyal, will be kind enough to extend your good will to us, something very much appreciated by us. If indeed, and not at all in keeping with our intention Your Grace, we have caused you pain, we most humbly ask pardon of you. We have but one wish: to continue devoting ourselves body and soul to the diocese under your wise and fatherly direction, as we have done over 45 years. I can assure you that you haven't priests more respectful of your authority, more anxious to support your initiatives and accomplish good, under the impulse of Your Grace. As a gift, contribution, towards the feast, Your Grace, provide us with a plenary indulgence, manifest your good will to us and if you cannot come to the September 8 feast, be good enough to be represented there by one of your more important Vicar Generals.

It is with this expectation, Your Grace, that I request your paternal blessing as I ask you to accept my deepest good wishes and the assurance of my complete devotedness in C.J.

Your Grace,

I hasten to send Your Grace the original copies of the two documents you are looking for.

Since you are shortly due to pay your ad limina visit (five-yearly to Rome) we shall be delighted, if you so wish, to make available to you our Piazza Navona house while you are staying in Rome; you can look upon it as being your own. Since Your Grace must present to the Holy Father a report on the work and activities of your diocese, in which our own must figure, you will allow me to provide Your Grace with some documentation which can be of use to him:

1. Total obedience of the Missionary of the Sacred Heart in mind and heart to the Supreme Pontiff not alone in matters of faith and morals, but equally so when he commands or gives advice in the social or political spheres. This is itself the wording of our last General Chapter when drawing up our Directory which is a presentation of our Constitutions. Since our institute began we have never forsaken this regulation which is our strength and support, and that which calls for respect and submissiveness to their Lordships the Bishops in keeping with the sacred Canons and our Constitutions, as well as the established powers, after the example of Our Lord.

2. Availability to the Bourges Archdiocese.

A. Preaching and mission ministry. In my name here are the missions and retreats given since Archbishop Servonnet's arrival.

B. Commitment to the clergy, priestly associations, etc.

C. Issoudun: Charge of a college; different undertakings for the care of the faithful and the sick, the support of young girls, young people; apostolate to the military, etc.

Chevalier left out in this first draft:

Absolute obedience of the MSCs to the Holy See in heart and mind, or to pontifical directives such as our Constitutions and rules, as a strict requirement.

What the Archpriest of Missionaries of the Sacred Heart has done for the parish (Issoudun).

Part reconstruction of the Saint-Cyr Issoudun church by Reverend Father Chevalier.
Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

For quite sometime Issoudun lacked a sufficient number of clergy and work in the parish suffered in consequence. When the parish became vacant in 1871, Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne decided to associate it with the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart Society already established in this town. He was convinced that this arrangement would profit the parish and in this way one would avoid in the future any conflicts, always regrettable, between the presbytery and the Sacred Heart house whose beneficent impact was beginning to be felt. Following mature consideration, he (the Archbishop) appointed Fr. Chevalier parish priest of Saint-Cyr, representing his Congregation, at the beginning of 1872.

The part of the church called parish was in a shocking state. Falling down from age, it was more like a barn than a religious building. The first task of the newly-appointed archpriest, following a meeting with the members of the fabric (construction) council, was to undertake rebuilding. The total cost, including the façade and sides, reached the figure of 500,000 francs or so. Aware that not everything could be done all at once, the municipal council and the Government refusing to contribute anything, work was focused on the new part which remains to this day, the expenses evaluated at 250,000 francs. What was subscribed, despite the good will, scarcely came to 160,000 francs. Not wishing to exceed this sum, the side aisles and chapels would have to be held over. But once work started the architect said that the side naves and the chapels should be done at the same time if the solidity and security of the building were not to be compromised (weakened), all of which created a deficit of 80,000 francs. The building committee and the archpriest each jointly met the charges. There remains to be done the vaults, the side pavements and the side chapels. Fr. Chevalier would himself wish to take on this additional expense and much else besides which shall be briefly listed here in answer to those who might be tempted to accuse the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and their Superior of not having sacrificed themselves in any way for the Issoudun parish.

since 1872 for the Issoudun church and parish.

1.	The first subscription went towards the partial reconstruction of the Saint-Cyr Church	10,000 francs
2.	The second subscription went towards the vaulting of the central nave	3,000 francs
3.	Towards the vaults, the paving, the sculptures on the lower side and the chapels	23,000 francs
4.	To meet some of the debt remaining for upkeep 15,000 francs
5.	A subscription in our Annals in support of the church and to the detriment of our own undertakings	10,000 francs
6.	Towards the decoration of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart chapel, Saint-Cyr	3,000 francs
7.	Towards the decorations of the St. Joseph chapel and the altar rail	500 francs
8.	Towards the repair of the old sacristy and paving, etc. 7,000 francs
9.	Towards the Our Lady of Piety statue	400 francs
10.	Towards the upkeep of three supporting curates, each being given 600 francs per annum over 27 years	48,600 francs
11.	Supervisor for the parish appointed and directed by the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart at a yearly salary of 15,000 francs over 16 years, at least	24,000 francs
12.	Subscription in favour of the non-state schools in charge of the brothers and sisters, 600 francs each year over 18 years	10,800 francs
13.	A contribution towards aiding in perpetuity the Little Sisters of the Sick	1,200 francs
14.	Towards repair and improvement of the presbytery, aside from the structure	4,000 francs
	The sum in total comes to	160,500 francs

Ad nos quidem pertinet hunc cultum exercere et vehementer efflagitamus a Superioribus et Directoribus operum a nostris susceptorum ut hoc exercitium inter suos alumnos introducant et devotas personas in mundo degentes ad illud perficiendum excitent.

Bonum nobis visum est varios actus efficiendos ad novam formam redigere, ita ut praecipui sensus, qui in unoquoque Cultus perpetui exercitio exprimi possunt non tantum, ut antea, summatim suggerantur, sed componantur integre, et sub quadam cum S. Corde colloqui forma proponantur. Breve tempus sufficit ad illos actus perlegendos hora cuique opportuna, mente simul occupata sensibus qui ad cultum praesentis diei referuntur.

Imo alius, et perfectior quidam modus hunc cultum implendi proponitur. Unaquaeque persona cujusque septem personarum seriei unum quaque die exercitium perficit, ita ut a serie exercitia septem varia quotidie compleantur; sequenti die unaquaeque persona sequens exercitium peragit, et ita deinceps continuo cursu. Sic cultus quaque die totaliter impletur. Attamen primus modus retineri potest, ex quo cultus totaliter completur tantum una vice in spatio septem dierum, quum unus actus quaque die tantum perficitur, nempe ab una ex seriei personis. In romano rescripto nulla propria forma hunc cultum implendi praescribitur.

Perfectionem modum nostri evidenter amplectentur, et sic finem suae vocationis melius assequuntur. Id agentes divino Cordi magis placebimus, et honore peramanter reddito, istum nobis fontem aperiemus, ex quo fluent pretiosissimi favores. Omnes sciant hoc esse nobis ardentissimum desiderium, ut sic Cultus perpetuus apud nos perficiatur. Nihil sumus, nihil in futuro erimus, nisi sincere et toti simus huic SS. Cordi devoti.

Omnes benedictiones SS. Cordis in te deprecor, Reverende Pater, et tibi tuisque meos attestor paternos sensus dilectionis in C.J.

Nihil superioribus magis cordi esse quam fidelis earum regularum observatio quae speciatim ad eos pertinent. Sic enim agendo vere suis praebunt exemplo subditis. Jamvero quum Constitutiones nostrae praecipiant Superioribus ut tempore

My Dear Lord,

You have all arrived safe and sound, God be praised! Praised be the Sacred Heart, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph!

I am not in the least surprised by the problems you are encountering; they were to be foreseen. Be confident, however; the good Lord will make them vanish and your mission will begin to flourish and produce abundant fruit. Kindly thank on my behalf dear Fr. Raynaud and little Fr. Quoirier for the nice letters I had from them; we shall do our utmost to get the statues the latter wants. Extend my very best wishes to all your valiant confrères, whom I bless with all my heart and for all of whom I pray a great deal. Pray likewise for me. Look after your health and do nothing imprudent.

Please accept, Your Lordship, my best wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, June 12, 1899

Dear Mr. de Bonneval,

It is my pleasure to present you with the Religious History of Issoudun which has just come out. You will receive it with this letter.

The Vatican has requested information from our Rome procure about the intention behind the letter from the Châteauroux committee. I wrote asking that a reply be given stating that we willingly would take over the college if the Archbishop approves.

You have read no doubt the letter written by the Pope to our Archbishop freshly affirming the pontifical demands on the issue of siding with the Republic. This letter testifies to the wholehearted confidence which His Grace instils in Leo XIII. I greatly doubt if the Sovereign Pontiff would go against the Archbishop's intentions. Before you reply, the Archbishop would need to be consulted. The parish priest of Montargis is urgently trying to find out what is happening since, as he remarks, time is passing by. What can we say to him?

I saw among the names of those compromised by the Auteuil affair that of Mr. de Meur's son (uncertain spelling) and Mr. Balsan's nephew. I must congratulate Mr. Bernard on his having refrained from acting in a matter which would lead nowhere. I was delighted to read of your election as president of the charity bazaar committee.

The committee of works met today to consider two issues: first to ascertain if there is to be any difference as between the curtains for a first class and a second class hearse. The charge list does not refer to it. The second question is that of knowing if, in the case of interment and first class funeral services, one should request that families should look after the funeral hangings, which are spread all over the church up to the main door, and decorate all the lamps.

At this time, and as far into the next century as the time of Vatican Council II, there were five different arrangements for funerals in France, depending on wealth and status.

These gentlemen's view is that the tariff in vogue up to now should remain and leave the rest as optional. There will be a meeting on the first Sunday in July to take a definite decision. We are expecting you to be present.

Please accept my respectful good wishes, Count, in C.J.

Fr. Chevalier was not in Issoudun.

Dear Count,

I want to thank you for your endeavours. It was to be foreseen that His Grace would not align himself with this first appeal of the Holy Father. He also would like to put forward his reasons for refusal. But all these endeavours are a strain on the patience of Montargis. What can be done? If the nunciature, following its latest report in our favour, addressed to the Holy See, thinks that it has brought about a successful outcome, we shall be breaking off relations with the Bishop of Orléans. If the nuncio thinks Fr. Carrière's presence is needed in Rome to bring about a favourable outcome, I give him full permission. Get in touch with him. I leave for Issoudun tomorrow morning. I am inviting Fr. Carrière to come to Issoudun on Thursday to be present at the Council meeting taking place that morning.

Please accept my grateful thanks together with the assurance of my deepest respect in C.J.

Issoudun, July 4, 1899

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I thank you for all your affectionate good wishes and the warmth of feeling which you convey in your letter. On your recommendation we shall willingly accept the young priest about whom you wrote to me. Be good enough to ask him to make his official request himself. We also would prefer if he made his novitiate at Chezal-Benoît. Tell him to bring with him all his testimonial letters if he has spent time in different dioceses. I would like to tell you my dear friend in confidence that I am beginning to feel the weight of the years on me, as well as the pains and aches, and, accordingly, I am intent on handing in notice of my withdrawal as Superior General to avoid any problems which might arise after my death. I shall not be unhappy to know while still alive whoever replaces me, and help to lead him in the difficult role he will have to undertake. I informed the Assistants about my proposal, all of whom approved of it, on condition, however, that I remain at the head of the Congregation as long as I live with an aide named with the right of succession. I would have preferred it otherwise, but the General Chapter will decide. I am, then, about to call this Chapter with the approval of the Assistants, for Thursday of Easter week, 1900, and I commend this event to your prayers.

Bishop Navarre's wishes have been met; the Holy See, on my recommendation, has made Fr. Alain de Boismenu his coadjutor with the right of succession. This is a heartening choice and everyone here approves. He is one of our best people sub omni respectu (in every respect).

R<sup>mo</sup> Patri Superiori

Reverendis Patribus et dilectissimis Fratribus Societatis Missionariorum SS. Cordis Jesu, in eodem Corde, salutem.

Jam pridem consilium me sollicitat, quod saepe coram Salvatore nostro in mente revolutum et sacro ejus Cordi, Beatissimaeque Matri commendatum, nunc vobis aperire constitui, ut, sub eorum piissima tutela, pro bono profectuque Societatis nostrae, brevi ad effectum perducatur.

Jam vires aetate et infirmitatibus attenuatas, diesque meos numeratos esse sentio. Antequam tamen ex hoc vita discedam, gauderem profecto si mihi Capitulum generale Successorem eligeret, cui libenter officium multis abhinc annis susceptum committerem.

Magno sane afficerer solatio si illum cognoscere illique cuncta Societatis nostrae negotia pandere benignus praestaverit mihi Deus.

Hoc quidem prudens, opportunum, atque, in his rerum temporumque adjunctis, sapienter excogitatum videtur consilium, quippe quod incoeptum bonum perficiet ac, Sacro Jesu inspirante Corde, parvee Societati vires novas infundet, reclusa perturbationibus et motibus via quae, post obitum primi Superioris generalis, forte pertimescenda essent.

Consilium meum firmissimum Assistentibus jam patefecit Patribus, quibus bene probatum est, sub ea tamen conditione, qua, non Successor nominetur, sed Vicarius generalis mihi adjungatur cum jure futurae successionis.

Itaque, eorumdem Assistentium unanimi consensu, ad Capitulum generale, his nostris litteris, eos omnes convocare statuimus qui, juxta Constitutiones, eidem interesse jure debent.

Res igitur ita disponere satagite ut, in principe societatis domo, omnes, Exolduni aditis feria quinta post diem Paschalis (19 Aprilis) anni D. 1900, quo die, Deo favente, Capitulum incoeptum declarabitur.

Si qui vero longinquitatis aut valetudinis vel quavis alia gravi de causa adire nequiverint, quam primum nos moneant velimus.

Praeter electionem Vicarii Generalis, Assistentium ac Procuratoris apud S. Sedem, ejusdem Capituli erit ad examen revocare, atque sua firmare auctoritate Directorium particulare Provincialis, Superioris localis, Oeconomum tum generalis tum particularis, Studentium, Novitiorum et Fratrum Coadjutorum, nec non Scholarum Apostolicarum, ac praesertim nostrarum apud infideles missionum.

Quae omnia quanta Patrum cura ac studio agitari mereantur neminem latet.

Firma cordi inhaeret spes, dilectissimi fratres, summum ex indicto Capitulo profecturum esse bonum, ad totius Societatis incrementum, cujus jam Dei benignitate et gratia, optimus profectus magis magisque in dies augeri videtur.

“Ametur ubique terrarum Cor Jesu Sacratissimum” Nobilissimae his verbis; recordemur missionis nostrae, eidemque vires ac vitam penitus dicere studeamus.

Paternos animi sensus, quos multoties jam optime nostis, denuo, his litteris, manifestare nobis pergratum est.

Valete in Domino, qui sua vos gratia jugiter benedicat ac sospitet.

R<sup>mus</sup> Pater Praepositus Generalis, consentientibus Assistentibus, hac facultate utens, convocat ad futurum Capitulum omnes Superiores provinciales et locales in exercitio, necnon delegatos quorum numerus pro unaquaque provincia per decreta specialia determinatur.

My Lord,

Among the priests to whom we habitually send mass offerings there is... X... from your diocese, I shall be most grateful to you... if you might let me know if I should continue to send him on offerings. I have no reason to mistrust this ecclesiastic, but we have become victimized by a priest with no conscience who, while requesting offerings from here, requested them at the same time from other sanctuaries, and as a result he was in receipt of three or four times more than he could take care of.

Having alighted on this sacrilegious fraudulent behaviour, our esteemed Superior General, with the support of his Council, has decided to ask for testimonial letters from all the bishops of those priests to whom we send mass stipends.

In expectation of hearing a word from you about the priest below-named from your diocese, with deepest respect, I have the honour to be your most humble servant in Corde Jesu.

Dear Father,

Fr. Jouët is very insistent that his name should accompany all the writings which have come from his pen and are being sold in our Congregation. He has already written to us about this, complaining about the books whether in French or in other languages being named without any mention of the author.

I would appeal to you, then, to take note of these remarks (complaints) and also include the author's name with the book's title, whether in our Annals or catalogues, or on the cover of the book itself if you are presenting a new edition.

Ladies and my dear children.

Prize-giving is a day of rejoicing not only for the youngsters who are looking forward to long restful days of agreeable pastimes, but also for the parents. The latter are happy to be informed of their children's progress, to hear their names called out and have their medals of success displayed on their chests, with the assurance that the sacrifices made have not been wholly in vain. The teachers themselves share in this joyful moment, they themselves after the lengthy, tiring impact of the school year feeling the need to restore their exhausted forces, to find themselves in quiet peace and recollection. But that which gives them, in particular, quiet satisfaction is to make over to mother and father their wiser, more mature, better educated daughters exhibiting an assembly of qualities which add to their happiness. There is the worthy aim to which they commit themselves and on which they focus all their efforts. Any education which does not achieve this aim would be incomplete and deceptive. Incomplete when it concentrates only on the development of certain qualities, false when it loses sight of the role the youngsters will have to play later in life. This question of education is a crucial one. Consequently, I want to discuss it with you with all the attention it deserves.

I.

Some teachers convince themselves that all education consists of instruction, their pupils knowing how to write in beautiful letters and faultless handwriting the French language, and that they also are in possession of the elements of arithmetic, geometry, as well as knowing by heart French history, and are continuously conscious of the geographical features of the whole world, as well as chemistry, physics, geology and indeed physiology. The teachers will be perfectly happy with all this. They will not, however, be too disturbed when they see the pupils disobedient, naughty, vain, egotistic, looking down upon those they consider under-achievers, unable to get more out of themselves and undertake the least sacrifice. Such teachers only think about development of the brain and memory, neglecting character formation of the heart, mind and will. Experience has shown us that this kind of education provides sterility in the pursuit of the good and all too often a fecund propensity to evil. Since public (state) education has been exempted from the impact of religion, the young have become more flighty, insolent, more ridiculous in their dress and appearance and, let it be said, more shameless in their behaviour (morals).

That's not the way it is with you, my dear children, since your good and excellent teachers in no way whatsoever are negligent in exercising your intelligence and memory, the success in your examinations a testimony to the serious direction and concern they bring to your studies. But besides the emphasis on the cultivation of intellect and memory, they have not overlooked the exercises intended to develop the heart and mind. It is for this reason they are all the more pleased for inspiring you with good aspirations as they are for providing you with new knowledge. It is for this outcome that they commit themselves with so much care to the overcoming of your dislikes, the counteracting of your defects, making you accustomed to be kind, thoughtful, humble, simple, affectionate, always ready to commit yourself to the service of people. It is for these reasons that you learn to esteem and respect virtue and stamp out what is morally unbecoming, whatever its seductive proponents out there have, alluringly, to offer. It is for this purpose that in shaping you by a series of actions to overcome yourselves in small matters, your will is boosted in such a way that one day it becomes capable of supporting without flinching the demands of work and the trials of life. It is in this way, my dear children, that your education here will bring about in you that complete formation which, giving rise to a perfect balance in all your faculties, will make you accomplished young girls and women.

II.

The education made available to you in this house has yet another advantage in that it prepares you for the role you have to fulfil in the world.

It is a grievous error to think that youngsters must simply learn in order to know, without being concerned about the use which the knowledge being imparted to them can be put. From this erroneous idea there arises this sad consequence that everything must be presented to the young girls. From this it follows that there are schedules which are too demanding for them to be adequately carried out! Their spirit is crushed under an avalanche of ideas for which they will never have the slightest use. This kind of education is as false as it is dangerous. For the most part the results are negligible, and if there is something achieved it doesn't amount to a great deal other than creating the downgraded, the semi-literate, those taking too great a pride in what little they know, ambitious for a status which they will never reach, pedantically ambitious in their overblown minds, let it be said, looking down on a more lovely, ordinary type of work, which would assure their livelihood. They think they have achieved something, a great deal, when they have managed to get a certificate of studies, a simple diploma or a higher one. And all of this latter leads to misery and disaster for the holders of these diplomas in our large cities, with expectations of positions which are slow in coming and which very often do not come at all.

A truly satisfying education is that which prepares the youngster for the situation in which he must live. And first of all, since every human being is on earth in order to reach heaven, his whole life is subordinated to the acquisition of this aim and, consequently, there is no rightful education other than that which makes one virtuous, drawing towards the keeping of God's and the Church's commandments as preparatory to the enjoyment of eternal happiness.

There you have the divine plan; and all education, beginning with that appropriate to the most humble circumstances of society and that which meets the higher expectations of society, must be drawn towards the supreme and common purpose of all human life; otherwise, it is false and radically wanting because it alienates the child from the one absolutely indispensable good. This common aim, willed by the Creator, does not come in the way of each one here below having a specific end and aim in keeping with his circumstances. Education, properly understood, must, therefore, prepare the child for the way of life to which he belongs and not for another kind. This basic, social, truth is not always understood and it is because it has been misunderstood that we are witnesses to so many scandals.

There is a tendency nowadays, against which we cannot sufficiently raise our voices, that is to say wishing to provide young girls with the same education as young boys under the pretext of equality; it's thus absurdly ridiculous because the roles of men and women no more mesh than their aptitudes and tastes. This is to go against nature, pitch blame on the Creator and reverse the plans and ordering of divine Providence.

The woman in God's designs is wholly given to the care of the family and the formation of the mind and heart of her children. She is there to animate the interior of the home and work towards creating peace, harmony, propriety, order and economic stability which helps towards living comfortably in the most modest of homes. The woman is blessed with a refined delicacy and sensitivity of spirit often lacking in a man, as well as special foresight and very keen sensitivity, qualities all which make her queen of the home where she rules and knows how to cope with the most rebellious spirits. Her role is pleasing enough for her to be wholly content with it. If, unfortunately, she leaves aside her innate inclinations and allows herself to be led along by the folly of pride, launching herself in politics or in the conduct of affairs not at all part of her (innate) capabilities...

Lecture at the September 8 banquet.

"It is after mid-day. The activities of the morning are over and in order to be ready for those coming up in the afternoon, everybody goes off to eat and relax. While the pilgrims eat in the park area and in the town's hotels, all the priests, with some laity deeply associated with the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, are invited to share in a fraternal meal in a huge tent decorated for the occasion with garlands and flowers and where there more than two hundred ecclesiastics who were pleased to accept Fr. Chevalier's invitation, he, the founder of the pilgrimage, delivering during the dessert a lively tract from which you will kindly allow me to offer you a large extract."

The immediate above comes from an article by Fr. Bazet, MSC, in the 1899 Annals, p. 554-556.

Very Reverend Father, His Excellency the Vicar General, Gentlemen, your presence here in the circumstances we are living through is very consoling and greatly encouraging for us. The demonstration of deep respect which you have never failed to show us since our undertaking began and continued to grow, demonstrates to us that you love the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and look upon them as your own. They are yours, effectively; are they not children of this lovely Bourges countryside beginning under the powerful impact of the Sacred Heart in the very centre of this vast diocese in the ancient city of Issoudun, one time rival of Bourges, and capital of the Berry? And if the Society has put down its roots in your soil and extends its branches far away, it is due to the care and active support of one of the most distinguished and loved of our leaders, Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, whose name will always be held in blessed memory among us.

It is still yours, this undertaking, in its expansion, because it was the sons of the Berry who were first to make it known overseas in the far away Oceania islands where a priest had never before ventured. Attentive only to their heroism and prompted by their faith they went out, facing the prospect of death, among cannibalistic people, to give them Jesus Christ. Was it not a native of Sancerre, tired and exhausted, succumbing under the burden of his work, who was the first to die there, 6,000 leagues away from his country, in the furrow watered by his tears and sweat? "Here lies in the Lord Fr. Louis Vatan, Missionary of the Sacred Heart, from the Bourges diocese." His death, or more rightly his martyrdom, slow and painful, was that of a saint. The natives themselves, venerate him and from this time onwards these lands, otherwise so primitive, have become Christian and the name of the Berry resonates there as one of blessings.

Again, our undertakings are yours through the title, at once so lovely, wonderful, so gentle and powerful, of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, accorded to the Virgin Mary. The heavenly angels have taken it to the four corners of the world, and there are the 18 million associates who acclaim this each day and cannot but be aware that the Berry gave rise to it and that it is to its glory that it is the cradle of this devotion.

You can see for yourselves, Gentlemen, that we make up one and the same family, all of us working the part of the divine field which has been entrusted to us, you the apostles on the inside, we on the outside. There exists, thereby, a current of regard and appreciation which nothing can destroy. You have more than once shown us that you share in our joys and setbacks. I would even say that we have never experienced better your warm devotedness than when God sent us trials and in this manner you gave the lie to the famous lines of Ovid: "Donec eris felix, multos numerabis amicos; Tempora si fuerint nubila, solus eris." (As long as things are thriving with you, you will count many friends, but when clouds make your horizon overcast, you will find yourself on your own.) I am delighted to extend to you here all my appreciation.

I sum up, Gentlemen, and state that our Society and its undertakings are yours, our missions yours also, and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is wholly yours. Coming here, you find yourselves among your own, among friends who love you and brothers who are warmly committed to you.

Issoudun, October 1, 1899

Dear Fr. Michel,

You write to tell me that you have sent to Rome through the intermediary of the Apostolic Nuncio your request for release from vows on the advice of a canon lawyer who may be adept in canon law generally, but not so as regards canon law concerning religious. You have taken the longest route and your request officially comes to me ad informationem.

You are aware that your celebret is not valid for more than a month and if, when it expires, you haven't found a bishop you are forbidden a sacris (to perform public priestly offices). This is a serious matter. When parting from me on September 19 you told me that the Bishop of Saint-Dié had made an appointment with you for the 20th and that you simply had to be there. However, I know that you went nowhere near him and went to Paris after leaving Issoudun. Why this delay and lack of openness? You write to me and give me no address and I am forced to send you a letter in expectation to your brother in the Vosges... What are you doing in Paris; who are you staying with? I don't know. Besides, the canon lawyer you consulted should have informed you that, if you are not released from your vows, you still remain under your Superior's jurisdiction and he has the right to know where you are and what you do, since you cannot forget that you are religiously bound to obedience and poverty by virtue of your vows. All this aggravates further your situation which cannot be more irregular than it is. You have undertaken the wrong (morally) route. How are you going to extricate yourself? I do not know. I continue speaking to you as a father and friend! I pray for you.

Cheerio, Fr. Michel; yours devotedly in C.J.

Issoudun, October 10, 1899

Dear Father Pouvreau,

We have shown great confidence in you by appointing you the director of the philosophy scholasticate. I am duty bound to make known to you, in keeping with instructions from Rome, that the scholasticate "must be a continuation of the novitiate". This means in effect that our young men must not be formed in knowledge alone, but before all else inculcated in serious piety, an unceasing desire for perfection, a spirit of prayer, obedience, poverty, mortification and sacrifice. We must make them truly religious, that is to say men of God and devotedness, disciplined and edifying, apostles of the Sacred Heart aspiring only for the glory of God and the salvation of souls, in a word saintly. It is only on this condition that they can be useful to the Society and anchored in solid foundations.

How is this to be achieved? By faithful observance of our Constitutions and the common directory. Enforce this with rigour. Therein you have our strength and our salvation. Hitherto there has been, perhaps, all too much outside of this way and one must get back to it, cost what it may. You need, then, to be particularly vigilant and continuously overseeing. It is your duty to keep yourself informed as to whether or not the rule is being well observed and call to order those who are deviating from it. If any are not responsive to your advice, let it be known to Fr. Ramot, your Superior.

See to it that they all go walking together, or in a group of six at the very least, to the destination which you yourself will take care to name, and that they be accompanied, insofar as it is possible, either by yourself or one of your dedicated lecturers. Young men need to feel that they are being supervised and subjected to disciplinary measures. It is because these wise procedures were disregarded in recent years that some have been involved with indiscretionary behaviour which has not been at all edifying. You will not allow walks other than those in accordance with the rule, and if exceptional circumstances arise you will speak to the Superior and follow his advice. You will not allow celebrations in the dining-room except on those feast days mentioned in the directory. On those days alone will there be had the supplementary plates (dishes) laid down by the rule. Liqueurs of any kind and quality (vintage) wines are expressly forbidden. It is formally forbidden to smoke either in the house or while walking or in private. I am aware that there have been abuses as regards this matter and I hope there will be no repetition. Watch out for this very carefully. All types of comedy and theatre, fireworks and the like, are formally forbidden since this kind of entertainment only leads to dissipation and is not appropriate for religious.

If there are activities or abuses which are contrary to the rule, it is your duty to get rid of them. See to it that nothing like that takes place and that the vows of poverty and obedience are strictly observed. Help us, Father, to train these religious who will make the Society esteemed and become its strength and glory. May those who do not wish to go beyond half-way in their commitment, that is to say who abide by the rule only insofar as it pleases them, and ignore the rest without a scruple, take themselves off, since we have been undone far too much from the independence of some and the insubordination of others and it is time, now, to bring it to an end. Be very strict about particular friendships as it damages discipline and leads to a loss of vocations. You will do us a favour by telling us about those who behave in this way. I wrote to the Archbishop of Bourges requesting permission for our scholastics to wear the soutane. If he agrees, you will notify the Inspector. The reference here is to regulations involving the Church and state law in laicized 19th and 20th century France.

You may pass on this letter to your teaching staff so that they will help you to carry out the important role confided to you.

Cheerio, Father. I bless you and all the others in C.J.

To His Grace Pierre-Paul Servonnet, Archbishop of Bourges.

No date, but written towards the end of 1899

Proposal presented to Archbishop Servonnet about a novena to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart from January 1 to January 9, 1900, but turned down by him.

Your Grace,

The present moment is decisive! The agony of religious congregations is being prolonged, as by a miracle, for 2 years. The enemy impatiently waits for their last breath and, finding that it isn't coming quickly enough, it hastens to bring down the final blow of the axe. The sword which should destroy them is suspended over their heads. The light thread which holds it is at breaking-point. Are we going to do anything to push it aside? Our forces are feeble and helpless no doubt! But to whom can we turn for help? To the loving Heart of Jesus. It is in Him, as (Pope) Leo XIII has it, we must place our hopes. In eo collocando spes. (From the encyclical: The Consecration of the human race to the Sacred Heart.) Is not, in effect, this divine Heart the source of all graces! It is purposeless for us to go elsewhere to look since Heaven has provided this as a remedy for all our ills. Pius IX in a famous text stated that we would find in this divine Heart the protectiveness we need in all the dangers which threaten us "In eodem Corde tutissimum invenient et ab ingruentibus animae periculis effugium." (Decree consecrating the faithful to the Sacred Heart of Jesus.)

And what does Leo XIII say? That the Sacred Heart comes before us in these troubling times like a new Labarum (the imperial standard on which the Emperor Constantine features his name, a crown and a cross with the monogram J.C.) as an unfailing sign of victory. He invites us to place in Him all our hope, and then he adds that we must ask of Him and demand of His goodness our salvation. (Leo XIII; Encyclical consecrating the human race to the Sacred Heart.)

Accordingly, if they wish to escape death, religious congregations have no other means open to them than recourse to the Sacred Heart of Jesus!

But who will plead their cause eloquently with this adorable divine Heart and obtain victory? "There is only one creature who can do this," wrote St. Bernard, "the Virgin Mary. Her voice is always heard and she obtains from her Son's Heart whatever she asks for." (Chevalier doesn't provide the context.) Since this is the way it is, we call on her with confidence under her greatly expressive title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. (No-one is more likely to move His Heart and make Him well disposed to us.) This title, approved by the Holy See designating the accompanying devotion, calls to mind the influence which Jesus was pleased to grant His greatly favoured holy Mother over His adorable Heart. In this way He placed within her hands all the treasures flowing from her mission of mercy towards mankind. Decrevit Deus nihil dare nisi per Mariam. (It was God's will, wish, to give nothing except through Mary.) Testifying to the innumerable favours which Mary bestows on those who invoke her under her lovely title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Rome, in setting up her Association which presently numbers 18 million members spread throughout the world, acclaims her as the Patroness of difficult and hopeless causes: unica spes desperantium, the only hope left for those... (remainder of the sentence illegible).

Let us hasten to share with her our concerns which would seem to be so compromisingly disadvantaged: "As mother of God, she can do all things," St. Ephrem says; nothing is impossible for her. Omnia potes, tamquam Dei Mater; omnia vales ... nihil tibi, si vis, impossibile est. (St. Ephrem, Oratio 10 ad Deiparem, t.III, p349)

Inspired by these sentiments, we are drawn to put before you, and likewise to other congregations, a novena to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. One will recite morning and evening the "Remember You" to Our Lady followed by the Parce Domine. We ask in particular the communities who would like to participate in this novena to send us notice of their willingness, and we shall inscribe their names in a special register which, over 9 days, will be placed at the feet of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

O Sacred Heart of Jesus have pity on us!

Our Lady of the Sacred Heart intercede for us.

The reasons for the dissatisfaction and hostility of His Grace Archbishop Servonnet of Bourges in relation to the MSC Society.

1. While the See of Bourges was vacant, the Government put up for sale the Chezal-Benoît college which belonged to the episcopal jurisdiction. The initial sale price was for 70,000 francs. No buyer presented himself. At the second asking price the price sought was reduced to 50,000 francs. The Indre real estate society made a bid of 100 francs and the property and its outlets received an estimate of 50,100 francs.

This was the situation when the Archbishop took over his See. The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, with good will and as a gesture of favour to the new Archbishop, made available to him 10,000 francs as a welcoming gift, contribution. His Grace gratefully accepted this amount, not as a gift but rather as a contribution, since he alleged that the insurance company should pay at least 65,000 for this property which nobody wanted and His Grace always wanted us to be responsible for this shortfall in price. A baffling requirement. There you have the first reward (acknowledgement) for our commitment.

2. Madame Marchain, on her death, left 200,000 francs to her husband to set up a Catholic college at Châteauroux to be looked after by religious and he made known to Archbishop Servonnet his wife's wishes. His Grace made a claim on this money, offering to undertake himself the necessary work on the land belonging to the civil authorities under the pretext of his being head of the diocese and having the right to bank this sum of money. Mr. Marchain refused to accept this proposal – hence the anger, disappointment.

The Archbishop threatened him and, to this effect, wrote in the weekly religious paper a menacing, angry, letter. The leaseholder held his ground and the Archbishop took his chaplain away from him, threatening to close his chapel. This behaviour incensed all the many friends of the respected Mr. Marchain and so alienated the people and inhabitants of Châteauroux that all the financial resources were closed to him. Mr. Marchain, a man as generous as he is pious, then built on land belonging to the insurance society, of which he was an associate, a splendid college in the expectation of better times. In these circumstances the Archbishop opened a secondary school in a house belonging to Mr. Marchain where His Grace, in order to adapt the premises, incurred 12,000 francs' expenses. The school opened with only 2 students and the Archbishop was forced to close it, then demanding from Mr. Marchain the payment of the above sum and he refused, stating that this expense was undertaken without his approval and had nothing to do with him.

Mr. Marchain, during the course of his college's construction, came and asked us if we would like to be responsible for the running of the place. We replied that we would be quite willing, if the Archbishop agreed, to be of service to him and help to pacify the population of Châteauroux.

This was how it was when Mr. Marchain came to register his complaints with me. I advised him for the sake of peace, and the Archbishop's good will, to pay the 12,000 francs he was looking for. This is what he did.

When the work on the college had finished, the Saint-Pierre insurance society went to the Archbishop to ask him if he would agree that we take over the direction of the place. He gave his approval, but with an ulterior motive (arrière pensée). As soon as matters were concluded, the Archbishop, without consulting us, and contrary to and in conflict with our Constitutions approved by Rome, appointed Fr. Vaudon as Superior and Fr. Pouvreau as administrator of Chezal-Benoît (college), officially in charge of the foundation.

We had serious reasons, very serious, against the approval of this double appointment and, consequently, we refused to ratify it. From this moment on the Archbishop demonstrated an unforgiving dislike towards us, taking away from our Congregation Fr. Vaudon to make him Superior of a new society of diocesan missionaries which he founded in opposition to us, taking away Fr. Pouvreau from us also to be part of the new enterprise. The hostility of the Archbishop only increased all the more! He informed us that we would never be given charge of Châteauroux college. He kept his word. The insurance society, both very unhappy and embarrassed, contacted the Oratorian Fathers who were accepted by His Grace.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Thank you for your letter and good wishes. May the divine Heart of Jesus grant them, together with those I extend to you, and for your appreciated work on behalf of the souls in Purgatory.

Our Annals at the present time do not have the same attraction for me as the previous ones, in which I found you totally involved through your devotedness, your understanding and your love for Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I read your present magazine with a great deal of interest. I am amazed that our German confrères have not as yet fully satisfied your request. Fr. Carrière is due to take this issue up again. Your Grace,

Now that the Pope has spoken, and with the episcopate echoing his words, I venture to ask Your Grace if it might not be opportune at the present time to commend to the threatened Congregations the novena to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which I have the honour to submit to you. Nothing, it is to be understood, will be put before the public. Everything will remain confidential.

We no longer hope other than through prayer. There are so many fervent souls within communities whose supplication in common will, perhaps, storm Heaven. Be kind enough, Your Grace, to approve this initiative. Nobody would fault you, as it corresponds with the wishes of His Holiness Leo XIII and all our Lordships the Bishops.

I have altered the text of the letter which I intend to send out if Your Grace gives permission, having made the changes which he deems appropriate.

I have the honour to be, etc.

The following was added at the end of the above letter:

Your Grace,

Religious Congregations are in great danger at the present time. Humanly speaking they cannot avoid death. Only the Sacred Heart of Jesus can save them. Pius IX and Leo XIII assure us in celebrated documents that we must place all our hopes in Him (1) and await our salvation from His goodness (2). To Father Clément Offermans, MSC, Provincial of the Northern Province.

+ J M J

Issoudun, February 21, 1900

My Dear Father,

The Very Reverend Father Superior (Chevalier) has had a letter from Madame Vroomans from which I transcribe a section which makes him surprised and about which he would like to have some explanation. Here it is:

"Our ex-director informed me that the conversation he had with Fr. Peeters while Fr. Provincial was away, was the main reason for his dismissal; that is to say the impressions he carried away from this meeting (which he pointed out to me in several letters was of the utmost importance) were that of a fateful nature and so significantly damaging for us. Oh! How the heart cruelly bleeds at the thought that it would be our very missionaries themselves – 'ours' – who would be involved in pitching us into the abyss! But what makes it felt more regrettably is that 'mystery' side to them, that total lack of 'confiding', 'confidence'. I wrote to Fr. Peeters requesting him, as advised by our ex-director who said to me: 'Find out from them; let they themselves – your missionaries – inform you what he had said in confidence; these are very important issues which would have greatly influenced the dismissal.' But up to now he has contented himself by not replying to me; and, consequently, I continue to be unaware of the real reason for the dismissal, and one can only foresee that a second director will also be felled by the same stone as the first one."

While making allowances for the somewhat exaggerated and excited concern of Madame Vroomans, it remains obvious that in all of this there is something not quite clear; or rather, what is clearly evident from it all is that Fr. Peeters instead of promoting the development of the Nymegen Fraternity would appear to be doing the contrary.

Rev. Father (Chevalier) would like to know what he (Peeters) said to Fr. Van Hooff, or at least what he thinks about the issue of our Tertiary of the Sacred Heart Association. This pious group called the Third Order, or otherwise, has been approved of and enriched with indulgences by Pius IX and, consequently, in labouring to spread this undertaking which has done, and continues to do, so much good, we are fully conforming to the spirit and wishes of the Holy See, especially at this time when His Holiness Leo XIII recommends so much devotion to the Sacred Heart. In any event dear Father, it is most unfortunate that some of our confrères would appear to attach so little importance to works which are formally approved of in our Constitutions.

Fr. General would like to have some explanations and, while awaiting them, I would ask you to receive my respectful good wishes in C.J.

F.X. Maillard, MSC.

Yes, dear Fr. Offermans, I would like it to be so that in our Provinces and houses the Sacred Heart Third Order which draws good, pious, people to us and creates sympathetic support, should be rightly appreciated. It would be more than unusual if the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart refused to acknowledge and accept their contribution and commitment to Sacred Heart undertakings.

I am depending on you.
Wholly yours in C.J.

This is the Anglicized Italian translation of Chevalier's personal letter about retirement to the Vatican given above, Article 2557, in Latin. This translation is by Fr. Genocchi, Procurator General.

Most Holy Father,

Fr. Jules Chevalier, Founder and Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, having reached his 76th year and being infirm, would like to give up office at the next General Chapter taking place in April.

Prostrate to kiss the sacred feet, he requests Your Holiness to grant the aforementioned Chapter the authority to appoint a new Superior General, despite the fact that two or three more years remain before the end of the twelve years stipulated in the Constitutions. If the Chapter absolutely wishes to elect Fr. Chevalier once more as Superior General, Your Holiness is requested to give the same Chapter permission to elect also a Vicar General for a further twelve years, with the right of succession if the humble appelland were to die in that fore-mentioned specified time.

The reasons are the following:

1. The Founder would like to take the initiative as from himself as regards his successor in the Government of the Society and to whom he would hand over important functions.
2. It would avoid the great expense of 15,000 lire or so involving an immediate calling of a Chapter if Fr. Chevalier was suddenly not there.
3. There is a need to undertake urgent and energetic procedures, particularly so in France where the Society is threatened by banishment, and as well Fr. Chevalier's state of health makes it impossible for him to undertake journeys.
4. The principal members of the forthcoming Chapter, besides the present Assistants General, have already expressed their view about the need to request as of now the permission requested above.

The request ends like this, with nothing further added.

An agreement reached between Fr. Chevalier and Mother Marie-Louise Hartzler.

Between the undersigned.

1. Jean-Jules Chevalier, Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, acting in this capacity with his Assistants, and
  2. Marie-Louise Hartzler, Superior General of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, acting as such with her Councillors
- what follows has been agreed:

Statement of the arrangements:

- I. Mr. (sic) Chevalier and his Council acknowledge that the Congregation of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has given to that of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart the following properties:

In 1894 the house at number 12 Rue de Vouët originally acquired from the Beuvron patrimony at the main cost of ten thousand francs and in addition the added expenses, and to which furniture was brought in July 1897 by the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart in association with the bank Société Immobilière, Indre, all with the knowledge and agreement of Rev. Mother Hartzler and her Council: and, moreover, the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Congregation gave to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart in the month of April 1895 the sum of two thousand francs in expenses and, on February 2, 1900, the sum of fifty thousand francs equally in expenses.

II. On her side, Mother Hartzler and her Assistants acknowledge that their community has been set up since 1883 in buildings at Rue de Vouët, numbers 2,4,6,8 and 10, Issoudun belonging to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart without having to pay any rent or indemnity until 1897 when these buildings were incorporated in the Indre Société Immobilière (the bank, insurance society, of that name). Since this time it is the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart who have paid the rent for the said buildings, and those at numbers 12,14,16 Rue de Vouët, to the Indre Société Immobilière for the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

The initials MLH and JC are in the margins.

Agreement

The above being stated, what follows was agreed:

I

Rev. Father Chevalier and the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart commit themselves not to lay claim to the arrears arising from the Rue de Vouët properties nor to those which they have paid for to the Société Immobilière on behalf of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart up to the present time. Moreover, they will continue to pay the said Society until January the first 1908 the same amount to the credit of Mother Hartzler and her community. Besides, they commit themselves to pay the Indre Société Immobilière the rent for the new building which this Society is constructing on land leased to the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart community, and over the length of time this building will be occupied by the said community.

Finally, it is agreed that the fifty thousand francs will be handed back to the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart if the said community, in agreement with the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, leaves these buildings or is not there anymore, in which latter case the Mother Superior will look after the requirements of her daughters. The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart will in that case reimburse this amount in a five-fold annuity, that is to say ten thousand francs yearly, unless there is an added compelling reason. If there is a likelihood of being disbanded, deprived of their assets or placed for any reason in circumstances making it impossible to meet their obligations, they will be exempt from the obligation to meet any requirement. Nevertheless so long as the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart exist they will make it a duty incumbent on them to look after the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, protecting those they founded

On their side, Mother Hartzler and the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart commit themselves never to lay claim to the properties coming from the wills of Beuvron and Mademoiselle Voisin, nor any indemnity arising from the said properties, or the sum of two thousand francs paid out in February 1900 and, as well, not to claim this capital as long as they live in the buildings they presently occupy.

Duly given at Issoudun, April 8, 1900 and on both one side and the other executed in good faith.

Dear Child,

How good of you to think in this way about your Issoudun priest! I thank you most sincerely for your feast day good wishes. The journey from Paris did not greatly tire me. My health is really good at the present time.

When can I undertake my pilgrimage to Notre-Dame de la Grille? Everything is behind schedule this year. Our first communions will not be held until May 16 because of the municipal elections and our confirmations not until June 17. I cannot then visit you until the feast of the Sacred Heart is over at the end of June, which is to say all of two months – quite a long time away. I am pleased to know that your health is not very bad. You are getting ready to celebrate Easter, the Lord be praised! Do not over-burden yourself. You know that I am responsive to you. The little pains and aches you mention to me are not at all important. Do not be worrying and anxious. Keep on following your regimen as much as possible. I pray a lot for you. I have put in bottle the wine you were so kind to send to me. It's delicious. Many thanks, many thanks.

Please accept together with my special blessings my respectful good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, April 18, 1900

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I thank you most warmly for your festive good wishes since I know the heartfelt good will behind them.

It's on Thursday evening the retreat, preparatory to the Chapter, begins, with Fr. Guyot preaching. Pray that the outcome will be in keeping with the good Lord's will. The participants at the Chapter seem, all of them, to be imbued with a good spirit. I hope that good will come from these meetings. I congratulate you on your success in Marseilles and the good will being shown to you. I am happy to gather all the news you share with me. I want the good Lord to find therein his glory. I am sorry that Fr. Jouët did not come as far as Issoudun.

Cheerio, dear Father. Wholly yours in C.J.

Dearly Beloved Fathers,

I can only repeat here what I said to you in my circular dated July 16, 1899.

Given my advanced age, the infirmity which affects me and prevents me from undertaking long journeys and the wish to know my successor, in order to make him familiar with the procedures of our dear Society, I offer you purely and simply my resignation as Superior General, requesting you, my dear confrères, to be kind enough to accept it.

Dear Sisters of Chezal-Benoît,

If you only knew how grateful I am to you for the good wishes so kindly addressed to the Lord for me on my feast day! I for my part do not forget you although you are hidden away in the forest at Chezal-Benoît. Be assured that I think of you and pray for you. If you are pleased to have me as your father, I am equally so in having you as daughters.

Cheerio, dear children; I bless you all in C.J.

Article 2568To the 1900 Chapter members.*

19000504

May 4, 1900

My Dear Fathers,

The Chapter gives rise at the present time to very important issues. Is it wise and opportune to provide an answer straightaway as some seem to wish for? I do not think so.

Here are the reasons:

I. Our little Society is still, so to say, in its infancy, at its formative stage. It is true that it has developed quite quickly, extending its branches quite a distance, but has not this rapid and abnormal growth taken place to the detriment of its well being and the exhaustion of its resources? If we would really like, without prejudice, to provide ourselves with an exact report on its vitality we would find it feeble if not to say anaemic. Our duty, therefore, is to strengthen it and presently rid it of all those things which could weaken it. Now the immediate setting up of a French Province, which we wish for as enthusiastically as anybody, would have the effect of a further exhaustion of forces. Personnel are lacking; this is a known, accepted, fact. We haven't enough personnel for our essential undertakings. It is not a matter of undertaking anything here and there without scrutiny. Before all else one needs to know if personnel have the requisite qualities and, if they have, whether they can be replaced or not. Faced with our present scarcity, it seems to me that in advancing this query one has to answer it in the negative.

The religious spirit is not yet sufficiently developed among us, and I can say this without prejudice to anyone that in the main we are lacking in it. Let us engage ourselves, then, to bring it well to the fore. And far from diminishing our forces, let us set about, in every possible way, to reinforce it. The Chapter in one of its earlier discussions expressed the wish that members should not be overwhelmed by laying on them double and triple burdens which would be ruinous for their interior life, something which could damagingly come about by the immediate setting up of a French Province functioning on its own. This is how I would find words for what is being sought: the Chapter, considering that it is necessary to set up a French Province, expresses its wish to do so as soon as possible – quam primum.

II. The second issue is that of the transfer of the Society's centre elsewhere. Just as with the first issue discussed above, this also seems to me to be premature. I think we would be acting contrary to the designs of divine Providence. God was at liberty to give rise to our little Congregation elsewhere rather than at Issoudun, and if He chose this town there must, surely, have been reasons for doing so. It seems to me that it is our duty to respect this circumstance as long as no reason is obvious for acting otherwise, either through important happenings or through certain circumstances which would cancel all doubt and hesitation, such-wise that we could say in all sincerity: Digitus Dei est hic (the finger of God is here).

Now, as it happens at the present time, nothing like this (the immediate foregoing) is called for. What serious reasons do we have to force us in this respect? I do not see any at the present time. France, it is true, is going through a critical time presently, but we await its resolution. I hope the France of the Sacred Heart will emerge triumphantly from the war leashed upon it by hell. In any event if we do become expelled, there will always be the opportunity to take advantage of it and see about setting ourselves up while awaiting more favourable times. But any concentration at the present moment on such a serious decision would be extremely imprudent, lessen our influence, deprive us of resources we so greatly need and draw us into disappointing expectations. All religious Congregations latterly, apart from some exceptions dictated by providential circumstances, have remained in, and by, the cradle of their foundation. Let us await the turn of events. But a last word, gentlemen, from someone aged and close to my grave; do not inflict me with pain and sorrow prematurely. After my death which cannot be long in coming, if you believe in the face of God that it is your duty to set up elsewhere the seat (centre) of the Society, you are at full liberty to do so.

There, dearly loved confrères, you have the appeal I make to you.

B 19000602

Your Grace,

Issoudun, June 2, 1900

I have received just now some bound copies of my book on the Sacred Heart. I am pleased to offer you one of these while awaiting to place at your feet a volume more worthy of Your Grace.

The Bourges diocese, Your Grace, has always had a special devotion to Our Lord's divine Heart. Having had as Archbishop the brother of St. Jeanne de Chantal, it was one of the first to have accepted the devotion from its beginnings, together with the Visitation Sisters who, not being any further able to admit the young girls presenting themselves in excessive numbers, founded in 1643 a second convent at Issoudun where devotion to the Sacred Heart flourished and went on to go outside the boundaries of the Berry (the French department which includes Issoudun).

One of your distinguished predecessors, Archbishop de Villèle (1824-1841), began a movement to place his archdiocese under the protection of the adorable Heart of Jesus. His Eminence Cardinal Du Pont (1842-1859) went further and in association with his coadjutor bishops at a meeting in Clermont-Ferrand solemnly consecrated the ecclesiastical province of Bourges to the Heart of Jesus. His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne renewed this general consecration at the provincial council in Puy.

Has it not been under your governance, Your Grace, that the great Pope Leo XIII consecrated the whole human race to this adorable Heart, source of all graces? And you were pleased to transmit to us an eloquent letter wholly imbued with love for the Heart of Jesus, accompanying the Pope's wishes.

Reading this book, Your Grace will see on page 215... that your Sacred Heart Missionaries in Issoudun were not strangers (uninvolved) to this solemn happening which should bring so many blessings on the world.

I am pleased, Your Grace, to offer you the first copy of this work which His Eminence the Paris Cardinal submitted for close examination to the Provincial of the Dominicans before granting permission to publish. If Your Grace also deigns to give it his lofty approval, the priests and laity will receive it all the more confidently when such assured piety and doctrine as yours will have deemed it worthy of being placed in their hands.

Favour me with your blessing, Your Grace, and accept this as a fresh testimony of my deep regard and appreciation from him who is pleased to state that he is your very humble servant and son in C.J.

I do not know if I am mistaken, Your Grace, but I am led to believe that your fatherly heart is no longer drawn to us as it used to be. It is pointless to let you know all the pain and sorrow I am experiencing. And yet I can assure you that Your Grace doesn't have a priest more committed to him or as eager to be helpful to him.

On the occasion of your feast, Your Grace, I venture to ask you to overlook the grievances you have against us, to pardon us if we have done something wrong and restore your good will to us, which we so greatly appreciate.

It is in this expectation, Your Grace, that I ask you to accept my humble good wishes as well as those of all my confrères, as well as being kind enough to bless us in C.J.

Most Eminent Protector,

Knowing your love for the divine Heart of Our Lord and all the concern you have for us. I am delighted to pay my respects to you with the new edition of the book: The Sacred Heart of Jesus. It is a small appreciation of my very great appreciation of all your kindness. Be good enough to accept it (the book) with the same pleasure I experience in presenting it to you. If, after you have perused this volume, you consider it worthy of your encomia and approval, then it will become for me an appreciable reward and fresh evidence of your very great good will and support for our humble Congregation. May Your Eminence's blessing be conveyed not only to this work and its author but, as well, to all our undertakings and all my confrères who are your children.

It is with these declarations of filial piety that I place myself at Your Grace's feet, kissing the sacred purple, affirming that I am his most humble servant and most devoted son in C.J.

Cardinal Rampolla.

Your Eminence,

Dedicated by vocation to Our Lord's divine Heart. I have consecrated 50 years of life, informed by the Holy Scriptures, the Church, its Doctors and Tradition, to its study both in itself and in its love. It is the fruits of this work which I presume to place before you with humble respect, petitioning Your Eminence to be good enough to place at the feet of His Holiness the copy intended for him, with its accompanying letters. The immortal Leo XIII, in addition to all the other prestigious titles which characterize his Pontificate, has also that of the Pope of the Sacred Heart, and this will not be any less beautiful in his incomparable crown. (On the previous 25th of May, Leo XIII had published his encyclical on the Sacred Heart: Annum Sacrum.) It is to him we owe that marvellous thrust towards the adorable Heart of Jesus, the consecration of the whole world to the divine Saviour, source of all graces, blessings, and source of our salvation.

May this work, presented by you to the Sovereign Pontiff, be acceptable to His Holiness and merit his blessing ever replete with fruitfulness.

I humbly prostrate myself at Your Eminence's feet asking for your blessing, the acceptance of my good wishes and grateful appreciation in C.J.

Memorandum on Chezal-Benoît for His Grace Pierre-Paul Servonnet, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, July 21, 1900

Put together. Complete. J.C.

The reference is to what has been written by Chevalier to form the basis of an official document from his secretary or someone else.

-Benoît and His Grace Archbishop Servonnet of Bourges.

- I. -Benoît before its acquisition by the Insurance Society.
- II. -Benoît during this time.
- III. -Benoît afterwards.

I. Before acquisition.

This former Benedictine monastery became associated with the Archdiocese of Bourges as episcopal property when Archbishop Menjaud (1859-1861) bought it in 1860 for 60,000 francs.

Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, who was greatly interested in us, gave us permission in 1866 to place the first youngsters of the Petite Oeuvre there, 12 in number. The numbers grew and, the area handed over to us becoming too small, we built a wing there which cost us about 47,000 francs. Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne very much wanted to acknowledge this expense by appropriate action, taking it upon himself and his successors to reimburse the amount laid out if for any reason we were to leave Chezal-Benoît. In 1880 we were expelled from the house and forced to go into exile. Out of considerateness and commitment to the diocese, we didn't make any claims.

After an absence of ten years we returned to re-possess our property, and the old convent with its outbuildings which Archbishop Marchal rented to us yearly at 2,800 francs. The old monastery, long uninhabited, needed urgent repairs. The estimate for this came to 27,000 francs which His Grace refused to meet, claiming lack of resources and requesting us to be responsible, promising to reimburse us later. Be it through inability or ill-health, the Archbishop never gave us any contribution. He died in 1892.

Archbishop Boyer succeeded him and we continued to pay the rent. His Eminence the Cardinal, needing money no doubt, asked me and my Assistants to come to Chezal-Benoît in August 1896. Unable to be present at this meeting, the Cardinal deputized in his name his auxiliary, Bishop Bardel, with plenipotentiary powers to sell us the whole property. The price stipulated by the Archbishop came, I believe, to 60,000 francs and, moreover, he left it as our responsibility to pay the bank a sum of 6,000 francs. We made two observations. First of all, we didn't need to make this purchase, given the importance of our Issoudun house which we would cease to use in the event of transferring our undertakings to Chezal-Benoît; secondly the amount of money being requested seemed to us greatly exorbitant because Archbishop Menjaud hadn't bought this property for 60,000 francs and, moreover, the Archbishop was indebted to us for 27,000 francs spent on repairs.

Bishop Bardel intimated to us enthusiastically the Cardinal's keen wish that we acquire this property and the great displeasure our refusal would cause him. It was, therefore, in the face of this moral violence, that we ad duritiam cordis (grudgingly agreed) to accept these conditions. This sale should take place on the best of terms, the Bishop added, since the Archbishop, so he says, had obtained the Government's permission to sell this archiepiscopal property without its being put up for auction. But this is against the law, I remarked to him. It shouldn't bother you, he replied; we are authorized to do so. The handing over sale does not go beyond 30,000 francs, and the rest you make over hand to hand following up.

Afraid that there might be recourse to the Chamber of Deputies, the Government requested a public decision, and the Cardinal contacted the Council of State to be exempted from this formality. This was the situation when the Cardinal died. Bishop Bardel, when I met him at the funeral, said to me: "Everything has broken down; there is no agreement any longer; you are disengaged from your word and feel yourself quite free." It was right and satisfactory.

II. While the See (archdiocese) was vacant the Government put up for auction at 90,000 francs the Chezal-Benoît property, including in the sale the Petite Oeuvre building which we had built with our own money. We wrote protesting on stamped paper which was placed in the hands of the Government Commissioner and stating that we would make use of every legal means in order to vindicate our rights. No buyer made an appearance at the first auction. At a second auction the following Sunday the price was lowered to 50,000 francs. The Indre insurance society and bank became involved and since it represented all the assets of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart it put in a bid of 100 francs at which stage the Chezal-Benoît property was handed over to it. In consequence, it had to pay 5,510 francs as registration, and the whole property was acquired, then, for 55,611 francs. The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart rented this property from the bank in order to continue their work there.

III. After this acquisition Archbishop Servonnet took over the archdiocese of Bourges. The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart made him a gift of 10,000 francs to greet his arrival, to be paid in five instalments. His Grace replied that he would accept the 10,000 francs not as a gift but supplementary to the sale of Chezal-Benoît, the price of which had not been met. Our amazement arose from his lack of awareness. He went on to say that having agreed to pay Cardinal Boyer 70,000 francs for the property, we were in conscience obliged to keep this promise and that he, the Archbishop's successor, was in his rights demanding it.

He also wrote with reference to our statements that, not wishing to create problems for a Congregation which did good work in the Church and was esteemed by the Holy See, he hoped that matters would be resolved by these means. Look for this letter; it is available.

The Archbishop having forgotten his letter, has returned to this issue on several occasions, always stating that we didn't pay enough for Chezal-Benoît and should indemnify the diocese. We have proved to him that we paid more than the amount agreed with Archbishop Boyer. (Add up again the sum paid.)

(In the 60,000 francs, the farm bought by Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne from Mr. Barberon for 1,500 francs is not included.)

Talk given on prize-giving day at the Sacred Heart public school, Issoudun.

July 31, 1900

"On the development of Character."

Ladies, Gentlemen, my Dear Children,

I would like to put before you a vital issue which is very relevant at the present time and which, understandably, preoccupies the most serious-minded people. Looking at a society in confusion, one has to ask concernedly, where are we going? Meanwhile, discouragement affects the hearts of all. Why these failings? The reply we get is, "You can see for yourself like us that people's moral character has become weak and there is no longer any great expectation. Each one looks after his own personal concerns, sacrificing everything to his ambition. It is egoism which is killing us, the Fatherland no longer meaning more than an empty word, and shortly France is likely to be ready for a break-down."

The view facing us, Ladies and Gentlemen, is a sombre one, but let us not despair, however, of our lovely country. Undoubtedly at the present time, France is experiencing a violent (shaking) crisis. Challenging spirits have pitched it outside its traditional role. The winds of incredulity and revolutionary forces have pushed it towards the abyss, making it seem like a disabled ship in the midst of a violent storm. Despite everything, be confident. No, the eldest daughter of the Church, who God made serve His purposes to do His work in the world, the France of Clovis, Charlemagne, St. Louis, St. Joan of Arc and the Sacred Heart, cannot perish. If I place my hand on my heart, I can feel it still beating for worthy and noble causes. It is always imbued with passion for glory and heroism, for the Church and for God. What there should be, and which the Church needs, are men of faith and character, and this is the purpose of this address.

I

I am bound to state right from the beginning that a nation must not be confused with the authority which rules it at a given moment, or with a passing crisis in its existence. A nation, by way of its character, spirit, beliefs, moral life, remains free and above the violence of passing regimes: violentum non durat. It is heartening to say that France will always be Christian. Religion and the country create the very depth (essence) of her nature.

These are the two well-springs which merge and flow in the same bed-rock fashioned by the hand of God; you cannot have an adverse impact on one without impoverishing the other. Wanting to be French without being a Christian is to essay the impossible. You will not describe as French those individuals without principles, beliefs, who over a quarter of a century have utilized all the resources of their evil genius to de-Christianize the new generation. It is not by taking away faith in hearts, in driving God from schools, in focusing hate and disrespect for religion and its ministers, that will make your children become strong in character, generous spirited, brave, worthwhile to their country. In order to attain their criminal objective they saturate the young with unhealthy literature where all the vices are given welcome. How in this event can one keep fresh the delicate flowers which flourished with the eucharistic meal, and take a steady hold of the effervescence imbuing the hearts of these adolescents? Under its impact, the hostile lay mentality, characters are softened, their dignity lowered, becoming depraved, souls become lukewarm, and the most robustly healthy begin to falter, wilt, die away.

Add history to literature! What is it like in their hands? A conspiracy against the truth. Facts are twisted and individuals travestied. How can one speak of Clovis and his baptistry at Reims, of Charlemagne and his glorious reign, of St. Louis that model king who was proud to call himself Christ's sergent, of Joan of Arc and her divine mission, the Joan of Arc saviour of France in chasing out the English? Or how cannot one speak of the Crusades and the Middle Ages, which made the nation distinctive and just in the world, given our military, political and intellectual heart?

Modern historians have only one aim: denial of God's action and the impact of religion in the events which have taken place in former ages. For them the real France only dates from 89. "They put away in the shadow of prehistoric times," a distinguished author observes, "these fourteen hundred years which, without faith, do not make any sense at all and which, because of it (faith), all is explained!" What is going to become of youth caught up in this approach, educated in its prejudices? Our youth will, with fatal consequences, walk disdainfully in the steps of the men who led them; like them the youth will look disdainfully on what was the France of our fathers. That for such men as these there is no longer any patriotizing thrust in what to do in relation to the Fatherland at certain crucial moments, being indicated all too well. It would be pointless to depend on such as these for character formation. What I say in respect to history I can also say as regards philosophy. As opposed to the philosophy of our centuries of faith which enlightened so strikingly, vividly, the heights of human intelligence interpreting God in His nature and actions, enlightening mankind on its supernatural destiny, pointing out the way which must be undertaken in order to attain it, and blessing France, the world, with the greatest geniuses who do honour to humanity; as against this philosophy, I ask, what has replaced it?

A materialistic, atheistic philosophy which focuses itself wholly on the earthly, makes man the plaything of his passions, giving himself over to his natural instincts, stifles in him all noble and generous sentiments, takes from him all concern for, and the hope of, a better life. I ask you if such a philosophy is capable of shaping characters strongly steered in the line of duty, something which France so greatly needs if it wants to stir itself and take its place among the nations. It is necessary, then, to look elsewhere.

II

Ladies and Gentlemen, you have nothing more cherishable than your children. You with reason place in them all your best hopes and happiness for the whole of your life. And if you lay down obligations on them, it is that they themselves may be happy and contribute to their country. Right, then! You will not come by a solution to this serious issue other than through an education which is thoroughly Christian.

We have become aware of the education provided in universities about the most important issues. The young man is left in ignorance of the basic truths he needs to know, leaving him at a loss, uncertain and rudderless as he lives his life. It is not like that on our side because we place religion and God as the basis of education. The neutrality so favoured in our days is no more than hypocrisy masking the deliberation to root out the faith from hearts, making our France a pagan France. "Neutrality in education," as Jules Simon has observed, "is a fanciful dream, impractical and impracticable; the teacher cannot hide his views and will educate his pupils in keeping with his own view of things." Besides "It is criminal," as a former Minister of Public Education remarks, "since it leads France towards intellectual and moral ruin." And our great Pope Leo XIII has described it by its right name: Practical Atheism. Our free-thinkers, rejecting the teaching of Christ in their system of education, have dreamed up civil morality so dear to our revolutionaries of '93. We are aware of its purity; we know what was produced. It is not with this morality which banishes all ideas of the supernatural, where God is excluded, that we will overcome the passions and form the consciences which will give rise to characters of integrity. This privilege only belongs to Religion; it is a fact of experience since it (religion) alone can raise the soul towards heaven, inspiring it with love and fear in whomsoever rewards virtue and punishes vice. If one rejects religion's help, it is on and with the police that society will be based, on the force which is the same formula with respect to the barbaric. No, man needs his conscience enlightened by a ray of the divine light if he wishes his character to become uplifted, independent. Conscience is a tremendous force, a powerful motivator. Nothing speaks so upliftingly as it does, and there is no comparable propelling to that which it engenders. Conscience, in effect, is God's voice speaking in mankind. And when one tries to draw from a human being acts which go against his conscience you will find him as inflexible as a wall of bronze. He will prefer to come down from his magistrate's chair rather than commit a crime. You will find him breaking his sword and giving up on a brilliant future rather than damage the integrity of his reputation with scheming behaviour, which would harm his patriotism and run counter to his cherished conscience. There you have the characteristics which do credit to a family, leaving to its descendants a patriotism a thousand times more enviable than the gold with which they could have enriched themselves like so many others. They return with pride into their private lives, carrying on their heads a crown which nothing could shake.

Conscience gives rise, thereby, to the heroic not only in the law and army, but as well in all the social roles which Providence has shaped for everyone. If I go on my knees before a dignitary who, motivated by his faith, despoils himself of his wealth in order to distribute it among the poor, and before those heroic missionaries, those religious who magnanimously leave family and country to bring the truth to the unaware pagans, knowing full well that a premature death or martyrdom will be their lot, I also pay equal respect and admiration to the Christian who, stamping out all human respect, provides an example of the virtues religion inspires in him, this father of a family, that workman who remains faithful to God in the midst of his scornful co-workers. He carries out his duties, pays his taxes, without being envious of those more fortunate than himself. He lives his life; he pours himself out drop by drop in his sweat, without a murmur or complaints; he is happy to be resigned and accepting because it's not only because he believes but also because he hopes. This father of a family, this workman of staunch and Christian character, will be sought for in vain outside religion.

And what would you find, do you think, outside of religion? The unhappy, the ambitious, the jealous, the revolutionaries. In effect, what can we expect from a man without conscience, a man who believes in nothing, who hopes for nothing beyond the tomb? He is capable of all disorder and stupidity. We shall come across him as the bad son, spouse, father, citizen. I know there are exceptions, but are they that many?

You understand, then, Ladies and Gentlemen, the important role religion plays in your children's education. At school we do as much as we can on our part to fulfil it; it's our duty. But our efforts will remain fruitless if the parents for their part do not help us with their contribution. The primary educators are to be found in the home where, under the watchful eye of a father concerned with his son's future and a mother who is responsible and attentive, there begins, already, Christian education and character formation.

We are about to let you have, for two months, your children, you need a well-merited rest after a demanding year. They will, then, be under your supervision. Please, in their interest as well as your own, do not let your watchful eye stray from them. Carefully check the company they keep, the entertainment to which they have recourse, their conversation and what they read. How many youngsters there are who, during their holidays, when left to themselves, have got into bad habits, have lost out on the fruit of their labours, returning to us with a dislike for study and exercises of piety!

Help us to make your youngsters strong and appealing characters, men who are solidly Christian, who never compromise with error and always remain faithful to this motto: pro Deo et Patria, pour Dieu et la Patrie, for God and Country.

Your Grace,

I hasten to thank you for the favourable response to the request which I had the honour of making to you. One of the Assistants of our little Congregation is leaving today for Quebec to then engage himself with settling in our young confrères who are due to follow the courses at your prestigious university. We are all the more pleased with your permission because Quebec is the city of the Sacred Heart, a second Paray-le-Monial, in Canada. The aged France goes there to renew itself at the permanently warm fireside of the new.

I read, Your Grace, with very great interest, your lovely address on the occasion of the second centenary of the inauguration of the feast of the Sacred Heart by the Quebec Ursulines. My heart thrilled with joy while browsing through these eloquent pages treating a devotion which is so dear to us.

I am pleased, Your Grace, to offer as a gift in appreciation of your apostolate in favour of this divine Heart, the latest edition of a book entitled: The Sacred Heart of Jesus, which has just been published. I include with it Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. If your work makes it possible to let me have your assessment of both these works, I shall be very grateful to you.

At your feet, Your Grace, bless me. With deep respect I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

C 19000815

Issoudun, August 15, 1900

Feast of the Assumption

Venerunt autem mihi omnia bona pariter cum illa.
(With her, I shall have all good things.)

Dear Beloved Confrères,

What the Holy Spirit said about the advantages Eternal Wisdom makes available to those who possess it, we may equally speak of in regard to the religious spirit, since in effect this is the wisdom par excellence which makes everything converge towards the final end of our creation which is heaven. Our most compelling duty is to sacrifice everything in order to attain it, since if, unhappily, we miss out on it, all is lost: it is hell with all its suffering. A frightening alternative! We have understood it very well, since having been aware of our frailty, and finding too many obstacles in the world to achieve our salvation, we embraced the religious life and, doing so, resolved to walk in the footsteps of Jesus Christ, imitate His virtues and give ourselves over each day to perfection by the continuous practice of the three vows: poverty, obedience, chastity. It was, therefore, following mature reflection, that we took on the standard of the Sacred Heart, placing ourselves under its powerful, supportive, protection, choosing the Congregation which is consecrated to Him.

Before we commit ourselves to such sacred undertakings we take into consideration the splendour of sacrifice. Then, without hesitancy, we have forsaken before heaven and earth what we hold most dear, intimate, personal, that is to say our own will, our freedom, spirit, heart, body and all its desires. We have despoiled ourselves in order to put on the crucified Jesus. And if we wish to maintain this attitude, we must, under pain of perjury, preserve the religious spirit until the end of our life. This is what safeguards us and the most certain means of assuring our salvation. My purpose in this engagement of father and children is to speak to you about the importance of the religious spirit, the reasons for its weakening and the need to maintain it in all its rigour. May the divine Heart of Jesus bless my word and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart grant us the grace to be all perfect religious.

The importance of the religious spirit.

The first question which comes to the fore is that of knowing what is to be understood by religious spirit. Above all it means esteem for one's vocation; one does not become attached to anything except insofar as one has an appreciation of it. Now the reasons for appreciating, esteeming and loving one's vocation are many. First of all it's the grace of being chosen, created, by God when calling us to his service. "Non fecit taliter omni nationi." (Ps. 147,20) Why us in preference to so many others? How many young people more pious and meritorious than ourselves have remained in the world because they haven't heard the heavenly call? What have we done to merit such a signal favour? Nothing. And perhaps not even that which is a requirement in those giving up everything.

What an unfathomable mystery! The infinite mercy of the Heart of Jesus! What, moreover, increases in us the appreciation of our vocation and makes us love it, is that we are called to live the religious life in a society wholly devoted to the Sacred Heart, source of every grace and blessing. This divine Heart which wanted to gather in the earth within the warmth of its love, "Ignem veni mittere in terram, et quid volo nisi ut accendatur" (Lk. 12,49), has chosen us to be His missionaries to extend His reign throughout the whole world. Ametur ubique terrarum Cor Jesu Sacratissimum! What glory, what an honour!

The religious spirit does not only consist in appreciation and love of one's vocation, but as well in the demanding obligation to tend towards perfection at all times and everywhere: it is the primary end of our holy calling. And whoever forgets this is more than a purposeless member, since he becomes dangerous in the bad example he gives and spreads about him. I know not what pestilential odour a corpse would make when the putrefaction process commences. He, on the other hand, who truly possesses a religious spirit, has a feeling for his way of life, and is gladly submissive to all the requirements imposed on him by the Directory and Constitutions. Obedience for him is smooth and easy, carrying out punctiliously the smallest requirements of the religious life, with nothing seeming too small for him, everything drawn towards God and helping to sanctify him. He benefits from an unflinching peace and walks quick-stepped from virtue to virtue. Each day he engages with the perfecting of himself and increases his merits. By doing so he edifies his confrères, draws them to follow him and, thereby, becomes a source of blessings for his community. There you have the main blessings to which the religious spirit gives rise. Let us now consider the reasons for its enfeeblement.

II

The reasons for the weakening of the religious spirit.

Happy are those institutes where the religious spirit prevails! God is there present and everything proceeds in the most orderly way. Within, one is conscious of calm and joy, with the exhaled perfume of piety stimulating the soul and comforting it. Outwardly they enjoy general esteem. Vocations, impelled by a divine breath, are preferably drawn towards them; and in this way they become spontaneously flourishing. But if, regrettably, the religious spirit comes to be found wanting among a certain number, there is a general malaise, pain, boredom and a sense of disgust among the better ones; it's lack of vitality, and breakdown in the final analysis. Discipline becomes too relaxed and a wordly spirit ends up enveloping the community.

A worldly spirit! May God preserve us from such a pest! It is the most dangerous with which we are faced. One all the more underestimates it because of its association with the weakest part of our nature. It is competent and insidious, insinuating little by little, and then, when it has succeeded in gaining some candidates, it begins to work its debilitating activity, drawing from some a kind of dislike for the religious life, eliciting from them tastes which are in conflict with those of their religious state, drawing them towards softness, a better well-being, towards sensuality, self-seeking, conceitedness, and escapist freedom. Consciences become forsaken and, eventually, they are only religious in name. The observance of the vows becomes difficult and it is no longer grace at work in them but rather nature taking over. As a consequence, obedience weighs on them and quickly gives way to a critical independent spirit, even to that of insubordination. They dislike mortification, searching their ease in every way and that which appeals to their lower nature, avoiding serious work and not being keen to be of service. Asked to do something compliant and committed, they normally answer with a refusal, pointing to what they are doing which they are well capable of leaving aside if it's a question of engaging in what pleases them.

Do they sometimes experience the impact of poverty? They complain about it or are displeased. The rule like everything else is a burden for them and they exempt themselves readily from it under futile pretexts, or else they arrive nearly always late at community meetings. What if they are not present for prayers, the particular examination or another exercise of piety? They make no effort during the day to make up for it. They easily, and without a care, give themselves over to light, even dangerous, reading, if not to say obscene, which they come by on the quiet, or they send for it by letter, and get it without the Superior's knowledge, well aware that this could give rise to expulsion. Living indisciplined more often than not, they look upon as small-minded those of their confrères who try to perfect themselves in the practice of the evangelical counsels. From all this it follows that such-like individuals live a disordered, I would even say criminal, life, because of the havoc they create around them. It should be their obligation either to change or leave, since it would be better to be smaller in number and have with us only those pious, committed, devoted individuals who love and keep their rule faithfully. There you see where the lack of a religious spirit leads. What is the remedy for such a serious state of affairs? It is that which now remains to be considered.

III

The need to maintain the religious spirit in its full rigour.

The remedy for such a serious state of affairs is, first of all, to be found in full and complete submission to Superiors, whoever they may be. A religious community is an army of a new kind, marching to the conquest of heaven. It must at any cost succeed in the assault. Those who are in it have many enemies to contend with and it's necessary that they overwhelm them if they want to become victorious.

How are they going to vanquish them? By keeping themselves grouped around their officers, chosen by God to lead them, listening to what they say and carrying out faithfully their orders without any questioning. Victory then is thereby assured: "Vir obediens loquetur victoriam" (the obedient man will speak of victory). But if everyone goes his own way, does what he pleases without taking account of the commandment and counsels provided for tackling the enemy, frustrating his plans and making him powerless, it becomes defeat with all its consequences. The Superiors are aware of their responsibilities, knowing that God will one day ask them to account for those who are in their care: "Ipsi enim pervigilant quasi rationem pro animabus vestris reddituri" (they will look after them as being held to account for them). And if at times they present themselves as being demanding and harsh as regards observance of the Rule and maintaining us in our duty, far from complaining about it, we should, on the contrary, congratulate them because in this way they present themselves as being faithful to their obligations by rendering us a significant service. What would you say if they had no concern for discipline and religious perfection, if they left their confrères to pursue their way in a relaxed manner, living as they pleased, without having the courage to challenge them, and closing their eyes to abuses in order to avoid the pain of reprimanding them? You would be the first to fault them and you would be correct in doing so.

Accordingly, dearly beloved confrères, let us not complain if the Superiors insist on strict observance of the rules and the maintenance of the religious spirit among us; it is their duty. In so acting they are working, more than we can say, towards the strengthening and success of our dear Congregation. You will facilitate their task, already so demanding, by acting as submissive and obedient religious, following the apostle's recommendation: "Obedite praepositis vestris et subjacete eis." (Hebrews 13,17: Obey those placed over you and be subject to them.)

And if, sometimes, you notice that some confrères are not very edifying, no longer providing an example of regularity and in danger of losing the religious spirit, I beseech you to react against such relaxation by irreproachable behaviour. Witnessing your piety and your promptitude in all matters, they will come to themselves and, supported by grace, they will begin to understand that they are compromising not alone their vocation and salvation but, in addition, the Society's reputation, and you will then have the consolation of making a contribution towards their return to virtuous ways.

Oh! What more beautiful sight than that of a community where there exists a spirit of fervour and where each one commits himself to living as a perfect religious. Nothing will shake his resolve as he copes with all the dangers, gets through all the trials, surmounts all the crises. The world and hell may well be unchanged against him, but if God protects him there is nothing to be afraid of: "Si Deus pro nobis, quis contra nos?" (If God is on our side, who will be successful against us?) (Romans, 8,31) He will advance despite the obstacles and fulfil successfully the mission Divine Providence was pleased to confer on him.

I hope dearly loved confrères that this such-like Congregation will be ours. Let us work towards it with all our force and capabilities, ever maintaining among us the religious spirit. This is the wish of the holy Church and our wish for all. This retreat will strengthen our resolve. Let us not forget that we are the original workers in this structure we are raising in honour of the divine Heart of Jesus, the solidity of which, its future, depends entirely on the foundation we lay down for it. If cemented by faith and piety, devotedness and self-denial, it will survive storms and exist for the glory of God, the salvation of souls and the triumph of the Sacred Heart. Its fate rests in our hands. Let us not forget this.

Adorable Heart of Jesus! Pour down abundantly on us all the treasures of your love. Enlighten our minds with your divine rays, so that we may know more thoroughly what is sovereignly good and be committed to it steadfastly. Direct our will, giving it that generosity which will make it follow without resistance the impulse of your grace. Finally, make all of us saints who love you in time and glorify you in eternity!

Hoc fac et vives.
(Act like this and you will live.)

J. Chevalier,
Superior General, Miss.SC.

NB: This circular must be available on reception to all members of the community gathered together and carefully kept. Each year, during the retreat, it will be read.

To the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Copied by Mother Valérie, Secretary General, and signed by Chevalier personally.

While awaiting an approving brief from Rome for the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which would take them under its protection, it is the bishop of the mother house who is, legally, their Superior. But since the Archbishop of Bourges has delegated me in his name, with all his plenipotentiary powers in appointing me Superior General of their Society, I am, accordingly, given responsibility to take charge in common with Mother General and her Council.

Nobody can be accepted for temporary or perpetual vows without my approval. That is why I delegate our Vicars Apostolic and Fr. Tréand in Sydney to admit to temporary vows, and renewal, the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart who are worthy of being called forward.

As for perpetual vows, a special delegation is required. Accordingly 6 or 8 months before perpetual vows are taken, the Superiors of each house must send Mother General the request of their members, taking care to state whether or not they find them worthy of so great a favour. It goes without saying that our Lordships the Apostolic Vicars, and Fr. Tréand, may subdelegate, where problems arise, those among their confrères whom they consider suitable. If, up to this time, things were not carried out just as I described, I provide a formal resolution, overlooking, of all the irregularities which have arisen.

The new Constitutions will not be in use or have the force of law until they meet with the Holy See's approval. In the meantime it is the old ones which will be in use to regulate behaviour.

To Mr. Jean de Bonnefon, Editor in Chief of 'The Journal'.

Issoudun, September 26, 1900

Dear Chief Editor,

I read on page 211 of your book entitled: Les belles oeuvres et les autres (The wonderful undertakings and the other work) your assessment of the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun and its undertakings. Your good faith, clearly, took me off guard since I thought you were too trustworthy and too dedicated to the truth to have on your own initiative twisted the facts in this way.

The picture you have presented of our Church, which you describe as disgustingly rich, of our large park with its well-doctored trees, well-kept lawns, the centre for pilgrims which you describe as a huge palace, is in effect a world of fantasy. If you had honoured us with a visit, you would quite certainly have written otherwise.

Truly there is good reason to shrug one's shoulders when you begin to claim that we take every day 2,000 francs (about 6,850 euros) as offerings. One needs to have more than an imaginative outlook in daring to come up with a patent absurdity like this. Your informant has also badly misinformed you about the number of marble ex-votos which adorn our basilica. The inscriptions which accompany them are heartfelt expressions of love and acknowledgement deserving of respect and appreciation, and the regard focused on them is in no way lifeless, believe me. If we felt it our duty to arrange them ourselves, it was for purposes of uniformity and balance in presentation. The 15 francs (about 51 euros) we request for each ex-voto is the cost price, and you can see for yourself that we do not make a raffle of these ex-votos as you seem to imply.

The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, given such a rough time in your book, first began at Issoudun as auxiliary clergy, and from the beginning were incorporated within the Bourges Archdiocese. They were wrongfully then expelled, by decree, from their residence in 1880. It is for this reason that they complain about the violence to which they were then subjected. It is not in any way "following on putting the decrees into effect", as you assert, that the Superior was named parish priest of Issoudun. He was parish priest well before that. It was Fr. Thiers who, in March 1872, handed over to Chevalier responsibility for the parish at the request of Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne of Bourges. Our little Society, in establishing the role of diocesan priests of the Sacred Heart, never had the slightest pretension "to place one day the humble servants of the whole of France at the service of the Issoudun Fathers..." by association through spiritual alignment and money stringing (what accrues from awareness of the financial ropes).

Moreover, you gleefully cry out: "Isn't this an organization of pietistic resistance to the legal authority of the Bishop, a resistance cloaked in respectful formulas like powder in a pot of pewter-ware" (p.126). Who could have prompted you to utter such-like nonsense and identify it with us? It is because you have in your hands, so you say, as proof, the diocesan priests' manual, but you must realize that this work cannot be issued in a diocese without the full approval of the bishop. Those who compile it must above all be respectful of, and submissive to, ecclesiastical authority, carrying out zealously and devotedly the roles confided to them, providing an example of all the priestly virtues. Why do you want to diminish this worthy institution approved by the Holy See, and aiming at doing so much good for our confrères in the priesthood under the supportive gaze of their bishops? You also focus on the Sacred Heart Petite Oeuvre, which in your prejudicial way becomes a mercenary operation of despicable speculation. I do not understand how an intelligent man such as yourself can allow himself to be so misled. Yes, we ask the pious laity to be good enough to present us with an offering of a sou (English shilling) yearly to educate poor youngsters who feel drawn to service of the Lord. Is this too much to ask? The supporters who collect, sou by sou, 5 francs have a right to free subscription as regards the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, which comes to 3 francs for us, leaving 2 francs over for the Petite Oeuvre. With these minimal subscriptions we gratuitously educate sixty or so youngsters of whom the majority become priests and missionaries, having been in our care for upwards of twelve years. If ever an undertaking merited eulogies this, surely, is it. There are, it is true, some special people who set up a bourse in perpetuity by way of having a priest who continually prays for their family. They either pay out 10,000 francs or an annual sum of 500 francs. This is close to half the cost of what is needed to teach, nourish, clothe, lodge and provide total upkeep for a young man until he becomes a priest. "The curious thing," you write, "is that despite this provision the pupils of the Fathers must pay a fee, at least while at the preparatory school, and the operation of the franc is not enough for the voracious Society." The preparatory school lasts a year and the fee requested is reduced to 200 francs a year, but we hasten to add that the majority of the youngsters, coming from poor families, make no contribution.

"But what happens in this respect as regards the Polynesian and Micronesian missions?" These missions are not forgotten in any respect as you would maliciously have one to believe. In 1881 five impoverished Missionaries of the Sacred Heart left with the approval of Leo XIII to plant the Catholic Church's banner in these cannibalistic countries, abandoned for 40 years either because of the savagery of the natives or the lethal climate. A priest had never previously said mass there. Today more than a hundred of us fertilize with their perspiration these inhospitable lands, of whom twenty-three have already succumbed to the exhaustion and climatic conditions. Three Apostolic Vicariates have been set up in these vast lands, confided to our humble Society: New Guinea, New Pomerania (New Britain) and the Gilbert and Marshall Islands, etc.; lost in Micronesia, 600 leagues from France (the equivalent of thousands of kilometres, miles). And there where no Christian was to be found, there are, eighteen years afterwards, to be counted at the present time, about 20,000 or so. The Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, founded at Issoudun barely 20 years ago, numbering fifty or so, share the demanding apostolate of our valiant missionaries, ten or twelve of whom have died, worn out by deprivation and fever, buried there in the shade of the coconut trees, so feelingly wept for by the natives who called them Heavenly Virgins.

Many village chieftains, who are still cannibals, can be heard referring to the heroism of our confrères and sisters, and come to be catechized and baptized. The harvesting prospects, as you can see, are very promising; what's lacking is the work-force, but this latter is being made ready by us in our Sacred Heart Petite Oeuvres, which merits something other and better than denigration and scorn.

Following this information, the exactitude of which I can guarantee to you, I hope that you will be kind enough to admit your error and express regret that you wrote in your journal, and repeated in your book, this outrageously unfair sentence: "This is one of those undertakings which scar the face of the Church just as the crown of thorns marked the forehead of Jesus at the moment when the eternal flowers were flourishing in that great field of Love which was His divine Heart." (p.219).

The Church, happily so, does not think like those who influence and prompt you. The work of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart which has been sown in a massive field, entrusted to its supervision by the Sovereign Master, produces thanks to his support and blessings, flowers and fruit which far from bruising his face, provide consolation for the desertion of his ungrateful children, bringing joy to the divine Heart of Jesus.

Please accept, Sir, my respectful good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, December 6, 1900

Dear Father,

You will not be unaware of what our Freemason Government is stirring up against religious Congregations and you will know, undoubtedly, about the confiscation plans which very likely will soon be presented to the Chamber (of deputies). Faced with such a likelihood, it is a matter of urgency to take precautions to avoid the complete loss of our properties in France. One of the better ways, which has been recommended to us by expert people, is to mortgage our assets. Already virtually everything is accredited to the Credit Bank of France; there remains, however, a section of the Vichy property, that which was bought latterly for 116,000 francs. The Credit Bank loaned us 60,000 francs, but the formalities take time and the convent cannot be made available before 3 months or thereabouts. However, the issues are pressing and our solicitor has advised us, with a view to expedite matters, to get a loan of this sum, preferably abroad since, if there were to be confiscation, a foreigner would be much more acceptable than a Frenchman in vindicating his rights and, if necessary, having recourse to his country's representative in France. The Council thinks that Mr. (no name given) could provide this service for us. Would you be good enough to meet him and bring this issue to his attention? The mortgage he would take out with the Vichy property as a guarantee, about which there is no need to have any concern, for the law on this matter formally lays it down that the State will reimburse the debts which accrue from the properties of religious if these debts are identified with lay people. But if Mr... so wishes one could offer him the 'Société Immobilière' (bank) with which our property is associated, as a second guarantor; 120 immobile assets) will be left with you (each valued at 500 francs) and everything would become its property the day there would be a problem in honouring its cheque, something which is not likely.

If there are securities or such-like we would prefer them to cash transactions since there would be no commission to pay; and since we do not have it in mind to use this money other than in extreme necessity, we would prefer that it be securities rather than in cash.

We are depending on you, Father, to deal with this issue as soon as possible and, shortly, send a favourable reply. It is likely that you will need some information, further explanation and clarifications from us and I am completely at your disposal to provide them for you.

Please accept my renewed regards and deepest appreciation in C.J.

F.X. Maillard, MSC.

Chevalier added: We shall pay interest on this money at 4%. In any event there is nothing to fear about reimbursing the amount loaned.

To the Superiors of the different religious communities.

Issoudun, December (15), 1900

M.

The present moment is decisive. The agony of the Religious Congregations is prolonged as by a miracle over twenty years. The enemy awaits impatiently their last gasp and, finding that it isn't coming quickly enough, is getting ready to bring down on them the final blow. The sword which is due to sacrifice them is suspended above their head, the light string which is holding it on the point of snapping; it needs to be removed. To whom shall we go to do this? To the adorable Heart of Jesus: "In him there is to be found our only hope, he the source of all graces, and it is pointless for us to go looking elsewhere. Heaven has given him to us as the remedy for all our ills"; so Pius IX stated in a celebrated document: we shall find in this divine Heart the protection we need to have in face of the great dangers which menace us. (In eodem Corde tutissimum invenient et, ab ingruentibus animae periculis effugium. Decree for the consecration of the faithful to the Sacred Heart; April 22, 1875.)

And what does Leo XIII say? The Sacred Heart of Our Lord comes before us in these troubled times as a new Labarum and he invites us to place all our hope in him; he then adds that we must ask for and await our salvation from him. ("Eu alterum hodie oblatum oculis auspicatissimum divinissimumque signum: videlicet Cor Jesu sacratissimum, superimposita cruce, splendissimo candore inter flammam elucens. In eo collocanda spes; ex eo hominum petenda atque expetenda salus." Encyclical for the consecration of the human race to the Sacred Heart. May 25, 1899.) So it is then, if religious Congregations wish to avoid death, they have no means other than recourse to the very merciful Heart of Jesus.

But who will plead in their favour before this divine Heart? What voice will be eloquent enough to make itself heard? "I only know one," wrote St. Bernard, "and it's the Virgin Mary whose requests are always heard and she gets from Her Son's Heart whatever she asks for." (Quis tam idoneus, ut, loquatur ad Cor Domini nostri Jesu Christi, ut tu, felix Maria? Loquere, Domina, quia audit Filius tuus, et quaecumque petieris impetrabis. St. Bernard. Sermo de Paneg. Virg.)

Since that is the way it is, we have, then, recourse to her under her very beautiful title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Nobody is more likely to move the heart of this divine mother and make us favoured by her. This title, approved by the Holy See, intimates to us the ineffable influence Jesus deigned to grant Her as regards His adorable Heart; in this way he placed in her hands all the treasures of His mercy. (In manibus tuis sunt thesauri miserationum Domini. St. Peter Damien. Sermon for the birth of the Virgin Mary.) She has the most lively desire to spread graces on us. Rome has called her the Patroness of hopeless and difficult cases. (Unica spes desperantium; Omnia potes, tanquam Dei Mater; omnia voles...; nihil tibi, si vis, impossibile est. St Ephrem – orat. 10 ad Deiparam; tome 111, p.349; St Ephrem – ibidem.)

Inspired by these (the above) sentiments we come to put before you, and also to other Congregations, a novena to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, beginning on the first of January and ending on the 9th. Each day we shall recite morning and evening the following prayers:

1. Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, approved November 1883 by the Holy Office.
2. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, pray for us (thrice).
3. Parce Domine, parce populo tuo, ne in aeternum irascaris nobis (thrice).
Spare your people, O Lord, lest you eternally be condemnatory of us.

J. Chevalier,
Sup. gen. MissduSC.

NB: We would ask you to be good enough to let us know as soon as possible of your commitment. We shall be writing the names of all the religious communities in a special register which shall be placed at the feet of the statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart during the novena. Each day mass will be offered at the privileged altar of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for the intentions of congregations in France.

Sacred Heart of Jesus have pity on us! (100 days' indulgence, Pius IX)
Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, pray for us. (ib. Pius IX)

Issoudun, January 13, 1901

Dear Fr. Tréand,

Your good wishes for a happy New Year are particularly dear to me. I offer you my own coming from the depths of a heart which loves you and remains deeply drawn to you as well as to all your dearly loved confrères.

I am pleased to know that your Australian undertakings are putting down deep roots and are beginning to be more and more thriving because of your commitment and the dedication of your good associates.

I am greatly pleased to gather also that His Eminence the Sydney Cardinal is pleased with your house and interested in your undertakings. You do well to have his support on your side. I await his letter about the formal approval of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Sisters. I have had nothing so far. Mother Hartzler hasn't yet given me your letter. Yes, indeed, we need the Sacred Heart and Our Lady to come to our aid.

Tomorrow, Monday 14th of this month, the law against Religious Congregations will be debated in the Chamber (of Deputies). The sectarian (anti-religious deputies) who are, regrettably, in the majority, want at all costs to suppress and, then, confiscate their assets. The Pope has intervened, but his letter, which otherwise is masterly, will serve only to irritate them. If this satanic law is passed, it means ruin, a death-blow to all undertakings in France. The poor French Church is moving towards schism! It is being asserted as something certain that the French bishops have given their approval to this outrageous law, and that ours (the Archbishop of Bourges) is among them, but I dare not believe it since it is frightening if that is so. The socialist mayor of Issoudun has forbidden the wearing of the soutane. Three of our confrères and the dear head of the Christian schools (de La Salle Congregation) are called to appear before a court next Friday. Will he dare to condemn them? If so we shall appeal to the higher court. What are we moving towards?

Cheerio, my friend. Pray, especially, for us. I send you my best blessing, also to your dear confrères, and for all your undertakings in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I sadly gather that you are very exhausted because of over-work. Take it easy; take care of yourself; rest. What are you going to gain there if you become laid up? What would happen to our Sydney undertakings?

I thank you for your New Year good wishes and those from all your personnel. I reciprocate my own with you all, they are no less sincere or extensive than yours. And if the divine Heart of Jesus grants them your good scholastics and novices will fully meet all your expectations. I do not doubt that the Kensington house will in a short time become one of our most morale-creating houses. "Euge serve bone et fidelis!" (Well done, good and faithful servant. Matthew 25,21.)

My Dear Child,

I am very thankful to you for letting me have all your news. I thought a lot about you and I prayed a great deal for your expectations and concerns. Despite your being poorly, I am happy to gather that you are getting by reasonably well.

Leave your scruples aside. There hasn't been, in what troubles you, either the intention or the will to offend the Good Lord. Therefore, there is no reason to bring worry on yourself. Keep trying to do your best and Our Lord will be pleased.

We have, during the month of May, our first communions and confirmations and then, on the third of June, put back to that date, the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. On June 14 we shall celebrate the feast of the Sacred Heart, and on that same day 50 years ago I was ordained priest – a lovely, touching, coincidence. I hope, if nothing intervenes, on the following Monday, the 17th, to take off for the Grille (Madame de Cougny's château home).

I got through winter reasonably well. Thank God my health is good; you can judge for yourself. Please, dear child, together with my best wishes, be assured of my respectful and appreciative good wishes in C.J.

Dear Fr. Vandel,

I wish to thank you very sincerely, also the scholastics and novices, for your Easter good wishes, all the more appreciated when I know they are sincere.

Everything leads one to believe that the French Senate will pass the sectarian law against religious associations and even intensify it. However, God is all-powerful and can overturn these Godless initiatives; we are in His hands. May the Sacred Heart and Our Lady protect us. If we are forced to leave France, it is likely that a number of us will go and join you. I am happy about what you tell me about our undertakings in Australia and their future. "Euge serve bone." Dear Mother,

Your dear daughters in the Gilbert Islands are to be pitied. This poor mission will have a bad end if matters continue like this.

Yes, write a circular, which I shall countersign, in which you will state:

1. that your religious depend entirely on you as regards their religious life and have no other Superior than yourself, represented there by Sister Isabelle;

Sister Isabelle, Emma Maelfeyt, born Meetkerke Belgium, March 9, 1866, professed at Issoudun on October 17, 1894, shortly afterwards leaving for the Gilbert Islands, with six others, as the Superior of this first group of missionary sisters in the Gilbert Islands, where she died on May 31, 1926.

2. that you are officially opposed to those who are advocating a foundation of indigenous Sisters, since it would be premature and a source of divisions and scandals, and that your daughters be content with educating the children of Mary among the more pious and reliable in order to teach others the catechism;
3. that they never be alone in a mission station; and that there should be at least two of them;
4. that they avoid being involved in the missionaries' (priests) issues and be always pious, committed in their exercises, obedient to their Superior, and extremely prudent (careful) in their dealings with the missionaries and natives, as well as the local authorities.

I bless you, dear, kind, Mother in C.J.

Poor Sister Françoise is a problem and it's as well that she is no longer in the missions. You will see how she gets on in Sydney.

Issoudun, 1901
Undated, but before June 3

Not accepted by Archbishop Servonnet. (Added by Chevalier)

My Lord,

Our great Pope, Leo XIII, very drawn to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and aware of the many good things brought about by her in Rome itself and throughout the world, wishes to bestow on her a distinctive sign of his regard and commitment. Not merely happy to dedicate a splendid temple (church) to her in the Eternal City and to have set up a universal archconfraternity, with its vast association to cope with those in difficult and hopeless circumstances, he has also wished to provide greater prominence for this in the Church by setting up in her honour, as with Our Lady of Lourdes, a special mass and specific office which the Congregation of Rites has favoured with its approval.

Our great and immortal Pontiff, who sees in the Sacred Heart of Jesus our most assured hope, and Mary as she who dispenses all his favours, has had the wonderful thought of officially associating this divine (sic?!) Virgin with the ministry of Salvation under the beautiful title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, being a title which so well expresses her involvement in the bestowal of the graces to which the heart of her adorable Son gives rise.

Having made arrangements with our distinguished and kind Archbishop, we would like to associate the inauguration of this new office with a day of great solemnity and the day chosen is that of the feast on September 8, the anniversary day of the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Chevalier had first written, before changing his mind: The feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart appointed by Rome for May 31, but this year, due to the octave of Pentecost, held back until June 3.

This imposing ceremony will be preceded by a triduum of prayer and preaching. We shall be very happy, Your Lordship, if you can honour these celebrations with your presence.

In the expectation of a favourable reply, I have the honour to be, My Lord, with deep respect your most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

L 19010608

Issoudun, June 8, 1901

My Dear Child,

I speak to you as a father and not as a Superior. I haven't yet presented your memorandum to the Council. I don't know what the Assistants will think of it. I read it carefully, found it lengthy, imbalanced, lacking in clarity, being, perhaps, an indictment of your Congregation's general administration rather than an appeal to its good will. I do not see a purpose or relevance in what you write about political attitudes and the covetousness of France in relation to Belgium, as presented in certain papers about past issues.

You write as if you were the recipient of official confidences from your major Superiors. I do not think so. Why this precipitateness? Wait, my friend, until the Council makes you a participant in its issues and if it comes to discuss Belgium we shall discuss it together.

I find, dear friend, that you, in a singularly reprehensive manner, evaluate the administration procedures of the early Antwerp Superiors. On your reckoning, they acted in a wasteful fashion, were irresponsible and somewhat lacking in conscience. It is easy to see that you are young and speak without experience.

Who founded the Antwerp house? Neither yourself or your confrères. You forget, one can easily see, the problems and the worries which this foundation created for us. This house belonged to, and depended on, the General Administration. Issoudun extended itself to all Belgium, Holland and Catholic Germany. We found there keen promoters for our undertakings, as well as great support. Our French name was no obstacle whatsoever. When we set up Provinces for the expansion of the Congregation, we left to them, in order to provide financial resources, whatever we were taking out of these countries, and now by way of thanks you direct your complaints at us, if not to say calumnies. You accuse us of squandering money! You forget, then, that it is the mother house which gave rise to you, founded the missions, the houses of Salzburg, Rome, Barcelona, Watertown, Glastonbury, Tilburg, at the cost of very great sacrifices, and you are surprised that we are in need, having experienced expulsions and persecution over 20 years.

We do not complain, go on, about these trials stirred up from hell, since it is a mark of honour which rebounds on the whole Society. Your mother house is about to see itself banished from France and its goods and properties confiscated. In place of stirring yourself to come to its help and find a refuge here or there in the dioceses bordering on France, where French is spoken, you want, you also, to have it, with its personnel, expelled from Belgium, and deny it all help in order to survive. A son cannot be more cruel to his poor mother, thrown outside her door and persecuted. Breaking the fourth Commandment, "Honour thy father and mother", has never brought happiness to children who are forgetful. Read, then, number 178 of the Constitutions and you will find there that the Superior General and his Council have the right to dispose of what is superfluous in each house in favour of pious undertakings. A reply has already been forwarded to Fr. Wammerson (should be Fr. Wemmers) about the complaint you make against the Issoudun office. You can read the letter and judge for yourself its sincere, convincing, quality. I repeat to you, Father, that we haven't yet made any decision. We await the voting and the promulgation of the law. Thereafter, we shall advise you.

Please accept my best wishes in C.J.

*To Father Michel Nivard, MSC, Antwerp.
Rough draft.*

L 19010618

Issoudun, June 18, 1901

My Dear Child,

The memorandum you forwarded to me was passed on to all the members of my Council and, together with them, I carefully considered it. We were all taken aback with it as it demonstrates an unbelievable interference on your part in issues which are no concern of yours and were not put before you, revealing such a blind reassurance in your own views as against the authority of your Superiors. It demonstrates such a complete lack of charity towards members of the same family who are threatened with persecution, containing accusations lightly levelled against prestigious members of the Society and, finally, written with such bravado and insolence that, quite rightly, it could be considered unfair even if it was written by a Superior to the least considered (deserving) of his subjects. Accordingly, it became clear to us that it was impossible not to reprimand an action of this nature under pain of allowing religious charity to be destroyed in the Society, the very bulwark of discipline and piety.

Accordingly, following several days given to reflection, it has been decided that a canonical warning should be imposed upon you, and for a period of one month's duration you will return to the novitiate in order to make yourself familiar once more with the basic principles of the religious life and spirit. But having received your letter of explanation, and having consulted my Council, and taking into consideration the admission you have made about acting in a foolhardy fashion, without taking into consideration the gravity of your action, I have deemed it appropriate to withhold the canonical imposition, and commute the month in the novitiate into thirty stations of the cross which you will make in all humility, and piously, as soon as your work makes it possible to do so. I would like to think that you will accept this appropriate penance in the same spirit as that which animated your Superiors when imposing it, and that it will have beneficial consequences for your spiritual and religious life.

I commend this to the heart of the divine Master in whom I bless you.

J. Ch. MSC.

*The above letter is neither in the handwriting or style of Fr. Chevalier and was most likely written by Fr. Piperon. Issoudun, July 7, 1901

Dear Venerable Lord,

I thank you for your kind letter and prayers on my behalf. I also pray greatly for you and your very interesting mission.

1. We very willingly authorize you to accept the perpetual vows of dear Brother Boniface, which we accept without any queries. Boniface, Jan van Reusel, was born at Tilburg on Jun 24, 1871; he died at Fribourg, Switzerland, January 13, 1937.

2. Good Mother Hartzler insists that there should always be at least 2 Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart together in each station. You may join young native girls with them if you so wish. The same holds for our missionaries; they must not be left alone on their stations since it is too dangerous both for their piety and religious life. Mother General intends to send you new sisters in September who will take red hearts (emblems) to you.

3. The Fiji Islands have been evangelized a long time; the young girls who have been brought together in a grouping by Bishop Vidal probably belong to the second or third generation (of Christians) and offer a greater likelihood of perseverance than yours. Be cautious in setting up this undertaking and do not move too precipitately if you want to avoid disappointments.

It is unwise to give them a religious habit and call them Sisters and the young boys Brothers since this is the prerogative only of those who are properly vowed religious. Your group of young indigenous girls and boys can be no more than catechists. In order to distinguish them from others naturally provide them with a costume a little different from that which they normally wear, but nothing which is like a religious habit, since they are only supportive lay workers, male and female mission-supportive helpers. Call these young natives catechists, oblates of the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph and the young girls oblates of Our Lady or Mary. Do not have them making promises of perseverance other than for a year and you can have them renew the commitment year by year if you are satisfied.

As regards such an organization of helpers, you do need to have recourse to Rome since it's not a religious order you have founded and testimonial letters are not needed in any way. Being the bishop in your mission territory you alone are responsible for the choices you make. Obviously you are the Superior by right and can delegate your powers to whomsoever you wish. This work involving native catechists is your responsibility alone.

4. You can send Fr. Gressin to Sydney first and if our confrères there cannot make use of him they will send him back to Europe. You do right to get rid of him since he is not suitable for the missions.

5. You will know that the French Government has passed a law dissolving all Congregations of males and females, promulgated on the first of July. We have three months to provide for ourselves. It's ruinous for Congregations in France. Pope Leo XIII has protested, but the sectarians (anti clericals) have taken no notice of him. It is likely that we shall have missionaries available also to be sent to you. What are we going to do in order to get by and recruit? Pray for us.

Cheerio, my dear Lord. Please accept my best wishes in C.J.

August 18, 1901

Dear Fr. Meyer,

The regulations (prescribing laws affecting religious congregations) have been made public and they make the situation more complicated and sensitive. Read the Universe article in today's issue. You will have the issue clarified for you.

Fr. Carrière wrote to me this morning to say that he had seen the Cardinal of Paris and he is very much well disposed to us, being of the view that we should seek approval, but he doesn't know what regulation is going to appear. The Archbishop of Bourges doesn't return until the 26th of this month. It's calamitous!

Have you spoken to Mr. Tardivau about our plans? Could he take fifteen or twenty from our little Issoudun college? Perhaps one could add on to his one or two of our lay students! See what he thinks about this proposal. I am inclined to think that the Bishop will approve of it. Would he have the title of bachelor of laws?

If Canon Renaudet, who is so committed to us, agreed either to be chaplain at the basilica or chaplain and director of the pilgrimage, this would be ideal. Try and find out from him... he would act in our name and we could rely on him.

Fr. Lanctin wrote me a long letter this morning. Canet greatly pleases him. There would be places there for 40 scholastics. He refers to different projects which would need to be discussed. We have a Council meeting on Saturday. Be at Issoudun on Saturday night.

Cheerio, Father; convey my good wishes to all.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Issues to be put before His Grace.

1. Should we or should we not request approval?
2. The Issoudun parish. For the sake of, and in the interest of, our works, I must keep it. In order to do so I shall resign as Superior General and request Rome to make me a secular (priest). (The law was not aimed at diocesan clergy.)
3. In relation to our recruitment for the missions and as regards financial resources absolutely necessary for the upkeep of our scholastics, the novitiate, the upkeep of an apostolic school, responsibility for the basilica, the pilgrimages, the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart confraternity, the parish of Issoudun is indispensable to us.
4. If one does not request this, or if it is refused, which appears likely, an understanding to be reached with His Grace is vital in order to hold on to our most important projects, and this by way of having some of our confrères, originally from the diocese, staying on secularized (priests) at Issoudun. In these circumstances we could draw on the contribution of 2,000 francs (about 6,854 euros) which each year we give to the Archbishop for the well being of his diocese, by way of expressing our keen gratitude.
5. Curates.
6. Our Sacred Heart (day) school (as distinct from that of the Petite Oeuvre).

Issoudun, August 28, 1901

Dear Fr. Genocchi,

The Archbishop returned to Bourges on Saturday night and I went to see him on Sunday. I had a long conversation with him during which he was kind and supportive.

In the event that we are not approved, he promised to make every effort to keep our chapel open, to hold on to our pilgrimage and archconfraternity by secularizing what belongs to us in his diocese. We shall see.

I requested him to regularize the Fr. Vaudon situation either by having him return to us or getting him to ask for release from his vows. He told me that the latter was more appropriate and that already Fr. Vaudon had forwarded a request for release from his vows to the Cardinal Prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. If it comes to you, you can vote in favour. The Archbishop will make him a prebendary canon (with a fixed revenue attached to the title) if he so wishes.

Having consulted with the Assistants I shall forward to the Holy See:

1. My resignation as Superior General, Fr. Lanctin having been appointed by the Chapter as my replacement.
2. My request for secularization. Whether approved or not by the Government, this twofold precautionary measure is necessary if it is our wish that I remain archpriest of Issoudun. By becoming a member of the diocesan clergy, and no longer Superior General, the Government will have no longer any pretext to request that I be replaced by a diocesan priest. I can oversee our undertakings and gather some resources.

It is likely that we shall try and get more secularizations either in Issoudun or elsewhere. I send on to you my request of the Sovereign Pontiff, which you will kindly pass on with your observations to His Eminence Cardinal Gotti.

Assuring you, dear Father, of my best wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Having entered into discussions we were advised not to look at all for approval which, most likely, would have been refused and complicate still further our situation, making it more problematic. We are very disappointed! At my last meeting with the Archbishop of Bourges, I asked His Grace to try and find out what there is said against us in the file with the Ministry of Worship so that we could react against the complaints imputed to us. His reply to me was that he had no remit to do that, but if the Holy See so requested him, he would willingly do so. Speak to your supportive Protector and do as he says.

Dear Father,

I have had this letter from Issoudun today containing the request for secularization signed by Father General, and this very day also I passed it on to VV and RR (the appropriate Vatican personnel). One can gather that they are really very embarrassed in Issoudun because Fr. Meyer's letter does not appear to have anticipated this request, which in effect is very legitimate.

As for the Vaudon case, it seems to me that there is nothing to be done other than to wait. So far nothing has been brought to the attention of the Congregation (in Rome).

As for the issue to be discussed with the Cardinal Protector, referred to in the postscript, will you consider if there is not reason for me to discuss the matter with Cardinal Parocchi? Be kind enough to send back to me this letter which you should have.

Here there is nothing new. Lakaff is a little better. Greetings from everybody to you all.

With warm regards from all here to all of you.

With warm greetings.

P.M. Orlandi, MSC.

Most Holy Father,

The under-signed has the honour of requesting Your Holiness, for the purpose of safeguarding the interests of his institute and the preservation of his title, Archpriest of Issoudun, with respect to two favours:

1. that of accepting his resignation as Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart;
2. that of secularizing him as long as events require it to be so, while at the same time preserving in the internal forum his obligations and duties as a religious.

May Your Holiness be kind enough to bless me while accepting my deepest homage and commitment, my deepest and absolute obedience in Christ.

My Dear Fathers,

1. I have at my request received two briefs from Rome; the one secularizing me, the other accepting my resignation as Superior General of our dear Congregation. These briefs, I believe, will be put into effect on the first of October next, or straightaway if you think it convenient. Fr. 2. A matter to be put before the Archbishop:

September 16, 1901

My Very Dear Fathers,

I have at my request received two briefs from Rome, one secularizing me the other accepting my stepping down as Superior General of our dear Congregation. These briefs, I believe, will come into operation on the first of October next, or straightaway if you think it appropriate! Rev. Fr. Lanctin, appointed by the Chapter, is substituting (sic!) for me and takes over the direction of the Society.

These times are difficult, but thanks to the good spirit which activates the Assistants and the wise, well considered advice to which they will always give testimony, the General Administration can only benefit from this take-over. The bonds forged by discipline will be advantageously re-affirmed, while the religious spirit relieved of certain problem-creating elements will again recover its place among us which it should never have lost. It is under this twofold set of circumstances that we shall merit the Sacred Heart's protection. Be resolute and demanding about faithful observance of the vows. It will be in vain if we try to look elsewhere for a gauge of real progress.

Challenge over-enthusiasm and adventurous undertakings. Do not start anything without knowing where your resources are going to come from. It's all very well to trust in divine Providence, but watch over yourselves from being so tempted. How many religious communities, lacking in prudence, have found themselves pitched into situations where they have been so inextricably caught up that they finish up disgraced and looked down upon!

I am not without concern about our financial state. We are at the end of our resources; where are we going to find the money needed to cover the expenses necessarily covering our journeys into exile, setting ourselves up, the upkeep of all our personnel? Do not be looking for members but, rather, for quality. In the predicament where we find ourselves, let us not hesitate to weed out youngsters from the Petite Oeuvre and those scholastics who do not offer satisfactory guarantees. It would be better to have no more than a good small number in each category than, perhaps, expose them to a catastrophe. Again, I repeat that we make a serious decision and only keep those whom we can reasonably expect to keep without being imprudent. Up to this our youngsters have been educated more as children of the bourgeoisie than as future missionaries who must live in poverty. They must become accustomed to look after themselves in very respect and trained to be orderly and to economize. Take care to select them from families which are not very poor (we have become aware of the serious problems arising in this respect), leaving to the responsibility of the parents their upkeep at least, and in this manner we shall experience great advantages in every respect. We must at all costs imbue these youngsters with a new spirit. The Petite Oeuvre and the scholasticate have deviated from their original aim and purpose; our duty is to bring things back to what they had been like before if we want to avoid recent and past set-backs.

I should like to draw your attention to the quality of Superiors and those directing our undertakings. Concern yourselves about the choice of competent, serious-minded, men, favouring, supporting, the Rule, given to the upkeep of discipline, offering good example to all, avoiding taking themselves off and absenting themselves from their houses. They (these Superiors) need to be on the watch-out for everything and must not allow abuses to be introduced which soon can come to be looked upon as what is customary, which thereafter would be difficult to root out. They must be available to all. Success will depend on their vigilance, wisdom, good administrative qualities.

The General Council needs to be very prudent and committed. In all the decisions it makes it will have foremost in mind the glory of God, the salvation of souls, the well being of the Congregation and it will endeavour to bring this about by maintaining the spirit of its foundation, regular discipline, piety and apostolic virtues. It will add to the frequency of house visitations, taking a complete estimate of their status from the spiritual and material point of view.

It goes without saying that those who direct the Society overall must have an impact on their confrères through their prudence, consistency in regularity, discretion, impartiality. Their quality of life and virtue should be above every reproach. They should never allow in themselves what they criticize in others. They must never forget that being in view all eyes will be focused on them.

May the divine Heart renew us in the spirit of our holy vocation, making of us men of faith, prayer, self-denial, commitment, mortification and sacrifice, and we shall, thereby, be worthy of the beautiful mission which he has confided to us.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Dear Child,

We are not petitioning for approval; it is, therefore, exile and all the consequences arising from that. May the good Lord have pity on us!

The direction of the Society will be situated in Chimay, Belgium, the novitiate in Glastonbury, England, the scholasticate in either Algeria or Tunisia, the Petite Oeuvre at Canet-de-Mar, near Barcelona, Spain.

The decision has been taken that I shall stay on in Issoudun with my title and responsibility as parish priest to look after our properties and take care of our basilica, and, if that is possible, also looking after our pilgrimage and the archconfraternity centre. I hope to have with me several of my confrères who will have been secularized (as if they were diocesan priests and not the object of the law as distinct from religious order clergy). I am obliged to undertake all this in the interest of the Congregation.

My health holds up, but it isn't great. Pray for me! What is going to happen on the 2nd of October? Will not the government insist on closure for our chapel? I am not without a great deal of lively concern and worry. I regularly pray for you and your family.

Cheerio, my dear child. I bless you with my best blessing; please accept my best wishes in C.J.

The reference to the scholasticate in Algeria and Tunisia needs to be clarified. The philosophy students were already at Bouzarea, Algeria, with Fr. Jourdon in charge and Fathers Wigishoff and Cros as lecturers, having gone there in the first place to avoid the three years' military service, but on becoming aware that the law prescribing military service over three years equally held in Algeria, this same year, 1901, the scholasticate moved to Canet-de-Mar, near Barcelona.

Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart established at Issoudun (Indre).

I

Request for Authorization

The under-signed, Arthur Lanctin, residing at Issoudun (Indre), acting in the name of, and as Superior General of, the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, has the honour to place in the hands of Monsieur the President of the Council, the Minister of the Interior and for Cults, by way of executing Article 13 of the July 1 law, 1901, a request seeking authorization for the said Congregation. The Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart has its Paris residence at 21 rue de Calais. It oversees 3 particular establishments, namely:

1. A house in Issoudun, with a public school.
2. A public secondary school at Chezal-Benoît (Cher), in the canton of Lignières, and a house for the formation of its members.

The undersigned encloses with his request the documents required in Article 2 of the ministerial prescription, July 2, 1901, as well as the approval of the Congregation's statutes by His Eminence the Cardinal of Paris for the dioceses in which the Congregation is situated.

Issoudun, September 26, 1901

Arthur Lanctin

Although signed by Lanctin, the above is not in his hand-writing. It would appear that the text came from Chevalier himself. It was he who added Vichy, a residential house; 87 rue Thiers, Marseilles, the mission procure and Bouzarea, Algeria, temporarily a formation house. Equally, acknowledgement of these houses was sought. See also below Article 2610.

II

Statutes of the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

Article 1. The beginning of this Congregation

In December 1854 two Issoudun curates, very much aware of a priest shortage, concurred with the idea of living in common with the approval of the ordinary and placing themselves at the service of the parochial clergy. They presented this proposal to Cardinal Du Pont, then Archbishop of Bourges, who gave it full approval and installed in September 1855 the two priests, under the title Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, in the building they occupy at the present day. Some confrères came to join them and they formed a community which developed as time went on. Later the Sovereign Pontiff, Leo XIII, gloriously reigning, gave this small Congregation the two huge vicariates of Melanesia and Micronesia in Oceania (South Pacific), where it has evangelized for 20 years and not without success; 64 of its missionaries spread about these primitive lands, personnel numbering 20 already dead as a result of their labours.

Article 2. The Congregation involves itself, under the authority of Their Lordships the Bishops, in different apostolic ministries: preaching, education of the youth, responsibility for undertakings which bishops entrust to its members, and foreign missions, especially among the pagans.

Article 3. The Society is led by a Superior General appointed for 12 years at a General Chapter and by 4 Assistants also elected at the General Chapter.

Article 4. Each of its houses is led by a local Superior, assisted by two advisers and appointed for three years by the Superior General and his Council.

Article 5. The Congregation has lay brothers who play no role in its administration. It engages them for workaday activities and cooking.

Article 6. The duration of the first period of training is at least one year and 18 months at most, and then there is a 3-year acceptance in the Society. On completing this assigned time they are, if it is their wish, and meets with approval, incorporated definitively; if there isn't approval and acceptance they will leave.

Article 7. Each one keeps radical rights over his patrimonial possessions, that which at root is his as well as that to which he succeeds. He is free to dispose of his property in favour of his parents and also any revenue accruing to him, which last becomes a requirement if his parents are in need. As for interest, he may dispose of it in favour of his relatives or in favour of a third party, or of the Congregation, in which latter case he will have it made over to the common fund as administered by the Superior. If for whatever reason someone leaves the Congregation, he will take away with him all that is rightly his.

Article 8. Every individual who gives rise in his behaviour to disregard for the rules, who pursues a life of dissipation, who scandalizes his companions and doesn't want to change his behaviour, will be expelled from the Congregation.

Article 9. The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart are subject to the jurisdiction of the diocesan bishop as regards the responsibilities they have undertaken on his behalf; they are also subject to the laws of the land.

We the undersigned state that we are accepting on behalf of our Congregation the statutes herewith presented.

The State of its Property and Financial Resources.

Article 1. The Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart does not own or possess anything in its own right. Everything which it has is leased or sub-leased from the Indre insurance company which is the owner of everything, except for the Bouzarea house which is part of the property owned by the Archbishop of Algiers. It hasn't any furniture of its own apart from some books which are used by its members and those strictly necessary pieces of furniture in rooms as well as whatever is needed for worship.

Article 2. For the upkeep of its members and its enterprises, its resources consist of the following:

1. mass offerings of the Missionaries and contributions for their preaching;
2. the rent accruing from their inheritances;
3. the profits arising from the sale of works they write and the reviews for which they are responsible;
4. the financial returns from their houses of education (sic), and the work in which they are involved;
5. the financial benefits from the different ministries which the bishops, to whom they are subservient, wish to confer on them.

II Statutes of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Congregation.

Article 1. Origin of this little Congregation.

It began at Issoudun (Indre) in 1873. Several pious and committed women came together under the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to live a common life dependent on and with the approval of Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne of Bourges who endorsed the little community, as did his successors.

Article 2. The purpose of this little Congregation.

It aims at the provision of care for the sick and poor as well as charitable undertakings in the cause of the salvation of souls in France or abroad, particularly in mission countries.

Article 3. It is led by a Superior General elected for 6 years by majority vote and three Assistants.

Article 4. Each of these houses is led by a local Superior and two councillors appointed for three years by the General Council.

Article 5. The centre of the Congregation is at Issoudun (Indre) in the archdiocese of Bourges.

Article 6. There are lay sisters, who have no role to play in the over-seeing of the community, but are involved in upkeep and domestic arrangements.

Article 7. The training process lasts seven years; when at the end of this time if the candidates want it so, and are considered suitable, they are accepted in the Congregation; otherwise they are sent away.

Article 8. Each sister preserves her property rights as regards what belongs to her and what may come to her by will or otherwise. She may dispose of these assets in her parents' favour and also the interest; if she considers it worthwhile to keep these assets for herself, either in whole or in part, the interest which accrues must be made over to the common purse and it will be administered by the Superior. If for whatever reason she leaves the Congregation she will take with her whatever belongs to her.

Article 9. Everyone will be sent away whose behaviour gives rise to lack of observance in keeping the rules or leads a life of dissipation which scandalizes the sisters. Anyone will be sent away who does not want to change her behaviour.

Article 10. The Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart are subject to the Bishop of the diocese within which they live and to the nation's laws.

We the undersigned confirm the adoption of these statutes above for our community as approved by His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges.

Given at Issoudun in the mother house, September 1901.

III The Properties of the Congregation of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and their Resources.

Article 1. The Congregation has no properties of its own; what it occupies at Issoudun and Chezal-Benoît belongs to a civic society, being no more than a lessee itself. As for furnishings, it has only a modest amount, consisting only of what is absolutely necessary for the sisters' needs.

Article 2. The financial resources come partly from the sisters' manual work, from small annual contributions made available by some sisters' parents and from the contributions of ladies who come on retreat.

If the archpriest writes the letter let him take care to cross out the underlined parts.

1. The Archbishop is no longer the lessee, as Fr. Maillard could have told him, Fr. J. Chevalier.
  2. It is appropriate that the Archbishop should himself pick the moment, etc., to intervene.

Dear Mr. Prefect,

I believe it my duty to inform you that already sometime ago I handed in my resignation as Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and became part of the diocesan clergy, in total dependence on the Archbishop of Bourges, remaining purely and simply parish priest, archpriest, of Issoudun.

Aware of your good will, Mr. Prefect, I come to request, given the importance of the town of Issoudun, which has only one parish church, permission to celebrate mass as before in the Sacred Heart chapel, in order to facilitate the faithful in that part of the town to carry out their religious duties. It is also the wish of our pious and venerable Archbishop Servonnet, who is, over a number of years, the lessee of this property.

I have the honour to be, Mr. Prefect, with the deepest respect,

Archpriest of Issoudun.

Article 2608To the Editor of the Echo des Marches newspaper, Issoudun.*

L 1901930

Undated, likely September, 1901

Mr. Editor,

Your leading article on Sunday deeply shocked the conservative people of Issoudun. You had accustomed us to an approach, particularly in recent times, which was more straightforward and decisive. You are beginning to instigate a withdrawal approach which can be damaging for you and greatly concerning for us. Fear undoubtedly is being experienced by you, and before the presence of the advancing enemy the outspoken threat, you dare not preserve the glorious position which you had acquired. It was not, then, necessary to blow the trumpet so loudly. Who compelled you to do so? The politics of balancing matters which you would appear to be taking on will result in the sad outcome of satisfying no-one. Our enemies will not believe in your sincerity and your friends will disengage from you. If you want to fight on the side of order, do so with loyalty and without beating about the bush. Leave aside questionable principles and regrettable concessions which have harmed us.

Having blackened with a certain degree of vigour in your April 4 issue, the measures which appeared to you as being arbitrary, apolitical, illiberal, harassing, unfair, incoherent, illegal, dangerous, criticized in all impartial newspapers, etc., you leave it for us to gather that you are about to give them your complete approval. On what reasons do you rely in order to justify such a volte face? You don't give one. Have you the power to change the very essence of things, make error become truth and good become evil? One would be tempted to think so.

For you the justice of an issue will now depend on some sort of tribunal. It will suffice for you that massive acceptance is sufficient reason to accept without scrutiny. You are, then, on the side of those who maintain that force must always prevail over rights. It is not appropriate, Sir, for a serious-minded, self-respecting, man to contradict himself in this way at such short notice. You can judge for yourself: "If the Senate," you say, "gives up on its return and waives the projected appeal and thereby acknowledges the legality of the decrees (those of March 29), we will respect the position it will have adopted and protest in the name of the law against the inappropriate resistance being organized." It's only a few days since you were stating the contrary, looking upon the government as being blind... You mightily thundered against it that "in this way it was embarking on a campaign fraught with danger, that its decrees were unlawful, that it was subservient to a calamitous way of thinking, which would lead it to create for itself the most formidable and invincible opposition". If the Senate, under the impression that its resistance is purposeless, or overcome by fear, approves by its silence or by its votes the violation of the most sacred and inalienable rights, according to you we must all draw the conclusion that these decisions are irrefutable and the wisest course rests with it. It will not be likely, or please a particularly radical Chamber, to revise the proscriptive 93 laws which would confiscate property, exile or send to the scaffold honest, decent, citizens. And if a complacent Senate approves of these monstrous arrangements then, according to your principles, you should "...respect the position which has been adopted and protest in the name of the law against the apolitical resistance of the victims...". There, my dear editor, is the logical outcome of what follows from your way of thinking.

"We shall," so you repeat, "be with those who request their congregations to abide by the law and request that authorization which is needed for them to exist legally." What a bafflingly worded order would have been conveyed to you, Sir, since April 4, causing you to change so radically your approach? Here is what you wrote earlier: "From the moment that the authorization requested by the Congregations is rightly given to them by law, they cannot doubt the outcome of their demands. The Chamber will turn it down and it is purposeless for them to acknowledge the legality of its decrees. The Congregations will await, then, the result of the recourse which they will not fail to make to the courts at a time they judge to be opportune. They have, as it happens, found themselves agreeing here on this issue with the consultative committee, one of whose members, Mr. Delsol, yesterday presented an enlightening résumé of the jurisprudence and legislation."

Is it possible, Sir, to inflict on us a more unbelievable presentation of the facts? What confidence can you inspire in your readers? You attribute to Catholics sentiments and feelings unworthy of their honesty, reproving their religious faith. Here are your own words: "The Jesuits (that is to say, as you state elsewhere, committed Christians) are those competent people, wise, wily in all forms of casuistry, and not at all embarrassed to get around the law when they cannot face it. They are familiar with and know how to put into practice the famous Italian proverb 'He who makes the law knows how to turn it to his advantage'. You can be certain that it is so used." This quotation in a foreign language, of which you don't know the first word, proves beyond doubt that your articles are made up of cuttings made here and there in different newspapers. I invite you to choose your sources better. Disillusion yourself, Sir. The Jesuits, no more than the rest of Catholics, do not have recourse to subtleties, cunning, trickery, belonging rather to the school of Christ and not that of Machiavelli. (The Italian philosopher and politician of Reformation times, 1469-1527, the adjectival use of whose name is associated with astuteness, trickery, sharp, self or group advantageous practice.) They (the Jesuits) endeavour to make use of their rights to counteract straightforwardly the arbitrary nature of injustice.

What did you think, on April 4, of that group of citizens whom you so gratuitously, unfeelingly, attack today? It would be nice to know. Let us reproduce your words: "The expelling of the Jesuits, on the supposition that one can succeed in doing so, will not rid the government of the adversary it most envisages, since that adversary, as the statement of order (the Mot d'Ordre) so very rightly says, is not the Jesuit Congregation, but rather 'the Catholic spirit', which radicals call 'clerical' and which is nothing other than the religious spirit." This campaign will be no more than an impotent and fatal harassment for the Republic. All the conservative papers are unanimous in disapproval.

What could have changed so quickly your tirade? What has happened in your office? What kind of pressure was it to which you were subjected?... Forsaking your former self, "following your being knocked down on the Damascus road," you advise the government to win out "by giving state education massive development, perfecting all educational methods, having the best teachers, spreading among the young generation such truths and moral views that no-one can be above the State in the ability to teach people and produce honest and committed citizens. Congregations (religious orders) will soon disappear, carried away by the powerful breeze of freedom and progress".

What becomes, then, "of their invincible superiority" which you justly acknowledge on April 4, and which their most embittered opponents acknowledged during the latest Senate discussions? Have no worry at all, their striking success of the past and present gives assurance for those of the future. Your wish to see the disappearance "of religious congregations" and "the congregational spirit" will not be accommodated. They will be there as long as the world lasts, since they have the promised assurance of immortality. Their mission is that of spreading the light of knowledge and truth. If by misfortune your vicious expectations were to be fulfilled, society would soon be caught up in the most unrestrained fanaticisms. Religion is as needful to man as the daily bread which nourishes him, ordering his conscience, becoming a secure basis for family life and good government. There you have the foundation stone and the key to the vault of the whole moral edifice. Misfortune to him who rejects this!

I cannot, in ending, prevent myself from saying to you, Sir, that you abuse most oddly the confidence that the Sacred Heart demonstrates towards you. I am in admiration before the patience of these gentlemen. This Congregation, over 15 years, has helped you to survive and prosper, meriting more appreciation from you, having a right to different procedures, approaches, on your part. You have in all this acted badly.

Concerning the Congregation's approval.

Two issues present themselves.

- I. Request on our part for approval.
- II. Refusal of approval on the part of the Government.

I. Request for approval.

In this case:

1. Are we obliged to present the Statutes such as approved by Rome?

2. Can they be changed or made anew to meet the circumstances?
3. Is it necessary to make known the names and places of our foreign houses, the personnel in them and the assets they have? It seems to me that this would be inconvenient and highly dangerous. Would it not suffice to mention only our French residences over which the Government will need to exercise some control? Outside its own frontiers its rights would cease. Is this Your Grace's view?

It is stated in the ministerial document that we must make an inventory of all movable and immovable assets. For the last 4 years we no longer legally own anything since it is the Société Civil Insurance Society (bank) of the Indre which has the ownership of all we have. We are simply lessees or sub-lessees of certain properties and furnishings at our disposal. We have to state, therefore, that properly speaking we have nothing of our own.

As for the resources provided for the upkeep of our undertakings and for our subsistence, we need to say that they come from our colleges, from preaching, the sale of books we have written and might write in the future, from mass stipends and the sale of certain devotional objects. According to our Constitutions, each religious maintains radical rights to his patrimonial assets, the revenues accruing from them forming part of his resources.

If one has to refer to the aim of the Congregation, I do not see it other than education of youth, preaching, the Oceania missions among the natives, and the different ministries which their Lordships the bishops would like us to undertake and to whose jurisdiction we are completely submissive.

II. Refusal of approval.

1. In the event of the Government's refusal to approve us and we become dissolved, would His Grace like to incorporate in his diocese those of us who are not already in it?
2. What measures should be undertaken to safeguard the continuity of the basilica and the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart pilgrimage? This basilica could be regarded as a support chapel in a town of 14,000 people where there is only the one parish church. Or, alternatively, one or two priests might be appointed chaplains in Issoudun by the Archbishop.
3. Our little college, so highly thought of by the Catholic population of Issoudun, is to all intents and purposes Your Grace's as the landlord of the whole establishment. Fr. Lanctin, an Issoudun native, will continue as the lessee with some priests aiding him, together with supportive laity.
4. I can keep on my 4 curates, some of whom are already incorporated in the diocese, Your Grace, by way of association titles accepting us as part of His Grace's clergy. Our dedication and dependence would be absolute.
5. The Congregation having collapsed in France, it goes without saying that I shall no longer be the Superior (General).

It was to here, this address in Belgium, that the General Administration moved from Issoudun, following the French Government's decision to disband all religious Congregations in France.

Issoudun, October 11, 1901

Dear Fr. Meyer,

Thank you for letting me have your news. I am pleased to know that you are well settled in. But it seems to me that you are very isolated and I ask myself how you can supervise the moral and financial interests of the Society. I can see that one and the other of you will be often away. How can you consult with each other and take decisions which need to be taken at that moment?

There are two issues which are a cause of concern to me:

1. The religious spirit which has to be fostered for some and renewed in the case of others, when you are so scattered.
2. The restructuring and control of finances. Stop Fr. Maillard from borrowing if he finds himself short of money since this is ruinous. He is inclined to act on his own and you will not know about what is owed until there is no time left to remedy the situation. If you become aware that you are lacking funds for the upkeep of your numerous personnel, do not hesitate to get rid not only of what is worthless in value, but also of those which only offer you doubtful guarantees. Do not concern yourself with the number.

Here, nothing new to report; we always await the promised visits. The Government seems disposed to ignore civil societies and dispossess the Congregations of their properties.

My health is holding up.

Cheerio, Father. My best wishes in C.J.

Dear Child,

Yes, it's all over! The seals are posted on the doors of the Sacred Heart house and the basilica. The centre of the association has been transferred to Saint-Cyr where meetings are held. The Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart haven't laid aside their habit. Only those who wore the white habit have changed it for a black one (these being the choir sisters). Pray for us. I do not forget you in the difficulties in which you find yourself.

Let us honour the designs of God and submit ourselves in the face of His divine Providence which will see to it that good will come out of evil.

Issoudun, December 27, 1901

My Lord,

I thank you for your letter which you were pleased to write to me about the Canadian parish of Watertown and the carelessness which my confrères bring to the running of it. I was in total ignorance about the facts which Your Lordship brings to my attention. The problem is not, perhaps, such that it cannot be remedied. We sent an Assistant (General) on a canonical visit of our Oceania missions a month ago and he is due to return by North America, stopping over at Watertown. I shall, Your Lordship, pass your justified complaints on to him. He will see on the spot what changes need to be made in order to meet fully your wishes. If, therefore, Your Lordship does not want any precipitate action and waits for the arrival of our visitor, I shall be most grateful to you; it would mean a delay of one year or so arising from this long journey. In the meantime we shall be writing to our Watertown fathers requesting them to become more actively involved with the Canadians, and in no way whatsoever to neglect the French language. I perfectly understand the reasons which led you to write the letter I am honoured to receive from you. My confrères instead of writing directly to the apostolic delegate should have been in touch with you beforehand and sought your advice.

You will be aware, My Lord, of the persecution which has blown up in France against the religious congregations. We also have been attacked and we have been forced to go elsewhere, moving our novitiate to England and some of our scholastics to Quebec (Canada) and the remainder to Spain and Rome where we have houses. The general administration of the Society is at Chimay (Belgium). Having been for many years archpriest of Issoudun and unable in the present circumstances to leave the parish since so many major issues call for my presence, I have resigned as Superior General. The last Chapter, taking my age into consideration, gave me, at my request, a vice assistant with the right of succession; the choice falling on the Assistant, Fr. Lanctin. It is he, then, who effectively replaces me, living at Chimay and awaiting more favourable times.

I presume then, My Lord, to commend myself to your good prayers, together with all our undertakings, as I offer you, together with my appreciation, my most sincere good wishes in C.J.

Article 2616

A résumé of the biggest problems affecting the administration from the Society's beginnings up to the present.

D 19011231

Undated; likely end of 1901

The plan to have a Congregation was scarcely thought of when, immediately, problems arose. Our dear confrères of the present day are in no way aware of all the struggles we had to go through and without the favour and support of God nothing would have come about.

The Archbishop of Bourges was not in the least supportive at first, demanding guarantees which we could not provide him with short of heavenly intervention. While heaven had declared itself favourable, prejudices were always there. But once overcome and approval granted, following quite a number of initiatives, we were financially well enough circumstanced to begin the undertaking and consolidate it. Recruitment presented fresh problems.

Bogus, insincere, brethren slid among us. Taking advantage of the lack of solidity in the provisional chapel, they denounced us to the Archbishop and entry to the chapel was forbidden. It was necessary to think about a new building and collect money for this. What concerns, trips, refusals, disappointments. With all this going on, Cardinal du Pont appointed Fr. Maugenes to take charge of the Cathedral. Deprived of my first and principal collaborator, I was left only with dear Fr. Piperon and it seemed to us that all was lost; despite prayers, suggestions, appeals, nothing would draw the Archbishop to leave our confrère with us. Nevertheless, when he had been away for several years, he returned to Issoudun as parish priest. The development of the Sacred Heart (buildings and church), the influence gained by the Missionaries and the large gathering of people following the services in the (MSC) chapel, made him (Maugenes) take umbrage and become hostile to us. There were problems and disagreements. Eventually, in 1871, he resigned and became a Dominican.

The Our Lady of the Sacred Heart devotion was denounced to Rome by a French bishop, Dupanloup, and we were forced to become engaged on a number of occasions in defence of the devotion. Warmly and keenly supported by Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, of blessed memory, we became victorious, Rome officially acknowledging its (the devotion's) legitimacy, with Pope Pius IX approving the coronation of the miraculous statue in 1869.

This issue had scarcely concluded when another arose with extreme feelings and passions accompanying it. When devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart grew rapidly in Rome, a committee of Roman prelates and high-ranking personages did everything they could to monopolize it and make Issoudun become bereft. In consequence, there were drawn out debates, journeys, leading nowhere and petitions to the Holy See to have our rights vindicated. Eventually the matter ends with justice rightly meted to us.

The vindictive campaign of the opposition was not appeased, however, with attention now becoming focused on the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statue. A group of plotters was organized against her, claiming that the statue broke with accepted presentations and the infant, instead of standing before his mother, should be held in her arms. The opposition, aided by like-minded rival groups, did so well that they won their case, so much so that one day, to our great surprise, we became aware of a decree from the Sacred Congregation of Rites insisting on a new representation in the future (of the statue) for public worship. Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, who had not been consulted about this change, was quite amazed, writing a memorandum in support of the former model, which he said was in no way contrary to Church regulations and enjoyed the very special privilege of a solemn coronation. He asked us to take the model to Rome. God alone knows all the annoyance this issue created for us. The Sacred Congregation taken aback by his (the Archbishop's) assured conviction, considered the report of the Archbishop of Bourges in general assembly, acknowledging it to be well-founded. However, it held to its earlier decision, not wanting to change its view. But it acknowledged in an authentic statement forwarded to Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, that the crowned statue at Issoudun was beyond reproach in every respect, and that public honour could be paid to it wherever it was placed. However, for the future, "in posterum", when new statues in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart were being installed, it would be necessary to abide by the new decree so that there would be only one uniform type of statue in the association of which we remain in charge perpetually.

Noticing that devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was spreading far and wide and having a salutary impact, a powerful Church Congregation wanted to take hold of it under the pretence that it came to be under its initiative and that one of its members had preached about it before we did so at Paray-le-Monial's Visitation convent. This statement had no foundation, and when arguments ensued representation was made to Rome, as a result of which Rome found in our favour.

From then on we believed we could work a little towards consolidating our dear society and its undertakings, but it was not quite like that. A powerful onslaught, set in motion for quite sometime already, was unleashed upon religious congregations. A satanic-inspired decree, emanating from the French ministry in 1880, ordered all religious to be expelled and their churches closed. We were included in the prohibition and had the painful experience of being thrown out on the street by the forces of public order, contravening all rights. It was calamitous! The Petite Oeuvre, the novitiate, the scholasticate, confrères, were all forced to go into exile. What sadness, preoccupation, initiatives, exhaustion! It was not alone finding a place, a base, in another country, but it entailed as well coming by the necessary financial resources for all those forced to go away in order to support their work, as well as preventing them from dying of hunger. What a frightening situation this created for the unfortunate Superior! And this state of affairs remained so for many long years.

However painful these problems were which came from outside, they are not to be compared with those which come from within. As regards the enemies of God and religion, one must be prepared for anything; nothing surprises... But when the children one has raised, nourished, brought up at the cost of very great sacrifices, turn against one, one cannot find words to express one's sorrow.

The difficult beginnings of the Society, the lack of personnel, the persecution, the exile in which we found ourselves for more than 10 years, not to omit the foundation of our missions, had inevitably, and against our wishes, brought about irregularities in the administration. Confrères given to stirring things up and motivated by a bad attitude went to any lengths in exhibiting their animosity and highly pent-up complaints against the Superior (General) and some of his Assistants, without taking into consideration the greatly sensitive situations of the past and the sacrifices made to save the Congregation from shipwreck. In a spirit of charity and reconciliation, nothing was more acceptable than to make a request to the Holy See for a general (canonical) release from all the irregularities which had come about in the phase we had been passing through. Rome was quite willing to grant the request, with everything in order once more. But it wasn't so, however, because a Godly spirit came to be replaced by insubordination and rebelliousness. The discontented (and one may ask why) began to spark a divisive spirit somewhat everywhere, especially among the younger members. Some older confrères, led by I don't know what motive, allowed themselves to go along, sending report after report to Rome requesting the disbanding of the current and past administration which, according to them, did not merit any further confidence. Rome took no notice of their request and, in consequence, there followed further dissatisfaction, fresh agitation and appeals to the Holy See, their aim, undoubtedly, to have the institute dissolved and another founded on its ruins, in keeping with their fresh appreciation of things. To cut short all these concerns which were becoming disquieting, we asked that a Chapter be convened presided over by Archbishop Marchal of Bourges. Since he died before the Chapter it was his brother and auxiliary, the Bishop of Sinope, who had taken over in the Archbishop's palace, who became involved. The ring-leaders held secret meetings and, giving themselves over to activities not in keeping with canon law, they were cruelly deceived when they saw, following the President's report, the Chapter's decisions annulled by Rome which maintained in office the current administration. Not wishing to accept, they (the opponents) set up fresh initiatives and sent a new request to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. This was the situation when Bishop Boyer of Clermont was appointed Archbishop of Bourges.

Pope Leo XIII made him his delegate and the Society's Apostolic Visitor. Even before he was installed, the MSC opposition presented him with several memoranda in their favour, full of outrageous calumnies against the former Superiors and their administration. Archbishop Boyer, taken aback, was given to despair about bringing peace and concord among us. Following a novena to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, matters took another course. The main leaders of the rebellion taking the support of our students for granted, as well as that of several younger priests, committed themselves to a genuine coup d'état, coming to inform us that they were leaving the Congregation and going to Belgium with those who wanted to follow them in order to found another order. They hadn't taken divine intervention into consideration, because at the very moment they were leaving, those whom they had expected to accompany them refused to go with them, stating that they wanted to remain faithful to their vocation as Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. So this sad episode came to an end. The Holy See, pleased to be rid of these schemers, set up at our request provinces comprising all the Northern houses which today, thank the Lord, are greatly flourishing.

After this unspeakable trial, another awaited us. The government, becoming yet more sectarian, decreed in the Houses of the Deputies and Senators that the religious orders should be disbanded and teaching by congregations forbidden: a flagrant violation of the Church's rights and of freedom itself. An amendment was passed, however, allowing Congregations to seek approval which the houses of parliament alone, after investigation, can grant. Moreover, the law gives ministers the right to dissolve Congregations, even those approved, by a simple decree if they so think fit.

Called to make a statement, the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, being persuaded that they would not get any approval, decided not to do so. They were, consequently, disbanded and took the path of exile, some to Belgium, England, Canada, others to Spain, Italy, Switzerland and the Oceania missions. Seals were placed on the mother house, the basilica and all its French properties, with disregard for the rights of the Société Civile Immobilière d'Indre (a civic society with legal and financial rights and control of property), legally set up three or four years before these events, and whose protestations has not been listened to. In consequence, an appeal has been made to the courts. Will justice be done? Let us hope against hope.

Dear Fr. Vandel,

Thanks a thousand for your very sincere good wishes and all the kind things you say about me.

In permitting our expulsion and the dispersion of our confrères and our undertakings, God has His purposes. He must be given thanks in every respect. What consoles us is that He knows how to draw good out of evil. Besides, there is this message from the Gospel: "Beati qui persecutionem patiuntur." (Blessed are those who suffer persecution.)

Yes, I have handed in my resignation; it was necessary to keep together the centre of the archconfraternity and our benefactors' and associates' correspondence at Issoudun. I only acted out of concern for our undertakings and the good of the Congregation. I warmly thank your good Sydney – Kensington – youngsters for their good wishes and the lovely letter they have written to me. I send them as well as to yourself and all our dear confrères warmest good wishes.

For the past 4 weeks I have been confined to my room with influenza. Although I am getting better, I am not yet fully recovered. I had it for the whole winter, up to now. Pray for me. I pray for you all.

My good wishes to all.

Dear Fr. Meyer,

Thank you for your kind letter and the accompanying good wishes; my own go with you. I hope that your demanding visit will be fruitful.

The Gilbert Islands mission is in a dreadful state. Good Bishop Leray is leading it to disaster with the best intentions. He adamantly wants to set up native sisters in vows and habit; imposing them on the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, which is unacceptable. Besides this good man, in his wavering, creates divisions everywhere. He thinks he is in absolute control of our religious and that the Superior General has no rights over them. This is totally wrong. Rev. Mother Hartzler has delegated her rights to Mother Isabel, the Superior, and it is the latter who should be obeyed in all that concerns the religious life and their internal regimen.

The Missionaries must have a religious Superior; His Lordship as bishop cannot be so; he falls out with everyone. You will see for yourself on the spot who you will make a choice of for this responsibility. It's a necessary requirement.

My regards to all our dear confrères.

Cheerio, dear Father; every success.

D 19020131

To the good Fathers of the General Council and the French Province.

Undated; likely end-January 1902

I bring myself in the Congregation's interests to place before you the following observations. Since you are due to come together at a Council meeting, I would ask you to examine in a serious manner the moral state of the Society and, particularly, the financial situation in the French Province.

I. See to it that abuses wherever they are to be found are to be eliminated, with none introduced.

More than ever see to it that there's an exact observance of the Constitutions and Rules, whether general or particular. It's not numbers but the quality and holiness of its subjects which comprise the strength of a society and assures its future. Do not hesitate to eliminate those wanting in piety, obedience, generosity, and whose vocation is indecisive.

II. The daily administration and financial state of the Society should, particularly, engage your attention.

1. Avoid any precipitate decisions; consider carefully what is for and against.

2. See to it that Superiors meet regularly with their Councils and do nothing without consultation (that is, without consulting them). Arbitrariness is disastrous from every point of view.

3. See to it that there is in each house a specific bursar, a safe with three keys, and that the Superiors, whoever they are, are not in control of funds. A serious-minded Council is a necessity.

3.(sic) Each must make note of the money which is received and what is given out. One should never dispense with a shrewd bursar, or ever forget that the offerings made in our favour and the resources placed at our disposal belong to the Society and must be used for its well-being.

III. The General Bursar

1. He must take into account the financial condition of all the Provinces, keep a copy of their accounts and budgets, their transactions, contracts, and the important (financial) issues which concern them. All of this should be securely kept in a safe with 3 keys, one for the Superior General, one for the First Assistant and the third for the General Bursar.

2. If the general bursar is at the same time the French Province's bursar, it is for him to keep together (and apart) the funds of the said Province in a box with three keys, as above in the case of the general bursary. He will draw from the common account in the presence of the other key-holders the money needed for the support of the Province's undertakings, and what the bursar of the mother house, the local Superior and the Superior General might need. He will take exact note of this, and every three months report to the General Council both intake and outlay.

IV. The Procurator General for the missions

1. He will put together all the finances intended for the missions in a special cabinet locked with 3 keys, of which he will have one, the Superior General another and the First Assistant the third.

2. He will deal with the Apostolic Vicars and the Propagation of the Faith having first discussed matters with the Superior General.

3. He will distribute the aid intended for each mission under the supervision and direction of the General Council.

4. He will see to it that gifts proceeding from the generosity of benefactors on behalf of the missions, bursaries set up in favour of certain missionaries and contributions from the Propagation of the Faith and the Holy Child, are not diverted from their destination.

5. If the missions do not need all the money which he has available, he could make it gain in interest to their advantage by reliable placement.

6. He will challenge procedures if the General Council wants to use this money either in helping out a Province in financial distress or in making a purchase or in building operations, when in fact he will be required to pay interest. There are so many surprises in life!

VI.(sic) At the present moment when the future is so dark and full of uncertainties, it is the Council's duty in the French Province to take careful note of the expenses which burden it and the resources on which it can draw. The time for deluding ourselves is over. It would be criminal to close our eyes and be intent on going forward no matter what, without asking ourselves where are we going.

The document finishes here abruptly.

Article 2621To the General Council Fathers and the French Province.*

D 19020131A

Undated; likely early 1902

If I handed in my resignation as Superior General in the face of the religious persecution taking place in France, it was only in the Congregation's interest. I could have gone into exile and lived in peace, feeling assured, supported, with the Vicar General given to me by the Chapter. But then it would so happen that I would have to give up being parish priest of Issoudun and a diocesan priest would have taken my place. Not being on the spot to defend our interests, deal with and undertake correspondence, gather financial resources, would, otherwise, have been a veritable disaster. That's how I understood the situation and I, therefore, sacrificed myself for the common good by holding on to a position bristling with problems, where I would encounter the most weighty responsibilities.

I had hoped that having founded the Society, which, after God, owes me everything, and having suffered so much on its behalf, for its expansion and prosperity, that having been at my wits' end and exhausted from providing resources for it which would support its work and develop it, there would have been recourse to greater considerateness in my regard. Not only was I not consulted about anything, but I was not informed about all the plans up for consideration, things kept from me as if I was a stranger, that's to say an opponent!

The purchase of the Quebec house was undertaken at my initiative; the premature setting up of the French Province and its Council, which Rome did not approve of, was carried out without a word being said to me. I can say the same about the recent trips to Fribourg to buy and set up a house for the Petite Ouvre, etc. I became aware of all this through the unintended indiscretions of certain people. Is it that I am ignored, defied, is it taking a position against me and looking on me as having no further significance in the Congregation? I would prefer to think that it is forgetfulness. I am not complaining; I simply register the facts.

Before enclosing myself in silence, I would like to draw your attention to the financial state of the French Province and the circumstances created for it by what is happening. It is your duty to provide an exact account of the responsibilities which weigh on you and the resources you have at your disposal to face them.

1. You need to consider first of all the expense you have to meet for the upkeep of the Chimay house, its personnel, and that for the Paris, Issoudun confrères, the works transferred to England, Spain, Quebec, Rome, etc. Then there are the rents you need to meet either for certain confrères, with the bank or the Société Immobilière de l'Indre (insurance, lending society), or to certain people for the amount of money they made available over a lifetime. The total of this annual expenditure must be considerable.
2. You must also take into account stable, permanent, resources, which you can dispose of. There's a calculation to be made and a balance to be struck. See, thereafter, if receipts cover expenses. If there is a surplus, it is desirable to keep it in reserve to cope with any eventualities. If, on the other hand, there is a deficit, one needs to know the exact figure.
3. One cannot delude oneself; the resources can only diminish in the sad, difficult, times we are passing through. The religious who have been expelled in such large numbers will no longer be concerned with the Petite Ouvre or subscribing to the Annals. Benefactors will have to think about parish undertakings and aiding the unfortunate expelled. If we were to be thrown out of Issoudun, which is not at all unlikely, we would lose three-quarters of the contributions made over to us. These eventualities should make us seriously pause and reflect.
4. If intake doesn't match outlay, something I very much fear, what is to be done? What every serious administration does! Balance the budget by lessening quite tightly expenses. Otherwise, it's disaster and ruin.

I would ask, then, the General Council to let me know exactly, and in detail, the financial situation of the French Province before committing itself to other, new, undertakings. I am keenly interested because if a catastrophe happens to take place – Deus avertat (God preserve us) – it's on myself alone that all the blame and responsibility will fall in the eyes of the bishops, clergy and faithful. Once I am made aware of the situation, I shall let you know what I think.

I would ask the Congregation's Council to take into careful consideration the moral and financial state of the French Province in particular.

I

Eliminate abuses wherever they are to be found, have none introduced, and more than ever pay attention to exact observance of the Constitutions, and both the general and particular regulations. It's not the number but the quality of the religious members which constitutes the strength of a society, as well as assuring its future.

II

The administration and financial issues should most especially meet with its attention.

1. Avoid precipitate decisions. See to it that Superiors regularly hold Council meetings and do nothing without consultation.
2. See to it that in each house there is a safe with 3 keys and that the Superiors, whoever they may be, do not have control over finances. There has to be a specific bursar and serious management.
3. Each one should be accountable for the money he receives and what he spends. He must never diverge from being economically shrewd, or forget in any way whatsoever that the offerings made over to us, and the resources made available to us, belong to the Society and must be used to its advantage.

III

1. The General Bursar must familiarize himself with the financial circumstances of all the Provinces, keep a copy of the accounts and budgets of each Province, its transactions and contracts, its wills, the documents which are of some (financial) interest, etc., etc. All should be kept in a safe with 3 keys, one for the Superior General one for First Assistant and the third for the General Bursar.
2. If the General Bursar is at the same time the French Province's Bursar, he will need to keep all the French Province's funds in a safe with three keys also. He will withdraw from the common fund in the presence of the other two who have keys the requisite amount of money to help the work of the said Province, and whatever the bursar of the mother house and Father General might need. He will keep exact details and every three months he will, before the General Council, provide details of intake and outlay.

IV

The Mission Procurator General

1. He puts together all the financial resources intended for the missions in a special locked safe, with 3 keys, he having one, the Superior General the second, the First Assistant the third.
2. He will be in touch with the Apostolic Vicars and the Propagation of Faith (Congregation), having consulted with the Superior General, sharing out the financial aid intended for each mission under the watchful supervision of the General Council.
3. He will see to it that contributions for the missions, coming from the generosity of the benefactors, from burses set up for missionaries, and what is allocated by the Propagation of the Faith Congregation, are not diverted from their destination.
4. He will invest this money profitably for the missions.
5. He will see to it that the General Council does not make use of these funds to pay the Society's debts, or do any buying or building even if it is willing to pay the interest. Since the money on behalf of the missions is sacred, it must be scrupulously safeguarded for this purpose.

V

At this moment in time it is a duty and requirement of the French Province to take careful stock of the situation in which it finds itself.

1. It must, first of all, consider what amount of money is needed for the upkeep of the administration which finds itself in Chimay and the confrères in Paris, Issoudun, the undertakings moved to England, Spain, Quebec, Rome, etc.
2. Make an inventory of annual expenses which must be considerable.
3. Look at the amount of interest to be paid to the Credit Foncier Bank for the Quebec and Glastonbury houses, to the Immobiliere de l'Indre Insurance Society (lending also), as well as the annual rents to be met, of which there are quite a lot.
4. At the present time note must be taken of resources available with exact figures. One must not be under any illusion about these resources diminishing more and more in the times we are living in. If we were to be pushed out of Issoudun, which is not at all unlikely, we would lose half, if not three-quarters, of our assets.
5. If intake does not match expenditure, which I very much fear to be the case, what is to be done? That which any serious administration does: balance its budget and cut down on expenditure; otherwise it's bankruptcy and collapse.

I would request you to let me know the exact financial state of your Province before there is any fresh expenditure. I am very much concerned about this since if a financial disaster overtakes us, it's principally on me that responsibility will fall.

J.C.

NB: You are within your rights in requesting the Italian Province to reimburse the Piazza Navona property, towards which I paid out about 500,000 francs (1,713,520 euros).

Dear Child,

Yes, the time for my trip has come. (The reference is to Chevalier's annual visit to la Grille, near Chinon, Madame de Cougny's home.) The 9th of June will soon be here. I hope that nothing will come in the way and that the weather will be better than it is today. The month of May has been terrible and at this present moment we have freezing temperatures, a strong wind and continuous rain. By the 9th I hope that things will have changed for the better with the return of warm weather and lovely sunshine.

I have news in a letter from Madame d'Ossaville about Madame de Richemont's illness and urgently asking for prayers on her behalf. I replied to her straightaway that we storm heaven for her in petitioning Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I hope that the operation can be avoided and that we shall not have to wait long for her recovery.

I sympathize with the sorrows of dear Mathurin and his dear wife. It's very sad for them, their joy so quickly changed into sadness. That's life... You are close to the good Lord with every fibre of your being and that's what is essential. Do not worry too much about anything else.

Please be assured, my dear child, of my respectful good wishes in C.J.

I bless you most feelingly and abundantly.

Issoudun, May 27, 1902

My Dear Children

A double ceremony brings us together today: the Golden Jubilee of the Mother Superior in this house, and the blessing of the sewing room for which you are indebted to the goodness of the generously supportive Bonneval and du Quesne families. It wasn't enough for them to have blessed the town with the St. Vincent de Paul Sisters' foundation, from which they go out everywhere to ease the misery of the poor, distributing generous alms and becoming mothers to these little orphans, but they further wished to build for the young girls a sewing room in this house which is as comfortable as it is attractive, so that they can come together for work each day. Work – there you have nature's great law. God having created Adam and Eve placed them in an earthly Paradise making it their duty to cultivate it, look after it ut operaretur (Genesis 2, 15). It was quite pleasant work, untiring with respect to their state of innocence. But there was a calamity! They disobeyed God and thereupon work became chastisement, expiation and self-preservation.

II

There is in each of us a great variety of inclinations which need to be expressed one way or another, and if not engaged in the noble and sacred activity of work, they may well be involved in the reprehensible actions of wrong-doing... etc.

Accordingly, dear children, consider yourselves fortunate to be able to make use of this sewing room. There you will receive assurance and support. I find the exemplar of sewing rooms in the Jerusalem temple... What do the young girls who are part of it engage in? It is work sanctified by prayer. In and with them I see the wondrous Virgin Mary... What a beautiful exemplar! I can offer you another: the Sisters, that is, of St. Vincent whose congregation is a massive sewing room in which all its members are given to work sanctified by prayer. Look at my dear Sister Vincent whose Golden Jubilee we celebrate today, and in those 50 years she has worked for the poor and the good Lord, never failing in her noble endeavours. What a wonderful reward is reserved for her in heaven!

It will be the same for you, dear children, if you persevere in carrying out this work. We proceed now to the chapel where we shall ask Our Lord to bestow on you, on our honoured jubilarian, her devoted companions, and on the distinguished and generous families to whom we owe so much, His most kind and abundant blessings.

Yes, hold on to your interior tranquility. It's God who makes this possible for you. The little issue which you mention is not something which should worry you. It's nothing; be at ease. The Good Lord is with you, enveloping you with His love. That is what's essential. I am sorry about Francis' attitude in regards to his wife. Your good advice will make him understand his obligations. He will listen to you and everything will take the right course. I shall pray for this outcome. You have the Good Lord, dear child, and he loves you. Do not have any worries on this score! Continue to live as you have been doing and I shall vouch for you.

Dear Father,

I was pleased with the snapshots of the Quebec students, but I was greatly taken aback not seeing them in their religious habit since they could wear it without any difficulties after the example of several other Congregations which find themselves there. One could say that we are embarrassed to be wearing the image of the Sacred Heart on our chests and displaying our characteristics when, as in Canada, it is possible to do so. There you have a feature of our Constitutions, and something for us to take pride in. Since we are officially apostles of the Sacred Heart, and since this emblem is approved by Rome, there is, accordingly, a kind of apostasy in not being willing or anxious to let it be seen. Other religious orders take pride in their habit. I deplore this tendency in our Congregation. I fear the Sacred Heart will punish us for this. Share these thoughts with those who should be told about it.

Wholly yours in C.J.

I am sad like yourself about dear Sister Aggée's death. She is a loss for the Chinon house and leaves a great gap for us. She was so devoted to you and I can understand your being upset. We shall pray earnestly for this good soul.

Seeing the way things are, I do not think, despite my keen wish, that I shall be able to go to la Grille. It's a set-back for me and also for you and, in consequence, a sacrifice which the good Lord lays on us. If, against all expectations as of this moment, it becomes possible for me to undertake this little trip, I shall immediately let you know.

Dear Father,

I read with pleasure your circular on our Missionary of the Sacred Heart vocation, and I very much hope that our dear confrères will act in conformity with the requirements you emphasize, which are of the utmost importance for me. It is only on this condition that we can count on the blessings of heaven and engage fruitfully with the sublime mission confided to us. We should be proud to exhibit visibly on our chests the representation of the Sacred Heart with which we were decorated by a holy Pope, the great, immortal, Pius IX, and had us covered with a mantle which he very much wished himself to envelop us as a glorious symbol.

J.C.

The arrangements which you let me know about as regards appointments seem shrewd to me. I hope the good Lord will bless them, as well as the different projects which you let me know about. Do not force Brother Sécundien to stay on in Issoudun; his visionary condition makes him gloomy, unusual and, sometimes, fanatical, with strange ideas. A change lasting some months, as you say, could, perhaps, be good for him. I believe that Brother Eugène would be better at the procure than anywhere else, thereby being in less of a danger to his vocation. In any event, one can try something.

Accept, my dear and reverend Father, the assurance of my best feelings in C.J.

Dear Father,

I read with interest your letter and had it read in the refectory. It's very good. I expressed the wish that all take note of it and act in keeping with it! The fact that there have been precedents gives me reason to have concerns about this one.

Nevertheless, in all the other communities the official advice of the Superior General is received respectfully and regarded as sacrosanct. I am forwarding a letter to you from a priest in the Soissons diocese. You will provide him with the answer which you consider appropriate. I shall let him know that I have forwarded his request to you.

I asked Fr. Thiriet, Superior at Montmartre, for permission to wear the scapular of the Sacred Heart for myself and the Issoudun priests. He forwarded me 20, with as many leaflets incorporating the ceremonial, and a list of indulgences which are very numerous. I handed over the rest to Fr. Maillard. If you would like to have them for all the Congregation's priests, he is prepared to send you as many scapulars as you would like at 1 franc a dozen.

I think we should promote the Sacred Heart scapulars among the fervent faithful.

Please be assured, Father, of my best wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, January 2, 1903

Dear Father,

I thank you most sincerely for your New Year good wishes. I reciprocate most wholeheartedly with my own. May the divine Heart of Jesus hear them on one side and the other.

Yes, the times are bad! We are experiencing something of it. The storm howls all the time. Despite everything, we hope against hope. God is all-powerful enough to say to the destructive waves: you shall go no further. Let us be confident! The Sacred Heart has not said his last word. Is he not the standard (Chevalier writes in Latin: labarum) of the present time and the gauge of victory? Moreover, is not Our Lady of the Sacred Heart always the Patron of difficult and desperate situations? Let us hope and pray. In any event there are special blessings associated with persecution, particularly so for the persecuted: "Beati etc." What comforts and sustains me is that God oversees all occurrences and knows how to draw good out of evil. In 1880 we thought all was lost, whereas it was then that all was saved. The grain of seed was as a result of the storm in Europe taken to America and Oceania where it took root and produced the fruits of salvation.

In 1895 the blow was shattering, the Congregation chopped at its very foundations, its very columns of support shaken; in high places support seemed to be given to the revolt, Satan endeavouring to cut the tree at its very roots, the resulting outcome being the falling down, lopping off, of dry, withered, fruit. The Sacred Heart and Our Lady heard the cry of the apostles: Salva nos, perimus (Lord save us, we are going down). Peace was restored and flourishing Provinces began to take shape. Once more in these days, violent dispersal has enforced departure, some to Belgium, some to England, Spain, Canada, Fribourg, Switzerland, where the works undertaken would appear to promise a favourable future. God alone knows what He wants to do in all this: let us leave Him to it and be confident.

I am forwarding to you the ordo you were looking for. Please, Father, be assured of my respectful good wishes in C.J.

Dear Fr. Morisseau,

I thank you most appreciatively for the good wishes with which you favour me. I, as well, convey most sincere good wishes to you. I am delighted to gather that your health has improved and I pray to God that it remains so. My own keeps quite well. When shall we see better times, if at all?... The persecution is only beginning... I am convinced that it will come to be ever more violent. May the grace of God come to our aid!

Dear Mother Liguori,

I thank you most sincerely for the good wishes you send me in your own name and in the name of your dear companions, which make me happy since they are warm and sincere. Those I send to you are no less sincere or less extensive than yours and, if the good Lord grants them, you will all be happy in the midst of your sacrifices. You will progress from virtue to virtue, working towards a lovely crown, with Heaven one day becoming your reward.

We are passing through very difficult times in France. The persecution of the religious congregations could not be more violent. Soon they will all be destroyed. Pray earnestly for us.

My health, thank the Lord, is holding up.

Please, my child, be assured of my best wishes both for yourself and your companions.

I bless you all in C.J.

I thank you most sincerely for the good wishes forwarded to me for my feast day. I for my part reciprocate with good wishes for you. And if the Sacred Heart accepts them you will continue to advance more and more in the virtues becoming to your holy state and be all of you perfect religious.

Yes, we are exposed to fresh persecutions and we can only submit ourselves to the most holy and adorable will of God. If he puts us on trial here on earth, he will reward us in heaven.

Courage and confidence!

Dear Confrère,

"The Apocalypse and the present time" are at last coming about!

I am forwarding you a copy with a communication for the French and Belgian Annals. I believe that this little work will stimulate interest and will easily spread itself. Could you not have it promoted in the Catholic papers of Belgium and Holland and, perhaps, also those of Germany? In translation the price remains very reasonable. Each copy comes to 0.80 centimes (about 2.60 euros). I only had 500 printed. The Fribourg Catholic Weekly might also perhaps promote it. See to this, and also in Quebec since I don't know anybody in these countries. If you think it opportune, I can send you on a hundred copies. I have contacted the religious weeklies in France.

I would think that the first edition will soon be sold out. We shall see about a second. Let me have your views.

My good wishes to all.

Please accept, my friend, my best wishes in C.J.

Your Grace,

The letter Your Grace pays me the honour of writing to me is too kind since it's myself, Your Grace, who should be writing to you thanking you for approaching us with so much good will and warm condescendence. You cannot imagine how Your Grace's photograph gladdened our hearts, becoming an appreciated souvenir for us all. We often speak about your great apostolic zeal, of your sensitive kindness, your continuous goodness, your simplicity in winning over all hearts.

Your greetings have been a support to us in the midst of our trials. Accordingly, we ask the Lord to keep you for long to come at your lovely Quebec Church (diocese) of which you are the pride and support. We are very appreciative of the promise you made to pray for us and for the success of our little Congregation. May it meet the Canadian challenge and measure up to all the good will you deign to have for it.

I have the honour to be, Your Grace, with deepest respect and the most lively gratitude, Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant and son in C.J.

Fr. Maillard (at the Convent of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart)

Fr. Batard (Guardian of the Sacred Heart)

Fr. Heriault, curate. Fr. Brunet, curate. Fr. Perriot, curate. Fr. Michel, curate. Fr. Bertin (Secretary of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Archconfraternity).

All of the above are united with Fr. Chevalier in placing at Your Grace's feet their deep respect, with the assurance of their religious remembrance at the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart altar, asking her to bestow her favours on this benefactor of her children, her zealous apostle in Canada.

Dear kind Fr. Jouët,

I thank you most warmly for all the interest you have in my health. The two haemorrhages I have had one after the other have left me in an extremely weak state. My strength instead of returning appears to be diminishing. I have a total disinterest in any kind of nourishment. This lack of appetite and sleep leaves me completely exhausted. I cannot link two ideas together; my whole brain is more dead than alive. I keep, as you would expect, to my room; I cannot stand up without becoming giddy and needing support. I don't know if I can do without such a support. I doubt it unless the good Lord intervenes.

If, through your prayers to the souls in Purgatory, you can obtain for me the blessing of undertaking in the near future my work once more, I promise a novena of masses for them.

Good, dear Fr. Píperon is here since yesterday. He is very appreciative of your kind good wishes and asks me to convey his thanks to you. Fr. Lanctin is due to arrive tomorrow and he will let me know about his audience (in Rome) with which he seems to be pleased.

I am pleased that you have visited our confrères and chatted with them.

My brain is exhausted. I have to stop here. Be assured, my friend, of my best wishes in C.J.

To the Mother Superior of the Servants of the Sacred Heart.

L 19040729

Issoudun, July 29, 1904

Very Reverend Mother,

Yes, I knew very well your blessed Mother Foundress, Mademoiselle Catherine Volpicelli, totally committed to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. She was associated with the undertaking of Mademoiselle de Montaignac de Montluçon, which was affiliated with ours. I went to Naples several times where I preached some retreats in Mademoiselle Catherine Volpicelli's chapel to associates of hers who were also associates of ours. Madame Countess de Fusco was among them. Mademoiselle de Montaignac, wishing to set up an undertaking of her own, went her separate way from us, and I believe that Mademoiselle Catherine followed her after some time. After that our contact ended.

God has greatly blessed the work of your foundress, whose striking virtues I can appreciate, and has made it become a flourishing Congregation under the title of Servants of the Sacred Heart. I have continued to be keenly interested and never gave up praying for its success. I know that Mademoiselle Volpicelli, whom I already looked upon as a saint, had given me her support and had a most lively interest in our little Society. Sadly, I didn't keep any of her letters and I cannot, therefore, meet your wishes. It's with lively appreciation I shall be pleased to have the two volumes on her life and read them with pleasure. I am not in the least surprised that there is mention of her beatification, since her life was so pure, saintly and committed. I shall pray very much for the success of her cause. For 2 and a half months now I am confined to my room laid up and I have lost all my appetite, finding myself in a state of extreme frailty. I can feel myself as being seriously laid low; I am after all 80 years of age! I commend myself to our saint and to your good prayers.

J. Chevalier,
Parish priest, Archpriest of Issoudun.

I handed in my resignation as Superior General after we were expelled, one of my confrères, Fr. Lanctin, replacing me.

I can neither walk or hold myself up and I have to spend the whole day in an arm chair, unable to move. These are the circumstances in which I find myself and it's not too good.

I want to thank you for your kind prayers which can be the only efficacious remedy.

I want to thank you for your generous offering towards our schools. I think that we can continue to keep them going successfully.

November 25, 1904

Dear Child,

The improvement in my health is not coming along quickly; I am a little better, but this improvement is far from complete. The bad weather accounts for a lot and I do believe that this is how I am going to be during the winter. I keep to my room all the time and I am very weak. I cannot walk and I have the great deprivation of not being able to celebrate the holy mass. I am very much aware that I shall not be able to attend our December 8 feast, to which I am quite resigned.

I am very upset about this divorce proposal; the woman, if she is still a Christian, must know well, however, that marriage is indissoluble. Once she decides not to remarry she will attain the same outcome through legal separation with reference to the bond and possessions; the Church grants this. I shall very much pray that everything will work out in accordance with your wishes. Do not, then, be upset in spirit. God is looking after you, very much so. The Devil can be menacing you, but take no account of his suggestions. The Lord protects you and enfolds you in a protective cloak. You have, believe me, nothing to fear. As ever all good wishes to you.

I bless you in C.J.

December 20, 1904

Dear Fr. General,

I received your nice letter together with a copy of that from Cardinal Gotti offering you a new mission in Northern Australia. I understand that you are hesitating about accepting it. Although I am not in favour of new foundations, given the present precarious state in which the Society finds itself, before turning down the proposal it is necessary to consider the possibility of providing the Holy See with a favourable answer.

The acceptance of this offer would have many advantages. The diocese of Victoria is part of the Sydney ecclesiastical province. The climate there should be salubrious. This vicariate is not far from Thursday Island or our Dutch mission. Contacts could be frequent. Perhaps a sanatorium could be set up in these countries. The Cardinal in Sydney and Fr. Tréand could be consulted about the nature of the mission, its extensiveness, the characteristics of the natives, the resources and the climatic conditions. Fr. Thierney (sic) from England, if one can get him away from there, could perhaps be chosen as bishop. Could not the Sydney mission provide you with some personnel: four or five would suffice for the time being. Among your young priests might there not be one or two available? All this is to be considered with mature reflection and as soon as possible.

Please be assured, dear Father, of my affectionate regards in C.J.

J. Chevalier.

I wrote to the Universe (Catholic paper) complaining about its silence. Mr. François Veuillot replied to me stating that he hadn't seen the Annals and asked me for a copy in order to write an article which will shortly appear. I have sent one to him.

There are quite a number of letters from major Superiors between 1901 and 1907, over the last six years of Chevalier's life, either consulting him or requesting such and such a one to have recourse to him, for the resolution of different issues relative to personnel, Issoudun undertakings, or those of the Society, all of which speaks for itself.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Very Rev. Father,

With the greatest pleasure as well as my deepest gratitude for your accommodating goodness which kindly approved of and supported my wishes, I hereby attest that on December 25, 1904, I had the happiness of consecrating myself more closely to the Sacred Heart when I took the 4th vow in the hands of the venerable founder of our dear Congregation. May Our Lady of the Sacred Heart inspire me to serve more wholeheartedly henceforth towards the glory of the Sacred Heart and the welfare of our dear Congregation.

And you, Very Rev. Father, kindly, I pray you, bless him who is happy to call himself your warmly committed child in Corde Jesu.

E. Bertin.

I certify that Fr. Bertin, MisSC, has taken the fourth vow before me on December 25, 1904.

The fourth vow expresses stability and continuity until death in the Society, as well as signifying availability to go anywhere in the world to advance more efficaciously the growth of the Kingdom and the glory of God, if requested by the Pope or the Superior General.

Article 2665Spiritual testament on behalf of the members of the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. Complete text with accompanying signature.*

D 19041225A

The good Lord, despite my unworthiness, has been pleased to use me as an unworthy servant to found the little Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. I was the recipient in abundance of the most precious graces, but, unfortunately, I did not profit from them as I should have done...

As a consequence by way of punishing me, God allowed it to be so that I became the focus of the most deplorable trials both from within and without. The most keenly felt were those from within. I freely pardon those who, in greater or lesser awareness, carry responsibility.

Nowadays all my confrères seem to be motivated by the best feelings and concerns, and our little Society pursues its mission with piety, zeal and devotedness. The persecutions, far from shaking it, only consolidate its religious spirit, with its members taking the route of religious exile resignedly and in total conformity with the most holy Will of God. May they be a thousand and more times blest!

(I)

May the members of our dearly loved institute, which has such a bright future, always maintain fervour and regularity and allow me to offer them after 50 years' experience, some advice which, I hope, will be helpful to them.

1. Let them be always united among themselves by the bonds of the most complete charity! Division in a society leads to its ruin, the Lord tells us (Matt. 12,25; Mark 3,24; Luke 11,17). We must then at all costs avoid this calamity.
2. Let their Constitutions and Regulations be observed with complete fidelity, however costly it naturally is!
3. Let the most complete obedience towards Superiors be the aim of their behaviour, obedience being the soul of the religious life and the safeguarding of its subjects. Without it there is only breakdown and death, its absence creating first of all indiscipline, complaints and insubordination. Then, little by little, the vocation becomes lessened, wavering, ending in shipwreck.
4. There should be on their part no relationship with the world other than through their ministry, or where they are obliged by charity, and always with the permission of the Superiors. Let them keep at a distance from people of the opposite sex, however pious! Contact with them is dangerous; what begins in the spirit often ends in the flesh. Let them always maintain in its integrity the Angelic virtue and carefully avoid whatever might compromise it and tarnish its beauty.
5. May the spirit of poverty prevail among them, avoiding what's vain, luxurious, the superfluous, unnecessary expenditure, remaining content with necessary requirements in every respect!

Let them avoid those daring doctrines, that new Christianity, which would like to reconcile truths with error, relying principally on reasons and sentimentalism, a product of Protestantism and nationalism, and also those modern and fantasy interpretations of Holy Scripture which limit its inspirational impact and tend to destroy its divine authority! Let them always be attentive to the Holy Church's teaching! On her side, they will be in the truth. In all discussed issues, let them without fail be on the Pope's side! If the advice of a father to his children is followed, the Congregation has nothing to fear, neither from the devil's maliciousness nor the bad will of men. The Sacred Heart will spread over it its most abundant blessings. May it commend more than ever to all its members the most fervent devotion towards the divine Heart, our supreme hope, and also to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart as well as St. Joseph, our powerful protector.

(II)

I would ask the Superior General, the Assistants, and all those who with whatever title are part of the administration to be good enough to bear in mind the following observations:

1. The administration must be quite firm in maintaining discipline, getting rid of abuses, and allowing nothing to be introduced which is against the Rules and Constitutions.
2. That it insist on, in those countries which allow for freedom, the wearing of the habit such as is laid down in the Constitutions: the long cape, the girdle, and the representation of the Sacred Heart on the chest! I do not understand how there is a wish to do away with this emblem which is to our glory and a sign of our estimable vocation. The habit in a Congregation has a special importance, as well as being safeguarding for the members. In those countries where, due to persecution or because the government is Protestant, the wearing of the habit is forbidden, it must, as soon as it becomes possible to do so and one is otherwise at liberty, be a requirement on the part of all religious that the habit be worn once more.
3. Let attention be focused on the role of vocations, a significant issue affecting the Society's future! The candidates should be carefully evaluated and only those accepted who offer serious guarantees! There should be no hesitation in sending away all troublesome characters, lacking balance, questionable judgment, fomenting intrigues, lacking in piety, submissiveness, zeal, commitment, mortification, etc. Such-like can only introduce disorder in the Society and serve to discredit it.
4. It would do well, if possible, to raise the level, quality of vocations and, thereby, make our institute a serious Society, well disciplined, imbued with a religious spirit, such that, inevitably, attention will become focused on it. It would be a good thing if from time to time some of its members were delegated to visit certain seminaries and church colleges to make known our works and our missions. There, very likely, one would find good vocations in excellent circumstances.

5. Up to the present there has, perhaps, been too much concentration on the Petite Oeuvre, which has not always given results in keeping with the sacrifices made on its behalf. It has provided us with several quality subjects and one must, then, carefully and with discernment, promote this, having regard not to numbers but to quality. As soon as it becomes obvious that a youngster hasn't got the requisite qualities, there should be no hesitancy in getting rid of him.

Generally speaking, I think that one would do well not to accept youngsters from families who are very poor. Parents who are old or infirm, lacking in any financial resources, or indeed requesting a contribution in order to get by, may mean the subject's departure from the Society in order to help them, which leads to serious complications. To lead such an important undertaking as the Petite Oeuvre, it is paramount that the heads and teachers should be serious men of piety, prudence and judiciousness, insisting on discipline and orderliness. They must make their pupils become accustomed to looking after themselves, providing from the house all the services needed, and which would help economize both as regards lay brothers and finances. Let them be trained conscientiously to be orderly, economical, to take good care of their clothes and of everything provided for their use! If they adopt such good habits they will keep them while novices, scholastics, and priests. Something which, unhappily, has not always been the case.

6. The major Superiors, despite their desire to see the Congregation develop, would do well not to accept new vicariates or set up new houses so long as they haven't suitable, capable, subjects at their disposal, without prejudice to the undertakings already set up: this issue is all important.

7. When selecting Superiors and people in office, let them see to it that only those become appointed who have the qualities required by the Constitutions, upholding discipline and the religious spirit. The prosperity or downfall of the house depends on their administration.

8. Let them engage themselves with particular concern with respect to satisfactory control and provision of the finances! Let them not give authorization, except with very great reluctance, to houses and provinces contracting debts! It is better to hold back from undertakings than to be exposed to serious financial disappointments.

9. The choice of Chapter members is of the utmost importance and, consequently, it should engage the attention of the Superior General and his Assistants. In the circular sent out calling a Chapter, it would be appropriate to advise the electors to make a choice of serious-minded men, weighty of consideration, given to piety and regularity. Nothing would be more dangerous than to introduce to such a meeting, treating as it does of issues which most seriously concern the Society, individuals who are there to stir things up, given to wild ideas, boiling over, more concerned with the triumphal projection of their own ideas than a concern with the Congregation's best interests.

(III)

The Chapter, so made up, will never overlook in its decisions the glory of God, the Sacred Heart, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and the well being of the Society.

1. In drawing up the Directory and other regulations which it may wish to introduce, let there be insistence on upholding discipline and the religious spirit with the utmost rigour. This is absolutely essential!

I would like to draw its attention to second class feasts, which I find to be much too many, leading to excessive conversation at table and the provision of meals which are too copious, extravagant. Let us not forget that the Constitutions require us to be victims of penance and expiation, to make reparation for the outrages committed against the divine Heart of Jesus. Might not this article which is so important be, generally speaking, far too much overlooked?

2. When the Society began there weren't many houses and it was stated in the Constitutions that every Superior would attend the Chapter with several delegates. Nowadays when houses are so many and likely to increase yet more in the future, it seems appropriate to my mind that the Chapter, which is fully competent in this matter, should place a restraint on numbers. Taking this wise step it will avoid quit a lot of problems.

3. When appointing to posts, the Chapter president will see to it that the Chapter members will not allow themselves to be influenced by natural thoughts and feelings about such and such an individual who, otherwise, would not have the requisite qualities. The glory of God and the good of the institute must always influence their choices.

4. The Chapter must always promote close unity between the different Provinces and the mother house.

5. I would appeal to the Chapter not to promote in its debates a transfer of the mother house elsewhere. The Immaculate Virgin through her powerful intercession before the Heart of her divine Son and the divine Heart Himself, having made it known that the seat of the Congregation should be centred on Issoudun, there needs then to be real and very positive indications from Divine Providence making it obvious that Issoudun is to be displaced, something which I do not believe or accept. Meanwhile, let us respect this cradle where so many marvellous things have happened and from which so many undertakings arose, radiating throughout the entire world. It seems to me that this is a sacred duty for us which demands acknowledgement. The revolutionary spirit at the present time is stirring things up a little everywhere. Calamitous events can arise from one moment to the next, shaking the whole of Europe... and what's going to happen then? Only God alone knows!

6. The Chapter would do well to pay attention to the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, which is being published in different ways, and it should be provided with the uniformity it doesn't have. It was established to promote devotion to the Sacred Heart, of which we are the official Missionaries, and also for the promotion of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart devotion which has accomplished so much for us, and also St Joseph, model and patron of the friends of the Sacred Heart. Many of these publications seem to be disinterested in these devotions which are so salutary and this is a mistake. The editors of these Annals should take pattern from that of the mother house and reproduce some of its more weighty and interesting articles.

7. Our missions abroad among the pagan peoples are of great significance: the undiminished glory of our institute. The major Superiors will see to it that only chosen men of probity, fervent, balanced, dependable, given to the acceptance of every trial and demand, and unshakeably attached to the Society, are sent to the missions. Unreliable characters, imbalanced, rash, would only create disorder and confusion.

8. In the missions' directory I believe that the Chapter would do well to avoid laying down as a right that following a certain amount of time spent on the missions, the Society's members might return to Europe and to their families. This rule, which does not exist in any other order, would have the most serious consequences. More satisfyingly it would be worthwhile to set up a sanatorium in a country with a good climate for those in poor health, with diseases, the feeble, the elderly, so that the less seriously affected health-wise would be restored to health and then take up once more their apostolic labours.

As for more extensive permissions which need to be granted, let the Major Superiors and the Provincials be free to act as they deem fit. Hoc fac et vives (do this and you will profit from it).

And now dearly beloved confrères, I have not been without fault in the course of my lengthy administration and without being for some the occasion for discontent, complaints, mutterings. I would ask them to forgive me and commend my soul to God. At the moment of appearing before the supreme judge, I believe I can say that I have sought in all things no other than the glory of the Sacred Heart and the well being of our Society and that of its members. I have been wrong on more than one occasion, giving rise to many criticisms against myself and my way of doing things. I accept in all humility that I didn't match the requisites of the mission confided to me. A failure in response to graces and my sins have on numerous occasions impeded the impact of divine Providence. I am not, no doubt, free of causing scandal and giving bad example, for which I sincerely ask pardon and again would ask my confrères to forgive me also, asking God to favour me with His mercy and one day admit me to heaven, despite my unworthiness.

I sincerely thank everyone for the regard and affection always shown to me, their appreciated help and their inestimable commitment. I bequeath all to them and place, as well, under their protection the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart whom they will carefully look after and provide them with all the services which it is in their capacity to provide.

Spiritual Testimony for the Issoudun parish.

D 19041225B

December 25, 1904

My spiritual testimony to and for the parish of Issoudun where I have been parish priest since 1872.

I die in the faith of the holy Catholic, apostolic, Roman Church. I believe in all that it believes and condemn all that it condemns. God always gave me the grace to love the Holy See and the Sovereign Pontiff and to accept with submission all that we are taught.

I was blessed with grace since my childhood and I particularly failed to respond; consequently, I ask God to pardon me and bestow his mercy on me. I would also ask my dear parishioners whom I may have disedified or scandalized, and whom I may have unknowingly pained or been prejudiced against, to pardon me as well and intercede with the Lord for me.

I hereby declare that it was against my will if I gave occasion to some for complaints or whisperings. I wholeheartedly pardon my enemies and detractors, if I had them, who sought to discredit and harm me, and likewise those I helped and who repaid me with ingratitude.

I take no bitterness to the tomb, no resentment against anybody whosoever. I only ask that I am very much prayed for.

Persecution continues to stir in France and I don't know what the outcome will be. If the Lord does not intervene, the greatest calamities are to be expected. I would ask, then, mothers of families, young girls and the children we have brought up to remain firm in the faith and the accomplishment of their religious duties to the point of shedding their blood if necessary. Heaven will be their reward. Let those men and young people who appear to leave aside human respect and get away from their apathy, receive here and now my compliments! I would ask them to continue the battle for good over evil which they have generously and courageously undertaken. God will take note of it and His blessings will be bestowed on them and their families.

I thank most sincerely those good Christians who have helped me with their offerings and contributions in making parochial undertakings prosper, in particular the reconstruction of our church. I would ask them to continue with their generosity for the completion of such an important undertaking. The committee dealing with building and repairs is duly given here my heartfelt thanks for the support, as understanding as it was magnanimous, always at my disposal during the course of my ministry and of a commitment beyond all praise! I tried on several occasions, but without success, to have the important villages of Bordes and Avail made into a parish. I greatly regret that I didn't succeed. I hope my successor will be more successful. Before the great revolution (1879) the town of Issoudun had five parishes, whereas today it is reduced to just one and this isn't enough. There should be at least three to meet the needs of the population since it is impossible for one parish priest alone to act effectively as regards the 15,000 people in his care. I hope that my successors will bring about what I did not succeed in doing during the bad, difficult, times in which I found myself.

While I was administrator of the hospices I negotiated the acquisition of the chapel in the old hospital, including the great hall which is beside it, the sacristy, the upper floor rooms, and the path which leads to the chapel, and all of this for the sum of 10,000 francs (about 33,290 euros). My plan was to set up a new parish, taking in the suburbs of Saint-Paterne, Villatte, Saint-Martin and the Capuchins, proceeding alongside the hospice street as far as the Chezal-Benoît road on one side and on the other as far as the bridge of the lower chateau, inclusive of the country villages in the area, all of which would add up to as much as 3 or 4,000 people. When on the point of bringing it to a successful conclusion, I was ousted by the administration which at that time was mainly composed of radicals and Freemasons.

The second parish would have been co-extensive with Saint-Denis as far as rue de Incurables, today called the Schools and the Chinault quarter as far as the railway station and the neighbouring villages, all of which would create a parish of 2,500 people or so.

The remainder would consist of the main Saint-Cyr parish which would include under its charge 6 or 7,000 people; this would be quite satisfactory. What advantages would there not be from this break up! May my successors in better times succeed in bringing about this project!

J. Chevalier
Paris Priest, Archpriest of Issoudun.

NB: It is my wish that no flowers or wreaths are placed on my coffin and that my funeral be a simple one with no discourse given! What I want, rather, is that many prayers should be said for me.

To His Grace Pierre-Paul Servonnet, Archbishop of Bourges.

Your Grace,

Canon Vaudon has written to say that he has in his possession letters of Bishop Verjus, of saintly memory, which are addressed to different people and which he, Vaudon, proposes to publish in one volume.

I replied that these letters of our saintly missionary belong to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart Congregation, of which they form part, and that he should kindly return them to us and we, ourselves, will see to their being published. The Canon does not appear to be willing to do so. I venture, then, to ask Your Grace to be good enough to intervene and have this correspondence returned to us, which is ours in every respect and under every title.

Please accept, Your Grace, etc.

January 8, 1905

Dear Father,

Yes, Fr. Maillard handed me his work on the Tertiaries. The content is very good, but I found it somewhat lengthy. There are repetitions which one can get rid of and need to be condensed. You will have it shortly and can judge for yourself.

Fr. Vaudon is involved with an issue which is no longer his business, since Bishop Verjus belongs to the Society and his correspondence likewise. (See previous letter, to the Archbishop.) If Canon V. looks upon himself as one of us, then he should obey you. Ask him to forward you the letters and tell him that the edition of the holy missionary's life is almost out of print since it was widely made available and work is being undertaken on another book, shorter and less costly. It's Fr. Jullien, so I gather, who is responsible for this undertaking. Fr. V., for whom we did, and to whom we gave, so much, is no longer with us in mind and heart! How he lives or gets by I don't know. He has a passion for money, manufactures it in bringing out new books. He wants to claim ownership of this new work, just as he has done for all the others, and you are left dependent on him. This situation is abnormal and it's necessary to get rid of it. In face of the public he projects himself as an independent canon and with you he projects himself as a religious of the Sacred Heart. This is double-dealing, lacking candour and open-ness. Does he keep you informed about what he is doing? Does he make his financial affairs available to you? Is his budget forwarded to you? Does he have consultations with you? Does he look upon himself as subject to you. How does he observe his vows? He lives as he wants to, acts as he wishes, without any supervision or sanction... That's the reality! Fr. Maillard, also, thinks that these letters should be reclaimed from him and under no circumstances should he be allowed to edit them. They could be made use of by Fr. Jullien for his abridged life of Bishop Verjus.

Write a polite letter to Vaudon, carefully put together, neither himself or the Archbishop can complain or object because you are in your rights and this is the truth of the matter.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J.C.

To the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

A spiritual testimony for the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

I

My Dear Kind Daughters,

The foundation of your little society led to many problems and a lot of worried concern for me. The beginnings were difficult. The Devil set everything in motion to cause the project to fail and put paid to it for good. But Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, who wanted to have her court of honour, took matters in hand and, despite the fury of hell and all the mounting obstacles, she was victorious. It is, then, to this good Mother that you are indebted for being there at all. You could not express your gratitude sufficiently to her. Besides, I hope she will always continue to look after you as she has done up to now Before I go to the grave, may a father be permitted to give some advice to his children.

II

1. If you want your divine and powerful Foundress to bless you and make your humble institute prosper, imitate insofar as you can those virtues which she presents to you by way of example: her love of God and neighbour, her gentleness, humility, modesty and simplicity.

2. May the bonds of the greatest charity always be found among you and be faithful in observing well your Rules and Constitutions, however naturally demanding this may be. Always remain given to serious piety and, let it be understood, to a prayerful spirit, recollection, commitment and zeal to bring about good.

3. Take flight from the world and only relate to it for reasons of convenience and necessity; contact with it can only lead to danger for you. If you are required to make visits, be accompanied always by one of your Sisters. Avoid like the plague human affectivity of whatever kind. Avoid with the utmost caution anything which would of its nature imply a threat to the Angelic virtue and tarnish the beauty which should shine out in you through living in such a radiant state of being.

Be especially reserved with the confessor and priests who visit the house. Avoid intimate sharing and any letting-go of yourselves which ends up creating a certain familiarity, which your divine Spouse would not approve of. May the utmost modesty always characterize your conversations and your behaviour. Avoid vanity, pretentiousness, being keen to put on appearances and self-projection. Be restrained, discreet, prudent. While looking after your health, be balanced, mortified, particularly so internally. As for unusual penitential exercises, do not undertake anything like this without the Mother Superior's approval.

4. Let the spirit of poverty always prevail among you. Be satisfied with the necessities of life in every respect; no luxuries, superfluities, great simplicity as regards furniture whether in the parlour or the rooms, common rooms. What is essential has to be the adornment of your souls with all those religious virtues which are commended to you. Take great care of everything which is set by to be used by you. Let the keeping of things in order and good economizing take precedence before everything else.

Carefully arrange your finances and do not involve yourself in pointless expenses. Do not buy anything without considering whether or not you have the resources needed to meet your expenses. Be frightened by the prospect of debt; many communities have foundered because of inadequate financial administration. Let the major Superiors promote these viewpoints among their subordinates and strictly oversee their procedures! If you have funds to dispose of, beware of financial operators. Enter into consultation with a serious-minded, conscientious financial consultant who inspires confidence and will advise you well in financial matters.

5. If you want to maintain your fervour and promote your holy vocation, always observe with the utmost fidelity your Rules and Constitutions. May the most total obedience towards your Superiors always characterize your behaviour! Obedience is the soul of the religious life. If it begins to disappear, there are problems, trouble, insubordination, scandal, and the loss of vocation. The Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will be most condescending, respectful and submissive towards the Supreme Pontiff whose teachings they will always follow, and it will be the same as regards the bishops who have accepted them into their dioceses. If some bishops would on occasion like to change some parts of their Constitutions, or separate them (convents) from the mother house to have them more completely subject to them, they (the Superiors) should strongly oppose this and call on their Major Superiors.

III

1. The recruitment issue is of the utmost importance. Before postulants are accepted, Mother General and the Mother Provincials will make use of all the information they can gather.

2. Both as regards the postulancy as well as the novitiate, let them carefully assess the vocations and let them not hesitate to send away those who do not meet the requirements of the Constitutions! Nothing would be more dangerous than to introduce within the community candidates lacking in piety, judgment, orderliness, those kind of people who are muddle-headed, full of fantasies, given to deceptions, stirring up intrigues, trying to be in every way at their ease, without commitment and only obedient as a last resort, and against their wishes. One must not be focused on numbers but rather on quality.

3. The appointment of local Superiors should particularly engage the attention of Major Superiors, since on them depends the good or bad fortunes of the house. They must be pious, given to regularity, dynamic, supportive of order and discipline, firm without being offensive, kind without being weak, economic and orderly, intelligent and understanding about issues.

4. With regard to missionary work among the pagans, only well chosen sisters will be sent to the missions, solid of vocation, judicious and prudent, strong in piety, able to cope with every challenge, not afraid of weariness, privations, death.

5. The Superior General and her Assistants will apply themselves to the correction of any abuses and have nothing introduced which would be against the Rules and Constitutions. They will energetically maintain discipline and the religious spirit wherever it appears to be weakening. Given these conditions, the little Congregation can count on the blessings of heaven.

6. As soon as times become better in France, and the persecution has ended, the sisters will again wear their habit as laid down in the Constitutions; there needs to be a distinction between the choir sisters and the lay sisters.

7. If circumstances force the Superiors to move the mother house elsewhere, this should be no more than provisional and as soon as normality returns they will return to their cradle under the impetus and protection of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, whatever efforts may be attempted to prevent them unless, that is, divine Providence, which set them up in Issoudun, provides certain, unequivocal indications that there should be a change of place for the mother house, something which I do not expect.

8. They will never forget that they are Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and, accordingly, they will make every effort to spread this devotion, enrol the faithful in her archconfraternity and promote the Annals. As for worship of the Sacred Heart and the Cult of St. Joseph, they will make themselves tireless apostles.

It is my most ardent wish that your humble Congregation and its Constitutions be approved as soon as possible by the Holy See. Rome will do so most willingly through the support of the bishops in whose dioceses the institute has houses. The latter will not refuse to provide letters of recommendation. Today more than ever this approval is called for and it is a matter which has to be taken very seriously. If it is obtained, and I do not doubt it will be so, it will cut short a lot of problems.

There, dear Daughters, you have the advice which I believe in your best interests I should put before you before taking my departure, since, given my age, my days are numbered. If you follow my advice faithfully, I am assured of your future. Heaven will bless you and make your little Society advance. May Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, to whom you belong, enfold you in her virginal cloak and always enfold you with her powerful protection.

If I have been somewhat lacking in forming you in the religious life and making all of you choice souls, I would ask you to pardon me and pray for me. If our divine Saviour graciously shows his mercy to me, which I dare to hope from his goodness, I shall petition on your behalf the blessings of His divine Heart and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart for your affectionate commitment to me, and that zeal which was so boosting that greatly contributed to the prosperity of our undertakings. I hand you over to our Congregation's Superiors who will not fail in exhibiting to you a most lively concern and looking after you as a sacred trust which I am leaving in their hands. Be always united; they are your fathers and protectors by that very fact itself. In your problems, trials, difficulties, have recourse to them, and they will help you as best they can, never abandoning you. Have recourse to them for direction and retreats. Since both Congregations come from the same cradle, I want to say that the Heart of Jesus and that of Our Lady are inseparable and, thereby, have the same spirit. You may be assured of their commitment and they will make it their duty to provide you with all the services which it is in their power to offer you and which the sacred canons sanction.

I say, then, to you au revoir until Heaven.
I bless you in C.J.

A note about the St. Michael window in the Issoudun basilica.

D 19050502

May 2, 1905

Background to the stained glass window of St. Michael, standard-bearer of the Sacred Heart, in the Sacred Heart Basilica, Issoudun.

In Paris, at a convent whose name escapes me, there lived a pious nun heart-broken in face of the calamities which, after the 1870 war, had overtaken France, as well as the disasters affecting the municipalities. While she was praying in the chapel St. Michael appeared to her under the guise of a young warrior, radiant-faced, armed with a flaming sword and holding on high the flag of the Sacred Heart with this inscription: Quis ut Deus? (Who then is like God?)

The Archangel said to her: "Your country is destined to experience yet worse days, but do not be too sad as I shall be your protection at the hour ordained by Providence. You see this banner which I hold in my hand and from which shines the image of the Sacred Heart. Here is the explanation: It is in the name of the heart of the Incarnate Word, source of all graces and the focus on which everything converges, that I have combated Luther's pride, and his accomplices, and which I overcame from Heaven. It is again in the name of this same Sacred Heart, whose representation you see on this flag, that I shall destroy his empire in the last time when the final confrontation will take place. The Devil has identified with Freemasonry which he inspires and takes charge of. Besides, you will notice that I have my foot mounted on the earthly globe which is enveloped in thick darkness wherever secret societies are in the ascendancy. I shall crush them forever. This flaming sword which I hold in my hand and with which I shall enter into combat, is symbolic of the whole divine power with which I am imbued. Do you see these arrows which are outside the glow which surrounds me? Some of them strike to death the enemies of the truth and others strengthen and support the just in the struggle they have to go through.

"Have this apparition reproduced. You will have it presented to my favourite sanctuary at Mont-Saint-Michel; and if it isn't accepted you will have it taken to the Issoudun basilica erected in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and the Immaculate Virgin under the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. One day this town and sanctuary will become the central focus of marvellous manifestations."

Such is what a son of God said to me in Issoudun, he who was the recipient of what was shared with the recipient and which I certify as authentic.

As for the divine quality of the apparition, not having investigated it, I cannot take any responsibility for it. Nevertheless, it is difficult, if not quite impossible, for me to say that a humble religious, enclosed within the cloister, could ever imagine a likely apparition with all the entailed details which we have shared.

One may ask to what purpose, for what motive, and in whose interest would such activity have taken place?

The Archbishop of Paris, Cardinal Guibert, made aware of the facts, approved the apparition's circumstances, and it was forwarded to Mont-Saint-Michel, where the administration of this historical monument rejected it under the pretence that this representation of the glorious archangel being modern, could not take its place in this masterpiece of ancient art. It was at this moment, then, that the gentleman in question came to me offering it according to the recommendation he had received. I did not know him at all and he himself had never been to Issoudun. Having spoken to me about the purpose of his visit, which he assured me was genuine, and having no reason to doubt him, I wholeheartedly accepted his offer. I went on then, under his instructions, to have this apparition represented in a magnificent stained glass window, the work of Mr. Léopold Lobin from Tours. Since 1877 it has adorned our basilica and been admired by visitors.

When Fr. Lemius, then Superior of the Montmartre Oblates, came to Issoudun with a group of pilgrims, the stained glass window of St. Michael, standard-bearer of the Sacred Heart, greatly moved him and he took back with him a print with the intention of placing an identical statue in one of the domes at the Montmartre basilica. There you have, in abridged form, the history of the Sacred Heart standard. In 1877 there took place the priestly jubilee of Leo XIII, who was so devoted to St. Michael. We presented to him a magnificent representation in canvas of the window, painted in large dimensions by one of the more accomplished of Parisian artists. He (the Pope) was pleased by it and had it placed in one of the Vatican galleries.

For further details one may read the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for April 1887, page 358.

To Cardinal Domenico Ferrata, Protector, Rome.

*Date uncertain
May, June, 1905*

Most Reverend and Illustrious Cardinal,

Fr. Lanctin, my successor, has forwarded me a letter which he is sending to you, asking me to let you know my feelings about the changes which certain confrères want to introduce to the Constitutions. I do so all the more freely because the changes proposed seem to me to be dangerous, questionable, from more than one point of view.

I add, then, my concerns to his in order to beg Your Eminence's intervention so that nothing becomes introduced which would in any way affect the Constitutions which the Holy See definitively approved of in 1891 following twelve years of experimentation. When I was in Rome at that time, the Bishop Secretary and Cardinal Prefect of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars assured me that from now on the text was sacred, untouchable, and could no longer be changed or tampered with except for very serious reasons and at the request of two-thirds of a General Chapter, concerning which the Sacred Congregation will be the judge. By what right do one or two members of the Society, without authorization, undertake this initiative at the risk of creating big trouble among us?

Over the 50 years which I have spent with the support and inspiration of the Sacred Heart of Jesus laying the foundations of our little Congregation in the spirit of the present Constitutions, the institute has not failed to develop, giving rise to a large number of model religious, apostles who water and fertilize with their perspiration, even their very blood, the lands they have evangelized. If some obscure points need to be clarified, this is for the consideration of the directory set up by the last Chapter with the approval of the Sacred Congregation, which has proved satisfactory.

Please pardon me most eminent Protector, for these observations which I make bold to present to Your Grace together with my most humble regards in C.J.

J. Chevalier,
Archpriest, Issoudun.

NB: I gather that some members of our Congregation wish to ask Your Eminence to set up a French Province. Is this the right time when the persecution has closed all our French houses and sent into exile all who lived in them? This was not Cardinal Gotti's view when consulted on this issue.

He advised us in the present circumstances to remain within a French direction under the immediate control of the Congregation's General Council while awaiting happier times. His very wise advice has been followed and that's how things have gone on since the persecution started.

Dear Father,

I received your memorandum.

I continue to have my reservations about the revision of the Constitutions when they have already been officially approved by the Holy See. To change what has been customary from the beginning is to take away our 'raison d'être'. It makes us become identified with all the clergy and makes us seculars (like diocesan clergy). Such secularization, however, creates a very serious issue for us which will become evident later. What outward sign, in dress, will let people know that we are Missionaries approved and specially delegated by Holy Mother Church to spread everywhere the uplifting devotion of the Sacred Heart of Jesus?

If Rome doesn't want us to have a special habit any longer, let it also do away with those of the Franciscans, Dominicans, Carmelites, etc., etc. Why us and not the others?...

Since I do not have the Constitutions to hand, I cannot produce a reply as regards numbers 91,92-107,108 etc. On my return in about a fortnight's time. I shall let you know what I think about it.

My health is holding up; my strength and appetite are returning. May the Sacred Heart have pity on us! We are at this moment going through harsh experiences. A Chapter and revision of the Constitutions given the difficult, troubled, persecution, times we are passing through, appears to me to be questionable. People are not sufficiently in control of, and at ease with, themselves.

Please be assured, Father, of my warm regards in C.J.
My good wishes to all.

J. Chevalier.

July 17, 1905

My Dear Friend,

I thank you for your nice little letter. Madame de Cougny was very appreciative of your good wishes. The good lady is quite weak, being in her 87th year. She scarcely leaves her room any more, but she is in possession of all her faculties. She is, however, unhappily and painfully quite deaf. Brother Bernardin is getting on very well and these few weeks of holidays have done him a lot of good. As for myself, my health is holding up despite the excessive heat. Today the weather is a little cooler.

I have had the Chapter memorandum sent to me by Fr. Lanctin. It brings up for consideration quite serious issues and I have my doubts about the result. At this time of problems and persecution, individuals are not enough at ease with themselves to carry out a worthwhile initiative. I, accordingly, regret that a Chapter is being held in such-like circumstances, bringing up for consideration the issues promulgated. I have made my concerns known to Fr. Lanctin. It would appear that there is a wish to get rid of the habit and make us more like the diocesan clergy. If this comes to be the case, it will be calamitous. What symbol will represent our mission as Missionaries of the Sacred Heart? One cannot forget that it was Pius IX who, in an unforgettable audience, himself placed the Sacred Heart image on the chest, saying at the same time: "There's the sign of your splendid calling." It would be insulting to the memory of the holy Pope to lay down that we need no longer wear it. Witness and inheritor of such a glorious heritage, I protest. It is a secularization process of a new kind. Who could have inspired and promoted this kind of thinking? In no way, most assuredly, is it love of the Sacred Heart!... Who has insisted on a revision of our Constitutions, already officially approved? There is some mystery attached to this. As I do not have the text of the Constitutions with me, I cannot offer my views about the other articles at issue.

I am thinking of returning towards the middle of next week, at least if it's necessary to do so.

The court of primary appeal in Paris, presided over by Mr. Forichon, has acknowledged that the loans made available to insurance companies before 1901 are valid. So this is already something worthwhile and a transaction, so it seems to me, becomes easier! This is something to hope for. Congratulate Etave on my behalf on Pierre's success. Greetings to Fathers Batard and Bertin, as well as the good sisters of Notre Dame.

Yours in C.J.

J.C.

My Very Reverend Father,

I am sending you this letter by the Reverend Father, which arrived at the same time as that from Fr. Carrière. You could write to him at la Grille asking him to advance the date of his return. Otherwise, I can forward to the Reverend Father the little letter from Fr. Carrière so that he can take into account your wishes and bring forward his return.

Likely date end of July 1905

At the last Chapter I could see that a number had it in mind to transfer the centre of the Congregation to Rome as offering more guarantees. I do not share this viewpoint and I gave my reasons. But there were (are) other reasons I did not, then, put forward.

1. Italy is basically a revolutionary country, and Rome in particular. It is the centre of the highest level of Freemasonry! That's where orders come from and from there other lodges are directed and controlled. Our priests, too youthful, have not sufficiently kept abreast of this satanic movement. Who does not recall the famous gathering held at Naples in 1869, where all the representatives from all over the world came together and Issoudun had its representatives there? At this General Assembly, given the name Anti-Council, all the oppressive and persecution laws against the Church and Catholics were laid down, and up to this moment they have been faithfully followed through. I observed all this attentively and not one thing was ignored. Everything which has gone on since the Freemasons came to power, and everything that is happening today, was fore-planned, decided, and carried out point for point. What are they aiming at? The complete destruction of religion, victory for freethinking and a universal republic. Given their hellish plan Rome is meant to be the heart, the centre, and the capital of their plots and schemes. You may well say to me: perhaps, but God is there, in Rome, and will not allow such an overturning of things to happen, protecting Rome and the See of St. Peter against its enemies.

2. Rome carries on its forehead an unmoveable mark. It has committed a crime comparable to the deicide of the Jews, despoiling the Holy See of its patrimony twelve times in secularized fashion by making the Vicar of Jesus Christ a prisoner who has scarcely freedom to move with his chains. Consequently, a curse weighs upon her as on Jerusalem. Listen... Yes, you will see divine vengeance being exercised! One does not have to be a prophet to foresee the problems which pose a threat to Rome... And yet it is in Rome that they would wish to set up the centre of our Congregation!!! The wisest course is then to leave it where divine Providence has placed it, while waiting for better times.

France, a country of resources and vocations, will not always remain agitated: violentum non durat (violence will not last). The reaction, while as yet latent, is beginning to take shape. Before long, so I hope, we shall have a government ready to repair the damage. And the MSC administration, provisionally at Chimay, will return to its cradle and set itself up in one form or another. Chimay is a hole where one is dead from boredom! What do you expect? One must cope as best as one can with the events which God permits. The Popes and priests in times of persecution were happy to be in the catacombs, and sanctified themselves through prayer and sacrifice. If this corner of Belgium is not the right place, one may look for a house either in Brussels or another large centre where the Assistants could give expression to their zeal; what's essential is not to spread oneself too much outside, but rather to focus on making the religious spirit come to the fore in the Society by increasing the number of visits to our principal houses so that the love of discipline is to be found in them, and the stamping out of abuses if there are such. What an appealing mission!

Arrangements for the Missions to be proposed to the 1905 Chapter and, thereafter, presented to the Sacred Congregation of Propaganda.

Notification

On December 17, 1901, Fathers Meyer and Genocchi, having discussed our missions and their direction with His Eminence Cardinal Gotti, he made the following statement to them which they immediately took note of and signed:

"There are advantages and disadvantages in the two systems (procedures) used on the missions, that is to say when the apostolic vicar is at the same time the religious superior of the missionaries, or when there is a religious superior distinct from the vicar apostolic, and this relates less to the system in itself than to the individual's character and the religious spirit. Accordingly, the Sacred Congregation of Propaganda does not favour one or the other system, but leaves to religious congregations the freedom to take on that which seems preferable to them. Normally the religious congregations at one of their general chapters establish and set up a modus vivendi, submitting it thereafter to Propaganda which in turn points out those changes which it thinks are needed. This is a better way of proceeding." Since the missions have nowadays become one of the most important works of the Society, it would appear that the time has come to set up this modus vivendi (manner of proceeding) and put it before the Chapter which is due to begin at Louvain on August 11, 1905. Since, however, the exclusive adoption of one or the other system could lead to serious problems, one submits the following proposition to the Chapter:

Detrimental Proposal

The Superior General and his Council have the freedom to nominate a religious Superior of the Missionaries, either the ecclesiastical Superior appointed by the Sacred Congregation of Propaganda (in effect, the bishop) or a priest, taking into consideration the time, the place and the personnel. If, however, either by right or given the facts of the situation, the coming together of the two jurisdictions in one and the same individual is deemed necessary, the consequences will be other than they would be when the roles are identified with two different people. There follows from this last the following outcomes:

I

The arrangements between the ecclesiastical Superior and the Society when both exercises of authority are invested in one and the same person.

1. The ecclesiastical Superior exercises jurisdiction on and through the powers received from Propaganda, independently of the institute's Superiors, and does not account for his actions other than to the Sacred Congregation. As against that, as regards everything which relates to the religious control and direction of the missionaries, he will be subject to the religious institute's Superiors to whom he must give an account of his administration.
2. As regards administrative matters, while the distinction between assets belonging to the mission qua talis (as such) and those belonging to the Society in mission countries holds its value and theoretical importance, one basic fact, nevertheless, is relevant to all: those individuals who are familiar with the history and administration of our missions know for certain that the resources made available to the missions as such have been, from the beginning and in all subsequent years, quite obviously insufficient to support, even for maintenance alone, the missionaries and their undertakings, with the net result that the Society has continually been required to provide from its own resources for the upkeep of the missionaries and setting-up of their undertakings. (See the Chapter Acts for 1900 for an approximate figure for the amount of money paid out by the Society.) In addition it must be said that all the effort needed to support the works set up and make them prosper has been provided by the Society's members.
3. Given this state of affairs, nobody could find anything wrong with the following conclusion: all the property of whatever kind presently in our missions may be considered as belonging to the institute which made available the capital and the work which brought everything about; consequently, to it belongs the right to administer, the use of, and the financial benefits.
4. It is likewise more easy to see that in the future the resources at the disposal of the missions as such will become more and more insufficient as regards the missionaries' upkeep who will continually increase in number, and, as a result, the Society will have continuously to provide from its own resources for the upkeep of the missionaries and their undertakings. (The accounts indicate that this was done on a grand scale between 1900 and 1905.)
5. Given these circumstances, the administration would be greatly simplified, justice safeguarded, and the prosperity of the missions assured, if the Ecclesiastical Superior was authorized to give all the revenue made over to the missions as such to the institute, which for its part commits itself with these revenues and from its own supplementary financial resources to support the missionaries and their mission undertakings. In this way, since there is only the one proprietor, that is to say the institute, there would be only the one account, namely that of the institute.
6. The ecclesiastical Superior, carrying out the functions of a normal Superior, would, therefore, as regards mission financial administration, be answerable to the institute's major Superiors in exactly the same way as other local Superiors: he needs to forward each year, then, a budget, and twice a year an account of all intake and outlay. Just the same, in order to safeguard his dignity and make possible a disposal of money independently of his jurisdiction, an allowance will be agreed on, by arrangement with the Provincial, of which he will have free disposal in his ministry, while at the same time safeguarding his vow of poverty in conscientiae.

7. If in the course of time the mission resources qua talis (as such) increase to the level that there comes about a surplus, and after he (the Superior) has made provision for the support of the missionaries and all the undertakings, then this arrangement needs to be modified, the Society abhorring any suspicion that it should want to enrich itself at the expense of, or by means of, the missions.

8. In the event that the Society would have to leave a mission completely or partly, it is for the Sacred Congregation of Propaganda to decide what assets should be kept for its successors.

The above eight paragraphs were crossed out by Fr. Chevalier, with this remark:
Generally speaking, all these proposals for the missions seem complicated to me.

J.C.

II

Where the separation of powers tends to prevail, the following requirements are proposed:

Regulatory procedures for mission Superiors in the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart

1. The ecclesiastical Superior will determine the number of priests and brothers that he can or would like to have, forwarding his request to Fr. Provincial who, with the agreement of his Council and in keeping with the members at his disposal, will appoint the individuals and send them on to him.

2. From the moment a missionary is appointed to a mission, the ecclesiastical Superior must meet all the expenses of preparation and journey on condition that gifts or financial contributions which the missionary receives for the same purpose become financially activated in favour of the said ecclesiastical Superior.

3. The spiritual and temporal responsibility of the mission is incumbent on the ecclesiastical Superior; it is accordingly his responsibility to look after the upkeep of the missionaries and their undertakings.

4. The religious Superior has the obligation to see to it that all the missionaries observe the Constitutions and prescriptions of the institute and religiously meet the responsibilities placed on them. It is he who has responsibility for the administration of the Society's goods and property on the mission.

5. All the missionaries are dependent on the religious Superior as regards everything which concerns the religious life and the faithful accomplishment of their responsibilities. As regards the religious life they are, in keeping with the Constitutions, uniquely dependent on the religious Superior. As regards responsibilities committed to them by the ecclesiastical Superior, they are likewise and principally dependent on him, owing him in these matters full and absolute obedience. When paid a visit by him they will report to him on the administration of the financial assets of the mission in their charge. As long as they are in ministry they will attend the prescribed meetings, conferences, but they are not obliged to say mass for the people, stipend-wise, unless they are in the charge of parishes properly so-called.

NB: The lay brothers are only subject to the religious Superior, unless, with the approval of the Apostolic Vicar, they are in charge of an enterprise, a school, etc., etc.

6. The religious Superior makes available the missionaries for posts, stations, schools, direction of sisters, etc., but the appointment to these positions is reserved to the ecclesiastical Superior, the bishop, who also authorizes in terms of jurisdiction.

NB: It is expressly forbidden to a religious Superior to leave a priest or a brother living on his own in a mission station. Each mission station should be close enough to another for the priest living there to have easy recourse to a confrère for confession etc. It would be even desirable that there should always be three stations near enough to each other to make it possible for each missionary to have the choice of a confessor.

7. While the ecclesiastical Superior, the Bishop and the religious Superior have, each for his part, the right on his own to dismiss a missionary from his post without being obliged to provide reasons for so doing, nevertheless in the interests of harmony, none of them will have recourse to such a right without consultation with the other.

8. The Provincial, with the agreement of his Council, may recall from the mission any member of the Society. But, thereupon, he must provide a replacement if this is considered necessary.

9. Neither the Bishop or the religious Superior can send away a religious from the mission without the consent of the Provincial and his Council. Where someone is sent away, it is the support finance section which will meet the travel expenses. Likewise, any missionary who becomes seriously ill or unable to remain in the missions, or needing a rest in another climate, will be the financial responsibility of the finance support section.

NB: A year's holiday will be made available to every missionary who has been at least ten years on the missions, the Provincial and his Council appointing the time and place for this holiday, having consulted beforehand the religious Superior so that the ministry may not be jeopardized.

In relation to these two latter paragraphs, numbers 8 and 9, Fr. Chevalier added:

It is urgent to set up a hospice for the sick, the invalids and the exhausted, in a temperate climate within the mission. Such a foundation is a necessity and it is to be found in all the Congregations which have missions.

J.C.

This rest year granted as of right to every missionary who has spent 10 years in the missions seems to me exceptional and dangerous as well as burdensome for the mission expenses' office, while the religious spirit and commitment to the missions would markedly suffer. In no other Congregation do I find such a privilege in evidence. It seems to me that it would be much more prudent to leave responsibility with the Provincial and his Council to grant some months of repose to a missionary who needs it, either in a rest home set up as such or in another house in the missions.

J.C.

10. The following assets will be acknowledged as belonging to the missions and be directly administered by the ecclesiastical Superior:

- a. All the contributions or aid coming from established bodies supportive of the missions, like the Propaganda Congregation, the Propagation of the Faith, the Holy Child, etc.
- b. Contributions directly given to the Apostolic Vicar.
- c. All the contributions received by the Society in favour of the missions as such.
- d. The contributions offered to the different houses for the 'purchase' of pagan children.
- e. All the contributions received directly by a missionary for his work or for the mission station.

NB: As regards personal contributions made over to the missionary, intuitu missionis qua talis (specifically for the mission in that place), or with regard to the work he is in charge of, the ecclesiastical Superior will discuss the matter with the religious Superior in order to come to a decision in keeping with the requirements of charity and justice as to whether or not the contributions should be made over to the person named as the recipient in the first instance.

11. The following assets will be acknowledged as fully belonging to the Society and become administered on its behalf:

- a. All the assets possessed by the Society in its missions.
- b. Contributions made to the Society on its own behalf.
- c. Contributions made to a Superior or a missionary without any specific requirement.
- d. The assets arising from the personal activity of missionaries, such as scientific or literary work, etc.
- e. The allocations made by the religious Superior to the missions and, consequently, the savings which can be made.
- f. The mass offerings said by the missionaries.

12. If the intention of the donors has not been clearly enough specified when making contributions to the Society in favour of the missions, it will be for the Provincial and Council to determine what was the intention, and then decide in what proportion these contributions should be shared between the missions and the Society.

13. The religious Superior, just like every local Superior, is obliged twice a year to send a report to the Provincial about the assets for which he is responsible and once a year his budget report. He will see to it that the ecclesiastical Superior will receive at a time fixed by him the accounts and budgets of the assets administered in his name by the missionaries.

14. The ecclesiastical Superior and Provincial will decide in common what annual contribution should be made available by the first-named for each missionary, priest or brother in the service of the mission. These allocations will be forwarded to the religious Superior whose function it is to distribute them. This commission should be re-assessed each time one of the contracting parties thinks there are good reasons for requesting a change. The bishop will gratuitously place at the service of the missionaries the assets, residences, furniture, whatever, in the mission which they need to have at their disposal. The missionaries themselves will take responsibility for local, on the spot, repairs.

15. It is desirable that a fresh agreement should be reached between the missions and the Society as regards the assets made over by the latter in favour of the missions from 1900 to 1905. One may suggest as a basis for this compromise the handing over of existing properties to the missions, and furniture, such-like assets, to the Society.

III

Setting-up a financial aid account for the benefit of missionaries.

1. In each mission there will be set up a special fund, called an aid account, which will be added to and supplemented by annual contributions, provided in equal part from the cash account of the ecclesiastical Superior (bishop) and that of the religious Superior.
2. The aid fund is separate from and independent of cash accounts above-mentioned administered separately by the Provincial. The funds in this account can only service the purpose for which they have been assigned and they will be set up to acquire interest.
3. At the end of each year the Provincial will set out the exact balance between intake and outlay, submitting this account to the Provincial Council, the Society's Superior General and the mission's ecclesiastical Superior.
4. The ecclesiastical Superior and Provincial will together determine what amount of money should annually be at the disposal of each missionary, priest or brother, in keeping with the requirements dictated by the amount of money available.
5. The support fund will focus on:
  - a. the upkeep of those priests and brothers in the missions who in the judgment of the Provincial Council, have become invalids or are unable to carry on in the ministry;
  - b. meeting the expenses for the year off (on holiday) including the travel costs as well as the cost of all the care needing to be provided for those laid up;
  - c. likewise payment to meet the expense of the journey and, as well, the upkeep of the sick or feeble forced to return home for some time or for good from the missions.
6. It is for the Provincial and his Council to decide in each case on the amount of money made available to the house in which an invalid missionary is living.

Issoudun
Undated, likely August 31, 1905

Dear Father,

I believe that you have done the right thing by not accepting responsibility for a parish church. It would be seriously questionable in the present circumstances! You are completely in the right. The General Administration must give itself completely to the leadership of the Society which has such a great need to strengthen itself in the religious spirit which is so weakened, in being obedient to the direction and wishes of Superiors, in strengthening religious discipline and, as well, the exercise of good financial management. One has experienced the abyss without asking how one is going to get out of it!!! I am aware, Father, that the transfer of the administration to Rome is not your fault and was done contrary to your wishes. If at the very least this decision was only taken provisionally, everything would have been safeguarded, but not so since in the thinking of the Chapter it became definitive. One could not more deeply wound the heart of the poor founder by failing to take into consideration in any way whatsoever his wishes and the serious reasons he put forward. You will find for the moment in this decision very great advantages which I am far from gainsaying. May the Lord be praised! The future will hold out quite a lot for you. There is a second wound, perhaps deeper, which I feel bound to bring to your notice, and that is doing away with our habit and the heart emblem, those signs of our wonderful vocation which Pope Pius XI himself placed on our chests in that memorable June 3, 1874, audience at which he called himself the founder and personal, effectively, Superior of the little Congregation. Read about this in the current Annals of that time, or in my book: the Sacred Heart of Jesus, p.242 and following, where there is a description of this interview and you will be struck by the words, page 245, when we knelt for the blessing of the image of the Sacred Heart. Here they are: "Place this image on your chests; one will know from it that you are the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart." The following year Monsignor Druon, Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne's secretary, and former chaplain to the army, was received in audience together with Fr. Jouët, and he wore the legion of honour decoration. Pius IX asked him what the red ribbon represented. "Most Holy Father," he replied, "it's the decoration I received as military chaplain during the last war." (1870) "Ah! It's the legion of honour!" replied Pius IX. "But the real cross of the legion of honour is right here," placing his fingers upon the large heart woven into the soutane on Fr. Jouët's chest. See page 245. The Chapter, by getting rid of this badge, has committed an act of disloyalty and been renegade. It could not have more outrageously insulted that great Pope, which the Church will soon raise to our altars and whom we shall be full of pride to claim as our protector, one of ourselves.

Likewise, my appeal has been ignored in leaving aside our cape and habit! What danger was there in keeping both one and the other in countries where the law is not set against them. In all Congregations a sacred regard is shown to habits, their introduction, their use, endorsed by the founder, whereas with us they are pushed aside. Are the Redemptorists, the Passionists, and so many others, left without the insignia prescribed by their founding fathers? And here now is a Chapter brought together under the patronage of the Sacred Heart giving way to the pressure of young, liberal, priests, ending by ill-thought out-voting what their holy founder, Pius IX, had so greatly and warmly approved of.

I fear that the divine Heart of Jesus will cease to bless us and that our title which is so wonderful and enviable of Sacred Heart Missionary will pass to another Congregation...

Mr. Etave, our solicitor, has been away a long time and has now returned. I shall send you the power of attorney you are looking for. As regards that society (an association in which capital is placed in common in order to gain advantageous rent, made over to all survivors when somebody is deceased) which you wish to set up, you would do well not to have anybody in it other than those French whose vocation you consider solid, and by so doing you will avoid a lot of headaches and problems in the future. Take good care to have a private, secret, declaration signed by each individual so that in the event of his departure from the Society he will have a claim on nothing. We ourselves set up a society of the same kind to deal with the Saint-Gérard property, etc. Fr. Albert, who was involved in the transaction, on withdrawing, had the temerity to put in a claim for a portion of all our property, having forgotten about the act of renunciation which I made him sign, and that was it. One cannot be too careful as regards these issues. (Fr. Albert Désiré was laicized on February 20, 1880.)

There is nothing further to report about the Sacred Heart and there's no longer any mention of a sale, hand-over. Madame des Lig. muddled up everything with Mr. Lassère; the latter, with all his scheming, setting a process underway and demanding 15,000 francs (about 49,940 euros) in damages and interest. How will all this finish?

Please receive, Father, my best wishes in C.J.

Dear Father,

Fr. Brunet only wishes to go away and take walks. He has spent 3 weeks in Vichy and now he wants to take himself off to Belgium. He is not at all worried about finances which makes things very compromising, and a very important issue moreover. He could very easily make his retreat at the Sacred Heart if he wanted to. It is time to tighten the purse strings and only give permission for those trips which are really, absolutely, necessary.

You will have heard that the Bourges procurator has bluntly refused to enter into negotiations; he wants the civil process to go ahead and if the Insurance Society doesn't succeed in its case, all the buildings will be put up for sale. It's a disaster. Accordingly, one needs to get back from the Marquess L. the 25,000 francs (about 83,230 euros) which was foolishly put in her hands, and the other financial contributions which might have been made over to her. This pathetic child who doesn't know how to add up is walking with great steps towards financial ruin.

I wouldn't want the deposit account, which I made over to you, to be put to any use contrary to its purpose.

My good wishes to all.

Wholly yours, dear friend, in C.J.

A commentary by the Founder on an article in 'Sillon' magazine.

D 19051031

*October 1905
Not precisely dated*

AT SILLON

A public meeting about the country's army.

The following report was made available to us:

On Tuesday October 4, Sillon organized, on the occasion of a class departure, a conference by Mr. Marc Sangnier entitled "Army and Fatherland". An audience of close to two thousand people gathered at 8pm in the learned Society's Hotel in response to the invitation posted, on bill boards, all over Paris at the instigation of Sillon.

The speaker, having first considered the matters which were put forward in the midst of the crisis, surrounding the idea of a country which presently tortures the French soul, sharply distinguished from integrist nationalists who put the country, or more correctly their monarchical understanding of the country, before everything else, identifying it as the main aim and concern of human effort. Then there are the pacifist humanitarians and anti-militants, who often forget the forcible statement of President Roosevelt that "the voice of the weak counts for nothing in the clamour for peace, and what alone is powerful is the voice of the justly armed". Mr. Marc Sangnier states, then, that for us France is obviously less than humanity. But no less so we would not be serving humanity usefully unless we served France in the first place. It is then on behalf of the democratic French Republic that we...

There is an abrupt breaking off of the speech here.

Chevalier writes:

This talk by Marc Sangnier is very regrettable. His intent to make France a democratic republic is very dangerous. Let him first of all work to bring about a Christian democracy without occupying himself with the form and shape of government. This last is what's more needed, the rest coming later. Wanting at all costs France to be a republic against its nature and traditions, without its being essentially Catholic in the first place, is to foster cruel deceptions and bring to it divisiveness.

Dear Father,

I thank you most wholeheartedly for the good wishes sent to me in your name and in that of your kind and good confrères. I reciprocate my own to you and all the others; they represent all that is best in my heart. May the divine Heart of Jesus hear them on one side and the other! I read with much interest your circular on poverty and shared it with those around me. Let it not remain a dead letter like so many others!

It is, I believe, on February 6 next that the Bourges court will consider an appeal with regard to the verdict involving Issoudun. The issue is very serious. Could you not call for a triduum of prayer in the French Province? Only God can ward off disaster from us.

With all good wishes in C.J. Father.

Dear Fr. Meyer,

I know your feelings well enough not to doubt your good will. Thanks a thousand for your good wishes which come from a heart which is so committed and generous in spirit. I re-confirm my own which are in unison with yours, encapsulating for you all the best of my heart.

Let us be under no illusions: victory will be a long time coming, leaving aside a providential intervention. I sent the proofs of the Apocalypse (book) to the Archbishop of Bourges and here is his notification of its reception: "The Archbishop of Bourges brings it to the notice of the Archpriest (Chevalier) that he is handing on his manuscript to the commission of the Index, while wishing him a happy feast."

I forwarded the same proofs to Fr. Genocchi and here is his reply: "I read them and I found this to be an excellent resumé of the worthy commentators of our age. This was your objective and you had no need to take account of learned commentaries. So considered, there is little or nothing to correct. I did place a question mark in one or two places which did not seem right to me."

I made a few small corrections. On page 25 there is "according to several Church Fathers". I put: "according to some authors". Then in a note I quote the theologian Malvenda, a Spaniard who has written a learned work on the Antichrist, having him born in Asia from a Jewish father of the Dan tribe. I likewise quote the Catholic encyclopaedia article by Fr. Glaire on the Antichrist which holds the same opinion. On page 26, in place of "Verdit" there should be "Vadit", but this is not important.

I have thought that in the event of a refusal by the Archbishop of Bourges, I would ask Fr. Genocchi to get an imprimatur (permission to publish) from the Master of the Sacred Palace. We shall, therefore, remain at ease.

The people (the priests) in Chimay think my letter to Fr. Jouët is too precipitate. It would be much better for them to wait until they become well aware of his views and financial situation. There's nothing better than so doing, and I share this view.

I think it is time for you to enrol and become part of the Marian Congress which is due to be held in Rome and thereby make known our own dear (Marian) devotion.

Please be assured of my best wishes in C.J.

J.C.

I have just now heard of the dear parish priest of Thizay's death. He will be buried tomorrow. I shall miss him.

Dear kind Fr. Vandel,

How good of you to think of me and send me your wishes for a good and holy New Year! They are all the more appreciated for my being aware of their total sincerity. My own are wholeheartedly offered in return. I ask only that all of you be saintly religious and that you train a generation of Missionaries totally dedicated to worship of the Sacred Heart, Our Lady, and the salvation of souls. What a lovely undertaking lies in your hands!

Bishop Navarre tells me that he has heard that several of your young men in Kensington mutinied and some have left. What truth is there in all this?

Our poor unfortunate France is very much out of sorts. The religious revolution is at its most intense. Our sectarians (anti-clericals) have sworn to destroy religion and are taking every means, fair and foul, to do so. Your yourself do well, dear friend, to hold fast to tradition, not allowing yourself to be swept along by this modern breeze which seeks to reform everything by expansion of freedoms, well-being, independence, all detrimental to a true religious life, and which tendencies, greatly to my regret, were in evidence at the last Chapter. Several give the impression of trying to do away with the title of Missionary of the Sacred Heart and get rid of the symbols which call it to mind for us. This would be an act of treachery! It is an apostasy that the Sacred Heart of Jesus, source of every blessing, will not allow happen since it would renege on one of our most resplendent glories and do an injustice to the great Pope Pius IX who himself endorsed us with this emblem in your uncle's presence.

Convey, dear Father, my regards to all and, together with my blessing, my best wishes in C.J.

January 12, 1906

Dear Father,

Let our confidence be in prayer! God is all powerful! I directed myself to the souls in Purgatory, promising them a novena of masses if they made possible a settlement for us, the only recourse left to us. I shall keep you informed. Yes, the situation in France is serious, very serious. Never has religion found itself facing a more challenging threat, not even in 1893. The persecution has taken on every kind of hypocrisy, trickery and lies that one can think of. It's the Devil, through the Freemasons, who provides the inspiration and guidance for all of this. He will not be disarmed; we can be sure of this. Soon he will have engulfed the whole of Europe; it is pointless to have any illusions about this.

France in the designs of God is the world's heart; each time it throbs there is an impact felt in the furthest away extremities (of the world). The blows from divine justice are being administered, so it seems to me. God has not been sparing with his warnings. His threats have been answered with outrage and impiety. The angel has drawn the sword from its scabbard and the oracles must be fulfilled. The wells in the abyss are open, all the powers of hell unchained and about to mount ruin upon ruin. We are only experiencing the beginning of all this. Let us prepare for the battle which shall be ferocious and, most likely, bloody.

The French episcopacy will find it difficult to relate to each other. One can understand this if one has in mind the appointment of bishops who in certain instances have been motivated by ambition, the currying of favour or scheming. There are at the present moment two approaches to issues to be found among them. One group, which I believe is in the majority, keeps to its palaces and cathedrals, enjoying a peaceful and comfortable life, given to cultural associations and gatherings, without taking note of the serious dangers and issues enveloping it; these people support the germs of schism and heresy; they strip the Church of its most sacred assets. It's the endorsement of despoliation and theft. For that matter, do these cultural associations provide peace and security? Maybe for some months, but after the legislative elections, with the sectarians (left-wingers) holding on to power, they will drop their mask and set out by every means available to them to destroy religion in France. That's their objective.

Other bishops, again quite large in number, would be in favour of passive resistance. For them any denouncing of the concordat is illegal since it is a bilateral contract which one part of itself cannot disengage from without the other's agreement. Their intention would be to continue occupying the churches and presbyteries without taking any notice of the law about worship, waiting for the government to come and expel by force the faithful, closing the churches in the whole of France at the same time. The impact would be deeply felt and the reaction a healthy one. But there would have to be general agreement on the side of the bishops... only the Pope alone could achieve it if he thought it opportune. He would without any doubt be obeyed. Be all this as it may, the issue is very delicate and complicated. His Holiness Pius X needs enlightenment in the present circumstances. We very much pray to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the patron of difficult and despairing concerns, to enlighten him. Would not this be the moment to invoke solemnly and publicly in all French churches Our Lady of the Sacred Heart? Yes, indeed!

Let us pray that Heaven will so inspire this great Pope. Victory would be achieved.

Wholly yours, dear friend, in C.J.

L 19060218

February 18, 1906

Dear Father,

I passed on to Fr. de Mondion the procedures to follow in order to get what he wants. He is not on the best of terms with the Bishop of P. (most likely Paris). That's why he would like to have the support of the Bishop of B. (Bourges) whom he doesn't know at all. I wrote to inform him that I would place myself at his disposal if he thinks that my intervention with the Bishop of P. could in some way help. I await his reply.

Nothing new about the sale; the negotiations are taking place all the time. There are serious obstacles and I fear that they cannot be overcome. If matters take the course which I think they will, there will be a need for the setting-up of another society for the re-purchase. Mr. B. de B. (Bernard de Bonneval) will make himself available, if he keeps his promise. Yes, I share matters with him and also with his father, most confidentially so, about the proposal he discussed with you. In the present circumstances, with the government no longer having to intervene, I think the proposal is very feasible, being very much worthwhile for the department and giving general satisfaction to all the inhabitants. If there were to be a petition, old and young, great and small, priests and laity would sign it with both hands.

It would lead to a very satisfactory outcome for souls and for discipline. The diocese is much too large and, inevitably, neglected. Half the parishes have, perhaps, never had a visitation. Most of the Bourges Archbishops have always been too elderly, and quite often laid-up. This double burden weighing on their shoulders is really too heavy to bear. Besides, our department suffers. It comprises about 300,000 people and it isn't basically poor since if it were fully cultivated to its potential, it would be likely to become one of the better departments. Resources would not be lacking to the new bishop. I would say that there would be an abundance of them. The centre-piece of the department would naturally be the seat of his residence. The episcopal palace, fully furnished, with a large enclosed area, is quite ready. A quite considerable rent is guaranteed to the title-holder. Massive construction work in the town centre, associated with a charitable organization, would be made over to the major seminary. Other buildings could be made use of for a minor seminary and other ecclesiastical undertakings.

The budget (contributory) in favour of cults having been suppressed, financial resources in most country parishes are lacking for the upkeep of clergy. Who is going to provide for this? It will not be our venerable Archbishop, who has succeeded in alienating the grand families of his diocese because of his political ideas, and made himself unpopular among the good-willed faithful and also with his clergy. Only a new Bishop can remedy this situation.

You, perhaps, will say to me: Who could be put forward? Quite simply I shall name you the candidate: it is Abbé L. (Fr. Lelong), Vicar General and Superior of the major seminary. He was born here and I knew him as a child; he served my mass. I followed his career in all the responsibilities he undertook. He is a priest of quality, intelligent, well educated, of solid piety, with a great liking for Rome and the Holy See, very active, supportive of discipline, an excellent administrator, familiar with diocesan matters, well known, highly regarded and liked by all the clergy. He is 58 years old and his appointment would be enthusiastically received by everybody.

He likes his home town and would support it in his undertakings. I am persuaded that he would replace me in my post (Issoudun parish priest) by whomsoever from among us we would bring to his notice... and thereby the future of our works would be assured.

Frédéric Lelong, Issoudun born, May 30, 1848, parish priest and dean of Valencay and Buzançais; he became Vicar General of the archdiocese on October 38, 1896.

There you have my thoughts and I put them before you for the glory of God, the good of the Church and the salvation of souls.

Wholly yours, dear friend, in C.J.

J.C.

NB: The Holy Father's encyclical was received by Catholics with unbelievable enthusiasm, while on the other hand it rattled the Freemasons. Last Tuesday we had an inventory made of our church. We were threatened by the Apaches (Chevalier's recourse to the native North American tribe of that name for his attribution of violent hostility to the Church's inflexible enemies, Freemasons and others). Thanks to the prudence, and good, circumspect, behaviour of the faithful, everything passed in complete calm. I am sending the paper on to you which gives an account of my double protest.

February 24, 1906

Dear Father,

I have had letters from Oceania, Quebec and elsewhere where regret is being expressed about the reform of our Constitutions.

"Since every one is fully at liberty to express his opinion, I have to say," one of our confrères writes to me on behalf of others, "that I can see no need for this reform. I foresee great danger for the Society's future. I can see here the makings of schism."

Another writes to me: "Since I came into the Society I believe that I am right in saying that what those who came before us did was well done and I know more than one confrère who said more than once to me that our Constitutions were very sensible, balanced, at least with reference to the treatment of the religious life. Possibly from the administrative point of view, there are some changes needed because the Congregation has expanded since its foundation. If my query has some purpose, supported by that of others, I am letting you have it."

What comes from Australia and our confrères on the missions is yet more significant. There are again complaints about the change of habit and also about doing away with the Sacred Heart emblem. These complaints have become general. Take note of this. When presenting my spiritual testament to the Chapter, and of which no account was taken, I had an intuition of what is happening today. It is always dangerous to go against the aspirations and customs introduced by the founder of a religious society. Nihil innovatur quod traditum est. (Tradition should not be changed.) If you do not wish to see our dearly loved Congregation in shadow or vegetating, it is time to take notice and give satisfaction to the complainants. Concentrate your efforts on a truly religious spirit, discipline, mortification, fidelity to the rules, meeting the obligations of the three vows. The more our Society is serious in endeavour, well ordered and disciplined through obedience, a spirit of sacrifice, devotedness and self-commitment, the Sacred Heart will bless it lavishly, with vocations becoming more numerous.

Your dear Father in C.J.

J. Chevalier.

Have you thought about the official approval of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart? You should have received my supportive letter. Here there is still nothing new to report. Mr. Piquet, the banker, is bankrupt for the sum of 900,000 francs (about 2,996,530 euros). It's ruinous for the country.

Dear Viscount,

Yes, indeed, the news is only too true; what is iniquitous has come to pass! The right to property is crushed and injustice wins out... I ask myself if the judgment handed down, which is no more than the ratification of that of Issoudun, does not contain within itself some defect in its formulation, since as you are aware our court based its case on several texts of the Law which have no relevance at all so far as the Société Immobilière of the Indre is concerned, in which case the elimination (cessation) court could declare it null and void. Your lawyer in Paris, who is very competent, could let you know about this. If the Society could appeal its case, time would be in its favour and, as well, if the elections were in our favour, then, perhaps, we would have a chance of success. The advantage to be gained in this serious issue by its being drawn out in time would be very worthwhile.

I thank you most appreciatively for the good wishes and support you kindly offer us.

In any event, I believe that we must make every effort to find a number of rich and well-disposed people to rent at least the Issoudun buildings which will be sold at a low price. There would be no risk involved since these buildings will always keep their value and, later, in better times, the Congregation will reimburse the new buyers and the property (as a whole) will be saved. It is unthinkable that it should be lost. On your next trip we shall speak again about all this.

I have the honour to be, Count, with deepest respect, your most humble and devoted servant in C.J.

April 3, 1906

Dear Father,

Thank you for your support. Yes, the abominable has come to pass. Since God does nothing without His reasons, we must draw ourselves to think that we have merited this trial. We can only profit from the lesson and resign ourselves to God's holy will. All our efforts now must concentrate on finding a group of rich people, benefactors and supporters of our work, who would be kindly willing to provide the funds needed to buy at the very least the Issoudun properties which will be sold at a very low price...!

It would be a shame, disgraceful, to allow them to pass into non-believers' hands who would put them to sacrilegious use. The convent, the basilica and the rest will be sold for half their value: 250,000 francs (about 832,360 euros) would suffice, I think, to purchase the whole lot, inclusive of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart house. The buyers would run no risk since the properties will always keep their value. And in more favourable times – the storm is not going to last forever – the Congregation, once re-established, will reimburse the new owners. If the Society's Provinces have remained mindful of their cradle, and all the sacrifices made by Issoudun to set them up, they should bleed themselves white in order to keep these properties. It should not be forgotten that if Issoudun ceased to be the centre of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association it would be calamitous because even now it provides in great part the resources which keep our works going in the French Province.

You know that since January I no longer exercise responsibility in relation to the government, the civil authorities, and the 4 curates are, so to say, acting on my behalf. The factory, cut off by the Fire Brigade, is in trouble and I cannot count on it. The mass offerings on special occasions have diminished by half. The collection suggested by the Bishop will not bring in very much because of Mr. Piquet's bankruptcy which involves 3 or 400 Christian families. And yet we must get by and support the parish undertakings, the schools and everything else. I would request you, then, to tell Fr. Maillard to forward me every three months a quarter of the 2,000 francs (about 6,650 euros) which you make over to us for the upkeep of the 4 curates. I believe that, given our state of penury, he should not allow precedence over that contribution to masses for the Pope, or the money which each member must provide towards meeting the general expenses of the Congregation. Be good enough to point this out to him.

Again, thanks, my dear friend.

Good wishes to you and all your confrères in C.J.

Dear Fr. Vandel,

I most sincerely thank you for your prayers and good wishes on the occasion of the feast. They make me happy since I know the heart from which they came and were forwarded to me. Having our patron saint in common, I forward my good wishes to you also. May the good Lord bless you and also all the undertakings for which you are responsible.

I am very grateful to you for letting me know about all the good things you have to say about our dear young men. You have there a nursery of true apostles fired by the religious spirit, burning with zeal from the love of God, the divine Heart of Jesus and that of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. It is greatly consoling for me in the midst of all these tribulations which it has pleased the good Lord to place upon me. The Bourges court of appeal has ratified the pernicious ruling of the Issoudun court despoiling us of everything, and in consequence the liquidator will shortly put up for sale at auction all our French properties which will be assessed at a very low price. It means total ruin for the French Province. If, perhaps, we could find a number of rich people, supporters of our work, who would be prepared to buy our Sacred Heart house, the basilica, in a word the Issoudun properties, this would provide hope for the future. The new owners, in the event, would have nothing to worry about financially, since what cost us a million will, perhaps, be sold for 250,00 francs (about 832,370 euros). When the storm has blown over, the persecution will not last forever, the Congregation will reimburse the buyers. If the new Provinces were mindful of their cradle, and the sacrifices made on their behalf by Issoudun, they should get together and come to our aid!...

In the end, the good Lord is the Master and we resign ourselves to his most holy and adorable will.

Cheerio, dear friend; present my greetings to all our confrères and my warm greetings to all your good novices and scholastics.

I bless you all in C.J.

Issoudun, April 13, 1906

Dear Fr. Superior General,

I cannot thank you enough, also your dear Assistants, for the 500 francs (about 1,660 euros) which you were kind enough to send me on the occasion of my feast day, on which you so wholeheartedly wished me well with your warm greetings.

Yes, where has the time gone?... We find ourselves faced with trials which the good Lord makes us experience as the impact of his love and mercy. Let us try to profit from it. Perhaps religious congregations have very much forgotten their beautiful and sublime vocation, being accustomed to living in ease and also, perhaps, somewhat worldly. Divine Providence would seem to wish that they be recalled to their primary vocation, which is the continuance of Jesus Christ's life in the world and a sharing in His sufferings: Si vis perfectus esse, etc. The practice of poverty is a treasure which will never be exhausted, outdated. Priests and religious, if they are what they should be, will never be lacking in what is necessary. Accordingly, I have in this respect no worries about the future.

Persecution like poverty is a blessing. Far from our complaining about it, let us rejoice like the apostles to be considered worthy to suffer with and for our divine Master. The revolutionary spirit which is passing through France and Europe will not always last. This is a cyclone, or if you find it still better, it's Vesuvius erupting its molten lava, but it will calm down... Violentum non durat.

Allow me, dear Father, to disengage myself from sharing your views, and those of your counsellors, about France's future as they seem to me excessively pessimistic.

My viewpoint, like that of yours, has always been to move slowly in order to gain time, awaiting for things to happen which could, perhaps, be in our favour. Fr. Maillard thinks otherwise: it is a pointless expense and it would be better to remain calm and leave things as they are. I think, however, that it is our duty to try out this possibility – a word from you will make him change his mind. It's all the more pertinent when the judgment of the Bourges court has not yet been handed down to the Indre Societé Immobilière and, once delivered, the insurance society has one or two months available to it for an appeal.

You seem convinced, Father, that religious congregations can no longer reform and renew themselves in France. In my view, this is a grave error. The eldest daughter of the Church, which has accomplished so much in the world and for the Holy See, will be the very last of the nations pushed aside by divine Providence. It will revitalize its religious spirit and again become identified with Gesta Dei per Francos (God's works accomplished by the French) while other kingdoms will have apostasized or become unfaithful. Italy, on which you seem to base so much hope, is being caught up in a revolutionary spirit and before long it will set itself up as a Freemasonry republic, throwing out religious whom it detests and who will be happy to take refuge in France under a compensatory government. It's not anything like a prophecy which I am making but, quite simply, a conclusion from the philosophy of history. It is a necessity for us to repurchase all the Sacred Heart buildings. The break-up which you suggest is impossible to achieve and burdened with much that is greatly inconvenient.

The proposal which you offer is impossible to carry out and full of what is greatly disadvantageous. The advantage you see in it is to be less in view (living more privately) and living holy poverty more compellingly. Poverty has nothing to do with the possession of certain buildings which are a necessity, but rather in abuses which may arise therefrom. Under another restorative régime which we shall have one day, we shall be very pleased to take advantage of it.

I placed in the Congregation's hands 44,000 francs for the repurchase of the basilica and the rest of the buildings. Since then I have had fresh contributions which at the present moment have reached 10 or 12,000 francs and that sum could still be added to. Perhaps, before the sale, I may reach 80,000 francs and by making an appeal to the promoters who love Our Lady of the Sacred Heart we may get as far as 100,000 francs, without taking the large burses into consideration.

I broke off my letter to meet B. de Bonneval and his wife who have come to Issoudun for Easter. Following mature reflection, so he informs me, he is of the view that in no way should new societies be set up to repurchase the Sacred Heart properties which we can more or less dispossess ourselves of and find, rather, one or two private purchasers, quite wealthy enough of themselves to be considered more than capable of paying from their own resources for these buildings. There would in this way be more security than in the other and I am in agreement with him. Then, afterwards, he adds, we can see, while waiting, what use we can make of the convent buildings. The basilica, even with the present régime, will remain open and the pilgrimage will take its usual course. Mr. Bernard says that you should come to France during the month of May as it would be advantageous for you and Fr. Carrière to be here in order to consider on the spot what we might be able to do.

The paper dealing with (religious) issues made it known some days ago that Fr. Genocchi was about to be appointed Latin Patriarch of Jerusalem by the Holy See. What do you think of this piece of news? He would be, so it seems to me, a good choice.

Please accept, dear Father, for yourself and your dear Assistants, my warm gratitude and fatherly regards in C.J.

April 24, 1906

Dear Fr. Carrière,

1. On the occasion of one of our Chapters when I was still Superior of the Congregation, Fr. Barral, already compromised, came to find us at Issoudun in order to present to us his work, Imensee, and he reconciled with us. Having made myself familiar with the very compromised situation in which he found himself, I informed him that we would not accept his proposal until he had paid his debts and that he could not remain Superior of the house. He replied that his brother (Joseph), a wealthy businessman in Lyons, would meet the debt but, as for himself, he wanted to stay in charge. Having observed him in his involvement with the Quito undertaking, where he compromised everything, and knowing him to get everything hopelessly muddled and always moving too far ahead, I refused his offer and the breakdown became complete.

Perhaps this was so with Fr. Chevalier while General, but not so with many confrères or MSC Superiors, there being no complete breakdown.

What always greatly amazed and saddened me was the evidence of camaraderie which many of our confrères always exhibited towards this defrocked character. On several occasions people have gone on holidays to his place, extolling his work, preaching retreats for him, drawing up constitutions to set up a religious order, currying favour for him in Rome, etc. It was obviously, on his part, an appeal to walk on the wrong road he had undertaken; given the character of an individual who had no doubts about anything, bankruptcy, with all its consequences, was to be foreseen. Today it's a fait accompli. My views on Fr. Barral were very well known. No notice was taken of them; everything was done without consulting me, as if I were a stranger in the Congregation, never having done anything for it.

All these observations are correct as regards the facts. Fr. Chevalier was aware that his immediate successors, Lanctin and Meyer, also Fathers Maillard, Carrière, Genocchi and many others, were steadfastly friendly with Pierre Barral. For more on Fr. Barral in Quito, see above, passim.

It also has to be understood that this was being written towards the end of Fr. Chevalier's life, when he was, human and humanely speaking, already affected by recurring illness and the trials accompanying the hostility of the French State towards the Church. One understands his feeling sorry for himself, his embittered reaction, in a situation when the Generalate had been outside Issoudun since 1901 and the majority of French MSCs were exiled and, consequently, visits to Issoudun were infrequent. However Chevalier, as noted, was consulted about issues such as property, its ownership, despoliation and the need to buy it back – see the previous letter about Issoudun property, and below the Rome property.

2. Now there follows consideration of the Rome properties. When the issue came up about creating an Italian Province, I staunchly insisted that our property in Piazza Navona should be affiliated to France. It was the Issoudun mother house or, if you prefer, France which alone provided all the necessary money for its purchase and renovation, that is to say at least 400,000 francs (about 1,331,790 euros). This is an undeniable fact. When its setting-up led to a request guaranteeing the property as belonging to France, the reply given, based on Fr. Genocchi's advice, was that this issue would be dealt with later in a positive and satisfactory manner. Having left aside the legal formalities to be met and acting in all good faith, remaining conscious of the justice of our claim, we waited expectantly, counting on the promise made. When Fr. Lanctin resigned from office, the new Superior General wanted to clarify the matter and laid claim to the Piazza Navona property on behalf of the French Province. In place of treating the matter in a family-like way, as would be appropriate, it was decided, rather, to refer the matter officially to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars without adverting me. Was there an explanatory memorandum drawn up in favour of our position and defending our rights? It is possible, but I don't know anything about it. In any event, it should have been sent to me; that's elementary. Naturally, the Sacred Congregation, making its judgment in keeping with common law, found in favour of the Italian Province without taking account either of good faith, being unaware of rights, or the initiatives taken by the Italian Province. It is no less certain, then, that justice was infringed and that res clamat Domino (the situation cries out to, for its rightful owner).

If – in order to be tactful with the Cardinal Protector, who I think must have been badly informed – one does not want to deal with the General Congregation or the Sovereign Pontiff who, so I believe, would both one and the other acknowledge the justice of our case, at least let every effort be made to get Cardinal Ferrata into amicable discussions with the Italian Provincial in order to get just compensation for us! No-one, at the very least, would want to trample under foot both conscience and the right to one's property. Could it not be decided, for example, that the Rome house belongs to no province, but instead is the exclusive property of the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart? In the light of such a decision, the Italian Province, which is poor and in debt, would not be required to hand over any money and everyone would be happy. In the event, there is a negative response. I am of the view that this issue should be brought before the Papal tribunal.

3. I think your presence with Fr. Meyer at Issoudun is imperative both as regards the appeal to overcome the verdict brought against the Insurance Society, as well as discussing what needs to be done about the acquisition of the Sacred Heart properties. As regards the latter, I fear that the end of May might be too late. The liquidator could from today put up the properties for sale if he so wished. I don't understand what Fr. Meyer has in mind when he advises that nothing should be bought except the basilica, the pathway which leads to the old school, as distinct from the Petite Oeuvre, and have everything else sold off to anyone whatsoever. This proposal does not hold up; it is enough to reflect on this for a second or so in order to convince oneself that it is impractical. It will not be difficult to point out this to you. Everything possible must be attempted in order to get ownership of everything. The revolution is not going to last forever; this is a cyclone which is passing through France. God, in fact, is punishing it (France) for its betrayals (of Catholicism). But the faith is not dead, and there will be a reaction with a restorative government of regret when divine justice becomes satisfied. Where did Fr. Meyer get the idea that religious orders have had their day and cannot any longer re-establish themselves (in France)! He forgets, then, that the life of perfection is an essential part of holy Church. The Congregations, he asserts, will no longer exist in France other than in an isolated state, elsewhere as well no doubt, and must give up their larger houses, which only stir up covetousness in people, and be happy to live under the conditions of strict poverty. This is utter utopianism. One can very well maintain the spirit of poverty while owning certain properties which are absolutely needed for novitiates, scholasticates, etc., etc. If one trains religious in the spirit of prayer, obedience, denial, sacrifice, there can be nothing to worry about. In getting back our Issoudun properties we shall be very happy to make use of them later and re-engage in our undertakings once more. To think of abandoning them would imply having no feeling, concern or appreciation. Is this not the cradle of us all? Is it not Issoudun which brought us up and nourished us? Isn't it in Issoudun that all our vital and alive undertakings began? Is it not from Issoudun that our work went around the world? All members of the Congregation are, more than they realize, keen on the preservation of this property in its entirety since it has to be held sacred by us. The events which are about to take place will shortly prove this to be the case.

The argument is being put forward that in making this new purchase, the Congregation's debts will be greatly increased, or, if you prefer, the debts of the French Province. This is not true. It has to do with finding one or two rich buyers who are committed to us. Their capital would not be at risk. These buildings will be sold at a quarter of their value. They will always be there as the outcome resulting from the funds made over by the buyers, and in better times they will be worth double the price paid. The new owners could let them provisionally to whomsoever they wish, gaining interest from the money they laid out. If they cannot lease out in total, I shall take it upon myself to call upon some of my associates whose contributions towards preserving a basilica which is dear to them would meet the interest involved. We have found such committed and generous purchasers. You will see for yourself that the finances of the Congregation and the Province will not suffer, or be at a loss, in any way.

4. There is, besides, the need to safeguard the buildings belonging to the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. They sacrificed everything they had in order to build their convent which they gave over to the Insurance Society, but without any compensation. Can we allow them to be abandoned? I do not think so since they are without money and resources, particularly so after the pilgrimages were cancelled. They have been so generously committed to us and our missions. And Issoudun is their cradle. Not being canonically approved by Rome, it is the Archbishop of Bourges who is their Superior and he has handed over responsibility to me in his name for this community. If they were unhappily forced to leave Issoudun, they would have as their Superior the Bishop of each diocese in which they had houses. This would lead to division and dislocation for this community. All the more reason, therefore, for it to become an obligation on our part to keep them in Issoudun, at least the general administration. This is a serious issue and demands concern on our part. In your role as Provincial could you not put in a request to the Australian Province which has the resources and to the apostolic Vicars (bishops) who benefit from their services, to come to the aid of the Issoudun mother house? For other houses it is a requirement of justice and appreciation to help them out in their predicament.

Please, Father, be assured of my warm regards in C.J.

J. Chevalier.

You are aware of the Government's plans!

Having broken up and disbanded all religious communities, it claims that they have no property rights and that all their assets belong to it. As a result, they put them up for sale. It's robbery, an attack on property rights which nothing can justify. We are one of the earliest victims. Consequently the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart basilica, the missionaries' house, the pilgrims' park, the convent of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, all the buildings, are due to be sold by auction at a tenth, perhaps, of their value.

If moved by your piety and your love for Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, you could make some contribution towards the acquisition of these buildings in order to prevent them from being put to profane use and preserve them for their original purpose, we would be very much indebted to you and Our Lady will appreciatively take into account your generosity.

Please accept, together with my gratitude, my respectful good wishes in C.J.

My Dear Child,

These great heat waves are not good for me, renewing my pains and aches, taking away my appetite. When the weather changes, I hope things go better for me. You are getting yourself ready for communion on Assumption Day. Please do not torment yourself. What purpose does it serve to become preoccupied such a long time beforehand? The little issues you complain about are of no consequence; it's not these which come in the way of you being totally committed to God. Our Lord has adopted you as his specially loved child, enfolding you in his divine Heart. Be at rest therein in peace and may nothing arrive to disturb you. I take all (your concerns) upon me.

A striking occurrence has taken place at lower Charente in the La Rochelle diocese (now known as Charente Maritime). I have had a letter stating that on July 8 a statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, in the chapel of a very pious family, very committed to the devotion, opened and closed its eyes and the little child Jesus did the same thing. This happening took place over several days in the presence of a number of people. Fathers Lanctin and Maillard leave tomorrow to ascertain the facts. Let us pray. This is a great favour granted to the association if the fact is judged to be, as I hope, genuine.

With my best wishes and blessing, assuring you of my respectful good wishes in C.J.

September 13, 1906

Dear Kind Rev. Mother,

I am happy to know that, having fled the great heat of Issoudun, you have been happy in your experience of the Belgium climate. I myself bravely withstood the heat and my health is much improved.

I do not expect, given the slow-moving auctioneer, that our properties will be put up for sale before December and possibly not before January of next year. You may in all assurance send us both postulants and novices, I see nothing objectionable in so doing, all the more so since, as I told you, several ladies intend to buy your convent on your behalf and keep it in trust for you. If this, as I hope, comes about, you can continue with your work there.

I do not see the need for the three of you to remain any longer in exile. Your presence here has very much a necessary purpose. What are you going to gain by waiting on events, and of which we are assured? In no way will your prolonged absence affect matters, or your presence here worsen them. It seems to me that you are allowing yourselves to be too much influenced by fear or by a secret wish to remain on in Belgium. I do not in any way wish to influence you. I am simply telling you what I think before God and what I think in favour of your interests.

Nobody can make you pay interest if your house is repurchased! Providence will take care of that. You have, you say, concerns about the future of your community, fearing that vocations in France will come to be scarce and that you cannot any longer recruit for yourselves there. Such fears are exaggerated. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will be well able to provide for your needs. Have confidence! In any event as you have been assured that Belgium will provide you with vocations, what is stopping you from setting up a second novitiate there? You will see what results. Belgium itself is torn by revolution. Be on your guard!

You have, you say, six or seven postulants waiting to come in! If they are French send them to Issoudun. If they are not and have no objection to coming here, send them on. There is nothing to worry about at the moment, nor, perhaps, for the future. The good Lord sends us trials and we must bravely face them without being discouraged. Otherwise, the Lord could say to us as he did to the Apostles, trembling before the storm: "Men of little faith, why are you doubting?"

You tell me that you have nobody to take charge of your novitiate in Belgium. In times of persecution one adapts and tries to do as best one can. Find a good, pious, sister and under the guidance of good Fr. Piperon everything will go well. Every day, dear kind Mother, I pray for you, your sisters and your undertakings. I also know that you pray for me quite a lot. Continue to do so.

I bless you all in C.J.

We are at the eve of All Saints. If you have the consolation of having holy communion do not greatly torment yourself but, rather, leave your scruples aside. Remember what I said to you and which I repeat once more: You are in Our Lord's heart and he covers you with his protection like a living cloak over you. Here there is nothing new to report as regards our affairs and we continue to wait anxiously all the time. This damp weather is not good for me. I have some pain all over. December 3, 1906

Dear Father,

I shall be with you in heart and mind at the next Chapter if I am still in this world, since my health is more and more in jeopardy.

It's you who brought to my attention the diabolical intrigues being hatched against Fr. Védère. The court recognized his innocence with its verdict. May the Lord be blessed a thousand times over!

Fr. Carrière said nothing to me about all you shared with him as regards the Archbishop of B. (Bourges). You say that he is dead set against us! Is it against the general administration, or myself? What is he complaining about? I would love to know. Please let me have the truth and the whole truth. According to the religious weekly (paper), Pius X expressed a great deal of regard for him, warmly welcoming him, and his Vicar General. Has he been able to get him as his auxiliary? But certain papers have it that his reception at the Vatican was more than frosty; where's the truth?

A number of men from Chateauroux and the Indre, so I am told by Count de Bonneval, are about to put together a request for a bishop and their choice would favour Canon Clément, secretary to the Cardinal of Paris, and the son of the former Indre senator and lawyer to the Council of State. The family, originally from Orsennes (a large town about 30 kilometres from La Châtre), is highly regarded and does a lot of good work in the department. If the attempt succeeds, he would be an excellent choice.

The sale of the basilica and convent is held over for the month of January. The liquidator is putting together this whole lot at his own estimate of 100,000 francs (about 332,945 euros). Let us pray to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to save her sanctuary from profanation.

Be assured, Father, of my best wishes in C.J.

December 31, 1906

Dear Rev. Father General,

I make it my duty to offer you my most sincere good wishes both for your own sanctification and the wise, beneficial, direction of our little Society in its lofty vocation.

I gather that you are about to go to Australia for three months in order to organize the Sydney mission procure (office), accompanied by Fr. Linckens. It's a good decision and it will be towards the middle of January, I am told, that you are due to leave. But is this the right time to go? It's a time of gravely serious happenings in France where we could be driven out, expelled, at any moment! Where are we to go? What's going to become of us? Who will look after our interests. If the head is separated from the body in these sad times, we run the danger of facing shipwreck.

The month of January is also coinciding with the sale of our properties, the basilica, our convent, etc., etc. If there are problems, and there will be, where are you to be found? Where can you be reached in order to solve them? You would have to agree that the date of your trip is very badly chosen! What need is there to compromise so much in order to set up this procure (mission centre)? Going two or three months later would not offset it in any way. In any event, could you not, in consultation with your counsellors and the Sydney confrères, deal with the matter in writing, and thereby come to a decision about the issue? Besides, it's a trip which will cost a great deal of money and at the present moment, faced with persecution and despoliation, our finances are at a low ebb. Why add to expenses when we are close to losing everything?

Given the circumstances, and the crisis we are passing through, could you not, through the offices of the Cardinal Protector, get the next Chapter revising the Constitutions postponed? Nothing is more urgent and there will again be more expense involved which could be avoided at this moment. You will forgive my frankness, which is, perhaps, inopportune, but you will understand the reason which impels me to say this. It's an alarmist plea I let out without authority to do so, but I think that my age, my experience, compel me as duty-bound to do so! I feel that I am gravely ill and I do not think that I can keep going much longer. I abandon myself to divine Providence, saying: Sacred Heart of Jesus have mercy on us! Our Lady of the Sacred Heart save us!

With my best wishes of appreciation and warm regards, dear Father, very much yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier.

Be kind enough to convey my good wishes to your worthy Assistants and to our confrères.

Dear Father,

Yes indeed, the persecution creates sad, tragic, circumstances for us. This month on a Monday I was brutally thrown out of the presbytery onto the street with the curates. I am sending on to you the Issoudun Journal which describes all these events and which you will be interested to read, and then you can pass it on to the others. We are only at the beginning of things; we can expect much more serious trials and upsets. Yes, besides what Mr. Desclée (the publisher) forwarded, I myself sent 50 copies to you which you can distribute to whomsoever you wish. (Fr. Chevalier is writing about the recently published third edition of his book: The Apocalypse and the Present Times.) The Master of the Sacred Palace (the official Papal theologian, traditionally a Dominican) has requested three copies! You may get in touch with him if you think it opportune. You might present a copy bound in the Papal arms to Pius X and another to Cardinal Merry del Val. You will not forget, moreover, the Cardinal Protector, the Cardinal Vicar and other Cardinals you may know, also Monsignor Battandier and other notable personages. I shall meet your expenses. And what does Fr. Genocchi think of this third edition? You might publicize it first of all in the Italian Annals and then in some Rome Catholic magazines. To the editor of the Universe, Paris.

February 10, 1907

The Universe was founded in 1883 by Abbé (Fr.) Migne, otherwise principally associated with the writing of the Fathers of the Church. Louis Veuillot was editor in chief until his death in 1890 when he was succeeded by his son Eugène, who supported the Republican party.

Right Honourable Editor,

I read in the Universe this morning your very nice article about the forthcoming beatification of the great Pius IX, the incomparable Pope of the Immaculate Conception and Papal Infallibility. I am all the more drawn to this issue because I had a close association with Pius IX.

Our little Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart was founded the very day the dogma of the Immaculate Conception was promulgated on December 8, 1854, and the lovely title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart arose from it like a flower from a stem.

In September 1860 I found myself in Rome prostrate at the feet of His Holiness relating to him the unusual facts which had taken place. "You are Missionaries of the Sacred Heart," the great Pope remarked, "what a lovely title! What a wonderful apostolate devolves on you! The Church and society haven't hope other than in this divine Heart! It's therein we shall be delivered of all our ills. Preach this salutary devotion everywhere. Here is your motto: Ametur ubique terrarum Cor Jesu sacratissimum. Increase and multiply. I give you my blessing and I would like before I die to give your young Institute canonical approval." This prophecy was fulfilled in every respect.

Under the fruitful blessing of Pius IX, the little Congregation developed unexpectedly. I returned to Rome to make known this happy outcome and asked for the promised approval. The Supreme Pontiff received the news with joy, giving the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars orders that the decree of approval should be given to me on the very day itself of the feast of the Sacred Heart.

Accompanied by Fathers Vandel and Jouët, I went to thank the Holy Father for all his kindness, whereupon, finding him so sympathetic to and supportive of our ideas, I said to him with religious daring:

"Most Holy Father, this undertaking is yours since it was you yourself who gave rise to it, showered it with your blessings. Would it be out of order on our part to ask Your Holiness to be good enough to consider himself effectively its Superior, to undertake its direction and make us participate in all its merits during his life-time and following his death?"

He replied: "Most willingly." He then signed the petition we presented to him, which we keep in our archives as a precious document, a treasure beyond compare. You will understand, then, how interested and keen we are in the beatification of Pius IX

Before we left, the Holy Father said to us: "Earlier we were asked to consecrate the whole world to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, but it did not seem to us an opportune time. If today the same request were to be put to us, we would be disposed to grant it." "Would it be acceptable to you, Holy Father, if we took the initiative and stirred up support?" "Since you are Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, that is your role."

With the approval and support of Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne we went to work and some months afterwards we placed in the hands of Pius IX three million testimonials of support, 160 letters from Cardinals, Archbishops, etc., the whole contained in thirty folio volumes, richly illustrated with the Papal arms, which His Holiness had placed in the Vatican library. The Congregation of Rites limited the consecration to the Catholic Church without including the unbaptized. It was Leo XIII who, in 1899, fully met the expressed wishes.

Pardon, Mr. Director, the length of this letter, but I thought it might interest you.

Please accept, together with my regards, my most respectful good wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier,
Archpriest of Issoudun
Missionary of the Sacred Heart.

Dear Reverend Mother,

I am grateful to you for kindly remembering me and for the good wishes you extend to me on my 83rd birthday.

I am in the Lord's hands: he will do with me what he considers fitting and I shall drink the chalice He offers me, always submissive to His most holy and adorable will. I am pleased that your Belgian undertakings are so thriving and the good you are there accomplishing with your dear sisters. You are continually in my prayers just as I myself am in yours.

My health continues to be in its usual state, being all too shaken and poorly.

I bless you and all your dear sisters as I present you my respectful good wishes in C.J.

My Dear Child,

I thank you for bringing your latest mishap to my notice. I am so sorry. It will be a question of time and being patient. The doctor, it would appear, has knit together very well the fracture and he isn't at all concerned about it. I pray frequently for you. We are both of us on the rack. My pain is very great all the time and I hope the better weather will help to appease it so that I can make my visit to Notre Dame de la Grille (Madame Cougny's home).

Here is Easter upon us. You will do well to go and find your worthy parish priest and make yourself ready for your Easter duty. But, most especially, do not worry yourself to death with concern since I am answering for you and taking all on myself. This accident will bring you yet closer to Our Lord and make you more than ever dear to Him. Madame Baroness du Chaines seems very devoted to you. What support there is for you on all sides!

Please, dear child, receive my blessing and respectful good wishes in C.J.

Dear Fr. Benedetti,

Monsignor Battandier has written thanking me for his copy of the third edition of the Apocalypse which I sent him. He doesn't let me have his address. I would ask you, then, to let me have it. He is a prelate whom I knew when he was young and who has always remained very close to me. You can read the letter I have written to him and then close it afterwards.

Many thanks, dear Father, for all your commitment to me and support for me. My health is very poor all the time and I don't know what the outcome will be. By the grace of God and blessed be His holy name!

Cheerio, dear kind Father.

Always yours in C.J.

NB: In your Italian Annals might you not recommend this third edition of the Apocalypse? (Fr. Chevalier's recently published book.) If you think you could have this volume translated into Italian, you have my full permission.

My Dear Child,

I always receive your news with the greatest pleasure. You tell me that you are very well! May the Lord be praised a thousand and more times! I pray all the time for you, asking the Lord to favour you with peace and calmness of soul. You have nothing about which to worry or upset yourself, as I repeat once again. The good Lord envelops you in his mantle. You have nothing to be concerned about.

This very changeable weather of wind, rain and storm, is in no way good for me, doing no more than re-agitating my complaints. I look forward to the heat, and when it arrives I hope to suffer less and, indeed, be able to make my little pilgrimage trip to Our Lady of the Grille. Meanwhile, let us keep on praying. On the 30th of this month our properties are due to be put up for sale. Let us hope and pray.

I bless you, dear child, and thank you for all your kindness in C.J.

Thank you, thanks a thousand. You say to me ad multos annos... But that is God's secret. I feel too exhausted to have any such hopes. My health, far from improving, is getting weaker by the day for lack of nourishment which I cannot take any more. It's all in God's hands! It is He who oversees all things. His divine will comes before all else! I have to stop here because writing makes me very tired.

Thanks a thousand for your kind letters and all your attachment to me. I wholeheartedly acknowledge this since nobody more than myself appreciates your devotedness in my regard.

Here there is nothing new to report; we continue to be persecuted – for myself it's only the beginning; we have to wait for that which is going to be worse. We are in God's hands! All hell is let loose against France. Hopefully, happily, God will look after it since its role is so important in holy Church; He will always watch over her (France).

Every day the persecution becomes more intense, but the outcome can only lead to the Church's glory. Meanwhile, we tremble before the onset of happenings still more disquieting. May the Lord be praised! He will be able to bring good out of evil.

I saw Fr. Tréand some days ago. The Australian work goes forward wonderfully well. It is greatly consoling in the midst of all our trials and concerns. I don't see anything new to report otherwise.

The Archbishop of Bourges is very embarrassed in regard to his seminarians. He has been urged to move them to our Sacred Heart house in Issoudun, but he refused to do so out of antipathy towards us. A sad, pathetic, administrator! He is 78 years of age and the requirement (involving administration) is above his forces and capability. A successor for him is a prerequisite. Let Rome be alerted! It is high time. The good begins to suffer as a result.

Here there is nothing new to report, otherwise.

EPILOGUE

written in 2011

by Henry Twohig, MSC

The closing years of Jules Chevalier's life were greatly beset by burdensome ill health which he bravely coped with, and the pressing concerns arising from his continuing stewardship of the Issoudun parish with his MSC curates, they alone about since all other community members were in exile. It was a devastating MSC religious world for him in these final years of his life. Besides, there was his remoteness from the current Archbishop of Bourges, Pierre-Paul Servonnet, neither of them, seemingly, having any great regard for the other. Although their letters these latter years were infrequent, the basic friendship with, and warm feelings for, Victor Jouët, who had distanced himself from the Society, remained constant right through to his death. He was still "Cher bon Père Jouët" in Chevalier's poignant last letter to him following his expulsion from the Issoudun presbytery on January 21, 1907, the letter likely written on January 31. Despite Chevalier's travails, Jouët read, emotionally, an optimistic letter.

The final years' correspondence would greatly feature Madame de Coudy and Mother Marie-Louise Hartzler. Issoudun, without all the MSCs to whom he was accustomed, was a relatively lonely, bereft, place, since there were only the curates for company where before there was a large, active, community. Otherwise, he looked forward to visiting La Grille, Madame Coudy's home. At Issoudun there was also, however, his great supportive friend Viscount Fernand Bonneval, who provided a house for him on his expulsion from the presbytery.

There was all about him, encroaching inexorably indeed on his religious consciousness, the increasingly secular France of the last twenty-five years of his life, this and, so regrettably, an uncongenial, scarcely supportive, archbishop, where before it had been quite the reverse. Religious dissolution was on the rampage everywhere. Chevalier had seen, since July 1880, the law enjoining Sunday as a day of rest rescinded. From 1881 there were no separate places in cemeteries for Catholics, Protestants, Jews or suicides, and seminarians had to do one year's military service; civil divorce was introduced in 1884. In the late 1870s and early 1880s the campaign heightened for school laicization. In Issoudun as elsewhere he had to contend with the growing influence of Freemasons, free-thinkers, the indifferent a-religious. It was not just that Chevalier was founder and head of a religious order, but equally, and as importantly so, the challenge he continually faced as Issoudun's parish priest, particularly so the State-endorsed laicization programme, indefatigably set on diminishing the role of religious in the whole of French life and culture, providing at best a humanist faith. The latter part of Chevalier's life found him, particularly as a parish priest, coping with everyone and everything which embodied and expressed a lay humanist mentality, totally hostile to the role of religion as against the Comptean secularist view (August Comte, the very humanist social philosopher). It became more and more a matter of antipathy to the State that religious orders should be so influential in teaching, controlling, and suppressing individual's personalities. Chevalier's uprooting from the Issoudun presbytery in January 1907, the year of his death, was due to the passing of a law which empowered the State to take over bishops' palaces, seminaries, presbyteries, definitively! The greater part of Chevalier's life in ministry, it has to be said, found him facing the growing impact of a new kind of anti-Christian ideology making over France in its image. Chevalier came out of a restorationist, post-revolutionary French Church: he was an Ultramontanist (see below); power comes downward from God through the hierarchy, or the control of religious orders, and, always, there is hierarchical complementarity and support, each element exercising its role, carrying out its functions for the benefit of the Church, the institution, with a strong concentration on obligation, duty. The Ultramontane Church emphasized the hierarchical and the absolute, no less so, conformity, but, equally, it moved away from the rigorist and dehumanising impact of Jansenism with its austere wrapping-up of human nature, creating a warm glow, fostering a pastoral practice, of feeling, compassionate love, concern, forgiveness, what Charles Taylor in A Secular Age aptly calls "...a more compassionate stance", being "more tolerant and open to people or modes of piety, ...a warmer more emotional piety, of which the devotion to the Sacred Heart was a prime example". (Charles Taylor, A Secular Age; The Belknap Press of Harvard University Press, 2007, p.444.) Jules Chevalier's training, his reaction to Jansenism as experienced at the Bourges Major Seminary, has apposite relevance to the future founder of an Order.

(I am indebted for what immediately follows to the long-since out-of-print Histoire du Grand-Séminaire de Bourges, Paris, Jouve and C. ie Editeurs, 1932.)

In October 1846, early in his Bourges seminary training, a Sulpician, M. Molneau, came to preach the seminarians' retreat. As Chevalier himself wrote long afterwards, it had a marked effect on him at the time, and caused future repercussions. Significantly he had this to say: "His (Molneau's) simple words, though expressed with warmth and full of faith, made a deep impression on me. I came away from these talks converted and very anxious to make myself an exemplary seminarian. The preacher recommended three virtues to us in particular: fidelity to the rules, mortification and humility. I made every effort to put them into practice during the five years in the Major Seminary." Another Sulpician, Fr. Péliissier, the professor of dogmatic theology, supplemented his lectures on the Incarnate Word with one or more on the Heart of Jesus, and this stimulated keen enthusiasm in Chevalier about getting to know yet more about devotion to the Sacred Heart. Sharing his views and idealism, Fr. Ruel, his spiritual director, made him read The Life of Sister Alacoque by Archbishop Languet of Sens, the first biography of the Paray-le-Monial Saint. As a result of all this, Chevalier began to organize visits to the Blessed Sacrament by way of adoration and reparation, Cardinal Archbishop Du Pont, approving of the practice, granting one hundred days' indulgence for each visit. But the young seminarian had yet more to say for himself and be concerned about. The philosophy presented at the Bourges Seminary by the Sulpician professors was not that of St. Thomas Aquinas and this didn't satisfy Chevalier. "I did my philosophy course under the influence of Descartes, whose genius professor (Fr. Désobeaue) made us admire, and my theology under the influence of Bailly, recommended to us as practical and reliable in his opinions. The Cartesian system seemed to me to be both wrong and dangerous, however, and I challenged it in lectures despite respecting the professor. As regards the views of Bailly, an out and out Gallican, I instinctively loathed them. Understandably the debates were fiery and passionate and I was taken to be an Ultramontane, though not the only one."

Chevalier was not wrong about Bailly's harsh, rigid, Gallicanism, since his work was, in 1852, placed on the Index, the text book replaced in the Bourges Seminary by that of Bouvier. In the midst of all this, Chevalier's call to orders was placed in question. For some of the professors his intellectual abilities did not match his zeal and fervour, but Fr. Ruel, the Superior of the Seminary, thought otherwise, having a high regard for him, and, accordingly, he went forward for the subdiaconate. Some years later the same supportive Ruel prevented embarrassment for Chevalier when, now a priest in Issoudun, he was overseeing the building of the Sacred Heart Church, transforming a shed into a chapel. The new structure collapsed to Chevalier's consternation, and he was at his wits' end about what to do next. Fr. Ruel, who had long since left the Bourges Seminary, was passing through Issoudun by chance, accompanied by his friend Fr. Ganthiot. Moved by the calamitous impact of the collapse on the young priest who didn't know what to do about rebuilding his church, Fr. Ruel handed over, presumably later, not necessarily at that moment, 40,000 francs, adding: "this will be for the first stone in your new church". This offering, and many more to follow, led eventually to its consecration in 1864 by His Grace, Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, possibly the greatest friend of Chevalier's among the Bourges Archbishops of his life-time. Otherwise, Fr. Ruel was very supportive of Chevalier over the years in good times and difficult times. Born at Alençon in the Seéz diocese, on March 7, 1805, Ruel came to teach moral theology at the Bourges Seminary in 1834, went to the Avignon Seminary as Rector in 1839 before his appointment as Rector in Bourges in 1842 where he stayed until 1851. His regard for Chevalier went beyond his student years. The dour, dogged, serious-minded, seminarian became transformed in Ruel's seminary, becoming a living embodiment of love and mercy which he wanted to communicate and have assimilated far and wide in the Church and world.

Chevalier eagerly threw himself into the theology course on the Incarnation, and was greatly moved by the professor's lecture on the doctrinal, pastoral, spiritual, significance of the Sacred Heart devotion. It was one thing to be enveloped with the devotion so widespread in nineteenth century France, the statues in churches, convents, seminaries, homes, the cult, the prayers, novenas, the devotional literature, the consecration of houses and people, but another to go beyond the togetherness, that sharing of a common humanity with Jesus symbolized by His Heart, and ascend higher to the 'heart' of God, Jesus the sign, symbol, of God's own infinite love. It's not Jesus, the man, the brother, who talks, expresses, love; it's God talking, loving. This is Chevalier's language and syntax of the heart, his spirituality of the Heart. God's self, God's very love, is there in Jesus Christ. For Jesus to say, "I give you my heart" equally, ineradicably, implies that God really does give His heart, that God is loving-hearted, and this creates a theological and spiritual reality and psychology which escapes from, and avoids, any presentation of the Heart of Christ (see above) which ignores the love, the pity, the warmth, the pardon, within the Godhead itself, and cannot co-exist with a demanding, fearful, severe image, presentation, of God against which indifference is only to be expected. God in himself is 'warm-hearted'. It doesn't begin and end with Jesus the man. It is not a God, then, we worship, approach, who is identified with uprightness, insistence on obligations, duties, accompanying rules, regulations, to all of which the negative reaction might easily, understandably, be: indifference. But emphasize love, care, and there comes about a different understanding and approach to God. As Tostain writes, capturing well Chevalier's thinking: "And then even the most indifferent person, the one who does not think about anything, and does not expect anything, on learning that he or she is loved, will at least stop being indifferent." (J. Tostain, MSC, Father Jules Chevalier, Paris, 1995, p.24)

The impact of this thinking, indeed this spirituality, could be expected to have a transforming impact on Chevalier himself, he too becoming a living sign of love and mercy which he wanted to communicate and have assimilated far and wide in the Church and world. His moods of anxiety, his depressing moments, were becoming counteracted by these new insights: "I see a new world arising, a world full of greatness and life inspired by love and mercy, a new world that the Church must perpetuate on our planet." (Chevalier, cited Tostain, op.cit., p.24) The dour, dogged, serious, seminarian was becoming enthusiastic, almost a different person, and it showed after his ordination to the subdiaconate. He was breezy now, light-hearted, more out-going and affable, the heaviness of impact no longer obvious in a surprising, if not astonishing, advent of chirpiness, greater spontaneity. The new Jules would be like this for the rest of his life. It was spontaneous-like, not calculatingly recherché, but rather a very positive, self-realization, reminiscent of Paul's 'new self' replacing the 'old self' (Col. 3, 9-10). Bérulle would have approved, and it wasn't forced; it led to a deep-seated empowering of his personality thoroughly integrating him, maturing him, for the tasks ahead, the heavy responsibilities, the trials which were inseparable from the realization of his vision at and from Issoudun. Philippe Ferlay, in his Coeur du Christ, Mystère Du Dieu, is in continuity with Chevalier's insight about the need to understand or identify the notion of God Himself with a love-like heart. Ferlay writes: "La dévotion au Coeur au Christ nous révèle que Dieu a du coeur. Ce n'est pas un épisode, une parenthèse, tandis que le Verbe choisit de parcourir une existence humaine. Car le Père a pour toujours choisi que son Fils soit un homme, et celui-ci ne se désincarnera jamais. Le Fils de Dieu est homme pour l'éternité." The devotion to the heart of Christ reveals to us that God has a heart. It is not an episode, a phase lasting while the Son lived out a human existence. For the Father always chose (willed) that His Son should be man and remain so. The Son of God is eternally man. (Mediaspaul, Paris, 1995, p.57; my translation.)

In the light of the immediate foregoing, it is no exaggeration, then, to suggest that Jules Chevalier had a Paul-like, life-lasting, experience when he received the subdiaconate, matching his recent, newly-acquired insightful theology and spirituality of the Heart. And he did not ignore, or eliminate from his consciousness, the idea, becoming an absolute conviction, of founding a missionary body. Nineteenth century France came to be identified with an astonishing number of new Religious Congregations and Societies. There were 12,300 religious sisters in 1808, 16,000 in 1816, 31,000 in 1831; by 1878 the number had reached 135,000! Both Italy and Spain were, numerically, far behind, though, proportionately, Belgium could sustain comparison. Abbé Migne wrote in 1860 that over 60 years, but particularly in France, the number of new religious congregations surpassed the total of the previous eighteen centuries. (See here, Cholvy, Christianisme et Société en France au XIX, Siècle, Paris Editions du Seuil, 2001, p.141) When Jules Chevalier, then, was ordained a priest in 1851, June 14, and went to work in the Bourges Archdiocese, he had not forgotten his earlier thoughts and interest in a new church grouping and foundation which would reflect his vision and convey an evangelizing message focused on the Sacred Heart. He had a vocation, and something else, an ideal he hoped he could realize, a mission prompted by his growing conviction about its being worthwhile and, hopefully, valuable for the Church abroad, the missions as well as at home. An old, dying, parish priest at Aubigny-sur-Nère, when he had administered him the last rites, gave him unforgettable death-bed advice, the mid-nineteenth century equivalent of the latter-day “option for the poor”. The wise, experienced, curé felt that he had been too much a priest of the church and sacristy, too narrowly, comfortably, concentrated on the pious females to the detriment of the young and men. “It has been a great failing on my part. Unfortunately, this fault is shared by a number of pastors. We take too much care of the women and not enough of the men.” And then came the death-bed message to a Chevalier who had wide horizons and an extra-diocesan apostolic, missionary, thrust since his early major seminary years. As he recalled it all himself, later, the old priest in his way was endorsing Chevalier’s broad vision, larger than the Bourges-Archdiocese perspective. It could, would, be interpreted by the young curate as an invitation to a wider apostolate than what ministry in the Archdiocese offered; not that he would not promote and bring to fruition there also all that his dying parish priest asked him to bear in mind as priorities. “May your preferences be for the little ones, the poor, those who have no education, the abandoned ones...” His next parish would be Issoudun; it would be home as well as parish for the rest of Chevalier’s life, and from there he would universalize his ministry and give effect to the dreams and aspirations he had, perhaps naively, shared with the seminary rector Rouel, who in turn had suggested the ‘black spot’ of the diocese for indifference and anti-clericalism as an appropriate place near at home to realize his ideals!

Before Chevalier’s posting to Issoudun and, paradoxically, the worldwide consequences which followed are dealt with, there is something further to consider arising from his seminary training and, most certainly, having a bearing on his whole life thereafter: his principled stand and reaction against Gallicanism, his willingness to be considered and identified as “ultramontane”. As these culturally technical words are very relevant to France prior to and simultaneous with his own time and century, and since they are relevant to the kind of Christian and priest he was, not even a brief treatment of his life, such as this is, can afford to ignore his feelings and thoughts about the mind-set and outlook associated with the word-labels, “Gallican”, “Ultramontane”. The kind of priest Chevalier was, both diocesan and founder of a religious order, cannot be dissociated from the outlook, the theological and spiritual stance he made his own right from the beginning, so it would seem, of his major seminary years. There was, besides, the continuing impact of Jansenism on the French Church since the seventeenth century, a harshly rigorous mentality and system which was all too pervasive and influential, reaching deep into Christian life as worshipped, thought about, and lived. For example, the postponement, holding over, of penitential absolution for months and months on going to confession was considered a normal means of bringing about conversion and a worthy, requisite, sense of penitence, sorrow. One was being taught a harsh lesson. Following the Clergy Assembly of 1700 this harshness became widely accepted; rigorism was ‘de rigueur’. Chevalier could not, never would, be at ease with such severity of thought and practice and its catastrophic impact on parish life and worship, particularly Eucharistic practice.

Even though Rome had doctrinally seen off Jansenism, its moral impact and influence was quite widespread in France and beyond, wherever French Catholic influence was felt. And one such promoter, indeed a leading one, was the moral theologian Bailly whose treatise Théologie de Morale of 1789 enjoyed great success and made such an impact that there were no less than twenty editions between 1804 and 1852. The work was like a Bible for those who were unquestioningly Jansenistic, Gallicanist, and rigorist. To be Gallican, ‘French’, in this technical sense, otherwise, implied absolute loyalty to the Church in France (Église de France) as an autonomous, national Church, standing over against the Pope, the Vatican, pursuing its course independently of Rome and Italian Catholicism’s influence – this last particularly important. In 1682 the Clergy Assembly asserted the right of the French, Gallican, Church to be independent of and unsubservient to Rome. Rome’s writ, impact, was curtailed; overseeing from a distance was not considered as being authoritative or significant for a very independent French Church. The Gallican Church and the Roman Church, so understood, could not easily co-exist or influence each other. The French Revolution, despite the success of Bailly’s text-book, struck hard at Jansenism and Gallicanism; rigorism was something else and here a text-book like Bailly’s could continue to influence and orientate the training of French priests with its emphasis on the fear of God, eternal punishments, damnation, thereby creating, fostering, a certain psychology of extreme caution, reserve, unworthiness, particularly before the Eucharist. On the rare occasions one approached the Sacraments of Penance and Eucharist, one felt terrified, and this itself, understandably, made for sufficient reason to abide by, shelter within, the Jansenistic rules of long sacramental intervals and/or recommended deferral as the more appropriately expected and worthy practice. Bailly provided intellectual, theological, spiritual, argument for such austerity and minimalist sacramental practice; he and those who followed him only served to frighten people away from Confession, and men, especially, made to return a number of times before absolution was given, soon opted out of the merciless, forbidding, procedure altogether. This pastoral system, if it can be deservedly called such, created a non-communicant Church where the rigorists prevailed. Not surprisingly, the Abbé Favre from the south-eastern diocese of Chambéry remarked in 1837 that a certain number of the faithful go for years without approaching the communion table – “... (Ils) passaient plusieurs années sans s’approcher de la sainte Table”. (Histoire Religieuse de la France, 1800-1880, Paris, Privat, 2000, p.180.) Only when Liguori’s Transalpine Moral Theology (First French edition 1828) influenced priests could one hope for something better and different, but the 2,000-population parish, mostly not approaching the altar, was, then and later, all too common, only twelve men in one particular parish communicating at Easter, the priest, astonishingly, considering that number excessive. For right-minded and concerned pastoral priests like Chevalier indifference became, however well meant, irresponsibly created by a distorted Christianity of Jansenistic, rigour-inclined clergy. For the latter, penitential and Eucharistic privation were quite acceptable, agreeably so for many, rather than a serious, frightening as it should be, pastoral concern in the face of a downgrading enfeeblement of Christian life and worship. As St. Alphonsus said, any prolonged privation of the Eucharist is not the best way to make Christians advance in the way of salvation, and the Sacraments are not recompense, reward, pace the rigorists, but the means, the active, positively helpful, signs, channels, of moral regeneration and growth. Yet the Sulpicians continued to use Bailly’s text-book after the Congregation of the Holy Office, then the Congregation of the Index, condemned it on December 7, 1852, Liguori being looked upon by ‘Baillyites’ as a 'joke', 'un farceur'. And St. Sulpice seminaries would continue to endorse Gallicanism. A very large number of French bishops, certainly up to 1860, were Gallican trained, defending spiritedly and with narrow single-minded complacency the ecclesiastical, cultural, and disciplinary traditions of the French Church. St. Sulpician seminaries were indeed at the very centre of tenacious Gallicanism and the autonomy of the national Church. For the 'ultramontanists', on the other hand (Latin: beyond the mountains; in France that meant Rome, Italy, beyond the Alps) recourse to Rome, the Pope, implied respect for a larger church-world than that of France, a broader authority, less collusion and/or identification of throne and altar. The Papacy is not just institution; it's a father, a person, the Pope. Ultramontanism is more than a way of thinking; it's regard, respect for, 'cult' of the sovereign Pontiff, Christ's Vicar, and the warmth, affection, implied in this approach is a relatively new phenomenon, experience. Where before the faithful scarcely knew the name of the reigning Pope, now they knew who he was, where he came from, and he inspired pietistic, devotional, feelings, not uninfluenced by the sad plight and fate of Pius VI, humiliated by Napoleon, dying in exile at Valence, and the imprisoning of Pius VII. Ultramontanism spoke to heart as well as head. It provided pastoral impetus for shrines, pilgrimages, opportunities for great group devotional exercises and practices. The Papacy, never under-played or diminished as with Gallicanism, represented authority, universal concern as opposed, challenged by, narrow self-interested religious nationalism, or severe and harsh expressions of Catholicism. Without taking this discussion further, and it has to be said that ultramontanism itself does not escape justified criticism, we are now, one hopes, better prepared to consider Chevalier's theology and spirituality both while he was being Sulpician-trained, and after he left the Bourges seminary.

Short of the foregoing introduction and mise-en-scène, one could not properly appreciate either the seminary student or the young priest and what was characteristic of his spirit, thought, life-style, for the rest of his life. The shoemaker's apprentice had learned along the way to be his own man, "pensant pour-soi-même," so to say. "I did my theology with the manual written by Bailly who was considered a good author. God gave me the grace of not sharing that common opinion. I protested in class with all the respect due to the professor. I was horrified by Bailly's extreme Gallican theories. The arguments were fierce and passionate. I was considered an ultramontane and I was not the only one. Just about everyone was against the author and the professor." (cited Tostain, op.cit., p.78) Chevalier's insight was prompted by his instinctive feeling, conviction, that Bailly's text was not sufficiently evangelical or wholesomely Christian, or, indeed, humane, respecting of frailties. This narrow kind of thinking needed to become broader, more compassionate; it was too particularist 'French', not sufficiently 'Roman' for Chevalier. He who for so long worked in the narrow space of the cobbler's bench already as a seminarian had wider horizons than the professor who parroted Bailly's unfulfilling, theologically-unwholesome, Gallican-rigorist 'certitudes'. Such an outlook narrowed priestly ministry, limited love, compassion, forgiveness. Chevalier would be an open, universalizing, all-embracing priest, hence his strong opposition to the Bailly-fixated professor. His later motto, that of his Society, says it all: "May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be loved everywhere." This is his kind of Ultramontanism, the universal thrust of Jesus Himself enfolding the whole world, and inseparable from his own very individual discovery of the relevance of the Sacred Heart not just for his diocese, Bourges, for France, but for the world at large, mission countries not excluded, indeed especially so. And the idea of a new title for Mary was beginning to clarify itself although it would be some time yet before he would have the courage to identify it with himself and the ideals which he wanted evangelically and pastorally realized in the Church.

For English language readers there is a chapter on the life and times of Jules Chevalier in my Late But Not Too Late, but only in the context of the subject matter of the book, the MSCs and the British Isles. This translation, then, ideally needs to be supplemented by a Life of Chevalier in English. Born on March 15, 1824, he was eighty-three, ailing for quite some time, but coping reasonably well and courageously, when he died at Issoudun on the 21st of October 1907.
