I

From his birth in 1824 until his death in 1907 Jules Chevalier, as I have written elsewhere, "...experienced something of the worst of France and the best of France. He had made himself into a significant and not inconsiderable figure, whose spirit and message were already being carried with some élan and committed apostolicity, he would have said, to the most distant parts of the globe, his motto heard, becoming a reality, in mission lands, his dream at Bourges seminary, despite all the trials, the set-backs, now the persecutions, the onslaughts, wondrously rewarded in its worldwide realization over the last thirty-five years of his life, concomitant more or less with his demanding parish priest's role in Issoudun". (Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, Vol.1, p.68,69.)

During his quite lengthy life he, paradoxically, lived through two papacies as Founder and Superior General of his religious order, those of Pius IX (Pio Nono) and Leo XIII, being effectively no longer in charge of the Society when St. Pius X went from Venice to the Vatican in 1903.

It is both appropriate and worthwhile to set in context the Popes who were in Rome when Jules Chevalier founded and oversaw the development of the Society from 1854 until he disengaged as its Superior General in the early 20th century.

Both Popes appear in his correspondence and documents, and something of the character of each is reflected in Chevalier's personal experience of both, his identifying of himself with the quite differing personalities of one and the other, he seeking to achieve as best he could from the Vatican of both Popes what would be advantageous for his little, but growing, Society, needing all the support and encouragement of the Church authorities as it met wider Church requirements with its own specific qualities and élan.

Pio Nono: 1846-1878

In October 1847 Prince Metternich, the Austrian State Chancellor, within a year of Giovanni Maria Mastai-Ferretti's accession to the Papacy as Pio (now Blessed) Nono, wrote: "Each day the Pope shows himself more lacking in every practical sense. Born and brought up in a liberal family, he has been formed in a bad school; a good priest, he has never turned his mind towards matters of government. Warm of heart and weak of intellect, he has already allowed himself to be taken and ensnared, since assuming the tiara, in a net from which he no longer knows how to disentangle himself, and if matters follow their rational course he will be driven out of Rome."

He was only fifty-four when his long papacy of thirty-two years began, momentous happenings in Church and State both in France and Italy about to unfold, he himself disliking both his predecessor's government of the papal states and the Austrian presence in Italy. He came to the papacy with the reputation of being something of a liberal, not quite trusted by his predecessor who thought that even his cats were liberals. In his first month as Pope he gave amnesty to more than a thousand political prisoners and exiles in the papal states, presided at Quirinal garden parties, supported the introduction of the railway to the papal states, something held in horror by his predecessor, and sanctioned gas lighting in Roman streets. He promoted quite a free press, reformed tariffs, endorsed the employment of lay workers in the Vatican, while doing away with his predecessor's insensitive papal state law obliging Jews to attend a Christian lecture (talk) once a week, all of which made him a very popular newcomer Pope in Italy. In March, 1847, Rome Constituent Assembly members voted by 121 votes to 10, with 12 abstentions, to end the Vatican's temporal power and set up a Rome Republic, the moving figure in all of this being Giuseppe Garibaldi who had come with his volunteer army to Rome on hearing of Pio Nono's flight to Gaeta in the Kingdom of Naples, proposing that Rome from now on should be an independent republic. The Pope appealed to France, Austria, Spain, Naples, to help overthrow the Rome Assembly. In the event it was the papacy-supportive French forces who made it possible for Pio Nono's return, having taken his time, on April 12, 1850, going straight to the Vatican, rather than the Quirinal Palace, where all his successors would thereafter reside. By 1860 Italian unification had become a forgone conclusion, the papal army totally overcome at Ancona, there being no hostilities thereafter, or anything much of a papal army. It was Count Camillo Cavour, Victor Emmanuel's chief minister from 1852, who, while accepting that the papacy must relinquish its temporal power, resolutely maintained that papal independence must be guaranteed and respected as: "...a free Church in a free state".

The Pope who Jules Chevalier, happily and boostingly, met more than once, was an affable personality of engaging charm, warmth, humour, but there was another side to him shaped by the events which had overtaken the Vatican in the turbulent years which preceded Italian unification, and above all by his predictable reaction to the Catholic Congress under the auspices of Count Charles de Montalambert, which took place at Malines, Belgium, in September 1862, Montalambert making a rallying call for a needed fresh approach from the Church on a whole range of Church-State issues but, particularly, a riddance of the throne – altar – alliance, together with a Church acceptance of democratic principles, greater openness to free debate, and a consequent downgrading, if not riddance, of the Index (of forbidden books) and anything inquisitorial. The Pope, as was to be expected, wrote reproving letters to Montalambert and the Archbishop of Malines, while the Encyclical which logically followed was accompanied by the Syllabus of Errors, the Encyclical having nothing like the same impact as the eighty condemnatory propositions of the Syllabus. Was it possible or likely that non-Catholics in Catholic countries would be forbidden to practise their religion? Was the otherwise genial Pope really serious that the Roman Pontiff cannot and should not reconcile himself with progress, liberalism and recent civilization?

In Pio Nono's thinking the Papal States were held for, and on behalf of, the Catholic world, and it was his duty and concern to hand them on to his successor. The new Kingdom of Italy, meanwhile, committed itself to defend papal territory in the event of its being attacked. This same year of the portentous Encyclical and Syllabus, the strictly political course of events, particularly the Franco-Prussian War, led to Victor Emmanuel's army's forcible entry to Rome, September 20, 1870, the Papal soldiers, as was to be expected, unable to cope in the skirmish at the Porta Pia. The Pio Nono who Chevalier met and admired, felt at ease with, was in company relaxed, easy-going, charming of manner, due to his readily present sense of humour. The Syllabus, however, reflected what his aides and he himself felt about the rule and prestige of Rome, the Vatican, and its beneficial alliance with and support for one of the most intolerant, reactionary movements within the Church in recent centuries: Ultramontanism. It represented an unyielding emphasis on Papal Sovereignty, the absoluteness and unquestionable guidance, control, of the Vatican, and little or no appreciation for openness, freedom of thought (not superficially so, but well considered, concerned), and in relation to which the future Cardinal Newman wrote that "...we are shrinking into ourselves, narrowing the lines of communication, trembling at freedom of thought...". Pio Nono's thinking did not envisage liberal Catholicism since it was permeated with the Ultramontanism to which the Syllabus bore excellent witness. It came as no surprise that the document was banned in France, publicly burnt in Naples, while the liberal Bishop Dupanloup of Orleans was scathing in his riposte: "If we do not succeed in checking this senseless Romanism, the Church will be outlawed in Europe for half a century." But Pio Nono would remain both unyielding and confrontational, going on to call the First Vatican Council to meet on December 8, 1868, at St. Peter's, out of which there inevitably came the July 18, 1870 decree on Papal Infallibility.

Otherwise Pio Nono and Jules Chevalier enjoyed each other's company (see below, text, passim), and it was very much in keeping with the Pope's wishes that Chevalier's earliest missionaries went to the South Seas. Besides, he is the Pope of the Immaculate Conception proclamation, a time otherwise identified with the beginning of Chevalier's new Society and he (Pio Nono) equivalently boosted (he certainly didn't hinder) devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. It was also during his pontificate that the Sacred Heart feast became annual and worldwide in the Church's calendar year. It will certainly be clear to the reader of the Chevalier corpus of writings that Pio Nono and he were greatly at ease with each other.

Leo XIII: 1878–1903

In June 1902 Emile Combes took over as head of government in France. A provincial politician, he at one time had been a seminarian, before going on to become as bitter an opponent of the Church, and what it represented, as anyone, if not more so; stirring up a harshly unfair political world of Church-State animosity. One thousand Catholic schools would be closed by the end of 1904, while in December 1905 the Napoleonic Concordat of 1801 became formally and definitively abrogated, completing the separation of Church and State in France. The relevant letters and documents of the Chevalier correspondence below bear poignant witness to what Chevalier saw happening all around him at Issoudun and the wider France of the latter years of Leo XIII's papacy. Otherwise, it is to be presumed that, compared with his predecessor Pope, the Issoudun parish priest and founder of a growing Society underwent the obligatory ceremonial procedures which characterized a Leo XIII audience: all visitors obliged to kneel during the audience, those of his entourage alone standing. It was a more stiff and formal papal court than that of his predecessor and, over the 25 years of his papacy, he would not appear to have addressed a single word to his coachman. Yet Leo XIII presented a more positive image of the papacy than his predecessor, or indeed any Pope for well over 100 years. He was rather grand, austere, less open than his more spontaneous predecessor, and he had not been a success at the Belgian nunciature in the early 1840s, the King, Leopold I, requesting that he should be removed. His appointment as Bishop of Perugia followed, where he spent 32 years, before he was given a Rome posting as Camerlengo, the Cardinal responsible for the well-being and smooth running of the Church in the inter-regnum between one Pope and another. Traditionally he who held this post did not become Pope! Not so for Cardinal Gioacchino Vincenzo Pecci, chosen just ten days short of his 68th birthday and thought to be in poor health. He would be at the Vatican for 25 years, 1878–1903. Leopold I had done him, and the wider Church, a favour!

At the time of his election there was no great liking but rather hostility between the Italian State and the Papacy, as exemplified by the refusal of the government to permit the new Pope to give his blessing (Urbi et Orbi) to the crowd from the loggia of St. Peter's after the coronation ceremony, everything becoming secluded in the Sistine Chapel. In the early years of the new papacy processions and services out of doors were forbidden, titles held back, clergy conscripted, their involvement in education radically circumscribed. Leo XIII would not in the least, however, compromise his and the Vatican's independence by recognizing the hostile Italian State. Leo XIII approached sensitive issues differently to Pio Nono; there would be nothing, in speech or writing, temperamentally explosive about him after the style and manner of his predecessor, giving expression rather to a sensitive balancing of calm rationality, regretful disappointment in the face of a hostile kingdom of Italy. Leo, however, was not prepared to lower his dignity, and he so acted and reacted to Bismarck and his unsuccessful Prussian anti-clerical policies, that the Chancellor, within two years of the new Pope's reign, by the end of 1886, had rescinded the more callous and outrageous anti-clerical laws, only the ban on the Jesuits remaining – until 1917.

It is quite another story in France during Leo's pontificate, as becomes very obvious in Chevalier's correspondence, and the safeguarding measures he undertook to make his young Society survive as best it could in straitened circumstances. Religious were deprived of their rights to teach in private and state schools, with primary education becoming wholly secularized and seminarians forced to do military service (an issue returning again and again in the correspondence and Council Acts below). Lay secondary schools for girls were introduced. Divorce became legally approved. The world of the Third Republic was not an easy one for Jules Chevalier to live with, creating as it did a personal dichotomy between his role as parish priest of Issoudun and his responsibility for a young Society now hounded out of France.

Leo XIII experienced little that was normal or smooth-running in the rabidly anti-clerical French Church of the Third Republic, its ingrained embittered hostility, but there was, besides, and not insignificantly, the very resolute right-wing, monarchist hankering, body of Catholics, not uninfluenced by Louis Veuillot (see below). Pope Leo XIII accepted that French Catholics could politically support a Republican politician if he provided guarantees of religious freedom. Imbalance did not characterize Leo as it did so many rabid French politicians during his pontificate. Politically it eased tension when a Catholic Republican party began to take shape. Yet this was more than somewhat counteracted by the anti-Semitic Catholic right, with its narrowly focused support in the campaign against the Jewish Colonel Dreyfus, the La Croix newspaper, a publication of the Assumptionists, playing a leading, most intemperate, role. By the time Dreyfus was rightly rehabilitated in 1906, Chevalier's Catholic France was already, in 1902, experiencing the vindictive, totally unfeeling, impact of the former clerical student turned politician Emile Combes, for whom the French Church was an object of distrust and hatred in everything it represented.

Chevalier's correspondence, painfully, harrowingly, captures the heart-rending impact of the expulsion of his own and other 'unauthorized' religious orders. By the end of the following year, 1903, 10,000 and more Catholic schools had been closed, with a corresponding exodus of sisters, religious priests, brothers, in order to avoid harassment and persecution. All of this came to a climax in December 1905 with the total abrogation of the Napoleonic 1801 Concordat and, as of now, a complete separation of Church and State in France; the much-longed for aspiration of anti-clericals and all opponents of the Church in 19th century France, at last becoming a fait-accompli. Sadly, Jules Chevalier lived to see this calamitous course of events happening about him. Happily, Leo XIII did not, dying on July 20, 1903, aged 94, remarkably lucid to the end, and ever to be respected for his feeling acknowledgement of the working classes in his ground-breaking encyclical of 1891, Rerum Novarum, and its unqualified support of Catholic trade unions. Otherwise, Jules Chevalier would have found him, unlike his quite personable, feeling, predecessor, more formal, stiff, withdrawn, he like all Leo's papal visitors required to kneel throughout an audience, there being no relaxation either for visitors or entourage. In this latter respect Giuseppe Sarti, St. Pius X, was a complete change, but he does not really figure in the latter years of Chevalier's life, when the governance of his Society had passed on to others.

Louis Veuillot, Ultramontanism and Jules Chevalier

In Jules Chevalier's correspondence, the impact, and influence on him, of Louis Veuillot of the Universe newspaper is not unappreciable. Veuillot was born in the Lou  t at Boynes in 1813 into a family with an impoverished background, and if his education was not ideal or as good as he would have liked it to be, he went on to become a journalist, becoming an editor aged twenty of a Perigeux paper, M  morial de la Dordogne, in 1833. Veuillot, already conservative politically, was opposed to liberalism and, while continuing to be largely self-taught, began to develop an intellectual thrust and prose style which would make him one of the most formidable and controversial apologists in nineteenth century France. While in Italy, early 1838, he happily became converted to Catholicism, went to Loretto and, on his way home, made a retreat in Switzerland with the Fribourg Jesuits. Back in France he wrote devotional articles for Catholic newspapers, but it was the ailing Universe, first set up in 1833, which, above all other publications, claimed his interest as a newly-born Catholic, and which would be animated and dominated journalistically by him in support of the papacy, Veuillot being employed first as an unpaid contributor. Within four years he was editor-in-chief, making the paper into the most unyielding and committed organ in France of the Ultramontane Church. Arising from the influences on him, which need not lengthily detain us here, his reaction to the Gallican Church, to Bossuet, the St. Sulpician influence, through their seminaries, there came about, and logically for him given his mind-set, his life-long insistence on the need for absolute commitment and submission to the papacy.

Veuillot was no ordinary straightforward Catholic convert journalist, being greatly at ease when lampooning opponents of the Church in the most sharp, cruelly chosen, language. The Enlightenment was central to French cultural life, but in Veuillot's cutting words it was nothing more than "...a wretched period which produced virtually no saints ... and whose coat of arms could well be a guillotine standing on the trash heap of the Encyclopaedia". (So Veuillot in the Universe, July 19, 1852.) Modern science for Veuillot was something of a gigantic confidence trick, particularly so those teachings calculated to threaten religious belief.

Veuillot now began to antagonize Catholic academics and anyone remotely liberal such as Montalambert who, with others, tried to purchase the paper and instal another, more congenial, editor, the inevitable outcome being that Veuillot never really trusted Count Montalambert and French liberals again, describing their outlook as "a heresy of the rich". Veuillot's language was unsparing against his opponents, never letting up, like a modern Savonanola, be it philosophy, science, the railway, the telegraph... (Le Parfum de Rome, Oeuvres IX, p.500, cited A. Gough, Paris and Rome, Oxford, The Clarendon Press, 1986, p.92.) "Too much foreign doctrine has come and taken root in France to dominate us," he wrote, (so much so) "that the soil of the patrie does not belong to the true race of the patrie" (ib. p.224).

This is the Ultramontane thinking which would link, in their respective ways, Veuillot and Jules Chevalier as conservatives, upholders of the true reality of 'patrie', Christian France, as belonging to a supranational bonding Catholic outlook and way of life. Rome, papal rule, for Veuillot meant nothing more or less than theocratic absolutism. This was his 'God charter'; true liberty only comes through Baptism. If and when the Church came to power it would control public life, put down political institutions, all this and more presented with great verve and in the most captivating style, indeed so acknowledged by his opponents and adversaries.

Like so many others Chevalier was aware that Veuillot could command and dictate the thrust and successful outcome of a debate on anything touching on the vindication and defence of Catholicism better than anyone else in France. "I read carefully," he writes to Jouët on December 5, 1880, "the Universe... (and) the paper's behaviour, so it seems to me, is irreproachable... Where else in France would we find a paper which has defended the Church more courageously, the Papacy, the rights of bishops and the Catholic interests... so convincingly? We do not have one. It is the only one which is always into the breach for a good cause and never allows itself to be gagged either by money, promises, or threats, the teaching is genuine, theological, strong like the truth. Its principles are those of the Holy See, its faith that of the Roman Church, and its light the word of the Pope which it accepts with as much respect as submission. What more than it has contributed to the attachment of the episcopacy to the Holy See, and towards drawing the faithful towards Peter's Chair? The French Church under the Empire was but two fingers away from schism (and this seems to be forgotten). Very well! I don't know any paper which contributed so much as the Universe to avoid this happening. Indeed! I quite understand the hate which hell and the irreligious harbour against the paper... No, the Universe does not merit the harshness to which it is subjected. Its bitter enemies nowadays are those praised at the Vatican Council (1870) an opposition as absurd as it was scandalous. It (the paper) greatly piques the liberal section which is bent on its destruction and would be happy to see it disappear. May God save us from this calamity... I know the feelings which motivate Eugène Veuillot and his staff to be able to say that they are ready to do anything the Holy Father asks of them. Use your influence, Fr., to prevent any severe measures being taken against the Universe! Support it, and defend it if necessary; it deserves this."

To the less enthused, however, among them the bishops, it was a source of regret and concern that Veuillot's Universe had, as with Chevalier in the sentiments expressed above, become the compelling, accepted Catholic viewpoint, all the more so because, as with Chevalier, what Veuillot said and wrote was enthusiastically received by the parish clergy. There was no need to cower before Godless critics from the scientific and philosophic worlds, so many very pleased, like Chevalier, with Veuillot's putting down of intellectuals, his irritating militancy towards them. The Abbé Gary wrote in gratitude to Veuillot in 1877 (July 18): "God alone knows how much good you have done for me, the support, the consolation, the holy joys your words brought me." (cited Gough, op.cit. p.95) The Universe also had an impact on the content of sermons and it was not uncommon for priests to read Veuillot's editorials either as their homily or before it. Sevrin intriguingly noted that two priests had trained their dogs to carry rolled up copies of Veuillot's cherished Universe from one presbytery to the other. (Sevrin, Clausel de Montals, vol.11, p.415, cited A. Gough, Paris and Rome, Oxford, 1986, p.95) Its pertinent significance rested on its being the first daily newspaper in France to convey all Catholic news and events in a very well-informed journalistic presentation.

Not all Catholics agreed with Veuillot's writing and subject-matter and there were dioceses where the Universe was not recommended reading, but its circulation was such that a good half of the clergy read it already in the late 1840s, and it would take forward positively their understanding of the Church, ecclesiology, as against what had been presented in the Sulpician seminaries. (See below, Epilogue, for this last in relation to Chevalier.) Veuillot was constantly at war against ideas and practices he didn't consider quite Catholic enough, be these from Bossuet, Pascal, the Sulpician seminaries. Gallicanism, whether in bishops or clergy, must give way to complete Rome submissiveness, what is otherwise called Ultramontanism, and its episcopal upholders were continually praised in the L'Univers as the only bishops worthy of respect, their pastoral letters prominently featured in Veuillot's paper as the truly authentic representation of the true Catholic state of affairs in France. Jules Chevalier's seminary years were influenced by the developing impact of Ultramontanism in seminaries, Veuillot's Universe influencing and endorsing his and other seminarians' stance against Gallican bishops and clergy. A letter to Jouët on December 5, 1880, perfectly expresses the continuity between the young seminarian, already drawn to Veuillot's thinking, crusade, and the latter ever-supportive parish priest, life-long admirer and enthusiastic supporter of Veuillot's Universe, and the challenging thinking to which it gave forthright expression. On July 15, 1884, Chevalier wrote a celebratory letter to Jouët in Rome which would have boosted the spirits of L. Veuillot: "Like yourself I love justice, truth, and blind, absolute obedience to the Holy See." (See full text below.) Later that same year he expressed concern to Fr. Piperon in Tilburg, October 17, writing that "...it would appear that Fathers Vandel and Meyer have a deplorable critical spirit, etc., and since these two are due to leave Rome next year there will be a better attitude about". (Meyer would go on to become the formidable, long-standing, future General, 1905-1920, and Vandel the recipient of many appreciative, supportive, letters in the last years of Chevalier's life when he was a very significant figure in the establishment of the Australian Province.) On October 27, this same year, 1884, Chevalier wrote reprovingly to Jouët in Rome about the same duo, Meyer and Vandel. "It would appear that the young priests Meyer and Vandel are lacking in piety, and besides have a deplorably critical outlook as well as liberal ideas... this freedom and indiscipline which is so damaging to your scholastics."

Three years earlier Chevalier, in his Spiritual Testament dated January 25, 1881, had, not unexpectedly, written: "Gallicanism and liberalism, so detrimental to the faith and the well-being of the faithful, drew from me in my most tender years an instinctive horror." In two July letters, 1888, to Jean Vaudon in Rome, Chevalier's Ultramontanism is very much to the fore. The July 26 letter wholeheartedly endorses Morel's Somme (Summa) against Liberal Catholicism (1872), and the stance of Fr. Ramière (S.J.), Bishops Sigur and Pie (the future Cardinal). "So it is," Chevalier points out to Vaudon, "that according to your article the basic difference between the Ultramontanes and Liberal Catholics comes to this, that the first-named reject modern freedoms, while their opponents make use of it to the advantage of Christian freedom. Consequently, we should draw the conclusion that the Encyclical Libertas flails the Ultramontanes, that's to say the authentic defenders of the Church's rights and the Papacy, and gives the advantage to liberal Catholics who alone had up to now an understanding of the truth and the needs of the time. Happily the pontifical document states the very opposite. Liberal Catholics have always invoked not simply as tolerance but as right modern freedoms as expressed in the immoral principles of 1789, so dear to the establishment, that is to say freedom of conscience, freedom of worship, freedom of the press, separation of Church and State, etc. There you have freedoms which Leo XIII challenged without pity and which the Ultramontanes (like Chevalier himself) have always combated. Has not one of the ring-leaders of Catholic Liberalism spoken these ungodly words, that the Church should also have its own 89 (French Revolution) and another, if it's not the same individual, has proclaimed a free church in a free state? Leo XIII has indeed... in his latest Encyclical presented teaching on tolerance for these pretentious freedoms which he condemns; ...one may tolerate them for a greater good just as God himself tolerates the evil he condemns... It will soon be 40 years since I began to consider all these questions, and I was never other than persuaded that the Ultramontanes held and taught a doctrine other than that of the Popes Gregory XVI, Pius IX and Leo XIII."

On the last day of this same month, July 31, 1888, Chevalier wrote to Vaudon in the most uncompromising terms. "You would do no harm, perhaps, to complete your work on the Encyclical along these lines:

"1. Establish that the Catholic Church founded both by Our Lord Jesus Christ and by God Himself, is the flame of truth which must shine everywhere, that no power has the right to dim its light, change it, or, still less, to extinguish it. In Catholic Kingdoms where she (sic) finds herself established, she has the right to demand that any other Church, daughter of error, should not be allowed to establish herself by her side, share her influence, and attempt to supplant her. If, despite these protestations of hers, she is forcefully imposed upon, she will submit to, and tolerate, the situation in order to avoid a greater evil. It is the reality of modern freedom against which she protests; it's her right and duty... but before which she tolerantly submits. Such is the Church's situation in France and in other Catholic countries.

"2. In pagan lands, heretical, schismatic countries, etc., the Catholic Church alone has the right to demand tolerance for its worship (something the other religious cannot demand), because she alone comes from God and must lead all peoples to God by her divine doctrine. She alone has the right to instruct children according to her principles, etc., etc. This thesis as developed by you will not be without interest and it will give the final blow to Liberalism."

Jules Chevalier remained a life-long disciple and admirer of Eugène Veuillot, his debt to, and admiration for, him tersely expressed in a December 22, 1885, letter to Jouët: "But what holds most certainly for you, as for myself, is an unshakeable fidelity to the Church, blind obedience to the Sovereign Pontiff..." The previous day, December 21, he had also written defensively to Jouët: "You say that I am too assertive in my views against Liberalism. I am only repeating what Pius IX said in his briefs and encyclicals, and the Provincial Councils, approved by Rome." In the latter part of his life he continues to be consistent in his Ultramontane principles when he writes to Jean Vaudon, the Director of the Scholasticate (later to leave the Society), on January 23, 1895. Chevalier writes in a concerned, mental supervisory manner: "I am not in the least favourable to placing in the hands of our young men the Correspondent (magazine) which has always been, and still is, the voice of the liberal school of thought which has caused so much harm to the Church and led astray so many."

Writing to Fr. Delaporte in Paris on December 13, 1885, (for Delaporte, see a variety of references below) Chevalier observed that "...our liberals are authoritarian and cannot be checked". In the same letter his older self continues to be enamoured of Veuillot's paper: "The Universe is always held in suspicion and very threatened, so Fr. Jouët writes to me. I wrote him a strong letter in support (of the Universe) and sent a copy to Mr. Eugène Veuillot (the editor) who thanked me. I very much fear for it. What a wretched time! What intrigues! Yes indeed! Our liberals!"

Nine days later, in the letter to Jouët of December 22, 1885, Chevalier enthusiastically endorses both his own and Jouët's principled lasting outlook in this respect: "But what holds most certainly for you, as for myself, is an unshakeable fidelity to the Church: blind obedience to the Sovereign Pontiff."

This same letter, however, finds Chevalier taking more than slight umbrage in face of Jouët's query, concern perhaps, about the inappropriateness of Chevalier's strongly assertive Ultramontanism. "You say that I am too assertive in my views against Liberalism. I am only repeating what Pius IX said in his briefs and encyclicals, and the Provincial Councils approved by Rome."

The previous year, on November 27, 1884, Chevalier had challenged Jouët's concern about the scale and impact of his (Chevalier's) Ultramontanism, defensively observing: "I am amazed, my friend, that you charge me with being Ultramontane in word and liberal in action."

Otherwise, pastorally, it remains to be said that Jules Chevalier, and those others like him in reconstituted parishes, following the 1789 Revolution and its lasting consequences, created, such as it was, a cohesive and fervent Catholicism in those toiling years of demanding parish ministry and responsibility in Issoudun, while at the same time overseeing the development of his Society in France and beyond. As will be clear from the variety of texts given below, inspired and stimulated by challenging issues in the face of which he represented and defended the faithful, his parishioners, it was and remained his constant concern to shield them from what he perceived to be inimical and hostile to their Catholic, and indeed human, well-being. Jules Chevalier's pastoral ideal envisaged a Christianity of strong, personal, devotional, commitment to the Sacred Heart. This ideal can, could, exist side by side with the Ultramontane thrust of his thought as it merged with the heartfelt devotion and feeling concern so identified by him with the Sacred Heart and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, what Charles Taylor querulously but aptly identifies as "...a Church tightly held together by a strong hierarchical authority, which will nevertheless be filled with practitioners of heartfelt devotion." (A Secular Age; The Belcamp Harvard University Press, 2007, p.466)

As will be clear from a variety of texts given below, inspired and stimulated by challenging issues in the face of which he represented and defended the faithful, his parishioners, as well as the well-being of his Society, his constant concern was to shield his parishioners from what he perceived to be inimical and hostile to their Catholic well-being and, resolutely, safeguard the growth of his Society, in effect challenge socialism of the more rabid kind, liberalism, free-thinking. All of this had to coalesce advantageously with his absorbing role as founder of a religious order, with an empathetic emotional appeal through its spirituality of the Heart, and corresponding forms of dedication and service in priestly, brotherly, sisterly vocations.

Ultramontane Catholicism had a predilection, a focused feeling, for a festive, celebratory Catholicism, and this became for Chevalier already from his earliest Issoudun years, the September 8 pilgrimage, drawing together devotees of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart from all over France and beyond. What Ralph Gibson wrote in his A Social History of French Catholicism very much applies to Jules Chevalier's Issoudun: "The clergy tried to redirect the characteristic localism of popular religion in a more universalist direction." (London, Routledge, 1989, p.144.)

Chevalier's Issoudun would, in popular French, indeed European, Catholic consciousness, lastingly imply feast, pilgrimage, something other, more, than the parish, as a specific Our Lady of the Sacred Heart bonding ritual for devotees from France itself and other nations, creating a vibrant Issoudun-gathered community, boosted, uplifted, all thanks to one man's ideals and aspirations. The special Marian festivity of Issoudun continues long after him, remaining happily expressive of a necessary, ever so important, festive dimension of Christian and religious life, never likely to depart from the Christian consciousness of a high percentage of French Catholics, and those of other nations who, each year on September 8, continue what Jules Chevalier began in the very often traumatic world of Issoudun and the wider beleaguered 19th century Catholic France.

Chevalier, still very conscious of the a-religious French state in which he was distraughtedly living out his final, very burdensome, years was very uplifted by the thought and promise of Australia, so free of religious shackles, unlike France. In an August 22, 1907, letter, one of his very last, he wrote to Fr. Pietro Benedetti, Procurator General in Rome: "I saw Fr. Tréand (ever a favourite) some days ago. The Australian work goes forward wonderfully well. It is greatly consoling in the midst of all trials and concerns."

Dear Father,

The good Lord, in his infinite mercy, makes it known through the mouth of my superiors, that I have been chosen to become, one day, one of His ministers and, accordingly, I must prepare myself to receive the subdiaconate. You know the importance of this first step. I do not have to say more!!! The subdiaconate, O My God! At last I abandon myself to the divine goodness. I beseech you then, dear Father, not to forget me in your fervent prayers. You are aware that I greatly need grace to support me. As the ordination is due to take place on the fourth Saturday in Lent (February 23), I presume to ask you to publish my three bans at this time. Please accept, Father, and be assured of the deepest respect with which I have the honour to be your very honourable and obedient servant.

The reference, request, to publish bans concerns the notification in public within the parish of the forthcoming ordination. Chevalier, in fact, was ordained sub-deacon by Bishop Dupanloup of Orléans on April 8, 1850, in the chapel at Bourges major seminary, Monday of Holy Week.

Sir,

During the all too brief occasions when I had the pleasure of being in your company, you inspired me with so much self-esteem and confidence that I could not stop myself from unburdening myself to the rector, who, for his part, expressed the same supportive sentiments.

Yes! I am so happy to have so close to me such a generous-hearted and supportive friend whose heart conveys the warmth of someone very dear to me. I have only one regret, that of not being able to meet you more often and speaking at greater length during our poor exile. I hope that divine Providence will enhance the pleasure of knowing you. In no way do I wish to presume on your goodness in requesting you to forward with your letter some few lines for good Orésime. I am aware of your kind feelings for him. The warmth you show to him is sufficient to assure me that you will be pleased to convey to him corresponding sentiments from me. As for yourself, be assured that I would only be too pleased if I could be of any help to you in some way. I shall try at least through my poor prayers to make heaven favour you. If I do not on this occasion presume on your goodness, I would beg you not to forget me before the good Lord.

It must be acknowledged that both of us need God in our different ways, I myself in order to fulfil in saintly fashion the awesome functions soon to be laid upon me, and yourself in wholehearted service without reserve.

I mentioned our meeting to Mr. Petit. He remembers you very well and greatly wishes to have the pleasure of renewing his former acquaintance with you. He asked me...

I don't know what to think. It is now all of fifteen days since I wrote to you about the matter which engages you so much. I haven't had a reply from one way or the other. What then is the explanation for this long delay? It can only be that you were not handed the letter that I sent to you on the 29th of October. That's the only explanation I can see. For I cannot believe that you decided, when the moment came to go ahead, to abandon a project which you gave the impression of pursuing very eagerly. For the rest, you could at least have written a couple of words to set my mind at rest. Everything draws me into believing that you didn't receive my letter. Here are its contents.

Article 4

B 18500522

To a future major seminarian.

Undated, most likely May 22, 1850

Let us praise the Lord!

We thank the good God, and especially the most holy Virgin, for the protective concern experienced in your undertaking. What a good Mother! Confidence! I can at last provide you with something positive. His Lordship came to the seminary yesterday to preside over the splendid ceremonies.

Monsieur Gasnier (otherwise, in English-speaking Catholic countries, Fr., in this instance the seminary rector), took advantage of this propitious occasion to discuss with him your concerns. The Archbishop showed himself to be inflexible. The favourable report commending you, and the entreaties of the rector who was very supportive of you, could not sway the Archbishop to break with the strict regulation laid down since the beginning of the year. Here then are four young outsiders, two of whom had to run away from the diocese for which they were candidates in order to enter the major seminary. His Lordship (the Cardinal Archbishop) refused all four individually, as he would even if they were a Fénelon or a Vincent de Paul.

Fénelon, otherwise François de Salignac de la Mothe, 1652-1715, was a French prelate who benefited from the patronage of his equally well-known contemporary, Bishop Bossuet of Meaux. Fénelon engaged greatly in prayer and writing with the idea of spiritual communion with God, and was much drawn to the practice of quietism. Fénelon was also distinguished for his membership of the Academie Française, his political prose anticipating Rousseau. Vincent de Paul, 1576-1660, began his mission apostolate to the poor of the French countryside in 1613. Founder of the Sisters of Charity and the Vincentians, he established a Vincentian house at Richelieu, Chevalier's home town.

The Archbishop of Bourges was Cardinal Marie Antoine Célestin, 1841-1859, but was also wont to write his name arbitrarily as Bishop [Monseigneur] Dupont, Du Pont.

Nothing could make him change his mind. However, given the support for you from all sides, and the favourable report made about you, he would be willing to accept you in his major seminary with your Bishop's approval. But nothing in writing: he doesn't want to hear of it. You must, dear friend, remain buoyed up in your expectations. You will not have to make the sacrifice of leaving your diocese for which one's heart always beats more or less forcefully, or of being separated from your family. Moreover, you will no longer have to convince yourself of the goodwill of the Archbishop of Bourges to accept you in his diocese once you are ordained priest at Bourges. If the designs of God do not call you elsewhere, it seems to me that he cannot refuse you. The depth of knowledge and noteworthy piety of the Bourges major seminary directors should be a sure guarantee of the worthwhile value you offer him. Ask some noteworthy person who is interested in you, such as Madame Molman, for example, or your director, to intervene once more with Bishop Marlot. The fee is 500 francs (roughly 2000 euros) and the Bruges seminary is not wealthy, unable to make great sacrifices for someone who is not obliged to work in the diocese. But since these gentlemen, especially having heard all that has been said about you, are genuinely interested in your case, they would like to favour you with a reduction of 100 francs on your fee. Accordingly four hundred francs would be your fee for nine months. But since two months have already gone by, you can bear in mind that 300 francs will suffice for this year. On entry one pays the instalment for the first three months. When the Rector returns, perhaps he will deduct another fifty francs.

For Brother... (the name is illegible) it is his (an unidentified interested party) wish that on coming to the seminary you bring with you a letter from Monsieur Mol asking the rector of the Bourges major seminary to be willing to accept you in his seminary to evaluate your vocation, without any mention at all of...

He has informed me that when you have spent some time at the Bourges seminary, he would hope to have you attached to the diocese, or if you prefer, you could arrive with an 'exeat', permission, to join any diocese, and he in turn would oversee entry to a diocese of your choice. If the Archbishop of Bourges does not wish to accept you in the seminary, it is only right to inform you that he has not given up hope of accepting you after spending some time in the seminary. However it may be, come anyway. He will take you under his patronage. He will expect you within a couple of days. When you arrive, let me know so that I can meet you. The porter has been notified.

Issoudun, November 11, 1858

Most Good and Honourable Madame,

We can no longer count on the wife of Marshal de Saint-Arnaud to present our requests to the Emperor and Empress (Louis Napoléon Bonaparte, Napoleon III, and his wife Eugenia. J. Chevalier sought financial support in high places for the construction of his Church of the Sacred Heart at Issoudun.) Knowing the lively interest you have shown in our work, and at impoverished Issoudun, I make bold to ask you to interest yourself in these two requests for financial support. I would like to think that among your distinguished acquaintances in the upper regions of power you may find some charitable soul who would make available to us the aid we are seeking.

No doubt Their Majesties, who are acknowledged by the whole of France for their generosity, would be interested in our situation if our request was put before them. We are also appealing to the Minister for Culture (Religious Affairs). If it is possible for you, Madame, to say a word in our favour with his Excellency we would be most grateful.

Staying with this issue, we cannot hide from you that our foundation has not up to now been favoured with a legal status. It cannot call on government aid except for reasons of usefulness, the hopes to which it gives rise and the good it has already accomplished. We are as if in those favoured situations opening out, but without support, and consequently, hélas, likely to founder if supportive and sympathetic, efficacious aid, does not become available. As for the idea of preaching a sermon in Paris, which you were kind enough to suggest to me, for all that it is an excellent idea, how would one put it into practice? The main problem would be that of obtaining the approval of the Archbishop of Paris. It appears that nowadays such permissions are not granted, and only with difficulty, curtailment, if they are.

We need patronage and to be taken under somebody's wing, something which, in all probability, is not very likely. The Archbishop of Bourges does not wish to offer any concrete help; he leaves us to get by on our own and will never take the lead. It is left to hope, then, that the Sacred Heart of Jesus will smooth out all the obstacles in our way.

Be so good, then, gracious and honourable lady, to accept this token of our warm gratitude and the homage of these respectful sentiments with which I have the honour to be your humble and obedient servant.

Abbé Chevalier, MSC.

Issoudun, May 3, 1859

Most Honourable Lady,

I am very much aware of the efforts you have made in support of our work. The Minister for Religion has definitively replied to the request we made to him, but he is not in a position to support our chapel, since we do not enjoy legal status. The Empress, to whom Mr. Tourangis forwarded our appeal, has sent me a letter through her secretary. Here is her reply, the equivalent of a refusal:

"Dear Father,

In conformity with the wishes of the Empress, the appeal you made to Her Majesty in favour of a church opened at Issoudun in 1855 (the reference is to the temporary church where, on September 12, 1855, the original MSC community was set up), has been referred to the favourable attention of the Minister for Worship and I have the honour to inform you..."

Now that we know the 'favourable attention' of the Minister, we are certain that nothing is going to come our way. If men are not with us, God, we hope, He for whom we work, will be on our side. We shall continue with our work without allowing ourselves to be despondent.

We hope to bless with great pomp, towards the end of this month or in early June, the laying of the first stone of our chapel (at this moment the foundations are under way).

If Your Excellency is passing through Issoudun around this time or a little later, we invite her to participate in this ceremony, something which would be very desirable, but, otherwise, Fr. J.F.X. Caillaud (1799-1866, Vicar General of the Bourges Archdiocese from 1840 to his death), will be good enough, I hope, to preside over the event.

Notes on the Third Order of the Sacred Heart.

D 18590601

Third Order of the Sacred Heart
 Its excellence, its advantages

COR UNUM ET ANIMA UNA

Early Christian life - associated in prayer and community holiness. In the Middle Ages piety took on a new expansiveness. Religious orders were multiplying and thousands of the faithful enrolled under their banners.

Choice souls compelled to stay in the world gave witness to their desire to follow a rule which approximated as much as possible to the religious life.

It was at this time that St. Francis of Assisi, St. Dominic and several other saints founded Third Orders to meet people's wishes. The name, Third Order of Penance, was chosen so that, through a life of mortification, the disorders which were so prevalent might be expiated.

Each century had its particular institutions which met the needs of the time.

In the 17th century, an age when a rampant Protestantism created havoc and separated half of Europe from the Church, Our Lord provided a remedy for these great evils, devotion to His Heart, made known by St. John and St. Gertrude. Behold this Heart which has loved men so much. It contains all the resources of grace needed to draw people back from the abyss of perdition into which they were plunging themselves. It is a plank of salvation which I offer to modern society. Today devotion to the Sacred Heart, approved by the Church, is becoming more and more popular.

In 1854, on the day the dogma of the Immaculate Conception was promulgated, there came into existence, in the very heart of France, a society of priests whose aim was to spread a revitalizing devotion to the Saviour's adorable Heart, source of every grace and blessing. They chose the beautiful title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which the Holy See ratified.

To help their apostolate, they also founded a community of religious sisters called Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Then, anxious to have lay-helpers, they established a Third Order of the Sacred Heart to make available "the benefits of this devotion" (les avantages de cette devotion - not in original text) to all who would have neither the possibility or the vocation to enter the religious life (the latter words are an appropriate modern rendition of 'convent'). This institute was approved by the Holy See and enriched with Indulgences. It is a fraternity within which the Heart of Jesus is the bond and source of every blessing. This work expands more and more, and the pious souls who have made it their own work wholeheartedly at their own sanctification and that of their neighbour. They make it a duty to give to the Divine Heart the homage He merits, the reparation called for, in spreading about them a salutary devotion to the Heart of Jesus, etc.

Most Honoured Lady,

I gather with very great pleasure that you are about to become a novice of the Dominican Third Order. I did not forget you on the 3rd of June and if God hears, as I hope, my prayers, you will be a worthy child of St. Dominic. I couldn't find any subscription; I shall take one for Issoudun. You can forward it in my name. I hope the 'Dominican Year' can quickly establish itself and have a widespread circulation. Berry (the Department area in France of which Issoudun is part) will never provide many subscribers. A tight hold is kept on money in our diocese; there is little generosity of heart. I was in Bourges for the Cardinal's funeral. (Célestin Du Pont died at Bourges on 26 May 1859, having been Archbishop since 1842, promoted there from the diocese of Avignon. Made Cardinal in 1857, Senator in 1851.) I met Rev. Fr. Lécuyer; his minor seminary is progressing very well. Public gossip names different bishops for the archdiocese of Bourges, but I am persuaded that the real candidate is not yet known. When you become aware of it, since you are close to sources (of information), you will greatly please me if you are kind enough to let me know.

On Sunday next we hope to have the ceremony of blessing the first stone of our new chapel. Fr. Caillaud, the Vicar General, will preside. While the work actively goes forward, the financial resources are not arriving that quickly. The parish priest (Fr. Crozat) is quite well; he wishes to be remembered to you. I have the honour, Madam, to be, with deep regards, your very humble and devoted servant,

J. Chevalier

*Chevalier became a member of the Dominican Third Order when he was a young curate at Châtillon, October 13, 1853. Most Kind and Honourable Lady,

A woman from Châtillon-sur-Indre (Chevalier was a curate there from January 1852 to October 1853), most charitable but not well circumstanced, would like you, if it is possible, to do her a little favour. If you do so, it will be to the advantage of your work. Mr. Cloquemin de Buzançais, whom you must know, often goes to Paris. This gentleman has in his possession a cheque for one thousand francs (3,600 euros) in the name of Lemoine and in favour of this poor lady; she has been trying for a long time to get hold of her money [without] being able to do so. Once this year goes by the cheque will no longer be valid. She believes that Mr. Cloquemin, who is in charge of these matters, is either culpably negligent or ill-willed. Do the best you can and I shall be extremely grateful to you.

I must tell you that yesterday the foundation stone of our chapel was blessed by Father Caillaud. It was thronged. The vice-prefect, the mayor, the president (of the Council) all took part in the ceremony. This gesture of support from these gentlemen greatly pleased us. When we shall have the blessing of the whole, completed, church, only God knows. We hope, nevertheless, it will be soon.

Please, Madame, accept my good wishes and kindest regards.

Most Kind and Honourable Lady,

I very much regret that I couldn't meet you during my last trip; leaving your residence I went to Saint-Célestin to pay a visit to Fr. de Lutho, and under the impression that I would find you there. You left as I came away from meeting the senior curate. Thank you for informing me about your blessing. I understand, following your letter, its appropriateness, and I note that it was performed in a suitably ceremonious fashion. You can now live with a great sense of security in your new home. Yesterday we had the blessing of our chapel's foundation stone; large numbers turned up and it was a triumphant occasion. All the authorities of the town were there, the vice-prefect, the mayor, the chairman of the council, the imperial procurator, etc. What do you think of this turn-about? There's mankind for you! When it comes to taking on a good work they stay put or at best remain icily indifferent. If the work is going ahead they applaud and want to be involved... pathetic humanity!

In order to make these gentlemen even more well disposed to us, that evening, after the ceremony, we invited them to a little dinner and they accepted with pleasure. Mr. de Linetière also honoured us with his presence. What a distinguished father, you have, Madame.

How much would I not give that he might be once more as I should like him to be... Today, more than ever, I hope so. Madame de Linetière was kind enough to be present at the blessing. May the adorable Heart of Jesus pour out his favour on this tiny beginning! It gives me great pleasure to have news of your imminent arrival. I fear I shall not have the pleasure of meeting you on your first appearance in Issoudun as I shall be away from next Monday until July 15. I shall be staying in Issoudun on the 15th and 16th until the evening on the 17th. It is likely that I shall be away from the town, after that, until the 4th of August. I promise you that I shall then be sedentary.

Your kind letter so full of concern greatly moved me. I thank you most profusely for the great interest and your concern about the state of my health and everything else. I am getting better; I no longer have a fever or headaches. The hoarseness has gone and the rheumatism draws to an end. I regret that I didn't have the pleasure of meeting you before I left. The observation you make about the words (homily) I delivered to the pious people of Bourges is very kind. You only permit your heart to speak! I appreciate your judicious comment; I noted well what you yourself said during the delivery of the document; as a result I greatly shortened it. Most Honourable Lady,

Do not worry about me; you are too kind. I keep well; the worst is over. Now I can give myself over to some rest; but excuse me, I forget that rest for the Christian, and especially for a priest, can only be had in heaven. During the Lenten Sundays, at seven in the evening, we had talks for men only; they made a marvellous impact. The gathering was enormous; the enthusiasm all one could wish for. Such an unexpected number is significant. The Archbishop will be here at Issoudun to administer the sacrament of Confirmation on the 29th of this month. (The reference is to Merjand Alexis - Basile, 1859-1861.) The parish priest, very likely, will be resigning. He spoke about it to Fr. Lamblin (the Vicar General) when he was visiting Issoudun about six weeks ago. The Vicar General thought the Archbishop would not be unfavourable. The parish priest has been careful about mentioning this to me, but I am aware of his expectations and the thinking of the authorities. He dreams of nothing else at the moment except retirement at Madame du Quesne's.

What's going to happen? It's known only to Providence. Let's pray! God changes when he wishes to have available men's ideas. I haven't yet received your pictures as the developer has been ill, but they are promised for this weekend. I hope there is no further delay! I cannot as yet give you the exact date of my trip to Bourges: it appears that the Archbishop is starting on his round of Confirmations from next week.

Madame,

I thank you very much for the information which you have been so good to let me have. I hope to be in Bourges on Thursday next. I have some prints to hand out. (Representations of the Sacred Heart promoting his church of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun.) Mr. Chauveau-Lagarde is due to bring me several thousand from Paris today. It greatly pleases me to tell you that the parish priest has suddenly changed his mind; he no longer wishes to be chaplain but to continue as parish priest of Issoudun. May heaven keep him feeling like this! Deign to accept, Madame, my good wishes for your family, and together with my lively sense of gratitude, please accept my respectful good wishes in the Lord.

Issoudun, June 17, 1860

Madame,

I am happy to see that God has rewarded your efforts; your zeal has achieved wonderful success. The Sacred Heart, Issoudun, can never adequately acknowledge your efforts. I shall pray to the Lord to honour our indebtedness in bestowing upon you, and all the members of your family, the most choice favours. I impatiently await, Madame, your return, to thank you for all your kindness. I leave tomorrow for Fontgombault (Chevalier is referring to the abbey on the Creuse, a few miles north west of Le Blanc, a Trappist monastery in 1860, but latterly Benedictine.) I go there to spend some days in retreat. I shall return towards the end of the week. I commend myself to your prayers. The parish priest is completely rid of his tiredness. We celebrated the Feast of the Sacred Heart on Friday. The Triduum was well patronised. Fr. Damourette preached. Friday night's sermon was delivered by Fr. Moulinet, parish priest of Notre Dame at Châteauroux. The crowds were enormous. We missed Fr. Prior. (A Dominican who was the director of the minor seminary, St. Célestin, of the Bourges archdiocese and who would leave his posting in August 1860.)

With good wishes,

Appeal for funds to meet the costs of the new chapel of the Sacred Heart.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

(Indre) Issoudun
No date given, likely the summer of 1860

M.....:

Devotion to the Sacred Heart is a need in our time as a challenge to the two great evils which create havoc in society, INDIFFERENCE AND EGOISM, offering the sovereign remedies of LOVE AND SACRIFICE. Working to spread these is to accomplish a task as agreeable in heaven as it is advantageous on earth. One of the most efficacious means to bring this about is to raise up caring and family-like sanctuaries. We Missionaries of this adorable Heart, the rich source of all the graces flowing to humanity, have thought about building a shrine where He can bestow His favours and draw His disciples within that sacred fire of His love which must spread to all peoples.

Supported by contributions from the pious faithful, we were able to begin work on the building. The lack of financial resources led us to discontinue work already well advanced. Anxious to begin again we make a charitable appeal and for that purpose we look for no more than a contribution of 20 centimes (something less than what is four euros today, 2010), and in return we offer a very beautiful engraving of the Sacred Heart; in addition we promise a perpetual Mass every first Friday of the month, approved by the Archbishop of Bourges, and special prayers each day.

A father, mother, children, brother, sister, parent, friend, even the dead, can share advantageously in all this when one contributes the minimal offering of twenty centimes. Consequently we quietly confidently expect all the members in each family will contribute towards such a worthy cause.

An offering of twenty centimes guarantees one an unframed picture of the Sacred Heart, twenty-five centimes a framed one and fifty centimes a coloured one. Anybody offering a cent will be rewarded with a picture in colour and share in the spiritual advantages being offered. We count greatly on your zeal and devotion to promote yourself, or through others, these pictures and collect the contributions you will be kind enough to send to us. Our appreciation will be lasting.

With all good wishes in the Sacred Heart of Jesus,

J. Chevalier,

Rome, September 3, 1860

Aware of the interest you and your good family show towards me, I hasten to give you my news. I begin by saying that I had a pleasant journey, and experienced no sea-sickness. (Chevalier went by boat from Genoa to Livorno [Leghorn], and, from the letter, by boat also to Civitavecchia.) All went marvellously; extremes of Italian heat were not experienced.

The Romans have not experienced warmer sunshine for years. Everybody is moaning about it; fever is rife, especially among visitors. I myself hope that by the grace of God and support of your fervent prayers, I shall not be laid low. I have only been in Rome since Saturday September 1. My travelling companion (Fr. Urban, parish priest of Ondainville) wanted to pass through Turin; I did not wish to go against him. From Lyons we went to Geneva and then to Chambrey, Turin, Milan and Genoa whence we embarked on the 27th of August for Livorno. Because I wrote about the different cities in the letter to the parish priest, I shall not repeat myself. On the crossing from Genoa to Livorno there were some forty followers of Garibaldi on board on their way to the Kingdom of Naples. Two officers, noticing a French priest, accosted me, saying: "We hope the Papal Palace at Avignon will soon be ready since in a little while we are going to take (Pope) Pius the Ninth there; it would be desirable to get a move on because within three weeks or a month this issue will be settled." They proceeded to make known with devilish 'sang-froid' (calmness) their plans for an offensive; it is appalling. One of the officers, a Roman by birth, headed the 1848 revolutionary uprising in Rome. When taken prisoner he was exiled by Pius IX and afterwards released. This is how he makes use of his freedom!

We are due at Livorno [Leghorn] at 7am, Tuesday. We hoped to get a ship for Civitavecchia the same day. There was nothing. We had to wait until 5pm Tuesday. To use the time advantageously we went by rail in thirty minutes to Pisa. Pisa is virtually empty, having lost much of its past splendour. It only lives in the present through its university which continues to enjoy a certain fame, and from its past through its four celebrated works of art: the Cathedral; the Baptistry; the Leaning Tower; and the Cemetery. The Cathedral is wonderful, especially the Dome (tower). What strikes one in particular are the infinite variety of detail on this marble mountain, chiselling out over four centuries all the fantasies of the Christian idea. The interior has seventy-four columns distributed among five naves. Most of the sculpture is by Michaelangelo and the paintings by Raphael.

We left Pisa at 2pm having received a special blessing from His Eminence the Cardinal (Cosimo Corsi), and by 4pm we were in Florence. One feels when approaching that one is arriving at the city of masterpieces. Florence, despite its uprising, still inspires respect for its palaces, and due recollection of the great personalities who built, decorated, lived in them. One is overwhelmed with admiration in the miracle of silent ruins, in those marble sites where art shines out in all its splendour. But if the genius which galvanized Florence is now no more than history's echo, the corpse remains in all the glory of its proportions and grace of detail. So people eagerly come from all over the world to experience Florence, still beautiful following its demise, laying there in its magnificent tomb. Today in this marble city, where everything consists of grandeur and magnificence, who would say that it is inhabited by a lazy and frivolous population who run after resurrections (risings) and pleasures. Florence Cathedral is one of the most remarkable constructions in Europe. Only the dome of St. Peter's is higher than that of Florence, but it is not its equal in grace and lightness. This basilica on the outside is wholly encrusted in black and white marble. The paving stones are enriched with such a wonderful variety of colours as if studded with flowers. The Cathedral is very rich both in paintings and sculptures.

Holy Cross Church (Santa Croce), original in style, is also very beautiful; it contains the tombs of Michaelangelo, Machiavelli and Galileo.

With regret I left Florence for Siena, an old town with imposing buildings. There are thirteen churches, and its thirteenth century Cathedral is magnificent, the façade of a dazzling richness. The huge building is covered in marble, both within and without. What I most admire in this city with an unspeakable joy is the room where St. Catherine of Siena was born, the cell where she lived and the planks on which she slept, etc.

On Thursday night we slept in Livorno. This town of 80,000 inhabitants has nothing remarkable other than its harbour. It struck me as bustling and commercial; the lower classes are unbearable as they are all over Tuscany, irksome in the way they bother one, and as if this is not enough, boringly so; one can only rid oneself of them by beating them off. At last Friday evening August 31 has arrived, and we embarked at 5pm for Civitavecchia; we shall not get there until 10am tomorrow, and at 4pm we leave for Rome on the last train, setting foot on the promised land at 7pm.

On Sunday I went to St. Peter's to hear the canons' mass; the music was wonderful. I also visited other churches, all full of people. The churches are better looked after than in France; one is aware of the silence and greater recollection. At every street corner one finds Madonnas, wayside shrines every twenty steps, churches and chapels every second.

This morning I went to see his Eminence Cardinal Villecourt, former Bishop of La Rochelle, who very graciously received me, bringing to my attention ways and means for obtaining different privileges from the Sovereign Pontiff. Very likely on Thursday or Friday morning I shall have a Papal audience. Cardinal Barnabó, Prefect of the Propagation of Faith, has already furnished me with my title of missionary apostolic. Monsignor Lacroix, pronotary apostolic, to whom I was recommended by the Archbishop of Bourges, received me very graciously. It is he who will introduce me to His Holiness.

As for the relics, too many are being requested each day. There is no inclination to provide me with all I want and, moreover, I cannot take away all those laid aside for me because it takes more than 15 days to get them ready. I haven't yet visited Father Jandel (Master General of the Dominicans). I intend to call on him very soon. I do not forget you in any way, especially all that is dear to you, in the churches I can visit. Pray also for me. I hope to arrive on the 20th or 21st of this month.

Please convey my regards to your good and esteemed family, and be kind enough, Madame, to receive my most respectful good wishes in the Lord.

To Pope Pius the 9th.Requesting an Indulgence by Invocation. Original in the MSC General Archives, Rome.

On the 8th of December, 1854, a Society of priests bearing the title Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, was founded on a never-to-be-forgotten day at Issoudun in the Archdiocese of Bourges with the approval of His Grace the Archbishop. Their principal aim is to spread devotion to the divine Heart of Jesus and to offer themselves as Victims in reparation for the insults to which His love is subjected. In the name of these priests devoted to the Holy See, their humble superior, Jules Chevalier, petitions the Holy See to bless this burgeoning work and to favour it with a gesture indicative of Your Holiness's support.

If Your Holiness, Most Holy Father, should deign to add to this request 100 days' indulgence for all those who formulate this invocation: May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved; by placing at the end of this supplication your gracious signature, to which we attach the greatest honour, we shall be eternally grateful.

Dated 20 September, 1860.
For the favour of Pope Pius IX.

rue des Ursulines (Ursuline St.)

Issoudun, October 15, 1860
This letter was sent to Fr. Jouët by Mr. Lobin on January 7, 1889

Dear Sir,

You haven't forgotten, I hope, the proposal I made to you last July. You are aware that you promised to have the stained-glass ready for the large window in the middle of the sanctuary. The centrepiece is Our Lord's apparition to the venerable (now Saint) Margaret-Mary Alacoque, the Visitation religious on her knees holding His Heart in her hands as in the copy I left with you, He saying to her: 'Behold this Heart which has loved mankind so much.' These words would be in normal, easily readable, lettering which anybody could read without difficulty. This window, as you can see from the model you have, is spaced with Our Lord on the Gospel side, and the saint on the epistle side.

The lower part of the window, as you are aware, comprises four arches, in each of which there are two medallions for which the following is the subject matter: in the first and on the gospel side the first medallion depicts, below Our Lord, Jesus in the garden of olives praying to his Father for the salvation of the world, His Sacred Heart, sweating blood, accepting the chalice, an angel appears to comfort Him.

In the second medallion Jesus gives himself up to his torturers.

In the second arc the first medallion portrays the Crucifixion, while the second presents Jesus on the Cross pardoning His torturers and promising Paradise to the good thief.

Within the third arc the first medallion presents the soldiers piercing the Heart of Jesus on the Cross.

The second medallion depicts the Church and Sacraments issuing from the Heart of Jesus in this sublime moment (the word is St. Augustine's).

The first medallion on the fourth arc depicts the Blessed Virgin holding the dead Jesus in her arms and putting her hand or her lips on his heart which she and the woman with her worship. The second medallion represents the Heart of Jesus releasing from Limbo the souls of the Just.

In each of these representations one must reproduce in a striking manner the Heart of Jesus since all is due to His love. In the upper part of the window you will depict the Institution of the Holy Eucharist, depicting a small heart shape above the chalice or on the chest of Jesus. Reproduce Leonardo da Vinc's Last Supper.

If you need anything explained, you can write to me. You also need to deliver at the same time two small pieces of stained-glass for the windows on the side in the two chapels of the Blessed Virgin and St Joseph. Mr. Goujon has taken the measurements. The first window to be placed on the epistle side of the chapel will depict the Immaculate Virgin in ordinary posture lowering her hands and looking at the child Jesus who stands before her, and he will have on his chest a little heart surrounded by rays which he will with his finger bring to the attention of worshippers. Mr. Hallez is the source (for Chevalier) of this suggestion; it finds such expression, for all practical purposes, in his Sacred Heart album, in that section where he depicts the Holy family; be kind enough to look it up there.

L.J. Hallez was the author of Album of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, published by H. Casterman, Paris, 1859. The work comprised novena prayers, pious devotional exercises for each of the nine days preceding the Feast of the Sacred Heart.

Above the Virgin's head, or below, these words will be written: 'Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, pray for us'. (This would appear to be the first explicit reference to the Virgin by Chevalier as Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.) On the other small stained-glass window you will depict St. Joseph holding the infant Jesus in his arms, with his little heart either in his hand or on his chest. Be kind enough to let me have the price of these small stained-glass windows. Two benefactors would like to know. If they decide on purchasing them you can put their names and titles at the bottom.

The window on the epistle side of the chapel was the gift of the Méloizes family; see earlier letters. It became the first artistic presentation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart inspired by Chevalier. The other window, that of St. Joseph, was the gift of Mademoiselle de la Châtre du Breuil.

I await your reply. When you have finished the stained-glass window for the Mans sisters of the Sacred Heart, depicting Our Lord's apparition to the venerable Margaret-Mary Alacoque (to be beatified just under four years from the date of this letter on September 18, 1864, and canonized by Pius XI, May 13, 1920), you could, if it is feasible for you, do another one for our chapel. We would like to think that the stained-glass commissions you are carrying out for us would be masterfully finished; give them all your attention. You will not fail in having them ready for Easter; it is absolutely necessary that they are installed by then. I hope to pay you in cash, or as good as makes no difference. If we are happy with your work, as I expect to be the case, you will have further, and numerous, pieces of stained-glass commissioned.

Payment was made through Léopold Lobin on May 25, 1861. So Lobin wrote to Père Victor Jouët, January 7, 1889. Letter extant, MSC General Archives.

Dear Madame,

I have been deeply affected by greatly upsetting news of what has occasioned the deepest sorrow for you. I know what the void can be like following the loss of someone so dear at this time. Your kind heart must be weighed down from such pained sadness. I share all the more my feelings for you because I knew your uncle; to know him was to appreciate and respect him. How sorry I feel for Madame Cottereau! How heart-breaking! Be kind enough to offer her my sincere sympathy and deepest regards. One thought will sustain you both in this time of sadness and tears, and God does not wish it otherwise: the life of your dear departed one was so full of merit and his end so Christian. It is to be hoped that he enjoys the heavenly happiness of the just and that you will meet him again one day in Glory, never to be separated; this will be a support to you in the sacrificial walk on which you are now setting out.

I have the honour to remain, Madame, with deepest respect, your very humble and devoted servant.

Undated, latter end of 1860

In the midst of numerous chores, I am not sure if I haven't forgotten to answer your last letter. If that is so, I hasten to inform you that the two people who wished to present us with the two stained glass windows of the Blessed Virgin and St. Joseph are agreed on your latest proposals. But, like ourselves, they await the arrival of the finished product from your workshop.

The person who is offering the window for the Virgin chapel wishes you to place at the bottom these two (French) words only: 'Given by a family'. (The gift, that is, of the Marchioness Pauline des Méloizes, on behalf of her family.) The other, who has given us the St. Joseph window, wishes only to have the coat of arms shown; I shall send it to you as soon as I get it. (This window was gifted by Mademoiselle de la Châtre du Breuil.)

I await your designs; do not, I beseech you, design a head for our Virgin like that which I saw in the Chapel of the Sisters of Charity at Bourges. I do not find it sufficiently dignified, worthy, and there is a lack of richness both in the colour and cloth. Before you complete our Sacred Heart window, I should like to see the one you are working on for the Mans Sacred Heart Sisters. Be kind enough, as you have already promised me, to let me know when it is convenient to visit you and I shall then go to Tours. I have, Sir, with deepest respect, the honour to be your very humble and devoted servant.

Madame,

I am very much obliged to you for the information you have been so good to share with me. I cannot tell you what effect Mr. Linetière's letter had on me about Mr. C. and Mr. K. These gentlemen up to this moment have made no contact with me. They are wrapped in absolute silence. I remain expectant all the time.

My latest journey turned out to be quite worthwhile. I placed some more hundreds of those pictures of the Sacred Heart in those little apostolic circulars. The first printing is completely sold out; I eagerly await the second to meet the requests which continue to reach me. (The pictures were being sold to meet the cost of building the Issoudun Church.)

Yesterday we began again to have talks for men in our chapel, and we hope to continue with them during the Sundays in Lent. (The chapel referred to here is the early small one, opened in November 1855.) We are quite happy about it. We never thought that this town would contain within itself, where men are concerned, so much that is positively helpful. Pray especially for the success of our preaching.

With my sincere good wishes,

Issoudun, March 25, 1861

Madame,

You provide me with so much indicative of your interest that I cannot even for a second doubt your goodness to me. In the presence of such devotedness, excuse becomes irrelevant! And if your scrupulous conscience needs a forgiving word, as you appear to suggest, I pray to the Heart of Jesus to grant it to you during this great week when everything speaks of indulgences and forgiveness. But, I insist, you are not needy in this respect.

I am really overcome, Madame, by all you have done for our undertaking and the trouble you have gone to installing our prints (of the Sacred Heart). I can never adequately thank you.

It is with very great pleasure that I forward the thousand engravings you requested. As Mélanie's father doesn't go to Hyères until Easter Monday, I cannot wait until then. I spend each day hoping for a speedy and complete return to health for you and also for the continuing good health of Mademoiselle Marie (Madame du Quesne's daughter, born 1851, later Madame Fernand de Bonneval, dying tragically in Paris when the shop, Bazaar de la Charité, caught fire, May 31, 1897.) Madame, you are assured of my prayers for a long time now. The parish priest and the good Sisters (of Charity), confrères and curates send you our deepest regards. (Madame du Quesne had sponsored the Sisters' orphanage at Issoudun.) The Archbishop of Bourges in a circular about his forthcoming visitations has confirmed that he will bless your chapel (private) on May 30, and on the 31st he will be at Issoudun for Confirmation.

The Archbishop, Menjaud, will be blessing the du Quesne family chapel, recently built to accommodate the remains of her husband, Admiral Joseph-Marie Lazare, Viscount du Quesne, who died at sea in Antibes July 1854, but whose body was returned to France on August 24 the following year.

Sister Julie (Julie-Françoise Gaillard, Superior of the Sisters of Charity convent founded in Issoudun by Madame du Quesne) has at last decided to ask Madame D'Aussigny (the Issoudun Assistant Administrator's wife) to collect for the poor on Easter Sunday at all the Masses and she is pleased to do so. I was certain she would. The Assistant Administrator shall go with her. Here already is a great step forward! Let's hope for the rest! I am sending Miss Zélie the 200 prints she requested; she should receive three hundred in a day or two, with forty hymns. (Zélie Larochère was Madame du Quesne's secretary and lady-in-waiting.) Be kind enough to convey my respects to these ladies and also to Canon Fosset (1801-1890, formerly prefect of Studies at Saint-Célestin Seminary, Bourges, chaplain to and frequent guest at the du Quesne family home) and Fr. Mussy also.

Please accept, Madame, my deeply respectful regards, having the honour in

Dear Madame,

I greatly thank you for being so interested in our work and for the valuable advice you gave me. I hope to go to Bourges next Monday: I shall arrive at 4pm. and return that night or next morning. I shall have the pleasure of seeing you on Monday at the soirée. I should like to do so before visiting my Lord and Mr. de Champgrand. Possibly I shall go to your house on leaving the railway station at 3.30pm.

I know already about the rumours which have been circulating about the use to which the money from the sale of the pictures (Sacred Heart) has been put. It has been stated that I amassed not 409 but 100,000 francs which I forwarded to the Holy Father (one franc in 1861 would be roughly 3 euros today). This type of gossip, which can only come from the mouth of an evil-wishing irreligious character without faith, leaves me wholly unmoved. It gives me great pleasure to bring you up to date with our expenses and our receipts.

As of January 29, 1861, Mr. Tarlier (Bourges' diocesan architect and also for the Issoudun basilica) has confirmed that the overall outlay for our project has risen to 31,300.09 francs. One adds to this sum: the architect's fees, 1,863 francs; the paving of the sanctuary, 500 francs; lesser expenditure, 200 francs; chairs, 250 francs; the two small altars of the Virgin and St Joseph, 700 francs; the purchase of ground adjoining the chapel, 1,200 francs; the larger stained-glass large window in the centre, 2,000 francs. The total comes to 38,013.09 francs.

Here are the takings, the revenue:

Subscriptions for the chapel:

Offerings in honour of the Sacred Heart = 18,000 francs

Sale of (holy) pictures: 18,350 francs

Money made over to me personally, roughly 3,500 francs

Left over: 38,850 francs

All the money from the sale of the pictures is not yet entered. I am still counting on some thousands of francs, a little more, a little less.

More details on Monday.

I have the honour, Madame, to be with deepest regards your humble and devoted servant,

The central subject of the window you speak to me about is not St. Dominic but Our Lady of the Rosary, that is to say the Blessed Virgin, giving the holy Rosary to St. Dominic; accordingly he has only a secondary role in the circumstances. This window is situated in the Lady Chapel, that nearest the apse. You are aware that this chapel contains three windows, the apse window and two others. The window which will receive Our Lady of the Holy Rosary is one metre wide and 2.55 metres in height, the borders not included. At the bottom of this glass you will inscribe: "Our Lady of the Holy Rosary, pray for us". And in the corner these words: "The gift of an Issoudun Christian family". At the bottom of the apse window you will inscribe: "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart pray for us" and, in a corner, these words alone: "The gift of a family". At the bottom of the large window representing Our Lord's apparition to the Venerable Margaret-Mary Alacoque, you will inscribe: "Behold this Heart which has loved men so much", and in a corner these words, very legible like all the rest: "Presented by the people of Issoudun". You will inscribe at the bottom of the St. Joseph window in the apse: "St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us", and in the corner whatever Miss Lachâtre will tell you when she sees you about this.

I was in Bourges yesterday and saw the Archbishop. The blessing of our chapel is definitively arranged for June 7, the Feast of the Sacred Heart. This means in effect that we are confidently expecting you to have your commission ready, and you should have it in place one or two days beforehand.

We expect a masterpiece...

I have the honour to be, with the utmost respect, your humble and devoted servant.

Letter from Fr. Crozat (1787-1864), Archpriest of Issoudun, 1829-1861, requesting that one of us (MSC) take over the parish.

No date, likely July 1861

Dear Father,

You inspire me with so much confidence that I am unhesitatingly open-hearted with you. Everything here is confidential excepting the Archbishop.

Issoudun, as you know, is all my concern, and how could it be otherwise? I am thirty years in this parish. Consequently, I actively engage myself with everything which contributes towards its well-being. This town, so difficult to lead, has always caused me concerned anxiety. I have often moaned about its indifference, asking the good Lord for its enlightenment and that it be led to the truth. Such a moment seems to be arriving, if I am not deluding myself. The project which has engaged my thoughts for quite some time will seem extraordinary to you. I present it to you for your consideration also.

If one were to choose a parish priest from the missionaries (of the Sacred Heart), and they will undoubtedly increase in number, it seems to me that these gentlemen, through unity of action, in their togetherness (entente cordiale), in the employment of their focused forces intelligently put to use, invaluable resources for the well-being [of the parish] would be made available. That's what I think. I foresee many problems, but the grace of God can overcome many obstacles. From another perspective, the "Sacred Heart" (parish) would be greatly advantaged by this coming together. It would be securely based and would no longer be apprehensive about eventualities. It would inspire greater confidence, and zealous priests would more wholeheartedly commit themselves to the place. Moreover, this posting would no longer present a [frightening] challenge for a new parish priest. Here then, in so far as I have given it thought, is what I submit to your wisdom and judgment. I for my part will accept his Lordship's decision trustingly and without complaint. Such are the feelings which at this moment motivate me and which, I am quietly confident, will remain constant.

With respectful good wishes, Father, your very humble and devoted servant,

Crozat Guil

I have informed Fr. Chevalier about my views.

Issoudun, Monday, July 29, 1861

Dear Madame,

Aware of the keen interest you have in our work, I hasten to let you know about an important decision. Father Maugenest, priest in charge at the Cathedral, is coming back to us. The parish priest of Issoudun has resigned to favour our position and Fr. Maugenest will have the title (Archpriest) representing the archdiocese. Be so good as to share this important news-item with your good and kind family who are so devoted to us. This is a secret shared by us alone. The two who have resigned have already left for Paris. I greatly regret that I cannot go myself to share all this with Mr. de Linetière; through you I ask him to excuse me.

I have the honour to be, Madame,

J. Chevalier

Émile Sébastian Maugenest, 1829-1918, was involved with Chevalier when he founded the MSCs at Issoudun from 1854 to 1858. He became Archpriest at Bourges Cathedral on January 11, 1858, leaving in September 1861 to become archpriest of Issoudun, where he would remain until December 31, 1872, when he entered the Dominican novitiate.

Dear Madame,

I thank you for all the kind things expressed to me through Mademoiselles Louise and Henriette. (The two daughters of the Marchioness des Méloizes, otherwise Madame Pauline Tharaud de Linetière.) It gives me pleasure to hear that the good people of Bourges continue to support their plan. I hope it will work out. Father Maugenest will be very pleased and the Sacred Heart delighted. Since Father Maugenest no longer lives in Bourges, I doubt if the gift of this stained-glass window will make certain people take umbrage. If his Lordship is still in Paris next week, I shall try to see him. As you show great interest in Issoudun, Madame, I shall say something about the latest happenings here.

Putting it like this anticipates something important, doesn't it? Yes, something very important. It concerns Issoudun's vineyard owners. Some days before their celebrated Feast of St. Vincent, the leading members of the group arrived at the Sacred Heart asking for a Mass on the 22nd, something they never had before. "We want a deacon, a sub-deacon, a substantial sermon and the organ playing to our liking." What do you mean, the organ playing to your liking? What do you mean by that? "We are saying that we want the organ to play the air of our song." Have you got the song? "Yes, Father, here it is." I glanced at it out of curiosity, but quickly. What does it contain? Unspeakable immorality or coarse vulgarity? My friends, the organ will play your St. Vincent (the patron of vineyard owners) if you allow me to compose a new song which I shall send out to all the vineyard owners. My proposal was enthusiastically received and they all went off satisfied.

To cheer you up for a moment, I am forwarding copies of the song, 2,500 of which have been printed at our expense and then distributed to all the good vineyard owners of Issoudun. It is impossible to describe their delight to you. For the past four days the song is heard everywhere. I am sure the old one is dead and buried. On the Feast of St. Vincent the St. Cyr church was tightly packed. Father Maugenest preached a fine sermon very much to their liking. Today these awkward characters, these wild types, are mightily pleased, talking only of their new parish priest and your very humble servant (Chevalier) whom they place on a pedestal higher than the greatest poets... I leave on Monday next for Paris, hoping to be back by Thursday.

Please remember me fondly to your splendid family and please accept, Madame, my deepest regards in the Lord.

Issoudun, March 26, 1862

Dear Madame,

I do not expect to leave Issoudun this year except for three or four days. Fathers Maugenest and Piperon will take responsibility for raising money elsewhere, Fr. Maugenest only agreeing to do so with extreme reluctance, since collecting is not congenial to him, even if he has agreed to do it. I have been asking him for quite some time, having provided him with the requisite ideas, to draw up a circular letter for the approval of his Lordship. He confessed that I was asking something from him beyond his capabilities and felt it was impossible for him to draw up a document for which he had neither ideas or inclination... Aware of Mr. de Linetière's intellectual qualities, I thought of asking him to be kind enough to come to our aid. Could he not draft this little document more appropriately than myself and without too much bother?

Here is what we are looking for: to fund-raise in the Berry (French department) among the clergy, the laity, and in the suffragan dioceses (those attached to Bourges).

Justification. Berry has for quite sometime been consecrated to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. (In 1834 Archbishop de Villèle introduced the Feast of the Sacred Heart to the diocese in order to counteract "the lack of faith". There is no commemorating monument in the diocese recalling this consecration of 1834.) Bourges, as an ecclesiastical province, was publicly and solemnly consecrated to the heart of Jesus at the last Council of Clermont (1850). It would be desirable if the metropolitan diocese built a sanctuary to perpetuate the memory (of this consecration). Mr. de Linetière will shape his letter as he understands it, having recourse to all the means, vibrating all the chords, which he will consider appropriate.

Mr. Tarlier (diocesan architect of the Bourges archdiocese) presently here in Issoudun, tells me that the Archbishop, I believe, intends to make a diocesan charitable appeal to fund the construction of a chapel at Saint-Célestin (Bourges, the diocesan minor seminary). If this is so, it becomes necessary for us to move earlier. Time is running out. Already the foundations have been laid down, twenty feet in depth. They are being filled at this moment. I shall be pleased if the Archbishop (Charles-Aimable de La Tour d'Auvergne) shares the feelings of Messrs. de Linetière and de Méloizes for our work. If he actively wishes us well, it would greatly help us in every respect.

Your Grace,

The support you have shown for the founding of the diocesan Missionaries of the Sacred Heart at Issoudun encourages us to think that you will be kind enough to receive a summary of their position and their requirements. Eight years ago there was only one church in Issoudun to meet the spiritual needs of a population of 14,000. This meant an absolute need for another. It was at that moment a good, well-wishing, clear-sighted man, whom you know (the Sulpician priest Ferdinand de Champgrand, 1813-1881), provided financially for the acquisition of a site to meet the religious aim one had in view. (On this see also Late But Not Too Late, pages 56, 57.) The vocation of the two Issoudun curates drew them to this undertaking. They were granted the necessary authorization by Cardinal Du Pont, together with his paternal encouragement.

A barn was transformed into a chapel; the faithful began to flock there, and the new foundation was straightaway dedicated to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, having in mind the solemn undertaking of the Clermont Provincial Council which, on the proposal of His Eminence, placed the whole ecclesiastical province under this glorious patronage. At the same time that Cardinal Du Pont gave us a name, he was also kind enough to confer on us the title of Diocesan Missionaries. Earlier Archbishop de Villele had placed the diocese of Bourges under the protection, and invocation, of the Sacred Heart by decree, dated May 18, 1834. Our historical genealogy, short though it is, goes back to the Clermont Council, to which we attach, naturally, the greatest significance while striving to make ourselves worthy of such a prestigious beginning. Meanwhile, the provisional chapel was lacking as a solid construction and, impelled by this very necessity, the first stage of a new church is now above ground through quite providential support, and under the supervision and planning of Mr. Tarlier, the diocesan architect, who brings to it that elegant simplicity which embellishes all his work.

The foundation stone of the new building was blessed by Fr. Caillaud, Vicar General of the diocese, on June 26, 1859 (the Sunday within the octave of Corpus Christi). On the 7th of June, 1861, Fr. Lamblin, the Vicar General, blessed the sanctuary, representing Archbishop Menjaud whose health prevented him from coming in person. Archbishop Menjaud had kindly, paternally, supported the work undertaken and the Missionaries. Already Your Grace, one of us (Chevalier himself, see above L 18600 903) has had the pleasure of making a devout trip to Rome, being there favoured with blessings, and the most warm encouragement of the Holy Father for the new church and Missionaries, together with the authorization of a privileged altar, while the pilgrim himself, having been graciously received by the Sovereign Pontiff on the recommendation of Bishop Menjaud, had the title of Missionary Apostolic bestowed upon him. This, then, Your Grace, is the situation at present. The private resources, which have been adequate up to now, have dried up at the moment and the half-constructed new church looks like being in the hands of people who will finish it in the future. It is because we are seeking support, Your Grace, that we come asking you to widen the circle of appeals we are sending out in the name of our dear foundation in order to benefit from the charitable faithful. We have hopes of reaching our target, or closely approximating to it, if Your Grace would kindly approve the accompanying letter (a circular, dated April 3).

The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Issoudun serve the only shrine of this name in the whole ecclesiastical province; it seems to us that because of this circumstance, and the sacred title involved, we might be specifically supported by the bishops, the clergy and the faithful.

To the Bishops of the Province.(Indre) Issoudun, April 3, 1862

Your Grace,

At the last Council of Clermont, held in 1850, Cardinal Du Pont and the Suffragan Bishops consecrated to the divine Heart of Jesus the ecclesiastical province of Bourges in order to draw upon it sovereign mercy. Since then no sanctuary has been raised to recall this precious occasion. The diocesan Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, founded at Issoudun, have formulated a plan to install in that town, at the centre of Berry (the department), a memorial commemorating that moving consecration. In order to take forward this work, already well-advanced, we thought of drawing on the charity of clergy and faithful throughout the dioceses of Bourges, Clermont, Tulle, Limoges, Saint-Flour and Le-Puy.

We are quietly confident that everybody will be keen to contribute towards a memorial of such elevated and general interest. We venture to hope, Your Grace, that you will bless and encourage us in this undertaking. The prestigious approval of Your Grace conveyed to the bishops, the clergy and faithful, will be a most compelling recommendation and a gauge of a most successful outcome.

With deepest respect, we are honoured to be your very humble and devoted servants.

While the ideas in this letter represent Chevalier's known thinking, the letter was most likely written by Mr. Linetière, Madame des Méloizes' father. It jointly accompanied a letter from the Archbishop of Bourges, de la Tour d'Auvergne, April 5, 1861, supporting the appeal, and about which he wrote to Chevalier, immediately following here.

The Archbishop of Bourges

My Dear Father,

I can only encourage your initiative and bless your work. The results already realised due to your tireless zeal draw me to be assured about its success. Very soon, I should like to think that, due to the promotion you have initiated already and what you are yet to receive, you will be on the way towards completing your church of the Sacred Heart, the only one honoured with that name in the ecclesiastical province of Bourges. You will in this way give permanent expression to remembrance of the solemn act whereby our whole province became dedicated to the Sacred Heart of Jesus at the last Clermont Council. At the same time you provide the town of Issoudun with a precious memorial as stylish in its simplicity as it will be useful for the religious resources made available to a huge parish of fourteen thousand people. I offer you, then, my wholehearted good wishes for the success of your enterprise. It will have, I have no doubt, a most propitious impact on the religious and moral future of one of the most important parishes of the diocese. And, following on from my venerable predecessor who exhibited such a fatherly concern for you, I, from the bottom of my heart, call down all God's blessings on your worthy project, on all you have undertaken up to now, and on those you are yet to undertake.

Kindly accept, reverend Father, my warmest greetings in the Lord.

NB: This letter preceded by that which you sent to me will represent approval of your work. The contributions can be forwarded to Bourges, at the Archbishop's office, or to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun (Indre). On the first Friday of each month there is a foundation mass in perpetuity for this work's benefactors. Please pass on this circular.

Dear Madame,

Fr. Crozat will definitely be going to Madame du Quesne's, very likely in September, and, given the weakened condition of the dear old man, and all you yourself are aware of, I am not sure if we shouldn't be saddened by it... The Archbishop is due to come for confirmation at Issoudun on the 6th of August. As you were anxious to have news of my health, I may tell you that it is excellent. Nothing new otherwise.

Dear Madame,

There's nothing new from Issoudun: the Sacred Heart chapel actively goes ahead. I received the latest pictures. I am sending you some of them, both as remembrance card and sample. We are expecting His Grace next Tuesday. He is coming specifically, so he says, to look over the Sacred Heart church. He will only stay for a couple of hours, but is due to return at the end of October for confirmation. I expect to be away for only four of five days during the last fortnight in August.

With all good wishes...

Circular letter concerning the new church.Undated, possibly August 1862

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

M.....

Devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus is a need in our time. It presents two sovereign remedies, love and dedication, which challenge the two great disorders which play havoc with society: indifference and egoism.

Working to spread these virtues is to accomplish something as acceptable in heaven as on earth. One of the most efficacious ways of bringing this about is to build sanctuaries which would be at the heart of this initiative. As Missionaries of this adorable Heart, source of all the graces poured out on humanity, we considered, therefore, building a church in his name where he could bestow his favours and influence his disciples with the sacred fire of his love which he wishes to be spread among all peoples.

Supported by the contributions of some fervent worshippers, we began work on the Church. Lack of resources forced us to suspend the already well-advanced work. Anxious to begin again, we are making a charitable appeal, asking no more than a twenty-centime offering against which we are presenting a very beautiful print of the Sacred Heart. In addition we guarantee a perpetual mass each first Friday of the month, approved by the Archbishop of Bourges, and also special prayers every day. Everyone can share in the advantages, father, mother, children, a brother, a sister, parent, friend, even the departed when one offers a minimal contribution of twenty centimes. We have, thereby, the quiet confidence that all the members of each family share in this worthy work. A twenty-centimes offering entitles one to an unframed picture of the Sacred Heart, and twenty-five a framed one, while forty centimes guarantees a colour picture.

Anybody who contributes a cent will receive without cost an engraved print and share in the benefits we offer. We particularly count on your zeal and piety to distribute, either by yourself or through others, these pictures and collect the proceeds which you will kindly send on to us. We shall be eternally grateful.

Please accept my respectful greetings in the Heart of Jesus,

J. Chevalier

To Father Leblanc, SJ, Paris.(Indre) Issoudun, December 1, 1862

Very Reverend Father,

Father Piperon passed on to me your so kind and caring letter. Many thanks for the interest you show in our work: the divine Heart of Jesus will reward you. You are probably the means he wishes to avail of for consolidating our work. Thanks be to God! I have always held to the belief that God in his goodness had merciful plans for our little house. That conviction is enforced today with your unforeseen contact. Our origins have nothing human characterizing them, and to explain the success of an undertaking which to you appears advanced, permit me, very reverend Father to speak quite frankly to you and let you into the secret of our foundation.

Long since the thought of devoting ourselves to spreading devotion to the Sacred Heart greatly engaged us. We wanted this Heart, unique source of grace, so richly merciful, to have its Missionaries. Nine days before the promulgation of the dogma of the Immaculate Conception in 1854, we addressed the most holy Virgin, asking her to bless the Church, as a first fruit of her wonderful prerogative, with a Society of priests dedicated to the Heart of her divine Son, etc. And on December 8, 1854, we received a miracle-like promise that a charitable benefactor would place such a sum of money at our disposal that we could begin our project. Again it was Mary Immaculate who was responsible for all the approval we needed from Cardinal du Pont (Bourges). Since then all hell has broken loose, with extreme violence directed against this little grain of mustard-seed. Humanly speaking, it should have been rooted up a hundred times by the fierce storms sweeping against it from all directions. Yet, not so! Fruitful and supported by the Heart of Jesus, it has resisted all the storms.

Two years ago, September 28, I knelt before the Holy Father and spoke to him of our Sacred Heart initiative such as it had been heavenly inspired. Pius the Ninth raised his eyes and appeared joyful in the midst of his sorrows. He said to me that the Sacred Heart of Jesus would be the salvation of the world and the Church, that our Society fulfilled a need in our age, that he would like all priests to become part of it, and that every effort be made on our part to spread it. He then gave it his blessing, adding that he would be pleased to acknowledge and approve it canonically.

Might not yourself, Very Reverend Father, help us to pioneer this sweet consolation for the distressed heart of our beloved Holy Father! His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges, is very supportive. In order to promote our apostolate, which greatly engages him, he has, as you are aware, given us responsibility for the parish of Issoudun (there is only the one). The parish priest is, and always will be, a member of our Society. This is very helpful. Our residence is very good and in excellent repair. Our foundation, beside the railway and in the centre of France, is very advantageously situated.

Now, Most Reverend Father, with reference to three priests who have shared with you their projects, we are happy to be one with them, their thoughts and aims coincide with ours. Like you, I see in this coming together divine Providence at work. Several priests for the Lyons diocese, having heard about our work focused on the Sacred Heart, have also expressed the wish to be associated with us. Three of them came to visit us and are presently engaged with their venerable Archbishop to obtain his consent. I see in all these happenings the laying down of bricks by the Divine Architect in the new Sacred Heart building. Let us hope that very soon we shall all be working towards one structure only. If you think it opportune, I could send you an abridged version of our Rules (Constitution) which are still only at the preparatory stage. For the benefit of our work you could let me know what you think.

Please accept, Most Reverend Father, with my esteemed acknowledgement, my deepest regards in the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Mary.

Issoudun, December 9, 1862

J M J

Very Reverend Father,

In 1854 I had as a colleague at Issoudun a priest who, like myself, bemoaned the present state of Christianity. Seeing our century so ill-stricken and the Church so cunningly and hypocritically persecuted, we implored heaven to make available an officious remedy. We came to see the Heart of Jesus as the unique source of every grace. It is necessary, so we judged, to have a Society of priests consecrated to the Heart of the Saviour, whose aim it would be to propagate this devotion and make known the riches it contains and have poured out on souls its love and mercy.

But what could two poor priests, bereft of everything, do in a town which was prey to indifference? Correspondingly, it was the sought-after moment of the proclamation of the Immaculate Conception dogma. We were persuaded, my colleague and I, that the moment could not be more propitious to obtain the heavenly favour we were looking for. We addressed ourselves to Mary Immaculate over the nine days which preceded December 8, 1854, and beseeched her through her special prerogative to hear our prayers if they were in accord with the designs of Providence and give the Church, as an initial reward following from the glory enveloping her, a new Society consecrated to the Heart of Jesus. On the last day of the novena we were miraculously promised that a well-wishing person would make available to us the sum of money needed to commence the undertaking. When problems not likely to be easily overcome were raised by the diocesan authorities, it was Mary Immaculate once more, following on another novena (January, 1855), who secured the approval of Cardinal Du Pont.

Providence ordained also that in Issoudun, where we are in charge of the parish, a house would be made available which is perfectly satisfactory for carrying out our projects. We are setting up a sanctuary in honour of the Sacred Heart, transforming a barn and stable into a chapel. The crowd, driven by I know not what mysterious impetus, crammed into the new place. The envious devil caused it to collapse. Fresh misunderstanding made His Grace ill-disposed, and we were inconsolable when an interdict was served on the use of the chapel. This sore trial did not last long, however. His Grace, the Archbishop, when better counselled, began to support us again. We are now appealing to public good-will in support of a project to build a new church to the glory of the divine Heart on the foundation of our sanctuary. God is coming to our support; soon, thanks to the tangible help of the Sacred Heart, we shall be opening the new building for worship.

On top of all this, heaven brought us another crisis. The companion who began the work with me, despite his tears and unwillingness, was appointed parish priest at Bourges Cathedral by the Cardinal. He is only twenty-eight years old. The appointment amazed everyone. On hearing about it I went quickly to the Cardinal in an attempt to make him change his mind, but to no avail. There are still two of us, as a third priest (Charles Piperon) has recently arrived. Remaining fully confident in the protective care of the divine Heart of Jesus, we continued to pray for the return of our dear confrère and, following a three-year absence, heaven returned him to us. And, no doubt as a reward for our sacrifice, he (Fr. E.S. Maugenes) right at the beginning of his ministry, prompted Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne to place the important parish of Issoudun (15,000 population) in charge of the Sacred Heart foundation, and it is then the former arch-priest of the Metropolitan house (the Cathedral) who, while not being a Missionary of the Sacred Heart himself (but see below), has the title Archpriest of Issoudun.

Maugenes, 1829-1918, had been canon parish priest at Bourges Cathedral from January 11, 1858, and became archpriest of Issoudun September 16, 1862.

Our work at the moment, after eight painful years of suffering, difficulties of all kinds, appears to be stabilized; the Heart of Jesus appears to be favouring it. Some priests from the Berry (department, province) have already joined us. Others, from another diocese (Moulins), having heard about our aims, want to enter the Society and we have well-based hopes of seeing the numbers of priests increase as soon as our Society becomes well known to all who are drawn to work like ourselves. This Society is needed in our century; that is the view of Pius the Ninth. Two years ago I was in Rome, and when commending to the Holy Apostles (Peter, Paul) our little Congregation, I had the signal honour of prostrating myself at the feet of the Holy Father. I spoke of our work for the Sacred Heart, the aim we set ourselves, etc. Having listened to me with great good-will and with an attentiveness that surprised me, he remarked: "Courage, my son, the work about which you speak to me meets a need in our time. I would like to see all priests becoming part of it. Only in the Heart of Jesus is there hope for Church and Society. It is the Sacred Heart who will cure all our ills. Preach this devotion everywhere; it will be the world's salvation. Hurry to set yourselves up; I shall approve you and provide you with the canonical status you are lacking."

I came away happy on hearing these blessed words and with the blessing of the immortal Pontiff on the work that is springing up. Since then the little grain of mustard seed, which seemed to be choking in the brambles and thorns of our little town, has germinated under heaven's favour and advances day by day. Where shall it end? That's the secret of the Heart of Jesus. Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne favours us most kindly; he would like to see our new Society flourishing. We can count on his support and it is quite considerable, not only within the diocese but also outside it, and at Rome in particular.

On the occasion of the first novena in December 1854 we made a promise to the Blessed Virgin that if our prayers were heard we would take for ourselves the title of Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and would endeavour to embody its beautifully deep significance. In addition we promised, as a further token of our gratitude, that we would do our utmost to make her known and loved. This divine Mother came to our aid, inspiring us to call her OUR LADY OF THE SACRED HEART, and to have her honoured in the Church by this lovely title. In this way we proclaim her Sovereign Mistress of the Heart of Jesus! What is more glorious!

I happily take occasion, Very Reverend Father, to let you know how to find the Messenger of the Sacred Heart publication. You realize what I have always dreamed about. You make the Heart of our divine Master the centre where all converges, both in the Old and New Testament, the pivot in Catholicism on which everything turns, the Church's sun, the soul of our souls, the hearth of our love, our religion's cradle, the source of our mysteries, the origin of the sacraments, the pledge of our reconciliation, the world's salvation, the remedy for all our ills, and the Christian's reservoir. This is how I understand devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus; it enfolds everything, answers to everything. (These considerations will be developed later on by Fr. Chevalier in his books on the Sacred Heart of Jesus.) You can see for yourself, Most Reverend Father, the links which join our work with yours; you can gather, as well, what our mission will be like if our Society is set up. I greatly count on your prayers and your support.

I am presenting you with a little collection of hymns in honour of the Sacred Heart which I composed to popular airs to be made available to those who frequent our church. It had been suggested to me that I put them into circulation and this is the fifth edition in fifteen months; I am getting ready for a sixth.

J. Chevalier

Ramière would write an article in his magazine, The Sacred Heart of Jesus Messenger, for July 1863, which mentions Chevalier's young Society among others in France, the Eudists, the Picpus Fathers, the Priests of the Sacred Heart, Bétharam, founded by Michel Garicoïts:

"...but perhaps no other one carries right from its foundation such providential features as the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart recently founded in one of the least promising provinces of France for work of this nature, at Issoudun in the [arch]diocese of Bourges".

Issoudun, December 26, 1862

Dear Reverend Father,

I had to wait until today before I could write to you and send on all the information you needed for your important business. My colleague (Fr. Charles Piperon) was unable to go on the journey about which I spoke to you. No doubt you will have written to him at Fr. Boiteux's address as I suggested. I greatly regret this misunderstanding. I made known to the Archbishop of Bourges the extensive plans (for Chevalier's young Society) which we discussed and based on your admirable Constitutions. His Grace happily approved the whole enterprise. He sees in it what will be for the betterment of the Church and the clergy, and thinks the time could not be more propitious to take the initiative. Like yourself, he believes that one must expedite matters, and as soon as possible since the circumstances are so favourable.

If, in his Memorandum to the French Bishops, Father de Clorivière (SJ, 1735-1820, who in 1814 re-established the Jesuits in France) pointed out the need of the Society (SJ) to combat certain evils likely to challenge religion in the near future, what are we to think of, we witnesses to so much impiety, injustice, infamy, whose ear already hears the crack of the whip on the Church and world? Our worthy Archbishop is convinced that the Holy Father will look with great satisfaction upon this new Society which answers so well the needs of our time. For my part, I had assurance of this from the lips of the Holy Father himself, as I was pleased to inform you in my first letter. Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, who understands and sympathizes so well with things, will make himself available to us in what concerns the success of an undertaking which he regards as being of the utmost importance. We can count on his support. I also informed him that your Very Reverend Provincial (Michel Fessard, SJ, 1802-1893, Provincial at the time Chevalier is writing, 1857-1864), both for the welfare of the Church and the divine Heart of Jesus, greatly wishes to see this Society set up and he, for his part, will do his utmost to bring this about. Moreover, I requested him to get more of his priests to draw up a blueprint for Constitutions and keep us informed about this important undertaking. He was himself pleased about this and thought that the work should be done as soon as possible so that the Society based on these Constitutions could become a proper religious order, approved by the Holy See. While awaiting this approval, which, as far as can be gathered, is granted fairly easily, we shall be under the immediate jurisdiction of the bishops.

Like yourselves and like us he appreciates, in the interest of the Institute, how necessary it is to have a communal house which would be a centre of animation for this great body, like a hearth of divine love imbuing all the members with warmth and hope, a centre to which all converge as a rallying point for dispersed members living on their own or in community, either with vows or promises. In this fashion we observably live the religious life so long as the law of the State permits it. Then, if the storm comes to break things up, we would take refuge in silence. As for those other priests who live apart and separately, they should not be left unaware as to who they are and that what they contribute is needed if something worthwhile is to be accomplished. The Society accepts all forms of ministry which promote the glory of God, the divine Heart and the salvation of souls. The motto would be: FOR THE GLORY OF GOD AND THE MOST SACRED HEART OF JESUS.

This Society, a daughter of yours, would be its radiance and expansion. We would look upon the great St. Ignatius as our Founder, united to him by the closest and most sacred of bonds. It would be our glory and our strength to be enriched from your enlightenment and experience. This Society of the Heart of Jesus, supported by yours and drawing upon it, is extending its work out to the heart of the countryside and among the clergy at every level, would resist diabolical forces and be of tremendous service both to Church and Society. As with Father de Clorivière, it would be our intention to share the advantages of this Society with lay people living in the world who would have the desire and likelihood of sharing it, although remaining within the different institutions in which they have been placed by Providence and from which they cannot disengage. I would see, therein, a very great advantage, complementing, I believe, the work. Addressing this very issue, I know several lay people who would gladly enter this Society. My Issoudun confrères were delighted when I told them, following my visit to Paris. Anticipatedly, they accept appreciatively the new constitutions you are working on for us. They are delighted to know that you are engaged on this undertaking and that you work with as much zeal as intelligence to ensure that it has solid foundations. Greatly interested, they read Father de Clorivière's association (of membership) plan. That's what we want also... Many priests in the Berry and elsewhere impatiently await this new organization. If, in the interests of our dear work of the Sacred Heart, we should take ourselves to the College of the Immaculate Conception at Vaugirard, you have only to let me know in advance.

Be so kind as to convey my humble respects and lively gratitude to your Very Reverend Father Provincial and my good wishes also to the Rector and kind Father Bieuville. Tell the latter, always so good to us, that I shall be writing to him shortly.

I have the honour to remain, my Most Reverend Father, with the greatest respect and most gracious feeling, your obedient servant in the Hearts of Jesus and Mary.

J. Chevalier
Miss. Ap. of the Sacred Heart.

PS: I commend myself to your good and fervent prayers. Pray as much as possible for the success of our important undertaking. I have sent you several parcels with pictures and some hymns to the Sacred Heart. I also take occasion to return the key I forgot to give you when coming away. Pardon me! Write to me soon and let me know what you think and what the Reverend Father Provincial also thinks of our project.

Most Reverend Father, how kind you are. Thanks a thousand for kindly remembering us and the sincere good wishes you extend for the success of a work which is so dear to us all. May the divine Heart of Jesus, which holds for you in particular a very special place in promoting worship and creating a Society specifically devoted to that aim, answer your wishes and ours! My fateful trip to Vaugirard, my being honoured with your confidences, the intimate and precious sharing with your Fathers, the agreement in feelings and outlook on which I commented as being characteristic of our discussions, convinced me that God wanted to use your Society, and particularly yourself, to lay a solid and lasting foundation for this work of the Sacred Heart which seems to answer so well to the wishes of Our Lord and the needs of Church and Society. My confrères, with whom I shared my thoughts, think the same as myself. We looked at Father de Clorivière's plan for the Society; it is exactly what we ourselves have always wanted to do. What a coincidence! In order, Very Reverend Father, to meet the needs of divine Providence, we would like to be docile-like instruments in your hands, founding with you and through you a solid enterprise, with your Constitution and spirit a basis for it. This new Society would be the daughter of yours, remaining united to it by the most close and sacred ties...

Very Reverend Father,

The more we study the work of the Sacred Heart in Father de Clorivière's valued writings, the more we sense our opportunity. It is an absolute need for our century, likely to be greatly helpful to the clergy and the Church. Moreover, Pius the Ninth, the greatest saint of our time, this man inspired by God, would have it so and wholeheartedly calls for it. It becomes then for us a duty to work towards establishing and placing it on a solid foundation. And as you wrote to me one time, there is a need to get going. The Archbishop of Bourges, whom I saw again recently, greatly wishes it. He wants us to become definitively organized, and all the procedures should be in readiness for the beatification of the Venerable Margaret-Mary (Alacoque) which, in his view, will not be long in taking place. He informed me that this particular time would favour our recognition and approval by the Holy Father. He himself would authorize it. Is not this powerful patronage providential? His Grace lays great store on yourself also for the advancement of this work. Going on all I have said to him, he thinks, like us, that this new Society shall be a daughter of yours, and that it should find its sap and its life in your Constitutions, in your organization, spirit, assistance, and in that holy bonding which should unite us. We shall be an expansion, another radiance (glow) of the Society of Jesus, of whom the venerable Margaret-Mary said that it was clearly revealed to her that through the ministry of the Jesuits, devotion to the Sacred Heart would be everywhere established.

How thankful I am for the concern you have for us, the fervent prayer you bring to Our Lord for our spiritual well-being, the hope you articulate for our work's success and the reign of the Sacred Heart in all hearts. Yes, may He be loved by all everywhere, especially by His Missionaries. Indeed I petition for us this embracing love, this love which makes the greatest sacrifices pleasant, and draws us to give ourselves unceasingly for the glory of the Divine Master. In a word, ask for your new-born children the spirit and virtues of your incomparable Order. Kind Father Leblanc (de Lespinasse) has just written a very interesting and warm letter to us, also Father Ramière, that very committed apostle of the Heart of Jesus. This holy religious, like you Reverend Father, sees this new apostolate for the Sacred Heart as meeting a need of our time and, as well, a powerful source of holiness for the clergy...

Dear Countess,

I should have very much liked to share with you much earlier at the beginning of the new year my good wishes for you and your darling child, but each day a heavy work-load became an obstacle from which my heart was weighed down. I should like you to forgive me. If the Heart of Jesus, source of so much goodness and mercy, is willing to be sensitive to my wishes, and about which I am confident, you will have whatever constitutes true happiness.

Aware, Madame Countess, of the great interest you have in our work, I should like to inform you that we are very likely about to welcome new recruits. I commend this matter to your prayers. Once you suggested to me that I should consider preaching a Charity sermon in Paris. When I proposed this to the Archbishop he very much approved it. But would the new Archbishop approve? Next, what parish in Paris should one choose? Who would one have as preacher? Who are the fund-raising women? I need your help and enlightenment. The Archbishop of Bourges is well disposed; he is prepared to write a letter recommending us to the Capitular Vicars or even to the new Archbishop himself, to the parish priest of the parish named by us, or the preacher who is acceptable.

Since I have to go to Paris to pursue negotiations about this issue, could you not forward to me a commendatory letter for Father Surat, the Vicar General, whom you know? Having the ear of the Archbishop, he could be very helpful to us. What do you think? What parish should we decide on, the richest, the most generous, that where we might have the opportunity to be successful. Would St. Sulpice be suitable? Be so kind as to let me know. Whom should we choose among the fund-raising women? You who know high society, who are those who would best promote our cause? How many should be involved? We have considered Bishop Dupanloup as preacher. (Félix Dupanloup, 1802-1878, Bishop of Orléans from 1849, a leading proponent of liberal Catholicism who was opposed to the proclamation of Papal Infallibility as not being opportune. A member of the Senate from 1876.) We hope he will accept the invitation. I expect to go to Orléans early in February to make this request. Could you, yourself, in some way help me in this delicate task? We still need 20,000 francs (one franc is roughly 350 euros) to complete our chapel, and at this moment we need 10,000 francs without any idea as to where we might get it. This, in effect, means that we need to find 30,000 francs. There are days when I am very heavy-hearted. God alone knows the extent of my concerns. For all that, I give myself to Divine Providence, hoping that we shall not be embarrassed. If we could organise this (financial) appeal, with Bishop Dupanloup as preacher, we could, perhaps, benefit by 10,000 francs.

Dear Father Crozat, whose feast (St. William) we celebrate today, remains calm and rational, despite the noticeable impoverishment of his ideas. Let's hope he can keep on like this. Your good and fervent Vincentian Sisters are well. The storm which made my sister Julie shaken, and about which she spoke to you, has passed over: all is now calm. (Julie Gaillard, 1824-1900, had come with two other sisters to open a Sisters of Charity convent at Issoudun in November 1859 at the request and, presumably, financial support of Countess du Quesne.) God reserves great disillusionment for those who set a family at logger-heads; keep calm and all will work out. I hope to have more news for you in a couple of months. The lovely and wonderful thought of setting up an orphanage, which was your idea, has won over Issoudun's municipal council. The approval of these gentlemen and the yearly aid they provide, however little, is, in my opinion, very significant. The break through is made. That's what is important. Now it will not take long before it succumbs to assault. Sister Gaillard very likely has forwarded the council deliberations.

I was in Bourges the other day. I saw Mr. Fosset in his new apartment and his health was quite good, appearing happy and contented. But is he really so? I doubt it somewhat if one contrasts his life today and the way it used to be. Nevertheless, since to all appearances his words are being confirmed, one must accept what he says.

Having travelled in England, Scotland, Lorraine, Switzerland, Savoie, Father Fosset was appointed Prefect of Studies at Saint-Célestin minor seminary in his native town of Bourges. A family friend of the du Quesne family from childhood, he was a frequent visitor at the Visitation chateau. On becoming an honorary canon from 1869, he spent a long retirement at Issoudun as the du Quesne's family chaplain until his death.

Be so good as to offer my good wishes and regards to Madame Cottureau and Madame de Larochère, and remember me to Mademoiselle Marie (the twelve-year-old daughter of Madame du Quesne).

Please accept, Countess, this expression of my regards as I have the honour to be, in the Lord, your very humble and most obedient servant,

J. Chevalier

I am beholden to your discretion for all I have shared with you. Madame Moreau, who works for Father Crozat, would be very grateful to you if you could help to get her into the navy as a ship's boy.

Dear Reverend Father,

I have just received in the post the little parcel you promised me. How kind of you! I don't know how to express my thanks. These two books are worth more than their weight in gold. A thousand thanks.

1. As the proceedings of the Paris meeting (that of the Orléans diocesan priests, August 26-27, 1862) are somewhat lengthy and in respects uninteresting, I am sending on to you an authentic summary. If, however, you would like to have it complete, I could send you a copy.
2. I appreciate your advice (to be cautious, to weigh matters), we shall not be hurrying up our amalgamation. As I have to go to Orléans next Tuesday, I shall have a chat with these gentlemen; then I shall inform you about the trip. (Leblanc had advised Chevalier to move forward cautiously as there was still much to do on his side for the shaping of his structures. This would hold particularly for any relationship with diocesan clergy.) The general president (of a group of interested clergy) lived in Orléans. This good priest wrote to say that he was delighted to hear of our enterprise and he was convinced that for them it was Providence's final word.
3. So far as the laity are concerned, your advice is too wise not to follow it. It is better to wait than to leave oneself open to questionable action by moving too precipitately. On this issue, as well as all the others, we shall abide by your enlightening counsel and experience. You understand so well our work, the needs of the time, and the wishes of the Heart of Jesus.
4. One of our aims is to spread devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus and make reparation by a saintly life for the outrages to which he is subjected. To this end, every first Friday of the month we have pious exercises with the participation of the faithful. These gatherings are very edifying. When we encounter fervent souls we strive to make them adorers and victims of Jesus' Divine Heart. Reparation to the Sacred Heart of Jesus is also a need in our century; the iniquities characterizing our age are so distressing! For the rest, it is meeting the wishes of the Sacred Heart. (Leblanc was supporting: "Yes, hold fast to your aim to honour and make reparation to the Divine Heart.")
5. Like you, I think that the vow of stability becomes pointless with perpetual vows. If you think it opportune, you could replace it with that of submission to the wishes of the Holy Father. As you say, the stability vow could have its place among the annual vows and would even be necessary.
6. Yes, what becomes most important is the setting up of an organization of vowed priests and an abridged plan of the Institute which could be presented for approval to the Holy Father. Most Reverend Father, this Sacred Heart enterprise is greatly indebted to you; it really will be your Society's daughter. How wonderful are the designs of God!

There were three Jesuits, led by Leblanc, engaged with Chevalier in providing him with a well thought out blue-print for a new Society, Joseph Bertrand, and the already-mentioned Provincial P.M. Fessard. At this particular time they wanted Chevalier to be content with an abridged plan, "...un plan abrégé...", which should be presented for approval to the Pope. Later, little by little, the Constitutions would take shape. Meanwhile the three Jesuits were working on the abridged plan which would be critically looked over by Chevalier before taking counsel with the Archbishop of Bourges about the next, and best, course of action when getting the Holy See involved.

It may well happen that I shall be going to Paris at the beginning of Lent to deal with issues concerning our church (here). I could take advantage of this trip to call on you. It is likely that by Trinity Sunday we shall have two or three more priests with us. If this is so, we would like your Very Reverend Father Provincial to send one of his priests to give us a retreat and stay with us for sometime to train us well in the religious life. Be so kind as to convey my sincere good wishes to dear Father Bieuville.

Stanislaus Bieuville, SJ, 1824-1876, was associated with Chevalier's Issoudun from 1862 when, in August that year, he came to live at Bourges. Many of the pioneer MSCs advantageously used his book on the Spiritual Exercises of St. Ignatius.

We begin, today, the 29th (January), a novena for the advancement of our work. All the Visitation convents ("monastères" Chevalier writes) to which I have written are doing it (the novena) with us. You might like to join in with them.

Please accept, most kind and reverend Father, my sincere good wishes and deepest, respectful, gratitude in the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary.

Issoudun, February 8, 1863

I did travel to Orléans (likely date February 3, 186) and I talked for quite a while to Bishop Dupanloup who is very taken by our work, saying more than once that it met a pressing challenge in our time and needed to be taken forward committedly, and God, most certainly, would bless it. He mentioned something I was already aware of, that a number of his priests intended to join us. "If your Sacred Heart Society," he went on, "is solidly and widely structured, it will be a strong force for the episcopacy and the Church's salvation. Take heart! You may count on my help and support."

I also met the President of the Sacred Heart Society (Father Victor-Emmanuel Lebeurier) of whom I have spoken to you, together with another influential priest who was with him. We spoke a lot about the project, its organization, etc. We agreed that in laying down solid and lasting foundations, making it significantly important to the Church, helpful to believers and contributing to the glory of the Heart of Jesus, a strong and trustworthy Constitution with the religious vows was needed, modelled on the way they are practised in your Institute. One would also accept a number of associated or affiliated members who would only make promises. The big problem as we saw it is the understanding of the vows of obedience and poverty for those religious living outside their community, what their duties, obligations, would be, what requirements were called for with regard to these two virtues. How far can one go? What are the limits within which one must operate, etc.? Reconciling the Ordinary's (Bishop's) rights and those of the Society's Superiors over the subjects. We are dependent entirely (here) on your work and we very much hope that you will smooth out all these problems.

Clergy opposition (pencilled in).

Every effort must be made to have the Society's members living two together. Only in the case of need can living in isolation be accepted, and where it is so the individual who lives on his own must have frequent contact with the Superior, keeping close to his confrères and often visiting them. With regard to church revenue, should all proceeds go to the titular parish? Or might not the Society have a share, and what amount? A fifth, perhaps. For those future members who will be immovable parish priests, should it be like the way it is in Issoudun? It is a requirement on being appointed that they write and hand to their Superior the foregoing of their entitlements so that the Bishop, also the Superior, is more free to act as he sees fit. I also met Fr. Gaduel. (A Marseilles-born priest who favoured priest associations among diocesan priests. He was a professor at the Orléans major seminary and Bishop Dupanloup made him his Vicar General.) This saintly priest prefers purely diocesan societies without vows, needing no outside Superior.

After much discussion, drawing on experience as well as reason, he understood that a parallel undertaking would have no future, like laying a foundation on moving sand; he has now come to share our view. When with these priests at Orléans we arranged that during the upcoming holidays all those priests from different dioceses interested in joining the new Society could gather at Issoudun in our house of the Sacred Heart, perhaps forty in number, and make a retreat together which one of your Fathers, chosen by Father Fessard (the Provincial), would preach, and there, in recollection, under the impact of grace and the light of the Holy Spirit, we would give consideration to the Constitutions which you have prepared for us. We would have our elections and the Society would be definitively founded. The retreat would begin on the Monday which follows the feast of the Holy Virgin's Assumption.

This gathering was presided over by Father Bertrand, SJ, see immediately previous letter, and did not have the hoped-for impact since many priests who were expected did not turn up.

You can see then, Very Reverend Father, that the Providential designs on this work are more and more coming to light. I am sure that we are close to that significant moment for the work to be placed on a solid and lasting foundation. Let it be so! Let it be so! For God's greater glory and that of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

Be so kind as to convey my regards to good Father Bieuville and recommend me to his prayers. I venture to ask for yours also, most worthy and honoured Father, and together with our gratitude please accept my kindest regards in the Lord.

Issoudun, February 17, 1863

Dear Madame,

I feel ashamed to have waited so long without replying to you. A thousand things arrived to leave me without any leisure; please pardon me and I lay great store by your indulgence.

From what you tell me, I am struck by your zeal, your recommendation and your insight. Everything has been set up just as you had so kindly informed me and it looks like being a complete success. I have had no letter so far from Fr. Lamblin (the Bourges Vicar General); he hasn't time because he has so much to do. I am going to him about something else and this may move him. On reflection, it is better to act on ones own initiative and keep extraneous matters separate from our work; you are absolutely right. Mr. de Linetière is so kind in engaging himself with our interests. How good-hearted! How highly intelligent! Convey to him my deep respect and warm regards.

Mr. Borget, as you bring out very well, could also be somewhat useful to us. Let us hope that giving ourselves time and being patient we shall end up successfully overcoming all the obstacles which come in the way of achieving our aims. I must tell you that Father de Champgrand has been staying with us since Sunday. I haven't the words to describe his happiness. He is enraptured. The chapel, the house, the gathering of worshippers at the Sacred Heart (chapel) have moved him to tears. It was he who preached at the reunion we had at the Sacred Heart yesterday (it rained a lot), and he couldn't prevent himself in his sermon from letting it be known what joy he was experiencing. In paying a most marvellous tribute to our work he went on to predict a wonderful future, etc., etc. "Coming to pray in this new chapel for the first time," he declared, "I am overcome by a sense of happiness such as I could never share with you. I underwent one of those joyous experiences which are only associated with Heaven. For a moment I thought I was on Thabor and, like St. Peter, experiencing such ineffable delight, I (too) cried out: 'Lord how good it is to be here'." The saintly man leaves this morning, taking away with him from the Sacred Heart the most favourable impression, promising to return when the weather is better.

F. de Champgrand was the original benefactor in December 1854 of the new Chevalier-Maugenest foundation; the immediate circumstances are described in Late But Not Too Late, pages 52-60,63. This visit to Issoudun, almost nine years later, led this year, August 24 1863, to the legal transfer of the Sacred Heart property at Issoudun to Chevalier. Again as mentioned in Late But Not Too Late, the Sulpician de Champgrand had been a professor at the Sulpicians' major seminary at Bordeaux from 1837 to 1860 when ill-health led him into retirement at the family home in Bourges and from there he gave courses at Bourges major seminary in Liturgy and Homiletics.

With kindest regards, and commend me to the prayers of Madame Linetière, Mesdemoiselles Louise and Henriette, also Madame de Verneuil.

The latter was very much a promoter of Chevalier's work; Mr. and Mrs. De Linetière were the parents of Pauline des Méloizes, Louise and Henriette the latter's daughters.

Dear Madame,

Like you, I also hope that divine Providence, aware of our objectives and the circumstances in which we find ourselves, will powerfully come to our aid. The past and the present bring us a little of the future. When making the appeal, I did not in any way mention the number and cost of the tickets, the amount and cost of the lottery, or the place and time of the draw. (The occasion being the completion of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun.) A letter has been sent from the Town Hall to the Mayor of Issoudun asking about the lottery details. What does your good and devout family, to whom I send respectful greetings, think about all this? I shall not reply until I get your letter. Thanks for letting me know the day the Archbishop leaves because I would have availed of this worthwhile notification if I needed to contact him. My health, despite the tiredness, holds up well. I pray earnestly that you and all those near to you remain buoyantly happy.

Together with my good wishes, please accept, Madame, my deep regard in Our Lord.

Issoudun, April 9, 1863

Very Reverend Father,

I was so happy to hear from you as I thought you might have been laid up. Many thanks for the keen interest you bring to our work and for your efforts to provide some resources for us. The sanctuary in honour of the Sacred Heart is all but finished; it is truly a shrine. The spire of the building will be topped by a statue of the Sacred Heart which is being worked on at the present time. Jesus will be there, exhibiting to France, the world, his divine Heart so rightly merciful. There is something marvellous, providential, about this edifice at the centre of France, being raised through public contributions, the offerings of rich and poor. What would this Sacred Heart not give in return as the source of all grace? We would like to have the general consecration this coming August, but I am not sure if we shall be ready... Just recently I received a letter from the President of the Orléans priests of the Sacred Heart (Father Victor Emmanuel Lebeurier, Sulpician) informing me that these priests, most of them involved in ministry, could not stay in Issoudun more than four or five days. The Retreat begins on the evening of August 17 and is due to end on the evening of the 21st. I want Reverend Father Provincial to know about this change, and I am obliged to you for letting me know the day he arrives in Paris. Very Reverend Father I am much obliged to you for sending on the rules (regulations) which you had been working on as soon as they were ready. We shall have great pleasure in making ourselves conversant with them. I entreat you: see to it that the Institute, while fostering the common life among the clergy, is essentially focused on the Sacred Heart of Jesus and charged with spreading this devotion everywhere. This is absolutely essential. Both Apostles and Victims are in debt to the Heart of Jesus. From all sides I get letters asking if we have a Sacred Heart Third Order for laity, like those of St. Francis and St. Dominic. Does not this common thrust of hearts towards the Heart of our dear Master not prove that the reign of the Sacred Heart has arrived! Let it be so! Let it be so!

To calm down the impatient devotees of the Heart of Jesus, I forwarded provisional regulations and the plan of the association itself, a copy of which I am forwarding to you (Chevalier's Third Order plan). Many young people from all classes of society, and mainly from the well-to-do class, write asking if we have not also a community for women dedicated to the Sacred Heart, a counterpart of ours. Over ten years I have also considered this possibility; you are the only one to whom I have mentioned this. What do you think? And what does Fr. Provincial think? It is the distribution of the Sacred Heart pictures which has drawn attention to our work... On the forthcoming feast of Trinity two new priests will be joining us. My respectful good wishes to the fathers. I commend myself to your prayers, also our work of the Sacred Heart.

With appreciative thanks, my deepest regards in the Hearts of Jesus and Mary.

Plan of the Sacred Heart Third Order; and provisional Regulations.

The aim of the Sacred Heart Third Order

Those who enrol should aim to:

1. work more advantageously at their perfection through very powerful means of sanctification made available in the Heart of Jesus;
2. have a particular devotion to the Sacred Heart and a widespread propagation of this devotion;
3. make reparation for the insults to which the Heart of Jesus is subjected by living an edifying and pious life, and to this end accepting all the hardships, problems, privations, strain, all one's work and achievements.

General Regulations

1. Those who enter the Third Order are expected to be pious and of good repute. They must be presented to the priest director and to the president (this last meaning a lady for women, a man for men) on the recommendation of three tertiaries and the advice of their confessors.
2. After a one- or two-month interval as aspirants, the priest director admits them as novices in a special ceremony by blessing a pencil-thin ribbon of white and red wool, taking the place of the religious habit, to be worn under one's clothes night and day so far as this is possible.
3. Each novice adds to the baptismal name that of the Sacred Heart, e.g., "Louise of the Sacred Heart".
4. Profession does not take place until a year after this (induction) ceremony.
5. Sacred Heart Tertiaries, while remaining in the world, can, if supported by their confessor, take the vows of poverty, chastity, obedience.
6. It is the Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart who will also be the Third Order's Superior. It is he who will authorize diocesan priests to admit candidates into the Sacred Heart Third Order.
7. All members, whether female or male, if they can conveniently do so, will write every three or four months to the Superior making him aware in a general way of their public life style.

Each Day

1. Members, in so far as it is possible, should rise and retire at regular hours, 7am in winter, 8 in summer, and sleep for no more than eight hours.
2. Morning and evening they will say a communal prayer which will be sent to all of them, and each day they will give themselves to meditation for half an hour, or, at the least, a quarter of an hour.
3. Go to Mass each day in so far as this is possible. Begin and end one's work and meals with a prayer, preceded by this invocation: "May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved," followed by this one: "Sacred Heart of Jesus, have pity on us."
4. At all hours of the day, if one thinks of it, say: "Divine Heart of Jesus make me love you more and more."
5. Say each day the little office of the Sacred Heart if one is able to read; if not say thirty-three times "Our Father" and "I hail you Mary", honouring those thirty-three years this divine Heart of Jesus drew breath on earth.
6. Make a visit to the Blessed Sacrament every day, if possible lasting a half hour, and engage in spiritual reading, also for half an hour.
7. Each day for an hour, from 2pm to 3pm, for example, lay aside a time for silence in order to associate oneself with the sufferings of the Heart of Jesus during His Passion.
8. Carry out one's responsibilities committedly, edifyingly and punctually.
9. Apply oneself to the practise of all the virtues, especially those of kindness and humility, favourites of the Heart of Jesus and the Association.
10. Try to teach uneducated youngsters and aid the poor, visit the sick, provide solace for the unhappy and edify the neighbours.

11. Avoid being conceited and the boisterous experience of pleasure; keep only to necessary contact with the world.
  12. Avoid gatherings, encounters, questionable or frivolous talks.
  13. Recite every day at least ten decades of the Rosary.
  14. Be tenderly devoted to the divine Heart of Mary.
  15. Insofar as it is possible, prepare the morning's meditation the previous evening and do not go to bed later than 10pm.
- Go to sleep with good thoughts and give oneself over to the merciful Heart of Jesus who always watches over us.

Each Week

1. Regularly attend all the parish services.
2. Try to communicate each Sunday and more often if your confessor allows it.
3. Each Friday impose upon yourself some little privation at meals.
4. On Sunday, if there is nothing to the contrary, the Tertiaries should get together if there are a number in the same area, one of whom will be chosen as president by the priest-director, and over an hour and a half they will edify themselves in sharing, or through uplifting readings.

Each Month

1. The Sacred Heart Tertiaries will go to Confession at least once a month and take Communion according to the recommendation of their Director.
2. If it's not detrimental to their health they will fast on the first Friday of the month.
3. Once each month they will meet, preferably the first Friday or the following Sunday, under the supervision of the priest-director. He will inform himself about the Third Order and how it fares, encourage perseverance and stimulate morale among the members, etc. and end with a little talk on devotion to the Sacred Heart.
4. The Tertiaries will do their utmost to give themselves to recollection, as if on Retreat, each monthly first Friday so long as it isn't in conflict with their work.

Each Year

1. The Sacred Heart Tertiaries will try to make a little retreat of two or three days' duration. The director will take charge of the exercise if the numbers are sufficiently large.
2. Each member of the Third Order will have one Mass offered each year for all Associated members, living and dead.

Issoudun, April 20, 1863

Dear Reverend Father,

I greatly regret that I have waited so long, too long, to write to you. It became quite impossible to do so until now; I should, very much, like you to forgive me. I was away. I received the Association Plan to which you refer in your letter. (Otherwise, the blue-print plan of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, on which the Jesuits at Rue de Vaugirard, Paris, during the years 1862-1865 had co-operated with Chevalier, hence the name 'Plan Vaugirard'.) We have considered it with great interest. Thanks, thanks a thousand times. It expresses perfectly the aim we had in mind for ourselves. You have done so well in knowing how to reconcile the practise of the vows of poverty and obedience with the different obligations of the members. It is an overwhelming issue which you have ironed out.

Allow me, Reverend Father, to speak candidly and share our views with you. I can well believe they are lacking substance, but you will evaluate them, and take no notice, I suggest, of those which are not worthwhile. We had hoped that this plan (blue print) would be more comprehensive, or perhaps we had been expecting more than a plan. I understood that dear Father Leblanc, with whom I shared my views, had discussed them with you. We were agreed that the new Society should have:

1. The same internal organization as that of St. Ignatius and the same Constitutions, and that you would provide positive and detailed regulations: a) for the general and constitutive administration of the Society; b) for those of its members living in community since we acknowledged their absolute need; c) for those who would be living on their own; d) for those affiliated, but without vows, that is to say a Third Order.
2. Requirements for entry, the form and length of the novitiate, the different types of vows: annual, perpetual; vows of stability; all of this needed to be evaluated.
3. This Society, sooner or later, would need to submit itself for Rome's approval, its sanction derived from the Holy Father alone. It is in this context that the Constitutions were formulated.
4. There has to be present unity of purpose, interests, administration, a mother house to which all the others relate, making allowances for a certain autonomy and, as well, respecting the rights of their lordships the bishops.

This is how the Archbishop of Bourges and my confrères understand the new Society's organizational framework. All those small Sacred Heart organizations which are found in different dioceses form between them one confederation, but the participants do not find the linkage satisfactory. They want a basis of more solid unity. It is to achieve this, having felt the need, that the leaders among them are due to meet at Issoudun, August 17. The plan, which you have been so kind to send me, will not satisfy, or meet the aims of that which is being suggested, or so I fear. It leaves too much still to be undertaken by those who expect to find everything ready and needing only to be underwritten after some discussion. This is the frame of mind in which, quite recently, the President of all those different associations wrote to me.

These little diocesan associations which like to preserve their autonomy, expressing their own particular life style for all that they have the same aim and name and are united in the bond of wholehearted love, nevertheless are conscious of a compelling need to become only one body and one society if important and solidly lasting work is to be achieved. Is not the experience you seek there already? To wait any longer would perhaps jeopardise the work. When each group has its own particular spirit, preconceived ideas, prejudices, internal splits, the attempt to unite them creates inextricable problems. If the issues are insurmountable, these societies, and rightly so, will remain specifically diocesan. But what is the future for diocesan societies? Experience shows that they have no future. Sooner or later they end up by disappearing when they have become part of more or less scandalous in-fighting. Moreover, these associations, only answerable to themselves, are entirely in the control of the bishops, that is to say a Vicar who may have more or less of a religious spirit, etc., etc. It is he who animates and is the mainspring, but may well give way to another who is either hostile or favourable, who adds, changes, holds back, retrenches. Do you not see that such a state of affairs constitutes a grave problem? On the other hand, establishing a work on a sound basis with approved Constitutions for an organization that is uniformly widespread, while safeguarding all the bishops' rights, creates a special family atmosphere fostering in all its members warmth and vitality, with a common centre of convergence which promotes common, shared, action. Do you not recognize here much greater possibilities? The regulations governing this Society, when sanctioned by the Holy See, would become fixed, unchangeable, impervious to whim. Nothing, for all that, should prevent such a society when setting itself up in a diocese from being responsive to the particular regulations, customs, needs which are a feature of the area. I can see an essential difference between the independent monastic houses, to which you refer, and diocesan associations.

1. The former have a common rule approved by Rome which cannot be changed.
2. They have enclosure which safeguards against many worries and is the basis of the common life for all the members.
3. They do not come under direct episcopal jurisdiction.
4. The activities to which they give themselves do not lead to a slackening of discipline or to dissipation.
5. Discipline is stricter, the means of control more forceful.

If, later on, when the Society's spirit has made an impact, and the Constitutions are being well kept, the well-being of the enterprise called for the separation of the different diocesan houses, it would be carried out. We are also of the view, Reverend Father, that for the good of the work it might be necessary to set up, like yours, independent novitiates which could draw on those young men whom the bishops would easily let go, especially if the training had to be paid for. In this way the Society could best expand in the different diocese. The houses established for itself would become diocesan centres for those priests in the diocese who wanted to become part of this work. For, without the latter, how can there be any training of newcomers for the religious life? These houses would be novitiates, something to be foreseen in the Constitutions. As for the plan, and discretion, it should only be withheld where absolutely necessary; otherwise one does well to commend it. If you think you should take into account these observations, also shared by the Archbishop of Bourges. I would ask you, then, Reverend Father, to provide us with a new detailed Plan and the same for the Constitutions. Meanwhile, since the matter is very important, having a bearing on the future of our undertaking which could be very beneficial to the Church, I wonder if it would be possible for you to come and preach the preparatory Retreat for the feast of the Sacred Heart which is a normal occurrence each year in our chapel for the good Issoudun faithful, they shall be greatly pleased if you can do so. Be so kind as to speak about this to Father Provincial. When here we can discuss and hear each other's point of view.

Since the month of the Sacred Heart is celebrated in our chapel and there is a big attendance, and it is agreeable to you to stay with us until the end of June, we shall have still more time to explain our views to each other. You will have no more to give than a little talk each evening over the course of the month.

Like yourself, I also think that four days is not enough for the Retreat beginning on the 19th of August. I am going to write to these people and ask that it be prolonged. (Joseph Bertrand, SJ, the recipient of this letter was due to give the Retreat from the evening of August 17 until the evening of the 21st.) According to the notification I have got, we shall be a good thirty at this Retreat. You could well stretch it to eight days. Those who are most caught for time, and I shouldn't imagine there will be many of them, will leave, and that's it. (According to Father Piperon, Chevalier's close colleague, Chevalier's aim was to 'reunite', gather, all the Sacred Heart associations of priests into unity and affiliate them to the Society, MSC, by means of one common rule.) We are formally accepted in the Archdiocese of Bourges, both by the Archbishop and the clergy. What is more, Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, has approved of our work, its aim, and it is his wish to see priests engaged in the ministry joining it... (There is a significant difference between entire support for the Society's aims and becoming a canonical member.) There is, then, nothing objectionable about coming to Issoudun's Sacred Heart. The situation is all the more favourable for the fact that the parish, something special, given its population of 14,000, has been handed over to our little Society, and it is one of ours who is parish priest. (Fr. Maugenest, Chevalier's earliest colleague, was at the St. Cyr presbytery from September 17, 1861, with two diocesan centres, but he did not remain with the Society, see above, Maugenest, also below and Late But Not Too Late, pages 52-60,63.)

Further clarification of the foregoing letter.

The Jesuit archives in the dossier dealing with Issoudun contain the personal comments of Father Leblanc (de Lespinasse) for the dates April 14, 22, 1863, and of which there is another copy, June 4, the same year. These comments suggest that the author is not altogether happy and suggest the need for greater prudence from the side of the Vaugirard Jesuits. The opinions expressed on the 22nd of April were approved by the Provincial (Fessard):

I fear the Company may be seriously compromised if we are to become involved with these gentlemen. Here there is little likelihood of anything real and solid. The Reverend Father recommends us to disengage. They must be either stopped if they are accepting (and it's already an advanced situation), or we must disengage. Considering the overall plan (blue print), it is sensible, in order to smooth the way, to eliminate what are in principle basic problems. As for the Rule, all work on the details should be left to the founders, wisely reflecting in the sight of God. The foundation of a new Order presupposes the inspiration of the Holy Spirit and special divine intervention; and who more than the founders have the right to hope for such help? Father Chevalier seeks to have detailed, positive, regulations for: a) General Administrative purposes; b) for those members living in community; c) for those living on their own; d) for the Third Order; e) for the entry requirements, the manner and length of the novitiate, the question of the vows, etc.

It is a fact that the Jesuit Constitutions are there already and could be made applicable to the new Society, but this is neither wise or possible because a religious Constitution, to be lasting, should be perfectly appropriate to the nature of the society being set up and to its aim. It is also a requirement that the Constitutions should adapt to, suit, people. But our, the Company's, Constitutions in this instance cannot be right for this new society.

1. The strong centralization and total dependence of all the members is an essential necessity for the Company, something impossible in what is under discussion here since the priests come under the jurisdiction of the bishops as to role and placing. In consequence, there is the likelihood of hurt feelings, internal dissent, which will de-rail the machine.
2. And there is the likelihood, moreover, especially in regard to the secular clergy, of hurt feelings with regard to these latter, distrust leading to sharp misunderstandings, the onset of harassment more or less acknowledged (and from three it goes to scandals), all of which makes it impossible to achieve the Society's aim, that of working towards the sanctification of the clergy through gentle impact. This state of affairs runs contrary to the nature and purpose of the Society.

Dear Madame,

You are so kind, thank you, a thousand times! I have written a couple of words to Fr. Lamblin who is so interested in us. He wrote to me about the Archbishop's arrangements, his letter full of good-will and support. Father de Linetière, whom I had the pleasure of meeting last Sunday, has kept you well up to date about everything which concerns the Sacred Heart. What do you wish, God allows these trials for our greater well-being; may His adorable and holy will be done!

I received most gratefully the two earlier letters you so kindly wrote to me. Yesterday I went to Châteauroux to find if my request still lay there untouched in the prefecture office (administrative headquarters) as Mr. Delaveau had written to Fr. Linetière. The secretary confirmed that the dossier had been sent to Paris on the 17th or 18th of April. Is there not an ink-bottle about? In any event, let us hope the good Lord will help us. (The letter had to do with a draw for the church being built in Issoudun.)

With all good wishes, Madame,

Issoudun, June 9, 1863

Very Reverend Father,

It was with pleasure and gratitude I received your letter and its accompanying offering. Thanks a thousand times for the great interest you take in us. I did indeed think that since you had not replied earlier you had a reason for not doing so; I am sorry that it was illness. Very Reverend Father, we have only one wish in all that engages us, that of carrying out the most holy and adorable will of God. Nisi Dominus aedificaverit domum, in vanum laboraverunt qui aedificaverunt eam. (Ps. 127, 1) (Unless the Lord builds the house, those who are working on it are labouring in vain.) It would be foolishness to substitute our ideas for those of divine Providence. May the Heart of Jesus preserve us from a like extravagance! From the moment you think the new plan relates better to the circumstances and offers more likely success for the project, we shall happily take it up. We are too small, too weak, too ill-informed, to impose our views. For people of no great consequence like us, and whose thinking is child-like, without experience and sterile-ridden, the best way forward is to allow ourselves to be led and guided by enlightened, experienced men, to whom God relates, because of their virtues, their wisdom and designs.

Before your kind letter arrived I forwarded the Association Plan to the Orléans priests (two Sulpicians, Lebeurier and Gaduel). There will most likely be thirty for the Retreat. (Planned for Issoudun in August, it didn't have the hoped-for success in the event.)

Be so kind as to convey our humble regards to the Fathers who are so kindly interested in our welfare.

Please accept, dear Father, my good wishes and deepest regards in the Hearts of Jesus and Mary.

Dear Madame,

I await impatiently Fr. Lamblin's return (the Bourges Vicar-General) in order to discuss with him Fr. Champgrand's arrangement. (The Sulpician was still the official owner of both house and grounds made available to Chevalier in 1855 and 1860.) I do believe that this year, 1863, will bring an end to our anxieties. The arrangements for either side would appear to be favourable. With regard to the request made about a draw (lottery), I have written a new one which I shall be sending on to the Archbishop on the 26th of this month. Like yourself I am happy about the success of our collection. The divine Heart of Jesus will not abandon us.

Madame, I have the honour to be...

WORK OF THE SACRED HEART

The priests of the Sacred Heart of Jesus

To understand well the Sacred Heart devotion is to make one convinced that it contains within it the world's salvation. Yes, the world will be saved once it brings itself to understand the love of this divine Heart and then answers with mutual love. Devotion to the Sacred Heart is directed towards this twofold aim. In order to bring this about and spread throughout the world all the graces of which it is the source, this needs the energetic support of all those who are privileged to be aware of it. Making it a complete reality in themselves in order to spread it out from themselves, such is the challenge undertaken by all who wish to see the promises fulfilled. To bring this about, would some specific practises be enough, or if some confraternities made public homage to the Heart of Jesus? Not so, clearly no. These are worthy practises, but they are not enough for the renewal of society. To bring about a like result, it is imperative in the first place that devotion to the Sacred Heart pervades more deeply the souls of those who are drawn to it, and that they model themselves entirely after the image of this divine Heart, and make their souls such perfect instruments that they can bring about the designs of this love in all its wide-ranging extent.

Chevalier at this point notes that a work of his, entitled 'The Apostle of the Sacred Heart of Jesus', deals with these issues, now about to have a second edition.

More than this is needed, nevertheless. However great the dynamic-force may be, even among the most humble whenever they entirely submit themselves to the impact of the Heart of Jesus, this force is nevertheless not to be compared with that which is in those who are the saviours and torch-bearers of the world and who no longer live their lives other than in the divine Heart. One can then state unreservedly that the realization of the promises made concerning devotion to the Sacred Heart is, in particular, the responsibility of priests. There is nothing one could better hope for if sisters of priests in the Church, both secular and religious, were to become more closely united in glorifying this divine Heart, within themselves first of all and then with the faithful among whom they work, seeking nowhere else but in Him the ordering of their feelings, their behaviour, the direction of their lives, and having no other aim than to become as perfectly like Him as possible, making of all those they lead living images of his virtues, priests, in our world that is, who in their whole life will be deserving of the lovely name Priests of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

I. Should one, in order to merit this beautiful title, leave the diocesan priesthood and enter the religious life? Surely not: being dedicated to the Heart of Jesus, true, is not separable from the virtues of poverty, chastity, obedience, and moreover cannot be wanting in high esteem for that way of life in which these virtues are reinforced by the protectiveness of the vows. But how could it be queried that the Heart of Jesus does not call those who become fathers of souls to the most intimate relationship with Him? Do not all priests have the key to this divine Heart in order to share out opportunely its divine treasures? It would be an erroneous interpretation of this way of thinking to be under the impression that the devotees of the Sacred Heart devotion are not to be found outside the ranks of the regular clergy. He (the Sacred Heart) sees to it that there are propagandists of His love within the Hierarchy, and one can say with certainty that such are not wanting. There is no country in Europe, scarcely a diocese, where the impact of this divine Heart is not felt every day. Everywhere there are priests who wish to bring about for themselves the consoling promises made about those who would engage themselves in spreading this salutary devotion. We ourselves can declare in all candour that one of the most touching rewards for our efforts in the attainment of this aim has been the boosting impact of finding ourselves associated with a great number of devoted confrères whose hearts throb with the love of the Heart of Jesus.

How happy would we be if the Apostolate of Prayer and the Sacred Heart Messenger could link externally with those priests and apostles (of the devotion) among whom the Heart of Jesus has brought about such a perfect sense of unity. It is especially with respect to this devotion, that the psalmist's words are realised: How good, how sweet it is for brothers to come (live) together in perfect unity! This unity is the dwelling-place of all those who taste true joy, following on here with another statement from the royal prophet, and what is it if it is not this divine Heart, tabernacle of the Spirit of love, the bonding of all hearts who truly love, who is source of the very joys of heaven itself? If the Saints themselves draw from this adorable Heart the love which unites them, why should it be surprising that here on earth the hearts most closely one with Him are not most closely one among themselves?

But it is in particular the hearts of his ministers, those to whom he daily comes down to shape them all in his likeness, and these latter, especially, he wishes to bring together and create among them the closest understanding. If allowed full freedom of action, you will notice a marvellous likeness brought about in them and a total sharing of concerns (interests). From these truly priestly and apostolic souls harmful influences will be removed, which all too often give rise to divisiveness in people who, otherwise, are very dedicated. Assuredly a priest can be saintly without specifically honouring the Sacred Heart, and nor will he become a saint by the very fact that he takes on this devotion. Yet one can say that a sincere and intelligent affiliation to this devotion will help to avoid many of the principal obstacles which impede his sanctification, and he will have available the most stimulating, efficacious and powerful aids to holiness. And, finally, there will come about between him and a great number of holy priests the most intimate and sanctifying bonding. If two priests fully drawing on the spirit of the Sacred Heart are fully to understand each other and help each other in every way, then one more thing is needed: a way to get to know each other and support each other. Whatever about the rest, their status, their country, their ministry, whether they are secular or religious priests, or whatever the banner in which they are enrolled, the love of Christ's Heart will create a common purpose among them before which all other concerns will be put in their place.

II. However powerful the love of the Sacred Heart of Jesus in bringing about the closest unity among his ministers, even if not united to each other by any outside bond, it is not impossible, just the same, where circumstances are favourable, for a certain number of their adherents to express in their lives the close union brought about in them by this divine Heart. We must wait and see if the propagation of devotion to the Sacred Heart among the clergy leads to several associations, groupings, of priests placing themselves under the patronage of the Sacred Heart and pledging themselves to imitate His virtues. This in effect is what we see happening before our very eyes, and due to the increase of these pious societies we are thereby drawn to acknowledge one of the most heartening present-day realities. It indicates the onset of a very heartening renewal of the clerical spirit. Already we see, besides the Eudists and the Picpus Congregations, who were here pioneers, that several diocesan Congregations have also chosen the Heart of Jesus as their emblem. The dioceses of Toulouse and Bayonne are pleased to have similar associations, but, perhaps, nothing more from its very beginning, represents such providential significance as the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, recently funded at Issoudun, Bourges Archdiocese, in one of the least promising provinces of France for this kind of undertaking.

We shall leave it to Father Chevalier himself to tell us about the work he founded.

"In 1854 I had with me as a colleague at Issoudun, a priest who, like myself, deplored the present state of Christian society. Having in mind the sorry state of our century, and the Church so skilfully and hypocritically persecuted, we supplicated heaven to provide an efficacious remedy. We believed we would see in the Heart of Jesus a unique source of all graces. There should be, we said, a society of priests consecrated to our Saviour's Heart, whose mission it would be to spread this devotion, to make known the riches therein contained and pour out on souls His love and mercy. But what could two impoverished priests do in a town racked by indifference...? It was the occasion, at this time, of the Proclamation of the Dogma of the Immaculate Conception. We persuaded ourselves, my colleague and I, that there could not be a more favourable moment to obtain from heaven the favour we were seeking. We presented ourselves to Mary Immaculate during the nine days preceding the 8th of December, 1854, and petitioned through her special prerogative to grant our wishes if in accord with what Providence decreed, and give to the Church, as a first offering from the glory surrounding her, a new society consecrated to the Heart of Jesus. On the last day of the Novena, we were miraculously promised that a charitable benefactor was prepared to advance us the money necessary to begin our work. Then some overwhelming difficulties arose from the side of the diocesan authorities and once again it was Mary Immaculate who, following another Novena, helped us to get Cardinal Du Pont's (Bourges) approval.

"Providence also ensured that at Issoudun, where we were curates, there was a house perfectly adequate to carry out our plans. We set up a sanctuary in honour of the Sacred Heart by transforming a barn and a stable into a chapel. The people, under the impetus of I know not what mysterious impulse, crowded into the new place. But the envious devil made it collapse. More, and new, misunderstandings, made his Grace ill-disposed and the placing of an interdict on the chapel's use made us sad-hearted. This trial, nevertheless, was not long-lasting. The Archbishop, when better advised, supported us once more. We appealed to the public to aid us so that we could build on the ruins of the chapel a new church to the glory of the divine Heart. God has come to our aid and soon, thanks to the evident protectiveness of the Sacred Heart, we shall be opening the new building for worship. In addition to these events, heaven found another trial for us to bear. The confrère who began with me was appointed, despite his unwillingness and tears, parish priest at the Cathedral by the Cardinal, an appointment which amazed everybody as he was only twenty-eight years of age. On hearing the news I went straight away to the Cardinal to try and get him to change his mind, but to no avail. There were only two of us now as already a third priest had come to join us. Whereupon, fully confident in the care of the divine Heart of Jesus, we prayed that our dear confrère would come back, and, having been three months away, heaven returned him to us. And, no doubt to reward us for our sacrifice, Archbishop de La Tour d'Auvergne was moved, at the beginning of his episcopacy, to make our house of the Sacred Heart the important presbytery of Issoudun, population 15,000, and it is the former arch-priest of the metropolitan See who, in our name, as a Missionary of the Sacred Heart, is the parish priest.

"Our work at the present moment, after eight painful years of suffering and difficulties of all kinds, would appear to be stabilized; the Heart of Jesus it would appear, looks favourable on it. Some Berry (the local French province) priests have already joined us. Others from another diocese, having heard about the aim we are promoting, have asked to join our Society, and we have well-founded hopes of securing an increase in the number of candidates as soon as our Institute is sufficiently well known to those many priests who are drawn towards the setting up of a work such as this. A society like this is needed in our century; this is the view of Pius IX. Two years ago I was in Rome. Having recommended our little Society to the holy Apostles, I had the signal favour of prostrating myself at the Holy Father's feet. I informed him about our work of the Sacred Heart, the aim we were setting ourselves, etc. Having listened to me with such kind attentiveness that I was taken aback, he said to me: Courage, my son, the project of which you speak answers to a need of our time. I would like to see all priests becoming part of it; the hope for Church and society relies on the Heart of Jesus. It is he who will cure all our ills. Preach this devotion everywhere as it will be the world's salvation. Hurry and set yourselves up; I shall be pleased to give my approval to you and the canonical status which you are presently without.

"I happily came away with these blessed words in my ear and the immortal Pontiff's blessing for the burgeoning work. Since then the little grain of mustard seed which seemed to be choking among the brambles and thorns of our poor town has flourished in the sight of heaven and thrives each day. What will its future be? That's the secret of the Heart of Jesus. Archbishop de La Tour d'Auvergne wishes us well; he is very kind to us, and would like to see our little Society flourish. We can count on his support, and it is considerable, not only within the diocese, but also outside it and, especially, in Rome.

"At the time of the first Novena on December 1854 we promised the Holy Virgin that if she granted our wish, we would take the title of Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and would do our utmost to draw out as fully as possible the deep and beautiful meaning of the words. As well, by way of expressing our gratitude, we would do our utmost to make her also known and loved. This divine Mother came to our aid, inspiring us to call her Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and have her honoured in the Church with this beautiful title. In this way we acknowledge her as sovereign mistress of the Heart of Jesus. What is more glorious!

J. Chevalier
Apostolic Missionary of the Sacred Heart"

Nothing, in effect, is more glorious for Mary and nothing is more useful for a priest than worship of Mary's Heart in the context of the Heart of Jesus, and relating to the Heart of Jesus through Mary's Heart as intermediary. Here we find two priestly supports, his two reservoirs, the inexhaustible sources of the vitality and fruitfulness of his work: the Heart of Jesus which contains within itself the fullness of grace, and the Heart of Mary who has at her willing and full disposal all the riches of Jesus' Heart. The Heart of Jesus, primary repository of all heavenly gifts, the Heart of Mary that special channel through which the life-giving waters pour forth on men's hearts. Let the priest be united to these two Hearts and he can fill, and satisfy, the hunger of those impoverished souls who come to him parched with thirst and in the throes of hunger. May he choose his home in these two Hearts, where he will link up with a throng of fervent confrères among whom he will be amazed to find the same feelings, attitudes, the same joys and sorrows, which he experiences in his own heart. United with all these committed servants of the Heart of Jesus, relying on the all-powerful quality of this love, he will find himself much more strengthened to raise up this society which is more and more debased by the cult of materialism and eradicate those baneful influences which distance souls from heaven.

August 25 - Saint Louis

Dear Madame,

Father du Champgrand could not have been more generous. It's like as if he were selling me money cheaply when he values the whole property at 15,000 francs. (The 1863 franc, roughly 3.50 euros in today's - 2005 - France, would mean that the selling price of 15,000 francs would in today's currency be 52,500 euros, a remarkably low sum.) This day I signed the deed with the solicitor (Maître Blinet, an Issoudun solicitor). Now I am anxious that the registering process does not give rise to any complaints that the price was not high enough. Let's hope that there will be nothing more about it.

I remain your esteemed...

Dear Father,

Thanks a thousand for the keen interest you continue to have in our work. After the Feast of the Assumption we had our planned reunion here at Issoudun. It didn't result in a complete union, but in a tightening-up process. Just the same, the priests approved of the common plan I put before them. I shall send it on to you later. This is all we can do, so I think, for the time being. Two dioceses, Moulins, Blois, nevertheless, are keen to become one with us through vow. Whether the Society makes or does not make vows, it must have a centre of action, a common family-life centre. Without this, it will stagnate. That's my belief. I am sending on the 12 little brochures on our Lady of the Sacred Heart that you wanted. My good wishes to dear Father Bieuville.

With deepest regards in the Hearts of Jesus and Mary,

J. Chevalier

The above letter is an incomplete copy of the original in the Jesuit Archives. A very engaged participant at the gathering of priests in Issoudun, Fr. Piperon, very close to Chevalier, gave his impressions of what was going on at this time. Chevalier, he noted, wishes to associate diocesan priests, whether in parishes, minor or major seminaries, with the religious life and, specifically, his new Society, his aim to unite all to his Congregation through a common Constitution consecrated to the Sacred Heart. The immediate foregoing was the mind-cast influencing the Issoudun August gathering. Among those who attended, and the number was lower than expected, were a Grenoble seminary professor, diocesan priests from Orléans, Chartres, Blois, dioceses, among whom Guyot, then parish priest at St. Paul, Montluçon, would later become an MSC. Father Bertrand, SJ, director of Blois major seminary, preached and presided over the gathering. At best a large, loose, federation was favoured, within which each specific group, area, safeguarded its autonomy within an overall Sacred Heart fraternity. The meeting, otherwise, was far from being fruitless, drawing Chevalier to lay down a more solid and relevant basis for the diocesan priests of the Sacred Heart, a group in existence for a number of years. Further details available, C.F. Fontes MSC, Series 2, Col. 1/A: Charles Piperon, p.63-64.

Chevalier added in pencil the names of the associated centres:

Coutances, 30, Bourges; Blois; Orleans; Grenoble 50; Moulins 12; Orléans, Chartres.

The figures may well represent the associate members.

Dear Reverend Father,

I must seem very nonchalant to you when you have had to wait so long for a reply. The explanation for this delay lies with my being away a great deal and having an increased work-load. I am very much obliged to you for the latest contribution you have so kindly forwarded for our chapel. Just recently I heard that kind Father Bieuville is presently in Bourges, something for which I rejoice in the Lord. I haven't as yet had the pleasure of meeting him; I hope to do so as soon as possible. Our dear work is at the same stage as it was when dear Father Bertrand left. I have received no fresh message, which, if I had, it would have been my duty and pleasure to send on to you. The onset of a heavy work-load has not yet made it possible to reduce fees for the affiliated members. I hope to get myself ready for this soon and let you know about it. The Archbishop of Bourges continues, as ever, to be well-disposed. Like you, if rightly understood as God's will, he would like to revive Father de Clorivière's work with the associate members, those who do not want to take vows. Priests from Paris and elsewhere, whom you mentioned to me and are drawn to the work of Father de Clorivière, are not any longer, perhaps, of the same mentality. I earnestly commend myself to your prayers, and as well our Sacred Heart project which is always being sorely tried. (Chevalier would appear to be subdued, disappointed at the August turn-out in Issoudun for the priests' congress.) Do not forget to greet Fr. Bertrand on our behalf, he who left us with such happy memories.

With all good wishes and my deepest regard in the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary.

To meet Bishop Baudichon; Mr. Brisacier, St. Anne's sculpture workshop, St. Stephen Street, on the left going towards the Archbishop's Square. Enquire from him where the Bishop and Mr. Lobin live. The latter lives at Ursuline Street, at St. Pierre-des-Corps, fifty steps away from the minor seminary. Ask Mr. Lobin about the readiness of the stained glass for the sanctuary and insist on its being installed for the 8th of December. Inform him that those for the sanctuary must be installed before those of the nave. The Archbishop thinks that it is taking too long to do the work for Bourges (cathedral?). Ask Mr. Brisacier about the size of the interior niche's opening. Should it go as high in original form as the vault, or what distance? Should it have the shape of a house-door or a window, which I do not believe is right; it seems to me, rather, that the opening should be ogival? To present an explanatory design, inform him that his presence, as I see it, is required.

How much I need to thank you for the great interest you have in us, the fervent prayers you direct towards Our Lord for our sanctification and the good wishes you express for our work's success and the reign of the Heart of Jesus in all hearts. Yes, may he be loved everywhere and by everyone, especially by His Missionaries. Oh petition for us that love which accepts, finds agreeable, the greatest sacrifices, and draws to give oneself increasingly for the glory of the divine Master! In a word, ask for your new children, the spirit and virtues of your matchless Order. Dear Fr. Leblanc has written a letter full of interest and good-will, likewise Father Ramière, that very zealous apostle of the Heart of Jesus. This holy religious, like yourself, sees a need of the time in this new Work of the Sacred Heart, and a powerful means for the clergy's sanctification...

OUR LADY OF THE SACRED HEART

Last year in its May edition, the Messenger made its readers aware of a devotion which brings together most happily the two devotions most cherished by fervent Christians, and in which they are invited to honour Mary under the beautiful title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

This invitation is not pointless. From every country where the Messenger has its readers, warm expressions of support and generous offerings have been sent to the Issoudun missionaries who are the first to honour Mary under this new title. The respected Superior of these missionaries wrote recently to us:

"Our Lady of the Sacred Heart owes to you, in great part, her publicity. It is you who have made her known. You publicize the Association; you look for followers of this all-powerful patron, this advocate of difficult and hopeless cases of which there are so many today. If you do so much on her behalf, she will do so much for us and your admirable work of which she is the patron."

We are very pleased to merit this praise and to see its promises take effect. As well, we take it upon ourselves to make our readers aware of new developments which have made an impact on devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and the ways offered for the practice of this moving devotion. Henceforth, it will not be a private devotion only. The Archbishop of Bourges has given it public status by canonically validating the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in the Sacred Heart Church of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart at Issoudun. And approaches have been made to obtain from the Holy See recognition of this Association as an Archconfraternity. The following notification forwarded to us by Rev. Fr. Chevalier, will suffice to make our readers aware of the aim, the requirements and advantages of this Association which will be united to the Apostolate of Prayer.

ASSOCIATION IN HONOUR OF OUR LADY OF THE SACRED HEART

Established canonically in the Issoudun (Indre) chapel of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, to obtain, through Her powerful intercession, the success in difficult and hopeless cases in the spiritual as well as temporal order.
She is spes desperantium (St. Ephrem).
She is the hope of the hopeless.

Father Chevalier adds in this same letter:

The sanctuary of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and that of the divine Heart of Jesus, which we are building despite the many problems, needs the help and support of your kind and charitable offerings. I recommend it to your good-will. WE OURSELVES WOULD BE CONCERNED ABOUT BEING TIRESOME WITH RESPECT TO OUR READERS' KINDNESS THROUGH THESE CONSTANT APPEALS IF WE WERE NOT AWARE THAT CHARITY IS INDEFATIGABLE.

Dear Vicar-General,

I am aware of the great interest you have in our work at Issoudun. It pleases me greatly then, to inform you that the consecration of our church of the Sacred Heart will take place at the end of July, Feast of the Visitation. I very much hope that you will honour us with your presence. The ceremony will be wonderful: we are expecting several bishops. The Archbishop of Bourges would like very much to see Bishop Dupanloup there. (Felix Dupanloup, 1802-1878, Bishop of Orléans since 1849. Although it was so announced in the press, the Bishop did not come to Issoudun.) I wrote to him and expected our Archbishop would do so likewise. I would ask you to argue our case and obtain a 'Yes' for us. At all costs it is a requirement that our unfortunate diocese becomes rid of the disrespect in which it is held. We are about to set up in our chapel a new Association in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which has already achieved very satisfactory results. (The letter from the Archbishop of Bourges establishing canonically the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is dated January 29, 1864, the Feast of St. Francis de Sales.) It gives me pleasure to send you a little book which you will find interesting reading.

The booklet referred to is Chevalier's 'Our Lady of the Sacred Heart', Bourges, Pigelet, November 1862, reproduced in the Messenger of the Sacred Heart, May 1863, p.216 and following. Piperon would later say that some pages of what Chevalier had shared with us were, with his approval, copied and the substance of which became the November publication.

Dear Reverend Father,

I received with grateful acknowledgement the excellent book which you kindly forwarded to me. I didn't know about it, but on looking through it, it seems very impressive and, particularly so, very topical. Today I am sending a message to you about the Association in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart set up here in our church for a successful outcome in difficult and despairing situations, both in the spiritual and temporal spheres. This work has already had very good results. If you feel the need to publicize this for the glory of our divine Mother, I can send you printed copies which you can either hand out or have distributed. (The Statutes of the Association had been approved by Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, January 29, 1864, and formally constituted the same day, having its first session on April 7; the former Bishop of Toronto, F.A. de Charbonsel, preached.) The work of the Sacred Heart priests which you like, and to which you are so committed, goes forward, but somewhat slowly. Dear Father Bieuville is very supportive. I hope shortly to go to Bourges and have a long chat with him. Some new recruits are in training. I beg you to pray wholeheartedly for us. (Bieuville recently became part of the Bourges SJ community.) The Archbishop of Bourges is keenly interested in the development of our work which he looks upon as indispensable and which he considers will greatly benefit the clergy. His Grace is committed at a level beyond words.

Kindly, most Reverend Father, accept my thanks and deepest regard in the divine Hearts of Jesus and Mary.

Montluçon, Tuesday, April 26, 1864

Dear Mademoiselle,

I am so pleased to hear of your tender devotion for the divine Heart of Jesus, whose unworthy missionary I am. If the very busy activities involving the first communion retreat which I am preaching in St. Paul's parish (Montluçon) didn't take up all my time, I would have paid you a visit, expressing my regards and appreciation. Apostles of the Sacred Heart, we are delighted to spread this wonderful devotion which must be the world's salvation and support all who are devotees of the devotion. Today the Heart of Jesus spreads His kingdom of love and mercy everywhere in the world, but in this kingdom there must be a Queen. We have found her in Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. This is a new title which we have given to Mary, approved of by all the French bishops, and which has already produced the most beautiful print. Conscious of the many graces which the Blessed Virgin is disposed to grant those who call upon her under this beautiful title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, we set up an Association in her honour dealing with difficult and desperate situations. It is quite impossible to describe all the marvellous things which have come about in the special Confraternity and at the foot of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart altars. I am sending you a print about this Association and other different imprints which you can look at in order to know about it. Nothing is obligatory except to say once, morning and evening: "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, pray for us, and give your name for inscription." That's all; no money whatsoever is sought. So far as the advantages are concerned, they are remarkably worthwhile as you will see in the accompanying note. We shall be happy then to receive all the names you can send us or have addressed to us. I am sending you also a collection of hymns honouring the Sacred Heart (first edition of Chevalier's 'Collection of Canticles', May 15, 1863, with the authorization of Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne of Bourges), several prints and some medals and medallions of the Sacred Heart and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, as well as the entry formula to the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. And you may mention to people who might like to join that it is not at all necessary to do so in order to share in the benefits. To give one's name and make the invocation, that's what is essential.

I commend myself and our work to your good prayers. Please accept, Mademoiselle, my deepest regards in the divine Hearts of Jesus and Mary.

Dear Countess,

I hurry to reply to the telegram which I am greatly honoured to receive from you.

The parish monstrance in height from the bottom to the top of the cross is 78 centimetres and in breadth 35 centimetres. I have just come from Thizay (a little village seven kilometres from Issoudun, with roughly 250 inhabitants nowadays). I had a long conversation with His Grace who is very pleased with the invitation you sent to him. He knows from experience your kind-heartedness and lavish hospitality, and would like you to invite also the Archbishop of Tours (Joseph Guibert) and the Archbishop of Symrna (Vincenzo Scappapietra, a Vincentian), a friend of his. He gave me to understand that the Archbishop of Tours would be greatly pleased to be invited by you. The Archbishop of Bourges said to me that he thought it best to have the dinner, to which you so kindly invited their lordships, the bishops, and their vicar generals, on Saturday evening, July 2. The meal can be served hot; I go into all these details because I know you like to have things under control. Following my reply, His Grace has written a warm letter to the Bishop of Orléans inviting him to preach. On the other hand, the president of the Issoudun court, a close friend of the Bishop of Tulle, only keeping his own counsel, wrote and invited him to the ceremony. When I informed the Archbishop of Bourges about this he was very annoyed. This confidence about a misunderstanding is for yourself alone.

Together with my warm appreciation, Madame Countess, please accept my kindest regards.

Issoudun (Indre), August 24, 1864

Dear Father and very distinguished Confrère,

Reverend Father Leblanc, of the Society of Jesus, just recently sent me a book entitled 'Work of the Countryside' (Oeuvre des Campagnes) which I read with the keenest interest. You have put your finger on the wound and pointed out the sovereign remedy for its healing. Reading your book and hearing what Father Leblanc said about you, drew me to discuss our own work with you which would appear to correspond with your wishes. I cannot do better, when introducing you to our little Society, than present the Chapter which deals with the Society's aim.

Jean-Marie Vandel was born at Nernier on November 22, 1808, became a diocesan priest, joined the MSCs on September 28, 1869, founded with Chevalier the Petite Oeuvre; below, passim.

What is given here is, substantially, the plan, or programme, which first appeared in 1864. Details, otherwise, MSC archives.

I - General Aim

1. To make available for priests, and the faithful who wish to become more perfect, the most powerful means of salvation.
2. To introduce religious and community life to the diocesan clergy.
3. To offer more fervent and devoted ministers to the Church and the Holy See.
4. To make available hardened battle soldiers to the bishops and most docile instruments in carrying out their wishes.
5. To provide a living embodiment of the evangelical virtues to the faithful.

II

1. Besides the general aim, all the Society's members must undertake to spread devotion to the Sacred Heart in every possible way.
2. To make reparation, through holiness of life, for the outages inflicted on Him by offering, with this in mind, their religious actions, their good works, their labour, their mortification, their suffering and pain.
3. Work for the sanctification of their confrères:
  - a. by attempting to draw them into this Society;
  - b. by giving witness to all the priestly virtues and in particular that of submission to the Sovereign Pontiff, whose words, decisions, actions, will be always particularly sacred, and to the wishes of their bishop who will be looked upon as their father and primary Superior. In striving for this aim the Society is accepting of the varied ministry which the Church offers, no one excluded. The Society accepts all the diocesan priests who would like to be involved with it. It follows that they can remain in the different postings to which they have been assigned by their bishops. They will always come under the immediate jurisdiction of their Ordinaries, submitting to their authority in every respect. The Society's Superiors may never ask anything of them which is in conflict with their duties, the diocesan ordinances and the bishops' wishes.

Our little Society is made up of:

1. Religious who live in community, or outside it, who take vows.
2. Church groupings who virtually follow the same Rule without taking vows.
3. Lay Tertiaries.

The Society is under the patronage of the Sacred Heart; its religious bear the title of Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, associate Priests of the Sacred Heart and lay Tertiaries of the Sacred Heart. Eight years ago our project began. It is not possible to relate all the trials we experienced. Since it received the Holy Father's blessing (approval), it has seemed to come out of its obscurity. We have perhaps forty priests associated with us who come from different dioceses. (This last observation is more wishful thinking than reality at this time, August 1864; it's a linking of associates rather than actual canonical membership, of which the three at Issoudun would come closest to this last, while Guyot and Durin worked elsewhere in parishes.) Some are religious and the others only associates. A number of bishops are already aware of it and much appreciate what is developing. In their supportive letters, they think it meets a need of the times, and go so far as to say that it is destined, with God's blessing, to offer the greatest service to Church and Society. The Archbishop of Bourges is particularly interested in its welfare, suggesting that the rules be printed for submission to the Holy Father so as to obtain a brief of approval; shortly, I hope, we shall be so greatly favoured.

The Archbishop of Bourges, to demonstrate his wholehearted support, has made our house the Issoudun parish presbytery and it is one of us who is parish priest. We are but three in the community (Chevalier, Piperon, Mousseaux; Maugenest lived at the Saint-Cyr presbytery with two diocesan curates), and for apostolic work, missions, this is a hundred times over insufficient. Our preference is for the countryside; otherwise this is our motto: "Evangelizare pauperibus misit me." ("He sent me to evangelize the poor." Chevalier is influenced here by Fr. Vandel's work of this year, 1864, "Oeuvre des Campagnes", see below.)

One of the features characterizing our rule is that we are committed as much as possible to give missions and retreats free, without looking for payment, but that our journeys be paid for and also the expenses incurred by the clergy arising from the missionaries' presence. Since we are not well off at this time, we take the cost of our journey where it can be afforded.

If I am not mistaken, I believe that our little Society seems to be in accord with your wishes. If you believe that it can meet the splendid aim which you are projecting, we would place it at your service. Your experience and your enlightened views could prove to be very helpful. Your co-operation, if it were possible to make yourself available, would be very much appreciated. Our work needs wholehearted and devoted men. I leave this thought with you for our adorable master's Heart and for the greater glory of God. We have given a title to the Blessed Virgin: Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Noting the many, multiplied, precious graces which can be granted when invoking Mary under this lovely name, we have founded an Association in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for a successful outcome in difficult and desperate situations, both in the spiritual as well as the temporal order. The Sovereign Pontiff has sanctioned all this with his approval. In the three years since we began, we have 40,000 Associates. I take the liberty of offering two little booklets to you (Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, J. Chevalier, 1862; and Directions on the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, 1862), which will keep you up to date about this Association, and send out several circular letters promoting its expansion.

I have with deepest regards, the honour of being your very humble and devoted servant in the divine Hearts of Jesus and Mary,

J. Chevalier, MSC

*This was the first letter Chevalier wrote to Vandel who was the founder of a work focusing its concern on the countryside, bringing there what he called "country missionaries", hoping, as he saw it, to face and find an answer to a serious issue, priest isolation, loneliness, throughout the vast countryside of 19th century France, about which he wrote in the already-mentioned 'Oeuvre des Compagnes', 1864, very influential on Chevalier at this time, hoping [see below] that Vandel would see his way to be a member of Chevalier's group and maybe become associated with Chevalier's colleagues, the "countryside missionaries" of the Blois diocese who were to become animated by Vandel. Dear Reverend Father,

How kind of you to engage yourself with our Sacred Heart work! I do not know how to thank you enough. I wrote to Fr. Vandel yesterday at the address you gave me (a Parisian one at that moment). If one is to go by his book, he must be a man of exceptional quality. If God in His goodness has destined him to join us, we would offer him, with great pleasure, an important role in our work's development. Each day we ask the divine Heart of Jesus to send us someone of His choosing to take us over. The more we go forward, the greater our understanding of the needs associated with this work, our inability, the feebleness of the means at our disposal. Oh! do pray for us, I beg you, and especially for myself. We cannot sufficiently express our thanks to Father Fessard (Provincial) for appointing Fr. Bieuville to Bourges. This saintly religious makes an immense contribution and he is, effectively, the one who organizes things. We have made the decision only to accept as candidate priests those who have done retreats under his direction or with another of your priests. Many of your priests know about our work and show great interest in it. I believe that one of our aims coheres with what Fr. Vandel is proposing. It should create no great problem for him to understand us. I await his reply before I write to the worthy churchmen you mention. (Vandel's missionary priests in the countryside, see previous article.)

Next week we are expecting two priests who are seriously thinking about joining us while staying in their posts; they want to familiarize themselves with the rules. We should really have two or three more priests in the house; there are only three of us. (Chevalier, Piperon, Mousseaux, the last-named arriving immediately after he was ordained priest at Bourges, May 30, 1863.) If you know some worthy priests who would like to come and share our community life, they will be happily welcomed. The Superior of the young clerics' association, Chartres, is an associate member of our Sacred Heart association. He was present at the meeting last year, presided over by Fr. Bertrand, SJ.

The Archbishop of Bourges has founded an association along the lines of the Propagation of the Faith to encourage vocations in our minor seminaries which are virtually empty. It is working quite well, providing enough this year to pay for eight or ten fees. His Grace is very interested, and it could be a way of increasing the number of priests in our poor diocese. The Archbishop remains as always closely supportive of our Sacred Heart ministry. He is well aware how important it is! Now more than ever we can count on his support. Very Reverend Father, with my kind regards, yours respectfully in the divine Hearts of Jesus and Mary.

I was greatly thrilled to have your kind letter.

I do not believe, Madame, I received the letter to which you refer, alluding to a Havre curate who wishes well to our apostolate. I only received at the end of July the letter you so kindly wrote to me and which I answered from Richelieu at the beginning of August. The Holy See, as you are aware, has given its approval to the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and has granted several indulgences, both plenary and partial. Very Reverend Father,

Last Wednesday I was delighted to meet Father Gautrelet and speak at length about our cherished work of the Sacred Heart.

Francis Xavier Gautrelet, 1807-1886, founder of the Apostolate of Prayer at Vals, December 3, 1844. A famous spiritual counsellor, he was at this time, after an African sojourn, visiting France and about to take charge from October 13, 1864, of the Middle East mission in Syria and Beirut.

He was very much taken by it. His approval of the plan presented to him and of its general organization was greatly encouraging. There are significant problems to be faced, he told us, but the arrangements, such as I understand it, being made now seem to be the least problematic and the best guarantee of success. I shall forward, Father, to you the printed plan for our little Society (4 copies), accompanying this letter. The regulations for those joining are being printed at the moment. We are pleased to note that our work already receives appreciative approval, good-will. I commend it at this moment to your fervent prayers. We count on your enthusiasm and support as this work is your Society's daughter, yours more than ours since we are only frail instruments. If it can be solidly founded, as we hope, you will have provided immense service to the Church and Society. Fr. Vandel has replied most warmly to me. He hopes to come to Issoudun shortly and chat with us. I believe that this meeting could be a valuable winning-over. Let's pray!

Please accept, Father, my good wishes and kind regards in the divine Hearts of Jesus and Mary.

Before he came to Issoudun, Vandel would meet Chevalier at the Mont-Dore spa, Puy-le-Dôme, on the morning of July 14, 1865. Vandel stayed at Issoudun from the 2nd to the 26th of February 1866. Next month, March, following eight months of correspondence with Chevalier, he decided to enter his young Society, having first been released by his Bishop, Meriley of Lausanne, Switzerland. Vandel was a 'savoyard' who, in 1860, had been appointed parish priest of Nyon, Switzerland. He would begin his novitiate on March 19, 1866. Earlier that month he had stayed with Chevalier at Amélie-les-Bains in the Eastern Pyrenees, where Chevalier was taking the waters. Whether both discussed it or not, Vandel at this time began to visualize a new enterprise with exciting projects, an Apostolic School (Petite Oeuvre) of the Sacred Heart which would concentrate specifically on education from a young age with a view to joining the Society and thereby ensuring numerical growth. It is very likely that Vandel, at Amélie-les-Bains, convinced Chevalier that this was the way forward educationally, and it would appear that, on 19th March this year, 1866, the day Vandel began his novitiate, Chevalier endorsed Vandel's suggestion of the name 'Petite-Oeuvre du Sacré-Coeur', the first college opening at Chezal-Benoît, sited between Issoudun and Lignières, October 10, 1867. J.M. Vandel, appropriately, was its first Director for the next ten years until his death on the night of April 25-26, 1877. Since 1907 his remains lie beside Chevalier's in the crypt of the basilica of the Sacred Heart at Issoudun.

*I am greatly indebted here to Eric Mension-Rigau's Le Donjon et le Clochen, Paris, Perrine, 2003, who virtually provides a biography of Vandel and his countryside apostolate, "Oeuvres des Campagnes", both before and after he became an MSC. Eric Mension-Rigau writes that "...J.M. Vandel found his own preoccupation also in Chevalier: help priests living in isolation and encourage co-ordinated pastoral work..." (op.cit. p.99. My translation.) On entering the MSCs, Vandel did not disengage from his pioneering earlier involvement in the 'Oeuvre'. He journeyed in its support as before, visited the country clergy, wrote articles to boost morale. At the end of December 1878, within six months of his death, he attended a great reunion of the 'Oeuvre' at the Jesuit church in Poitiers. It may well be that his suggestion to Chevalier about a minor seminary, to be called 'Petite Oeuvre', Little Work, was influenced by what he had earlier named 'L' Oeuvre' - hence the large 'Work', the 'little Work'. For a full appreciation of J.M. Vandel, Mension-Rigau's work is indispensable.*

Most Honoured Confrère,

Knowing the great interest you have shown in our Work of the Sacred Heart, which is also yours, I am forwarding to you Our Little Society's plan (blue print) and the regulations for those who join. Be good enough to look through them and tell me, candidly, what you think. We shall be delighted to have your judicious comments made available for the next edition as this one is only provisory.

The great encouragement we have experienced and the warm regard with which our Work has been favoured encourages us to be positively hopeful. There are already a number of diocesan Sacred Heart religious who greatly impress us. We shall be delighted to meet and chat with you. I am sure that you can do a great deal for our young project.

Recommending myself to your prayers, and assuring you of my deepest regards in SS.CC.JMJ.

Contract between Father Chevalier and Mr. Raffl, Sculptor.

I, the undersigned, confer on Mr. Raffl, sculptor, rue Bonaparte, 59, Paris, the right to sculpt statues of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart according to the design of which I have the ownership.

I grant him, so I declare this right, accompanied by the sum of two thousand and five hundred francs (roughly 7,737 euros), which he can either repay me or pay the interest on if he so wishes on my having the right to be reimbursed at five per cent at the same time beginning next year.

Since I lay it down that these statues be exactly like the design and all of them in complete uniformity, I likewise demand of him that he forbid any reproductions or likenesses of whatever size in France or abroad.

Dear Countess,

I write expressly to let you know straightaway the result of my enquiries. The information which I was able to come by about the young man is excellent. The highest praise was bestowed on his character and qualities. Meanwhile, how is he getting on in Paris? One presumes that he is living a normal life there. His salary is about 14 or 1,500 francs (between 5,030 and 5,390 euros). I am pleased to provide you with this information and hope it will be helpful to you.

Dear Reverend Father,

I am well aware of the interest you have in our Sacred Heart work which, rightly understood, is also yours. We are very pleased that while it is slowly and judiciously moving forward, and that is a fact, it has its moments of triumph. We have two new priests from Caen (in the diocese of Bayeux and Lisieux) who have eagerly joined us. A saintly Marseilles priest is greatly attracted and wants to spread the (Work) in the diocese. We had recent recruits in Moulins. I entreat you to pray keenly for us.

The Caen priest, Louis Hayacinthe Bazire, although professed September 27, 1869, and elected Assistant General the previous day(!), didn't stay very long; he left on November 20, 1876. The young Fr. Victor Jouët came from Marseilles to Issoudun on December 28, 1864, sent there by his bishop to familiarize himself with the Work of the Sacred Heart. From Moulins diocese, following Jean-Baptiste Guyot, Fathers Fern and Durin came on July 2, 1864, and remaining a parish priest, Guyot would be professed on July 2, 1865. Earlier he had written to Issoudun titling himself 'Secular priest of the Sacred Heart'.

You should have received a couple of months ago a copy of our little Society's programme. Since it is no more than provisional, we would be very pleased to receive your wise comments so that we can take them into consideration for the next printing. Father Vandel appears to be very well motivated. I am sure that he will blend in perfectly with our Work of the Sacred Heart. We would not hesitate to make him our Superior. When you see him, be so kind as to sound out his thoughts.

Please accept my good wishes for the New Year; your humble and obedient servant in the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary.

Jouët had visited Issoudun for the first time just before Christmas, 1864, an unforgettable visit which would shortly lead him to leave Marseilles diocese and join the MSCs. He would go to Rome in 1875 as the Superior of the pioneer MSC house in the city, first near the St. John Lateran basilica and then in Piazza Navona. He held the important post of Procurator for the Society and its interests from 1875 for many years until a distancing arose, but right to the end he remained close to his friend Jules Chevalier. Jouët died on September 13, 1912.

Beloved Confrère,

It is unnecessary to let you know what pleasure your letter, so eagerly awaited, brought us. Many thanks for your interesting observations and the expectations which you share with us about our cherished Work of the Sacred Heart. The good-will expressed towards us by the Bishop of Marseilles greatly moves us and confirms in us the conviction that the divine Heart of Jesus had all this in waiting in order to fulfil his designs. I read with keen interest Bishop Cruice's statement on reparation communion. Many thanks for the copies from Marseilles' Liturgical Week which you have so kindly forwarded. I look forward with much pleasure to reading your article on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I am posting the different articles you were looking for. The bookshop where I am placing the order will make twenty or twenty-five per cent profit. I shall be delighted to have any further observations you would like to share with us. For the past two years our confrères in different diocese associated with us shared a common aim which was only hand-written. Now we are having it printed under the title: Annals of the Priests of the Sacred Heart. Within a day or two I shall send you the first printing. Let me know what you think. If you come across some priests who would like to discuss some of the proposed questions, we would be greatly obliged. We already have 150 confrères who subscribe to this little publication. It is a very powerful new leverage which the divine Heart of Jesus has made available to us. Many use it advantageously for the well-being of our dear confrères in the priesthood!

My confrères send you their good wishes.

My Dear Confrère,

Your being somewhat taken-aback does not surprise me. (The shattering news of Bishop Cruice's illness from which he would die next year, 1866.)

As you so rightly say, it is necessary that in everything which comes from God we must brace ourselves to be tested. There are other disappointments in store but, heavenly aided, we shall overcome all obstacles. Let us thank the Lord for the greatly caring ministration made available to the Bishop of Marseilles. We fervently pray for the restoration of his health. We read your article on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart with great interest. I am sorry that it hasn't appeared yet. In order to make this splendid devotion known, you might, perhaps, ask the editors of the Liturgical Week to print the two works in instalments, beginning with Our Lady of the Sacred Heart (J. Chevalier, Bourges, 1862) and then with the Notice, Observation on the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart (J. Chevalier, Issoudun, 1864). They cannot be unwilling since these two little booklets have episcopal approval. I greatly approve your extensive work on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You are doing something very worthwhile for so many members. I shall be favoured if you get in touch with me before the printing. (Chevalier is writing about 'The Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, which came out this year under the title 'Thirty-One Considerations on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart', with the imprimatur of the Archbishop of Bourges, April 28, 1865. Later, when revised and expanded, it became the first-named title immediately above.)

I would be delighted if, during your spare time, you were to compose a number of hymns on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. The monthly bulletins are not yet printed. You can sell the Association's tickets for 0.2 centimes rather than 0.28 (roughly 0.70 euros). Courage, dearly loved confrère, the divine Heart of Jesus will reward your efforts. Pray for us at Issoudun who do not forget you.

Wholly yours in SS.CC.JMJ.

Next month, February 18, 1865, Chevalier approved of:

Annals of the Priests of the Sacred Heart - three-monthly - two copies each year to Rev. Canon Ychard, Superior of the Chartres minor seminary. Father Devaux, chaplain to Benedictine Sisters, Chantelle (Allier).

Bishop Patrice Cruice, Irish-born, 1815, arrived in Paris as a young student and, after ordination, became Director of the Carmelite College in Paris - Ecole des Carmes. He came to know, and became friendly with, J.M. Vandel around this time, and in 1861 he became Bishop of Marseilles. Three years later, October 1864, he founded the College of St. Louis, appointing Victor Jouët to the staff as prefect of discipline and teacher. He was also very friendly with such families as the Du Quesne and de Verneuil, with whom Chevalier was also friendly and corresponded as indicated here. It is not a surprise, then, that Cruice encouraged Jouët to visit Issoudun and come by information on the Work of the Sacred Heart which he had heard about very likely from the du Quesne and Verneuil families. An observation from 1859 reads: "Father Cruice, Superior of the Carmelite House Higher Studies, is interested in the work and in becoming an associate; he would even like to work there during the holidays...". Bishop Cruice died in 1866 aged 51.

Dear Brother,

I am pleased to note that the Devil is not pleased with our Work and would appear to be bent on opposing it. Deo Gratias! Deo Gratias! Do not worry in the least; let them say and do what they like. Since the Sacred Heart is on our side what have we to be afraid of? Do not write anything to the Bishop of Marseilles: wait until he returns. This little storm is nothing. There will be many more of them. We would be very pleased and honoured to welcome his Lordship to our beloved house in the solitude of Issoudun.

I read with great interest your general plan for the month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. It's very good; fill it out, and your book will make the children of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart very happy. We pray earnestly, then, that the Father of light will enlighten and help you, and that it will be printed and circulated by the end of April for the month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You could follow each reflection with something historical or allegorical, or with a little prayer, maybe all three. But, if possible, it might be better to leave out the prayer and allegory and leave in the history. I think, however, that it will be easy for you to put in all three. We shall provide you with the histories. Look after your health, avoid anything foolish. Farewell for the present, dearly loved brother. My confrères extend their friendship to you.

I wish to thank you for all the interesting details which you were so good to let me have about the moving ceremony on the 20th. All you say about the Archbishop in no way surprises me. I know how much esteem and respect His Grace has for your family. The news brought to me, otherwise, in your kind letter this morning is very uplifting. Together with your effective intervention and the help of the Archbishop, I hope that we shall eventually overcome the problems which seem to multiply about our money-raising. I have just written to Madame de Bourbon Lignières who has already turned down Madame de Verneuill. I await her reply.

On March the 25th, Annunciation Day, the Charity sermon is due to take place at 2pm. I went to Orléans last Thursday, but I didn't meet the Bishop. (Chevalier was very anxious to have Dupanloup as preacher of the Paris Charity sermon in aid of the Sacred Heart Church, Issoudun.) He had left for Nice or Monaco, so it appears, and he will be about fifteen days away. I regret this complication. I saw Madame de Bryas who sends her best wishes. I hope to go to Bourges shortly (next week very likely) and we shall discuss in more detail the issues engaging us. I shall not forget to thank His Grace for all his kindness.

Please accept my respectful good wishes...

Dear Madame,

I regret very much that I couldn't have a longer chat with you on Monday. Your nice letter this morning compensates me for that privation. Many, many, thanks for the content of the letter. What concern you have for us! What dedication! Convey as well my gratitude to Mr. and Mrs. De Linetière, to Mrs. Henriette and Mademoiselle Louise (de Linetière daughters, Henriette being Albert des Méloizes' wife), and I thank you for everything forwarded on Monday. Oh! May the divine Heart of Jesus bestow an abundance of blessings on all of you. I was very pleased to meet Mr. Albert. I found him easy and charming in manner. I was delighted to read the Archbishop's sermon and the description of the ceremony; all that involves yourself is of interest to me also, even to the details. I found nothing over-stated; everything said is perfectly correct... I have written to all the ladies involved with the collection, whose addresses you kindly forwarded, and also to Countess Masson de Montolivet, Countesses de Tillières, de Bonneval, Benoît d'Azy. Let's hope. (These women were being lined up to collect at the Charity Sermon in Paris, see above.)

I have had some new pictures of the Sacred Heart printed at a very good price, costing no more than 0.20 centimes (about 0.7 euros), like those I am sending you. I am only looking for 10,000. We shall easily dispose of them. They are no more than 0.20 centimes and the spiritual advantages are very worthwhile. I am sending you some of the first lot as a little souvenir.

Dearly Beloved Brother,

I received your second section, to which I make the same criticism as with the previous one: you do not sufficiently emphasize that Mary is the Sovereign Mistress of the Heart of Jesus, that is to say Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Likewise for the Annunciation..., the Visitation, the Nativity of Our Lord, the Presentation of Jesus Christ in the temple, the flight into Egypt, etc., you could have established this truth wonderfully well and brought it to our attention. You speak more of Mary and Our Lord. You are not, perhaps, sufficiently focused in all your deliberations on demonstrating the influence which Mary has always exercised over the Heart of her Son to warrant the conclusion that she rightly merits the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

If you can probe better, and more deeply, your subject-matter in what's left for you to send me, it will be great. The first section is already at the printers. I now await the arrival as soon as possible of the remainder of your work.

Issoudun, April 25, 1865, Feast of St. Mark

Your Grace,

The world is indebted to you, after God, for the rich treasure it has today in Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. When this new title for the Mother of God was spoken of for the first time in your Grace's presence, your fervent soul thrilled with joy. Then being highly intelligent, and with characteristic sharpness, you evaluated the title, and there, conscious that it represented what was glorious in Mary and comforting for her children, you deigned to approve it and give it your blessing. Conscious of the wonders performed each day, you understood, Your Grace, that there was here a rich treasury to be drawn on for the enrichment of the world. Casting a glance on Church and world, you saw the abyss becoming more hollow, immediate problems becoming obvious issues, and difficult, despairing, issues growing apace. To you as well as the immortal Pius IX, the Heart of Jesus, unique source of all grace, seemed to be the remedy for all our woes. But since in the designs of the Most High everything comes through Mary, Your Grace considered that she who commands the Heart of God, should have such significant concerns identified with her, and with this in mind you set up, on April 11, 1864, an Association in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to deal successfully with difficult and desperate issues, both in the spiritual and temporal order.

On the Feast of St. Frances de Sales, January 29, 1864, the Archbishop's letter formally approved the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association. When at Issoudun for Confirmation in April, the 6th, he himself read out the Association's Statutes in the Sacred Heart Church.

Jesus Christ's Vicar (the Pope), at Your Grace's request, deigned to approve and enrich with special indulgences this work, the impact of which becomes more and more wonderful. To meet the wishes of these associate members, we undertook this unpretentious work aimed at making better known Our Lady of the Sacred Heart's glory, power and mercy. The increasing impact of the glorious Sovereignty of Jesus' Heart, the miracles and favours beyond enumeration obtained before His picture, or through invoking His name, draw us to hope that these considerations are not inopportune.

Chevalier's "unpretentious work" was that written by Jouët, see letter immediately above, and yet, see below, Chevalier insisted that Jouët should not identify himself as the author of the work! Jouët could not but be lastingly nettled, miffed.

The foregoing, Your Grace, are the factors which motivated the production of this book which we are pleased, and honoured, to present to Your Grace. By placing it under your gracious protection, may we ask that your blessing become an assurance of the good it will bring about.

With deep regards, I am, Your Grace, your humble and devoted Son in the Hearts of Joseph, Mary, Jesus.

J. Chevalier, Mis. du SC.

We have examined the work entitled: Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, or Thirty-Two Considerations on Mary, Queen of Jesus' Heart, followed by anecdotes which demonstrate her power. In keeping with the favourable testimony we have received, not only do we authorize the publication but, no less so, we recommend straight away that it be read by pious believers, and we express the hope that it will also have a widespread impact among the faithful, and even in religious communities.

Preface to the book, Thirty-Two Considerations on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Heaven is always pleased over the course of time to create institutions in keeping with its plans and the needs of souls. Our century began under the auspices of Mary. The disastrous havoc which the Revolution (French) had, a pervasive impact everywhere on minds and hearts, urgently calling for the efficacious intervention of Her who is called the Réparatrix of humanity's evils. Moreover, the cult of the Holy Virgin has made a lively impact throughout France and the world, and the promulgation of the dogma of the Immaculate Conception has given to this devotion its final crowning achievement by associating the Mother of God with incomparable splendour, ushering in a new era of greatness and regeneration. Since then, a new sun arises more radiantly from this resplendent dawn, warming more and more with its heat, suffusing spirits and hearts.

This new sun, already raised above the world in the 17th century, is the Heart of Jesus, source of all grace, hearth of authentic love and every worthy feeling, soul of our souls, life of our life. Since December 8, 1854, a never to be forgotten day, devotion to the Sacred Heart has greatly advanced. It has spread everywhere and today its saving impact reaches to all corners of the globe. The hour of the Divine Heart's reign, proclaimed by Our Lord Himself, predicted by Saint John and St. Gertrude, has been sounded. The beatification of the venerable Margaret-Mary Alacoque, lover par excellence of the Sacred Heart and revealer of this devotion, will give it a new thrust and have a powerful impact in spreading it. And the ineffable Virgin Mary, who has opened for us this inexhaustible source of blessings, comes again under a new title to be poured out on the world. The title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, with which she is dignified, and which the immortal Pius the 9th approved of, sufficiently speaks to us of the sublime role she exercises for this generation, and for society, through the Heart of her Son. And the end of the 19th century, while belonging in particular to the Sacred Heart, will also belong to Her who is its mother, the Sovereign one.

To meet the wishes of the many devotees of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, we felt the need to write this work. The thirty-two sections of which it consists have as their aim a better understanding of the glories of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the unlimited power which she exercises over the Heart of her Son, and the insatiable desire she has to share among us all those treasures of love and mercy which she dispenses. This book, eagerly sought and patiently waited on, can be very helpfully used during the month of May. The reflections to which it gives rise can highlight the Mother of God's wonderful prerogatives, and instruct us to go to the Heart of Jesus through Her who is our Lady, drawing us to celebrate more profitably the Month of the Sacred Heart of which that of Mary is no more than preparatory and its dawn. Each reflection ends with an allegory which is full of interest and a story demonstrating the impact and goodness of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

If these lines, dear readers, draw from you good thoughts, reassure you in your concerns, boost your confidence, bring joy to your troubled hearts, and stimulate your love for Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, be so good as to pray for us also and we, for our part, promise that we shall not forget you before the all-powerful Queen of the Heart of Jesus.

Conforming to Pope Urbain the Eighth's decree, we state that nothing more than purely human faith is supportive of the graces, revelations, miraculous facts referred to in this work, except for what has been confirmed by the holy, catholic, apostolic, Roman Catholic Church, and submitting everything to the Holy See's judgment, to which alone belongs the decision in such matters, and before which I am, and wish to be in every respect, a most submissive son.

My Dear Brother,

I am sending on to you by train the parcel containing 'The Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart'. Give them (the copies) to those you wish. You can do the best you can with the rest. If you need any more, I have some available for you. This production, coming a little late for the month of May, will not be greatly sought after this year, but it can, nevertheless, be availed of for the month of the Sacred Heart. Generally speaking, it has been well received and is much appreciated. For the next edition, which is not likely before nine or ten months, corrections, changes, additions, which I already mentioned to you, will have to be made. You must re-write the second point, left out at page 22. I would ask you when making the changes to refer more prominently to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and not to pass over any opportunity, any phrase, when emphasizing this wonderful title... The vein is open, one must take advantage. As well, you must add a preliminary consideration which will be relevant to the beginning of the month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, which always starts on April 30. This will make it have thirty-two considerations. I think that you do well not to speak about your involvement in this work to the curates or to others. The Virgin herself kept the most deep silence relating to her participation in the Incarnation when she received her title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Take pattern from her.

There are here two reasons for this cautionary silence: one directly concerns Jouët himself who still requires the approval of the Marseilles diocesan authorities to join the MSCs; and the other is dictated by Chevalier's continuing concern to associate every publication with the MSC Issoudun community. Something similar happened a few years previously, 1862, when Piperon was largely identified with the first printed work of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. It is much the same now with Jouët's 'Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart'.

We have for the time-being printed one thousand copies at 40 centimes each (1.44 euros). Given the expense involved in trips to Bourges, correspondence, etc., the cost will easily come to 50 centimes (1.80 euros). I doubt if we shall dispose of the thousand during the current year. I do not give up however. I am still hopeful about the month of June. Do not send any money to cover the initial expenses. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will look after that. You need only send me, that is if you consider it opportune however, the proceeds of the titles you sold... As for the statue, you can only have forwarded a plastic one, 0.60 centimetres in dimension since it costs 30 francs in Paris (roughly 108 euros). Sending it, from there, given the cost of postage, would bring the price to 40 francs (about 143 euros).

We are praying for your sister and for the Bishop of Marseilles. (Jouët had six sisters; nothing is clear about which one it was or what was wrong.) Take good care of yourself and return to full health... We would be very happy to have you with us at the Sacred Heart, Issoudun. Your presence here is greatly needed. Together with us, you could do so much for the glory of God and the triumph of the Sacred Heart. We shall be making a novena to Blessed Margaret-Mary Alacoque for this intention. St. Joseph has sent us a good priest who wishes to be a missionary of the Sacred Heart and live with us; he is, besides, well educated, having been a chaplain at a sisters' mother house in Paris (Chevalier does not name the Congregation). Fifty years of age, he has been with us for the past fifteen days, and we are very pleased.

Chevalier is writing about Paulin Georgelin, 1810-1879, then fifty-five, not fifty as Chevalier writes. Cultured, a former teacher, he had spent fifteen years as chaplain to the FCJ sisters, Faithful Companions of Jesus, first at rue de la Santé, then at Chantilly. His sisters were educated by the foundress herself, Marie-Madeleine de Bengy, from the Berry, and through her Georgelin became aware of Chevalier's Issoudun community where he arrived on April 23, 1865, and would go on to become Chevalier's 'Latinist' and 'literary critic', as well as being close to the first English-speaking MSC, J.M. Neenan, see Late But Not Too Late: under J.M. Neenan.

My Dear Brother,

I was delighted to get your letter. While engaging yourself with external matters, do not neglect looking after your soul and the pursuit of perfection. The copies for the month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart did not go beyond 500. I didn't have time to introduce changes to the second printing. You could opportunely re-set the Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and finish up with a better result. Otherwise, if you are definitely coming to stay with us, we can come to an understanding with each other. We shall be so happy if the divine Heart of Jesus makes possible this togetherness under the same roof. Let's hope and pray.

The Bishop of Marseilles' health worries us greatly. We commend wholeheartedly His Lordship to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I sincerely hope that the Lord will favour you so that you can have your ceremony at Château-Gombert (a Marseilles suburb where the parish priest Anselme Jauvat would, on June 5 of this year, set up in the parish a Confraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and for the following five years until his death, February 1870, he was actively involved with his young friend Jouët in spreading the devotion). Devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will greatly benefit. Don't worry, this good Mother will be your inspiration.

Do not forget that Wednesday, the 31st, is the Feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, with a plenary indulgence. I am sending you some more pamphlets for the Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. The second printing is almost sold out and I am arranging for a third. You might give the individual who sells our different publications, etc., ten or fifteen per cent of the profits. By giving ten per cent, she should have 0.10 centimes (about 1.52 euros) for herself from each monthly issue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. With regards to the statues, you should contact Mr. Raffl in Paris. The Liturgical Week is interesting, but I haven't scarcely the time to read it and, accordingly, it's better that you benefit from it. My confrères send you greetings.

Dearly loved brother, cheerio. Be always assured of my warm regards in SS.CC.JMJ.,

J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

We have gained a good priest from the diocese of Paris who has relinquished a good post to come to us. He is fifty-two or fifty-three years of age; well educated. (Chevalier is referring to P. Georgelin, see previous letter.) A forty-eight-year-old priest has also asked to come to us. I commend the foregoing to your prayers.

My Dearest Sister in Jesus Christ,

I am delighted to gather that your indifferent health has improved. I hope that you will find at Blessed Margaret-Mary's (Alacoque) shrine the resources for soul and body of which you are in need to carry out your lovely apostolate. Do not forget me in any way, I plead, on your cherished pilgrimage. (M. de Montaignac went to Paray-le-Monial in June 1865; following the beatification, April 24, 1864, the number of pilgrims greatly increased.) We pray especially for you. I did so in particular on the Feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. From now on, from morning to evening, you are associated with our prayers. I am delighted with the structures you are preparing at Montluçon for the Third Order. I shall be at Paray-le-Monial for the Feast of the Sacred Heart. It will be our dear confrère Guyot who will receive your good novices.

Jean-Baptiste Guyot, born July 12, 1827, temporally professed January 20, 1863, finally on October 20, 1869, went from being parish priest of St. Paul, Montluçon, to the novitiate as Novice-Master in 1869, and adviser, assistant, to Chevalier. Following many postings, he died on April 22, 1914 at Vichy where he had lived from 1887.

I have just received a letter from Mademoiselle de Ribains (who had founded at Puy a house of the Third Order similar to that of Chevalier's correspondent at Montluçon) and from Father Ramière (SJ) telling me about the success of the Puy venture. I am invited to go there also for the Feast of the Sacred Heart. I'm afraid not; quite impossible! Father Pipéron has got over his exhaustion; thank you for your concern. I shall tell off the parish priest of St. Paul. I shall not forget the cook business... it is awkward. (Chevalier provides no further details about his sense of vexation.) We receive more mass offerings than we can say; many thanks for your sensitive and kind offer. Through the intermediary of Mademoiselle Clémentine (Pirot) I sent the Sacred Heart hymns on to Mademoiselle Waldegg.

The latter was one of M. de Montaignac's pioneer companions. Both would be at Issoudun four years later, September 8, for the crowning of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statue where, during a visit lasting three weeks, and encouraged by Chevalier, they bought, at Place Vouët, a house for conversion to a hostel for pilgrims to Issoudun, of which Mademoiselle de Waldegg took charge. Five years later, 1874, they left Issoudun, the house now purchased through funding from J.M. Vandel's 'Little Work', 'Petite Oeuvre du Sacré-Coeur', already mentioned above. (See Late But Not Too Late, passim.) It now became the foundation house of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, about whom more below.

As for your bank account, you should contact the director general; that would be quite in order for you. Otherwise, since it has to do with the setting-up of a process, be good enough to consult Rev. Father Ramière.

With deepest regards, please accept my good wishes, dear Sister.

J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

Mont-Dore
July 9, 1865
At Mr. Brugière, Senior
Puy-de-Dôme

My Dear Sister in Jesus Christ,

The length of time it has taken me to answer your letter must have surprised you. Your kind letter arrived the very moment I left for Le Puy and Mont-Dore. I arrived at Le Puy on Wednesday at 3pm and I left next day at 11pm. I met Father Ramière who has been exceptionally kind to me. Both of us paid a visit to the Bishop (Pierre-Marc Le Breton, Bishop of Puy since September 1863) who seems to be very interested in the Third Order's work and the priestly apostolate.

Mademoiselle de Ribains, although in pain, managed to get together ten of her colleagues who seemed very impressive to me, and very well disposed. The children in the convent sewing room were delightful. Altogether, I believe that Le Puy offers the best of resources for our Work. On my way here from Paray-le-Monial I called on the Bishop of Moulins at Bishop's House since I did not meet him at Paray (de Dreux-Brézé). It was 10am. The porter informed me that his Lordship and Father Gibert (his Vicar General) would not be available until 1pm. Since I had to leave Moulins at mid-day, I was sorry I couldn't see them. The Archbishop of Bourges had a long conversation with the Bishop of Moulins at Paray about the Priests' 'Work' (see earlier letters on Chevalier's plan, 'work', to incorporate diocesan priests) and the Third Order. It appears that your good Bishop is very taken by Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne's supportive words and is now himself very much in favour of our undertakings... Deo Gratias. The Bishop of Moulins would like to meet me and have a chat. I hope to meet him when returning from Mont-Dore on the 25th or 26th.

I read with keen interest your report for the months of May and June. By making the effort and being a little more focused you will turn out to be a worthy child of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. I forgot to mention Canon Alliandi when I was chatting with Father Ramière. (Alliandi was the diocesan director of the Apostolate of Prayer at Moutiers, Savoy, Tarentaise diocese, and he had been suggested as Director of the Tertiaries of the Sacred Heart for this new centre.) Your idea is excellent: be good enough to write to him and delegate in my name the necessary authority, which I do most wholeheartedly. Yes, we must set up as many centres as possible. It would be good if you could spend a fortnight in Lyons if you are well enough. Your presence in that city would do a lot of good. Everything you tell me about our dear, kind, workers at Montluçon greatly pleases me. I am not in the least surprised; the spirit of the Sacred Heart is with them. On my way back from Mont-Dore I shall be very pleased if I can pass through Montluçon. In any event, I shall not have to wait very long to make that little trip. I wish to be remembered in the sisters' prayers.

The parish priest is a great loss as he involved himself so much in your work. (Father Antoine Guilhomet, parish priest of Notre Dame, the main Montluçon parish, had just been appointed parish priest at Moulins Cathedral.) Let's hope that his replacement will follow in his footsteps. I am pleased to hear that you continue to find Louise Lévêque satisfactory. I only met Mademoiselle Clémentine at Issoudun. I believe she was at Tours with the Victims of the Sacred Heart Sisters when Father Bieuville (SJ) preached a retreat there. Did she stay? I doubt it. What you tell me about Mademoiselle Captier doesn't in the least surprise me; I had come to that conclusion from her letters. (Captier would later advise her brother, Jean, an eccentric mystic and frequent seeker of advice from the Curé of Ars, to contact Chevalier about getting a teaching post at the MSC Chezal-Benoît College - Petite Oeuvre.) I know the name and reputation of Mademoiselle de Beuvray. Madame de Verneuil often spoke of her as a very pious person. The Archbishop of Bourges will savour her overtures, but she would do herself a favour to contact the Jesuit Fathers or, better still, Canon Pélicat who is given greatly to the Confessional and very highly regarded in society. But, particularly at Bourges, one must be very circumspect. There are a number of women in the Third Order of St. Dominic and St. Francis with whom one should exercise great discretion.

I hope to send a young Issoudun girl to you at Montluçon for two or three days. She is very drawn to the Sacred Heart and could become a nun; she comes from the working class, her parents living from their earnings.

The girl was Anna Marchand, 1830-1927, who became a Tertiary (Third Order) Novice in 1866 and was professed in 1867. When Chevalier formed his own Third Order group at Issoudun, disengaging from that at Montluçon, the Society of those vowed to the Cult of the Sacred Heart, Anna was the first to be chosen, going on to contribute greatly to the organization and recruitment of this new Third Order, also becoming a very involved secretary of the Pilgrimages and supporter of the 'Petite Oeuvre', dying at the age of 97.

I am also looking at a girl of quality from the upper class in Bourges, only 26 years old. I shall speak to you about her later. As for yourself, my dear sister, be always submissive to the holy and adorable Will of God. He will help you in all you need to carry out your responsibility; do not worry. By responding to the graces made available to you, you will become saint. Pray for me just as I pray for you.

Wholly yours in the divine Heart of Jesus.

J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

NB: I met Father de Nolhac at Paray (a Jesuit of the Lyons Province who, from October 1860, was director of the Moulins minor seminary). We chatted for a bit. Coming through Moulins I visited the Superior of the Sacred Heart Convent who was very kind and thoughtful.

Dear Countess,

I am very sorry that your early departure made it impossible for me to thank you for the lovely and graceful cruets you presented to us. This gift will be all the more appreciated because it comes from you, always there to remind me of the deeply grateful feelings which overcame me. I would like to think, Countess, that the spa waters you have been taking have, or will have, an unailing effect. I am now five days at Mont-Dore (he met J.M. Vandel there two days earlier, July 9). I am following a demanding and regular course of treatment which the doctor considers to be beneficial. Every day I take a big bath, with water sprayed on the neck and throat. I spend three or four hours in the spray room and breathing room: I drink, gargle, etc. If I am not cured, at least I know I have neglected nothing to bring this about. The Mont Dore's climate, which maybe you know, is very changeable. We pass all of a sudden from intense heat to winter-like cold. Despite this, people are in good health and there are very many visitors.

Give my regards to those ladies, and commend me to Mademoiselle Marie's prayers, while I for my part will not forget her.

Be pleased, Countess, to accept my kindest good wishes in Our Lord.

I am very sorry for the delay in writing to you. I have been away from Issoudun for three weeks, here in Mont-Dore for the past three days, where I am taking the waters for my throat infection. I was delighted to hear about the enthusiastic way you fêted Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in your fervent parish and the enthusiasm with which this new devotion is received in your area. God will bless you and your undertakings. You cannot have a canonical association in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in your church until it becomes an Arch-Confraternity; the request has already been forwarded to Rome.

You do well to organize a pilgrimage to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, carrying out all the advice you have been given and, while waiting the setting-up of your Association, you could forward us the names of those who wish to join so that they can share in the benefits. If you need medals, printed sheets, etc., get in touch with Fr. Bazire, the Association's assistant director at Issoudun, because I shall not be returning there until the end of the month. The gift of that property which you mention is truly providential. God has His reasons! Our mutual friend, Fr. Jouët, will be talking to you about our work, I hope. If you see him, tell him I was asking for him.

Please accept, Father, and confrère, my deepest good wishes in SS.CC.JMJ.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

This is the first-ever use of the invocation in the correspondence at the Rome archives.

I am very sorry I couldn't reply earlier. Since I returned from Paray-le-Monial I have been away from Issoudun all the time. Now I hope to leave Mont-Dore on the 26th of the month.

1. All you tell me about Our Lady of the Sacred Heart delights and boosts me. I am so pleased that there is an Association foundation at Château-Gombert. While waiting for our Arch-Confraternity status, not likely to take very long, the parish priest would do well to send on the names of those people who want to join, and then he could have a church meeting once a week in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, read the notices which he will have received, say the thanksgiving prayers. We can make tickets, pictures, medals, books on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart available to the priest at the cheapest price.

2. You are right not getting too preoccupied: the Sacred Heart of Jesus will do more than us. I am very pleased with what you have to tell me. One can see in all this the wonderful working out of Providence. Very soon there will be many confrères of the Sacred Heart at Marseilles. Everything which has taken place is only preparatory. Our dear priestly 'Work' of the Sacred Heart quite obviously meets a need of the time. You could speak at your meeting on July 19 and bring the good priest you mention, also those who are sympathetic. I believe that the parish priest of Château-Gombert could well be one of us. Let me know about your reunion.

3. Yes, I agree with you, your friend could become one of us; he is too much a devotee of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart himself not to become one of us.

Chevalier refers here, for the first time, to Fr. Xavier Deidier, 1836-1900, a Marseilles diocesan priest since 1859 who became an MSC on 13 May 1878. He became the founder of Madeley College. See Late But Not Too Late. At this time he was working on his 'Devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart', Bourges, Issoudun, 1867.

I am certain that the Reign of the Heart of Jesus, whose glories he extols, will reward him by making him part of our little Society. Sound out his attitudes. I have no doubt that they are favourable, and he can be introduced to our cherished Work (the Society). We shall take responsibility for the printing of his work on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and give him as many copies as he wishes. I shall write to Father Guiol (Vicar General of Marseilles) along the lines you have pointed out to me. Like yourself, I see the advantages, and nothing which is off-putting. You are doing the right thing going to see your parents in Paris. We shall be delighted to see you in Issoudun. You could always stay there! From the first of August I shall be free, but I must go away from Issoudun again from August the third until the thirteenth. We shall settle our accounts at Issoudun. There is now a third edition of 'The Month of the Sacred Heart', 500 copies only. Ask Fr. Piperon to send you as many as you want. Ask him also for pictures and medals, etc. Eight days ago, when I was at Puy, Bishop Le Breton was very favourable to our priestly Work, and also the Bishop of Moulins (De Dreux-Brézé) when I saw him recently.

Cheerio, dear brother. Pray for him who does not at all forget you in SS.CC.JMJ.

Dear Father,

I am here at Mont-Dore undergoing treatment for my strained throat.

Last week the ways of Divine Providence brought me into contact in this area with Father Vandel who, as you know, is so greatly respected. For some time I have been keen on meeting him and discussing our dear Work of the Sacred Heart, since I had persuaded myself that there was a shared outlook and attitude between him and us, etc. Over four days we were able to meet and share our thoughts. His ideas effectively correspond with ours and I can say that ours are his. The following resulted from our talk: "Since we pursue the same aim, and unity is conducive to strength, let us join together for the successful outcome of the worthy work which calls upon the commitment of us all." We reached unanimity on the changes needed for our little Society's Plan (blue print). No doubt he will be talking to you about this since he told me that he would be going to see you in the near future. (Vandel, on his journey to Paris, stopped off at Issoudun for a couple of hours between trains.) Fr. Vandel is a man of God, a very special man. His insights and advice will greatly help us. It is our one wish that he take charge of the undertaking which he leads, I am sure, both wisely and prudently. The more I move about, dear Father, the more convinced I am that this apostolate answers a need of the time. It is already active in five or six diocese. The priests involved are particularly edifying.

The Bishop of Marseilles is very favourable and supportive. His Lordship, before he became ill, sent one of his best priests to study our rules and be admitted. (Chevalier here refers to Jouët's Christmas-time visit, 1864, at the time a teacher in the Saint-Louis College, Marseilles.) Two or three others are now co-joined with him. The Bishop of Moulins is aware of it since he sees it functioning in his diocese, and is very pleased with it. His Lordship, through the intermediary of the Archbishop of Bourges (the latter, as ever, very supportive), sent a message that he wanted to meet me to consider greater expansion for the work. On my way from Mont-Dore I hope to stop-off around the 26th of the month at Moulins. The Bishop of Puy, whom I saw recently, is particularly appreciative and is about to recommend it to some of his best priests. If Fr. Vandel joins us, it will be easy to draw his missionary priests to our work. If resident in Issoudun Fr. Vandel could easily look after the admirable Country Work (see above, biographical note on Vandel) and go to Paris when required. That which sustains our isolated priests in their fervour and steady consistency is the daily evaluation and monthly appraisal. I am sending you a copy of each. Kindly let me know what you think, if it needs to be expanded or shortened.

With good wishes and deep respect in SS.CC.JMJ.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Mont-Dore
July 20, 1865

Dear Confrère,

Thanks a thousand for so kindly letting me have your cheering news. My Issoudun confrères have already spoken to me of your all-too-short visit to the Sacred Heart (on the way from Mont-Dore to Paris, what was his first Issoudun visit on the morning of July 14, 1865, met by Father Piperon. He went on to Paris that afternoon). They were very pleased to meet you... Father Georgelin was at Argenton (sur Creuse) for perpetual adoration. It means that he had not yet arrived back. Another time, he will be more fortunate, I hope.

Georgelin and Vandel had already met in Savoy. Paulin Louis Georgelin was born at St. Etienne, June 22, 1810; he would be fifty-nine years of age when he became an MSC, September 27, 1869. He died at St. Cyr parish, Issoudun, in April 1872.

Like you I look forward to our coming together. The more I think about it the more I consider it to be part of God's plans, and that it will all turn out for His glory. Let us pray and await the hour set out by Providence. Nevertheless, let us hope that it will not be long in coming. I have arranged for the young woman in question to go on retreat from August 24. I hope that nothing will come in her way.

Vandel, beginning on the evening of August 24, attended the retreat in Paris for his 'Teachers (female), of the Countryside'. Chevalier had suggested that Mademoiselle Pirot, at the moment assistant in charge of the Issoudun boarding-school next to St. Cyr, should take part in this retreat with a view to her becoming actively involved in the schools under the patronage of the 'Work of the Countryside'.

Many thanks for passing on to me Fr. Leblanc's appreciated regards; it is only to be expected.

I conveyed your message to the kind people with whom you stayed. It is impossible for one to describe how happy they were. They were all at home. They have asked me to thank you on their behalf and express their gratitude. The priests at the presbytery likewise send you their kindest regards. The parish priest is very grateful to you for the prompt manner in which you looked after his books as well as the library itself.

A concern for 'The Countryside Work' was the supervising of parish libraries, and Vandel, as in this instance, took supervisory charge, together with lay members of the 'Work'.

I commend myself to your prayers; I for my part will not forget you.

With all good wishes, Father, and deepest regards in SS.CC.JMJ.

Issoudun, July 30, 1865

Mademoiselle,

I hasten to send you some of the Association's tickets; we are running out of them for the moment. I add with this posting some scapulars of the Sacred Heart. I met yesterday the young lady who went with Countess du Quesne to Nérís (Nérís-les-Bains, Allier, a spa). The Bishop of Moulins had told her about our Sacred Heart Third Order and suggested that she should speak to me about her interest. Her disposition is excellent. Tomorrow I shall receive her as a novice and she can then write to you for instructions. I think that she could do a great deal for our work at Toulon.

Mademoiselle Louise de Méloizes, about whom I have spoken to you, is leaving for Nérís with her mother this week. I pressed her to make every effort to meet you. But since she doesn't want Madame des Méloizes to know about it, I doubt if she will [be able to meet you]. I go away for ten days on Wednesday morning. I am going to relax a little with my elderly mother at Richelieu in Touraine (see here also, Late But Not Too Late). Pray for me and I shall pray for you. Father Barret, an ex-Jesuit, is here with us all the time, feeling perfectly at ease with us. So far we ourselves are really quite pleased. Pray...

Barret, whatever Chevalier might have hoped, no more than passed through Issoudun.

With respectful and kind regards Mademoiselle, in SS.CC.JMJ.

J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

Next week 25 copies of the abridged Constitutions of the Third Order will reach you. I shall send the same number to Mademoiselle de Ribains (at Puy-en-Velay) and ten to Father Ramière.

This Jesuit, Ramière, on meeting Father Piperon in 1862, became very supportive of Chevalier's project, and on becoming aware of Mademoiselle de Montaignac's association with Issoudun, encouraged her to become a supporter of the 'Issoudun Work' (l'Oeuvre d'Issoudun), hence the forwarding of copies also to the supportive Ramière.

Richelieu, August 7, 1865

Dear Father and Confrère,

I have been away from Issoudun for eight days and I am not returning there until the end of next week. Many thanks for your kind letter, the confidence it instils and the hope it generates. We earnestly pray for your intentions. Our coming together, I am convinced, will be owed to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I hope your health has improved a little. I feel no improvement so far since I returned from Mont-Dore. It seems that these waters (spa) do not have an effect until two months later. Our priestly 'Work' is progressing. The Bishop of Moulins, whom I met twelve days ago, is very well disposed. We have great hopes, too, for the diocese of Beauvois... Deo Gratias! I am sending you two or three copies of the new edition. I believe that it offers enough for the time being and that it will be generally well accepted. If you have any comments, don't hesitate to let me know.

Chevalier is, no doubt, referring to the plan, blue print, of the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, established at Issoudun, Indre, with the support and blessing of Pius IX and the approval of the Archbishop of Bourges. Printed by E. Pigelet, Bourges.

I enclose also in this envelope some directives about the Sacred Heart Third Order and I give you full authorization to admit those you consider suitable. (The booklet referred to is 'The Third Order of the Sacred Heart of Jesus', approved and canonically established by the Archbishop of Bourges. Printed by E. Pigelet, Bourges, 1865.) The general president lives at Montluçon, Mademoiselle Louise de Montaignac. You will receive the 'Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart' in Paris on the 24th. These publications are only available in Issoudun. This is not right, we should be making them available in Paris. The teacher about whom I contacted you (Clémentine Pirot, Issoudun) is about to write to you. She is going to make herself available for the work (Vandel's apostolate to the Countryside). She is a great acquisition.

I commend myself to your prayers and look forward with pleasure, Father, to our next meeting.

With deep regards in SS.CC.JMJ.

Dear Brother,

I have just returned from a fairly long trip. I received your letter, but I was unable to reply. This evening I merely wish to greet you and wish you well. I shall write at length to you this coming week. Perpetual Adoration will take place in our chapel on the 1st, 2nd and 3rd of September. We have no preacher. Come and preach. We shall expect you on the 30th or 31st of this month.

*Jouët, on holiday in the Paris area at this time, accepted Chevalier's invitation and preached on September 8. Issoudun, August 26, 1865

My Dear Sister in Jesus Christ,

Thanks for your concern. My health is improving. I hope it is also the case with yours. I beg you to take care of yourself. Your reports from Chambéry seemed very worthwhile. You did very well to send on a copy summarizing the ideas. If needed I can send you several copies. I have not yet heard from Father Ramière following his visit to Beauvois; I cannot, then, tell you anything. Madame Méloizes is still at Nérès, but suffering greatly. I am amazed that our associate in Toulon has not written to us; his name, momentarily, escapes me. I can only forward his address, then. I believe I have set up in Tours some candidates for the Third Order. I left a copy of the manual with Father d'Outremont, an honorary arch-priest, very influential.

Richelieu (in Touraine) contains choice souls. The parish priest, to whom I spoke about the Third Order, is very well disposed. I believe that Chinon will also provide recruits. I shall shortly go to Bourges and see the canon in question. If the doctor prescribes the air of the South (Midi) for you during the winter, blindly obey. I understand the need you are experiencing to unite yourself to Our Lord Jesus Christ through the closest bonds. I support this desire and suggest you commit yourself to bring it about as soon as possible. You could, in effect, make use of our formula; I think that is enough. To accompany the vows present a little summary which would be explanatory for lay women, and we shall examine it. I shall speak about it to Father Ramière. Write and ask him if it is all right for you to travel to Lyon in fifteen days. We could, in a forthcoming edition, bring together the Rule prayers and the little office of the Sacred Heart which you mentioned. Be kind enough to give it to Father Piperon who is going to Montluçon on Tuesday. To help me, write on a sheet of paper all the prayers of the Rule, which would need to be printed.

I commend myself to your good prayers. Be kind enough to offer my respects to Mademoiselle Waldegg.

My kindest regards, dear sister, in SS.CC.JMJ.

J. Chevalier, Mis.MSC.

An Alsatian, Félicité de Klokler de Waldegg, from Altkirch, Upper Alsace, born 23.11.1827, into a noble family, educated by the Dames of the Sacred Heart, she was advised by Mother Sophie Barat to see Fr. Doix who then put her in touch with Mademoiselle de Montaignac at Néris-les-Bains, July 1860, and the close association of de Waldegg and Louise de Montaignac and her work began at this time. De Waldegg, for family reasons, deferred her entry until June 1, 1861. She would go on to open the Third Order house at Issoudun, playing an important role beside de Montaignac. Having supervised several houses, she died at Toulouse, May 5, 1900.

My Dear Sister,

You do well to look after yourself. Health is a treasure which the good Lord has bestowed upon us and, like everything else, we must render an account. I, together with yourself, thank the Lord also for your being spared the journey to the Midi. (South of France, towards and along the coast.) I am, however, pleased that you made the trip to Lyons. I hope that the divine Heart will reward you. I freely send you all the necessary faculties for Fr. Monnot or anyone else. (Ambrose Monnot, SJ, presided at the profession of M. de Montaignac on September 8, Chevalier, most likely, held up at Issoudun by his work and state of health.) I am aware that when founding a work, it can happen sometimes that one has to work outside the Novitiate regulations, etc. (De Montaignac was not, canonically, a novice and Chevalier did not require from her the entrance procedure set down in the Rule.) I have not, moreover, yet received Father Ramière's letters. Health permitting, it would be good to visit our Puy sisters. Mademoiselle Beauvais de Lorient, Vannes diocese, whom I admitted as a Third Order novice a few days ago, intends to write to you. She is very religious. She came to visit Madame du Quesne who is in charge of the guest house and about thirty-three years of age. Thanks for your summary of the situation. Stay close always to Our Lord Jesus Christ.

Dear Father,

I was greatly pleased to receive your kind letter. Like yourself I am sorry that Mademoiselle Pirot didn't take part in the retreat. In any case you will see her at Issoudun and have a chat with her. You might come to visit us when your work allows it. We shall be delighted to have you. I shall not be away from Issoudun for the time being. If you would like to meet Fr. Piperon at the Sacred Heart, come next Wednesday or Thursday as he leaves to give a retreat on the 10th and will not return until the 20th of this month. He will then be staying at the house until November. (It was Piperon who met Vandel on his brief first visit when travelling on July 14th, 1865, from Mont-Dore to Paris.)

The devout people whose names you have written in the register of the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart can gain a plenary indulgence on Christmas Day. Thank you for your zeal and dedication. We have no more association cards. Fr. Boiteux from Saint-Sulpice had been promising them from one day to the next. (Otherwise he had been supplying pictures and religious articles to Issoudun.) I am forwarding some circulars... Be so kind as to tell Madame de Fresne, if you see her, that I forwarded to Mademoiselle Pirot the letter she sent to me for her. This lady is currently at Vierzon, but she will come to Issoudun as soon as you arrive here. I hope that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will draw us together for the greater glory of his divine Son. As always I commend myself to your prayers.

Issoudun, September 10, 1865

Dear Father,

May the holy Will of God be done! Heaven will reward you for your charitable act at this moment. (Vandel stayed on as chaplain to the Villeneuve-Bargemon family at Courcelles, Maine Department, when, because of a cholera outbreak, they could not return to the Midi.) I think that Mademoiselle Pirot will make herself available to Madame de Fresne; she is a valuable acquisition. Come to Issoudun as soon as you can; we shall all be so delighted to see you, chat with you and plan together... I believe that the good Lord has his plans for the 'Work' of the Sacred Heart. I am not in the least surprised by the views of Fathers Leblanc and Pététot. (The Jesuit Leblanc is already a familiar figure; Pététot was at this time the Oratorians' Superior General, following his 1852 re-founding of the group in France.) We share their thinking also since you have stated that there will be no imposition of vows on priests who work in the pastoral apostolate, and not even for those who would like to come and share our precious solitude with us at Issoudun. We leave them their freedom; it's a work of the Holy Spirit.

I am very pleased to be made aware of the good-will your missionary parish priests (see above, on Vandel's apostolate) have for our Society. Let us hope the number grows. Do not worry about the small amount of money which you have to send on to us. We can settle that little account when you come to Issoudun. We pray to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for you, for our plans. I hope that you from your side do not forget us.

Kindest regards and good wishes in SS.CC.JMJ.

Issoudun, October 1, 1865

My Dear Sister,

I read your letter with great interest. I thank the Lord for the strength which made this journey possible and for the success with which he crowned your efforts. The divine Heart of Jesus wishes to extend his kingdom. May he be blessed forever! (Chevalier is referring to his correspondent's trip to Lyons lasting eight days and returning through Le Puy where she met Mademoiselle de Ribains.) I didn't know Mademoiselles Guignonet and Beauvais until Madame du Quesne told me about them. But from what you tell me, I do not think they are in any way suitable for the Third Order of the Sacred Heart. I share your viewpoint; great care is necessary if the undertaking is not to be compromised. I hope to go to Montluçon during the month of November. My health is slowly picking up; the bronchitis I brought back from Mont-Dore is still there... I commend myself to your prayers. We had to get rid of the unfortunate Father Barret (also, as here written Barré, the ex-Jesuit who had been staying in Issoudun). He is well on the way towards a state of delusion.

A new priest has come to join us. Who is he? I don't know yet; I am asking for particulars about him. It appears that dear Father Bieuville has been appointed to Vannes (from Bourges). I shall send on the little leaflets you wanted together with one or two little pamphlets. I myself shall bring the scapulars. Be so good and make me remember this. I am delighted to hear that Mademoiselle de Ribains is very well. (She founded at Puy-en-Velay a house of the Sacred Heart Third Order.) Now that you have returned to your cherished solitude, it will be easier for you to follow your own regulations. Continue as always to be guided by the feelings and concern of the divine Heart of Jesus.

My Dear Sister,

You are a child of suffering and trial! Deo Gratias. It is the fate of every soul who rests in the Heart of Jesus and becomes consecrated to his love. St. John, until the Last Supper, lived out his days bathed in peace, rest, and, I would even say, in happiness, the sky unclouded for him. But when he comes to lean on His Saviour's chest, penetrates the secrets of his Heart, all is changed. It is the agony of the garden, the Praetorium, the scourging, the Cross, Calvary... death. Privileged soul! Happy! Should I be sorry for you? No, but I pray greatly for you. You see how good Our Lord is; he will give you back your health when you need it.

I shall take myself, then, to Montluçon on the 27th arriving at 1.30, if nothing gets in the way. I very much hope that the divine Heart will bless the visit of Mademoiselle Ribains to Lyon.

We must expect the greatest problems... Everything will conspire against us. But it is when we think all is lost and we are wholly convinced of our frailty, that success awaits us. We throw a little grain into the earth and it must decompose before shooting up. The problems at Chambéry do not surprise me in the least; I am expecting anything. (The Chambéry centre was in the charge of Madame Céline de Buttet and, until the end of the following year, 1855, Monsignor François Gros who then became Bishop of Tarentaise.) From Mademoiselle Beauvais' letter I can clearly gather that in no way has she understood the whole thrust of the Sacred Heart Third Order. Following my reply, I am sure that she will stay quiet for the moment. I am pleased that our dear Father Guyot is well. My own health, however, leaves much to be desired.

Mademoiselle Clémentine is assistant in charge of a boarding school near St. Cyr. (Julie Piro's sister, a novice of the Sacred Heart Third Order, Issoudun, 1866-1867, when she was professed.) For the time being she wants to occupy herself in the schools of the 'Countryside Work'. (Vandel's special apostolate, see above, passim.) You will shortly receive the leaflets for the Sacred Heart scapular. It seems that the Jesuit, Father Barthaud (more correctly, Barthod), who is attached to the college at St. Etienne (Loire), has a great regard for the Sacred Heart Third Order and would like to have the authority to admit applicants. I informed him that I would willingly meet his wishes and asked him to write to you.

Greetings to the sisters. I commend myself to your prayers. The priest who wanted to come to us was not suitable...

Assuring you of my regards and good wishes,

October 8, 1865

Dear Father,

I was away from Issoudun for three days and this explains the delay in replying to you; please excuse me. Your kind letter, so eagerly awaited, made us all very happy. Thank you for giving us so much good news and letting us know about the marvellous happenings at Château-Gombert. It's wonderful. Long live Our Lady of the Sacred Heart! May her name be on all lips and her kindness recalled in the hearts of all! We haven't yet received the books you had printed in Tours (The Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, titled 'Thirty-One Considerations', Victor Jouët, and 'The Power of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart demonstrated by the facts', Charles Piperon, both works printed by J. Bouserez, Tours, 1865), and accordingly it is impossible to forward what you wanted... patience. We shall send them on to your address as soon as we get them.

Everything you say about the feelings of the Château-Gombert parish priest and Father Deidier greatly heartens me. (For Deidier see also Late But Not Too Late: Madeley, and passim.) Try to organize something worthwhile. We could make available a priest and brother from Issoudun. (For the first time there is here mentioned a brother member of the Society, possibly Henri Dechâtre, later to accompany Fr. Georgelin to a school at Rimont in the diocese of Autun at the end of December, 1866. Both of them would leave for Canada, Toronto, July 31, 1873. Deidier was a Marseilles diocesan priest. Ordained in 1859, he became an MSC May 31, 1878. This year, 1865. He began work on 'Devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart', published in February, 1867.)

Pray for all of us, especially for me. We do not forget you. I am pleased to hear that Fr. Deidier's book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is already well advanced. I shall be keen to see it appearing soon. It will do great good. You are very much missed at Issoudun. The parishioners are making novenas for you to return...

Dear Father,

Having been away I couldn't answer your kind letter any sooner. I am very sorry; please excuse me.

1. I got your cheque for 65 francs. (Roughly 234 euros.) Thank you; the ex-voto is purchased.
2. The snapshot is a good one, but it isn't a faithful representation of the stained-glass window as the Virgin's head and the posture of the child leave something to be desired. Our Lord is placed much too low. I am sending you the original. (The window is that to the right of the main altar in the Our Lady Chapel, Sacred Heart Church, Issoudun.) We are having engraved at the moment in Düsseldorf a very beautiful wooden statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You are aware that we are agreed on having a common price for all reproductions of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and we offer you pictures at a very reduced price which would make it possible for the parish priest of Château-Gombert to make the pictures available in Marseilles and the surrounding areas only.
3. We shall not forget tomorrow your heartfelt appreciation among our supportive associates who love you so much.
4. I doubt if it is likely that you can improvise a sanctuary of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for the 22nd of October. In any case we can pray for it. I fully authorize you to be one of the stakeholders of the ground made available. I think that four will be enough. (This last authorization indicates that Jouët had already taken vows in September of this year, 1865.) Normally only three are required. Do not forget that you must pay for the signing-over of the contract and the registration fees, which are still likely to rise quite high. I am already too much involved in business issues. I would ask you to relieve me of them.
5. The translation does not fully deliver the meaning of the litanies. I am sending on to you a more faithful translation. In any event we cannot change public prayers without the Sacred Congregation's permission. Let us set an example of fidelity to the liturgical regulations. (Litanies of the Sacred Heart were the issue here.)
6. I am delighted to know that you are so close to Fr. Deidier whom I respect and like, without, however, knowing him otherwise than through you. Look after your health.
7. Do not hand out, except in Marseilles, your photograph with the 'Remember' (Our Lady of the Sacred Heart) on the back.
8. I am delighted with all you tell me about the Château-Gombert fire. (August 23, 1865.) Digitus Dei est hic. (The finger, hand, of God is in this.) The statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was saved.
9. It was really marvellous to escape the cholera at Château-Gombert.
10. Yes, I bless you wholeheartedly, and wish you all the blessings of the Heart of Jesus and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. My confrères and yours salute you in the Lord.

Feast of Blessed Margaret-Mary

Dear Father,

I understand why you have to stay so long: it is normal. When you can come to Issoudun, kindly let me know beforehand. I am away from the 15th to the 20th of November. I am going to be with Father Ramière at Montluçon where he is preaching a retreat to the Sacred Heart Tertiaries. Your work on the dangers of isolation will be much appreciated... It's all there..., taking up a large part of your work, and so understandably important... (This work in MSS is in the Vandel collection, MSC archives, Rome.) The teachers (female) can provide a wonderful service; your work will do a great deal of good as well as being very pertinent. (This work of Vandel's is his 'Les Institutrices à la Campagne, by a Missionary of the Sacred Heart', Issoudun, 1867.) It would be very easy for us to meet the worthy parish priest missionaries of the Blois diocese and cement a union.

Chevalier refers here to the Missionary parish priests' Association founded by Vandel to combat "the dangers of isolation for the countryside parish priest". What is here in inverted comas is the title of an unpublished MSS which Vandel considered inserting in the fourth edition of his book 'The Countryside Work' - Oeuvre des Campagnes - which he was preparing for publication when he died in April 1877.

We commend this undertaking to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Many thanks for your zeal for the Association (of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart). We haven't received anything from Madame de Fresne. We shall be having the Novena.

Pray earnestly for me, Father; with my good wishes.

Aware of your concern for me I bring you some news of my health. I do not know whether it is because of the time of year or the general state of my health, but I am not aware of any improvement. In order to avoid self-blame in this respect, I am prolonging my visit in these parts until this coming Friday. I hope to arrive in Issoudun at 9.30 that evening. I shall be at Saint-Cyran visiting Madame de Bryas until Friday morning. She didn't make her intended trip to the Indre. The bad weather put her off, and since she was aware that I was in the neighbourhood of Châtillon-sur-Indre, she invited me to Saint-Cyran. Clion, October 25, 1865

Dear Madame,

Over the past two days I have noticed some improvement in my health. I believe that rest is the most efficacious remedy at my disposal. Everybody here advises me to stay on for a few more days to counteract the extreme tiredness following confessions on All Saints Eve (1865). Fr. Piperon is of the same opinion. I shall not, then, to avoid all adverse comment, return to Issoudun on Friday, but rather on the following Tuesday instead. By doing so, I shall miss confessions on All Saints Eve, but I intend to celebrate mass at the Sacred Heart on All Saints Day. If Our Lady of the Sacred Heart listens to my prayers, all who live in Château de Thizay will enjoy perfect health. (Château Thizay was the country home of the Méloizes family outside Issoudun.)

With all good wishes...

Dear Madame,

I received your nice letter just now. How disappointed I am that I cannot accept your kind and gracious invitation! Please apologize for me to the curator and convey to him my good wishes.

The context is the blessing of the chapel of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in the Thizay church. The stained-glass window by Lobin of Tours is a copy of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart stained-glass window in the Issoudun Sacred Heart Church, the original window being a gift from the Méloizes family.

As I wrote in yesterday's letter, I am not returning to Issoudun until Tuesday, 9.30pm. The improvement in health which I thought I was experiencing seems to have halted. I spent a sleepless night with a temperature and coughing. This chest, at least so I think, finds an explanation in the excessive talking I engaged in last night. Otherwise, I always do what is laid down.

I do believe that if I am to get better I must maintain virtually absolute silence. I have decided on this quite definitively. Not even hearing confessions over several months, if necessary. I feel that besides the throat, my chest is also under strain. When I return I shall see Mr. (Dr.) Moulin and decide on something positive. Pray for me; for my part I do not forget you and your family. I am so disappointed that I cannot be present at your beautiful and touching ceremony. I shall be pained by my absence; it is a great sacrifice for me. Madame Byas asks me to send you her regards. I return alone tomorrow from Beauvois, near Clois. Greetings, and good wishes to the parish priest of Thizay.

With all good wishes, Madame...

(From Château de Beauvois Nr. Clion)

Dear Father,

Your kind letter both pleased me and did me good. And although I am returning to Issoudun tomorrow, I do not want to wait any longer in replying to you. If there are a thousand reasons for being late, it is involuntary.

1. One must acknowledge that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart treats as her own those who acknowledge her, experience her power and make known her merits. May the Bishop of Castellamare (southern Italy) be blessed a thousand times! May Château-Gombert (Marseilles) and its worthy parish priest be drenched with favours from Our Lady of the Sacred Heart! May her dear missionary priest be ever the recipient of her favours and carry out with her powerful support all the worthy plans of the Sacred Heart! Caught up in this activity, I beseech you to look after your health.
2. Leave the Devil alone; he will succumb when attacked... It is not in vain that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart holds and crushes his head under her feet.
3. I congratulate you on having nothing to do with the gift offering. I hope the new bishop will be supportive and approve of everything.

It would be as far off as June 22 next year, 1866, before the new bishop was appointed, Charles-Philippe Place, Parisian born, 1814, formerly head of the Orléans and Paris minor seminaries. Chevalier and Jouët were made aware very soon that the new bishop was not supportive and "would approve nothing", being so opposed to the extent of denouncing Chevalier's 'work' to Rome.

4. I shall be wholeheartedly united to you when the blessing of your little oratory takes place.

The blessing of the first stone was held up until August 5, 1866. The change of bishop obviously had an impact.

5. The little piece on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has not yet appeared, so far as I am aware, although it was sent to several publications. On my return, I shall look into it.
6. The Archbishop of Bourges, when I saw him, approved the prospectus, the publication of the Annals, or a bulletin. What I fear is that, when taking on work like this, we may not be able to keep it going. I shall get involved myself also.

What Chevalier writes here strongly suggests that the idea of a publication such as the future Annales was Jouët's not his. Píperon would appear to support this view and Jouët, significantly, was its first editor in chief.

7. I am sure that the 31 'considerations' have been printed. On my return to Issoudun I shall find out.
8. We must not forget to thank Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for the soldier's return.
9. The parish priest of Mazargues (a Marseilles suburb) will be an Our Lady of the Sacred Heart acquisition. We shall promote this matter as something of the utmost importance for our work. We do not forget you; it's just not possible. Pray a great deal for us also, especially for myself.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Issoudun, November 1865

Dear Father,

I received your nice letter. Many thanks. We are very sorry about the problems which prevent you from coming to Issoudun. (Heavy involvement in the Paris area with his 'Work of the Countryside'.) At the very least I hope we shall help you to make up for it when you are here with us. It will be extremely difficult to give you one of our priests for Lent at Chauvigny; the two who are on the mission are already engaged. (Piperon and Georgelin.)

In mid-November Vandel went to Chauvigny, in the diocese of Blois, for a meeting of his 'Missionary Priests' at which he spoke of an association with Chevalier's Issoudun; he then went to Versailles for a meeting with the 'Work of the Countryside' committee.

When you come to Issoudun we shall see [what can be done]. We shall try to do something as I am aware of its importance. All mail addressed to you will be speedily dispatched to you in Paris. Your trip to the Blois diocese must have been helpful. Our two Works by becoming united would complement each other. I believe Our Lord wants it to be so for His greater glory. We continue to pray for this intention. I am sending on a small parcel with pictures, of two kinds; if you tell me which you want, I can send them on to you straightaway.

Mademoiselle Pirot is a splendid young girl, her soul strongly steeled. I strongly support her. From her letters I gather that she is committed to the work. Her father is not very well at times and I fear that his illness may be fatal. The doctor doesn't know what to think. Our little foundation is, for all practical purposes, the work of the Jesuit Fathers. I am not at all surprised by their keen interest in it. We depend greatly on their contribution and their insights.

This observation logically follows from the correspondence of Chevalier with the Jesuits, about Rules and Constitutions - see earlier letters - especially with the Vaugirard community.

With warm good wishes in SS.CC.JMJ.

Issoudun, November 10, 1865

Dear Father,

The last letter I had from you is dated October the 23rd. I replied immediately, even though I was away from Issoudun. I received no other letters and I am sorry you did not receive the reply which I have just mentioned, or, maybe, your second letter went astray. Within two or three days you will receive 2,000 copies of the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which you will dispatch or have sent out. If you need more they are available. I had 8,000 printed, 2,000 for you, 6,000 for us. When you have swamped Marseilles and the surrounding area with copies you can ask me for more. You can get your students to write the addresses, or your sister's students (the youngest of Jouët's six sisters (!), Alexandrine). Time is short; quickly to work. We can bring out a sample copy, if you wish, for the 8th of December. But the publication is for and from the first of January.

The Bourges printer, bringing out 3,000 copies each month, wants 0.07 centimes for every copy against the printing, the posting to subscribers, the wrapping and carriage. He is charging 0.22 centimes for the carriage of each copy, which would bring the cost of each to 0.05 centimes (0.04 euros). He says that in order to break even on the work at these prices, he would need to print at least 3,000 copies every month. And to achieve that we would need 3,000 subscribers, so we hope. The Annals would comprise 16 pages in 8 (dimension), consisting of 60,000 words. (The first copy in January 1866, consisted of 24 pages, excluding the cover.)

Could you have the Annals printed more economically at Marseilles? Do you think that the picture of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart should be on the cover? It would be much better, but also more costly. Confer with a Marseilles printer and let me know.

The first issue, dated January 1866, of 24 pages, came out in December 1865 and had a picture of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart on the cover.

Father Bazire has asked me to let you know that he is sending on to your aunt (in the Parisian region) the copy of 'Considerations' she wanted. (See above, 'Thirty-One Considerations', Piperon's 'Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart'.) He will shortly have this arranged. Fathers Piperon and Georgelin are giving a mission. All our confrères send you their good wishes.

Cheerio. Totus tibi in SS.CC.JMJ.

What was the outcome of your meeting with the la Salette priest? With regard to La Salette, Father Amédée Nicolas from Marseilles has written to me with a proposal that we take on ministry in Valence diocese at a centre of pilgrimage consecrated to Our Lady of Salette, saying that the Sacred Heart Fathers would, very likely, one day establish themselves on the holy mountain, etc. I shall tell him in my reply that there are as yet not enough of us to consider such a foundation. Oremus pro invicem. (Nicolas may be an Oblate, OMI, ordained in 1843.)

Issoudun, November 26, 1865

Dear Father,

Mr. Pigelet, a Bourges printer, is willing to print the picture of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart on the cover at a cost of ten francs (roughly 36 euros) for every thousand. Consequently, I am giving him first preference so long as his reproduction is satisfactory. If the first printing is not to our liking, we shall make enquiries from the Marseilles printer. I think it will be difficult finding enough subscribers to cover our costs. Nevertheless, it is a devotional enterprise and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will know well how to help us. Could you kindly forward the names of subscribers and their addresses, in so far as you remember them, so that I can have the wrapping strips printed. I am sure that we can put on the cover the picture first of all, in the centre, and underneath it:

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved, etc.
Our Lady of the Sacred Heart pray for us.
The Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart
Published each month
With the approval of the Archbishop of Bourges
Under the direction of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart

Subscription price: Two francs yearly (about 7.18 euros)
The subscription is made to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, AMSCJG
(This proposal of Chevalier's was accepted.)

If you think of anything else to be added let me know... Our confrères kindly wish you well. Cheerio, dear father.

Dear Father,

We are getting near the first of January. If you can send me your interesting work, I can adapt it to ours. The printer is caught for time at the moment because of the extra work at the end of the year. Be good enough to forward the addresses of the subscribers you know so that I can print them out. How many copies should be sent to you? For the time being it is impossible to accept the offer of a pilgrims' hotel at Valence; we are too few in numbers at Issoudun. (It was the pilgrim hotel of Our Lady of Salette, Valence - see above letter 18651110.) Try to find a worthy priest in Marseilles who might go there (Valence) with one of ours.

Mr. Raffl is here at Issoudun. As several sculptors have made the most shocking reproductions of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart I am going to sell him the rights so that he alone has authorization in the future. Let the Marseilles sculptor know then that he should no longer use his casting because Mr. Raffl could serve a writ on him.

My ailing health has changed for the better. I commend myself to your prayers. All my confrères wish to be remembered to you. Good-bye, dear brother.

Dear Father,

Yesterday I got your notebooks, followed this morning by your kind letter and the accompanying observations of Father Guiol (the Marseilles Vicar General), which are well made and will be taken note of. The 'Power of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart' has not yet been printed. The printer (J. Bonserez, Tours) hasn't finished it yet. I am sending on one of the proofs to you from the first part, the doctrinal section. I do not need it as the other has been proof read. Oh! How we would love it if you could live with us in Issoudun! We look forward so expectantly to such a moment. The good Lord, no doubt, has his own reasons for keeping you on in Marseilles, wishing the 'Work' of the Sacred Heart to be set up there, and also that of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I beg you to take good care of your health and look after yourself. The Lord would not wish you to perish through over-work. You know that motto 'Otiare quo melius labores' (Rest, take it easy, so that you can work all the better.) You must put it into practise. All the confrères send warm greetings.

Cheerio, Father.

Issoudun, December 15 1865

My Dear Sister in Christ,

I am delighted to appoint Fr. Guyot as the local Third Order Director, and I shall be writing soon to the Bishop of Moulins proposing him also as the diocesan director. I am sure your prayers have helped to bring about further improvement in my health. I really do feel better and shortly I shall return to the confessional which I had given up. Sparing my vocal chords was much the best cure I could undertake. I am greatly pleased with all the good news you have for me. The lady who wants to enter the Third Order is called Anna Marchand. (She was always attached to Chevalier and the Issoudun community, after acting as secretary from 1866. She died at Issoudun, aged 97, January 16, 1927.) Mademoiselle Cl. Pirot's sister is also keen to enter, a kind and excellent person called Julie. (1825-1882, professed 1867, her sister Clémentine was the assistant in charge of the little lodging house near St. Cyr.) Madame Duchaut de Châteauroux has a cousin who would also be very pleased to join and, as you know, she lives in Issoudun, Madame Julia Vacher. And I would also recommend Madame Jeanne Mandereau and Marie Voisin, a widow. (The latter's husband, a carpenter/joiner, helped Chevalier to acquire the property when setting up his first MSC community in Issoudun.) Both are of sound piety. The Virgin has sent us a new young novice from Brittany who has finished his theological studies at Rennes major seminary. He is only tonsured. (Having received no other orders, that is.) He seems promising and very intelligent. (When Vandell arrived at Issoudun February, 1860, there were two seminarians or novices.)

Pray fervently for us; I do not forget you.

With kindest regards and respectful good wishes in SS.CC.JMJ.

J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

We have paper with a smaller envelope. How much would you like us to send on?

Dear Father,

On this day one wishes a happy New Year; be the recipient then of my good wishes; you understand... you well know how they are sincere. The Archbishop of Bourges was pleased to accept last Friday Fr. Deidier's book. His Grace said that he would look at it and give it wholehearted approval. ('Devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart', by Fr. Deidier, Printer E. Pigelet, Bourges, 1867.) In order to advance matters it would be helpful if Fr. Deidier wrote to the Archbishop of Bourges. Everything is in readiness and a letter, therefore, would be well received and lead to an excellent result. You mention sending on 200 francs by registered post three or four days ago. I haven't received anything apart from your letter this morning. The postman handed me an unstamped envelope today containing two unsigned cheques! The address does not appear to be in your hand-writing. I am returning the envelope to you. If it is not yours, I would ask you to send me your postal receipt and I shall make a complaint. You should have received several issues of The Annals; they are not very well printed, and the text is too small, don't you think? You should receive your fifty copies tomorrow or after. The doctor thought I was fatigued and absolutely wants me to go and spend two or three months at Hyères. (The Isle of Hyères, where Madame du Quesne was a seasonal visitor.) I shall be leaving in eight or ten days. It will not be easy for me to take myself away from our dear Sacred Heart. (The Issoudun house.) However, if it's necessary, I shall accept it. I shall let you know beforehand and meet you when passing through Marseilles. Cheerio, dear Father.

Pray for him who does not forget you in the Lord.

Dear Father,

We greatly regret the delays which prevent you from coming to see us. We were expecting you so keenly that your letter really disappointed us. Nevertheless, in this as in everything else: Fiat voluntas Dei! (Let God's will be done.) Thanks a thousand for your good wishes. God, I hope, will confirm them. Please accept, in return, our own good wishes which are truly sincere; I entrust them to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

My health, effectively, is at a low ebb. Over the past three weeks I am more exhausted than ever because of an attack of bronchitis which continues to affect me. The Issoudun doctor is adamant that I should spend two or three months at Hyères in the Midi (South of France). And I must go this coming week! But before that, I must go to Paris and see Doctor Fauvel, rue Richelieu, 66 (also J.M. Vandel's consultant). He is, one gathers, a distinguished specialist for throat maladies. If I am not too unwell, I shall be in Paris at the hotel Fénelon, rue Féron, 11, near the Saint Sulpice Seminary, next Wednesday morning. This street opens on to the church square. I am hoping to meet you and chat with you about our concerns.

Father Ramière would like very much to undertake the work you promised him. (A manuscript on the Priests of the Sacred Heart.) He recently wrote that he was waiting impatiently, and if he had your address would have asked long since for the text. He is staying at Vals near Le Puy (Upper Loire). Until next time.

With respectful good wishes in Our Lord,

Issoudun, January 6, 1866

My very dear Father,

The French greeting "my very dear Father" can be interpreted to mean that the meeting with Vandel arranged in Chevalier's previous letter above was a success and helped to facilitate Vandel's arrival shortly at the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, to become a member of the Society.

I spent such a bad night and felt so exhausted that I thought it wise to come away. I very much regret having done so as I would have been so pleased to see you again and discuss our concerns, visit Madame de Fresne and go and meet dear Father Leblanc, but I was totally exhausted.

The widow, Saucetz de Fresne, was, from the beginning, involved with Vandel's Countryside Work, became President of the Country Teachers' Association and a very supportive benefactress of Vandel's. Her Paris home was at 28 rue de la Varenne near the Countryside Work offices, 2 rue de la Planche.

Today I feel somewhat better. It is the end of the novena to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Let us hope that this good Mother will succeed in what she has begun. In any event, whether or not I am in Issoudun, come to the Sacred Heart as soon as you are free. You can stay as long as you like; you will always be welcome and I can assure you that you will be very happy there.

Tell me, why do you not make it (Issoudun) your permanent address? You would have an important role to engage you from there, believe me. You would be in contact with all the priests of our Work. Those from Blois whom you know would come to see you there; we shall be happy to have them. The amalgamation would certainly be advantageous as the changes you mentioned to me are quite easy to make happen. (Among other issues, there was the question of Vows.) And then you could go to Paris as often as the needs of The Countryside Work demanded it. Who can say that if our little Society, blessed by the Good God, might not become the soul of the Countryside Work: misit me evangelizare pauperibus. (He sent me to evangelize the poor.) But for that to take place, I maintain that you should be domiciled at Issoudun which is in the centre of France. Our confrères send good wishes.

My respectful good wishes in SS.CC.JMJ,

J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

NB: I read your notebook with the keenest interest. It seemed to me fully gracious and truthful. Sister Clémentine Pirot will make a copy of it. (She concentrated, however, on Isolated Country Priests.)

Dear Sister,

I was very pleased to see your delegate at Issoudun. The news I had from Mademoiselle de Waldegg about your health was not very reassuring. You would also need to spend a little time in the South (Midi). Come, then to Hyères. My health has improved a little but, nevertheless, it is strongly recommended that I go away from Issoudun. On Monday next I leave for Hyères under the care of the Divine Heart of Jesus and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. (The departure was, in fact, delayed a day or two.) How long will I stay there? As little as possible. This trip annoys me intensely and it is only because I have been ordered to do so that I am making it. Pray for me; I shall not forget you in my prayers. We had the little ceremony. Our good novices were delighted. One of them will, very likely, shortly write to you. The visit of the parish priest of St. Paul greatly pleased me. I am making my Will to his benefit. If I die preceding him, it is he who will have the Sacred Heart, Issoudun. (Fr. Jean-Baptiste Guyot, parish priest of St. Paul, Montluçon, at this time Director of the Montluçon Third Order.)

Hyères, January 21, 1866

Dear Countess,

I am here at Hyères only since yesterday. I stayed two days in Marseilles. Thanks to Providence, my trip, if not without adventure, took place without a mishap. I say without adventure – even I missed the train at Vierzon. I cannot explain to myself this heedlessness because my eyes were wide open and my ears were hearing perfectly. It was midnight when I realized my misfortune. My embarrassment was at its lowest point. Mother Larcher (Marianne, former housekeeper to Fr. Crozat, parish priest, and to Madame du Quesne with whom she retired, had been made available as cook to Chevalier by the Countess while he was at Hyères and then at Amélie-les-Bains) had left. Think of it... I stayed in the station until 8.30 next morning and would not reach Lyons until 10pm. I contacted Mother Larcher by telegram to rid her of any anxiety. God has allowed this embarrassment and I cannot complain.

On arriving at Hyères I met Mr. Castueil, the chemist's brother, who awaited me. This fine gentleman has been extraordinarily kind and attentive to me. He brought me to the parish priest, to Mr. Hope-Scott and Dr. Allègre. (Chevalier stayed with Dr. Allègre who, over a number of years, was host to Countess du Quesne and her companion.) Everyone regrets that you are not here and expresses most explicitly the wish to see you here very shortly. Everything is in readiness to draw you here: warm-hearted friends close to you; a splendid house, salubrious, perfectly sited, a delightful climate, completely free of cholera, etc., etc. (Over the previous twelve months, 1865-1866, cholera had devastated the South of France.) All who know you here seriously believe that you will come next week. If I cast some doubt on this, the hopes are not diminished. Fiat! (Be it so!)

I am lodged like a Lord, looked after like a Prince, peaceful like a recluse. Is there any better way to get me back to myself in a short time? When passing through Marseilles I called on Fr. Muzi... and he seemed pleased; he is very well. Give my regards, Countess, to Madame Cottreau, Fr. Fosset and commend me to Mademoiselle Zélie (de Larochère, du Quesne's secretary-companion) and Mademoiselle Marie (daughter of the Countess), also to the dear St. Vincent Sisters.

Deepest regards and good wishes in the Lord.

Hyères, Maison Castueil
Place de la Rade (Var)

January 28, 1866

Dear Father,

Well then, how are you? Are you ridding yourself a little of your tiredness? For myself, I am feeling much the better for my visit to Hyères. The climate, the rest, the cure, do so much good for me. Would you not like to pay me a little visit, or must I instead go again to inconvenience you at Marseilles? I wrote to Fr. Deidier in reply to his letter and conveyed to him the result of my conversation with the parish priest of Château Gombert (Fr. Jauvet). I found this saintly man very well disposed and he was due to begin work on the projected sanctuary the following Monday. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will have there a lovely and magnificent setting. ("I raise my eyes to the Lord whence shalt come my help", Psalm 121, 1.) The February Annals are due to come out shortly. I am doing some promoting here. You should have received the 'Power of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart'. This little book will be of interest to many. (This was Piperon's work, with the imprimatur of the Archbishop of Bourges, November 24, 1865.)

No doubt you have nothing new about your own situation? Monsignor Guiol (the Marseilles Vicar General) cannot give you any decision, can he? Following the Archbishop of Bourges' approval for 'The Power of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart', I hope that the protests of certain people will stop. In any case, these protesters should not scare us... It is enough that the devil protests. The Issoudun priests are well. Fr. Grelet is fully convalescent.

Cheerio, Father. If you see the parish priest of Château Gombert, give him my regards.

Hyères, February 1, 1866

I was pleased to send on to you yesterday 'The Power of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart attested by the facts'. It is a becoming little monument raised up to the glory of our good Mother. (As in previous letters, he is referring to the publication of Piperon's book.) I always find myself the better for experiencing the Hyères climate but, despite that, the doctor here also wants me to go on to Amélie-les-Bains. I am hoping to undertake this additional trip at the end of this month or the beginning of March. As always I commend myself to your prayers and also to those of your family circle. It seems that a storm is being stirred up because our new building is going to cost 80,000 francs or so. (Today about 287,450 euros.) If it comes to 40,000 that will be well and truly the limit. You can let that be known if you have to. You are aware that we no longer have any debt to pay on the chapel. We are well and truly grateful to divine Providence.

Hyères, February 3, 1866

Dear Viscountess,

I am very appreciative of the letter you kindly wrote to me and the very interesting items of news you wished to share with me. I sent on Dr. Duval's letter to the doctor in charge of the Amélie-les-Bains military hospital. (Duval worked at Hyères, Chevalier his patient over the past month.) I am waiting for his reply and hasten to let you know. I was happy to offer mass for your intentions on the 2nd of February when I united my prayers with yours to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Each day at the altar I remember you and all who are dear to you, to Our Lord. I hope he will answer your needs through the intercession of His most holy Mother. Dr. Allègre, when I saw him last Thursday, thought I was very much better, but he thinks that I should go as soon as possible to Amélie-les-Bains. For the past three days I haven't, so to say, slept a wink and the perspiration is coming on again. It is probably caused by the climate since presently the temperature is 18 degrees. (February!) The weather is wonderful.

Bishop Dupanloup (Orléans) arrived here yesterday and leaves tomorrow. A pity. My Sister Superior (Sister Julie Gaillard, Daughter of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul, Superior of the Issoudun Orphanage founded by Countess du Quesne) had arranged to speak about Bishop de Basilite and the du Quesne fortress in the Marquises Islands, and about Mother Larcher. She, the last named, is very sorry that I haven't invited the bishop of my home area, as she describes it (de mon pays). She would have been so honoured to wait on him and so delighted to have him taste one of her little sweet dishes. I have to say that she faithfully followed the instructions (cooking) you so kindly gave her. When I tell her to prepare a dish which may come within the category of those she was instructed to prepare, she says straightaway, "Madame has forbidden me." I give way and insist no further.

You tell me, Madame, that your own health gets worse and worse. If I may, I want to say: "but, I beg you to look after yourself"! Why not come to breathe the good air at Hyères, which is so healthy for you? The two or three months which you could again spend here would do you a great deal of good. Do not forget that your family, friends, the poor, need you.

My regards to your very good and virtuous family. Greetings to your good sisters. I shall write to my Sister Superior tomorrow and I shall thank her for her kind letter. To cheer up Andrew I shall take him some flowers. (The gardener at the Visitation Convent, Issoudun .)

With my respectful good wishes in the Lord, Countess,

Hyères, February 8, 1866

I got a reply yesterday from the chief medical officer at Amélie-les-Bains. He has found furnished lodgings (the only one to be had, he says) with the Mayor of Amélie. There are two rooms, a kitchen and dining room. The apartments face north and south (Nord and Midi). It should not be inconvenient. Before replying I went to seek Dr. Allègre's advice. He said that the moment I felt no improvement in my general health, I should not hesitate then and there to go as quickly as possible to Amélie. As a result I wrote to the chief medical officer today asking him to book lodgings for me from the 15th of this month.

I shall leave Hyères then on Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock. Mother Larcher is happy at the thought of seeing new countryside. Dr. Allègre said to me: "Your insomnia, perspiration, nervous excitability and weak blood-count are due to over-work, tense preoccupations and annoying frustration." He put his finger on the pulse. God alone knows all I have to suffer over what will soon be two years, pained in mind and heart. That's the main reason for my breakdown in health. Will it go away? The elderly doctor is convinced it will and believes that the sulphurous waters at Amélie will do me a great deal of good. Let's hope so... This confiding is for you alone. I must disengage from this issue as I begin to feel the tears coming on when reflecting on the past and, even, the present! I commend myself to your fervent prayers.

Chevalier does not fully share the stresses and strains of his very tensely focused life in these particular years, months, with his correspondent, but it is certain that the disengagement of his earliest supporter, indeed fellow idealist, Fr. Maugenest, from any active participation with Chevalier's 'Work' would have lowered Chevalier's morale. Maugenest was parish priest of Saint Cyr, Issoudun, and, with the growing influence of the Sacred Heart Church on the town, he could well have resented such a, perhaps, foreseen development – a lessening of prestige, impact, for Saint Cyr parish. The Archpriest Maugenest is no longer, as before, identified as a member of the MSC community in the 1866 Archdiocesan Ordo.

God, who places me in a state of material powerlessness so that I can witness and acknowledge your support, places at my disposal the prayer and infinite merits of His divine Son with which I associate you daily.

With all good wishes and kindest regards in the Lord,

J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

Hyères, February 14, 1866, 10am

Madame Countess,

Thanks a thousand for your splendid letter and all the very good things it conveys. I shall never forget your devotedness and the noteworthy concern you have for me. I shall try to put your advice into practice and thrust all the sadness, preoccupations and uncertainties of life to the protectiveness of divine goodness. I shall even try to go further and, like St. Paul, rejoice in trials and find consolation in the Cross. I am aware that all God's works are based in Calvary and suffering. This thought strengthens me.

I am really touched and very thankful for the sweet little flower you sent on to me, its freshness bringing me all the sanctuary's fragrance, a thousand times blessed Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. How eloquent her language! What things she communicates! What marvels are enumerated! I am sending you one of your Hyères flowers; it has neither the sparkle or freshness yours should have, seemingly saddened by your absence.

I find that my health is slightly improved for the past two days. I do believe it's beginning to get better. Nevertheless, Dr. Allègre advises me to leave. I go along with him and I am leaving Hyères this very day. I shall stop over for a little while at Marseilles, Narbonne, and, accordingly, I shall not be at Amélie-les-Bains before Monday. If Dr. Duval arrives at Amélie at the end of March or the beginning of April I shall very likely see him. Mr. Hoppe-Scott has asked me to let you know that, with regard to your concern, he was advised in England to wait longer. Mother Larcher carried out your bidding; the renting of the chairs was very satisfactory. This marvellous lady is very grateful to you and sends her regards; she is very well. Be so kind as to inform my Mother Superior (at the orphanage) that for Lent she (Sister Gaillard), and her sisters, should follow conscientiously what the doctor prescribes for them.

With respectful good wishes, Countess,

J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

Many thanks, Mademoiselle Marie, for your kind greetings, I do not forget you in my prayers. Always remember with Our Lord this poor exile who sends you his blessing.

Dear Countess,

For the past two days I have been besieged. It was an attempt to change all my plans. Up to mid-day yesterday I held out, resisted vigorously, fought like a gallant Chevalier. But sadly at one o'clock a breach was opened and at 2pm I was overcome by the number of assailants: 14. (This number is crossed out in the original text.) I shall remain eight more days at Hyères. I have been advised to make the most of the advantages likely to come my way here. I have written to the chief medical officer at the Amélie-les-Bains military hospital advising him of this delay. Marianne (Larcher, otherwise in the foregoing letters titled Mother, and presently Chevalier's travelling cook), who thought we were leaving, is out of the house just now; she is bringing a blessed candle and says she carries you in her heart, and there is no place, then, for Mademoiselle Marie because Countess du Quesne must be at the centre of everything: "But the dear little girl is inseparable from her mother!"

Dear Countess,

I heard regretfully of the tragic occurrence which has devastated your family and what a sorrowful experience you have been through in these circumstances. I sincerely share it with you. (Chevalier is reacting to the death of the Countess's uncle, Mr. Cottereau de Mazière.) What consoles is the hope that such a fervent Christian is in Heaven. He was so good, his faith so alive.

I am at Amélie since last Sunday. The journey went very well. If I am to go by what I notice, the temperature does not match that of Hyères. Yesterday we had a violent storm and today there's wind and fairly cold rain. Having been sent to Dr. Artigues, the chief medical officer at the military hospital, by Dr. Duval, and since Dr. Artigues engaged himself with a great deal of urgency and good-will to find lodgings for me, I cannot do otherwise than choose him as my doctor in place of Dr. Genyès (the latter in charge of the Amélie-les-Bains spa) and as advised by Dr. Bouchardat. I believe that I shall get on alright as he seems to be quite well experienced. He tells me that the best time for the baths is autumn or winter, up to the end of February, but the months of March and April are not good because of atmospheric variations.

Having examined me very thoroughly this morning, he said that there was congestion of mucus in the breathing and a serious inflammation of the lungs. From that, he suggests, comes the anaemia or the blood-thinning, the continuous fever and insomnia. The chest is satisfactory and the general state of health is neither dangerous or disturbing. He is certain that the treatment at Amélie will restore me to flourishing good health. Let's hope so with the help of God. All the Amélie hotels are full. There are many foreigners. I commend myself to your prayers; do not forget to remember me to your good family,

With respectful good wishes in the Lord, Countess.

Amélie-les-Bains
March 24, 1866

Dear Countess,

I heard with great regret that you were quite seriously laid-up and that your dignified house had become like a proper hospital. I pray specially for you and all those who live under your hospitable roof. I am delighted to hear that there is a marked improvement. I thank particularly the Lord and her who reigns over His divine Heart. I also gather most happily that Commandant Dubout (name uncertain) has been, so to say, the beneficiary of a miracle on the Feast of St. Joseph. Deo Gratias. I am pleased, anyway, to observe that, while the good Lord leaves me on the Cross, he disengages from it those souls in whom I am particularly interested. My health is not getting any better. I am almost drawn to believe that the thermal waters are not in the least helpful to me. A heavy cold and a strong fever made me suspend treatment. As I am a little better, I began again yesterday.

Unfavourable weather conditions on March 24, the Saturday before Palm Sunday, made it impossible for Chevalier and Vandel to go out.

Amélie has become the locale for a very striking miracle. Mr. and Mrs. Jarphanide (he the Archbishop of Albi's nephew) had with them their three-year-old child on the point of death. This poor little thing's body was already putrefying, his body black as coal. Dr. Genieys himself said to me: the child is no more than a corpse, with no hope of restoration to life in the normal manner. "Therefore," he said, "I regard his recovery as a genuine miracle." Here is what happened: conscious of the heartbroken family, I quickly sent them a medal of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart with a series of litanies, etc. One fervently prayed.

The father, for his part, sent a telegram to Rome asking for the Holy Father's blessing. Then some lady sent another telegram to a holy person, with the same plea. In short, suddenly, the crisis was over... the child completely recovered. Who is the agent of this miracle? Is it Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the Pope, the pious individual who prayed? Only God knows! However explained, the father sent 9 thanksgiving masses (stipends) to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Kindly, Countess, commend me to the prayers of the good people about you.

With deep, appreciative regards in the Lord.

Amélie-les-Bains
March 25, 1866

Dear Father,

Thank you for your brief word. I am very sorry that you have been laid up. It's a trial! Take care and look after yourself. I am speaking to you in all seriousness, as I do not think you take sufficient care of your health. You know that your health does not belong to you. Build it up and hold on to it.

The parish priest of Paray (le-Monial) has re-engaged us for next year. It is, therefore, only an adjournment for you. I hope you will be with us on that occasion. Be patient! Send me here at Amélie-les-Bains your new work on the month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart with corrections. Then I myself will send it to the printer.

Chevalier is referring to Jouët's revised edition of 'Thirty-One Considerations', now with the new title: 'Thirty-Two Considerations on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart', by a Missionary of the Sacred Heart, Pigelet, Bourges, 1866, 6th edition.

Leave the title as it is. Do not add or take away anything. (Chevalier even asked Jouët not to put his name to the book!) The Sacred Heart loves humility. For the rest, the book is not yours. It is clearly the work of St. Joseph and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You will agree. Its success is due to the fact that it has appeared without the name of an author. Do not paralyze the divine action!

The initiative was wholly Jouët's, yet Chevalier's letter to the Archbishop of Bourges in this new edition uses the plural, as well as in the introduction: "...we thought that we should write this work..."

It carries the title: By a Missionary of the Sacred Heart. Indeed! This Missionary of the Sacred Heart is St. Joseph and Our Lady...

The initiative and work on this book came from Jouët. Years later the accommodation on his part to Chevalier at this time gave way to his assertion of author's rights, especially from 1893 onwards. From 1886 any anonymity in earlier works by Jouët and Piperon was eliminated through the intervention of Fathers Delaporte and Vaudon, and rightly so.

Good wishes to Father Deidier. Father Vandel is now altogether one of us, a priceless acquisition. (He would begin his Novitiate year at Amélie-les-Bains on the Feast of St. Joseph, March 19, 1866.) As for the circumstances which will determine your arrival at Issoudun, do not worry about it. The Lord will bring it about and I am certain that 1866 will not end without your being with us. (Indeed! Jouët had, as it happened, four more years to wait.) For some days now I have felt a little better.

Cheerio, dear Father. Totus tibi in SS.CC.JMJ.

April 1, 1866

Dear Father,

I received your letter and corrections. I sent your picture to Issoudun for the views of our dear confrères. Father Vandel and I, having closely considered things, think:

1. That the verses, while excellent in their own right, are not rightly placed at the back of this picture. They would be better placed at the front of a statue in a pilgrims' centre.
2. The changes introduced to "Remember" (Souvenez-vous) are not sufficiently justified.
3. That it be explained why the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was set up (for the resolution of difficult and desperate cases). This is forgotten!
4. You could leave in the appeal for the Château-Gombert sanctuary as it's very good.
5. We shall take 4,000 of your prints, but with the text which I am about to formulate for you, that is to say: a) the original "Remember" without changes; b) without the verse; c) stating the objective of the Association to Our Lady; d) leaving in the little appeal for Château-Gombert; and e) leaving more white paper at either side of the picture to bind with the book.
6. Since you didn't include a little prayer after each consideration, it is best not to add anything because these recommendations and prayers would not be carried out. It is too much to ask of the faithful.
7. Your corrections are very good.
8. Your preparatory meditation is delightful.
9. What you have achieved with the April Annals is wonderful. Your presentation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart taking the form of a dialogue is exquisite; this must continue.
10. I forgot to say that the summary with which you preface each consideration is very good.

All the foregoing Chevalier observations relate to the revised new edition of The Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart under a new heading, 'Thirty Two Considerations', 1866 edition.

Cheerio, dear Father. Pray for him who never forgets you in the Lord and is wholly yours.

Amélie-les-Bains
Friday, April 6, 1866

Dear Father,

I received your latest corrections and they are very good. (The new edition of the Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart referred to in the previous letter.) I think that you are somewhat too querulous about the titles of Queen, Sovereign, Mistress of the Heart of Jesus. These titles, as you are aware, have been approved by the whole French episcopate. This is enough to overlook the misgivings which have no credible validity. You have forgotten, dear Father, to place at the head of the summary the three points which comprise the 11th meditation, the flight into Egypt, and the 13th's, the loss of Jesus in the Temple. Be kind enough to forward these two summaries with the rest of your corrections. It's getting on and I beg you to hurry up with your corrections and send them on to me straightaway.

Dear Father, our Issoudun confrères have sent on to me their observations: 1. They do not want the ancient formula "Remember", everywhere known and accepted, to be in any way changed. (Jouët, later when procurator in 1883, had to change the text in order to avoid condemnation by the Holy Office!) 2. No representation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart can be printed or spread except through ourselves. The same holds for medals. This procedure has been adopted to preserve our Work's unity, uniformity, which is so essential to it. Permission was already sought in several French, German, American, towns... and we refused them all. In any event you can, without difficulty, understand the wisdom of this prohibition. If each important town saw itself as the centre of the 'work' of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, modified the prayers, the representations, statues, medals, of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and printed on its own initiative everything which concerned the Association, then the latter would be threatened in its essence, its unity, and we ourselves would be threatened in our very existence itself and in the success of our works, etc. You can, then, let off the 10,000 pictures of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which you have had printed, though not advantageously. If you have asked for 4,000 pictures of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart with respect to the Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, you can forward them to me. If, later on, the parish priest of Château-Gombert needs some, he can ask us and we shall be pleased to forward whatever he wants at the current price.

Cheerio, dear Father; pray earnestly for me, I do not forget you.

Wholly yours in SS.CC.JMJ.

Dear Father,

Yesterday I forgot to tell you that the 31st of May is the Feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the patronal feast of the Association. (Plenary Indulgence) If you could write a little article about this lovely feast, that would be marvellous. And it would be placed in the next number. (*The article, however, written by Fr. Amélie-les-Bains

Dear Countess,

I am really thrown by your good-heartedness. I shall willingly agree to the proposal you make if our confrères at the Sacred Heart do not find it inconvenient. It would indeed be good if I were to spend two or three days with them prior to accepting the hospitality and regimen of your devout convent. But if the public become aware of such a pleasant environment (and I believe that it will), what is going to be said? How will it be interpreted? Should it all be faced? I leave these considerations to your wise judgment. As for myself, I leave aside my own wishes. I only hold on to the feeling of gratitude.

Father Vandel, whose quality and merit you have greatly appreciated, leaves Amélie next Wednesday and will be at Issoudun Friday or Saturday, staying there until 11am on Sunday. He has to go to Paris, but returns to Issoudun on the 15th of May. (Vandel's plans were altered. He did not leave Amélie until Thursday, April 19, arriving in Toulouse on the 20th, Dax on the 22nd and Paris on the 24th, where he dined with Bishop Ségur. He only arrived at Issoudun on the 8th of June for the Feast of the Sacred Heart.) I spoke to him (Vandel) about your wonderful work and all that's being done in your good sisters' convent. The whole ensemble (set-up) greatly attracts him, and he would be pleased to accept your chaplaincy if you cannot find someone better.

It is the orphanage of the St. Vincent de Paul Sisters near the Visitation Chateau. By June 27 the weekly religious paper of the Bourges Archdiocese, p.306, noted that Fr. Vandel, originally from the Lausanne diocese, had been appointed by the Archbishop of Bourges as chaplain to the chapel and orphanage founded by Countess du Quesne, confirmed by the Archbishop in a letter to the Countess June 17, 1866, meeting thereby her request for Vandel.

Since Father Vandel is definitively attached to us, he does not want to stay for more than two or three months outside a Sacred Heart house. Meanwhile, he could live in lodgings with some supportive people in the town, or, if you prefer, he could be Mother Larcher's guest in Fr. Crozat's house. (The latter had died just over two years previously, January 9, 1864.) In any event he (Vandel) will go to see you accompanied by Father Piperon. I hope to arrive at Issoudun on Thursday at 3pm if the pox which is prevalent at Amélie (several adults have already succumbed to it) does not make me leave earlier. Amélie has only 12,000 people. Otherwise just now we are experiencing very bad weather here, rain, wind, hail-storms and, sometimes, lovely sunshine.

I have just arrived back from Spain. We (Vandel also) went to see the nearest town to the frontier, being absent for ten hours only. What faith, piety, in the Spanish countryside! (Vandel and Chevalier had gone to La Junquera, and in a letter to Madam de Fresne Vandel describes how Chevalier and himself gave medals to children on the day of their visit, April 9.) I think that Fr. Vandel's health has improved a little. As for my own, it is pretty much the same as usual. I am very grateful for all your good wishes. I do not forget you for my part. Give everybody my kind regards.

With good wishes and deepest regards in the Lord.

J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

Chevalier in this and other letters from Amélie-les-Bains makes no reference to Vandel's proposal about an apostolic school as a prerequisite for the Society's growth, what Vandel named for the present and future as the "Little Work of the Sacred Heart - petite oeuvre du Sacré-Coeur". Vandel's visit to La Junquera with Chevalier was, he thought, the Petite Oeuvre's baptism. Vandel's thoughts at this time envisioned growth for the Society with the introduction of a 'little work', Petite Oeuvre, school.

Dear Father,

You do well to compose a Consecration to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You would do well also to present a lively and appealing article like those you have done for the feast. Since the "remember you" to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is to be found at the end of the book, it is pointless to place it at the other side of the picture. Print, then, 4,000 pictures without a text at the back. As for the shape of the picture, that of the 31 Considerations should guide you. The size of a normal sheet of writing paper should be enough. I shall let you know the printer to whom you must send these pictures.

Cheerio, dear Father. This little "Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" will be wonderful. Your corrections were necessary. I wholeheartedly greet you.

May 21, 1866

Dear Father,

We received today your attractive work on Mary's Bible together with your kind letter. You mention nothing at all on this occasion about the Imitation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. What a pity! It is absolutely imperative that our dear common friend, Fr. Deidier, send us his observations on Archbishop Manning's letter. Hurry him on; he has time on his hands. If he had got in touch with us sooner, we could have done something about it; now it's too late. The poetry is wonderful.

Our Lady of the Sacred Heart works marvels in America, in the United States. On the 31st of May a huge statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will be raised in the centre of the Americas, the crown costing 7,000 francs (slightly more than 25,000 euros.) will be placed on her head by the Archbishop. The Sovereign Pontiff, Pius the Ninth, blessed the diadem. Eight bishops have already intimated that they will be present at this imposing ceremony. Isn't it marvellous? Permission has been sought to publish the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in American (sic!). If it is at all possible, dear Father, send us your work by the 15th of each month at the latest since it is absolutely necessary to avoid any delay. Begin a little sooner. My health is a bit improved.

Cheerio, Father dear. When are you going to be with us? Your presence here is absolutely imperative.

Dear Sister in Christ,

Thanks for the good news you have shared with me. The divine Heart of Jesus, obviously, guides your little vessel. With such a pilot you can only experience a happy journey. You experience consolation and difficulties. Nothing better! It's the thorn with the flower, the soldier's lance and the Heart of Christ. I am forwarding what is being requested. Yesterday I received a letter from Fr. Gros, the Vicar General at Chambéry. Issoudun, May 28, 1866

Dear Father,

You have often heard it said that the best is the enemy of the good for most of the time. Have we not been given proof of this at Rimont? (Following a meeting in Paris of the 'Country Work' - Oeuvre des Campagnes - Vandel went to Rimont, diocese of Autun, to deal with the 'Country Work' teachers.) How? The doctor advised you to spare your voice completely over several months, and you take off once your treatment is over, on a missionary life-style, jeopardising, and perhaps destroying, the efficacy of the waters. Truly, you deserve a telling off. Your zeal has not been prudent. As well, I think it would be much better if you didn't go to Bois-d'Arcy (in the Versailles diocese). The good Lord does not ask of us more than we can do, and still less do people. If your presence at Bois-d'Arcy is necessary, you can go there a little later.

Yes, yes, Madame du Quesne has always the same purpose in mind; she is expecting you. (What is clearly implied here is du Quesne's wish to have Vandel as chaplain, a post which would be his officially from June.) Tuesday, June 5, is the Feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and the following Friday that of the Sacred Heart. A Jesuit begins the preparatory exercises next Thursday. You must be here for the double solemnity, making it an uplifting experience for you. You must be present at it. We expect you on Wednesday, the 30th, then, at 3.20 in the afternoon. If you would like to stay with us, we, likewise, feel happy about being with you.

Cheerio, Father; accept all our good wishes in the Lord.

How many ties link you to the Sacred Heart, Issoudun! How could we forget you? Rightly so, your name is associated with all our prayers. What can I say to you about dear Fr. Vandel, Madame? You know him better than I do. He is truly a treasure for our house and our work. We can never be sufficiently grateful to the Heart of Jesus for having given him to us. Our appreciation is all the greater because Fr. Vandel associates us with the 'Country Work' and thereby it becomes ours also. May God be praised!

Montluçon, July 25, 1866

Dear Father,

I am here since yesterday among our Montluçon priests, and it's from there I write to you.

Chevalier writes in the plural, Fr. Guyot was the parish priest of St. Paul and local director of the Sacred Heart Third Order, of which Mademoiselle - Sister - de Montaignac was president.

What you have to say about Fr. D. pains me greatly, without, for all that, being surprised. From a character who is over-bearing, demanding, somewhat forceful, one must expect a lot of problems. Let us pray to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to help out; do not despair. What you tell me about Château-Gombert greatly pleases me. Digitus Dei est hic. (The finger of God is here.) Let us hope that soon you will have your pilgrimage to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. For the time being I think you would do well to consider a less expensive chapel. For 5 or 6,000 francs (roughly 18,000 euros) you could have a suitable sanctuary. We shall be delighted to provide you with another stone. We are eagerly awaiting you here. Come to Issoudun as soon as you are on holiday. We need to see and chat with you, and you need to rest. The Archbishop of Bourges is due to come to Issoudun during the last fortnight of August, and it is absolutely necessary that you meet him. I hope that His Grace will be accepting and that Bishop Place (Marseilles) will agree that you remain with us, at least for one year.

Chevalier's projected plans for a Jouët residency in Issoudun came to nothing at this time because Place, the Bishop of Marseilles, would not release Jouët to the Issoudun community. Only in 1870 would Chevalier's expectations be met - see below.

I must tell you that we have, over the last couple of days, a new missionary priest with us. He appears to be pious, very kind and very talented, preaches very well and is no more than thirty year old.

This may be Pierre-Paul Malabat who left in September 1869 on the occasion of an MSC General Council.

The pleasure you brought us by having you here in our dear solitariness has been greatly overshadowed by this hitch. Issoudun, October 3, 1866

Dear Father,

I received your kind letter. Many thanks for putting us at ease. We are delighted to hear that you didn't have an accident!

You can print 4,000 large copies, a thousand only on Chinese paper, and three thousand on white paper. If you could underline a little the letters surrounding the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, etc., they would stand out much better. What do you think? I am pleased to hear that Mr. David will remake the Child's head based on the snapshot. We shall willingly wait the 8 days. You can get the rolls of paper at the price, 0.03 centimes and a half (about 0.04 euros). It is thick enough for the larger printing and two centimes and a half for the heliographs. You can trim to the size required. The rolls for the smaller (lithographs) will naturally be shorter. Send half the heliographs as quickly as possible, the rest for later.

Mr. Daniel, a picture editor at 76 Rue Bonaparte, would like to sell them (the lithographs) and I replied that he could have those on China paper at two francs and on white paper at 1 franc 50 centimes, payment on delivery. I asked him to get in touch with you. The heliographs are being offered to him at 25 francs and in black and brown at 30 francs. (25 would be roughly 90 euros, 30 francs = 107 euros.) If you think this is too much, do the best you can. If he doesn't want to pay, except in respect to what he sells, we shall agree with that.

With all good wishes, Father, and warmest regards in the Lord.

Dear Father,

We received your kind letter. Since Father Bazire only arrived yesterday from a long journey, I am taking his place for correspondence. I am sending you an enclosed letter from Fr. Bauley with 12 francs, 50 towards nine masses and a subscription. I am unable to ascertain the postage, but I should think it is about 3 francs, and altogether coming to 16 francs, 50. He was also forwarded a hundred wood-cuts, and I don't know if they have been paid for. This would be an additional ten francs, making, in all, 26 francs, 50.

Courage, then! Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will do her work. Let us plunge ourselves, head lowered, into the middle of it. Let us shout at the top of our voice that she must be loved, that we must be devoted to her and then we can live as true children without a care. Then we shall have accomplished all we can do. Things are going well. There is always plenty of work. I end here. Do not leave your articles until the 25th. The latest issue must be scrupulously looked after. Finis coronat opus (the end rounds off the work). Cheerio; three proofs have been made of the supplement number presently coming off the press.

Dear Father,

Back from a trip, I hasten to reply to your kind letters.

1. By preference the pictures in Chinese paper are requested, and there must be more, then, of the latter than the others. You are, accordingly, right to print three-quarters in Chinese paper and a quarter in white paper.
2. I shall send you the empty boxes.
3. I shall wait before asking Mr. Chevron for a new plate. All my colleagues send you their best wishes.
4. Yours respectfully, gratefully, in the Lord.

Dear Countess,

It is impossible to express to you how annoyed I am. I received your letter in time and replied immediately, but the domestic didn't carry out my instructions... and Father Georgelin, notified the evening before, forgot my instruction. Consequently, I was unable to go this morning to Sainte-Lizaigne. (A little town of 1,000 or so inhabitants on the Théols River, seven kilometres from Issoudun, associated with a cast-iron foundry.) I asked him (Georgelin) to go and give you Holy Communion, and also Madame Cottreau.

Please accept, Countess, my sincere regrets and kindest regards in the Lord.

Dear Sister,

I need to be excused for the long delay in replying to you. A journey to Bourges and a thousand preoccupying issues prevented me from writing sooner. If my hand did not trace the lines as soon as I would have liked, my heart has not forgotten you at all and has declared itself very forcefully about you to Our Lord and His holy Mother. And if our requests are heard, nothing will be wanting either for your well-being or the success of your devoted Work of the Sacred Heart Third Order. I am pleased to see that the good Lord blesses it so demonstrably. Remember me to your dear sisters and extend to them my sincere good wishes. I am sending you the latest presentation of the plan for our little Society of the Sacred Heart. I believe that this work is adequately satisfactory. I am writing so to dear Father Ramière. Our associates at Issoudun are truly impressed. They have indeed prayed for you and for your work. Sister de Ribains has written me an interesting letter. I am pleased to see that the work at Puy goes very well. Deo Gratias! All our confrères who have the honour of knowing you send their good wishes.

Please accept, dear Sister in the Lord, my respectful good wishes in Corde Jesu.

J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

NB: Our good Father Georgelin has left for the Autun diocese to found a little community of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. I commend this foundation to your prayers.

Well then, dear Father, how are you? It is an age since I had word from you as well as not writing to you myself. Here I am exiled once again from our dear Sacred Heart at Issoudun. I have been here at Amélie six days and after fifteen I hope to return. (Chevalier was staying with the Religious of the Blessed Sacrament; hence the address.) Like last year I am benefiting well from the Amélie waters, and I have returned for three weeks to consolidate my present state of well-being. And how are things getting on in Marseilles? Are problems and trials still as rife as ever? Is the new Bishop (Charles Philippe Place, 1814-1893, Bishop of Marseilles from 1866) and his administration supportive of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart?

And how is the work getting on at Château-Gombert, Marseilles? Have you, yourself, dear Father, a well-founded hope of coming soon to Issoudun? Hurry up, then. Father Deidier's book will soon be due out. The final proofs have been corrected. This work, I hope, will do good.

I am sending you a new copy of the plan for our little Society. (The first had appeared, see above, in 1864.) It is more complete than the previous one; let me know what you think. (The Jesuit Henri Ramière and J.M. Vandel were closely involved with Chevalier.) The Archbishop of Bourges becomes more and more supportive. His Grace has given us the responsibility for the direction of the church college at Chezal-Benoît, situated about seventeen kilometres from Issoudun. It's a magnificent establishment.

The building had been a Benedictine monastery until the French Revolution. Later, in 1860, the archdiocese took it over and made it into a college. In 1867, October 10, the first students of the "apostolic school", the "Petite Oeuvre", Little Work of the Sacred Heart, entered. At the date of this letter Chevalier was anticipating things, therefore.

The Head of the School and his assistant are at one with us, now acting in the name of our little Society. As soon as possible we shall have our own teachers there. (Chevalier may have Jouët himself in mind as one of "our own teachers".) Pray. Cheerio, dear Father.

Wholly yours in the Lord,

Dear Father,

I have returned after being away three weeks. I am sorry that I couldn't reply to you earlier. I like very much the improvement you made to the head of the Child Jesus you so kindly sent on to me. We scarcely have any more lace pictures of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. We would need a good twenty thousand. Would you be so kind as to send me on the reverse side the changed text here enclosed. Then, if you can, you might print at the top in small letters the "Remember you" to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart; that would be marvellous. With regard to the large pictures of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, you could consult Mr. Daniel, the editor, he left the engraving in the store. You will make whatever arrangements with him which you consider appropriate. He alone in Paris has the copyright. The debit has eased; for the present we do not need anything. When you are carrying out the new printings, so that they may seem less lengthy given the size, you would do well not to put in a Chinese tint the little encirclement surrounding "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, pray for us." And maybe it might be better if this little encirclement was not there at all. See and decide for yourself.

With all good wishes, Father, in the Lord.

J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

Would you be so kind as to pay these two bills and keep the invoice.

Issoudun, February 13, 1867

Dear Father,

The reason for my silence is that I was away for four weeks (at Amélie-les-Bains). Please forgive me. 1. At the back of the lace pictures, you might put a price of 0.20 centimes (roughly 0.72 euros). Then if you think that you should leave out the five lines at the top to accommodate the "You Remember" of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, I leave it to you to forego one or the other because the two cannot stay. It is more advantageous to continue with the printing of the text in Paris. 2. Fr. Piperon is looking for four or five thousand further pictures in lace, with the three prayers at the back, to be presented as mementoes. 3. You can galvanize the plate which has been touched up by Mr. Ceroni and use it for the prints. 4. You can print another 20 or 30 thousand association leaflets. 5. My colleagues here would like to have four or five thousand leaflets of the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart with the text in German. 6. Then four or five thousand association leaflets for our Archconfraternity of the Sacred Heart, the others having run out. 7. You can get Mr. Ceroni to engrave a picture of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. (The price 700 francs, or about 2,515 euros.) Fr. Piperon is ready to send your empty containers. All our confrères send you their kindest regards.

Please accept my respectful good wishes in the Lord.

Dear Father,

Deo Gratias for surviving all your trials. It is a blessing for your Work (at Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Château-Gombert, Marseilles). Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will take some glory from it: Her sovereign power is being, no doubt, overlooked. Keep up heart! After some time it will all have died down. I have been thinking... write a letter to the Archbishop of Bourges expressing your wish to come to us. Then ask him to write himself to the Bishop of Marseilles. In this way, success is guaranteed.

Do what you are suggesting about the price and the address, whatever is the less expensive. We would like to put a nice picture of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart on the cover of the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and the Düsseldorf plate could perhaps be used in a reproduction; what do you think? Dear Father,

Your welcome letter brought us all unspeakable joy. Thanks a million. 1. I sent your letter to the Archbishop of Bourges, I myself interceding on your behalf. Let's hope. My God, how happy we shall be! Let us pray earnestly!

As noted above, with reference to Chevalier's February 18, 1867, letter, Chevalier considered that it was the best course of action to use the good offices of the Archbishop of Bourges to bring Jouët from Marseilles to Issoudun.

2. All our confrères see no problem if Father Baulez wishes to be a missionary of the Sacred Heart since he does not belong to a religious order.

Baulez was formerly a Marseilles seminarian with Jouët and had gone to cook at Pondicherry, India as a member of the Paris Foreign Missions, Missions Etrangères de Paris, and several letters he wrote to his friend Jouët were published in the Annals from 1866, as well as being one of the first and most fervent apostles of the devotion to Our lady of the Sacred Heart in India, together with some of his confrères.

He could then, staying where he is as a missionary, belong to us and be with us. Convey this heartening news to him and send on to him the last little pamphlet which presents a summary of our rules. For the rest, I say this. 3. Let Hell unleash itself against Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, if it must... She will be triumphant in the face of all hostility and ill-will. Patience, prudence. (Chevalier has in mind the difficulties raised, the hostility directed at devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in Marseilles – the Château-Gombert 'Work'.) Dear friend, you are free. If the pilgrimage to La Salette draws you, go on it. But is the route a practical one? Is not the weather still too inclement? See you give it consideration. You have my wholehearted approval. (Clearly Jouët saw himself, though working in the Marseilles diocese, as a religious in his relations with Chevalier.) On the occasion of the great mysteries soon about to take place (the Easter ceremonies), let yourself be renewed in a spirit of fervour and love of the good Lord.

Cheerio, Father. All our confrères embrace you in osculo sancto, and wholeheartedly wish you well, as also your devoted and unworthy Father in Corde Jesu.

Dear Sister in Christ,

I am sending back to you Sister R's letter. (Fanny de Ribains, the Puy Third Order Superior.) It is deplorable, pitiable. What is she complaining about! (Being misunderstood?) Fr. Ramière wrote to me this a.m. to tell me that things were improving. Deo Gratias!

If you think that I myself should write to this distraught sister, I shall gladly do so, but you must let me know how I should go about it. If ever a Superior should intervene or exercise authority with dignity and fatherliness, these circumstances call for it, for such a one, more than anybody else, is the upholder of the rule and the spirit. Since the Lord seems agreeable to give me back my health, I shall try to go to Montluçon after Easter. You will advise about the different Third Order groups and I hope I can engage with such important work more seriously and actively. Fr. Vandel was delighted with his trip (to Paris in March). The approach you have taken (with Sister de Ribains) is the wisest, but move cautiously, delicately, and leave Fr. Ramière to judge the appropriateness of any decision.

My respectful good wishes in the Lord, dear Sister.

J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

The Third Order was not smooth-running at this time. The MSCs, among them Chevalier and Guyot, were not providing all the help hoped for, Chevalier leaving virtually everything to Father Ramière as to intervention, suggestions, taking decisions. In this letter Chevalier thinks about exercising control and involving himself more actively with the Third Order, although retaining confidence in Ramière. But see below.

Let us pray. Let us pray and we shall succeed. A St. Louis (Marseilles) teacher who is at the same college as yourself has written to me recommending his health and vocation to the religious life. Perhaps he has the makings of a Missionary of the Sacred Heart. He is a Mr. A. Nevières (Chevalier may have spelt the name, or read it, incorrectly, because the writer's own writing of his name was difficult to decipher.)

Rome, June 20, 1867

Dear Countess,

Fr. Piperon would have sent you good wishes and informed you that I arrived safe and well in Rome on Saturday the 15th, together with the Archbishop with whom I joined up at La-Guerche. Despite the fatigue, my health stood up very well. Outsiders flock in from every direction, mostly French, and, especially, ecclesiastics. France alone, up to this moment, has provided 2,000 priests, and there are 350 bishops in Rome from all over the world. But even here the French preponderate.

Since my arrival I have been truly making myself available. On the Feast of the Holy Trinity I saw the Pope when he officiated in the Sistine Chapel. The following day, the anniversary of his election, he again officiated in the same chapel with all the bishops and cardinals present. He gave a splendid talk on current issues: it had a deep impact. Then His Holiness, following consultations with the hierarchy, spoke about a General Council from December 8, 1868.

Today, Thursday, the Feast of Corpus Christi, the Pope presided at a procession around St. Peter's Square. All the religious, the parish clergy, in Rome, all the generals of Orders, all the prelates, bishops, cardinals, the Roman senators, were present at this wonderful ceremony. Next to our divine Saviour, the attention of all hearts and spirits was focused on the very gentle, fatherly, almost super-human presence of Pius the Ninth. It was he who carried the Blessed Sacrament. The ceremony began at 8am and didn't finish until midday. I am exhausted since I had to stand up. It does me good to present you with all these details.

The health situation is excellent. The temperature is high but still bearable. 100,000 pilgrims are already accounted for. Rooms are few and far between and very dear: five francs a day (close to 18 euros); this is the cheapest price. It is pointless to tell you that I have prayed much for you and your family, already. Convey my regards to Madame Cottreau, to Mademoiselle Marie to whom I send this little flower, to Mr. Dubois, Mademoiselle Zélie, Mr. Fosset, the sisters, etc., etc. I commend myself to your prayers. I hope to leave Rome on the first of July.

With my respectful good wishes, Madame,

I am back since Thursday. I am in good health. I bring all kinds of blessings for you and your family. I prayed particularly for your interests and whatever preoccupies you. I hope my prayers will be heard.

Thanks for your kind letter which I received in Rome, bringing me much pleasure. I met and shared more than I thought I would. Despite the vast numbers of bishops, I was able to see the Holy Father, give him my offering, make my requests, and get his Apostolic Blessing for ourselves and all the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart associates.

I also received from His Holiness one hundred days' indulgence for these invocations:

1. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart pray for us.
2. Sacred Heart of Jesus, have pity on us.
3. Immaculate Heart of Mary, pray for us.

As for the crowning (of Our Lady, Issoudun) I think that it would be wise to postpone the request; the time is not rightly favourable. And, anyway, we cannot carry out this ceremony until the new chapel is built. And this undertaking cannot be finished for another two years.

July 15, 1867

Dear Associates,

We are drawn to speak to you of Rome, our beloved Pope, Pius the Ninth, and the favours it has pleased him to bestow on the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and the blessings with which he favours his many children.

On Tuesday, June 11, we left my cherished Issoudun community and the venerable shrine of the Queen of Jesus' Heart, and on the following Saturday, at day-break, we set foot on papal territory... We acknowledge our inability to describe the dear sentiments which engulfed our spirit; our hearts palpitated with joy, dilating within us. Our sense of happiness was like that of a child who, after some long days' absence, falls upon the feet of his dearly loved father.

Everything which took place before our eyes had a lasting attraction for us. Some hours had scarcely gone by when we were already striving to make out the dome of St. Peter's in the distance. Heads were appearing in succession at the door; soon a shout went out from all throats: "Rome!... Rome!" Yes, we are arriving in Rome, Rome the hearth of Christianity, the centre of Catholicism; Rome, the light of the world, the centre of the world, the sacred dwelling place of the Church's universal head.

Our first visit was made to St. Peter's; having worshipped the God of mercy of which Pius the Ninth is the worthy representative here on earth, we genuflected at the tombs of the apostles, Peter and Paul. There, dearly loved Associates, our heads in our hands, our hearts deeply moved, we prayed at length for our dear Work of the Sacred Heart and for you in particular. May the Lord grant our requests! On the Monday following our arrival, we had the pleasure of seeing Pius the Ninth in the Sistine Chapel; it was the anniversary of his election. Never did the face of a man, so it seemed to us, represent so much divinity. Everything was resplendent, with the impact of the supernatural, he being for everybody a living representation of Jesus Christ, the fullest embodiment of His glorious majesty and unfathomable goodness.

Some days later we were introduced by the Archbishop of Bourges, His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, to the Holy Father (June 26, 1867). Pius the Ninth, as always, was remarkably kind. Due to a happy turn of events, we were able to speak with him, kiss his feet, make our requests, receive his blessing. But not expecting such good fortune, we forgot to bring with us the gift intended for the Holy Father, and which we wished to present to him. Ten times, without success, we attempted to place at the Holy Father's feet our request and the Association gift, and each time in vain. Then God was good to His children in the person of Monsignor Mercurelli, secretary for Latin language letters, who would be the means by which the purpose of the visit would be achieved when undertaking this long journey. We went to see this worthy prelate to explain what we were looking for, the difficulties we faced and our problem in overcoming them.

We were received with that exquisite kindness which characterizes Monsignor Mercurelli. The worthy and pious prelate promised to do everything he could to obtain the favours we were looking for. But he added: "The circumstances are not at all favourable. The Holy Father is so busy! I have here more than two hundred requests from bishops to present to him. If I had six weeks ahead of me, I might, perhaps, succeed, but you only leave me a few days; to speak truthfully, it is impossible." We replied: "Monsignor, the situation is impossible, even hopeless, we agree, but, nevertheless, allow us to hope more assuredly (than that)". "Why so?" replied the prelate. "Because we have on our side the Patron of problematic and despairing causes, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart: we shall pray to her..." "You would need to," the prelate added, smiling. "Come back tomorrow and we shall see. Meanwhile, remain resigned."

This meeting took place on the 26th of June. We did not return to meet Monsignor Mercurelli until the 28th, the Feast of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. We thought that you would be praying with us, dearly loved Associates, and that your prayers would flatten every obstacle. We were not mistaken. The Holy Father on the 26th acknowledged our request and was delighted to accept the 3,000 francs (about 10,780 euros) which we were pleased to present to him in our own name and that of all Our Lady of the Sacred Heart's children. When he met us, Monsignor Mercurelli observed: "You have a good advocate. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has carried off a victory." And His Excellency handed us our appeal signed in the Holy Father's hand. We happily kiss this venerable signature, and we shall thank from the depths of our soul our Mother to whom we are indebted for this new favour. We transcribe our supplication to the Holy Father for your benefit.

Supplication addressed to His Holiness, Pius the Ninth.

Most Holy Father,

Jules Chevalier, Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, Issoudun, diocese of Bourges, humbly kneeling at the feet of Your Holiness supplicantly asks that the Apostolic Blessing be granted:

1. To all the members of the little Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and to the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart;
2. The favour of a privileged altar three times weekly for all the priests of our little Society;
3. A hundred days' indulgence for the invocation:
"Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, pray for us!"
4. A hundred days' indulgence for each of the following invocations:
"Sacred Heart of Jesus, have pity on us!"
"Immaculate Heart of Mary, pray for us!"

Your Holiness, Most Holy Father,

Your very humble and devoted servant and son,

J. Chevalier, Miss. du S.C., Sup.

Pius P.P. IX

You see then, dearly beloved Associates, that the Holy Father blesses you in a special way and, as well, grants one hundred days' indulgence for each of the following invocations: "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, pray for us." "Sacred Heart of Jesus have mercy on us." "Immaculate Heart of Mary, pray for us."

One can gain these indulgences each time one recites these invocations, a hundred times a day if one wishes. What wonderful benefits!... The Archbishop of Bourges, who is keenly interested in the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and its advancement, asked our dearly loved Holy Father, Pius the Ninth, that the Association be made into an Archconfraternity. The Sovereign Pontiff will shortly, we hope, favour the brief requested. We shall proceed to make it public as soon as we receive it. As for the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, this will take place when the new sanctuary is completed.

Let us through our prayers and offerings quicken the arrival of this joyful moment. Meanwhile, His Holiness has graciously blessed the little diadem which crowns the temporary statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Dear Madame,

My trip to Amélie went very well. Up to now, I feel better with the treatment. Over the past three days we have had terrible weather: snow and ice...

Dear Confrère,

Your kind letter arrived in the middle our retreat, and then a number of different things prevented me from replying. You will pardonably understand how it would have pleased me to reply earlier. The blessed joy which your love for Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has made you experience at your sanctuary has been truly shared here also. This dear Mother cannot do other than embrace one of her longest and most devoted servants. She continues to bless your excellent parish, I have no doubt. Be kind enough then to pray, and especially your pious groups, for our dear Congregation. We are of the view here, Father, that you have not said your last word to Issoudun. (Chevalier here expresses the hope that Jauvet might join the Issoudun community.) Please extend to father Deidier my warmest good wishes, and be supportive of our good confrère (Jouët) in the latest trial with which he has been inflicted again this year. Please accept Father, and appreciated confrère, my good wishes with which I am pleased to associate myself in SS.CC. of J and M (Jesus and Mary).

Your humble servant,

Dear Countess,

I am very sorry that I could not reply earlier to your questions.

1. The Religious week is uncertain: Father Bardin is staying on at Chezal-Benoît.
2. Father Chaumereau remains Superior at Chezal-Benoît.
The latter, a great friend of the MSCs, was born at Issoudun, 1820, and died there, 1898.
3. Fathers Georgelin, Mousseaux, Ledoux, are going to Chezal-Benoît as teachers.

Mousseaux left the Society in 1871; at the time of his death, in 1896, he was a diocesan priest of the Sacred Heart. Ledoux, Issoudun-born, 1842, became director of the 'Petite-Oeuvre', at Chezal-Benoît in 1867, and two years later became Assistant Novice Master at Montluçon, before returning as Superior to Chezal-Benoît. In September 1873 he took charge at Saint-Gérand-le-Puy. The following year, September 29, he left the Society.

Pardon me, Countess, for the delay in forwarding you these different postings.

Please accept my respectful good wishes,

Dear Father,

Thank you for your kind letter... I am concerned that you are indisposed. Forward me promptly your good news. On several occasions now the Rosier de Marie (a Marin magazine) has distorted the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Could you consider, then, sending on to it a little article about new favours received and my journey to Rome?

The business with Mr. Raffl (a Parisian sculptor, 64 rue Bonaparte) can be, as you say, very well agreed on (a statue for Marseilles). I have heard nothing about the Autumn issue, or of Father Clerc. We await your article for the November Annals. It would greatly please us if you could let us have a piece of poetry for the next issue since we have nothing.

Look after your health, dear friend. Take needed rest, and avoid those devotional practices which you cannot opportunely perform. The good Lord takes your good intentions into account. All our dear confrères warmly greet you. Fathers Georgelin, Mousseaux, Ledoux, Mr. Lobet and Mr. Cramail, are at Chezal-Benoît for the past eight days.

Lobet and Cramail were not priests; the latter professed in 1871, and became part of the pioneer missionary group in 1881, 1882.

Father Georgelin teaches rhetoric, Father Mousseaux the third and Father Ledoux the fourth, the other two supervise. The 'Little Work' (Petite Oeuvre) of the Sacred Heart has twelve pupils at Chezal-Benoît. Pray for us all.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Dear Beloved Confrère,

Nothing surprises me in anything which happens to you. There has to be problems with the works of God... You will find that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will draw her own purpose from this regrettable occurrence. The Bishop will eventually have his eyes opened. (Place of Marseilles, no supporter of the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, see above.) A partisan attitude will not always blind him. He has a measured spirit and solid piety and will come eventually to accept that the universal glory of Mary has more validity than a particular glory. He will very shortly bid you farewell on your departure for Issoudun. Yes, dear little Father, you will be with us very soon at the very cradle of the kingdom of the Heart of Jesus. Perseverance! You did very well in your reply to the Bishop, your letter a very dignified one.

We have bought ground at Montluçon for 16,000 francs (57,493 euros); the Bishop of Moulins (de Dreux-Brézé) will pay the most of it. We would like to set up there our Novitiate under the direction of Father Guyot, parish priest of St. Paul, and his curate whom you know. They would also at the same time undertake to teach philosophy and theology for the time being to the novices who would need these courses. We would like to have this property entitled with the names of four of us. I thought of you, Father Piperon, the parish priest of St. Paul and his curate.

Would you send your power of attorney to Father Vandel (Swiss-born but French following the annexation of Savoy to France). See a solicitor. If the title of an outsider, as with Fr. Vandel, causes difficulty, let me have your authorization in my name: Jules Jean Chevalier, native of Richelieu (Indre-et-Loire) and auxiliary priest of the Bourges diocese. (Chevalier here provides his baptismal names, Jules Jean. In the civil register he is named Jean Jules.) Otherwise we can send you the document to be signed. The time is short; send me quickly your authorization by express letter.

Your marvellous, devout, work on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and La-Salette will not appear until the December number (of the Annals) since, otherwise, it would have to be broken up into separate parts, which would be a pity. You could also do a little article on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and Exposition (of the Blessed Sacrament); thank the Associates and the enthusiastic supporters. You will know very well how to do so... Cheerio, dear Father. Everybody here sends you best wishes. Until very soon, I hope. Totus tibi in Corde Jesu.

Dear Father,

A thousand thanks for all your kind letters and your wonderful thoughts for the zouaves (Papal soldiers). What a heart, what zeal... May the Lord be blessed! I read with great interest this morning your article in the Rosier of Mary (magazine). You have really been very clever dealing with Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I am sending you an authorization copy document sent on to me by Fr. Guyot, Montluçon. Have it drawn up on signed paper by your solicitor and send it on immediately to the parish priest of St. Paul's, Montluçon. Do not refer to your status as a priest on the authorization form; that's important.

Guyot had made it easy for Jouët in his example wording accompanying Chevalier's letter, and Jouët would merely write his name and Marseilles domicile to accompany those of Guyot, Roffat, and Piperon, as legally tendering for the Montluçon property.

Do not preoccupy yourself in any way, dear Father, with the Rule of the Sacred Heart: Ama Deum et fac quod vis! Do what you can, your obligations as teacher coming before everything else; do not in the least over-burden yourself; avoid any work which makes you tired. In your situation, you are exempt from obligation. Look after yourself and keep well.

Cheerio, dear Father. All here send you good wishes, and your poor servant blesses you in Corde Jesu.

Dear Reverend Mother,

I cannot congratulate you sufficiently for the zeal which has characterized your work up to now towards the glorification of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. The success you have had in this uplifting apostolate surpasses everything done already. Permit me, then, to congratulate and thank you. Devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is, it seems to me, the most beautiful homage paid to Our Lord and His Blessed Mother. It expresses so well all the tenderness of Jesus for Mary and, in consequence, for mankind. It expresses so eloquently the glory and power of Mary!

Let us thank God, Reverend Mother, that he has reserved for our times this new form of devotion to our august Mother. I am confident that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will do so much, not to say even more, for our poor, stricken, society. You ask a definite date for my departure to Rome. Following many obstacles which delayed me, I think I can leave on the 3rd of February. You make me very happy promising me the prayers of your fervent community and all the children. Be kind enough to inform your very reverend Mother that we shall make every effort to obtain the favours she requests. Kindly extend to her our thanks for the lively interest she has shown in our works.

I could send to you several books on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for the Dutch bishops if you think it worthwhile. Be kind to offer one in my name to the parish priest of Roermond of whom I have a happy memory. We were delighted to hear about the Dutch publication of the Annals which could do a lot of good. Fr. Bazire told me about your work in Westphalia. I support you for, to be frank, separating from Issoudun would deprive, by that very fact, the faithful of those spiritual favours granted to the Association, and whatever about success elsewhere, it is unfortunate. Fr. Raffl on his return from Holland gave us a long list of names, further evidence of your zeal.

Please accept, Reverend Mother, my good wishes, and I am in the Lord your humble servant.

It is with much joy I came to know that you are engaged in founding at Naples the Society of the Third Order of the Sacred Heart. May God reward your efforts and make prosper more and more this new undertaking!

It pleases me to send all the appropriate permissions to the Barnabite priest you have chosen as director. Such delegating as this is in fact required, since the authorization of the Bishop of Naples is not sufficient; in this respect the Third Order of the Sacred Heart is under the control of our Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

I also authorize you to make your chapel the centre of the Association of the Sacred Heart in Naples. While waiting for your establishment as an archconfraternity you will collect the names of the associates and forward them to me at Issoudun (Indre), France.

Issoudun, February 8, 1868

Dear Sister in Christ,

May the grace of Our Lord be always with you! I hope to go to Montluçon next Monday with dear Fr. Vandel. We shall discuss everything which interests us. The changes Father Ramière speaks about are only about details. I wrote to Sister Volpicelli. Her address seemed very incomplete to me. Naples is very big and a letter which provides neither the street or number is very much at risk. Consequently, I leave it to Providence. In her letter she said that she had handed over to a Barnabite priest the direction of this Work in Naples and that, according to Father Ramière, it was no longer necessary for authorization to contact the Issoudun Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, and that the permission of the local bishop sufficed.

Chevalier is referring to is the well-known Neapolitan Barnabite priest Leonardo Matera (1811-1891). A doctor in law, he joined the Barnabites in 1835 and became Provincial in 1850, Visitor General 1856-1865. He worked wisely and helpfully with Caterina Volpicelli.

But if so, this is total separation! It is to take from the Third Order its centre, its soul and life. The moment the Third Order, with its present organization, is approved by the Archbishop of Bourges, no radical change can take place without the involvement of Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne.

Until we meet. Please accept, dear Sister, my sincere good wishes.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved. (One hundred days' indulgence.)

House of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun
February 23, 1868

Dear Brothers,

We have chosen the rule as the concern of our first discussions. But before we discuss what is accepted by our priestly Association, we must deal with some preliminary issues which it is desirable to set out as fundamental principles. The first which presents itself is obviously the following: Is a regulation necessary for us? In reply let us look at it from three perspectives, that of the Association, the ministry, personal perfection.

1. An Association cannot be understood without a rule which would always be the bond and life-style of its members. The Church and Society have equally grasped the indispensable need of a rule for those who constitute these Societies. Our Holy Mother has her rules and regulations which govern her children, the faithful throughout the world. Right from the early centuries, those who have left the world to work in common for their perfection or to extend by their common efforts the Kingdom of God, the contemplative Orders and the active Orders, have equally focused on a rule adapted to the end they set themselves; that which would guarantee order, security, vitality, perseverance, appropriate components of success. So long as the rule has been upheld and is witness to, these flourishing Societies have a positive impact; where there has been an easing off the results have become less obvious; once the Rule is no more than a dead letter, the most powerful Orders begin to fade.

The same need and the same results are frequently obvious in the less significant work undertaken by the Church for the benefit of the faithful. Confraternities and simple pious associations can neither be founded nor continue other than through regulations which vitalize and guarantee their well-being and fervour. The nature of our work as an association is essentially linked to these different institutions. Just like Religious we belong to the Lord by our choice, our promises, and Ordination seal. Like the ordinary lay people we remain in the world, where we need help to uphold our dignity and protect ourselves from a host of dangers. The help which is rarely found elsewhere is guaranteed by the Rule.

The prudence of the secular world does not in his respect give the advantage to the children of light. Nations have their codes and laws, all administrations their regulations; corporate organizations never organize without setting down prescriptions which reciprocally oblige those who are part of them; commercial or industrial societies set up conventions to maintain and promote their interests. And then, let us declare that Hell itself expresses, and is subject to, inexorable necessity; those who are set on evil do not constitute a society without ensuring obligations often linked by fearsome pledges.

2. But the need of a rule becomes yet more urgent and demanding if we consider the demands of the ministry, this complex and difficult priestly ministry which makes us available to everybody: Omnia omnibus factus sum (I am available to everybody in every way). All those who have been confided by Providence to our care have the right to come and knock at our door; we are drawn in every way and we can refuse no-one: Omnibus debitor sum (I am in everybody's debt). Someone comes looking for important, enlightened, advice, another for the strength of which he is bereft; that one, material aid, the other moral support, help, the protectiveness which he does not hope to find elsewhere; all these divine enlightenments meet respective needs and requirements. The priest is the first to be called on; he stays with him who holds on to him; he leaves with him who takes him off; his life is often chaotic. Both in finding himself and giving himself to others, he needs order, and, consequently a rule, because the latter is order. It counteracts all the shocks, gives a sense of direction in unexpected circumstances, anticipates needs of all kinds. The rule is the rudder in the pilot's hands, the competent worker's tool, the abundance for him who dispenses. The rule prolongs the hours and multiplies the means; it provides time for prayer and spiritual exercises, for the study of a variety of issues in which the priest must be competent, but more for the enrichment of others than self-enrichment. He is available for the rich, penitents, the poor, and given to the minute details of Administration, maintenance, sometimes building, or repairing, his Church; presiding over dignified ceremonies, and, also, being available for the requisite and legitimate requirements of social life.

Led, supported, by the rule, even if it seems in some respects practically impossible, the priest fosters that peace which is a prerequisite of the interior life; providing it for others he cannot leave aside its acquisition for himself, and if sometimes human frailty becomes a painful experience; the rule, drawing him gently to himself and God, will very soon open up new treasures.

3. The rule is also necessary for the priest's personal perfection. More than anything else, we shall develop this more fully in what follows. It is the priest's responsibility to concern himself very particularly with his own sanctification, being particularly careful not to preach more than he practises, finding himself, thereby, among those who talk and do not act. He is obliged by his vocation to pass on to the faithful this favoured teaching of the Heart of Jesus: Perfecti estote, sicut Pater vester caelestis perfectus est (you then must be perfect as your heavenly Father is perfect). After the great Apostle's (Paul) example, who understood so well this mission, they must lift up their desires to better things, that is: Aemulamini charismata mellora, and present, after his example, a model which being imitated will bring about in them a likeness to the Sacred Heart: Imitatores mei estote sicut et ego Christi (imitate me as I myself imitate Christ) (1 Cor. 11,1).

But how can one travel the way of perfection without a rule of life? It is the universally accepted point of departure. You will never be mistaken, dearly loved confrères, when God addresses you as a soul drawn by His grace, and then ordains a pattern of behaviour which must be faithfully followed. The explanation for your life-style is quite simply the Master's principle: Si quis vult venire post me, abneget semetipsum... (If anyone wishes to follow me, let him renounce himself. Matt. 16.24.) Nobody will be perfect unless he renounces himself; but to renounce oneself is voluntarily to curtail one's freedom. Hereabouts speculation and words serve no purpose; it is the practicality of the issue we are searching for. Are we not saying that there must be a rule which restrains freedom and directs us to the will of God for whose love we have accepted this burden which in reality is full of grace and sweetness? A well known experience supports every day this assertion.

What priest has not encountered in the course of his ministry people well disposed to all appearances who voluntarily engage in works of practical piety, pray at length, are distinguished for their support of the Church and frequenting of the sacraments? Aware of what is happening, and to his great surprise, he who oversees these people notices no improvement in those individuals who are attached above all to their own ideas and who try above all to lead their guide rather than apply themselves to follow his teaching. Do not be in any doubt, this confusion comes from the absence of a rule which such souls are quite incapable of accepting and carrying out, however advised and solid in virtue, because they do not know how to renounce their will.

Since it provides entry and keeps us in the precious way of renunciation, the rule enjoys the privilege of offering support and encouragement so often advantageous to those who have undertaken to sanctify themselves. Despite our best hopes, our painful work, there remains for us those hours of foreboding, darkness, sickness of heart, deep boredom.

The rule then presents itself as a good reassuring star leading us happily towards the harbour, while conscience, echoing the ways of authority, assures that... "qui regulae vivit, Dei vivit" ("he who lives according to the rule lives in God"). It is sometimes good to offer self-witness and be able to say to oneself, without being influenced by self-love, that one will do something, for, as an ancient writer very experienced in spirituality puts it, that gives one heart to do even more.

Yes, dear confrères, it is quite something to be constrained even by a rule which is relatively easy. We have more than experienced this, and faithful observance can require constraint, but such forcefulness is salutary, uplifting us towards more spontaneous and rewarding action by enabling us to overcome ourselves. It is pointless to look elsewhere, since it is there alone, in gaining ascendancy over oneself, that one finds the basis and measure of serious progress: Tantum procedelis, quantum tibi ipsi vim intuleris, declares the author of the Imitation. (Of Christ - You will not advance except to the extent that you do yourself violence. Book 1, chapter 25, 4.11.) Frankly speaking, if one only accepts a little of the rule, is it not because of the drastic demands it imposes? For us, fully alive to the need of glorifying God, our final end, we only see in these sacrifices the means of sanctifying ourselves and, thereby, attain with greater assurance the rest which comes with eternal glory.

Dear confrères, I am your humble and devoted servant in the Heart of Christ.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!
(100 day's indulgence.)

House of the Sacred Heart, the 18th
possibly August 1868

Dear Confrères,

We consider today the different aspects of the specific regulations which relate to us and which, with the help of God, will enable us to follow that way of perfection to which we aspire. Understanding, piety, those spiritual exercises which nourish it, such as spiritual reflection that is solid and nourishing, become a primary consideration. In this perspective, everything which preoccupies the children of this generation in terms of health and bodily needs, is paralleled by us in relation to strength of soul and its fruitful outcome: regularity, judicious choice of substantial foods, delicate seasoning, with nothing left out which is conducive to a perfect régime, and all of these elements are more important than one thinks for the spiritual life.

1. Regularity, with its fixed, periodic intervals, does not leave our spirits languishing; it anticipates our weaknesses and prevents us from being over-burdened by forestalling an accumulation of tasks. Such regularity, up to a certain point, is possible even in the most engaged ministry. All it needs is a certain taking care and energetic will. Everything hinges on the early hours of the day or, better, a fixed rising-time, and taking care to arrange things so that there is nothing to be done before meditation. Once this first exercise is performed everything else follows as a matter of course, and why not say so? It is a special grace which is the reward for a faithfulness whose value each one can appreciate because it is demanding in the beginning.

We accept without regret that it is impossible to carry out always at the same time the other spiritual exercises. Nevertheless, there is one which still calls for the most perfect punctuality: the holy Mass. A specific piety and the well-being of the faithful are here particularly involved. Not having a fixed hour for the holy Mass represents a considerable loss of time; saying it distractedly deprives it of impact, as does placing obstacles in the way of frequent communion, leaving the church unattended during the week, to the great disappointment of truly pious people, or those who might become so. All too often we cannot ignore the complaints and whispering provoked by this lack of regularity. Many (priests) put forward as an excuse the parishioners' customs at funerals; but experience has many times shown that the most demanding (parishioners) are capable of submission, and in a short time, and without too much difficulty, changed the most ingrained habits to the approval of the majority.

Faithful then to our principle, and leaving it with each one of our confrères to adapt his life-style to the needs of his office, we do not lay a time upon him for any of these exercises; but to all we say: have a fixed prayer-time before attending to anything else, and have another hour for the holy Mass. A priest will regularly follow up with the little hours (of the office) as soon as he can do so during the morning. After mid-day he will arrange his time to recite vespers and compline, matins and lauds, then his Rosary, and pay a visit to the Blessed Sacrament at a convenient time. The regularity in the foregoing eliminates those delays which make one liable to omissions or pose a threat to one's health in postponing bed-time. Here then is what can be done regularly; there will be exceptions, but they confirm the rule rather than jeopardize it.

2. Regular habits are not alone in being called upon for the promotion of the spiritual temperament. The choice of ingredients has a significance which does not elude any of our confrères. They have all too often seen the faithful whom they guide take the wrong route; they will well know how to avoid this unfortunate state of affairs themselves. In this respect, we are rightly privileged: the Church and best established practice come together to set out by way of sacred obligations, or a choice of practical means, those values which foster solid and enlightening piety. The holy Mass, preceded by appropriate preparation and followed by thanksgiving; the breviary, meditation; examination of conscience; the rosary; visits to the Blessed Sacrament and spiritual reading: these are the priest's main spiritual exercises. He who is faithful to these different practises will certainly make himself holy.

When the Society began we consulted a religious, distinguished for his knowledge, experience, holiness, about those practises of piety which we thought of offering to those of our confrères who would associate with us. He hesitated: we thought we should present him with one of our bulletins which was like a blue-print of what we were aiming at. He took it away, examined it seriously, attentively, withdrew within himself to look for the Spirit's enlightenment, and then returned the document to us with this simple statement: "This is enough." We know quite well, dear confrères, that what is appropriate for a regulation is not enough for your spiritual life. The love you have for Our Lord will draw you more often to prayer. You are imbued with His spirit and you have made His teaching your own. With Him, you say to the faithful: "Vigilate et orate... Oportet semper orare et non deficere...". After the example of the great apostle, you urgently look for the carrying out of these recommendations of the Master: "Volo ergo viros orare in omni loco" and, having in mind the right to lead others, you yourselves will multiply your fervent aspirations. The priest, for the rest, witnesses every day to his need for divine grace; he prays, therefore, and prays often. But these prayers are not imposed on him; they are the fruit of his own personal initiative, and it is good to have something like this in the spiritual life as an exercise of generosity. This freedom, which follows from the Spirit of our rule, is good to a certain extent.

A well, do we not think that our dear confrères should lay upon themselves a host of practises and vocal prayers outside the normal exercises? On certain days they will be more engaged or, perhaps, unwell; they will think themselves bound by all those vocal prayers, feel bored and say them with wearied nonchalance to the great detriment of piety. Pray a lot, pray continuously, because it is the Master's wish, but pray freely and be aware of the actual situation of both mind and body, on your knees, seated, walking, in the church, the house, the garden, or in the middle of the fields, doing so with the help of words or familiar formulas, or simply through heart-felt feelings; it matters not. Choose the method which gives greater ease in uplifting ourselves to God and obtaining that which we hope for.

3. Prayer must be experienced as enhancing. The best ingredients are not ordinarily present such as are found in nature. They need to undergo preparation and are not to be consumed on their own, needing accompaniment by some other ingredient. Such is characteristic of a meal. It is, likewise, with spiritual refreshment. In order to provide the flavour one is looking for, the Holy Spirit in the first instance calls for careful preparation: Ante orationem praepara animam tuam. This preparation, drawing the soul towards that wished for activity, is no other than an appreciative thrust inherent to that very activity itself being undertaken, and whose impact makes for a richer experience and embodies the virtue which becomes its fruit. In passing, let it be said that this preparation is carried out without ever abruptly leaving aside prayer, being preceded by a period of restfulness of spirit, during which we consider the present exercise and the end we set ourselves in carrying it out. It is that recollection whose purpose it is to provide sustenance for the soul, just as fire is necessarily used to prepare food for bodily nourishment.

We hope to pursue this topic in a forthcoming circular, dealing with details concerning this preparation, but which very much go beyond the limits we have set ourselves today.

It suffices to add, in order to establish more fully what is necessary, that it is very much according to the mind of the Church to make preparation before Mass and public functions, and the practice of pious priests has led to the common custom of private prayer preparatory to the private recitation of the breviary. Being attentive in this respect, extending even to those exercises which are most ordinary and brief, will certainly bring about satisfying results.

The exercises prepared in this manner will, consequently, feature humility, confidence, devotion, making for what is both attractive and meritorious. God is not pleased if we are on the side of those who honour Him with their lips, but permit their hearts to be far from him. Praise, prayer, in these circumstances would be dry and boring, our relationship with God painful and almost unbearable, whereas we should be like the tree planted by the water. There is nothing better than well-formulated prayer to refresh the spirit. The prophet King had experienced this when composing his devout canticle: "Quam dilecta tabernacula tua, Domine virtutum; concupiscit et deficit anima mea in atria Domini."

How I love your palace, Yahweh Sabaoth

How my soul yearns and pines for Yahweh's courts!

My heart and my flesh sing for joy to the living God... (Ps.84,1-2).

A single day in your courts is worth more than a thousand elsewhere..." (Ps. 84,10; Jerusalem Bible, Translation).

May it be like this for us, dear confrères, and like all internally devoted to the worship of Jesus' divine Heart, we move in this place from the wonderful tabernacle to the house of God where the sweet sound of feasting is heard accompanied with the songs of true joy and holy praise.

Please be assured, very dear confrères, of my respectful good wishes in Corde Jesu.

Rough draft of a contract with Fr. Chammereau, Chezal-Benoît.

The following is the basis on which Fr. Chammereau agreed on a definitive arrangement between Chezal-Benoît and the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

Little Work (Petite Oeuvre).

The fixed fee whether in term-time or holidays will be thirty-two francs monthly. (1 franc at this date would be the equivalent of roughly 3.25 euros today.)

The fee would include laundry, medical expenses, heating, lighting.

In order to avoid any dispute the Superior wishes to pay an indemnity equivalent to the cost of heating and lighting and met by what the Little Work (Petite Oeuvre) charges.

The prefect and other priests exclusively associated with the Little Work (Petite Oeuvre) will pay a rent of forty francs a month, laundry included, but without lighting or heating. For the year under way, and since the cost of living has increased, the students' fees will carry a supplement of two francs each month.

Contract with Fr. Chammereau, Chezal-Benoît.

Issoudun, September 8, 1868

As between the Reverend Father Chevalier, Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, and Father Chammereau, Superior of the Diocesan Institute at Chezal-Benoît, agreement has been reached on what follows:

- Article 1. The boarding fee due to be paid to the college for each pupil of the Little Work (Petite Oeuvre) is fixed at 32 francs each month whether during the school year or holidays. (As noted in the copy letter above, the euro current day value of the franc would be roughly 3.25.) The fee comprises laundry, bedding, hair cut and medical expenses during term time only, as well as heating. During term time, and when the cost of living increases, the Sacred Heart will pay a supplement of two francs a month for each pupil. The fee begins to be charged from the moment each student enters.
- Article 2. As stated above, lighting and heating are the responsibility of the college, but to avoid any misunderstanding the college will pay yearly to the bursary office of the Little Work a sum (amount not stated) for each student whereby he will be released from this obligation.
- Article 3. There is a fixed arrangement for the teachers who are members of the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart: excluding fee and laundry, the priest teachers who are specifically associated with the college receive 460 francs, the teachers or priests 260 francs. The college does not meet the cost of lighting or heating for the teachers.
- Article 4. The fee paid to the college by the Little Work (Petite Oeuvre) for those teachers exclusively in charge of youngsters is fixed at forty francs a month. This amount includes laundry, bedding, care of the room, medical care.

I went myself to Bourges with your letter and spoke to the Bishop about your problems. His Grace greatly regrets what has happened, and advises you to say nothing, to blame nobody, and avoid showing any disappointment. Divine Providence will soon make it possible for you to be free of this unhappy situation. Patience and prayer! The Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statue only left three days ago; we had forgotten about it. Father Piperon has been away for three weeks and comes back this evening. I am collapsing under the work-load.

Do your utmost to live as excellent Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. All our confrères wish you well. Fr. A year later, July 1864, he succeeded Piperon as chaplain at the hospice and the prison, Issoudun. At this time he endorsed and supported the son of a poor Issoudun family, Arthur Lanctin, presenting him to Fr. Vandel as a likely candidate for the Petite Oeuvre in 1867. May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

(10 days' indulgence, Pius IX, September 20, 1860)

Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, pray for us!

(100 days' indulgence, Pius IX, June 26, 1867)

My Lord,

A blessing, if you please.

We are both pleased and hopeful in forwarding this printed notice about the title and Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Your evident piety and devotion to the Most Holy Virgin Mary, Mother of Jesus Christ, will dispose you to welcome our Work more and more favourably.

We add to our little appeal two others, short but important notices. The first is a summary of the Association from its beginning in June 1864 up to the present moment, and the second is an appeal to Our Holy Father, the Pope, to make the Confraternity an Archconfraternity and have Our Lady of the Sacred Heart crowned.

Before going to Rome to prostrate ourselves at the feet of His Holiness, Pius the Ninth, and petition this twofold favour, we have thought it to be our duty and in our interest to present to your Lordship these different documents and humbly seek from you some words of approval for our Association which would aid our undertakings. We are emboldened to say that His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, our distinguished and beloved Archbishop of Bourges, has already given us appreciable and marked support. As well, more than forty other bishops, French archbishops and bishops, Belgian and English also, have, otherwise, by letters or messages of approval, indicated their good-will and wholehearted support.

Having become aware of the judiciousness, the opportuneness, the depth of this devotion, having studied its aim and impact, that is to say its wonderful expansion, the graces sought, the favours obtained, they forwarded to us their keen approval, confirming by their signatures of support our appeal. We entreat you, my Lord, to grant us the same support and to encourage and support our Work with your praise and endorsement. It is for the glory of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, the honour and love of the Most Holy Virgin, and the salvation of souls.

I have the honour to be, your Lordship and Excellency, your very humble and devoted servant.

Dear Father,

A thousand thanks for your kind letter. Your tiredness of body and spirit greatly concerns me. Look after yourself well, I beg you, and do not be imprudent. We are praying a lot for you. Wait for an opportune moment before repeating your requests to come to Issoudun. Discuss it with Fr. Guiol before taking it up with the Bishop of Marseilles. If His Lordship is not very agreeable, wait. An approach which is too precipitate could only delay things further. Patience, dear friend, the hour of your deliverance will soon sound.

Bishop Place has written to me that "it is not within" his competence to approve our Constitutions and recommend them to Rome, that this was the province of the Archbishop of Bourges, and that he was taking advantage of the occasion (his letter) to inform me that he greatly regretted seeing in the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart "novelties" (views) which should not be there. I replied straight away thanking him for his remarks, stating that my greatest wish was to accommodate myself to him, and that on knowing that he found exaggerated the phrase which says that the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is, after that of the Mother of God, the most beautiful of all, etc. I hastened to change it by putting in "one of the most beautiful" (titles) etc., and that I would be very grateful if His Lordship would indicate to me the novelties which so displeased him because they were not at all in praise of Mary, and that I would take it upon myself to make them (the novelties) disappear. It's four weeks since I wrote the above and I haven't had a reply so far. The new book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is due to come out at the end of this week; it is very powerful. The Archbishop of Bourges is delighted with it... His approval is wonderfully heartening. I must hurry and send it to you so that you can translate it into Latin.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Yours as ever, I assure you, in Corde Jesu.

Ametur ubique terrarum Cor Jesu sacratissimum !

Beatissime Pater,

Julius Chevalier, praesbyter Archidiocesis Bituricensis, in Gallia, Superior generalis Missionariorum a Sacratissimo Corde Jesu dictorum, vulgo Missionnaires du Sacré-Coeur, ad pedes Sanctitatis Vestrae humiliter provolutus, supplex orat ut libeat

Sanctitati Vestrae hujusmodi Societatem des Missionnaires du Sacré-Coeur, jam Apostolica benedictione ditatam vigesima die septembris MDCCCLX, approbare atque datis epistolis confirmare.

Haec nostra minima Societas, post preces per novem dies B.M.V. Imm. impensas et ostento signo divinae Voluntatis, ortum habuit, ipsa die octava decembris MDCCCLIV, qua Sanctitas Vestra solemniter definivit Imm. B.M.V. Conceptionem. Lugendorum praesentis oevi malorum remedium est hauriendum est ipso Veritatis et Charitatis fonte quem indicavit Ipse Dominus Noster Jesus Christus B. Mariae Marguaritae Alacoque, revelando thesauros Misericordiae in Corde suo repositos! Quomodo autem salvabit nos Cor Jesu nisi audierint homines de illo? Quomodo autem audient sine praedicante? Quomodo vero praedicabunt nisi mittantur? Necesse est ergo ut mittantur qui praedicent Cor Jesu et ostendant in saeculis supervenientibus abundantes divitias gratiae in bonitate super nos.

Quapropter instituti sunt Missionarii ejusdem Sacratissimi Cordis Jesu.

Propter excellentiam hujus devotionis, et ad sananda tot et tanta mala magis ac magis ingravescentia, interest ut sacerdotes quidam ad hanc speciatim vocationem informentur, et tam efficax remedium notum faciant et adhibendum curent.

Statim ab exordio ab Eminentissimo Cardinali Du Pont, Archiepiscopo Bituricensi, Societas Exolduni vulgo Issoudun adunata erectaque, fuit laudata approbata et canonice solemniterque instituta. Et nunc ab illustrissimo et amatissimo Archiepiscopo Le Prince de La Tour d'Auvergne, benedictione et suffragio amplificatur.

Triplici religionis voto simplici obstricti perseverant Missionarii a SS. Corde Jesu non solum omnibus apostolicis muneribus gratis et pro Deo indesinenter operam navant, sive per pia exercitia praesbyteris et fidelibus subministranda, sive per educationem christianam puerorum in Collegiis, et sapientem ac piam Clericorum directionem et institutionem in Seminariis, sive etiam per officia parochialia aliquando sub Ordinariorum regimine explenda, si Sanctitati Vestrae placuerit, sed adhuc solemne habent, ad populorum aedificationem, austerioris vitae et religiosae perfectionis exemplum praebere.

Et jam habet Societas multa signa protectionis Sacratissimi Cordis Jesu, necnon et B.M.V. Immaculatae. Etenim quinque domos possidet Societas.

In domo principali, quae est caput totius Societatis, Exolduni vulgo Issoudun, quindecim sunt sacerdotes, voto ad sacerdotium vocati, et tres fratres laici coadjutores.

In noviciatu Montisludi vulgo Montluçon, in dioecesi Molinensi, decem sunt alumni.

Et ad diversas regiones, praesertim in Bituricensi, in Molinensi et Augustodunensi dioecesis, radices ac ramos jam extendit Societas, annuentibus imo et petentibus Episcopis.

In Bituricensi enim Archidioecesi (praeter domum principalem ubi sunt decem Religiosi professi Missionibus et variis exercitiis spiritualibus intra et extra Galliam vacantes), in Collegio Casa Sti Benedicti vulgo Chezal-Benoît, novem vivunt Nostrae Societatis sacerdotes educationi christianae centum et viginti puerorum intenti.

In Molinensi dioecesi, in civitate Montislucii vulgo Montluçon, (Praeter Noviciatum), tres sunt adhuc Religiosi Missionibus et Exercitiis parochialibus sese adhibentes.

Et in dioecesi Augustidunensi, in civitate vulgo Tournus, sex sunt ejusdem Societatis Sacerdotes exercitiis parochialibus, missionibus et educationi christianae puerorum operam praestantes.

Neque profecto ex viginti et octo et ultra datis aliunde testimonialibus litteris ambigi potest quin apud fere omnes sive Gallia sive aliarum gentium Antistites benevolentiam et approbationem eximiam in laudibus obtinuerit nostrum Institutum.

Cum ingenti gaudio Missionarii a Corde Jesu missionibus, exercitiis spiritualibus educationi christianae puerorum in Collegiis, et sapienti ac piae Clericorum directioni et institutioni vacant.

Praesbyteros saeculares, scientia et pietate conspicuos in variis provinciis aggregatos habent.

Per talem Associationem prosequatur renovatu Cleri saecularis, et gloria, cultus ardens, amor vehementissimus Sacratissimi Cordis Jesu, necnon et honor B.M.V. Imm.

Tandem, scholam clericalem, benedicente Deo optimo maximo, instauravit Casa Sti Benedicti vulgi Chezal-Benoît, in dioecesi Bituricensi, nostra minima Societas. Ibi viginti et ultra Alumni quotannis ingressum habent, et ad Vocationem nostram accurate informantur, ita ut numerus membrorum Societatis sic certissime crescat de anno in annum. Tale Seminarium est pro nobis principium et fons multiplicationis, Deo providente.

Quidam vero sint sensus Missionariorum a SS. Corde Jesu erga S. Apostolicam Sedem, satis superque demonstrant Antistitum littera testimonialia in volumine collectae, et caritativa illa tributa quae quotannis, in sublevandis Ecclesiae necessitatibus, ultro impendunt. Illam quam ex intimo Corde erga Petri Sedem sentiunt devotionem atque reverentiam operibus et factis significare volunt, Deo adjuvante. Quoad doctrinam, omnia tenemus quae tenet S. Romana Ecclesia, semper et in omnibus Pontifici infallibili credentes et obedientes.

Quoad autem bona temporalia in Dei providentia confidat Societas.

Attamen, in Domino quasdam habet possessiones, scilicet quinque centena millia francorum, et ex redditibus necnon et ex eleemosynis Christifidelium vivunt ejus membra.

Idecirco plurimi Galliarum Episcopi (30) per litteras authenticas, praefatam Societatis nostrae Approbationem a sanctitate Vestra humiliter petunt.

Eamdem R.R. Archiepiscopus Bituricensis, le Prince de La Tour d'Auvergne instanter postulat

Dear Father,

Do not get worked up... all your problems are a good portent. The Devil never unchains himself against what is insignificant. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will win out, and you will be a zealous missionary. As for the challenge which you fear, it will be no more than absurd... If it ever comes to pass, you will have just one thing to do: disengage and come straightaway to Issoudun. You are within your rights. Fear nothing, therefore, dear Father, all this fuss will turn to your advantage and facilitate your release from fretful exile. Bishop d'Anagni's letter is splendid (see below, Article 220). I shall pass on your messages to dear Fr. Vandel. All our confrères here send you good wishes. I wish you a happy New Year and an imminent arrival among us.

Dear Father Georgelin,

Many thanks for your good wishes and all the interesting details you provide for me. I really am very pleased with our little Tournus community; I entreat the Lord to bless you more and more. It is through forgetfulness that I didn't inform your new confrère that I was accepting him as a novice. Indeed, yes, most certainly! Let him know how happy I am with his intention.

Be kind enough to inform our venerable confrère, the parish priest, that Fr. Malabat will go to Tournus and open the mission on Quinquagesima Sunday, February 7; from there he will go to Paraya-le-Montal; it is impossible to arrange things otherwise.

It would appear that Pierre-Paul Malabat, born December 29, 1832, birthplace unknown, had joined the young community in 1868 most likely. He would appear to have left after September 1869 following the election of the General and his assistants.

My regards to all our dear confrères, and very sincere good wishes to Fathers Chaumont, Gornn, Petit, Guillemain, etc. (These are no more than 'affiliated' members of the Society.) I shall be pleased to receive the revision (correction) of the canticles. Dear Father,

Good day... How are you? For myself, I am in very good health. I am in Rome since Saturday last. I am busily engaging myself with our interests: the setting up of the archconfraternity and the solemn coronation will only be achieved with great difficulty. As for the approval of our little Society, it would seem that this can be achieved rather easily thanks to the marked support of the Archbishop of Bourges, and the twenty-eight letters from other bishops supporting our distinguished Archbishop.

Pray earnestly for me and enlist others to do the same. Tell me how are things with you? What is happening in your relationship with Bishop Place? What shall I do in Rome in this respect? My regards to the parish priest of Château-Gombert and to Fr. Deidier. Next week I shall have an audience with the Holy Father. I shall present him with 5,000 francs (roughly 1800 euros) and a bronze statue, 0.60 centimetres, of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I have brought the two diadems to be blessed. They are lovely.

Cheerio, dear friend. Always, believe me, wholly yours in Our Lord.

Rome, February 14, 1869

These few words in haste, dear friends,

Yesterday I had my audience. The Holy Father was exceptionally kind. The presentation of the statue very greatly pleased him; he found it quite charming. The two crowns drew his appreciation. I had to exhibit them to all the Vatican Cardinals, Bishops, Prelates and other distinguished Vatican personages: Cardinal Antonelli, General Kanzler, the Army Minister, Monsignor de Mérode, Monsignor Pacca, Monsignor Ricci, etc. etc. They all thought they were delightful.

The Holy Father freely grants the privilege of a solemn coronation in his name; he read with interest the "Remember" (prayer) to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart; he grants a 100 days' indulgence for its recitation, but only within the diocese of Bourges for the time being; otherwise we must contact the Congregation to obtain general indulgences. The Holy Father was very pleased when the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was explained to him; wishing to become a member of the Association, he offered his name and I gave him his entry form. I enrolled in the enterprise all the Vatican bishops and prelates. I must return these with their Association membership forms. (The Rome archives have two copies of Chevalier's letter, in both of which "association forms" become "admission forms".) Send me immediately twelve large pictures of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

The Holy Father gave me as a souvenir the pen he wrote with; we shall hold on to it like a relic. (It is now part of the Chevalier Museum, Issoudun.) He listened intently to the history of our little Society; he informed me that he will be pleased to give it his approval as soon as the Congregation makes its report. I left our complete dossier with the Congregation on Friday. The gentlemen there gave me every reason to be optimistic. The result seems assured, but it will take a long time and I shall not wait over for it. I hope to be back within fifteen days. To begin with, the Association will be raised to Archconfraternity status within the diocese alone, and then the rest will follow later. My regards to our dear confrères, Bazire, Albert, Moreau, Gaffino, Hamel, Penasson (lay brother), Henri, Laprade, Jean; and André, Silvain, Louis. I pray very much for you all; wholly yours in the Lord.

J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

I shall send you on this week for the Annals an account of my audience.

I would like to think, my child, that you are restored to health. (Marie was in her 18th year.) I remembered you in all the sanctuaries I visited. I prayed for you and your mother at the tombs of the Holy Apostles, at St. Paul's (outside the Walls), at St. Mary Major, at St. John Lateran, at the Holy Cross of Jerusalem, at St. Sebastian's, at the Mamertine prison, at the Coliseum, etc. etc. I saw the Holy Father yesterday and asked him, naming you, for a special blessing. His Holiness was pleased to do so and I forward it to you straightaway. The Holy Father has been incredibly kind. Presenting the statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart made him greatly pleased, and he placed it on his desk. The two crowns delighted him and attracted the admiration of everyone in the Vatican.

Devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart particularly pleased the Sovereign Pontiff; he asked me a lot about Issoudun and looks upon it as very fortunate to be chosen as the centre of this new devotion.

The letter addressed to the Associates, February 22, 1869, published in the Annals, March 1869, together with other letters in April, May, conveys the same message.

The Pope was so approving of this new Marian title that he favoured it with the privilege of a solemn coronation in his name and '100 days' indulgence when accompanied by the recitation of "Remember" Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and then he wanted to become a member of the Association; whereupon I made out his association membership. I enrolled all the Vatican Cardinals, Bishops and Prelate, even the Army Minister General Kanzler who was in attendance. The Holy Father gave me his writing pen as a souvenir. I shall be showing it to you. (See above, article 218)

My regards to Madames du Quesne, Cottereau (the latter du Quesne's aunt), Father Fosset (1803-1890, Regent of Studies at Chezal-Benoît College, guest presently of du Quesne at Issoudun), to Sister Zélie, to the kind Sisters of St. Vincent, etc. etc.

Cheerio, dear child; pray especially for me.

Until very soon, wholly yours in the Lord.

J M JRome, Santa Birgitta, Piazza Farnese
February 20, 1868

Dear Father,

Thank you for your kind letter and the enclosed medal. I received today the new official communication that the Holy Father endorses the solemn coronation in his name of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and the setting up of the Association as an Archconfraternity for the diocese of Bourges alone; I am told that we shall have it next year for France and then for the rest of the world. The Sovereign Pontiff has granted 100 days' indulgence for the "Remember" (Our Lady), but once more only for the Bourges diocese.

I don't know who the French bishops are who sent a petition to Rome against the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart; they failed to succeed. The Congregation of the Index (sic! The Holy Office, latterly of the Doctrine of the Faith) has intervened and is seriously looking into this devotion. It has been found orthodox and beyond reproach, but certain isolated phrases found in the Annals were considered to be (doctrinally) excessive. The Congregation, therefore, paid no attention to the complaints of these bishops. We do well to weigh our words in the Annals and give no cause for surveillance.

The Pope was delighted with the statue, placing it on his desk. He liked the two crowns and blessed them wholeheartedly. He became enrolled in the Association, and I gave him his entry formula, he giving me his writing pen as a souvenir, a souvenir we shall hold on to. His Holiness again blessed all Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, the Association of Our Lady and all the associate members.

The Bishop of Anagni in the Pontifical States is setting up canonically in his diocese, through decree, the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association, and he has published in Italian a little brochure on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which I have and will let you see.

I have broached here the delicate situation in regard to your bishop. I have been advised to ask you to be very prudent, to bear up patiently and await the providential moment. "If Fr. Jouët," it has been stated, "leaves his diocese impetuously, his bishop, almost certainly, will write to Rome against the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, and his complaint will hinder your approval."

Accordingly, dear Father, stay calm; say nothing about Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in the diocese because your bishop is opposed (to this devotion), and wait until the good Lord breaks the chains of your captivity. Bishop Place will become weary and grace will move his heart. We shall pray fervently for this; I ask this favour from the holy Apostles (Peter and Paul). As for the official approval of our little Society, I do not know when this will come about as everything moves slowly in Rome. I return to Issoudun in fifteen days' time.

Cheerio, dear friend; I wholeheartedly greet you.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

To the Associates of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Rome, February 22, 1869

Dear Associates,

We are in Rome for the past two weeks, your prayers accompanying us; blessings upon you. Eight days after our arrival it became possible for us to kneel before our beloved Holy Father, Pius the Ninth, placing at his feet, as a token of our profound respect, a bronze statue, gifts and two crowns.

1. The statue is a faithful reproduction of the magnificent marble statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart expertly reproduced by one of the most distinguished artists in Paris, sixty centimetres in height. The Holy Father admired the elegant shape, the finesse of the work, its sublime expressiveness. The onyx pedestal adorned with the Papal arms also engaged his attention. The statue was placed on his desk under the gaze of the great Pope of Mary. That is its proper location: certainly it is a worthy setting, and we can also say that it is appropriate. In effect, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart expresses the two great devotions of Pius the Ninth. Everyone knows that the Holy Father has placed all his hopes in the Heart of Jesus. It is He, as he said, who will heal all our afflictions. It is from this divine source of all graces that he (the Pope) finds the help he needs, the light, strength and courage needed in the difficult times we are passing through. Everyone knows also that Pius the Ninth expects everything from Mary; with the Church he acknowledges her as the Treasury of Heaven, the Mediatrix of God's gifts, the Deliverer from our evils. Contemplating then the picture of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, what does she say to you? It means that Jesus has given to Mary the empire of his heart, confided to her the key to his divine blessings, and one must address oneself in confidence to His incomparable Mother to obtain these favours. Accordingly these thoughts captivated the heart of Pius the Ninth, and such a well-loved Pontiff was delighted to accept the statue presented to him, and he charged us, pious associates, to convey to you his wholehearted acknowledgement.

2. The gifts. We would like to have all the world's riches and place them at the feet of Jesus Christ's Vicar. Where would one find a more worthy subject of concern, greater distress, and more deserving of attention? If the gifts did not quite meet our wishes, they were, to say the least, expressive of the most wholehearted devotedness and the most profound regard. Five thousand francs (about 18,000 euros) is not that much, but for all that it is a great deal if one thinks of the way it was collected. This sum is indicative of heroic sacrifices, perspiration, concern, privations of every kind. God has counted the cost of it all and weighed the merits. Since it is Our Lady of the Sacred Heart who has made possible these contributions, it is she who should be asked to present them. In the base of the statue there is an artistically executed drawer which a mechanism opens and closes. The 5,000 francs were placed within, and with the lightest touch the offerings were displayed before the amazed gaze of the Venerable Pontiff.

"Oh, how wonderfully good Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is," Pius the Ninth exclaimed.

"Most Holy Father, we hope she will be like this always."

"Where, then, is this miraculous Virgin?"

"In Issoudun, at the very centre of France, in the diocese of Bourges."

"Your town is blessed; I bless it together with all your confrères and associates."

"Most Holy Father, there is something else to bless."

3. The diadems: We then uncovered the two diadems. Pius the Ninth was both surprised and amazed, surprised by so much splendour, amazed by so much generosity. He looked over for a long time this artistic masterpiece, and the good taste exhibited in designing these precious stones. He greatly appreciated the artist's idea to leave what was offered in its original form so that the donors could recognize their gifts. The explanation we offered the Holy Father about the origin of these two diadems moved him to tears. "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart must be very much loved," he declared, "for the associates to have adorned her with such a lovely crown! I am delighted to bless it and grant the privilege which you are looking for. For the rest, you will go to his Eminence Cardinal Clarelli and ask him to write you an instruction so that the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart can take place in my name. I delegate your distinguished and pious archbishop for this ceremony."

We have the brief in our hands. The diadems attracted the admiration of all the Vatican; His Eminence Cardinal Antonelli, Monsignors Pacca and Ricci, etc., etc. found them delightful. His Excellency, the Army Minister, General Kanzler and the Noble Guards could not take themselves away from admiring them.

The Holy Father, thanks to the supportive letters of His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges, received us with the most exquisite courtesy. Since we were continuously kneeling at his feet, Pius the Ninth took us by the hand saying: "Rise up and give us news about your work... How many associates have you?"

"Most Holy Father the number exceeds two millions and the confraternity is only four years in existence. It is remarkable! – Here are the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which we are pleased to present to your Holiness in asking you to bless them. You will read most assuredly in this publication what the Association does."

Pius the Ninth remarked as he opened and looked through the Annals: "Indeed! I wholeheartedly bless the enterprise. And the other book, what does it treat of?"

"Holy Father, it deals with devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart from the point of view of theology and tradition, and includes letters from bishops who offer support."

The Pope opened the book, looked at the document which authorized the association, beginning with the words: Pope Pius the Ninth (Pius PP IX)... "Do you know this Pius the Ninth?" he asked, laughing.

"Yes, most Holy Father, we know him, we love him, we honour him. May Heaven keep him with us for a long time to come in our love!"

"What is the specific aim of this Association?"

"Most Holy Father, it is to confide to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart a successful outcome for difficult and desperate situations in both the spiritual and temporal order. The members of this confraternity, spread throughout the world, would be greatly pleased if your Holiness became part of the Association."

"With pleasure," His Holiness replied, "but what must one do?"

"Most Holy Father, give your name and say twice daily: Our Lady of the Sacred Heart pray for us."

"It's easy," he added.

Then our beloved Pope wrote on a sheet of paper he handed to us: 'Pius the Ninth who wishes to love the Blessed Virgin Mary'. What humility! Who has done more for Mary than Pius the Ninth? Who has ever shown to her so many loving gestures? And it is this great Pope, who promulgated the dogma of the Immaculate Conception, who is proclaimed by all to be the Pope of Mary, who dares to write like this.

Next we presented him with his entry form and the letters of Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne petitioning the making of the Association into an Archconfraternity. His Holiness granted this favour for the Bourges diocese only; a little later this privilege will be extended to France and then made worldwide. He presented us with the pen which he usually used and with which he gave his signature to the requests asked of him.

The Holy Father blessed us once more, we kissing his venerated hand, full of God's gifts, that hand raised towards heaven disarmingly and favourably, that hand which only opens in order to bless and spread what is beneficial. We withdrew; our hearts uplifted and overcome with joyful emotions which we shall be happy to share with you.

My dearly beloved daughter in Christ,

I am indebted to you for all the details presented to me; they have greatly interested me. The development of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart association doesn't in the least surprise me; Naples remains a city of faith. Devotion to the most holy Virgin and to the Sacred Heart will be its salvation.

I am forwarding what will stir the zeal of the associates. I am sending on to you by post three parcels, one containing two large reproductions of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart; the other contains four photographs of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which I had developed in Rome. Do as you wish with them. You could, perhaps, give one to the Amati Sisters as a reward for their zeal. The same parcel contains, in addition, many of the Association's circulars which I had printed in Italy with the "Remember" (Our Lady of the Sacred Heart). The third parcel contains only those circular letters and the "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" prayer sheets. You have therefore in all this enough for propaganda purposes. I have written to Issoudun asking the Association's sub-director to forward immediately a certain number of large Our Lady of the Sacred Heart reproductions, and of St. Joseph, together with Association forms and the prospectus of the "Little Work".

I pray earnestly for all your intentions, my child. I hope the Sacred Heart of Jesus will bless your devout expectations and lead you towards the perfection to which you aspire. Courage and confidence! I see in you devoted work which could become very worthwhile for Naples. I pray for a unity drawn from other work of the same kind, or close to being so, which you have mentioned to me. Keep me well informed about all that's happening to our well-loved daughter. If you feel drawn to open the depths of your heart to me, dear child, you may do so in total discretion. I should be very pleased to aid you with any advice and help you as much as possible. You may count on my devotedness and support; they are unlimited. I am replying briefly to dear Sister John of the Sacred Heart's letter. As for Sister Marie, tell her not to worry too much, and that I pray continuously for her. Remember me to all your dear companions and all the sisters. I always have them in mind before the good Lord. I think it likely that I shall not be leaving before Holy Week. My work is not advancing as quickly as I expected. Pray then that there will be a successful outcome. If my presence in Naples was needed, I would wholeheartedly return next week for two or three days, but at this moment I do not see the purpose of such a journey, unless you see things otherwise. If within three years I shall be returning to Rome for the definitive approval of our little Society, I shall not fail to go and see you. My regards to Very Reverend Father Matera and Father Caprioli (chaplain to Caterina Volpicelli and private tutor to Countess Fresco's children).

Cheerio, my very dear Daughter in the Lord. I commend myself most especially to your fervent prayers. Your father in the Lord blesses you and all your sisters.

Dear Friend,

I have left Rome. I bring with me our decree of approval; it is splendid. The Sacred Congregation is very pleased with our little Society. Within three years we should have definitive approval. May God and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart be praised!

In the interests of our little Society, you are advised, despite our support, not to leave your diocese given your bishop's attitude. That which you can and must do is to continue making it known that you want to enter the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. Are you coming to see us over Easter? I shall have some interesting news for you to hear. From the 19th of this month I shall be in Issoudun. I am not going to Marseilles. See you soon. My regards to Fathers Juvat, Deidier, Jourdan, etc.

Cheerio, wholly yours,

Dear Father Georgelin,

I have left Rome bringing the decree of approval for our dear Society of the Sacred Heart. The Sacred Congregation was very pleased with our Constitutions and the spirit which animated them. In three years we shall have the final approval... How we must thank the good Lord! I shall be in Issoudun from the 19th of this month. I wrote to you from Rome as soon as I arrived, and did not get a reply; this forgetfulness on your part disappointed me. My regards to the parish priest. Cardinal Dom Pitra asked to be remembered to him. He is very supportive of us. Our regards to all our dear confrères.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Wholly yours in CJ,

On Returning from Rome

I

A Word of Thanks

Issoudun, March 25, 1869

Feast of the Annunciation

Dear Associates,

The letter which we were pleased to write from Rome to you, following the very kind audience with our Holy Father the Pope, will have made you aware of the recent, wonderful, privileges granted to the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association. The setting up of an Archconfraternity in the diocese of Bourges, the solemn crowning of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart at Issoudun, Pius the Ninth himself adding his signature to the list of associates, all of this was necessarily a source of rejoicing for your fervent souls, and we are in no way surprised that everywhere this news was waited on with expected impatience or heard with very great rejoicing.

We still have interesting things to add about this thousand times blest journey; the impact of your prayers, dear associates, was as fully effective and as speedy as we dared hope for, knowing from your experience and our own the impact most wonderfully brought each day by Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, in serious and difficult concerns. Each of us justifiably observed in Rome that the diverse issues, the many and varied activities of the Rome Congregations with the Council about to take place (1870), the very importance of our own undertakings, would have made us expect long delays. In fact it was not like that at all, and it was our duty to acknowledge publicly our appreciation of the kind welcome of which we were the recipients everywhere, and in particular, dear associates, we cannot thank you warmly enough for all those prayers of yours which so forcefully helped us in our undertaking.

II

Approval of Our Constitutions

The second reason which drew us to the Eternal City was that of having our Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus approved canonically. Thirty-two cardinals, archbishops and bishops wished to be associated with the distinguished Archbishop of Bourges, His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, to petition forthwith this estimable favour from the Holy See. The Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Religious, commissioned by Pius the Ninth to examine carefully our Constitutions, set itself immediately to work, displaying a zeal which we shall forever remember, and, following the favourable verdict on our Rule, we received from His Holiness the decree (of approval) we had been expecting. This decree, so full of compliments, the most delightful appreciation we could have from the Holy Father, is drawn up with such tactful care and touching piety that we were moved to tears; it is stated among other things and right from the beginning that this new religious Society began on the 8th of December, 1854, the very day the dogma of the Immaculate Conception was proclaimed... This is to say that therein one finds the role of Mary, who later we would proclaim Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Nine years ago when for the first time we found ourselves at the feet of Pius the Ninth, explaining bashfully the emergence of our youthful congregation, the august Vicar of Jesus Christ remarked with warmth: "I would like many priests to become associated with your work..." and he added: "quickly increase your numbers and I shall give you the approval you presently lack...". These words became prophetic for us and are being fulfilled today. Our joy cannot be put into words, and our most express thanks are directed towards all who have contributed by their influence and insight to such an important undertaking, now crowned with such a wonderful success.

All our expectations were for the most part fulfilled following a few short weeks' sojourn in Rome, and we went and placed ourselves at the feet of the Holy Father to thank him from the bottom of our hearts for his particular kindness to us, and assure him that our personal development, that of all those who are associated with our work, and especially the numerous Our Lady of the Sacred Heart associates, would increase yet more in numbers day by day.

In this respect our little Annals will be, as hitherto, financially worthwhile for the Holy Father. The contributions which the pious generosity of our subscribers makes available, will be, as normal, mentioned in these pages sent directly to the Vatican, where a distinguished Roman prelate is voluntarily engaged to hand them on, himself, each month to Pius the Ninth, together with the copy of the Annals which our immortal Pontiff regularly receives.

In this second audience, our beloved Pius the Ninth provided further proof of his kindness, simplicity, and that paternal warmth of which he alone seems to have the secret. For the second time he wished to bestow his apostolic blessing on all the members of the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart spread over the face of the earth.

May this renewed blessing of Peter's successor bring to pass all that is implied! Our minds will be more and more enlightened, our hearts filled with joy and our steps made firm in virtue.

III

Right from the beginning following our arrival in Rome, we were eager to go and celebrate the sacred mysteries at the tomb of the holy Apostles so that they might be supportive. After our thanksgiving we saw, kneeling before the altar on a pre-Dieu, a young woman simply, modestly, dressed, but deeply recollected. A burning prayer, no doubt expressing all her present needs and future hopes, rose from her noble heart. Because of the presence of a bishop, the respect paid to her, and the accompanying entourage, we felt drawn to ask her name: "It is Pius the Ninth's niece, we were informed, Princess Marie-Pie, the King of Naples' sister, deprived of his states by the Revolution. On the eve of any important occasion she comes to pray to the holy Apostles." Taking from our breviary a blessed picture of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and a note about the Association, we handed the printed card to the lady-in-waiting to be given by her to her Highness. The worthy princess was delighted to receive this little gift, looked attentively at the picture, placed it beside her book intending to look at it more closely on leaving the church, while continuing to pray fervently before the Lord. We ourselves soon left the tomb of the Apostles, and this little event was forgotten... But the picture of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart finished up in good hands. The royal princess cannot control her emotions when considering Mary's sovereignty over the Heart of Jesus. The royalty of this world who are so envied, who bring about so many imposed persecutions, and whom a breath of wind could destroy from one moment to the next, count very little for her before this irremovable Marian title, Queen of the Sacred Heart... She wanted to have a fuller explanation about this devotion which so attracted her, and seemed so significantly relevant. She wanted to find the priest who gave her the picture, and some days later, we heard, not surprisingly, that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart had chosen a new and devoted follower. Princess Pie wanted to know everything about the Association, each new detail making clear how this great soul was sensitive to Mary's glories. The two diadems which we had brought with us to Rome excited the admiration of the whole royal family, but on hearing that we were made Associates of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the rich as well as the poor, the princess became piously jealous... taking from her gown a brooch on which shone with royal-like splendour three very dear diamonds, humbly asking that we find a place for them in the diadem.

We were, for our part, moved by someone, herself affected by violence and injustice, interesting herself so expressly in the crown of a Marian statue, these royal hands joined so prayerfully in petitioning the privilege to be a devout follower of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. The three diamonds have been encased in the crown and it is easy to pick them out because of their exceptional thickness and brilliance.

Superior, Missionaries of the Sacred Heart

Riguardo a quello che voi provate, mia cara figliuola, non ve ne tormentate punto: ei non vi ha in esso alcun peccato. Le vostre antipatie, le vostre avversioni, le vostre ripugnanze interne, le vostre rivolte dell'animo e dello spirito, lo sconvolgimento intero della vostra natura, tutto questo è opera del demonio. Questo nemico della nostra salute vuol turbarvi, rendervi inquieta, strapparvi la pace, gettarvi anche nella disperazione, per forzarvi ad abbandonare la via della perfezione, nella quale camminate ed in seguito staccarvi dal Signor Nostro, che è la via, la verità e la vita. ...

Il divin Cuore di Gesù, satollo di oltraggi per l'indifferenza e l'empietà dei suoi figliuoli, ha scelto voi per vittima, affinché ripariate le ingiurie che si fanno al suo amore oltraggiato. Il calice che Gesù vi presenta è amaro ...; ma bevete lo coraggiosamente. Io posso affermarvi con tutta verità che in questo stato men che offendere Iddio, voi meravigliosamente meritate ...

Mia cara figliuola, io ve ne prego assai: non vogliate di più tormentarvi. Io prendo tutte le vostre miserie su di me: io ne rispondo innanzi a Dio. Credetemi; io ho troppa affezione per voi, per non dirvi la verità. Scrivetemi sovente e lungamente; ditemi tutte le miserie della cara vostra anima, poi che io ne sono il Padre. Non vi preoccupate punto; parlatemi con tutta semplicità, con effusione di cuore ed abbandono completo: voi riacquisterete la pace di cui avete sì gran bisogno ed io ringrazierò mille volte il Signor Nostro d'avermi condotto a Napoli per farmi conoscere.

Dear Father,

Your letter saddens me; I had not thought your bishop would so behave. The good God allows it. May His Holy Name be blessed! In order to make clear to Bishop Place that your vocation is neither imaginary nor of a day's duration, return from time to time to the issue...

Father Piperon takes the view that you should write a letter to the Holy Father asking him to give you permission to enter the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, stating that you have had a vocation over five years, and that your bishop is opposed... etc. You could, if you think it worthwhile, address your letter to Monsignor Mercurelli, secretary for Latin letters, Via Mazzarino, N.22, beside the Quirinal. He knows French. You might request him to send it to the Holy Father and let you have the reply.

I await the end of the article about my trip to Rome. You have all the notes; be good enough to send them on to me. We do not want to be late for the Annals. There is also a little article to be prepared for the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, May 31 – and on the crowning.

Everybody here shares your troubles and longs for your arrival.

Cheerio, dear friend – I weep for you, but I like you so much. I have written to your dear sister, Mademoiselle Victorine.

I greet you most wholeheartedly. Wholly yours,

Back from Rome

Issoudun, April 26, 1869

On the devotion of the Romans to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart

Dear Associates,

These few days which we were so pleased to spend in the Eternal City would have been well spent if we only had the happy outcome mentioned in our last letter, but Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has wished to grant us further good evidence of her favours, a very full measure, and so much in keeping with her generous outpourings. Each day brings us fresh surprises, ever more pleasant, Rome presenting itself to us as the best tilled field of the Family's Father, as the well prepared ground where the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has put down, almost without our knowing it, strong and deep roots. It is for this reason that we were obliged, given the numerous appeals addressed to us from all sides, to have a little note in Italian on the Association, running to several thousand copies, immediately translated and printed in Rome itself.

But we were not the first to do this, and we could not have been more happy to find at the Civiltà Cattolica printing press a fascinating little Italian brochure on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. (The Civiltà Cattolica is the authoritative Jesuit monthly.) This work, which presents the issue exceptionally well, was undertaken by His Lordship Pagliari, Bishop of Anagni, and benefited from two other Roman approvals. We already knew from the well-wishing relationship the good and learned Bishop had with us that the Association had been set up in his Pontifical State's diocese, but now we were pleased to gather that he had a pastoral instruction published in the same vein recommending this moving devotion to the faithful, honouring Mary's Sovereignty over the Sacred Heart as the Empress of the most sweet Heart of Jesus, Imperatricis dulcissimi Cordis Jesu. (Official letter of the Bishop of Anagni authorizing the canonical setting-up of the Association in his episcopal See, February 2, 1869.)

His Eminence Cardinal dom Pitra, the learned Benedictine, has happily welcomed this beautiful devotion which, dear associates, is your work, because the many graces obtained by your prayers have made known its sublimity, and calls to mind the greatly appreciated diocese of Autun where it experienced its first years of life, the diocese par excellence of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, and one of the most committed to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Many other cardinals, several bishops and many prelates have enrolled in the Association's registers following on Our Holy Father, the Pope. Monsignor Bastide has made himself promoter of our work and has placed all the Papal zouaves under the protection of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

We cannot forget either the Roman religious houses who, despite our short stay, made it possible to extend to us so much concern and interest. Let us name at least the French College whose distinguished Rector made himself the propagandist with respect to everything which has to do with our dear devotion; then the six houses of the Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul, who came to know of their association with our confraternity following a letter from their Superior General, and who were so happy to have been made daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart; the convent of the Sisters of the Cross of St. Andrew (Via dell'Arancio, 65), whose mother-house is at La Puye, Poitiers diocese, and whose esteemed superior is one of our most devoted supporters.

But this is not all. To meet the fervent wishes of many faithful and in response to the pleas of several bishops, we undertook the pleasant task of creating centres where one can find focused all that concerns the association. One of the centres has been set up with the secretary of Bishop Ricci, dom Filippo Pirri, under the eyes of the Sovereign Pontiff within the Vatican itself; another with Signora (Mrs.) Carlotta Antonelli (who for twenty years has undergone very strange sufferings offered up for the well-being of the Holy Father and in whose room Pius the IX himself granted us the privilege of saying Mass and distributing holy communion); a third centre at Mr. Mercurelli's, via Santa Chiara, 44, and a fourth at Mr. Antonelli's, via del Corso, Piazza Sciarra, 228. One finds at these two latter addresses pictures, snapshots, paintings, statues and reproductions of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Among the attractive Madonnas which the Romans know how to paint so well, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has not been overlooked, and several times on our walks we have come across this picture which, painted by an Italian, takes on an added charm. Devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is, therefore, well known in Rome from our Holy Father the Pope and cardinals to the people, and this must stimulate us to spread zealously about us by way of tender piety the worship of our dear Mother. We have brought more than two thousand names from Rome for inscription in the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart registers.

V

The Remember You to our Lady of the Sacred Heart examined and approved by Pius IX

Pius IX, as one is aware, freely consented in 1867 to grant 100 days' indulgence to this invocation: Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, pray for us, and extend this favour to the universal Church. Consequently, any Catholic who invokes: Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, pray for us, can receive a hundred days' indulgence. But if all the faithful, even prior to becoming members of the Association, can receive these benefits, the members proper of the confraternity, our two million associates, and together with them all who will be received, have a share equally significant in the Church's spiritual benefits. Besides the indulgences proper to the Association, our associates enjoy all those granted by the Prima Primaria (first of first) of Rome.

If there is a basically legitimate difference between associated Catholics and non-associated, there has also to be a difference between the associates from all over the world and those from Issoudun and Berry who are at the very heart of the Association. Pius IX, then, wished to add something more, other, than the title of archconfraternity and the solemn coronation. Our Holy Father the Pope has deigned to examine himself the Remember (you) which every priest recites out loud at the foot of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart altar in the sanctuary at Issoudun before celebrating holy Mass. The words of this prayer which sum up clearly the spirit of our dear devotion, have been savoured by the Holy Father who has praised their pious sentiments and enriched them with a hundred days' indulgence for the whole diocese of Bourges. Since this prayer, so well known, has had several differing versions, we give here the authentic text examined and approved by Pius IX.

Efficacious Prayer or Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart

Remember, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the efficacy without limits which your divine Son has granted you over his adorable Heart. Full of confidence in your merits, we come to implore your protection, O Sovereign Mistress of the Heart of Jesus, of that Heart which is the inexhaustible source of all graces, and which you can draw on at your bidding to pour out on mankind all the riches of love and mercy, of light and salvation, which are stored within it, grant us, we beseech you, the favours we seek...

No, we cannot suffer a refusal, and since you are our Mother, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, favourably hear and answer our prayers. So be it done.

VI

Three Days at Naples

Our pious and devoted Neapolitan supporters, knowing that we were in Rome, sent us very appealing letters inviting us to come and speak on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. We answered their plea and one can imagine how pleasantly surprised we were to find in the city a charming chapel dedicated to the Queen of Jesus' Heart, and a large number of the most keen devotees in this chapel. They engaged with us for three days, and it became necessary to describe in detail the marvels wrought by Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

His Eminence, Cardinal Sporza, Archbishop of Naples, was pleased to tell us himself about the interest he had in this devotion which is dear to him and which, under his patronage, spreads more and more every day in his large diocese. The Neapolitan supporters are many; moreover, due to their pious and intelligent co-operation, the work greatly prospers. We are pleased to acknowledge here all our indebtedness.

Here, then, dear associates, are some details about our trip which your prayers and the protection of our well-loved Queen have made a thousand times blessed.

Giungo ora da Montluçon, mia buona figliuola: vi ho visto la nostra cara sorella, madamigella de Montaignac; ella mi ha mostrato la vostra lettera, ed assai abbiamo parlato di voi, delle vostre opere, delle vostre compagne, di Napoli.

La ripulsione che voi provate per il vostro confessore non è che una prova, credete pure a me. Lo stato di desolazione, nel quale trovasi l'animo vostro, i vostri scontentamenti interiori, le vostre aridità, i vostri disgusti spirituali sono opera del demonio.

Questo nemico di ogni bene e della nostra salute vorrebbe scoraggiarvi; ma, ve ne supplico, figlia mia, non ve ne sgomentate punto. Sopportate pazientemente questa croce, unitela a quella del nostro Signore, di cui la vita intera non fu che tutto un martirio. Non è invano che voi siete Vittima del Sacro Cuore!

Soffrite senza scoraggiamento, cara figliuola, offrite a Dio codesta crocifissione perpetua e n'avrete assai merito. Voi avete una bella missione da compiere: essa è la missione della riparazione e della espiazione. Coraggio e confidenza! Gesù Cristo è con voi, io ne ho la certezza. Nel correr di questo mese che è consacrato a Nostra Signora del Sacro Cuore, io vo pregando anche più particolarmente per voi, poiché la premura che vi ho avanza ogni espressione.

Riguardo alle penitenze non ne fate alcuna senza la licenza del vostro confessore. Dormite durante la notte, poiché il sonno vi è indispensabile. Io vi proibisco di starvene a pregare nelle ore del riposo: il sonno offerto a Dio è una preghiera. Mia buona figliuola, perché tormentarvi, come voi fate? ...

Voi dite di non pregare; ed io v'affermo che voi pregate sempre nelle vostre azioni, nelle vostre angosce, nelle vostre pene e sofferenze. Voi mi crederete certamente e m'obbedirete, non è così? Voi siete mia figliuola ed io il padre vostro; e con ciò s'è detto ogni cosa. Voi poi non siete affatto obbligata di parlare del vostro stato interiore alla de Montaignac, anzi io ve li proibisco...

The Feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, dear child, and that of the Sacred Heart, have greatly preoccupied me, but I have prayed much for you and all your cherished undertakings. The latest trial of which you speak must have been difficult and I share it, but do not worry too much. The good Lord has his plans. You are a victim of the Sacred Heart, making reparation for his outraged glory, and that's all there is to say...

I engaged greatly with Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and the Sacred Heart on their feast days about our dear sisters in Naples, and all their spiritual and temporal needs. I want the spirit of unity, charity, piety, zeal, devotedness to reign in our dear Third Order. The sanctuary of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is a very appropriate name. I approve of it wholeheartedly.

I wait, dear child, a detailed letter from you. Speak to me open-heartedly of your spirit which is so dear to me and which I love as my own... your interior sorrows, your difficulties, your trials, your joy and your success.

Cheerio, dear, admirable daughter; I bless you and all your sisters as I commend myself to your prayers.

To Madame B. de Grandmaison.

Issoudun, June 24, 1869

Madame,

The sanctuary of the Sacred Heart is envious of that of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. It maintains that one must not ignore its right of seniority, and if Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has a tapestry, so also the sanctuary of the Sacred Heart, source of all spiritual riches, should equally so have its carpet. Our order for the carpet of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart having been virtually identified with one area of the country, we have a great many people who cannot forego the pleasure of working for a sanctuary which, for quite some time now, very strongly attracts their support. I am engaged in starting the second tapestry. Many things have prevented this issue from going forward speedily.

Again over the past few days our main helper here was laid up in bed. Not wishing to hold up much longer our keen Nogent workers, this is what I have done, having taken advice from Sister Clémentine whom you well know. I sent a length of the tapestry to be worked on to Mr. Fragerolles and, always following the advice of Sister Clémentine, I told him to send you on a good ball of wool to make the pieces and of which I am sending you a sample. Since it hasn't been begun as yet, one can bring about in this sample those changes one judges advantageous.

I do not wish to imply that the design you are about to receive cannot be criticized; just the same in my view it is not without credit and will produce a positive impact if it can be realized. I say this last because its realization presents difficulties since the piece you will receive is only a quarter of the whole. It follows then that the four pieces which form the complete square need not all be started from the same place, something you will readily understand on seeing the individual piece. As well, it is my advice that these pieces should not be worked upon except in doing all four and where four people could do likewise. My sister Clémentine having informed me that you have arranged for 10 squares to be carried out, I hope that you can arrange 2 more, though not because they are needed arising from the work-scheme undertaken by you, and, accordingly, any danger of these two pieces not being adequate does not arise.

You will shortly receive, then, the square in question and the wool to go with it. The wool will not be parcelled out; it will reach you in bulk. It is you yourself who will apportion the wool in requisite quantity. My sister Clémentine informs me that asking you to undertake this work will not take advantage of your devotedness, or that at the very least you will not regard this task as excessive. Seeing our Issoudun helpers overburdened, I leave myself so persuaded.

Not only do you undertake responsibility for this work, and as well for Nogent, you can, if you consider it necessary, change the colour selection. I particularly favour the part where there is a white foundation, and I would like if nothing is changed there, but I would like where red has been chosen as a basis if one added a lovely gentle green; I have several designs for that. One can put in red the leaves which at the moment lie on the red base. It is true that there are already red leaves on the white foundation; I think just the same that one does not exclude the other. For all that, I do not hold absolutely to this. The two things on which I do insist are that the part with the base in white should not be changed, and that the other base be in gentle green. In the little motif with a green base could not one have a blue base? Arrange the colours, leaving aside my recommendations, as you wish. The tapestry is intended to adorn the Sacred Heart sanctuary and to accompany, in certain situations, a tapestry with a green base. It is for this reason that I want a green base for what I am sending you.

Not having advised the merchant about a change of colours you will be getting a lot of red and only little green. You will, accordingly, write and tell him to send you on more green. If the green he sends you does not look right, and you have a good sample, ask him for what seems to you the most suitable, and tell him to send the bill to us.

I am very pleased to send my regards to Madame Dubois de Grandmaison, and also to our dear girls Antoine-Marie and Antoinette. My dear sister Clémentine is very well. I am taking good care of her. I wait on you. Until next time.

Dear Friend,

The Good Lord leaves you a long time on the cross... (Chevalier refers once more to the intransigence of the bishop, his continuing refusal to allow Jouët to join the MSCs.) When will you be disengaged to come and bury yourself in your dear Issoudun solitude, in the very sanctuary of the Heart of Jesus...? Only God knows; let us pray and hope. It's all we can do. The kind parish priest of Chateau-Gombert has his trials also. Convey to him our good wishes. I hope he will come with Fr. Dear Editor,

I write to request you, if it is possible, to reproduce this notification which will arrive with the latest issue of the Annals, containing the pastoral letter of the Archbishop of Bourges and details about the feast day (September 8). If you would be so kind as to forward us a copy of your paper referring to the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, it would greatly please us, and we send our most sincere thanks.

Please accept our respectful good wishes,

His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges, has published a notable pastoral letter on the great religious feasts which are due to take place at Issoudun (Indre) on the 8th of September next on the occasion of the solemn coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart under the patronage of His Holiness, Pius IX. A large number of bishops have been invited by the Archbishop of Bourges to enhance this important ceremony by their presence. The eloquent Bishop Bertaut of Tulle has kindly agreed to preach on the feast day and acclaim the glories of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, together with the distinguished Bishop Pie of Poitiers. A great number of pilgrims are expected at Issoudun where active preparations have been going on for the past three months.

One is aware that the moving devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which began in this town five years ago has rapidly spread with a profusion of blessings in the whole Catholic world, so much so that thirty thousand testimonies of acknowledgement and many letters from bishops have arrived from all over the world in tribute to the sovereign supplication to the Heart of Jesus, the champion of hopeless causes.

Pius IX is granting from September 8 a plenary indulgence over 8 days to all who come on pilgrimage to Issoudun for the feast and who pray before the crowned statue in keeping with the requisite conditions. Ten confessors chosen from religious of different orders will be available to the faithful.

Those who would wish to reserve seating in the church interior, and in the reserved enclosure, Sacred Heart Square, should immediately contact the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun.

I immediately, dear child, began your Novena, and I followed your counsel. I hope that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will answer your requests. Is it that something has happened to you? Some trial? I should like to think not. In the meantime I shall not be at ease until I have had a letter from you giving me all the details. I very much hope that you can come to Issoudun with Madame de Fusco for the great celebration of the coronation (Our Lady) on September 8. It is likely that I shall be returning to Rome at the beginning of November. If that is the case I shall go down to Naples. Kindly remember me to our dear sister Jeanne of the Sacred Heart. I pray earnestly for her and for yourself. I like to think that you are not worrying yourself any longer, and that everything, spiritually and in normal day-to-day life, goes forward in keeping with your wishes. Convey my regards to Father de Matera and Mr. Caprioli. Mention to Madame de Fusco that I shall be writing to her shortly. I leave for Montluçon tomorrow. The Archbishop of Bourges and the Bishop of Moulins are going there to bless our Novitiate. Pray earnestly for me. Farewell, dear child. I bless you together with all the Naples sisters, all your undertakings and your dear children.

Your father in the Lord,

How I must seem guilty in your eyes, dear child, to have waited such a long time without writing to you. Do not be vexed with me for I have in no way forgotten you. I wholeheartedly pray for you and your edifying family. Until September 8 I shall be very busy. I am sorry that you cannot come to our lovely coronation feast day. I still hope to see you there. Be so good as to convey to Sister Catherine (Volpicelli) our regards. I received her letter together with yours and also the postal orders. I am most grateful to you. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will reward you for your zeal. Give my good wishes to your aunt, to your dear children, to all our Sacred Heart sisters and the pious Amati family. It is very likely that I shall be going back to Rome during November. If I do so, I shall go to see you in Naples.

I am sorry that you have been downcast and that your heart and spirit are not at all happy... Let me be the recipient of your concerns. I beseech you not to torment yourself; I answer for you before the good Lord.

Farewell, dear child, I am wholly at your disposal. Your father who blesses you in the Lord together with all your dear family.

I have just arrived from Bourges and I found your kind letter awaiting me, to which I hasten to reply. Renewed thanks for all your kindness and all you wish for on our behalf. I would look upon this moment's entry of Father Riffard to the Sacred Heart as a blessing, or a Providential intervention. But we do not merit such a favour. The Archbishop asked me to come to Bourges to discuss Chezal-Benoît with him. His Grace would like us to take over the place from next October. But are we in a position to accept? This request is wholly confidential. One does not know anything yet about the appointment of the Vicar General. The Archbishop is greatly anticipating our September 8 feast. It is by way of exception and out of consideration for you, Countess, that I allow good Father Marie to accept the invitation with which you wish him to be favoured. Your judicious regard for Father Marie affords me much pleasure.

Please accept, Countess, my respectful regards.

This undated letter belongs, it would seem, to the year 1869 pre-October. Fr. Marie did not join the MSCs until 1868 and the reference to Chezal-Benoît and the MSCs suggests 1869. Marie became director of Chezal-Benoît as an MSC enterprise in October 1869.

Council Meeting, September 12, 1869

Opening of Novitiate

The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart Novitiate has been erected at Montluçon, opened on the 12th of September this year, 1869. On that day the Church celebrates the feast of the Holy Name of Mary, a feast particularly dear to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart because it brings to mind the day their first chapel was blessed, and on which they were acknowledged as Missionaries of the Sacred Heart by His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges, Cardinal du Pont, in 1855.

Fr. Guyot has been elected Novice Master and Director of the Novitiate. Fr. Ledoux has been assigned to help him in carrying out his tasks. The following entered the Novitiate, Brothers Henri, minor orders, Captier, tonsurate, Cramaille, Batard, Paillancy, Victor, Durin.

Council Meeting, September 19, 1869

Election of Superior General and 4 Counsellors.

1869 Retreat

The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart made their annual retreat for the year 1869 under the direction of Father Ramière of the Society of Jesus. The retreat opened on the 19th of September. Those taking part were Fr. Chevalier, the Superior, Fathers Piperon, Vandel, Morisseau, Bazire, Georgelin, Malabat, Vigérat, Albert, Marie, Moreau and Hamel. Fr. Guillemain (diocesan priest), one of the directors of the work at Tournus (the 'little Work' - 'Petite Oeuvre', see above, passim), also attended all the exercises during the retreat.

On September 26, the eve of the retreat's closure, the election of the Superior General and the members of his general council took place. Father Ramière presided over the election of the Superior General. Those taking part were Fathers Chevalier, Piperon, Vandel, Morisseau, Bazire, Georgelin and Malabat. Fr. Guyot, parish priest of Montluçon, Fr. Durin, parish priest of Nocq, Fr. Minot, assistant director of the 'Little Work', Fr. Pion (diocesan priest) and Fr. Ledoux, although not present, also took part in the election by forwarding a note naming those fathers they wanted to elect.

Fathers Piperon and Vandel were chosen unanimously. Father Guyot received ten votes, Fr. Bazire eleven. Father Chevalier, founder of the Congregation, was unanimously elected Superior General. Frs. Piperon, Vandel, Guyot, Bazire were elected members of the Council. Fr. Chevalier chose Fr. Piperon as his first assistant and Fr. Vandel as his second. Fr. Piperon, as well, was chosen as the Society's General Bursar, and Fr. Vandel as the member who could grant normal permissions hitherto reserved to Fr. Chevalier. The Council made clear through examples the kind of restricted powers granted to Fr. Vandel under his title of minister.

Closure of the retreat: the taking of Perpetual Vows.

Monday morning, 5 o'clock, Fr. Ramière celebrated Holy Mass in the presence of the whole community. It was during the Mass, following on the celebrants' communion, that the priests pronounced their perpetual vows of poverty, chastity and obedience, together with stability in the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart established at Issoudun, and according to the Constitution approved by the Holy Father in his March 8, 1869, decree.

Here is the formula used by the priests when declaring these vows. The following, whose names follow that of Fr. Chevalier, made perpetual vows in the order indicated: Very Reverend Father Chevalier, Frs. Piperon, Vandel, Morisseau, Bazire, Georgelin and Albert. Frs. Guyot and Ledoux did so some time later, on October 20, at the Montluçon Novitiate of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, the ceremony presided over by Fr. Chevalier, Superior General of the Congregation.

Paulin Georgelin, who took part in the election, would write that the first canonical election was presided over by Fr. Ramière, SJ, on Saturday, September 27, 1869. Fr. Chevalier was re-elected Superior General by an unanimity of votes, save his own... Fr. Piperon was also named Assistant and Procurator General, Vandel, spiritual ministry (responsibility), Fr. Bazire secretary of the Administration. When Georgelin died at Issoudun, June 21, 1879, the immediate foregoing was found among his papers by Fr. Pierre Barral, becoming part of his dossier which became the patrimony of the Society in 1928 through the initiative of Pi rre Barral's classmate, the distinguished Dutch MSC Henri Peeters.

My Dear Friend,

I saw the Archbishop of Bourges yesterday. His Grace is very drawn to you and told me that he had replied to your letter; he hopes that everything can be arranged advantageously in Rome. Perhaps you could come with me? I shall leave on the 3rd or 4th of November. I shall be there until the 9th of December, and at the very least you could come and join me there during the last fortnight of November. The Archbishop of Bourges will be arriving there at the same time. It seems certain that His Grace will be going to Lyon; I am very upset about it.

On the occasion of my visit to Rome, do you think that you could revise, dear friend, the texts of the large brochure Our Lady of the Sacred Heart; the litanies of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for submission to Rome? This double undertaking is very urgent. Everybody here is well.

Cheerio, dear father.

Wholly yours in Our Lord,

Article 244

L 18691001a

To Monsignor Nina, Assessor at the Holy Office.

Undated

Monsignor,

Our distinguished and pious Archbishop was greatly saddened on hearing that a French bishop has, without notifying him, and for reasons which I am pleased to make known to you, denounced to the Holy See, devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and its little Annals which is so loyal to the Church.

Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne was all the more surprised because this new title is no more than an expression of the belief of the Church and Tradition in the intercessory power of Mary. It is the meaning of the texts: "Omnipotencia supplex - Ab omnipotente Filis, omnipotens Mater facta est", St. Bernard." (Through the power of her Son, Mary herself has become all powerful.) St. Bernard has it that God did not want to grant anything except through Mary; in the same manner you present yourself at the golden altar of reconciliation not merely petitioning but demanding, a Queen, not a hand-maid. "Voluit (Deus) nihil dare nisi per Marian; idem accedis enim ante illud aureum reconciliationis altare non solemn rogans, sed imperans, Domina, non ancilla. Sts. Fulbert ou Damian." (Who is more worthy than you, blessed Mary, to speak for us to the Heart of your Son Our Lord Jesus Christ?) "Quis tam idoneus quam tu, felix Maria, ut loquatur pro nobis ad Cor Filii tui DNJC." St. Bernard, etc. etc.

In order to be reassured about this, the Sacred Congregation can peruse the book which we have written with the approval of the Ordinary (bishop), entitled: "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart". Here are found all the justifying supporting arguments.

His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges, in order to honour Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and in reply to the attacks directed against her, has written a quite remarkable pastoral which I attach to these documents. His Grace, influenced by the most in-depth knowledge of the issue, puts paid to all the objections in this doctrinal letter, setting out in a most convincing way the legitimacy of the devotion, and of the tender, beautiful, consoling title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, in addition, engages himself with the posture of the Child Jesus in relation to His Mother, the finger pointed as if to say to believers: "If you wish to have the blessings enclosed in my Heart, have recourse to Mary. I have made her Dispensatrix." The Archbishop demonstrates that this posture of the Child is essentially traditional and according to the mind of the Church, since one can find exactly the same in the Rome catacombs (see the pastoral, p.16).

It is also asserted that we give Mary much too powerful a role placing her above Jesus, her Son, when naming her Queen of the Sacred Heart... To be convinced of the contrary, let the pastoral letter of the Archbishop of Bourges be read, and our book entitled: Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. If one takes the trouble to read the texts of the holy (Church) Fathers which are cited in these two works, one will note that we are far from exceeding the holy Doctors and our Mother the Church in the praise and privilege that they attribute to the august Virgin. Is not Mary called in the Sacred Liturgy: Porta coeli, Fons Vitae, Mater Misericordiae, Mater gratiae, Fons et taberna gratiarum, Area coelestium thesaurorum (St. Augustine); Mater sanctae spei, Via vitae, Vitae portus, salus orbis (St. Bonaventure); Virgo regia, Regis Christum (idem); Mediatrix mundi totius, Inventrix gratiarum (St. Bernard) etc. etc.?

Gate of heaven, Fountain of life, Mother of mercy, Mother of grace, Fountain and tabernacle of graces, Source of Heavenly treasures, Mother of Hope, Gateway to life, Door of life, Salvation of the world, Regal virgin mother of Christ the King, Mediation of the whole world, Source of grace.

It is also stated that people deficient in theological knowledge could misunderstand this devotion. It is a fanciful fear; there are two million five hundred thousand of the faithful who belong to the association, and if we are to go by the 200,000 letters we have already received, they understand very well that the power of Mary over her Son's Heart is intercessory power alone. Let there be no misunderstanding on this issue. For the rest, the "Remember" to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which the Holy Father has kindly approved, and the majority of members recite, is proof enough.

One can add that the heretics will be distanced from our holy religion by the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and the publicizing of so many favours granted when praying to Mary under this new title. It is the opposite which is the case. Among the three million petitions which we have made to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, sent to us from all over the world, are to be found a striking number for heretics (sic!), many of whom have become converts. To our knowledge, the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has occasioned more than a hundred conversions. His Grace, the Archbishop of Bourges, last year in our Issoudun chapel, received two Protestants converted through Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. There is not a week goes by, in all probability, when a corresponding number of conversions are not received either in England, America, Germany; Archbishop Manning, a very great devotee of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart can confirm this.

During the five years of the Association's existence, we have already registered 32,652 favours obtained through the intercession of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, such as conversions, cures, and so on. The letters preserved in our archives confirm this. It is true that in our Annals we have not always, when detailing these favours, as we should have, preceded them with the decree of Pope Urban VIII. This was through forgetfulness. But as soon as the Sacred Congregation drew it to our attention, we did so and will always continue to do so.

The litanies of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which are no other than the translated texts of Church Fathers, and approved by the Archbishop of Bourges, have never been recited in public and never will be. They are for the private use of the associates, also the "Remember You" of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and its "Sub Tuum". We seek the right to retain these.

We promise from now on to exercise the greatest care in the production of the Annals, to scrutinize scrupulously the doctrine, not to speak of the blessings obtained, with that prudent reserve looked for by the Church, before which, and always so, we would wish to be submissive sons, presenting ourselves as always committed to the Holy See. The Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has never failed to promote the interests of the Holy Father, and over the last four years, it has already obtained for him more than 14,000 francs. (Roughly 50,385 euros.)

The festivals for the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, which drew more than 30,000 pilgrims, were splendid: fifteen bishops took part in this moving ceremony on the 8th of September last. Bishop Bertaut of Tulle gave an eloquent talk on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Bishop Pie of Poitiers gave a splendid homily at the Mass on devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which we printed in the last number of the Annals. His Lordship, concluding, observed: "It is not presumptuous to say, my Lords and brothers, that the invocation of Mary under the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will be one of the loveliest shoots in that spray of honour offered by our age to the blessed Mother of God."

I am emboldened, then, Monsignor, to seek your blessing on the role of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which we consider to be the work of God answering to the needs of our time.

Please accept, Monsignor, my respectful and appreciative regards.

J. Chevalier, MisSC.

It is a Gallican bishop who has been appointed there, but it is a good decision. Over five years they have contributed 14,500 francs to the St. Peter's collection, and today again they are delighted to place 1,500 francs at your feet, Most Holy Father, collected only over a few weeks. (The first sum is equivalent to about 52,102 euros; the second 5,390 euros.) Last March Your Holiness was pleased to grant 100 days' indulgence for the accompanying prayers only in the diocese of Bourges. But since this prayer, Most Holy Father, is recited by all the members of the confraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart scattered throughout the world, I make bold to ask you, Your Holiness, once more to widen this favour to all the Associates. We shall be lastingly grateful,

Last Sunday it was swollen and getting worse all the time, forced to keep to my bed Tuesday and Wednesday. Yesterday, then, it was impossible for me to reply to you, but today I am much better. O, dear child, how I feel for those who are laid up far from home, alone in a room in the midst of strangers, and not knowing the language. Happily the Good Lord is there. Your concerns, dear little one, worry me. You worry too much. Things are not, believe me, as you think they are. No, it's not yourself who is responsible for all this. Be at ease and give yourself totally to the good Lord. I pray a great deal for you. In all the sanctuaries I visit I say a little prayer for you. Rome, November 27, 1869

My dear Sister in the Lord,

The good Lord has tried me greatly during this trip; together with my swollen hand there is an accompanying terribly sore throat which for the past eight days has confined me to my room and to bed. I am getting better and can take advantage of this improvement to go to Naples. I hope to go there tomorrow and stay for eight days. Our dear sisters are very well and keenly awaiting my arrival. I fear that I shall not be able to meet all their fervent expectations. At any rate I shall do what I can. (Chevalier is here referring to the Sisters of the Third Order in charge of Caterina Volpicelli, this being his second visit when he would stay seven days from November 28 to December 4.)

I saw the Bishop of Moulins who is also well disposed. The Naples Cardinal would like to meet the Archbishop (of Bourges) to discuss the Third Order with him. I shall inform the Archbishop. Mademoiselle Cagiano in Rome, a cardinal's niece, would very much like to be a member of the Third Order. (Countess Cagiano de Azevedo, niece of Cardinal Anton Maria Cagiano de Azevedo, Bishop of Frascati, Cardinal since 1844.)

The Congregation of Bishops is aware of Fr. Marie's problems (Charles Marie Thorey, MSC). His retraction has not been considered sufficiently explicit. I continue to concern myself with this matter. It is too much at the one time. For all that, the good Lord so arranges things that his name may be blessed! Pray earnestly for me. Give my regards to our sisters and in particular to Sister Waldegg. I pray much for you and all your undertakings. I offered all the masses in Rome for that intention.

Please accept, my dear sister in the Lord, my appreciative regards.

Rome, December 6, 1869

Dear Father,

Two words: the storm stirred up in Rome against Our Lady of the Sacred Heart by the Bishop of Marseilles was of tremendous proportions. Everything has been smoothed out to our advantage. We have been asked only to avoid the inscription and to precede the favours (listed) with the statement of Pope Urban VIII... The rest stays as it is. "In agreement with the decision of Pope Urban VIII, we wish to repeat once more that all favours or extraordinary events reported in the Annals do not enjoy other than purely human authorization, except for those which have been approved and confirmed by the holy Catholic and apostolic Roman Church, to whose infallible judgement we always submit our person, our words, our writings, without reserve." It is wise not to speak about these issues. Do not say anything. The Archbishop of Bourges, very unhappy with Bishop Place, is holding himself in reserve to tell him (Place) a number of things face to face. I leave Thursday. More details on my return.

Chevalier waited until Friday evening, anticipating an audience with the Pope on Friday morning, December 10 - see the next letter.

My warmest good wishes to Fr. Deidier, and my thanks, and also to the parish priest of Château Gombert.

Cheerio, dear friend. Wholly yours in the Lord.

J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

I mentioned your situation, your wish to come to us. You are within your rights, but it is suggested that you should not take action until after the Council. Patience and prayers.

Rome, December 8, 1869

I am answering straightaway your kind letter, my dear child. Thanks for your daughterly concern; my health is good... I shall not leave Rome until Friday night; I have been led to hope for an audience with the Holy Father on Friday morning. Pray. I was pleased to meet Mademoiselle Cagiano, but I do not believe she is sufficiently prepared yet, and, furthermore, I have no books left on the Third Order. That will be for some other time. Fr. Ramière is in Rome, staying for the duration of the Council: he could prepare and receive your good lady (Cagiano) and others perhaps... He is at the Gesu (the community house of that name in central Rome). Tell Sister Cagiano to go and look for him there. I give Father Ramière all the necessary faculties for her reception in the Third Order. Tell her so. As for yourself, my dear child, kind Father Matera could quite readily accept you for profession, also Madame de Fusco and those you will have considered well suited. I am sorry that this decision was not taken while I was at Naples. I would be so pleased to receive you.

I am not in the least surprised, dear child, that Satan continues to worry you, but remember what I told you. That should be your way of acting. I take responsibility for your state of soul. Before God I take on the responsibility for that. Do not any longer trouble yourself. I beseech you to remain relaxed. Yes, very relaxed... Satan sows trouble. But you will not listen to him.

Warm greetings to Madame de Fusco, that is to say my special and most dear child. Tell her so. Do not forget mentioning me to the Amati ladies, to our dear Sister Jeanne and your kind companions. I brought Mr. Caprioli to Madame de Courbelay, Fr. Ramière and the Archbishop of Bourges. Yesterday I met the Naples Cardinal and he was very pleasant.

Farewell, dear kind daughter, and you also are my particular and most beloved daughter. I bless you and all the sisters.

Your father, J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

This particular chapel is particularly venerated in the country. Many extraordinary graces have been received in this chapel. The pious lady Countess of Elva was present at the crowing celebration. She is related to the Archbishop of Bourges. I commend this letter to Father Jouët. A thousand good wishes from everybody to the dearly loved and greatly regarded Father Jouët. A Happy Christmas and New Year, 1870.

The immediate above is a letter to Jouët from Fr. Louis Bazire, to which Chevalier added:

Good day, my dear Father. How I regret not meeting you in Marseilles! Eventually the good Lord will arrange it. All our affairs are in good order; let us thank Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Patience and prayer.

Wholly yours in the Lord.

My Dear Father,

My hope, my plan, was to take in Tournus, but Mont-Cenis was impassable because of the snow. I had to take another route. I arrived back terribly exhausted. I have scarcely begun to put things in order. As for our own affairs, my trip to Rome was a very helpful occasion. Let us be grateful to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I shall go and see you in Tournus as soon as I can.

I agree that the setting of a retreat is the most suitable for the proclamation of vows; otherwise I commend our dear and beloved brothers. Extend my regards to all of them together with my good wishes for the New Year.

Cheerio, dear kind Father; I bless you in the Lord.

Good day, dear Father,

How are you? Quickly with your news; we are getting worried. Father Gazan of Marseilles who wished to come to us is hesitating; he says that other religious would like to attract him to Fréjus; he asks for our Constitutions so that he can study them. I replied that it is not permissible for us to hand them over. I told him to go and see you and that in conversation you would explain the content (of the Constitutions) since you have them with you. But do not give them to him.

Dear Father,

Before accepting novices at Montluçon, we want to be fully informed from their side. Be so good, then, as to inform the Marseilles postulant to provide himself with all the necessary certificates:

1. from his parish priest; 2. from the Dominicans with whom he spent some time. One must know exactly the reason(s) for his departure, how long he was with them, etc.

We shall follow your advice. We are making it known that the book on the feasts will not be coming out; we can include some pages from it in the Annals. We shall try to obtain a plenary indulgence for the anniversary of the crowning (of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart - see above ad hoc). And then we shall mention this in the Annals; this will counteract the harmful impact of the observation made at the Marseilles liturgical week. The ill-wishing observations have fallen upon us; it is no longer an issue of no great consequence. The Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is getting by very well. I believe that it's better at least to try it again. I have asked Mr. Pigelet to send you a copy immediately.

Everybody here is well. Fr. Bazire has returned after being away a long time; he has come back to the Order, and is both very zealous and very edifying. May it go on like this! My regards to the parish priest of Chateau-Gombert and to Fr. Deidier, also Fr. Pin, etc.

Cheerio, dear friend; awaiting your permanent installation at the Sacred Heart, Issoudun. I clasp you wholeheartedly.

Wholly yours in Corde Jesu.

*Undated letter,

Dear Father,

Mr. Blanchard, the sculptor of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, claims that he has the right of ownership over it and that I never reserved it to myself. I draw upon your support. You know that, in your presence, I made that reservation. And I did the same, also in your presence, with regard to Mr. Daniel. You must remember it. Be kind enough to send straightaway this double attestation to Fr. Boiteux, director of the St. Sulpice Major Seminary, Place Saint-Sulpice, Paris. Send the double attestation to me at Issoudun. This is a serious issue. Mr. Daniel and Mr. Blanchard want to play games with us. Mr. Raffl has promised me 30,000 francs (99,380 or so euros) if I can make over to him for ten years only the right to sell the statues of the new copy (model). It is a worthwhile arrangement.

Goodbye dear friend; send on immediately your double document to Mr. Boiteux and to me.

J. Chevalier

Jouët had kept a copy of the document dated February 24, 1870, in his own signature.

Certifications:

I, the undersigned, Victor Jouët, priest, teacher at the Catholic college of St. Louis, near Marseilles (Bouches du Rhône), state that in two different circumstances, in the presence of Mr. Blanchard etc.... the second in the presence of Mr. Daniel, Very Reverend Father Chevalier, Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, reserved to himself proprietary rights to make the new model statues of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I can add these arguments in support:

1. the well stated intention of Fr. Chevalier, which he shared with me in this matter, while I accompanied him to the studios of Mr. Blanchard; 2. the proprietary role of Fr. Chevalier on the completion of the model, when he ordered Mr. Chertier to create an exact copy, leaving aside the discussions, in bronze, and to which Mr. Blanchard and Mr. Daniel, both present, made no objection; 3. the conversation which on this occasion took place, and where there was mention of the giving up by Father Chevalier of his right to the first copy to Mr. Raffl, but there was no such concession in the latter case because it would have been made with conditions (attached); 4. if the image which Mr. Blanchard has used for the original idea of the statue was really, as I believe, a ticket of admission to the Association, Mr. Blanchard could then see in all the lettering: "Property of Fr. Chevalier"; whatever the undeniable merit of Mr. Blanchard's work, it is not because of the reproduction that it will be sought after, but because of the idea expressed, and of which the Association, through Fr. Chevalier, is the main (principal) author.

Contract between Fr. Chevalier and Mr. Daniel and Company.

The undersigned, Reverend Father Chevalier, Missionary of the Sacred Heart and Superior at Issoudun, on one side, and Mr. Daniel and Company, editor, residing in Paris, 76 Rue Bonaparte, on the other side, are agreed on and formulate that which follows:

Article 1

Reverend Father Chevalier is the owner of a statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which he had made by Mr. Blanchard; for the time-being he grants to Mr. Daniel and Company the exclusive right to publish, make, sell or promote copies of this statue in all sizes in whatever material. All these manufactured copies will carry this notification: Property of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, save for those copies which have appeared up to now.

Article 2

This agreement is binding for ten years, dating from the first of April next (1870). It will be negotiable without compensation for either party, according to the wishes of Mr. Daniel and Company, at the end of two years, with the proviso, nonetheless, to inform Father Chevalier, or his successor, three months in advance.

Article 3

In the case of renegotiation Fr. Chevalier must buy back from Mr. Daniel and Company the plaster casts made by them, the value of which will be decided by experts.

Article 4

Daniel and Company undertake to pay a lump sum to Fr. Chevalier, irrespective of the number of copies sold, two thousand francs for each of the first two years and three thousand for each of the eight following years. The first payment shall be made on the first of April, 1871, the second in 1872 and then each year until the final payment in 1880. In the event where the agreement is renegotiated by Mr. Daniel and Company at the end of the second year, the 40,000 owed for those two years will be paid on the first of April 1872. In addition, Daniel and Company must provide Fr. Chevalier from the first of April 1871 with two decorated copies of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statue, one metre in size and in stone.

Article 5

Father Chevalier agrees to have Our Lady of the Sacred Heart medals made by Mr. Daniel and Company with the Sacred Heart crown, of which he is the owner, and this in accordance with the conditions laid down in the February 14 letter, 1870. Mr. Daniel, however, is not authorized to make these medals commercially available or sell to the public without the approval of Fr. Chevalier.

Article 6

Reverend Father Chevalier approves only of Mr. Daniel and Company as authorized agent and editor of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart medals and statues. That approval will appear in each issue of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Annals over the duration of the present agreement and beginning from the first of April next.

Article 7

In the event of claims, in the event unfounded, by Mr. Raffl placing obstacles in the way of the present agreement, no compensation or interest can, under these headings, be claimed by Daniel and Company from Father Chevalier.

Article 8

All authorization granted by Father Chevalier to Daniel and Company is undertaken with awareness on their part of whatever risks are involved.

Article 9

Fr. Chevalier commits himself to confirm the present undertaking through those religious who would succeed him if he disengaged from the leadership before the expiry date agreed upon (with Daniel and Co.).

Council Meeting, March 22, 1870

Admission of Novices

This Council meeting was attended by Very Rev. Father Chevalier, Superior General, Frs. Piperon, Vandel, Guyot and Albert. The latter was named in place of Fr. Bazire, secretary, elected September 26, 1869, but dismissed from the Council on February 9, 1870, following a prolonged absence.

Mr. Joseph Gerzan from Opio, Maritime Alps, put forward by Fr. Jouët, was conditionally accepted. Mr. Lhuillier, an alumnus of the Tours Major Seminary, put forward by Monsignor Bazilite, was accepted with the promise of meeting the fee. Mr. M.M. Brouard from Vie-sur-Seille, Metz diocese, and Calmat des Vosges, diocese of Saint-Dié, were not accepted.

Pupils of the Petite Oeuvre - 'Little Work'.

The 'Little Work' is responsible for these students until they are ready to undertake philosophical studies when they finally make a choice on their vocation. If they decide to join the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, the 'Little Work' undertakes all the expenses up to their ordination to the priesthood. The financial account of the 'Little Work' is different from that of the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

Budget.

The budget should be presented every six months by the Society's three houses.

Remuneration in the case of uncertain candidates.

The Council reserves the right to demand remuneration from any uncertain postulant. This remuneration cannot be more than 400 francs.

The Council and Postulants.

No postulant will be accepted as a novice without the agreement of the Council, paragraph 7, article 12 of the Constitutions.

Trials are not wanting to you, but happily the Lord is on your side. (Chevalier, as always when writing to Jouët, is aware of, and sympathetic to, his difficulties with the Bishop of Marseilles – see above, passim.) You did well to hold firmly to your rights. The reaction you provoked does not in the least surprise me. As for yourself stay calm and be prudent. The issue of the statue has been settled. (See above, the Daniel agreement, February 26, 1870.) You have in no way on this issue compromised on anything. We keep the proprietorial rights. We cede them to Mr. Daniel for five years at 2,000 francs each year (roughly 6,625 euros). He alone has the rights of reproduction. We must promote him alone in the Annals. Mr. Raffl keeps the old model.

The Annals are now being printed at Issoudun and no longer in Bourges, being sent out by Mr. Gaignault. A good riddance for us (forsaking the Bourges printing). I made an agreement with him lasting two years which is very advantageous for us, and I shall discuss it with you. Everybody here is well. Very Dear Child,

What do you make of your Issoudun Father? Do you think that he has forgotten you... that he doesn't think of you any longer? Oh, no, you are in my prayers every day, your image stays in my mind, you are not forgotten, and, if the good Lord meets my wishes, today you should be at peace and joyous in spirit. I am greatly delighted, dear child, with your new acquisition; when I go to Naples I shall be delighted to visit you in your nice convent... Sister de Montaignac has bought a house in Issoudun near the Sacred Heart to accommodate those ladies coming on pilgrimage to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and who might like to make a retreat. This house will be looked after by our Sisters of the Sacred Heart Third Order. It will be habitable by May. When are you coming to see us? You should do so this year. I was very happy to gather that our dear Sister de Fusco will be staying with you. I gladly offer myself as your chaplain if you want me.

I have been to Montluçon, and spoke at length of the need of a rule for Naples, and, consequently, I hope you will shortly have it and be pleased with it. My regards to dear Father Matera, Mr. Caprioli, the Amati ladies, to our dear Sister Jeanne and to Mademoiselle Victorine, etc. Let me know how you feel, dear child, both body and soul. You will recall that I forbade you all privation, all extraordinary penance; it is imperative that you do everything to safeguard your health. Do not in any way worry in conscience; remember what I said to you, and do not forget that I answer for you and take your troubles upon me. Cheerio, good, kind, daughter. I bless you and all your good companions.

neglecting to answer you. But I have prayed a lot for you and your dear children to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph.

I notice regretfully, dear child, that you are continually tormenting yourself. Why this preoccupation? Our self-loathing, our temptations are no more than trials. Not so, you do not offend the good Lord in all of this, believe me. Your soul is always wholesome and very acceptable to Our Lord. Let the Devil, then, let himself loose against you. You know that I take responsibility for you and associate myself with all your problems. Trust me and put your mind at rest. Write and tell me how you are both in body and spirit. Look after your health. I hope that you can come to Issoudun this year and bring along two of your boys to be enrolled in our college.

I wrote about some things of interest to our beloved Sister Catherine (Caterina Volpicelli, see previous letter). She will pass them on to you. My regards to your aunt, of whom I have very happy memories. All good wishes to my dear little Jeanne whom I do not forget before the good Lord. I hope she prays well for me. To Pope Pius the Ninth petitioning the definition of Infallibility.

Ametur ubique terrarum cor Jesu Sacratissimum!

France,
Issoudun,
Archdiocese of Bourges.

Petition from the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart to the Most Holy Father.

Dear Holy Father,

The Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, founded at Issoudun, Bourges diocese, however so recent and so lowly in the Church, prostrates itself with joy at the feet of your Holiness to express its love and filial devotedness.

All its members, dear Holy Father, are honoured to believe and teach as true doctrine that which the Holy Roman Church believes and teaches, all acknowledging in your Holiness the infallible Doctor, Peter's successor, who has received from Christ the power to tend the lambs and the sheep, and who must confirm his brothers in the faith. It is for this reason, most Holy Father, confident in the grace promised through sincere submission and likewise, the protection of the Blessed Virgin Mary, dispensatrix of the treasures of the Heart of Jesus, her divine Son, they (all members) promise wholehearted obedience and total fidelity to the decrees and ordinances of your Holiness and those of your successors in the chair of Peter, against which the gates of Hell cannot prevail, since they are convinced that where Peter is there the Church is also. In all this, one is only putting into practise that which is expressly demanded of us in those directives which your Holiness deigned to confirm in a praiseworthy decree in the course of the past year. According to this holy regulation, one is committed to avoid always anything in word, writing, publicly, privately, which is detrimental to that perfect obedience due to the supreme head of the Church and its infallible decrees.

Consequently, we have been deeply saddened on coming to know that the enemies of your august See have written against these most affirmative prerogatives, and we have sought to unite our humble words with those of our distinguished Archbishop, His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, the Vatican Council Fathers, and those millions of Catholics who have protested and continue to protest against those doctrines opposed to those of the divine Founder of the Church and his holy Gospel. Every day we petition the Sacred Heart of Jesus, through the powerful intercession of Her whom we like to invoke under the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, whose glorious statue your Holiness was pleased to crown on the 8th of December last, for the Council to proclaim by a solemn definition that the Roman Pontiff is infallible when he teaches ex cathedra. It is not only in our name, most Holy Father, but also in the name of the three million associates of the Confraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, so devoted to the Holy See for the manner in which it seeks offerings for it, and whose centre is the church at our head house, that we come to place at the feet of your Holiness this testimony of our filial attachment to the doctrines of our Holy Mother, the Church, and its Sovereign Pontiff, petitioning both for them and ourselves a new and paternal blessing.

All of us, most Holy Father, are delighted to offer our homage to your heart so detrimentally affected by the spirit of error and lying raised up against it in these days to halt the victory of truth, this homage betokening our veneration and love for your august person and the See of Peter who is the unshakeable Rock on which the Church of Jesus Christ is founded.

Petition to the Holy Father requesting the definition of the doctrine of Papal Infallibility.

D 18700524A

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Issoudun diocese of Bourges

From the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart to our Holy Father, Pope Pius IX.

Most Holy Father,

The Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, diocese of Bourges, canonically instituted, even if it is the latest and least of all those (Societies) which already are part of the Church, comes to prostrate itself in rapturous joy at the feet of Your Holiness in order to express its filial regards and unlimited commitment. All the Society's members, without exception, Most Holy Father, make it a point of honour to believe and teach only that which the holy Roman Church believes and teaches in what appertains to the presentation and defence of right doctrine; accordingly all acknowledge Your Holiness as the Infallible Teacher, Peter's successor, to whom Jesus Christ confided the responsibility of looking after his lambs and sheep, he laying it down that his brothers be confirmed in their faith.

It is for this reason that, full of confidence in the grace promised to those who commit themselves in sincerity of heart and under the protection of the Immaculate Virgin Mary, whose role it is to dispense the treasury of Jesus' divine Heart, the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart commit themselves, most Holy Father, to observe in total obedience and unshakeable tenacity all the decrees and commands of Your Holiness, as also those of your successors in Peter's See, against which the gates of hell will not ever prevail, since they hold for certain this declaration: Where Peter is, there is the Church. In this the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus are doing no more than putting into practice what is formally laid down for them in their Regulations which Your Holiness was kind enough to favour last year with a decree of approval. According to these Regulations "they must give all their attention to avoidance in any way, either in words or in writings, publicly or privately, of what would take from that perfect obedience which is owed to the supreme Heart of the Church and its infallible decrees".

So it is that we share the tremendous sorrow of Your Holiness when becoming aware of the many regrettable writings of the enemies of your See, itself so worthy of respect, and which are directed against its unassailable prerogatives. We, accordingly, have made it our concern to add our much less feeble support to that of our very distinguished and venerable Archbishop of Bourges, as well as that of the distinguished Council Fathers, together with those millions of Catholics who have indignantly protested against the insensitive blows directed against the teaching of the Church's divine Founder and His holy Gospel. Every day we pray to the all powerful suppliant Mary, under the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart whose statue Your Holiness was pleased to have crowned on the 8th of September last. We also appeal to and invoke the divine Heart of Jesus to make it possible for the most holy Vatican Council to define in solemn decree that the Roman Pontiff is infallible when he teaches ex cathedra.

It is not only in our own name most Holy Father, that we direct to you this solemn profession, of our faith and veneration, but equally so in the name of the three million associates of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Confraternity whose centre is in the church at our Issoudun mother house. As the Annals of the Association offer in evidence, they take delight in accepting prescriptions which meet the needs of your Holy See, pleased that this indication of their devotedness for you, and which they lay at Your Holiness's feet, may, as we very much hope, provide some consolation for your sorely tried heart.

We most humbly request Your Holiness to grant all the Associations of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and ourselves, a fresh and paternal blessing.

From your most attached and devoted sons, most Holy Father.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Issoudun, May 24, 1870, feast of Our Lady, Help of Christians. May this good Mother be pleased to watch over and protect, as it is our wish, Your Holiness beyond the years of Peter.

BREF DU SAINT-PERE EN REponse A CETTE ADRESSE.

Bien aimé fils, salut et bénédiction apostolique.

Nous avons reçu avec la plus grande joie, fils bien aimé, vos devoirs et ceux de vos confrères et nous vous félicitons de vous appliquer à l'exercice du Ministère Evangélique avec une foi si vive et de vous tenir si fermement attaché à cette chaire de Pierre, maîtresse de la vérité, car en suivant ses enseignements vous donnerez au peuple une doctrine certainement exempte de toute erreur ; Nous ne vous félicitons pas moins en voyant l'Association de Notre-Dame du Sacré-Cœur établie dans votre église, prendre de jour en jour de plus grands accroissements, comme le témoignent les souscriptions à nous offertes et attacher par les liens de la plus filiale et de la plus étroite affection à cette mère si aimante de tous les fidèles, un nombre d'âmes qui va toujours en augmentant. Certes, il doit résulter de là pour chacun, un bien immense, mais l'Eglise doit aussi y puiser par le moyen de ces prières multipliées de plus puissants secours. C'est pourquoi nous conjurons Dieu de favoriser l'accroissement de votre pieuse Congrégation et de donner le succès à vos travaux, et pour attirer sur vous cette grâce et comme gage de notre paternelle bienveillance, nous vous accordons avec le plus vif amour la Bénédiction Apostolique, à vous, fils bien-aimé, à votre Société et à toute la Confrérie de Notre-Dame du Sacré-Cœur. Donnée à Rome, près Saint-Pierre, le 13 juin 1870, la vingt-quatrième de notre pontificat.

Brief of the Holy Father in reply to J. Chevalier's message of support.

To our beloved son, Jules Chevalier, Director of the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, and Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Pius IX.

Beloved Son, greetings and the apostolic blessing.

We received with the greatest pleasure, dearly loved son, your respectful wishes and those of your confrères and we congratulate you on your commitment with such a vibrant faith to the Gospel Ministry and on your firm attachment to the chair of Peter, teacher of the truth, since in following its teachings you will present to people teaching certain to be free of all error. We do not compliment you any the less on becoming aware that the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart established in your Church, greatly increases day by day as made evident in the contributions offered to us, and those in that association who have the most filial and close regard for such a loving Mother of all the faithful, their numbers continually growing. Certainly the gain for each is great, but the Church itself profits from these multiple prayers, being indeed powerfully helped. That is why we ask the Lord to favour your worthy Congregation's growth, and favour your work with success, and to draw upon you this grace and as a token of our paternal good-will, we grant you the Apostolic Blessing with warmest regards, to yourself, beloved son, to your Society and the whole Confraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Given at Rome, near St. Peter's, June 13, 1870, the twenty-fourth year of our pontificate.

I received your letter, dear child, with great pleasure; I had been anxious to know how you were getting on, but Sister de Waldegg told me that you had been suffering a great deal and that your health still left a great deal to be desired. I plead with you to take good care of yourself and not to undertake any mortification. I am pleased to gather that you are in your new house. You went in with the blessings of heaven and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Sister de Waldegg is presently at Issoudun in the Third Order house. When will you come? I hope you will receive the rule shortly; it is nearly finished. Your companions will, I hope, be pleased. Follow the advice I gave you, dear child, and don't torment yourself yet further. Leave all your problems with the Heart of Our Lord. You know that I take them all on myself and respond to them. Confidence and courage, then. My regards to the dear sisters, to kind Father Matera and to Mr. Caprioli. I pray earnestly for them. I leave very soon for Belgium and Holland to preach on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I shall stay only 8 days away from here. Give my good wishes to Madame de Fusco, mia figlia carissima et particolare (my most dear, special, daughter); she has experienced a great sadness recently. I pray especially for her and for you. Do not in any way forget me. I do not have your new address.

Cheerio, dear child; I bless you in the Lord.

Dear Father,

We received your kind letter and the contribution (for the Annals) yesterday. Many thanks, many thanks. We can see that your health is continuously a cause of concern. We are very worried about it. We keep well ourselves, but we must keep on praying.

Farewell. I shall write to you from Rome.

Yours in the Lord,

Issoudun, June 22, 1870

Dear Father,

Many thanks for the nice letter you wrote to me. It continuously conveys the tender regard in which you hold your Issoudun brothers, who themselves eagerly read it. These dear little words refresh the spirit and uplift the children of God in their frank and tender expressivity.

Many thanks for your dependability in sending what news you have. We would like to be more reassured in the sense that we shall not be happy until the day arrives when you can make bold to say: I am completely cured. We shall entreat Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to bring about the situation whereby you can give us this happy information.

I have taken care of your suggestions and documentation about the Annals and the sum of 79 francs 50 that Father Piperon owes you. The good man has left for Rome, and it is not without constraining himself that he decided to take a route which would not make it possible to visit our dear brother, Father Jouët. At this time Father Vandel is at Montluçon replacing Father Ledoux who is preaching to good effect the Sacred Heart Novena. He carries out his charge as a true missionary of the Sacred Heart for all his talks have the Sacred Heart as their concern, or are considerations presented with reference to the Sacred Heart.

Oh! You surely are aware of the great favours, which came our way yesterday, that is to say:

1. a brief from the Holy Father in reply to the address sent to him by the Superior (Chevalier) in the name of all Missionaries of the Sacred heart;
2. an indulgence of 100 days attached to the (prayer) Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for all associates in whatever country.

Think how pleased we are! For yourself give us your own impression of the impact this news had on you. It shall be all the more reason for you to be pleased given that you, significantly, contributed to the development and growth of the cult of our dear Mother.

I think that the Superior (Chevalier) will send you a copy of these invaluable documents so that you may be favoured with the first fruits. You are aware that we are only happy when you are sharing in our joy. And our hearts are in St. Louis with yours so long as there is the need to share our feelings with the heart of a friend.

Wholly yours, with all our heart,

L. Bazire, MSC.

Fr. Elzéard speaks very warmly of you. He assures you that he will importune Our Lady of the Sacred Heart until she has restored you to full health. Otherwise he is like all the other Fathers, taken up at this moment with the work assigned by obedience to them in different places. I shall say a novena of masses for the intentions you mention beginning on the 1st of August. We are not able to send you the pictures at 25 centimes each.

L. Bazire, MSC.

Chevalier himself rounds off Bazire's letter.

Good day, dear friend,

Fr. Bazire forgot to say that the brief (Papal - see above) which is wonderful is also addressed to the Associates of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Wholly yours. Until next time.

Dear Father,

I am in accord about the trip which you wish for. But might not a session of good spa waters be better for you than the Swiss air? Consider it. Come back cured and leave Marseilles for good. One wishes that certain interesting acts of thanksgiving were more detailed. They are too concise.

Your latest letter, my dear child, expresses such great sadness, bringing about a quite painful reaction in myself.

A long trip which I have just made to Belgium, Holland, Germany, involving the interests of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, prevented me from replying to you.

I very much wish that your strength becomes restored and I hope that the divine Heart will accede to our wishes.

You must remain in charge of the group; that is your role. Do not forget that God likes to make use of feeble instruments and in this way he manifests his power. From whom comes this storm raised against the Sacred Heart Third Order? You need to take this into consideration and I forewarned you about it. The cross characterizes all the works of the Sacred Heart and it is not in vain that the divine Saviour has demonstrated His Heart with a crown of thorns, a large issue of blood and a cross.

But to console and support us this Heart presents itself bathed in light and surmounted by the flame of love. Do not fear in any way, then, dear daughter; remain steadfast from the promise of the Heart of Jesus and the cloud over you will disappear. I can assure you of this. What does the opposition want?... The Sacred Heart Third Order, united to our little Society, enjoys the approval granted to it by the Holy See; moreover, it is canonically established by our most worthy Archbishop of Bourges, as well as being approved by a great number of bishops and particularly so by the Cardinal Archbishop of Naples. Accordingly all that outspoken opposition is without any foundation.

Dear Father,

Many thanks for your kind letter. How delighted we are to have news of you! Hurry and get well. We are praying so much for this. I am sending you on the copy of the Annals in which our note to the Gazette du Midi can be read. You should have received your copies. I forwarded to Father Piperon your letters to the Pope requesting him to pass them on to the Archbishop of Bourges and let us hope the time is ripe. Father Piperon is staying at St. Bridget's, Piazza Farnese, Rome, and the Archbishop of Bourges at number 8, Via Condotti. Wait with regard to Château-Gombert for the time-being, and then you can speak out... Res clamat Domino. Father Vandel suggests that you should go to Neuvecelle, near Evian on the shores of Lake Geneva to the kind and excellent Cachat family (Cachin in original letter) who are so devoted to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Sister Marchand from Issoudun is there for the past two days, and expects to stay a month. You will be in a family atmosphere and chaplain to the house which has a lovely oratory dedicated to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. The mountain air is very good there, and these ladies will look after you like a little chicken. From there you can go wherever you wish in Switzerland. If you go to Fribourg, which would also be a possibility for you, you could call and see on behalf of Fr. Vandel, Fr. Moelhing, the Rector of the Major Seminary. Send me on as soon as possible before you leave for Switzerland your work for the Annals.

All our dear confrères love you, greet you and await your arrival. Try to bring us also Fr. Pin and Fr. Deidier, etc.

The above letter was written during the 1870 Franco-Prussian War. It letter appeared in the paper Echo des Marches, August 20, 1870. The same paper, a fortnight later, September 3, 1870, noted that Fr. Chevalier was providing a dozen beds for the wounded, and four days later, September 7, confirmed that the "Sacred Heart" had provided ten furnished beds. By October 1, Saturday, the paper let it be known that the Sacred Heart had made available a part of the house for a military hospital. The paper would note on the 7th of January, 1871, that the town council had provisionally decided, at a meeting, December 8, 1870, to take over the churches... The "Sacred Heart" would precede St. Cyr. In the June bombardment, 1940, the Sacred Heart church was again taken over, the Red Cross occupying the 3rd floor of what is now the pilgrims' hostel, and surgery was carried out in a first floor room. The bombardment led to a hundred deaths. The military were encamped in the school courtyard. Military aid was available for the priests and any laid-up pupils.

What a sad coronation anniversary, dear child. Our poor France is in total desolation. Everything is ravaged by this barbaric war, the Republic creating terror in all our hearts: that's the situation we are in. At this very moment, the Prussians are at the gates of Paris. What is going to become of our country? We are in mortal danger. We ourselves are devastated to see our dear Issoudun invaded by the enemy. For the time being our resources have dried up; we no longer get anything at the Sacred Heart. We have already sent away half the novices and soon the other half. (The Montluçon Novitiate had been provisionally closed.) We have sent back to their families those pupils at the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) who come from nearby. There are twenty more left who come from a distance. We do not know what to do about nourishing them and ourselves. Perhaps Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will take pity on us. Just now Issoudun is quiet; no matter what happens, I shall stay here. Pray.

I share all your problems, dear child: the good Lord will watch over you. The divine Heart of Our Lord will enfold you in his powerful protectiveness. The Naples work is called to a splendid outcome. My regards to dear Father Matera and Mr. Caprioli. Kindly remember me to Madame Amati (aged forty-four and whose eldest of four daughters, Julie, was a fervent devotee of the Sacred Heart and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart) and the good sisters. I shall pray earnestly for Miss Julie. I hope that her marriage will be blessed in heaven. I shall drop a line to our dear sister, Madame de Fusco. Farewell, dear child; I commend myself to your good prayers and those of your pious associates. My regards to all our sisters.

I bless you in the Lord.

Your letter, dear child, gave me much pleasure, but I gather from it something which greatly worries me, and it is that you are unwell. First of all we shall begin a novena for you and all the intentions you have in mind. I hope that you will be already better by the time this letter reaches you. I also await a further letter from you which will reassure me. I shall be very ill at ease until I receive it. My Sister Superior has carried out all your requests, so do not worry. Father Bazire will begin tomorrow the novena of masses requested by your mother. Do not worry too much. Your exile will not be long lasting, at least so I hope. Issoudun, because of friction and the organizing of the National Guard, is motivated by a very hostile attitude to priests, shouting loudly: down with priests, the Sacred Heart, Chevalier, Maugenest, etc. But the good Lord will watch over us and that which he watches is well looked after. May Our Lady of the Sacred Heart be the living hope of all who are without hope. My regards to Madame du Quesne and to your pious entourage.

Issoudun, September 25, 1870

I received just now your letter, dear child, which brought me great pleasure. I also got your dispatch. We subsequently prayed for all your intentions. I hope your requests will be granted.

Our situation does not improve. This war, more and more disastrous, continues all the time. The Prussians are about 100 kilometres from Issoudun. One supposes they will come here if only in search of the living. All work is suspended in France; the drought is increasing and hardship is already being experienced. What is going to become of us? We await fearsome punishment from God because France has made itself quite blameworthy. Mischievous types have twice come during the night, creating commotion at our door, wanting to loot, but the patrol got rid of them.

We are beginning to disperse, but for myself I shall not leave the house; I shall stay here, even if I have to die. I am very thankful to you for your offer, but I couldn't accept it. With regard to the money which you are sending on, I would fear that the communications are not reliable since Italy itself is very much in turmoil also. It would be better to wait, therefore; you can deal with this later when the war is over and France is calmer. And our dear Holy Father, what's going to happen to him? We are unaware because we do not get news any longer. It appears that Italian troops have invaded Rome. But where is Pius IX?

Five days before Chevalier wrote his concerned letter, Victor Emmanuel's troops took over Rome, September 20, 1870. Pius IX left the Quirinal Palace for the greater privacy and peace of the Vatican.

Do not forget us in your prayers. I pray all the time for you and your dear companions. Cheerio, dear child. We are at the foot of the Cross; let us stay there, and we shall find Jesus and Mary, our Mother. A thousand best wishes from me to my most dear daughter de Fusco.

I bless you in the Lord.

MAY THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS BE EVERYWHERE LOVED!

Issoudun, October 2, 1870

From all over our dear France, so sorrowfully shaken, millions of voices are raised petitioning a solemn public expression of Christian piety which would favour our unhappy country with the treasures of divine mercy. Some suggest a nationwide resolve to build a new temple to the Queen of Heaven at a location where a decisive victory led to a glorious, lasting peace. Others, fervent followers of Blessed Margaret Mary Alacoque, worthy imitators of Belzunce, would favour a general consecration of France to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, the supreme resource disposed of by divine Providence in these latter times to foster courage in the faint-hearted and love where it has been dying out. Such praiseworthy considerations give rise to an accompanying sense of support: according to the moving wish of Louis XIII, consecrating in 1638 his kingdom to the Mother of God, Mary is involved in all our Fatherland's religious activities. For the rest, in France's act of consecration to the Sacred Heart of Jesus such as has been generally accepted since 1820, we find this august Virgin called Herself to be our sublime intercessor with the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

"O Holy Virgin", it is there written, "the hearts of all France's children are now in your hands!... Offer them to the Heart of Jesus! Indeed! If presented by you, he will accept them! He will pardon them, sanctify them, save them... And he will save the whole of France!... He will establish peace, promote piety and morality, make it revitalize its holy religion."

Chevalier goes on to observe that this text is commonly used in several dioceses, being approved in the Bourges Archdiocese by Jean-Marie Cliquet de Fontenay, Archbishop, 1820-1824.

It is, therefore, through the tender mediation of His Divine Mother that we must go to the Heart of the Good Master, and it is to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart that the pleas of a whole people in distress should be directed, and it is to the feet of that welcoming treasury of the Heart we can bring ourselves with assured confidence in a final effort to have the mercy of God bestowed on us.

Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is now known, invoked and loved throughout the world. Pius the Ninth, our immortal Pontiff, has agreed that she should be solemnly crowned under this new glorious title. Ninety-five bishops, to our personal knowledge, have expressly proclaimed her in the five quarters of the world as the champion of difficult, desperate, problems.

In 1866 six bishops, led by the distinguished Archbishop of Baltimore, set up in Indiana devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in the USA. In 1869, His Grace, Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, of Bourges, accompanied by fourteen archbishops, bishops, prelates, solemnly crowned in the name of the Sovereign Pontiff the statue of Our Lady of the of the Sacred Heart at our blessed Issoudun sanctuary, twenty-five thousand pilgrims consecrating themselves and their families to this powerful and heavenly Queen. Bishop Pagliari of Agnani (in the Pontifical States), Archbishop Ricciardi of Reggio (Italy) mandated their dioceses, the one on February 4, 1869, the other in 1870, to recommend the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart devotion to their flocks. The bishops of distant lands have with great success consecrated their most demanding missions, and we are privileged witnesses to more than forty-three thousand acts of thanksgiving tendered to this caring Mother from all over the world, and so for our part we cannot do other than make it our most ardent wish to consecrate our beloved France, so devastated and still so harshly menaced by the enemy, to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. So that this pious aspiration, encouraged and approved by His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges, can be realized, a public novena of prayer will begin on Sunday, October 9, the Feast of the Maternity of the Blessed Virgin Mary, in the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart sanctuary, Issoudun. The devotion will end each night with a solemn act of consecration to Mary, the hope of desperate and difficult cases, in the name of the whole of France, particularly its invaded Provinces, and in the name of their Lordships, the bishops who, through their supporting words, have made known their wish to be specifically mentioned, as well as their dioceses. Pius the Ninth, Father to us all, presently so unworthily besieged, will be the first mentioned in this consecration, together with the Papal States. We cannot do better than sing, following on, that touching hymn of the Immaculate Conception (Maria conceptur) approved by the Sacred Congregation of Rites, a hymn in which one appeals to Mary to lead us, to make victorious those dedicated to her, and open for us as our refuge the Heart of Jesus. Marie duc agminis, da tuis victoriam et Jesu Cor aperi (Verse 8)...

Please accept, Your Lordship, this expression of my deep regards, and I have the honour to be, Your Grace, your very humble and obedient servant.

To His Grace de La Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, 15 October, 1870

Your Grace,

Reverend Father Chevalier, our worthy Superior, detained by the many confessions arising from the preparatory Novena for our great celebration next Monday, October 17, has asked me to forward to Your Grace immediately these recent replies on the occasion of France's consecration to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart at Issoudun. These replies are those of His Grace the Cardinal of Besançon, the Archbishops of Cambrai and Avignon, the Bishops of Amiens, Moulins, Mans, Blois, Tarentaise, Nîmes, Rodez, Arras and Tarbes. There are in sum, then, twenty-three dioceses which have come together and are associated with Bourges (archdiocese) at the feet of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

This prayerful unity, which is so moving, imposes on us the pleasant task of petitioning Your Grace, if the circumstances are favourable and considered opportune, to come and preside at this prestigious ceremony. The Issoudun public, which has attended in great numbers and in a very impressive way at the prayerful nightly gatherings, would be delighted to see their fervour rewarded by the presence of our pastoral leader.

For ourselves, if you may permit us to say so, Your Grace, we repeat once more what we had to say a few days ago, thanking you once more for your very hospitable welcome, and in expressing our filial regards once again we are favoured, Your Excellency, in being your most humble and obedient servants.

V. Jouët, Mis.SC.

The little community offers its respects to Your Grace and appeals to you to come and preside yourself at this moving and impressive ceremony taking place on Monday, October 17, the Feast of Blessed Margaret-Mary Alacoque.

May nothing come in the way of this wish, so justifiable in the circumstances, on the part of the people and your missionaries.

Issoudun, October 10, 1870

I was pleased to get your letter, dear child. I read it attentively and understood all you were saying. I shall carry out your request when the occasion arrives, which I hope will be soon.

Give yourself over to God's will; it is he who orders all things... Only that happens which he permits; have confidence. Pray and you will be enlightened. Each day I pray for what you wish. Just now I received your little note. Be assured, I shall take note point by point of your thoughts and wishes. Cheerio, dear child; my regards to the ladies.

Please accept my good wishes.

I bless you in the Lord.

Issoudun, December 2, 1870

Dear Father,

We were very pleased to hear from you. All is well here. I thank you for the 100 francs in favour of the 'Petite Oeuvre' (Little Work). Do not worry. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will look after our beloved Berry. Bourges and Issoudun have nothing to fear. The Prussians have been repulsed at the other side of the Loire. They have sustained a serious set-back before Paris. Our troops are going on the offensive everywhere and I hope that very soon (December 8) we shall be masters of the Prussians. Fiat! Willingly, I authorize you to print whatever you wish. We need your good prayers, those of your loyal companions and the pupils.

Cheerio, dear kind, Father.
Wholly yours in Corde Jesu.
J. Chevalier, MSC.

Fr. Georgelin taught at the Tournus school from 1868 and left there on the occasion of the Garibaldi invasion, going to the hostel of The Faithful Companions of Jesus at Carouge, Geneva, CH. He stayed there until the spring of 1872 when he was recalled as second curate at Issoudun's St. Cyr parish, where Chevalier had been appointed arch-priest.

One fears that the Prussians will soon be arriving in Issoudun if Our Lady of the Sacred Heart does not stop them. I very much hope that she will save us from them! Lanctin is getting on well; I saw him several times while I was ill. I end my letter, Father, commending myself to your worthy prayers.

Wholly yours in the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

Claude Hériault

I say good day to worthy and dear Fr. Vandel; I received your 60 francs (about 200 euros) cheque. The Prussians, after the capture of Orleans, came as far as Vierzon, about 3,000 of them. Issoudun began to fear for itself. But no more than that. Vierzon was evacuated and we are delighted. All goes well at Chezal-Benoît and here. So long, dear Father. Totus tibi.

It is with great assiduity, dear child, that we have begun all your novenas and make your petitions to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I hope that this good Mother will grant your wishes and mine. I detect all your concerns deep in your heart. I place them confidently in the Heart of Jesus... I was pleased to read about your new living arrangements; it would appear that you are very happy there if you are beginning to forget Issoudun. Poor Issoudun! It was in a desperate plight on Immaculate Conception Day when a part of the shattered Loire army arrived following the Orleans defeat; it was feared that the Prussians would enter the town with those fleeing. As well, many of the population (the most courageous) fled towards the Creuse, upper Vierne, etc. Men, or more especially women, of little faith; why did you fear? O, because you doubted: we hope more than ever that we shall be spared.

Farewell, dear child. My regards to Madame du Quesne, Madame Cottereau and Madame d'Affry. Tell the latter that I am about to reply to her last letter.

Wholly yours in the Lord.

Dear Madame,

I was very happy to have news of you both from Madame Verneuil and from your kind letter. I note with pleasure that your health is good and that you cope quite well with the problems of these times. When shall we be able to get away from the misfortunes which have overtaken us? We pray continuously each day for the end of these misfortunes. I hope they will end soon. Bourges is peaceful, and Issoudun enjoys complete calm. All is normal at the Sacred Heart. Two of our confrères are about to leave as chaplains to the Indre Legion, Frs. Albert and Ledoux, one already at Nevers, the other on the way there.

Albert Désiré-Alexis was from Vendée, a former member of the Teaching Third Order founded by Father Lacordaire, OP, ordained priest at Grenoble, December 22, 1866. He left the Teaching Third Order and was introduced to Fr. Chevalier by its Superior, Fr. Lécuyer, OP. He had been Assistant General to Chevalier since March of this year, 1870. Remy Ledoux from Issoudun was at Chezal-Benoît when he became military chaplain.

I hope that this response will draw blessings on our little Society and its undertakings. Pray especially for us all.

With my regards...

What is going on with you, dear child? Over a very long time I have had no news of you or of Madame de Fusco and our other sisters. I am truly anxious. Let me know how you are and how your work is progressing. Our poor France is still very shaken, epidemics decimating it, and famine racking it. What is going to become of us? Up to now Issoudun has been spared by the enemy. We are undisturbed. I hope that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will continue to watch over us. Ah! Pray and pray earnestly for us. Our trials are always challenging. The bombing of Paris (artillery) has begun; it is frightening. It must be that France is justifiably at fault if it is considered guilty of meriting such cruel punishment.

Farewell, dear child; my good wishes to Madame de Fusco and all the sisters.

Issoudun, January 28, 1871

My Lord,

One of our Fathers, Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, is shortly due to go to Spain where he will stay for some time in its milder climate because of a chest complaint from which he almost died. I have asked him, on arrival in Barcelona, which he should shortly reach, to visit your Lordship to offer on our behalf a brochure dealing with the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. Twenty-six French bishops have consecrated our unhappy country to this Immaculate Virgin in our precious Issoudun sanctuary where she is invoked as the patroness of difficult and hopeless cases. There are three hundred different testimonies of prestigious approval from our Holy Father the Pope who has made it his wish that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart should be solemnly crowned in his name, and then, that considerable group of bishops from all parts of the world who, for their part, have given this devotion an extraordinary outreach. We have been pleased to hear, your Lordship, that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is known and venerated in Barcelona, and that there is in the Convent of the Sisters of the Infant Jesus, otherwise St. Maur, a statue blessed and indulged by your Lordship. It is the first altar dedicated to her in your Catholic Spain. It is, therefore, entirely appropriate that we perform a conscientious task in the name of our dear Mother and in our own in addressing your Lordship directly to seek the requisite advice which should be followed when promoting this devotion among the flock confided to your care.

Reverend Father Jouët, Missionary of the Sacred Heart, furnished with a letter from His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges, will go on the day of his arrival in Barcelona to your episcopal palace and present his respects to your Lordship and ask for your fatherly blessing. He will present for your consideration the names of the five hundred statues at chapels already dedicated throughout the world's five continents to our heavenly protectress, together with all the testimonies of the highest approval in addition to those of our Holy Father, the Pope.

Please accept, in advance, my deepest respect, and regards, as I have the honour to be your very humble and respectful servant.

J. Chevalier, MSC.Sup.Général.

Issoudun, January 30, 1871

Madame,

How greatly I wish to thank you for your kind letters and what you have sent for our wounded. (At the Sacred Heart a military infirmary had been set up.) Many thanks. I was sorry to hear that almost all of you have been laid up. It is the turn of Mademoiselle Louis, but I hope it will not be serious. Every day I remember you in my prayers. May Our Lady of the Sacred Heart grant them a healing. Are we shortly going to move away from the misery in which we find ourselves? The armistice offered will perhaps be a way forward... May the Lord make it so... At the next elections it is necessary that all who favour stability agree on giving France a worthy government, offering every guarantee of order and true freedom, since otherwise it would be to escape Charybdis only to fall into Scylla. Let us hope that so many prayers will be granted, and that God will permit himself to be favourable. Please accept...

J. Chevalier, Mis.SC.

"...to escape Charybdis only to fall into Scylla": Chevalier here refers to the Greek myth involving Scylla, originally human but turned into a monster by a love rival, having no less than six heads, each with a triple row of teeth, and as many as twelve feet, inhabiting a cave in the Messina Straits, between Sicily and Italy, opposite the whirlpool of Charybdis. Although Scylla dieted on fish she was very partial to sailors if a ship came near enough. Homer writes of Odysseus' ship passing the cave, Odyssey 12. "Between Scylla and Charybdis", then, refers to a situation or predicament when two courses of action are fraught with peril and equally dangerous.

Relax, dear child. I have, I assure you, received all your letters and I am the only one who has read them. I know your hand writing so well that I cannot mistake it. Nevertheless, if it occurs to you, put 'personal' on the envelope. You only owe acts of thanksgiving to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, dear child, since for myself I might be more likely, when an issue is confided to me, to hinder its outcome, and, accordingly, I do not deserve any thanks. That is the truth. Meanwhile I shall keep praying for you and all your intentions as long as you wish it so.

I am not in the least astonished by Mr. Albert's escape; his medal collection would warrant another. Besides, his mother, who is a saint, prays so much for him... Then so many others commend him to the patron of difficult and hopeless cases. I have taken account of all your masses; your intentions will be kept in mind. You speak of Issoudun, dear child, but when are you going to come here? The circumstances are not favourable to a return in the near future. I fear there will be serious problems... Happily the good Lord is there! The nasty minded people will not have the time to do what they would like... One is deeply humbled when one has to live with these kind of people at a time like this...

My regards to Madames du Quesne and Cottereau. Farewell, dear little one; I bless you in the Lord.

Your two letters, my dear child, of January and February came a little late, it has to be said, but I did get them. I am sorry that your health is not greatly picking up; I pray a lot that it will. Do not be rash, conserve your strength, of which you have need to promote the work of God. I was pleased to gather that your devotional chapel dedicated to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will be blessed on the Feast of St. Joseph. I regret very much that I cannot attend this moving ceremony. I shall be there with you, united in spirit. I do not know if our dear Sister de Montaignac received the 300 francs (about 995 euros) which you mention in your letter. So far she has said nothing yet to me.

The news you have for me about the consolidation of the Sacred Heart Third Order at Naples and the prospering state of your enterprises gives me great pleasure. Courage, dear child, you will be a means of blessings. Trials have not been wanting to you and they are especially identified with the works of the Sacred Heart.

You will have received from here a few days ago the little brochures you were looking for.

We have peace – may the Lord be blessed! The revolution and war which devastated France are over... Better days are foreseen. Ah! How France suffered! Issoudun, protected very specially by the Sacred Heart and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, escaped invasion from the Prussians. All the neighbouring departments, except ours, were occupied. The enemy came within twelve kilometres, that is to say to our town gates, but never came inside, although the capture of Issoudun was part of its strategic planning.

There are two stained glass panels in Our Lady of the Sacred Heart chapel which testify to the acknowledgement from the town of Issoudun and Châteauroux for Mary's protection during the 1870 war.

His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges promised to come in pilgrimage to the sanctuary of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart with the women of Bourges if his diocese was preserved from the Prussians, which is what happened. After Easter His Grace will fulfil his wish.

Be so kind as to forward this little letter (enclosed) to my dear child, Madame de Fusco, and send the other to Corato authorizing the establishment of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association. I wrote to Mr. Tomaso Napoli and sent on all he wanted.

Farewell, my dear child; assuring you more than ever of my warm devotedness.

Your father blesses you in the Lord.

Dear Confrère and Friend,

How delighted I was to get your news! Your memory stays among us as a brother, a friend. Thank God, we are in good health. Issoudun totally escaped invasion. The Prussians came within twelve kilometres, nevertheless, but Our Lady of the Sacred Heart forced them back not only from Issoudun but the whole of Berry. In addition, the Archbishop of Bourges is coming in a thanksgiving pilgrimage after Easter.

Our dear friend in common, V.J. (Victor Jouët) is much better; he is at present in Spain visiting one of his aunts. This is his address: c/o Mr. Cibils, St. Francis Street, 14 - Barcelona (Spain). We are all hoping that this dear friend can stay with us and come back soon to us.

I am forwarding to you two copies of the Rules of the Priests of the Sacred Heart who are affiliated to us; these have been submitted to Rome with our Constitutions. I think that very likely these are the Rules you are looking for. If you could get together in Marseilles a serious grouping of well-disposed priests of the Sacred Heart, you would do a great deal for your dear city and much besides for our work which in a little way is also yours. You would be the director of this new family and our association would be indissoluble. I am also sending you a Latin copy of the abbreviated Rules, or rather Constitutions of the Sisters of the Sacred Heart Third Order. If there are women who wish to develop this further, you will be good enough to write to Sister de Montaignac at Montluçon (Allier), who is the Superior General of this little Society, to inform her and request of her, together with the Rules which she supervises, all helpful information.

I very much hope that you will come and pay us a little visit this year.

Cheerio, dear confrère. You are so highly regarded at the Issoudun Sacred Heart.

With my best wishes,

Do not worry in the least, dear child; nobody will take your place... It goes without saying. You are right to think that you are one of our better girls. You can depend on me. Each day I pray for you and all your intentions I know of and those I do not know.

I like to think that you will shortly be returning to us. Sanitary conditions at Issoudun are quite good. I hope that for Easter you will be able to return from your exile. Take stock and be advised. His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges promised, as you know, to come on pilgrimage to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart if his diocese escaped the invasion (Prussian). His Grace is ready to make this trip after Easter. Almost all the women of Bourges, who made the same promise, are due to accompany him. Many men will also be in the group. The Bourges women are making a gift of a large window at a cost of 1500 francs (4,970 euros or so). Those of Issoudun are doing the same. The parish priest is very well disposed(!). A group of pilgrims is coming from Chateauroux also.

Madame August is at Issoudun just now. She had very good news of Mr. Albert, telling me much that pleased me greatly. Ah! What a saintly soul is Madame August. What a woman of faith, heart, dedication. May the Lord reward her as she so well merits!

Madame August, mother of Albert du Quesne, was married to Baron du Quesne. Albert was born in Martinique, August 29, 1847, and entered the naval college in 1863, becoming a Companion of France from 1870 and serving on the Loire with the French Army that year.

I went to see your chambermaid who has rheumatism of the joints. I came upon her lying down in your room; she is getting much better. I only saw Mademoiselle Zélie from a distance. She always passes by in front of me like a shadow. When by chance I met her in an alleyway and asked, following her return to Issoudun, for news about the fervent Saint Malo colony, she only half-answered me, being, no doubt, afraid to compromise herself.

My regards to Madames du Quesne and Cottereau. Tell Mademoiselle Lucille that I pray earnestly for her and her family, and that I have done what she asked of me. Farewell, dear child.

J.C.

I bless you in the Lord and wish you every happiness. If Madame d'Affry knew that I had written four pages to you, she would be jealous; you for your part keep quiet about it.

Issoudun, March 16, 1871

My Dearest Mother,

We are at last over the war and beginning to breathe. May the Lord be thanked, and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart forever praised as it is to her we owe our preservation. The Prussians came within 12 kilometres of Issoudun; our town was planned beforehand to be occupied by them, and also Bourges which is our metropolis. His Grace the Archbishop had promised to come in pilgrimage to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart if his town (Bourges) and diocese were untouched by the invading enemy and, thanks be to God, we were wholly spared. Accordingly, His Grace plans to fulfil his promise immediately after Easter.

Four or five weeks ago I sent a large parcel to you with the articles in regard to the Association which you had been looking for; could you let me know if you received them. Within the parcel there was another smaller one for the dear Luxembourg sisters requesting that it be forwarded to them. More recently I sent you different little works which were recently published: 1. The zealous devotee of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart; 2. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Better Known; 3. The month of St. Joseph for the friends of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. Did you get them?

What future for our dear Association in Holland? I should like to think that it will always go forward given your dynamic support. You could translate, if you so wish, our little works and promote them in Holland and Germany if you think that they would be appreciated. You have the centre. My regards to your Reverend Mother and all the sisters, and all that you would wish for your dear little pupils.

Cheerio, dear, kind, Mother.

I bless you in the Lord.

I am intent on going to see you during the summer and it will give me great pleasure.

Since Paris continues to be in turmoil we cannot get medals or pictures for the time being. By the end of May I shall, perhaps, have medals to send you... As for the pictures I could send them in the French text (of which I have many), and you could kindly make out a Dutch or German text which you could have printed, and, thereby, be of great service to us. The expenses of what it would cost would be, as is to be expected, met by us. Let me know if you are in agreement with this suggestion and what number of pictures would be needed.

Dear Reverend Mother,

I already know from dear Father Jouët about all you have contributed to the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. (Jouët at this moment was on his second trip to Spain promoting the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.) Now I gather with great joy that you are prepared to do so much more and in consequence I wish to acknowledge straightaway my wholehearted thanks.

Following from what has taken place in your country to the glory of our powerful Mother, I consider that it would be lastingly appropriate to set up a centre of the Association in Spain. Together with yourself we pray then that the divine will makes itself clearly known in this great work. I shall be very pleased if your house were to be chosen for Our Lady of the Sacred Heart; it is deserving of this favour because it is one of the first within which formal devotion was directed to the Queen of the Divine Heart. It seems to me that your Reverend Mother will do no less than encourage your keen desire to help us since she also greatly loves Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

As for the title of zealatrice, it has already been bestowed on you, and the certificate would be already in Tarragona if left to ourselves. Unfortunately the disturbances in Paris have compelled us to postpone this little issue until later. Your kind Mother Clémentine can also be assured of the certificate in question. Your letter renewing the subscription hasn't arrived, but I undertake to send on the issues you are missing as well as the other material of the Association. I note that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart works marvels in favour of her 'apostle' because he is understood even though his language has nothing in common with that of his audience. (Jouët preached, spoke, in French, not yet competent in Spanish.) My very esteemed Mother, I bless you, together with your dear girls and all who are under your care. You can depend on a daily remembrance at Our Lady's feet. Please accept my respectful good wishes in Corde Jesu.

Dear Father,

Two words in a great hurry. We are sending you a large, very large, container, of Association materials, written in Spanish in the accompanying note. You will arrange, I hope, for the payment. If you wish to send us a copy of the transaction in Spanish currency, correctly assessed, we can exchange it again.

Herewith the picture. One can perhaps paste over the 'Remember You' (in French) with a Spanish translation. This would have the advantage of providing the pictures with a Spanish text, which is something we cannot print (here).

You will find in the parcel some medals of the coronation (of Our Lady) which we sell at 20 centimes. These medals can be availed of for your helpers. There are, besides, large medals which we sell at 25 centimes each. You can see what you can do with them; they could be very useful as recompense for a number of pious associates (helpers).

It isn't possible to send you any copper medallions as we have none left. If you would like to have two silver medallions, I could only send you these in two sizes: those of 4 francs, 20 a dozen, and those of 6 francs, 40 a dozen. Father Bazire has worked hard making the container; he likes to think that it will please you. All the Fathers greet you, even he who has just arrived these past day, Father Lavialle, who is almost as likeable as yourself. But when are you going to return? Have you a good article for the June number (of the Annals)? Quickly, quickly, time is getting on. Wholly yours in the Lord,

Ch. Piperon, Mis.du.SC.

You will find in the box (parcel):

12 reproductions of St Joseph
 40 large reproductions of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart
 100 small reproductions of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart
 140 entry tickets at .025 cents each
 2,400 Spanish Novenas at 4 francs the hundred

In your reply let us know if the parcels should be forwarded on the Perpignan or Bayonne (railway) line. Does the railway line continue through Perpignan and what transport services are available? (Important.)

Dear Confrère,

I thank you for your article, it is very much appreciated by me, but, regrettably, it arrived too late for inclusion in the June number (of the Annals) which has already come out. I hope that there will be a place for it in the July number.

The good Jesuit Fathers are sometimes very odd. The pretensions of Father Cros had already been reported to me. I do not know where he got that which he comes out with. It is an outrageous lie. The Paray-le-Monial Religious, on being consulted, have no knowledge of what the Jesuit is trying to say. It is unfortunate that one makes up a story in this way. The source of this beautiful, wonderful name is Issoudun; its cradle is there, not to be found elsewhere.

When are you going to come and see us? We shall be so pleased to have you. Father Jouët is still in Spain where he is doing marvellous work.

Issoudun, June 9, 1871

I am amazed, dear child, that you haven't yet received my last letter which I certainly wrote not very long ago. Thank you for your caring concern; I am very well, but our dear Sister de Montaignac is still laid up, I was at Montluçon last week and saw her. We are emerging from a frightful crisis and I hope that calm and peace are about to be restored. Unfortunate France, how low it has fallen and been decisively punished! For a long time it has been wicked, blasphemed God, Jesus Christ and our holy religion; having become the rendezvous of all the vices, all the errors, God has chastised it. May we now learn from this episode and return to a more wholesome frame of mind! I greatly fear for Italy also. All that which is happening and being allowed to happen in Rome could have disastrous consequences. Let us pray to the Heart of Jesus, source of every blessing. Soon, on June 16, we shall be celebrating the feast; let us hope for special favours on that day. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will fully support our concerns. We celebrated her feast on May 31 with very great solemnity. We felt we owed it to her to express our thanks for the evident care with which she watched over us (during the Franco-Prussian War).

This year has been bad for us. That is so because events forced us to send away our dear novices, etc. But we are about to bring them back, and I hope, with the blessing of the Sacred Heart and the protection of Our Lady, that everything will be much better.

And how are you, dear child? How does it go with your undertakings? Are your sisters increasing in number? Have you some new companions? My regards to all I know. Is Mademoiselle Julie married? Remember me to this kind family, to dear Father Matera and Mr. Caprioli. Be kind enough to pass on this little letter to our dearly loved sister, Madame de Fusco. My regards to your brother and your sister-in-law. Cheerio, dear child. I bless you.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

To the Mother Superior of the Sisters of Jesus and Mary, Tarragona.

Issoudun, June 11, 1871

Dear Reverend Mother (Eulalie),

I am awaiting news of your inspiring day, May 31, so wonderful for Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and so rewarding for her devoted children of Catholic Spain. Here in our privileged sanctuary, the May 31 feast was celebrated with great devotion. Our associates would appear to understand very well their role in representing, at the feet of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, those millions of Associates from all over the world, and to offer the Queen of the Sacred Heart a homage of love and gratitude.

I was thinking of you very much on that beautiful day when a sacred link-up united your house and ours. When you are writing to your Reverend Mother, do not forget to thank her for all the facilities made available to us to work towards the glory of Mary. One of the priests has been made responsible for your mailing; has everything reached you?

My very esteemed Mother, I forgot to mention in my previous letters that, besides the list of names, I would like to receive each month the list of commendations and thanksgivings presented to you during this time. This is a way of staying close to the Association's centre and having the Spanish Associates remembered in prayers. One of the older pupils could be made responsible for this charge, of which I speak, and thereby it would not come in the way of your many responsibilities. Kind regards to our dear Fr. Jouët when you see him.

Please accept, Very Reverend Mother, my expression of deepest gratitude for your devotedness to our work, and share these sentiments with all those who are engaged with you in this consoling undertaking.

Your servant in Corde Jesu and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart,
J. Chevalier, MSC.

Issoudun (Indre), June 27, 1871

Reverend Mother,

I read with interest your letter on the 22nd of this month. It contains a number of different requests. I am very appreciative of this interest you so well demonstrate for our undertakings and your zeal in spreading our dear Association. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will reward you. To work towards making her known and loved makes an efficacious contribution towards the glorifying of the Heart of Jesus and the good of souls. Continue then, Mother, to provide us with your appreciated help, and both you and yours in return will be rewarded with abundant blessings.

Every Sunday at night-time and at the Archconfraternity Mass each Thursday prayer are publicly offered at the feet of the crowned statue in the privileged sanctuary of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for the intentions you have made known to us.

In addition, three times a day, the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart make it their duty to pray for those same intentions.

Please be assured, Mother, of my kind regards in Corde Jesu.

The Director of the Association
J. Chevalier, MSC.

To be Noted. What you have asked cannot be sent for some days.

1. The Prayer Novena will begin the day after your letter arrives, or on the day you requested.
2. With regard to the Masses they will be said as soon as possible.

My Dear Mother,

A thousand thanks for the interesting account you have forwarded to me detailing the graces with which it has pleased Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to enrich the fervent children of Spain. I am pleased, very much so, with all this, and I should like to be at one with you in giving thanks to our heavenly Patron. The representations which have been made to us will be passed on to our associates at a forthcoming meeting. I repeat the desirability of having a résumé of each of the acts of thanksgiving and the list of intentions. And in particular for this service I send you my thanks in advance.

Dear Fr. Jouët has sent us an account of what happened at your lovely feast on the 31st of May. We are lost in admiration before the activity of Our Lady in your country, and this heartening news truly compensates for that which arrives from the capital (Paris) at the same time. (Again, Chevalier has the Commune developments in mind, about which he wrote also to Caterina Volpicelli the previous month, and to Jouët on May 13.) Oh, Reverend Mother, how we need to pray again and again to appease the anger of God who is displeased with us.

J.C.

Would you kindly pass on the enclosed letter to Father Jouët.

I received your letter, dear child, with all your requests. In keeping with your wishes I began the Novena straightaway. Do not worry; confidentiality will be safeguarded. My wish is that you will be able to inform me soon that the favour has been granted and that your Mother enjoys perfect health. Give her and Madame Cottreau my regards. I hope that shortly you will be returning from your long exile. Do not forget me in your prayers; as for yourself, each day, when at the feet of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, I think of you. The Archbishop has written to me to confirm that he will come on pilgrimage the 17th of this month, arriving on the evening of the 16th. Fiat. Issoudun, July 24, 1871

Dear Reverend Father,

I am so sorry that the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart have stopped being sent to you. I am requesting the confrère who is involved with it to send you on at once the numbers you haven't received. I also do not think that it is right that "devotion to Mary under this heading Our Lady of the Sacred Heart) was preached from 1846 at Paray-le-Monial". (Deschamps had written that his Jesuit colleague Fr. Cros had said that devotion to Mary as Our Lady of the Sacred Heart had been preached in Paray-le-Monial since 1846.) Fr. Saint-Angel, when giving the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of Jesus to Mary, gave it to be understood that what he was expressing had nothing more than a pious significance in his thinking, something in harmony with the chapel consecrated to the Heart of Jesus; he delivered it as an invocation but without associating any doctrinal significance to it.

This title meant no more for him than that of Our Lady of Fourvière (Lyon), Our Lady of la Garde Marseilles. He neither gave a discourse or provided any kind of explanation. This is so certain that when I went to Paray-le-Monial for the beatification of Blessed Margaret-Mary (Alacoque, September 17, 1864), the sisters, even the elderly, were in a state of total ignorance about devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. They hadn't even understood the significance of the statue of her sent on to them sometime beforehand. To say then that the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart had been preached at Paray-le-Monial in 1846 is to say something which is not true. So to write it is falsifying history and leading believers into error!

It is not just because an elderly man, whose ideas were waning (according to the sisters themselves), said something which had no foundation that one can proceed from there to maintain that devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was begun and preached at Paray-le-Monial.

Chevalier, as he himself became aware shortly after penning the sentence immediately above, discovered that the thrust of his personalized remark here made no sense because Fr. Saint-Angel was far from being an elderly man in 1846, still less one of scattered ideas, whatever, since he was only forty-one years old, born in 1807.

The venerable Fr. Saint-Angel, uttering the words Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, was in a haze, maybe, in keeping with your phraseology, but it was still very much enveloped in thick (obscure) clouds. I believe, most Reverend Father, that the best thing to do would be to suppress the observation altogether.

Deschamps had written that "...the great light which shines at Issoudun...loses nothing of its splendour or quality for having had elsewhere, especially at Paray, a dawning already uplifting".

Many thanks for forwarding Mademoiselle Villemarqué's address. We shall inform her about the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association. How appreciative I am, Father, for the great interest you bring to our work. Your Bourges Fathers (colleagues) came here on pilgrimage a few weeks ago, on the 31st (July). I am going to spend St. Ignatius' Feast Day with them (at Bourges). Give my kind regards to dear Father Ramière and tell him that Fr. Vandel continues to suffer from his throat.

Vandel at this moment was constantly travelling in connection with the "Country Work", see above, as well as his ministry on behalf of the Issoudun community. At the beginning of August he preached a first communion retreat after a meeting at Amiens with diocesan clergy of the Sacred Heart. In Deschamps' 16 July letter, 1871, Chevalier's old confidante and adviser wondered if Vandel might not preach retreats to clergy if his throat was able to take the strain and he would be delighted to recommend him to bishops.

Please accept, Father, my sincere thanks with all good wishes in Corde Jesu.

Introductory Letter for the Manual of Priests Associated with the MSC Society.

Possible date July 1871

Despite the problems which recent events (the Franco-Prussian War) have given rise to in our relations with you, we haven't lost sight of our dear Association which continues to be, in our eyes, a way to holiness for diocesan priests and, concomitantly, for the faithful they look after. We have made use of this break in contact to clarify things with a number from among you who wished to share their views with us; we have acknowledged the justice of their case and experience has shown us that a Rule relating to associated clergy needs certain modifications. Nevertheless, having seriously given thought to this before the Lord, we did not think it necessary to begin from anew this Rule since, so it seems to us, it provides within itself, rightly understood, the answer to virtually all objections and problems, the remedy for all the issues which have been brought to our attention.

So it is that in the introduction to this Rule, we said that the members of this Association, all of whom have the same aim and act in unison with the same spirit, to commit themselves under the same standard, that of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, can and should engage with different aims. Everybody can, then, in this spiritual arsenal, choose what is appropriate in his circumstances, what suits his tastes and inclinations. Accordingly, having argued in the first paragraph for the excellence and advantages of this Association, we stated from the beginning of the following paragraph that nothing obliges us under pain of sin, even venial, and that it is proposal alone rather than imposition of the means of sanctification which can vary in accordance with different persons and situations. And far from wishing to turn aside priests from their ministry and their special calling, we do no more than offer them the means to make the results of their labour as well assured as possible. This same paragraph sums up in 9 paragraphs the principal components of a Rule of life (règlement de vie) which suits the majority of priests, but which in every respect might not be agreeable for some; each person will modify the regulations as he judges it necessary or convenient.

The latter part of the paragraph presents ways of promoting the observation of the Rule, what fosters unity of spirit in the associates and adds effectively to unity: a monthly or tri-monthly report, particular or general meetings, etc. But whatever the usefulness of these aids to perfection, they are not being laid down by us; we propose then to those priests who would have the opportunity to put them into practice. The third paragraph cannot be the occasion for the slightest objection because it wholly relates to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and their obligations towards the Associate members. Paragraph 4 deals with the direction of the Association. It ensures in the first instance that there should not be any excessive centralization, while acknowledging particular diocesan associations, and the grouping of these into circles and conferences, becoming then whatever coheres best with the Church's spirit and the organizations which already flourish among the diocesan clergy!

But what we stated above, explaining paragraph 2, will apply to those general or particular meetings; they are elective. If they can be held, they will do a lot of good; the clergy who can attend will depart better equipped to meet the requirements of the exercise of ministry. If there are too many issues to cope with, it will always be feasible, dear, worthy, confrères, to make them known to the local or diocesan leaders, or even to the Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart who will be happy, either himself or through one of his aides, to clarify these issues, and provide you with all the facilities whereby you can profit from the Association without imposing on you any responsibility either too demanding or incompatible with your situation. In the light of these general considerations you can gather then, dear, venerable, confrères, that there is nothing in this regulation to cause you concern. We add to the text of the Rule, by way of providing you with additional aids, the comments of one of our confrères (J.M. Vandel) who has seen for himself on the spot the difficulties entailed. (Perhaps it would be better to give here a résumé of his excellent suggestions rather than a presentation.)

Dear Father,

However many my obligations which can engage me no end, I want to answer myself your kind letter of July 16, thanking you in advance for promising, in accordance with the wishes of Father Cros, to correct in the next edition, the observation relating to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in his book, The Heart of St. Gertrude.

Having always proceeded with the greatest simplicity in what involves the role of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, we could not understand why Father Cros, writing these four lines, neither lengthy enough to develop fully his ideas yet substantial enough not to pass unnoticed, did not get in touch directly with us... These historical observations, otherwise, would have greatly interested us and we would have been pleased to read them and consider them as adding to the glory of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. It was through providential circumstances that the little book on St. Gertrude came into Fr. Jouët's hands and not unexpectedly engaged his interest where it dealt with the issue and his observation (on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart). It was Jouët who took the initiative in writing to Father Cros seeking precise details. He had a direct reply from Fr. Cros himself to the effect that the observation had been expressly written challenging us to ask for an explanation. We have kept the letter... We were promised an explanation in the near future in that letter... and that will soon be, I believe, two years ago..., and Reverend Fr. Cros has completely forgotten us...

Meanwhile, his little book was translated, so also the note (remark). We have read it, exactly the same, in the Spanish edition where it has an unfortunate impact, particularly so at this moment, when Spain is becoming so attached to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

It would have been the accepted thing to write and advise us before this little observation went into print. But all of this can perhaps be rectified and we are convinced that it will contribute towards the glory of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. If we were to ask, respectfully, a favour from Fr. Cros, it would be that of knowing whether he wishes to print the observation again, or provide another more explanatory comment, and to let us know in advance about it so that everybody in the re-arrangement will be happy with the outcome. We shall be particularly grateful to him and he can be assured that, in this little (!) issue, there is on our part only total simplicity. We love the Heart of Jesus, and it is all for His glory and that of His Mother.

The foregoing is an archival copy of Chevalier's letter, at the head of which he wrote "Copy of letter to Fr. Ramière". Chevalier had written to Fr. Deschamps on July 24. This Ramière letter was, most likely, written before August 8, 1871. See below, Article 309, letter to Deschamps.

Undated

Your letter, Father, made me seek information. Twenty of my confrères went to Paray-le-Monial recently to meet the older nuns at the convent. They said that the Saint-Angel priest (Cros) when preaching one day in the chapel where there was a statue of Our Lady, said to them:

"But in this sanctuary dedicated to the Heart of Jesus, Our Lady should be called Lady of the Sacred Heart of Jesus."

This title pleased him and he repeated it often. But they (the sisters) added that he offered no mystical or doctrinal explanation(of this title) and never explained or interpreted it, offering no explanation for it. He said Our Lady of the Sacred Heart just as he would say Our Lady of Lourdes, Fourvière, Garde.

Now these good sisters having seen for themselves what is involved, and all the marvels worked by the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart devotion, are of the view that the St. Angel priest, pronouncing the words Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, was speaking prophetically but had no idea himself about the significance of this new title and the depth of doctrine therein contained.

In the light of the foregoing, dear Father, information sought at the best source, I do not think that it can in any way be said that "the devotion to Mary under the title Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was preached at Paray-le-Monial from 1846. For, from the witness of the sisters themselves, the pious religious never spoke of this devotion such as we have it today. In titling Mary Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, he gave it to be understood that in his thinking it had no more than a pious significance which related well to a sanctuary consecrated to the Heart of Jesus.

Dear Father,

It pleases me to answer myself your kind letter of July 16 and thank you in advance for promising in Fr. Cros' name to correct in a forthcoming edition of his book, The Heart of St. Gertrude, the observation relevant to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

What immediately follows repeats, word for word, a section of Article 307 above to Fr. Ramière, followed by a section of Article 308. Article 309 now begins what becomes a specifically different letter. Chevalier thought that Cros, in using the title Our Lady of the Sacred Heart meant no more than that she was Our Lady of a privileged sanctuary to the Sacred Heart of Jesus at Paray-le-Monial. What follows is proper to this letter alone.

It is also true (his explanation of Cros' words) that when I myself went to Paray-le-Monial for the beatification of Blessed Margaret-Mary (Alacoque), the good sisters, even the older ones, confessed themselves to be completely ignorant of the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart; they didn't even understand the meaning of the statue I had sent on to them sometime before this.

Fr. Píperon, my colleague, on going to Paray some years ago, had the very same experience. Can one say, then, that the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was preached at Paray-le-Monial in 1846? I leave it to yourself to judge. The worthy Father from Saint-Angel (Cros) in using the words, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, was, according to your reading of it, first-light, dawn-like; let it be so! But first-light is often enveloped by thick cloud...

If it be permitted to express a thought, Reverend Father, it would be that of suppressing the end of the sentence. As for the cult of Mary in this wording of..., or, if one wants to introduce another, let us know in advance before the printing. We shall be particularly indebted to Fr. Cros and to yourself also, Father.

I am very disappointed that the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart are no longer being sent to you. I am requesting straightaway that one of my confrères who deals with this sends you on the Annals immediately. Many thanks for letting us have Mademoiselle de Villemarqué's address, and for all the interest you have in our undertakings.

Your worthy Bourges fathers came here on pilgrimage to Issoudun some weeks ago, and on the 31st of July I went there to celebrate the feast of St. Ignatius with them. Be kind enough to convey my respects to dear Fr. Ramière and convey the news to him also that dear Fr. Vandel continues to suffer greatly from his throat.

Please, very Rev. Father, accept my sincere gratitude and deepest regards in Corde Jesu.

I received promptly all your letters, including those from Sittard and Namur, as well as the rest. Your zeal is amazing! You are indeed a born apostle of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I understand that the circumstances are not favourable. Consequently, if you deem it necessary, could you not come back to Issoudun? We are keen to see you.

Fr. Liobet has done an eight-day retreat under Fr. Píperon's supervision, but he continues like this all the time, living in the greatest isolation. I fear that he will not begin to get bored. He said to Father Píperon that presently he does not feel in the least attracted to the religious life and experiences, no inclination to become a Missionary of the Sacred Heart. My Dear Sister in Christ,

It pleased me to hear that your health has improved a little. May Our Lady of the Sacred Heart meet all your wishes. We are praying very much for you. The pilgrimage centre is beginning to get well under way. I am sorry that the Third Order could not send a little group there who would be permanently resident. By advertising retreat work in our Annals it would have every chance of success.

The hostel at Place du Sacré Coeur had been agreed on when Sister de Montaignac visited Issoudun, December 8, 1869, but almost two years later Chevalier is disappointed that there is no on-going staffing.

You have a new parish priest. How does he react to the meetings presided over by Fr. Guyot? If you think he takes exception to this, it might be better to ask him to become the local director. Each month he will preside over the Third Order meetings, and Father Guyot every three months. This arrangement might perhaps suit everyone. What do you think?

Please convey my regards to all the good sisters and accept, dear sisters in the Lord, my appreciative and earnest good wishes in Corde Jesu.

You mentioned to me the usefulness of revising the Third Order Rule and introducing certain changes. This is my own view also. I am ready to be called upon for this work. To His Majesty Henri of Artois, Count of Chambord.

This letter was written by Jouët; Chevalier signed it and there are some little corrections made by him to the text.

To His Majesty Henry-Charles-Ferdinand-Marie-Dieudonné of Artois, Duke of Bordeaux, Count of Chambord, the only legitimate heir to the French throne.

Henri Dieudonné, Count of Chambord,

Sire,

On the eve of celebrating the first anniversary of France's solemn consecration to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in our blessed Issoudun sanctuary, we feel the need to make YOUR MAJESTY become aware of an action at once so religious and so patriotic. In the disappointment of your very prolonged exile, Sire, you might at least be boosted somewhat consolingly, and hopefully becoming to one who has the right of inheritance to the throne of St. Louis, as the lawful head and rightful king of the nation. This time a year ago our unhappy France, so sadly shaken by the horrors of the war, gave itself over to a great cry of distress before Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the hope of those without any more hope.

Having before our eyes the fate of our dear country about to perish, we, inspired from your thinking, declared: Louis XIII consecrated his kingdom to Our Lady; Louis XII from his prison consecrated it to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, and it is for Henry V then, their august inheritor, to bring together these two consecrations in one alone and thereupon solemnly consecrate our beloved France to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, patroness of difficult and hopeless causes.

Twenty-six bishops who were not at all under the humiliating yoke of the stranger and could correspond with Issoudun added their signatures to that of His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Berry, this province which is faithful and supportive under more than one heading, and asked that France in their name and that of their unfree confrères (the bishops in the areas taken by the Germans in their thrust towards Paris and beyond) and their flocks, be solemnly consecrated to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in our privileged chapel on October 17, 1870, the feast day of Blessed Margaret-Mary Alacoque, the apostle of devotion to the Heart of Jesus.

Sire, your august name was not at all forgotten in this memorable occasion. If our tongues could have expressed as loftily as our hearts desired it, it would have been proclaimed with love within this sanctuary already enriched with gifts from the pious Duchess of Parma and Madrid, this sanctuary where the fleurs de lys inlaid in the church's aisle, chiselled on the altar, graciously floating under the Virgin's gaze, clearly symbolizes the one whom we have always wanted and whom we petition again for the betterment of France and the victory of Pius the Ninth.

Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was appreciative of this massive witness of confidence which became concentrated from all quarters on her dear province of the Berry; seven times the enemy was on the point of invading, and seven times an invisible hand, but acknowledged and loved as a Mother's hand, providentially held off the enemy. We are entitled to say that the disastrous invasion was stopped there at the gates of the Issoudun pilgrim centre which, besides its other glories, can declare, as it were, that on the day of sadness, France was on its knees within its walls.

The evils which still weigh upon us today, Sire, following such a violent storm, and the civic unrest with which we are becoming more and more threatened, point towards the need to ratify through renewal such becoming activity as would bring a return of God's mercies to our unfortunate country.

Our good wishes for YOUR MAJESTY, SIRE, will be the same this year as for last year, with this difference, that we shall be more close to you and can more expectantly with hope and joy anticipate better things in the near future.

Yes, SIRE, may it be permitted to your children and subjects to promise in the name of their Father and their King, that this church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, covered with ex-voto offerings from all over the world, should have reserved within it a chosen place expressive of the acknowledgement we express for Mary, recalling that day when the glorious Queen of Jesus' Heart, you having ascended the throne of your fathers, will make it possible in Your Majesty's name and that of your gracious wife, to consecrate officially, nationally, resoundingly, our dear France to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in her foremost Issoudun sanctuary.

It is with the hope that this dear Mother will fulfil our expectations that, at her feet, we have the privilege and the consolation of expressing to Your Majesty, Sire, that we are your very humble, obedient and faithful subjects.

Rough draft of a letter to the French bishops.

Issoudun, October 1, 1871

My Lord,

On the eve of celebrating the first anniversary of France's solemn consecration to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in our blessed Issoudun sanctuary, and in the name of thirty-six bishops and archbishops, we are drawn to make directly known to YOUR LORDSHIP the significance of what is virtually a national demonstration of Christian piety. It is a year ago, in the middle of the terrible afflictions which shattered our dearly loved country, since a large number of the faithful made known their wishes to us, petitioning us to suggest respectfully to the whole French hierarchy that there should be a solemn consecration to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Our letter, endorsed and supported by His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges, had thirty-six declarations of episcopal support, without, nevertheless, reaching all the free (of invasion) dioceses or, especially, getting through to the départements which were invaded. Today, although the horizon is still not without its clouds, the situation is more hopeful, the fear of new problems counteracted by the hope of a happy resolution, particularly so since the town of Issoudun, so marvellously escaping, seven times over, all enemy invasion and being at the very boundary before which the devastating force stopped. Accordingly it seems appropriate to ratify by way of renewal this offering of France to the adorable Heart of Jesus through the gracious intermediary of Mary, and accordingly we humbly ask YOUR LORDSHIP to add your name, if you deem it appropriate, to those of the thirty-six bishops named in the accompanying act of consecration.

Yes, Your Lordship, we greatly wish that the whole of France, most solemnly, most generally and yet most privately, be consecrated to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. And it is towards the support of the whole French hierarchy that this moving gesture beckons. Accordingly, as we commend this project, representing our love for the Mother of God, to the prayers and blessing of YOUR LORDSHIP. We ask YOUR LORDSHIP to accept this expression of our devotedness and respect from your most humble and devoted servant.

Issoudun, October 3, 1871

My Lord,

On the eve of celebrating the first anniversary of France's solemn consecration to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in our cherished Issoudun sanctuary, in the name of six archbishops and bishops, we deem it necessary to make YOUR LORDSHIP directly aware of what is virtually a nationwide manifestation of Christian piety. It is a year ago, in the middle of the terrible afflictions which shattered our dearly loved country, since a large number of the faithful made known their wishes to us and we committed ourselves to petition in due humility the French episcopate for a solemn consecration of France to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Our letter, endorsed and supported by His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges, obtained thirty-six episcopal signatures, without, nevertheless, reaching all the dioceses which escaped invasion, and still less the invaded sectors (départments). Today, although the horizon is still not without its clouds, the situation appears, nevertheless, to be getting better. If there is concern about new problems, there is an accompanying hope for a happy outcome, particularly as regards the town of Issoudun, chosen for the solemn act of consecration, and which was itself so marvellously preserved, up to seven times, from all enemy invasion, and one of the limits before which the devastating force stopped. Accordingly, it seems appropriate to renew this offering of France to the adorable Heart of Jesus through the gracious intermediary of Mary, and, accordingly, we humbly ask YOUR LORDSHIP to add your name, if you deem it appropriate, to those of the thirty-six bishops named in the accompanying act of consecration.

Yes, Your Lordship, we greatly wish that the whole of France most solemnly, most generally and yet most privately, should be consecrated to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. And it is towards the support of the whole French hierarchy that this moving gesture beckons. Accordingly, as we commend this project to the prayers and blessing of YOUR LORDSHIP, we ask you to accept this expression of our devotedness and respect from your most humble and devoted servant.

It is true, my dear child, that you have been very remiss. I do not know any more what to make of your silence. You know, however, my concern for you and all your undertakings which I look upon as our own. I rejoice that you are in peace. May the divine Heart of Jesus always protect you. I warmly wish what is best for the advancement of your devout house. Convey my good wishes to all the sisters. I do not know if Fr. Bazire sent you the members' certificates. I enclose one in this letter. I would like you to write the associates' names in a register, but if you are to gain the indulgences you must find a way of sending us the register at least once a year.

Pray earnestly for us, our work, and, in particular, for me. You are in my prayers every day.

My regards to dear Father Matera and Mr. Caprioli. Be so good as to give Madame de Fusco the few lines written on a separate page.

Cheerio, dear child. I bless you in the Lord.

Sister,

Among the articles sent to you, you will find reproductions of the Sacred Heart which you did not ask for, and an Italian text which I did not mention at all in the letter I was pleased to write to you. I did not send these pictures to you with the intention that you might use them for the purpose of acknowledging contributions to the Sacred Heart. I sent them to you so that you could distribute them about gratuitously. You do not owe us anything then for these pictures. If they are providentially made use of to inspire some pious souls to make an offering to the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, nothing should hinder its acceptance and forwarding to the wished-for destination, but if nothing like this happens, my objective that the picture of the Sacred Heart should be widespread among the faithful will be totally achieved.

Please accept, Sister, my deepest regards.

L. Bazire

I again send on my best wishes to all the dear sisters in Italy, and to yourself in particular, dear child.

Issoudun, October 16, 1871

Dear Reverend Mother,

Father Piperon being away, it is with great pleasure I take occasion to write and tell you how your house is dear to us and how grateful we are to you for the dedication which characterizes your helpfulness.

May Our Lady of the Sacred Heart reward you in giving you the joy of witnessing to the knowledge and love of the Heart of Jesus Christ and his holy Mother such- wise that it takes on significant development among the Dutch people due to zeal with which you have promoted worship of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Shortly we shall send you on everything you asked for. You will only need to wait a couple of days; we await the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart crowns. As soon as they arrive, we shall forward yours, and you should shortly receive them. We are sending on the pictures you asked for; just the same make sure to send us the Dutch text you want printed on the pictures as we can send them to you so printed. Could you let us know when sending on this text how many we must print with or without perforations?

You are aware of the appreciation in which you are held by our Reverend Father (Chevalier) and Fr. Jouët, and also your edifying house, and I shall not give myself over to lengthy exposition when assuring you of their regard for the good Sittard Ursulines; do not be in any doubt about it. They assure you of their prayers. Please return the compliment, not overlooking in particular Fr. Bazire who is pleased to be your humble servant.

L. Bazire, MSC.

Dear Mother Antoine,

I endorse all that you are doing. I am sorry for this mix-up in the post. You should shortly receive all you asked for. I am sending some Sacred Heart medallions which are very beautiful. Let me know if you would like some more. Fr. Versteegen, a Dutch priest from Hoergestel, has written to me about entering our Society; he informed me that he had gone to Sittard and that it was you who advised him. Thanks for your dedication. Let me have, then, all the information available about this priest. Cheerio, most kind Mother. I bless you together with all the sisters and good pupils.

Issoudun, October 18, 1871

I was delighted, dear child, to have all your news. The heavy cold you mention worries me. Take good care of yourself, especially at the beginning of winter, and do not do anything rash. A good home at Versailles is something. I can understand, just the same, your regret when recalling Issoudun, and your dear Sacred Heart. You will return there. Console yourself; you are on mission, but the missionary always comes back to his house. It is not surprising if you haven't gained any recruit. Take your time about organizing yourself, drawing up your plans and you will have your rewards at the appropriate moment, I promise you.

You will do well in your spare time to return to the sanctuary of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You have there an advocate who cares for you and a father who is very devoted and close to you. Every day I pray for you and your concerns.

Here is a little time-table:

Winter. Rise at 7am. Make meditation for a quarter of an hour. Mass. On return deal seriously with the household affairs, domestic duties, etc. Recite, if possible, the Little Hours of the smaller office of the Sacred Heart. At 11.50, or a little later, particular examination (or self-evaluation, moral self-scrutiny for the modern reader not familiar with 'particular examination'). In the afternoon, Vespers - Spiritual reading for a quarter of an hour. Work. In the evening - Matins, a visit to the Blessed Sacrament, Rosary, preparing dinner. At 9.30, if feasible, prayer. Examination of conscience before retiring for the night at 10pm. Confession every eight days or every fifteen days or later. Go to Communion every day if you can. Each month a day of recollection on the first Friday. The Stations of the Cross at least once a month. Goodness, sweetness, patience, resignation, charity, piety, etc. Do this and you will live.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Your dear little Raoul is very well. One is very pleased with him. He works very well. I shall try to make him forget his dear father and mother and sweet little sister. That is to say, I shall be, for this dear child, whom I love greatly, all that your maternal heart would wish.

So long, dear child, I bless you.

Wholly yours in the Lord.

I am delighted to gather, dear child, that your health has improved; look after yourself carefully and do not be foolhardy. We are getting into the more harsh season: take great care. If you make yourself ill through your own fault, I shall be furious with you.

In my last letter, dear child, I advised you that you must concern yourself with making your husband happy, making the appropriate sacrifices to ensure this. Do not go to church too often or spend too much time there if you have noticed a contrary wish in Mr. Taulier. Then, let nothing be wanting within your house. Attend, have an eye to everything, be available at all times, and in being like this you will please the good Lord.

I am not in the least surprised that the Lord speaks to your heart and showers on you many consolations. You do well, dear child, to take yourself often to the sanctuary of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart where I see you every day in your usual place, head in hands, praying like an angel. I pray continually for you and yours.

I went to Chezal-Benoît twice this week. I saw your little Raoul there, embraced him and chatted for quite a while with him. He is happy and gets on very well. Don't trust your dreams. He wears a large decoration on his little chest. I said to him as I congratulated him on his success that he was on the way towards the rosette. They are very pleased with him. Do not have any worries.

Cheerio, dear child. I bless you.

Wholly yours in the Lord.

Issoudun, October 30, 1871

Dear Father Jouët,

I write to ask a favour; I am sure, then, that I shall be welcome. You know that I am very taken up with a carpet for our church ever since the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. It is at Lyons that the merchant trades who supplied the wool and all that came with it. It is he, likewise, who must piece together the different varieties to serve their purpose. It is already sometime since I forwarded most of the patches to him, and, besides, I wrote two letters to him at two lengthy intervals. I haven't had a word from him, and the absence of contact makes me uneasy. I ask myself if I am dealing with someone somewhat unwell. All the advantages are on his side, such as the money we sent on to him (more than a thousand francs) and the pieces which had been embroidered by our helpers. Does he intend to keep the whole lot? I do not think so, but I should like very much to know what I am supposed to think about all this. Moreover, in the present uncertain circumstances, I very much wish that this gentleman engaged himself with as much preoccupation as possible to the near completion of this commission. I shall not be free of concern until I see the carpet at Issoudun. Would you be good enough, then, to go and see this gentleman. This is his address: Mr. Thiallier – formerly the house of Riboulet – rue de l'Impératrice, Lyons (the house number is not given). Would you also be kind enough to place this matter under the supervision of some trustworthy person in Lyons who would follow it up and report to us on the urgency which this merchant brings to the execution of the work.

Moreover, there is a piece with which I couldn't do anything because the design was mis-laid. I sent the material to Mr. Thiallier. It is necessary that you find one of our Lyons helpers who would be prepared to embroider it, and then get in touch with Mr. Thiallier and let him know how it should be embroidered despite the loss of the original design.

I shall be grateful to you, dear Father, beseeching you in the name of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, to concern yourself in particular with this carpet, an undertaking going back more than two years. You could greatly help me by speeding-up the work's completion. It is on the advice of our Reverend Father (Chevalier) that I am writing to you, and that provides me with the more complete assurance that you will give serious consideration to what I have placed before you.

May Our Lady of the Sacred Heart comfort us in your absence as she continues to provide you with her wonderful care and gives you the satisfaction of making new and wonderful conquests for her! We are always at one with you in mind and heart, pleased to gather that you do so much for the glory of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and very keen at the same time to have you back in our midst.

Your unworthy and fond confrère,

L. Bazire, MduSC.

Many thanks for your kind letter, dear friend. We pray very much for you! I hope that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will look after you everywhere. I shall get in touch with you about the Bordeaux blessing. What you say about our dear novices gives me great pleasure.

Farewell. Wholly yours,

I understand all that the heart suffers, is engaged by, in all that it is fearful and hopeful about. It is not without its purpose that the good Lord led you to Issoudun and that I set you up as a Missionary of the Sacred Heart. I hope that for Christmas or Easter you will have your dear husband beside you, and at the holy table; all this I pray for.

Do not worry about what the good curate at Limoges said to you; keep loving and serving the good Lord ever so wholeheartedly. Your dear little Raoul is getting on very well. His teachers are very pleased with him. Is it your wish to visit Issoudun soon? I hope so, and that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will grant you this favour. I took account of your mass intentions; I shall look after them myself.

It would be ideal if you could do the retreat in Lyons at the end of Easter. Get in touch with the good parish priest. What did you say to your bishop? How did the meeting go? I await the contribution for the Annals. I very much regret that we are always late, and that also greatly annoys the subscribers. Issoudun, December 2, 1871

I was very pleased, my dear child, to get your letter. I didn't get the letter from our dear Sister Philaberte conveying the news of dear Father Matera's death; it must have got lost on the way. In Italy as well as France, there is so much postal disorganization; it is a service which over some time does itself no credit! We fervently pray that the Lord will choose a director for you after the designs of His Heart. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will ask this favour for you. I cannot understand the opposition which is being stirred up in Rome against the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. This devotion challenged, like that of the Sacred Heart of Jesus in the beginning, will have the same outcome: it will triumph over the opposition from hell.

Two years ago, at this time, I was in Rome. The Sacred Congregation of the Inquisition (latterly the Holy Office, more recently Doctrine and Faith) examined with care and in detailed fashion, the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, our Annals, all our books which deal with this important subject, and the conclusion, communicated both to myself and His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges, was that the title Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was irreproachable and that it was a very worthy devotion. We received messages of encouragement and congratulation. It was Monsignor Nina, Assistant at the Holy Office, who in the Sacred Congregation's name, delivered and made known this verdict. The great Pius XI approved of, and indulgenced, both the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and "Remember" (Our Lady of the Sacred Heart – the specific Marian prayer of the Society). It was he who in different briefs approved the Association which became an archconfraternity in the diocese of Bourges, and enriched it with many indulgences.

What more is needed?

Jealously is mixed in there and hell is unloosed, that's certain! Over seven years we have already registered 55,000 favours received and millions and millions of recommendations. More than 300 bishops have approved and supported this devotion. Try to ascertain the criticisms raised against it, who are involved, where they come from, etc., and as quickly as possible. Then I can act in tandem with the Archbishop of Bourges. Keep me up to date about everything.

I hope that from all this...

May it be the same for you, and I pray earnestly for this. You have had at least some compensation; if the frost envelopes the outside of your soul, your heart burns with love of God: happy blaze! Sacred fire a thousand times blessed. May it never be extinguished. I pray specially for that. When are you coming to visit us in your dearly loved Issoudun?

You give the impression somewhat of being well settled in at Versailles... Do not forget that you are in exile there; I would like to think that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will soon recall you here. Your dear little Raoul is always delightful, well behaved and working hard. I am very pleased with my little missionary (Madame Taulier herself); I admire her zealous efforts with which she is favoured by the good Lord. Her zeal motivates her to do yet more... Dear Father,

I am forwarding you a letter from Madame Anais Ségalas accusing us when it is you who are the guilty one. Please pay back what you have laid hold of so that we are not compromised because of you and through you! We are waiting with some little impatience news of your lovely feast day (December 8, Tarragona). Your scraps of letters were mouth-watering. Yes indeed! One always prefers to read you when you are not too drawn out. This is said with no malice intended. It is the spirit of poverty which makes us run people down like this. I smashed my scissors and if articles (contributions) come in which are too lengthy, I have no option but to acquire a new pair.

We have ice and snow and it's 22 degrees centigrade. It's pleasant enough, isn't it? We poor Berry People, like the dormice, sleep by the corner of the fire and the church is very empty. The pilgrimages have finished. One only travels when business is very, very urgent. Remain in Spain for the moment. I had some very beautiful acts of thanksgiving for this month. A long letter came from Sittard (Holland) with a lovely listing of names. All shall be signed, well and truly documented. You will be pleased. We are all well. Very Reverend Father Superior has returned from the Novitiate. Fathers Bazire, Hamel and Sauret are the same as usual and Brother Barbier remains good-humoured. All send warmest good wishes together with your very humble and devoted servant,

Ch. Piperon, MisSC.

Very warm greetings to Father Liobet.

Chevalier adds:

My good wishes, dear friend. Many thanks for your kind letter. Many nice things were said about you at Montluçon. When you are finished in Spain you will go to Italy and from there to Germany. God bless. Wholly yours.

On coming to the MSCs he was finally professed September 28, 1879, becoming door-keeper at St. Cyr parish, 1872-1874 and then sacristan and door-keeper at the Sacred Heart, Issoudun. 1. Your last letter filled us with joy. We thank the divine Heart of Jesus for the evident blessings which accompany your work. 2. We are overcome by the enthusiasm shown by the Vicar Capitular. What he graciously offers is too advantageous to our little Society not to refuse them. I give you full authority to deal with this issue, and with the understanding here presented.

For the time-being try to find a responsible Spanish friend, for example Fr. Liobet, who would like to be associated with you as a Missionary of the Sacred Heart, and come together. We shall send you two or three youngsters from the "Little Work (Petite Oeuvre) or perhaps I shall take them myself once you are set up. Rent the house you went to see. If you are short of money, I shall send you some. Then later, when the work gets under way, we hope to send you either Father Georgelin or Father Ledoux. I don't think you can begin anything before mid-Lent or Easter.

Maintain your equilibrium, dear child. Do not attempt anything beyond your resources. Never forget, even in the midst of your most fervent experiences, that you are mother and wife. If you find that fasting makes you exhausted, give it up. The good Lord is fatherly, aware before all else of the intention and good-heartedness of his children. In doing penance you are not short of interior mortifications and, besides, there is daily domestic boredom, all of which one tries to make use of. Offer all trials to the Lord and they can advantageously help towards making you a saint.

I am sorry that the Master of Arms is not coming to Chezal-Benoît; I am especially grateful to Mr. Taulier for the trouble he went to in all of this.

Yes, here is Easter almost upon us; do not worry; we shall pray and grace will make an impact; then you will be happy. I hope that you can come and spend your holidays with us at Issoudun with your little Raoul. You will find friends who will be very happy to greet you, I assure you. Say "Yes" and I shall look after everything. Farewell, dear child, in the expectant pleasure of seeing my little missionary.

I bless you; wholly yours in the Lord.

Your father,

I have been away for a little while, dear child. That's what prevented me from answering your kind letters sooner. I am very appreciative of your zeal and devotedness. If Our Lady of the Sacred Heart blesses you and rewards you in keeping with my wishes, nothing will be lacking in your happiness. I read the letters which you so very kindly sent to me with keen interest. I together with you thank the Queen of the Heart (sic). I am sorry that you are not coming to Issoudun for Easter. I would be pleased to see you again. At least you will have back your little Raoul (from Chezal-Benoît college).

Keep going, dear little missionary, you have all the blessings of your Superior and father who is always and more than ever wholly yours in the Lord.

Letter of thanks for the entrusting of the parish of Issoudun to our little Society

March 23, 1872

Your Grace,

Allow me to thank you for your gracious letter in which you make known my appointment as parish priest of Issoudun. This letter is a fresh indication of the lively interest you take in our little Society of which you are the patron under so many headings.

The burden you ask me to undertake is certainly demanding, but I feel encouraged to accept it resolutely, Your Grace, since I am assured that you will always help me to meet the challenge of the task set me. For the rest, I draw support from the special help of the Heart of Jesus to whom, as of now, I consecrate the parish, and it is to the advocate of difficult and desperate situations that I confide this demanding undertaking. Next Wednesday, in keeping with Your Grace's wishes, I shall go to Bourges.

I place myself at your feet, Your Grace, asking you to bless me and our little Society; with my respectful regards.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The Archbishop had written on March 23, 1872:

Dear Father,

I have appointed you parish priest of Issoudun and the appointment has been ratified by the Government. You can gather from this that it is an additional proof of my complete confidence in you, and which, I have no doubt, will be confirmed by your commitment and zeal for the concerns of this large parish. Come to see me on Wednesday. Yours very devotedly in the Lord.

C.A. Archbishop of Bourges

This appointment had been in the offing for some time, following the departure from the parish of Fr. Maugenest, Chevalier's early companion (see above, early correspondence). There were discretionary letters from the Archbishop, January 6, February 2, 12, of this year, 1872, sent to Chevalier by the Archbishop at agreed addresses rather than to Issoudun itself.

Issoudun, Good Friday, 1872

Dear Father,

I replaced you in so far as I could in a gathering of two hundred people, sisters, children, supporters at Rouanne. The great news is that on the Feast of St. Joseph, March 19, Fr. Jules Simon announced that the Very Reverend Fr. Chevalier had been appointed parish priest of Issoudun, and this news came here on the 25th, the feast of the Annunciation. Now we shall be called upon to create miracles of availability.

Father Superior (Chevalier) has asked me to inform you that he is giving you permission to take some time off in Marseilles after your demanding but fruitful appointment at St. Anne's. I am tired and very busy. I left the woollen pair of slippers in your room, a present from the Vanves sisters; they are new. Do you want me to send them on to you or give them to you upon your return? I am sending a large picture to the parish priest and curate. I am gratefully acknowledging the warm welcome I had from the priest at Limoges. And also the parish priest for being so friendly and caring. Mr and Mrs. Bourg received me most graciously, notified by the curate of St. Anne's, whom I wish to thank.

United in prayers, suffering, joy, in the Sacred Heart.

All good wishes, dear Father and friend.

Vandel, MDSC

If possible, before you leave, try and see the chaplain of the Crocombette Primitiale.

Chevalier adds:

Good day, dear father,

I have only time to greet you and commend myself to your prayers. I would give up if God did not support me. Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

What good news I have for you about the Association will be available on your return.

Eccellenza Reverendissima,

La lettera che abbiamo l'alto onore di dirigere a Vostra Eccellenza Reverendissima è l'adempimento di un dovere di riconoscenza e di amore verso Nostra Signora del Sacro Cuore di Gesù.

Maria invocata provvidenzialmente sotto il glorioso nome di Regina del Cuore di Gesù, da pochi anni, nella chiesa dei missionari del Cuore di Gesù in Issoudun (Indre), diocesi di Bourges, in Francia, ha concesso tal numero di favori speciali a quelli che la invocano sotto questo titolo, che da ogni parte del mondo cattolico ci giungono informazioni di grazie segnalate, il cui numero ascende in questo momento (Marzo 1872) a sessanta mila nello spazio di otto anni.

Il nostro santo Padre Papa Pio IX, il Pontefice di Maria per eccellenza, ha stabilito canonicamente nella nostra chiesa un'Associazione di preghiere a Nostra Signora del Sacro Cuore di Gesù per il buon esito delle cause difficili, estreme e disperate tanto nell'ordine spirituale quanto temporale. Posto che Maria è Regina del Cuore di Gesù per il triplice diritto del suo amore, della sua preghiera e della maternità divina, non era egli giusto darle questa testimonianza sublime di fiducia e invocarla quando le speranze umane ci abbandonano e sorgono dinanzi a noi difficoltà invincibili?

Il santo Vicario di Gesù Cristo non contento di avere stabilito questa Confraternita e di averla arricchita d'indulgenze, si è degnato formarne parte, iscrivendo il suo nome nel Febbraio 1869, e concedendo cento giorni d'indulgenza alla semplice invocazione di Nostra Signora del Sacro Cuore, pregate per noi, non solamente agli associati, ma eziandio a tutti i cattolici anche prima di essere iscritti in questa santa Crociata dei figli di Maria.

Dopo si santa e singolare approvazione e dopo si paterno segno di amore, l'Associazione si è propagata con tanta rapidità nel mondo, ed ha prodotto così gran numero di grazie tanto in Europa, quanto nelle più remote contrade, che Pio IX, a richiesta di molti vescovi francesi decretò (il 23 febbraio 1869), non ostante gli scarsi fondi, di cui potea disporre l'Opera, la solenne Coronazione di Nostra Signora del Sacro Cuore di Gesù, nel suo primo santuario d'Issoudun, delegando sua eccellenza il reverendissimo Arcivescovo di Bourges per collocare il diadema di oro sopra il capo della venerabile Immagine.

Quindici Prelati, ottocento Sacerdoti, venticinque mila pellegrini e stranieri concorsero a questa splendida cerimonia in una città così modesta, come è quella ch'ebbe la fortuna di vederla solennizzata: il che è una prova consolante dell'influenza che ha sulle anime Nostra Signora del Sacro Cuore.

Né qui sta il tutto. In mezzo al terribile flagello che ha desolato la Francia, nostra sventurata nazione, trentasei Arcivescovi e Vescovi dei dipartimenti che, non essendo invasi dai Prussiani hanno potuto tenere corrispondenza con questo pellegrinaggio, hanno scritto chiedendo, che a nome loro e delle loro diocesi si facesse una funzione di preghiere a Nostra Signora del Sacro Cuore in favore della Francia. Questa solennità, compita in mezzo alla generale desolazione, ha incontrato in tutta la popolazione cattolica del paese il più vivo entusiasmo. Essa ebbe luogo il 17 Ottobre 1870, e si è rinnovata il 17 Ottobre 1871 in nome di 47 Vescovi di Francia, nella propria chiesa di Nostra Signora del Sacro Cuore di Gesù, producendo in tutti i cuori la più salutare fiducia. L'Univers (giornale di Luigi Veuillot) fu il periodico religioso che fece eco a questa manifestazione cattolica, la più imponente che abbia avuto luogo in Francia durante la guerra. L'invasione nemica è giunta sette volte alle porte d'Issoudun, e la devastazione si è ivi arrestata.

Come Vostra Eccellenza avrà occasione di vedere nel semplice opuscolo che abbiamo fatto stampare in italiano, e che contiene un sunto del libro francese che fu scritto sotto questo titolo, e che abbiamo l'onore di mandare unito, più di centosettanta Cardinali, Arcivescovi e Vescovi delle cinque parti del mondo hanno contribuito con le loro lettere pastorali, con la loro pietà e patrocinio al movimento ognor crescente di questa nuova gloria di Maria.

Noi ci troviamo nel secolo del Sacro Cuore, e Maria non sarà mai bastantemente conosciuta ed amata sotto il titolo di Nostra Signora del Sacro Cuore di Gesù, titolo che a Lei è molto grato, e ce La presenta come la Tesoriera del Cuore di Gesù, e Guida per eccellenza dei popoli a questo Cuore divino.

Ecco perché, Illustrissimo e Reverendissimo Signore, nel proposito di procurare la più facile diffusione della pratica di questo culto nella cattolica Italia, in un momento, in cui tutto è sì umanamente disperato, e in cui la Chiesa e la Società, come ci diceva il Santo padre Pio IX, non hanno più speranza, che nel Cuore di Gesù, ci rivolgiamo rispettosamente a Vostra Eccellenza Reverendissima, affidando alla sua pietà e prudenza questa associazione, e la devozione che ne forma l'oggetto. La preghiamo in pari tempo, se lo giudica opportuno, che le conceda la sua pastorale benedizione, e la prenda sotto la sua paterna protezione. Se il Cuore di Gesù debb'essere il rimedio della Società, chi meglio di Maria, che è la Tesoriera di quel Sacro Cuore, può applicare questo divino rimedio?

Illustrissimo e Reverendissimo Signore, riceva anticipatamente l'espressione della nostra più profonda riconoscenza, e dall'alta considerazione con cui siamo della stessa Eccellenza Vostra umile e obbediente servitore

Issoudun, March 1872
Exact date not given

Most Reverend Excellency,

This letter which we have the signal honour of addressing to your Most Reverend Excellency is the fulfilment of a duty of acknowledgement and love to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. This tender Mother, providentially addressed for some years under the glorious title Queen and Sovereign Mistress of the Heart of Jesus, in the Church of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus at Issoudun (Indre), archdiocese of Bourges in France, has granted a great number of special favours to those who invoke her under this title, and from all over the Catholic world come reports of special favours, and the number at this time (1872) has risen in the space of 8 years to sixty thousand. Our Holy Father, Pope Pius IX, the Marian Pontiff par excellence, has canonically elected an association of prayer to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of Jesus in our church for a successful outcome in difficult, extreme, desperate cases in both the spiritual and temporal orders.

Since Mary is the Queen of the Heart of Jesus by a three-fold right of love, prayer, divine motherhood, it can only be proper to offer her a special confiding witness as we call upon her when human hope fails us and we are confronted with insurmountable problems. The august Vicar of Christ not only established this confraternity and enriched it with indulgences, but became himself a member, his name enrolled in February 1869, granting a 100 days' indulgence for the simple invocation: Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, pray for us, not only to the associates but, as well, to all Catholics even in advance of their enrolment in this holy crusade of the children of Mary. Following this very auspicious and honorific approbation, this very paternal manifestation of love (insigne in French), the association advanced with great rapidity all over the world and such a great number of favours were granted both in Europe and distant countries that Pius IX, on being asked by several French bishops, decreed on February 23, 1868, despite the lack of resources available for the work, the solemn Coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of Jesus in her pre-eminent Issoudun sanctuary, delegating His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges to crown the head of the statue with a gold diadem.

Fifteen bishops, eight hundred priests, twenty-five thousand pilgrims and visitors gathered for the splendid ceremony in a town of modest size which nevertheless had the honour of such a solemnity, a heartening demonstration of the impact Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has on the faithful.

And there is more: during the disastrous affliction which overtook our unhappy France (the Franco-Prussian War, 1870) thirty-six bishops and archbishops from the departments which escaped the Prussian invasion, could keep in touch with this pilgrimage centre, and wrote asking that their names and that of their diocese become part of the solemn petition to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, in favour of France's well-being. This solemn event, carried out in the context of general calamity, met with the most lively response from the whole Catholic population of the country. It took place on October 17, 1870, repeated on October 17, 1871, in the name of the 47 bishops of France, in the same sanctuary of the Holy Virgin of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, leading to the most uplifting confidence in all hearts. A religious publication, the Universe (Louis Venillot's Journal), carried news of this Catholic event, the most important of its kind to have occurred in France during the war. The invading enemy came seven times to the gates of Issoudun, and there its ravages ceased. A violent storm made itself felt; the first days of calm began to appear, and we availed of this in order to associate ourselves more closely with its significance.

The Italian 'alla sua causa' in the last sentence is unclear. Is "its significance" identified with France, the Church or the association?

As your Lordship may see for himself in the accompanying sheet which we have printed in Italian, itself offering a summary of the French book published under this title and which we are pleased to send you accompanying the leaflet, more than one hundred and sixty cardinals, archbishops and bishops from the five corners of the world have supported in pastoral letters, by their devotion and support the continually growing movement of this new Marian glory.

We live in the century of the Sacred Heart. And Mary cannot ever be sufficiently known and loved under the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, a title which is so becoming and presents Her as the treasury of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, and as having in particular the role of leading people to this divine heart (e guida per eccellenza dei popoli a Cuore divino).

Here is the explanation, Your Lordship, for our having in mind the promotion and advancement of this devotion in Catholic Italy at a time when, humanly speaking, so much is in disarray, when the Church and society, as the Holy Father Pius IX declares, have no hope other than in the Heart of Jesus, and, in consequence, we respectfully address ourselves to Your Lordship, recommending to your good will and solicitude this association and the devotion with which it is identified. We entreat you at the same time, if you deem it opportune, to favour it with your pastoral blessing, taking it under your fatherly protection. If the Heart of Jesus is to be the remedy for society, who better than Mary, herself the treasury of this divine Heart, to apply this divine remedy?

May Your Lordship accept, anticipatedly, the deep regard and respect of your humble and devoted servant,

What must you be thinking of your father, dear child? You congratulated him on his being appointed parish priest of Issoudun when you should, rather, sympathize with him...

Over the past three weeks, I don't know any longer how to live. I have neglected everything, even my best friends. Nevertheless there were moments when I thought of you... I asked betimes my good angel to go to you and say quite a lot! I share your sufferings and privations. Every day I express the wish that you return to our midst. I hope so. I was so pleased to meet Mr. Taulier and your dear little Raoul. It seems that it will be your turn within a couple of months. The Lord be praised! I have forwarded all the little (religious) objects you were looking for, asking you a thousand times to pardon the delay in sending this parcel. I am now in residence at the presbytery, and it is there you should address your letters from now on I thank you for your zeal and devotedness. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will reward you.

So long, dear child; I bless you and all you hold dear. Wholly yours in the Lord.

2. Maintain discipline, avoid hand-shaking, all familiarity. The students must not enter, without permission, the rooms of any priest, teacher, or assistant, or move freely around the garden or house.
3. The local Superior of the Sacred Heart house will see to it that the pupils of the school serve in the church as before; in unforeseen situations he will himself decide. If introducing new usages, he will discuss this with the Director of the school.
4. Order of Duties. When the office of the Breviary is in the parish (church) it will not be in the Sacred Heart, and reciprocally; or at least one will be in the morning, the other in the evening.

Community Personnel

1. Fathers Bazire and Hamel will continue to look after the needs of the parish.
2. The Council has decided that Mr. Bidaut, given his ill-health and inability to contribute much, will be asked to withdraw from the school.
3. Brother Barbier will go to Novitiate to make a month's retreat in preparation for his vows. One will consider Father Sauret later.
4. The Council does not deem it opportune to admit Fr. Batard to the community.

Many thanks for your kind letter, dear child, but I find that they are all too infrequent. You know what great concern I have for your good self. I am keen to follow you step by step on the way I laid out for you. It seems to me that the Lord, within all our trials, grants you great consolation. I pray for you and for everything which is dear to you. Your dear little Raoul was at Issoudun on Pentecost Sunday (May 19, 1872). I greeted this little angel, and thought about the pleasure you would have experienced had you been in my place.

In six weeks from now you will be in Issoudun to meet your dear child (at the end of the school year and return home). Do not be discouraged, keep on with your pious exercises. The good Lord loves you, believe me, and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart takes care of you. Be always her missionary.

My new responsibilities and you being at a distance do not, believe me, diminish in any way the concern I have for you. Farewell, dear child; I bless you in the Lord.

Contribution to Mademoiselles Ledoux.

The Council of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart in consideration of the services rendered to the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart by Mademoiselles Ledoux, voluntarily commits itself to reward them financially in appreciation of their work. It pledges itself to give them in addition fourteen hundred francs over two years, bringing to three thousand francs in all the amount allocated to them for each of the next two years. This sum will contribute towards the necessary expenses incurred while carrying out their duties arising from this work. The Council does not, however, with this arrangement, commit itself to the future, reserving to itself all obligations with respect to what it can and must decide on in subsequent years.

Question: Congregation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

As regards the foundation of a new Congregation under the title Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the Council does not consider it opportune for the present, to take a decision on this matter.

Dear Fathers,

I have arrived in Rome accompanied by Fr. Jouët and my primary duty is to write to you. We had a very good journey despite the tropical heat. We went to Osimo from Turin where the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has been established. The parish priest of the Holy Trinity, its director, welcomed us very warmly. (Giorgetti Don Santo, who died a little over nine years later, December 22, 1881, aged fifty-nine.)

Our visit to Osimo was very worthwhile, even necessary. Not being very far from Loretto, less than ten miles, we went there yesterday. I celebrated mass in the holy Nazareth house, and we prayed for three hours, particularly so for yourselves. I hope shortly to go on retreat; pray in particular for me. I would very much like to go away wholly transformed from this sanctuary. Do not say to anybody that I am in Rome.

Cheerio, dear friend. My regards and good wishes to all our dear fathers at the Sacred Heart.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Your Grace,

We arrived in Rome the very day you left. Your Grace can easily imagine the disappointment of Father Chevalier and the humble missionary who writes to you when we heard at the French Seminary that you had left scarcely a half-hour beforehand. It was a great disappointment for us. Our journey was delayed upwards of fifteen days because of the procession and the second communion of the Issoudun children which Fr. Superior had to preside over. We were hoping that your visit to Rome would last for three weeks or a month. We would expect that the suffocating heat, apart from any personal reasons, would have hastened your return to France. As of now, Your Grace, we ask you in your most paternal kindness to pardon our delay, however involuntary, in getting to Rome, specially following your kind assurances that you would do everything possible to help us in our different dealings with the Holy See. We met Bishop de Luca this morning and he was particularly helpful. The Bishop of Marseilles, not having answered the letter sent by the Sacred Congregation about myself, a new letter sent this week requesting an urgent response. What a happy day it will be when I feel myself to be truly a Missionary of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, as I have been in mind and heart ever since December 28, 1864.

This letter, Your Grace, is being hastily written in the midst of undertakings and appointments which engage all hours of the day, and I beg for it, and for him who writes it, your most gracious pardon.

Please accept, Your Grace, together with all my apologies and regret, my deepest regards and most filial appreciation and I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and devoted servant.

Victor Jouët, Miss du SC.

Chevalier adds:

Your Grace,

Fr. Jouët having written to you on my behalf, I have only to add one word to express my disappointed feelings and all my apologies. We hope to have an audience one of these days (it would be over a week later, July 7, coinciding with Jouët's profession as an MSC, properly speaking, at long last.) We are placing at the feet of the Holy Father a little offering of two thousand francs (6,625 euros or so) in the Association's name. Now more than ever we ask for your fatherly blessing.

Dear Fr. Georgelin,

We are in Rome at last. We saw Pius IX for quite a while on Tuesday, his feast day. It was a marvellous audience and the Pope's speech was wonderful. The Florence newspaper and the Universe will publish all of it. Never was Pius IX, so it is said, more splendid and sublime as in this audience. One would have said that he was scarcely sixty years of age. He keeps very well. Next week, I hope to see him at a special audience. Pray and ask for prayers. You are not forgotten here. Remember me to the kind Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul and of Charity at Bourges. Tell Sister Henriette that I carried out her wishes with regard to Fr. Blot; ask this worthy Father to go and take my place on Sunday at 2.30pm at the reunion of the children of Mary.

I am sending you on some flowers which I picked yesterday in the Pope's garden which I was allowed to enter. Give them to your friends, to Madame Desforges, for whom I pray, etc. Cheerio, dear Father. Wholly yours,

My most dear Sister in the Lord,

Following my return from Rome, I didn't have a minute to myself. I had scarcely returned when the Archbishop made known the confirmation date and we had to get 900 children ready in 15 days. At last, since Monday, I can breathe and I profit from this to inform you that I did travel to Naples where I saw Sister Volpicelli and the other sisters. The Third Order, which has had its problems, seems to me to get better and better. The spirit is very good and there's no limit to the devotedness. These ladies are very much associated with us and they like the Montluçon house beyond all telling. I gather that you will very soon be visited by a very devoted lady closely associated with the Naples Third Order, Madame Carrelli, a widow. It is Sister Catherine (Caterina Volpicelli) who is sending her to you. There is a great future for the Third Order at Naples. I am forwarding in Sister Volpicelli's name a summary of her work. I have a letter for Sister de Waldegg with some money. I shall send it on through Fr. Jouët who will shortly be going to Montluçon.

I was very pleased with my trip to Rome. The Holy Father was very kind. The latest number of the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will give an account (of the trip). Father Jouët is staying with us. May the Lord be praised!

Please accept, dear sister, my respectful good wishes in the Lord.

The pupils of the school (Mâîtrise) will be dispensed from those parts of the offices where their presence is not absolutely necessary.

I am very sorry, dear child, that you didn't come to Issoudun for the 17th as you really missed something because the feast was so beautiful and devotional. So many pilgrims! So many tears! I did not forget you in any way. So here you are in a new setting. (Madame Taulier had moved to Paris from Versailles with her husband.) You can yet more profitably demonstrate your missionary zeal there on behalf of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. How this life of change must be tiring for you! Oh! When are you going to come and relax for a few days at the feet of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, in the shade of this sanctuary. That is your spot, that is where I want you to be; hasten the day.

I was at Chezal-Benoît on Wednesday where I saw your little Raoul and he is getting on very well. Keep going, dear child, raise your spirits. Look upon the Heart of Jesus, the centre of rest for faithful souls. Enclose yourself within this heavenly retreat where the great world and tumult of Paris cannot follow you. Ask Our Lady of the Sacred Heart herself to lead you within this asylum of peace and salvation; she knows the way, and, anyway, it is her role. Do not forget that I pray for you every day. Mr. Taulier will, I hope, at Easter, make possible the fulfilling of that expectation which you have so long been awaiting from him (fulfilling his Easter duty).

To His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, December 20, 1872

Your Grace,

I wish, confidentially, to draw your Grace's attention to the undertakings and behaviour of the Misses (Mesdemoiselles) Ledoux. These young women, as your Grace is aware, have over a long time expressed the wish to consecrate themselves to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart through a special form of work which in certain respects, perhaps, would appear to me as willed by heaven, but the day and the hour for which do not seem to me as having yet arrived.

Against my wishes and those of my confrères who are aware of the issue, these Mademoiselles, last July, bought the nearest adjoined house to that in which they are living. The public did not take much notice, ourselves no more so because we understood that they would continue to live devoutly under the guidance of their director, and without adding anything unusual. We were mistaken. These girls immediately dreamed of the religious life, a specific habit, a special chapel of their own, etc. Supported no doubt by my confrère, Fr. Ledoux, they proceeded in the greatest secrecy to buy, without saying a word to us, a second house following on the first. The second house cost them 22,000 francs (roughly 72,900 euros) the first 19,000 francs (roughly 62,942 euros). In these negotiations more than double their value had been paid (for the houses). Straightaway the tenants were dislodged, with no compensation, and the houses have already been transformed into what is virtually a convent, no mistaking the design. The public outcry was heaped upon them. We are all the more taken aback by all that is going on and being said, since everything has been undertaken with no involvement on our part, and it is all contrary to our wishes.

Everybody is saying, it is the Sacred Heart which is involved and paying for all of this... Besides, the proximity of this house, which touches, so to say, our building, impels people to think and say the most outrageous things. This, then, was not the time nor especially the place to pick on to begin this work of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. It seems to me that, in the light of these circumstances, it is imperative that these young women should halt and cease to take any further their foundation plans, and that it is more than opportune to abandon their project in the present circumstances.

In all this Father Ledoux has played a compromising part. When he came to let me know about the latter acquisition and noticed my astonishment, he made so bold as to say that all this was being done with the approval of Your Grace... but I, knowing things to the contrary, had no hesitation in giving him a formal reprimand, blaming him for encouraging the sisters to become involved in a dangerous undertaking which would lead straightaway to the most serious consequences. In so making use of our Constitutions, he has introduced a regimen where the most absurd spirit of independence, etc., would become rampant for future daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

I tried to get him to understand that these sisters cannot be fouduresses as they have the pretension to be, that they have nothing to offer which would fit them to be so, and that if the good Lord wanted this little society of Our Lady to be His chosen instruments, then in accordance with the Bishop's wishes, it should be the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, and, accordingly, the Misses Ledoux, on being considered suitable, could simply belong without any privilege otherwise. The test has worked: these young girls and their brother loudly cry out: they neither want supervision or dependence.

Over the past year, Your Grace, I have closely observed these girls, especially the eldest. I am convinced that this poor child lives in total delusion and in no way whatsoever has she the ability to take charge of the work in question. Her character is very headstrong and difficult; she is unbalanced of judgement, ambitious, very critical; the only good done comes from herself; she cannot bear to be challenged; if she is queried, or if one is not of her viewpoint, one is blamed for everything.

Since this is a poor family the purchases which have been carried out so light-heartedly have led, I fear, to a scandal. Miss Ledoux (it is in the singular here) is dependent on a girl from Melun, the daughter of a former lawyer, for the means of paying. This young society girl came and stayed a month in Issoudun with the Ledoux sisters whom she knew. She did a little retreat with me and, grace working in her, she is nowadays a model of virtue. This girl, profiting from the estate of her dear mother, has upwards of 30,000 francs at her disposal (roughly 99,380 euros); she is greatly drawn to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Mademoiselle Ledoux takes a leading part in this whole affair for which I find her responsible and wish to clarify; she influences this young girl to take on responsibilities, and goes as far as to make her contribute a regular amount on terms dictated by her. Let Your Grace find the time to read the enclosed letters from this young Melun girl and judge for yourself! For the sake of propriety, I believe, Your Grace, that it is a matter of urgency to halt the activities of these women and make them give up their plans. I speak Your Grace with total openness. I place with you, in the utmost confidence, these specific details to which you bring your paternal warmth of heart in what is for me a question of conscience. I leave to your wisdom the outcome of this issue.

Please accept my respectful good wishes.

D 18730101

Decree of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

The following is Chevalier's assessment of the document. He himself gives no date. It is, however, likely to be written at the beginning of the New Year, 1873.

1. A private letter from the Bishop suffices for testimonial letters.
2. It is not required that the testimonial letter be specific about everything mentioned in the decree. It is enough that general guidelines be given to the Superior, to be completed thereafter by his enquiries.
3. If the Bishop says that he has no knowledge whatsoever of the postulant and cannot provide a testimonial letter, he can, nevertheless, be accepted in the Novitiate if, enquiries having been made and information sought, there is nothing canonically, detrimental to his entering. Under these conditions, he will wait for three months before taking the habit.
4. If the civil authority prevents the Bishop from sending testimonial letters, the postulant can be accepted if nothing, according to the Superior's knowledge, suggests otherwise.
5. If a postulant with a military background presents himself, and a particular bishop cannot supply testimonial letters either because he does not know him or because he cannot otherwise have information provided about him, he can, nevertheless, be accepted if the information which reaches the Superior is supportive.
6. If a bishop refuses to provide testimonial letters for no other reason than his being opposed to the postulant's entry to religious life, it is not within his rights and one must have recourse to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.
7. One must have testimonial letters for lay brothers.
8. Admission to the taking of the habit or to the Novitiate is valid if it takes place without testimonial letters, but it is illicit. Testimonial letters, therefore, must be immediately sought since, otherwise, the novices cannot be admitted to profession.
9. A profession which takes place without a prior testimonial letter remains valid but illicit.

To Sister Caterina Volpicelli, Naples.

Issoudun, January 2, 1873

It is very kind of you, dear child, to be so concerned about me as you have been. My health is holding up, thank God, despite my far too numerous bouts of fatigue. I am pleased to hear that you yourself are much better and that your vitality is coming back. May the Lord be praised! Improve yet more, if it is possible; you need to keep well.

I am sending you the Rules for the priests of the Sacred Heart (12 copies). If you want more, I have some for you. If an Italian translation is needed, you might, perhaps, become involved yourself with the matter. I believe that this priestly work is meant to be a great success. It meets a worthwhile need. The bishops and priests who know of it welcome it very wholeheartedly.

As soon as the Sacred Heart Third Order has decided on its aim and regulations, I am quite certain that it will be approved by the Holy See. Its development will then be assured. Let us hasten, in so far as we can, this happy moment.

If I go to Rome during Lent, I shall no doubt try to meet you, but I do not see any possibility of making the trip at the moment. I thank the divine Heart of Jesus most particularly for the peace He has given you. I pray that He will further enhance it and flood your soul with His consolations.

Yes, the Evil One will do his utmost to sow disunion in the work of the Sacred Heart which must be a centre of love, but be confident, nevertheless, and I am sure that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will always look after you.

Give my regards and New Year good wishes to all the kind sisters and in particular to Madame de Fusco and her devout aunt. Do not forget either to give my regards to Mr. Caprioli and your good directors. Cheerio, dear child. With good wishes of true happiness coming from my heart for you and your little spiritual family, I bless you in the Lord.

The Nocq Affair.

The Council again discussed the parish priest of Nocq-Chamberat's proposal to sell all his possessions to the Society on condition that he will continue with his obligations and continue his work. The Council decided that it would be prudent not to accept his offer for the time being.

Wills.

The Very Reverend Fr. Superior drew attention to the need for every member of the Congregation to make a will.

Status of Personnel.

The need for a register was noted which would contain the names of the Congregation's members and the different information necessarily accompanying each of them.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

18730119X

Council Meeting, January 19, 1873

In attendance: Very Rev. Fr. Superior; Fathers Piperon, Vandiel, Georgelin.

Father Albert, Curacy.

The Very Rev. Superior made known the contents of a letter written to him by Fr. Albert asking to be replaced as curate of St. Cyr. It is impossible at present to meet his request. Father Superior noted that in the case of a change of curate the Bishop's approval is required.

The 'Little Work' (Petite Oeuvre) and separation from the College.

The Council was made aware of a letter from Father Miniot, Director of the 'Little Work', outlining several serious drawbacks concerning the relationship between the pupils of the 'Little Work' and the College, particularly at class-time. Two letters from fourth-class pupils were read complaining about disorderly activities during the classes. Fr. Miniot proposes a complete separation, even for the classes, of the 'Little Work' and the College, presenting a plan for a new organization project. The Council agrees in principle that the separation is desirable, but cannot be put in place at present, and that nothing can be arranged without the Archbishop's approval, and, as well, the proposed plan is wanting in offering serious courses to the students: an attempt must be made to lessen the drawbacks and eliminate the disorders.

Uniformity of Dress.

Rev. Fr. Superior expressed the wish that there should be complete uniformity both in quality and style. This is very much to be sought after.

Statements to be signed by each member of the Society.

Finally it was laid down that each member of the Congregation should sign as of now for those already part of the Congregation, and on entry for others, a declaration in which they will acknowledge that they have no right to a reward for services rendered to the Community and are owed nothing accruing from the Society's endowments. One must declare this in a written declaration, a copy of which will be made and signed by each member of the Congregation, priest or brother.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

18730121X

Council Meeting, January 21, 1873

In attendance: Frs. General, Piperon, Vandel, Jouët, Albert.

Dismissal of Brother Pépoucy.

1. The decision was taken, given the inability of Brother Pépoucy to contribute as a brother, and otherwise his natural inclination to sleep excessively, that he should be asked to leave.
2. The work of Fr. Ledoux in Spain.
Father Ledoux, presently in Barcelona, can spend some further time there in order to study Spanish customs and learn the country's language. He does not need to establish a foundation at the moment, but he will look into the matter and prepare in advance for such a foundation.
The 'Little Work' (Petite Oeuvre) and other countries.
3. Two boys from Ceva, Piedmont (Italy) have been put forward for the 'Little Work'. Fr. S. Giorgetti, parish priest of the Holy Trinity, Osimo, has been asked to provide initial information.

It was unanimously decided that the establishment of a 'Little Work' centre should be undertaken in foreign countries where the possibility of vocations would be considered and briefings taken about suggested candidates. Funds for the upkeep of the students admitted from the different countries would be centralized and sent to Issoudun.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

18730126X

Council Meeting, January 26, 1872

In attendance: Rev. Father Superior, Fathers Piperon, Vandel, Jouët, Georgelin, Albert.

Chezal-Benoît: Fr. Marie and Mr. Bardin wish to have Brother Batard for supervision.

It was decided that Fr. Marie could not have Brother Batard because (a) it would be inconvenient for the College (Maîtrise) where he is doing a lot of good; (b) because it is very doubtful if he could be successful at the College. Some thought that he does not have the necessary qualities to cope with older pupils. One shall try and find somebody as an overseer to replace the vacancy.

Responsibility for the chapel: Fr. Vernoux.

All the Council members are of the view that Fr. Vernoux has the necessary qualities to undertake responsibilities of Church Chaplain; many wondered if his personality and southern (French) attitudes might not have an effect on his perseverance. It was decided to outline his role in the most demanding aspect so that he would be under no illusion about what he was taking on. It was agreed that the recompense offered him should be raised to 2,900 francs.

18730209X

Council Meeting, February 9, 1873

Reply to Father Vernoux.

Again it was agreed that he should have 2,900 francs as stole fees. 1,000 francs would have to be paid by him and his father towards board and lodging, and 600 francs if he only comes himself. He will reside at the presbytery and follow the time table there. Fr. Ledoux, former parish priest of Chabris, uncle of Fr. Ledoux (MSC now in Spain, see above), having just died, it was decided that one of the MSC should attend the funeral replacing the absent nephew.

The Ledoux family.

It was decided that the Ledoux family could be given aid, with attached guarantees, to help them to extricate themselves from the financial embarrassment brought upon themselves through the purchase of houses destined for a future community (see above, article 355). This purchase, having been made against the wishes and without the advice of the Society's Council or of the Very Reverend Superior, cannot have anything further done about it.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The Ledoux family lived at the corner of Vouët Square, Issoudun, today Sacred Heart Square, facing onto Rue des Champs-d'amour, today Rue Alexandre Le Cherbonnier. In 1870 the family comprised mother, two grown-up daughters, two sons, one Louis an MSC priest, and Alphonse a clerical student in a major seminary. The two girls were the first secretaries to work in the MSC administration offices at Issoudun, the 'Bureau'. Louis was the first Assistant Director of the Chezal-Benoît 'Little Work' from its inception in 1867. Over 1873 and 1874 the situation, described with concern by Chevalier in his 20 December letter to the Archbishop (see above article 355), caused great concern, especially its financial connotations, yet no less so Louise Ledoux's intention to establish a "Society of Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart", something totally unacceptable to Chevalier, as is clear from his letter to the Archbishop. In an ensuing law-suit the sisters won their case, but it became no disadvantage to Chevalier to be rid thereby of these Ledoux sisters since he was totally free and unimpeded by any restraint when founding the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in August 1874.

Article 359

To Fr. Victor Jouët, MSC, en route to Rome.

L 18730209

Issoudun, February 9, 1873

Dear Father,

Yes, your trip was very much a necessity. I am amazed that Father Scalsi, who had this decree in his possession since the month of December, didn't mention it sooner.

On his way to Rome in early February, Jouët had written on the 5th enclosing the text under discussion, and he wrote from Rome both on the 6th and 7th of February. These are letters to which Chevalier is now replying, and they deal with the decree 'Null a Datur' by Patrizi, the Cardinal Vicar of Rome, establishing the Roman Confraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, but requiring a modification of the image of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the decree formulated either on December 7 or 8, 1872.

This decree is from the Cardinal Vicar and not from the Pope; it can then be changed. Not a word is said about Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. It says Our Lady Immaculate of Issoudun twice: "Dominae Nostrae Immaculatae Exiludensis" (and then in parenthesis, commonly, "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart"). One would think that they were afraid to put "Sacratissimi Cordis Jesu". And you will have noticed that the word "Exiludensis" in no way whatsoever means "Issoudun". It should be "Exolduni" or "Exoldunensi".

Write to the Archbishop of Bourges and ask him to get in touch straightaway with Bishop Patrizi since there is still time to act because the Pope has signed nothing yet. What does this picture (statue) represent? Nothing. It presents nothing of the devotion, offering no idea of it. It must be changed, therefore. Since the picture has been made, let it be kept with the little child pointing to his Mother with the left hand and to his Heart with the right. These two changes are not a problem, easy to make and relating, appropriately, to the image to the devotion. But the decree makes no mention of the need to change the image, and if one is held to abide by "aliquantum tamen Imagine reformata" one can add "pro Urbe Tantum" or "for Rome". It would be best to say nothing.

Then there is the name given to us in the decree: "In aeae Exiludensi", which should be "exolduni". "Presbyterorum qui sacris expeditionibus, tanto sub patrocinio, se dedicant." We are not priests from just any town, whatever, undertaking our missionary work under the patronage of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, but very much so, rather, as Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

All your undertakings have been very shrewd. It is necessary that their focus be the reformulation of His Eminence the Cardinal's decree in the sense understood. It is imperative that Issoudun, like Our Lady of Victories, Paris, should always be, for all the other towns of the world, the Association's centre, and there one should find unity of leadership and doctrine: this is absolutely imperative. Do the worthy people in Rome who are supportive of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart understand rightly the devotion? Stay in Rome as long as necessary. If everything has been satisfactorily settled, or if your presence is no longer needed, try to be at Issoudun for Quinquagesima Sunday.

No, one should not give any money to the Holy Father; as I said to you, keep the money for another occasion when I shall be going to Rome on behalf of our Society. It is impossible to go at the moment and meet you there.

Nothing new at Issoudun: all the confrères greet you. Cheerio, dear Father. Wholly yours in Corde Jesu. Pray for me and the needs of our little Society.

Dear Father,

I wrote to you yesterday. Do your best; stay as long as necessary. Adapt, if you wish, the Trastevere image, appropriating it for the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. The child presents His Heart with one hand and points to His Mother with the other. Write immediately to the Archbishop of Bourges asking for a letter from him and you can act upon that. My elderly mother is very ill; pray for her and for me. I shall willingly go to Rome after Easter for the approval of our Constitutions.

Totus tibi in Corde Jesu.
J. Chevalier, MSC.

*Jouët, a little over seven years later, in a letter dated March 12, 1879, clarified Chevalier's 'Trastevere' reference above: "At Santa Anastasia, at the high altar of Santa Maria in Trastevere, and at St. Bonaventure's convent near Caesar's palace, copies of a different picture (painting), are also revered, older and much better known. It is the work of the celebrated Bathoni. The Child Jesus also (here) offers His Heart to His Mother. The original dates beyond 1870 and it is on old canvas of the convent that the picture is produced beside a portrait of Father Angelo di Poggio, to whom it was given, and below one reads the inscription in words which movingly touched me: "Immagine di Maria SS del Sacro-Cuore di Gesù: Image of Mary most holy of the Sacred Heart of Jesus".*

(The Archbishop's letter is not in the Bourges' file, General Archives.) I note that His Grace does not like to put himself out front. I am very surprised by all this. I well believe that His Grace will not send you a letter; it is presupposed by what he encloses here. When you have received a satisfactory answer you can return. Please pay Mr. Vuillaume what I owe him for the cost of the Novitiate which he made available to us for the priests. I think it was either 9 or 19 francs (30 or 63 euros); he will let you know.

Cheerio, Father. I am full of rheumatism; pray for me. Father Ledoux has returned bringing a little Spanish boy for the Petite Oeuvre.

See above, Ledoux in Spain. The young Spaniard he brought with him towards January 15, Antonio-Jimenez, went with J.M. Vandel to Chezal-Benoît three days before Chevalier's February 18 letter, and returned to Spain on May 16 accompanied by Jouët, considered neither "serious or studious" as Fr. Miniot at Chezal-Benoît said to Vandel.

Cheerio. Wholly yours.

Madame,

Many thanks for your very kind letter and all the concern you have for my health. The bronchitis has been afflicting me for four weeks and successive bouts, I can tell you, have exhausted me and made me tired. Then the doctor came again and covered my back in a thapsia plaster, confining me to my room. He ordered me complete rest until Easter. I am, then, kept away from everything which would make me tired: confession, preaching, catechism lessons. It is the (Lenten) missionary who will replace me (Fr. Delpauch, OMI); he has already taken over my confessional. You can gather that I am at this moment reasonably well. I hope that by being looked after and taking care I shall shortly be restored to health. My thanks for your item of news. Like you I find that there is no more worthy a mission.

Please convey my regards to all your good and worthy family. With all good wishes Madame.....

Issoudun, March 16, 1873

Madame,

I have gone over part of your manuscript and changed certain sentences. On thinking it over, it is out of the question that we accept this work which deals with the beginnings of our Society, our difficulties, etc. etc. These pages bring things to the fore and are, as we see it, full of inexactitudes. (It is to be supposed that Hello had before her, as a source, Chevalier's early MSS: "The Annals of the little Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart", see below.) Publishing these pages would be both for ourselves and our Society a cause of concern and difficulties which you cannot foresee. Do not forget that this history you are writing is that of devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, of the Association, the favours granted, the feast, the pilgrimages, not that of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

I know that you must say a word about the beginning (of the Society), but it should be brief and discreet. Copy the first four pages of the little book: Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Better Known. That will suffice. I would prefer not to be mentioned and I know that Fr. Maugenest would be very unhappy to see his name in the heading. He recoils from being mentioned in the papers.

When claiming legitimacy for the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, provide the authorization text of His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges. (Presented on the occasion of the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, published in the August Annals, p.185-200, and which Madame Hello made use of.) You cannot do better than this. Provide an explanation of the statue and picture of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You will find it in the early numbers of the Annals: The Power of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, p.18 (article by Fr. Piperon).

Do not forget to mention the great coronation ceremony of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and the consecration of France to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, October 17, 1870, 1871, in the name of 73 bishops and archbishops. Provide an interesting account of the Sacred Heart chapel and, particularly, the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart sanctuary (Issoudun).

I ask you to forgive me, Madame, for speaking to you so forthrightly, but my conscience compels me to do this as a duty. Will you be so kind as to get in touch with us again about your work. It is not required that it should be in print by the month of May. Take your time, but let it be without reproach.

Please be assured, Madame, of my highest esteem.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Madame Ernest Hello, neè Zoé Berthier, wrote under the pen name 'Jean Lander'. She married Ernest Hernest, the Catholic publicist, in 1857 at the Auteuil church. She had an aunt in Issoudun and came there particularly after 1872, referring to a dwelling-place in the Sacred Heart Square owned by a Mrs. Chapelin. On these visits she would have come to know Chevalier and the MSCs, visited Viscountess des Quesne at the Visitation chateau and the orphanage where she would have been welcomed by the Superior, Sister Françoise Gaillard. She would also have known Sister Anna Marchand and the Ledoux sisters. With the book in mind she would have consulted and discussed, read the early numbers of the Annals, and familiarized herself with Chevalier's manuscript, 'The Annals of the Little Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart', which presented details about the beginning of the Society. Lander's book was published in 1873: The Issoudun Sanctuary. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Paris. Issoudun. 1873. Victor Palmé; 443 pages. Chevalier's letter to Lander is a copy in pencil by Jouët.

I received, dear child, your letter yesterday and I am replying straightaway to reassure you that I have no hard feelings. I direct no reproach whatsoever at you for your delay in writing; it is enough that your own conscience accuses you. We pray earnestly for you and your undertakings. The new blessings you tell me about greatly please me. Let us hope that the day will come when you will have Missionaries of the Sacred Heart in Naples to help you. I have arranged for your requirements to be sent on to you. Your letter will be sent on to Sister de Montaignac. Her health continues to remain delicate. At present she is a little better. For a number of weeks now I myself have been somewhat laid up with a heavy attack of bronchitis. The doctor ordered complete rest for four weeks. The Lord be praised! Pray earnestly for me, for our little Society and all our undertakings.

May it please you, dear child, to convey my good wishes to all the kind sisters and, especially, to Madame de Fusco and her aunt, and all my good wishes in CJ to yourself.

I bless you,
J. Chevalier.

Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will triumph. Be courageous and confident. If I have to return to Rome, most certainly I shall go and see you. Pray earnestly for me and for our undertakings. Every day I think of you and everything with which you are involved.

I heartily salute you and all our sisters. I bless you all in the Lord.

I am delighted to be able to tell you that I feel my health has been restored, and that it is my intention, moreover, to leave Amélie on Easter Monday morning for Lourdes and go from there to Issoudun where, please God, I shall arrive towards the end of the coming week. I don't know how to thank you enough for all the concern you have shown for me; I pray earnestly for you and yours. I ask the Lord to bestow on your family the blessings of his divine Heart. His Grace who was given a false impression about the state of my health, asked me not to leave Amélie before Easter; I took his advice, but it has cost me greatly not to be in Issoudun for the consecration of the parish to the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

With my good wishes and regards...

Council Meeting, April 16, 1883

Rev. Father Superior, having been for some time laid up and elsewhere, the customary Council meetings were postponed. They commenced on his return.

In attendance there were Fr. Superior, Fathers Piperon, Vandel, Jouët, Albert, Fr. Miniot director of the 'Little Work' and Father Marie, Superior of the College.

It was decided that Fr. Miniot should be released from being in charge of the sixth class at the College and replaced by Fr. Barrière (diocesan) who would be responsible for part of disciplinary overseeing at the College.

Status of the 'Little Work' (Petite Oeuvre).

The question of separation of the 'Little Work' from the College, having been avoided for some time, again came up for consideration. It was thought that the stage was not yet reached whereby this separation could come about.

The 'Little Work' Fees.

The pupils of the 'Little Work' share the respective classes with the College pupils. They are given places according to this arrangement. The 'Little Work' boys, however, get their prizes separately the evening before the College prize-giving. But they will not be in competition with their fellow (College) students. It will be made known on prize-giving day that the 'Little Work' students were placed outside the competition (for prize-giving).

18730419X

Council Meeting, April 19, 1873

In attendance: Rev. Fr. Superior, Fathers Vandel, Piperon, Jouët, Albert, Miniot.

Admission of boys: work on grammar, translations.

It was decided that candidates for the 'Little Work' should, before admission: (1) offer a piece of work in French grammar or parsing; (2) present a translation and a topic in keeping with the student's ability.

A boy held back for a fuller report.

The file on little Barlé de la Richerie was then considered.

Further information was requested about the health of this boy.

The Italian youngsters' admission left over until August.

The two small Italian boys accepted at Easter should not be admitted before the Summer holidays. Meanwhile, they will study French and Latin and there will be the opportunity to see how things are progressing.

A young seminarian presents himself to the 'Little Work'.

From the Chartreux (minor) seminary, near Puy, a young seminarian has presented himself to the 'Little Work'. Information will be sought about him.

Lanctin.

It was decided that Lanctin would be accepted in the Novitiate during the summer holidays if he continues to prove satisfactory. One can offer some financial support to his mother.

Council Meeting, April 23, 1873

In attendance: Rev. Father Superior, Fathers Piperon, Vandel, Albert, Jouët, Georgelin.

Brother Lavalie's application for vows.

The Council found no serious reason against admitting the very well regarded Brother Lavalie to vows. Meanwhile, it is best to wait until a Council meeting is attended by the Novice master before reaching a decision in favour of, or against, admission.

The Novitiate Régime.

Father Vandel gave it as his opinion that the Novitiate régime was too harsh, particularly during Lent with respect to meals; he expressed the wish that things should be eased. The Novices' health was at stake. The proposal was unanimously accepted.

The same Father would like to see the Novices' soutanes, while keeping within the strict boundaries of poverty, becoming more obviously neat and tidy.

Youth Work: Renting a house.

Fr. Albert, director of youth work, suggested that a house be rented for this purpose... The Council postponed the proposed acquisition and agreed that a house could be rented (sic) to get the work under way.

The possibility of a foundation in the Toronto diocese.

The Archbishop of Toronto (Canada) having written to Fr. Superior requesting the Missionaries to take over a parish in his diocese and other work later, a fairly lengthy discussion followed. The Council thought that it might be best to send a Missionary to Canada to assess the situation and meet the Archbishop of Toronto. Fathers Chappel and Ledoux were suggested for this initiative, but it was left for another Council meeting to deal directly with this project.

1. The Council again brought up the American project. It was agreed to expedite matters; that information be sought about the possibility of a free passage (on a boat); it was agreed to ask someone to look into the matter.

The Benjamin Grom Affair.

2. As Benjamin Grom, a pupil at the 'Little Work', did not seem to be in good health, the doctors at Issoudun and Chezal-Benoît were consulted. Their reports were somewhat at variance, but taking into consideration Dr. Grandmaison's assessment, and having also in mind the loss entailed in the departure of a youngster of excellent quality, the impact on his family or on the morale of the 'Little Work', it was decided to wait longer before making any decision about the departure of this boy, giving more mature thought to the matter.

I received with the greatest delight, your letter, dear child. I am pleased to hear that your health has improved; I hope that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will succeed in restoring it. My own health, thank God, has improved, also that of Sister Louise de Montaignac. I am here, since yesterday, at Montluçon and return to Issoudun tomorrow. Our sisters at Montluçon are well and the Third Order, due to the blessings of the Sacred Heart, is getting on quite well and begins to flourish more and more. I am overjoyed at the peace your soul enjoys. I wish that the good priest to whom you refer, be an emissary of the Sacred Heart for your dear and well regarded group. We continuously pray for you and your undertakings. You mention sending on a

In attendance: Fr. Superior, Fathers Piperon, Guyot, Vandel, Jouët, Albert, Ledoux, Miniot, Bazire, Marie.

The 'Little Work'; the bigger boys moved to Saint-Gérard.

1. The 'Little Work'. Having in mind the decision taken earlier to transfer to the Saint-Gérard Novitiate the older pupils of the 'Little Work', it was now also decided that the second, third and fourth years should leave Chezal-Benoît and finish their education at Saint-Gérard. The question of the professed either at Saint-Gérard or Chezal-Benoît, briefly touched on, was postponed for a more opportune moment.

Uniformity of dress: the Band, the Barrette.

2. Discussions took place as to whether or not the band (a large belt about the waist) should continue to be worn, and if so whether always and everywhere. It was decided that in the diocese where it was still customary to wear it the Missionaries should likewise do so, even indoors. In other dioceses one adapts to the diocesan customs.

Barrette: Everyone must have a barrette with three peaks only and use it for Mass. The tufts should be replaced by simple buttons. Careful attention should be paid to uniformity of dress.

Devotion to the Sacred Heart.

3. Since devotion to the adorable Heart of Our Lord is the principal devotion of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, it is appropriate that besides the general spirit animating all the Congregation's members, there should also be common exercises in honour of the Sacred Heart.

Perpetual Cult.

It was therefore decided in the first instance that in the different houses of the Congregation a perpetual cult of the Sacred Heart should be set up such as is carried out in the Novitiate. Every weekday there will be adoration in the name of the Congregation within the different communities giving homage to the Sacred Heart through prayers, work and all other activities.

Gracious Reparation.

After shortened evening prayers he who will be chosen as 'adorer', or someone called upon to do so, will read a reparation prayer to the Sacred Heart before the Blessed Sacrament. He will for this ceremony be vested in a surplice and hold a candle. It is agreed that evening prayer should be shortened to make this exercise feasible as often as possible.

Abridged Prayer.

This prayer shall take the form of Adorable Heart of Jesus, inexhaustible source of all graces etc.

Chanting the Ave Verum.

The Ave Verum should be sung as often as it is convenient to do so. After the 'Gracious Reparation' itself, and after its linking with the Cor Jesus Sacratissimum, etc., it is to be omitted only when it cannot be satisfactorily sung.

Examination of conscience and preparation for prayers.

From now on the examination of conscience and prayer preparation will take place in one's room and be a quarter of an hour's duration. The ringing of a bell will coincide with the end of these exercises. The subject-matter of morning prayer will no longer be read in common. The 'Remember You' (prayer of Our Lady) will be said before recreation from now on.

Morning prayer will also be abridged, taking the form of the Adorable Heart prayer and the litanies of the Sacred Heart.

The 'Remember You' to Our Lady, recited by the community after midday and evening prayer, will be recited each day before the statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart prior to recreation. This prayer will replace the Sub tuum to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

The Chapter of Faults.

This will take place each Friday at the appointed time in the community room before the prayer and the Ave Verum, carried out in keeping with the Novitiate regulations and following the Constitutions.

College Personnel.

Fr. Marie at this stage presented his plans for the college personnel over the coming year.

Novitiate at Saint-Gérard.

Fr. Guyot, despite his pleas to be discharged from this office, was unanimously confirmed as Novice Master, and the Novitiate will be changed from Montluçon to Saint-Gérard, while following his vows Brother Morisseau will be made available as Socius. Fr. Ledoux will be teaching in that section of the 'Little Work' which will be moved to Saint-Gérard.

Postulants.

Fr. Superior read a letter from Fr. Moreau, a 61-year-old parish priest in the archdiocese of Bourges. It was agreed that this worthy priest should come and spend a few days at the Sacred Heart (Issoudun) the better to make his acquaintance and assess his intentions. Fr. E. Darbon, a young Marseilles teacher, was also discussed. He should also come along and afterwards he will be assessed. The Superior then mentioned Fr. de Mondion who sometime before had enquired about entering. If he renews his request he will be admitted.

The vows of Brothers Lavialle and Morisseau.

Brother Lavialle was again put forward for vows, but did not receive the requisite majority vote and, accordingly, a decision about him was postponed to the September retreat. Brother Morisseau was unanimously admitted to vows. The next retreat is to take place on Monday, September 9.

Issoudun, August 12, 1873

My Lord,

Under the patronage of the Archbishop of Bourges who blesses and approves so paternally our plans, we invite Your Lordship to the forthcoming Catholic pilgrimage at Issoudun on September 8. This striking religious exercise, of which Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is the object, could not happen at a more propitious time.

If France at last is projecting itself towards the Sacred Heart of Jesus, is it not Mary who has inspired this trust, and if the Heart of Jesus is being glorified today, does not some of this glory redound on his Mother, on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart?

We attach to this letter, My Lord, the circular from the pilgrimage committee with a petition to Your Lordship to bless, wholeheartedly, this undertaking.

We shall be happy, My Lord, if you can grace with your presence the solemnities of this feast and accept the modest hospitality which we shall make it our pleasure to offer you.

Please accept, My Lord, my deep regards, as I have the honour to be your humble servant.

J. Chevalier, MSC.Sup.

PS: The railway network, Paris-Lyons, in the document forwarded to us, and which we are pleased to send on to you, grants a 50% reduction in the Auxerre-Paris return to a group of 100 to 150 pilgrims. Would you allow us, My Lord, to organize this departure? And if this proposal seems a possibility to Your Lordship, we would willingly and most graciously accept the individual you would commend to us as head of the committee.

'Little Work'. Dismissal of some pupils.

On the advice of Frs. Miniot and Ledoux reporting on the 'Little Work' pupils, it was decided to dismiss several pupils as they gave no guarantee of a likely vocation in the future. These were Guéneq, Estournet, Bonnet, Andrion. It was decided to inform the families of the first-named three, and to await a little longer for a decision about sending Andrion away as his health causes concern. This youngster suffers from an ailment which needs to be checked.

Council Meeting, September 18, 1873

In attendance: Very Rev. Fr. Superior, Fathers Piperon, Vandel, Jouët, Georgelin and Albert.

The Saint-Gérard-le-Puy House.

The whole of this meeting was given over to the organization of the Saint-Gérard-le-Puy house.

Naming of a Superior.

Fr. Guyot was chosen as Superior of the Saint-Gérard house. It will consist of Novitiate, Scholasticate, and those students of the 'Little Work' moved there from Chezal-Benoît. Fr. Guyot will also be Novice Master.

Assistant: Father Ledoux.

He will have Father Ledoux as his assistant whose role is that of replacing when absent the Superior in the general running of the house, giving permission in normal instances, taking responsibility for the different exercises. His jurisdiction does not extend to the Novitiate where the Father Socius alone exercises authority in the absence of the Novice Master.

The Council (administrative) of the Saint-Gérard house will consist of: (1) Fr. Guyot, the Superior; (2) Fr. Ledoux, his assistant; Fr. Morisseau, the Novice Master's Socius. Fr. Sauret will join the foregoing if circumstances allow for him to stay on at Saint-Gérard. The administration will keep a record of its discussions, deal with the spiritual and material concerns of the house according to the Constitution and report on the more important issues to the Issoudun Council.

Confessors.

The normal confessors at the Novitiate will be the Novice Master and his assistant alone.

Fr. Morisseau, Socius.

Fr. Morisseau is named the Novice Master's Socius. The Superior and the priests in the house will be the confessors in the Scholasticate and 'Little Work'. The Novices will live completely apart from both the Scholastics and the 'Little Work' students except in the dining room and at common exercises in the chapel.

The Scholastics can take their recreation with the 'Little Work' boys and go walking with them. They may also be used as supervisors during study hours.

Bursary.

Fr. Morisseau is the Saint-Gérard house's Bursar.

Studies.

The organization of studies both for the Scholastics and the 'Little Work' pupils is left to the discretion of the Superior and his Council who will draw up a study programme and decide the books to be used by the students. For the forthcoming year there need only be one theology course and one course in the humanities.

Preaching.

The Saint-Gérard Superior may, if he deems it opportune, authorize the priests to give an occasional sermon. But in the case of a preaching sequence he cannot do so without the permission of the Reverend Father Superior General.

Devotion exercises of the Priests.

The professed who live in the Saint-Gérard house must make the exercises laid down by the rules in common, their duties otherwise permitting.

Chapel.

The chapel will be used by the Novices, Scholastics and pupils of the 'Little Work'. The Novices will there undertake the exercises proper to the Novitiate.

Scholastic Spiritual Exercises.

The boys will attend the community Mass and Prayer. The scholastics will take part in those spiritual exercises of the Novitiate which are compatible with their studies.

The Chezal-Benoît 'Little Work'.

At the meeting the Chezal-Benoît 'Little Work' was also discussed, as well as putting forward Brothers Cramaille and Batard for orders, and the Sacred Heart section of the school. The Council decided that the 'Little Work' section of the school should be entirely separated from the College, even for classes, and that as of now Fr. Miniot and Brother Cramaille would remain in charge of the younger children's classes.

Brother Cramaille called to the sub-diaconate.

The Council agreed to put forward Brother Cramaille for ordination to the sub-diaconate at the forthcoming ordinations.

Brother Batard.

Brother Batard is called to the priesthood. The Council was of the view, given that he should be given the opportunity to prepare himself more seriously and concretely for this sublime ministry, that he should spend a month at Saint-Gérard.

Fr. Chatain: Teacher in the MSC section of the school.

Boys approved of for entry to the MSC section of the school.

Three youngsters, Durand, Ferrager, Paviau, were put forward by Fr. Albert for admission (to the college - Maîtrise - as distinct from the Petite Oeuvre). The Council supported this proposal.

Financial Proposal (in favour of the MSCs) by the Bishop of Moulins.

The Superior made it known to the Council that the Bishop of Moulins had a plan to come to the financial aid of the Novitiate and the Saint-Gérard house. His Lordship suggests that each priest, or several from the house, should be given by each parish priest a stipend of 300 francs for parish parochial work. Moreover, those so engaged would be obliged at Easter time each year to spend 19 days in the parish where they were engaged. The Council agreed in principle to accept the Bishop of Moulins' magnanimous offer, leaving it to the Saint-Gérard Superior to decide according to the circumstances whether or not to put this proposal into practice.

The Issoudun House.

A lengthy discussion took place about the needs of the Issoudun house, and its lack of personnel. Different suggestions were put forward. A decision was left over until the next meeting.

Dear Father,

I am amazed that I have had no word from Issoudun. I wrote on Tuesday to Father Piperon to send to Saint-Gérard as many iron beds as there are youngsters at the 'Little Work' who have gone there. Fr. Guyot writes today and informs me that Fr. Piperon is sending nothing on to him because each house must be self-sufficient. In my view there can be only one authority in a society: from the moment a Superior orders something reasonable, it should be obeyed. Fr. Guyot, to whom I wrote saying the beds would be sent on to him, on receipt of Fr. Piperon's letter, said to me: "There are, then, two authorities in your society!" This way of acting is truly very regrettable. Father Piperon must be aware that Fr. Guyot does not have the money and that if he buys beds it is we who must meet the cost. For the rest, I have more than enough problems without having additional ones created for me.

Fr. Albert will make a letter from Fr. Vernoux available for you to read; you will be able to sum up his character. It is likely that I shall return on Friday to welcome the Arras pilgrimage. (It arrived on Friday, October 3, at 11.40pm.) Cheerio, dear friend; take it easy and look after yourself. All good wishes to the kind confrères. Totus tibi in CJ.

Dear Father,

I am pleased to inform you that I received today the release of the mortgage arising from the appeal against Madame de Saint-Gérard concerning the property she sold to you. In consequence there is no longer any obstacle which would hold back closure on the price agreed with you by the lady in your acquisition of the property. This transaction, as far as you are concerned, must be signed by one of those involved in the transaction, and I suggest that you nominate Father Jouët, who already signed the required form (for the sale), to bring the matter to an end. The document is ready and it only needs to be looked over and all formalities will be completed in no time.

With my good wishes and highest regards.

I am pleased, dear child, to have your letter. News of you is always a joy to me. You do not overlook all that is strong and sacred between father and child, the missionary and the superior. Your being at a distance grieves me. You are a long way from Issoudun to which I am always hoping you will return. I continue to believe so, in spite of everything. The day will come, I like to think, when you will set yourself up near the sanctuary you like so much. Always continue, now more than ever, to be a missionary (a promoter of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart). I greatly regret that your health and that of your dear little Raoul compel you to make such a sacrifice (the decision to take Raoul away from Chezal-Benoît College). Better times will come and Raoul, perhaps, will return to Chezal-Benoît.

Cheerio, dear good little missionary. I bless you and am wholly yours in the Lord.

Issoudun

November 1, 1873

Dear Father,

I thank you for your good and agreeably open sharing. You may rest assured about my discretion. The tempted condition in which you find yourself should not be a surprise to you. It is the way things are: St. Anthony, St. Jerome, and so many others have been tempted more than you have. Quia acceptus eras Deo, necesse fuit ut tentatio probaret te (Tob. XII, v.13.) - Accedens ad servitutum Dei, praepara animam tuam ad tentationem (Eccli. C.2, v.1.) – Beatus vir qui suffert tentationem (quoniam) cum probatus fuerit, accipiet coronam vitae (S. Jac. 1, v.12.) – Qui tentatus non est, qualia scit? – Qui non est tentatus quid scit? (Eccli. 34, v. 11 & 9.)

The reader is referred to the appropriate English presentations of these Scriptural passages in the accepted biblical translations.

What should reassure you is that grace is never wanting to you. The Holy Spirit gives you the assurance: (Deus) faciet etiam cum tentatione proventum, ut possitis sustinere, (quia) fidelis Deus est, qui non patietur vos tentari supra id quod potestis ... (1 Cor. X, v.13.) You are wrong to think that you would be more tempted or more precariously placed at the presbytery than at the Sacred Heart. I certainly can provide evidence to the contrary. You have a hundred times more temptations than at the presbytery and less of an armoury to defend yourself. Your life at the Sacred Heart is so much up in the air, so little structured, so pulled this way and that, so self-absorbed that you no longer have any time for prayer, the rule, or for reflection. There you have the real reason for your problems. Your life at the presbytery would be quite different. There is urgent need, in every respect, for you to get away from this environment.

2. You have forgotten, so you say, almost all of your theology and other studies. Nevertheless, you are to the forefront at the Sacred Heart and required to face up to everything. And so it is! At the presbytery you need less knowledge since you are less to the forefront and you would have so much more time to study.

3. Your character, so you go on to say, is not very docile, and so I have noted. In all candour, I can tell you that you haven't always edified me. It is a lack of virtue. You must try to check yourself.

While on retreat I suggest that you meditate on the obedience chapter in our Constitutions and on the spirit which should inspire us. I identify this shortcoming to your much-too-active lifestyle and not being sufficiently recollected. Furthermore, I notice in you a very great sensitivity traceable to that pride which you do not combat nearly enough. From all this come activities or attitudes which the Heart of Jesus would not approve of. Your temptations could very well be the net result of your pride...

Accordingly, in this respect, I do not see how you would have any more to put up with at the presbytery than at the Sacred Heart. The contrary, so it seems evident to me, would be the case since you would have less responsibilities and that itself would mean less blame to encounter.

4. You are wrong in thinking that you will have less community life. Please tell me how much you have at the moment at the Sacred Heart in your present role. From morning to night you are in perpetual motion. Community life is not for you or scarcely so. I speak from experience; at the presbytery you would be in a calmer atmosphere and more by yourself. There will be three of you in ministry, each one with his own week of responsibility under Fr. Mayet who is in overall charge. Spread over three weeks you will have fifteen rest days (!) and during your working week you will live more a community life than at the Sacred Heart, being less subjected to temptation and fewer occasions to succumb. Otherwise, dear friend, if, having had some months' experience, my expectations for you are not being fulfilled, then you will return to the Sacred Heart. At least we shall have done what prudence and the general interest of our work dictated.

In conclusion, I am bound to say to you that I am not imposing my will on you. Pray, think about it, and on your return we shall discuss it all and share our views together.

Cheerio, dear Father. Have a good retreat; you need it. Totus tibi in CJ.

J. Chevalier.

In the margin Chevalier went on to finish his letter.

If I judge on what has otherwise come to my ears, you have been imprudent, indeed unfair in views expressed to outsiders, and also with words and advice spoken in the Confessional. As for responsibility in the presbytery, you will have none; do not be frightened. You have only to follow the way marked out for you.

To Father Charles Piperon, MSC, on retreat at Saint-Gérard-le-Puy.

Issoudun
November 6, 1983

Dear Father,

You attribute to my sentence more importance than it deserves. I beg you to calm down and, faced with my explanation, both uncomplicated and supportive, you will see that your problem is the devil's work.

I wrote: "If I judge on what has otherwise come to my ears..." But, good friend, God is my witness that I made no such judgement. Nowadays I have had more than enough experience of women's spitefulness, distorted judgements, their preening of themselves, their duplicity which the devil makes use of to stir up ill-feeling, not to give credence at first hand to their words.

I mentioned this to you, without associating any significance to it, so that you could gather how vulnerable we are when our words, our feelings, even our actions from the best of motives, are misrepresented, misinterpreted and unfairly judged. You are wrong to complain, dear Father, because I do not accuse you of anything and I never had intention of doing so. The thrust and tone of your letters are especially painful for me, all the more so when I was far from thinking what you presume. I do not blame you because I am aware that it's not at all your fault. It is the devil who alone has stirred up this storm. So I forgive and pardon you most wholeheartedly. The good Lord overwhelms me with all kinds of bitterness and covers me with all kinds of humiliation. Fare from complaining, I bless Him for it.

I pray the divine Heart of Jesus, who knows what it is like to experience suffering, to spread our varied merits, if it is possible, among our dear community, on all its members and its works and give me, at least, a little repose in heaven. Your thinking about the Chartreuse is, you must know, like a two-edged sword. I am not repeating for you here what I have already said to you about this issue. I pray to God that you will be delivered from this temptation. You can without creating any inconvenience prolong your retreat as you wish.

Cheerio, dear friend. Pray for me just as I pray for you and return to us made holy.

Totus tibi in CJ.

Council Meeting, November 12, 1873

In attendance Very Rev. Fr. Superior, Fathers Piperon, Vandel, Jouët, Georgelin and Albert.

The Superior read a request from Fr. Ledoux seeking authorization to open the boys' correspondence, and also a letter from the Novice Master on the same issue. The Council decided that the youngsters' letters should be handed unsealed by them to their director who will hand them on without sealing them to the Superior of the house. The youngsters have always the right to close letters themselves when sent to the major Superiors such as the Superior General, his assistants, the director of the 'Little Work' and the Superior of the house.

Secondly, it was decided that Fr. Piperon shall, from now on, exercise a curate's role in the parish, and in his absence replace the parish priest for church ceremonies, the different offices and work of the ministry. Fr. Vandel, Assistant General to the Very Reverend Superior, will in his absence preside at all the offices and ceremonies. Fr. Jouët will replace him (Chevalier) administratively and granting permission. From now on at the beginning of meals in the presbytery (parish) some Scripture passages will be read, and after the meal there will be a reading from the Imitation. Everything possible should be done to have readings for the duration of the meal.

The laundry at the Sacred Heart and presbytery will be done from now on at the presbytery by the domestics.

Council Meeting, November 21, 1873.

In attendance Very Rev. Fr. Superior, Fathers Piperon, Vandel, Georgelin, Albert.

Purpose of the Meeting:

1. Blue Rosary Beads

1. This Council meeting was called to deal effectively with the Misses Ledoux in reference to the item in the November Annals about the so-called blue rosary beads of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

2. To consider if there was an obligation to provide Madame Ledoux with a pension, Fr. Ledoux (her son) having requested this pension for his mother. Given the pressing appeal of Fr. Ledoux with reference to the notice in the November Annals about the blue rosary beads, something looked upon by the Misses Ledoux as very prejudiced against them, the Council decided, having listened to the lively pleas of Fr. Ledoux, to place the following notification in the next issue of the Annals: "We made known in the last issue of the Annals that we did not have the blue rosary beads so-called of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, but they can be purchased for two francs fifty from the Misses Ledoux, Place du Sacré-Coeur, Issoudun, Indre."

It was also agreed to contact the Misses Ledoux and pass on the following recommendation to them: "When naming their house the Misses Ledoux will avoid any wording calculated to cause confusion, and in particular such a name as Pilgrim House. Other than the blue rosaries they cannot sell any thing connected with the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

2. The granting of an allowance to Madame Ledoux.

Father Ledoux, having made known to the Rev. Father Superior that his mother badly needed a living allowance, and since neither his brothers or sisters were in a position to provide such an allowance, asked the Superior (Chevalier) to make an allowance amounting to 900 francs available to his mother. The Council agreed to make this allowance available, leaving it to the Rev. Father Superior to stipulate the number of years this pension would be forthcoming.

I gather with pleasure that your retreat is going very well. May the Lord be praised! Do not over-tire yourself and look after yourself well. While undertaking those lectures in Paris, and with the meetings you intend to take on, be careful and do not tire yourself out too much. Thank the kind sisters from me for their care of you and total support. Give them our good wishes. While shopping pay a visit to Mr. Vaillant, a Paris bailiff at 68 rue de Rivoli. Ask him to furnish you with details of the Daniel and Raffl transaction which I returned to him (it had to do with the sale of statues). Daniel is most pretentious when presenting himself and tries unfairly to put down Raffl. Try to bring this issue to an end without delay in accordance with the solution I intimated to Mr. Vaillant, and, if possible, come back with the answer. Fr. Ledoux is at Issoudun, acting as his sisters' attorney, etc. (Defending their plan to found a religious community against Chevalier's wishes. See above, Chevalier's revealing letter to the Archbishop of Bourges. Fr. Ledoux would shortly leave the Society.) He creates serious problems for us. I am sure that he will leave the Society. Pray and have prayers said.

Dear Countess,

I did not see the Montaigu family on the pilgrimage. I do not know them in any way, and my confrères have no knowledge of them either. There is a young girl of my acquaintance who would, perhaps, meet your requirements, Mademoiselle Jeane de Bryas, aged 19 or 20; she is very pleasant and would have at least 500,000 francs (1,600,000 euros) as a dowry and, maybe, a million one day. Her brother, the Marquis of Bryas, hasn't yet married; his sister married the Count of Castries.

The private tutor (obviously a priest) you mention can undertake 30 Masses at 1 franc 125 centimes, for our intentions, in all 37.50 francs (120 euros), which I shall be obliged to you for giving to him and we in turn will repay you.

I have written again to Sister de Montaignac and this time, I hope, with complete success.

I am pleased to gather, Countess, that your health has improved, and the health of your dear little children leaves nothing to be desired. It is a blessing I always call down on you and yours. You are aware that the number of radical counsellors in Issoudun has now become a very large majority. It is to be greatly regretted! Please accept, Madame, my respectful good wishes.

Postulants: The Novitiate priests must seek the necessary informative details.

The object of this meeting was a perusal of the Constitutions.

It was agreed that before the novices are admitted, the Novitiate priests would be responsible for the latest details about the candidates and would acquaint themselves with the dossiers in Issoudun so that the Council would be in a position to consider the postulants' acceptance.

Council Meeting, December 28, 1873

In attendance: Very Rev. Fr. Superior, Fathers Piperon, Vandel, Jouët, Albert, Guyot, Novice Master, Miniot, Durin, Bazire.

The Novitiate will last two years.

It was decided at this meeting:

1. that from now on the Novitiate would be of two years' duration until such time as the Sacred Congregation will have definitively approved the Constitutions.

Special Habit: white with a red heart.

2. It was agreed also that permission would be sought to wear a religious habit. It would be in white wool with a red heart on the chest. If the Sacred Congregation agrees with this decision, the General Chapter will judge on the opportune time for its introduction.

The College issue (Chezal-Benoît): Ending of the Lease.

3. The Chezal-Benoît College issue was then discussed. It was asked if we would benefit from ending the lease agreed on with His Grace for a five-year period, or if we should continue with the present leasing arrangements? It was unanimously agreed, though for different reasons, that the lease be ended this very year because there is the opportunity to do so. It was agreed as well to send a communication to the Archbishop which will bring the following matters to his attention:

1. the occasional hardship for the Congregation when the lease agreed on is too burdensome;
2. the serious issues occasioned on the one side through lack of numbers, and on the other by the demands of the College on the Congregation.

If His Grace wishes to hand over the direction of the College to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, a new lease should not be agreed on, and the administration of the College is to be undertaken for one year only.

Another Deliberation, January 20, 1874

It was, after prolonged debate, decided that the Archbishop of Bourges should not be caused any displeasure through (our) refusal to undertake the administration of the Chezal-Benoît College, but that, nevertheless, it should no longer be the Community's responsibility.

2. There followed a discussion on the Saint Gérard Novitiate. The Novice Master and Bursar sought authorization to install a pump in the well of the house. Permission was granted.

Lease of land as vineyard

Discussion centred on this house's (Chezal-Benoît) vineyard. It was agreed that it would be better to lease out the vineyard for a fixed fee by sharing out half the work during the harvesting.

The Chezal-Benoît College.

3. The issue of the College was also introduced. It was asked whether it would be acceptable if the Archbishop showed a keen desire for the missionaries to remain in charge of the College's administration.

Conditions to be put forward for a new agreement.

After prolonged discussion it was decided not to disappoint His Grace by disengaging from all College administration, but that it should, nevertheless, no longer be the Community's responsibility. His Grace, or more particularly the diocese, should once more undertake responsibility for the financial administration of the College. It would appoint a Bursar to act in its name, and make available teachers needed for the proper direction of studies and for discipline. The Missionaries would be willing to provide His Grace, as proof of their good-will, with those colleagues who are already teaching there. They do not look for any special treatment other than board and lodging for their confrères,

The Berry Religious Week.

Life of St. Vincent, patron of vineyard owners, taken from the acts of his martyrdom (AD304) by Fr. Chevalier, MSC, parish priest of Issoudun. 16 pages in 8.

We thought we should provide from this brochure the dedication and the little chapter entitled: Why is Saint Vincent the patron of vineyard owners?

TO THE VINEYARD OWNERS

I have lived in your midst, my friends for twenty years; I can appreciate your regard for your glorious patron, St. Vincent. As his admirable life is one of the most attractive, I thought that it might please you if I brought it to your attention. You will read it with great interest. I am all the more pleased to place it before you since it can only strengthen the bonds of togetherness which exist between priest and vineyard owner. I don't know, my friends, if it has ever occurred to you that there is between yourselves and us more than one connection which tends to unite us.

You cultivate with care, intelligence and courage the vine of the earth; it is a noble occupation which Providence has confided to you. The Priest himself is called by God to cultivate his vines, that is to say souls created by Him and redeemed by Jesus Christ – ego plantavi te vineam electam, ego elegi vos – Ite et vos in vineam. There is our mission. But what happens to the produce of your vineyard when it is taken into his hands by the priest while at the altar? He takes and consecrates it, and the wine you provide for the holy sacrifice of the Mass is changed into the Saviour's blood. You can gather, my friends, that the priest and vineyard owner are destined to be united and to love each other in Jesus Christ.

Hurrah for St. Vincent!

Council Meeting, February 11, 1874

In attendance the Very Rev. Father Superior, Fathers Piperon, Vandel, Jouët, Albert and Georgelin.

The Superior placed before the Council Fr. Albert's request to have authorization to be no longer involved in visits to the sick and other duties incumbent on the curate for the week, so that he can devote himself more completely to his Centre for Youth. He is prepared to be confessor for all boys from the age of nine to First Communion, assistant at solemn and semi-solemn funerals, sing in his turn Sunday Mass and also celebrate in his turn the Military Mass. His proposal was unanimously accepted.

A letter to different bishops commending favourably the Institute.

Undated - likely early March 1874

My Lord,

Our little Society began on December 8, 1854, a very special day. (Chevalier has in mind the December 18, 1854 definition of Our Lady's Immaculate Conception.) In 1860 Pius IX was pleased to bless it. He recognized in it a special orientation towards action, and the splendid Pope said to us at that time: "Yes, apostles of the Sacred Heart of Our Lord are needed; increase and multiply yourselves. The Church and Society do not have hope other than in the Heart of Jesus. It is He who will cure all our ills. I am happy, before I die, to give your Institute canonical approval."

In 1869, Pius the Ninth's prediction began to be fulfilled; we obtained...;

Last year we were in Rome and the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars advised us to undertake the necessary measures for definitive approval of our Congregation. Pius IX, whom we had the honour to meet at this time, seemed pleased with this news (of definitive approval). He wished to consider our little Society as if it was his own, willing to be considered the founder and first Superior.

We presume to associate ourselves with the Archbishop of Bourges in petitioning Your Lordship to support us with a commendatory letter to the Holy See, an act of kindness for which we are greatly appreciative. May I enclose with this letter, which I am honoured to write to you, a summary of our work and Constitutions.

Please accept my respectful good wishes and kind regards.

To His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, March 15, 1874

Your Grace,

How can we express our appreciation? Your kindness to us has no limits to it. One can see that your great-heartedness shaped by the Heart of Jesus draws thence its inspiration. Your letter of recommendation to the Holy See (in reply to the commendatory letter in Latin, March 10, 1874) which Your Grace has forwarded to us is yet another instance. It is full of warmth, devotedness, and of a truly sublime delicacy. Indeed! Allow me, Your Grace, to acknowledge you also with the Holy Father as our founder and dearly loved Superior. Our Society owes everything to you. It is with your support, wholehearted good-will and fruitful impact that, benefiting from your wise and enlightening advice, the Society came out of its shell, so to say, when a thousand obstacles seemed likely to snuff it out, and began life in earnest, so pitching its roots in the sacred soil of the Church that it is now about to become a credible Institution.

The Institution has every right to acknowledge you, not only as benefactor but also as Father. This thought will remain both consoling and inspiring in the middle of its trials. May its children, who are yours also, merit by their virtues to be your glory, joy and crown.

We have already received 15 commendatory letters. I do not think I can go to Rome before the end of Easter. I have the honour to send a copy to Your Grace of the letter (see above) I sent to the bishops. Before I visit Rome I shall go to Bourges for your special blessing and any requests you might wish to ask.

With my most humble and respectful regards.

To Madame Taulier.

I was delighted, dear child, to get your news. You are, then, definitively settled down, and a long way from Issoudun! I would never have believed it. Accordingly may Our Lady of the Sacred Heart bless and protect you and all yours. Always be a good missionary. It pleases me to note that your zeal is not sterile. And Mr. Taulier, has he done his Easter duty? Your silence on this issue makes me fear... If ever I happen to be travelling in your area, you can be assured that I shall be paying you a visit.

Farewell, dear child. I bless you and declare that I am wholly yours in the Lord.

Contract between Fr. Chevalier and Mr. Blanchard.

Between the undersigned:

On one side Reverend Father Jules Chevalier, Superior General of the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and on the other Mr. Jules Blanchard, sculptor, with an address at rue Madame, 54, Paris, the following conditions agreed on:

1. Mr. Jules Blanchard undertakes to make in Carrara marble a statue of St. Joseph, 1.6 metres in height, for 8,000 francs (26,500 euros roughly) without plinth.
2. St. Joseph will be shown holding in his arms the Infant Jesus indicating his heart with one hand and in the other hand he will hold a lily. The plinth will be half-sphere, a little flattened in order to take the feet of the statue. The tiara and the keys, symbolizing the Church, will be placed at the base of the statue as a sign of St. Joseph's patronage of the Catholic Church.
3. Before the work begins Mr. Blanchard will provide Rev. Father Chevalier with an outline before it definitely gets underway. From this outline, the expenses being added to those of the statue, a plaster-cast model of the same size as the statue will be made and become the property of Rev. Fr. Chevalier.
4. Rev. Fr. Chevalier reserves the right to have the model in place looked over by his delegate and have any changes considered appropriate made.
5. Following the definitive choice of the model, Reverend Father Chevalier will alone have photographic rights, and make smaller statues in whatever material he chooses following the completion of the statue in marble.
6. He (Chevalier) will also be granted a sum of 1,000 francs for every marble statue of the same proportions as the original, and the carrying out of such work will be undertaken by Mr. Blanchard.
7. The time agreed on for the production of the statue is fixed for 9 months following from the acceptance of the model, which last will nearly take four months or so. Mr. Blanchard will supervise and direct the packaging, the posting, the transport and the manner in which the expenses will be charged to Rev. Fr. Chevalier.

On the other side, Reverend Father Chevalier agrees to pay Mr. Blanchard as costs of the statue:

2,000 francs following the completion of the plaster model
1,500 francs following the purchase of the marble at the workshop
1,500 francs by January 1st, 1875
3,000 francs on receipt of the statue

Made together in good faith.

With the signature of the contracting parties.

Haec nostra minima Societas, obtento divinae voluntatis signo, ortum habuit ipse die 6 Idus Decembris 1854, qua Sanctitas Vestra solemniter definivit Immaculatam B.M.V. Conceptionem.

Anno autem 1860, Sanctitas Vestra dignata est dictam Societatem benedicere, illiusque instituendae opportunitatem agnoscere his verbis: “Oui, il faut des apôtres du Sacré-Cœur de Notre-Seigneur; croissez et multipliez-vous. L’Eglise et la Société n’ont d’espérance que dans le Sacré-Cœur de Jésus. C’est lui qui guérira tous nos maux. Je serais heureux de donner à votre Institut l’approbation canonique.

Ex praedictis et decreto supra memorato, confidimus venisse horam qua Sanctitati Vestrae libeat spem hanc ad effectum perducere!

In audientia anni 1872, Sanctitas Vestra dignata est nostram hanc Societatem quasi Suam agnoscere, verique Fundatoris et primi superioris titulum accipere.

Et re quidam vera, ex ipsis Sanctitatis Vestrae verbis, remedium lugendorum praesentis aevi malorum hauriendum est ex ipso veritatis et caritatis fonte, quem indicavit ipse Dominus Noster Jesus Christus, B. Mariae Margaritae Alacoque, revelando thesauros misericordiae in Corde suo sacratissimo repositos.

Quomodo autem salvabit nos Cor Jesu, nisi audierint homines de Illo! Quomodo autem audient sine praedicante! Quomodo autem praedicabunt nisi mittantur! Necessae est ergo mittantur qui praedicent Cor Jesu, et ostendant in saeculis supervenientibus abundantes divitias gratiae Ejus in bonitate super nos.

Quod ut praestent Missionarii Sacratissimi Cordis Jesu, non solum omnibus apostolicis muneribus, gratis et pro Deo, indesinenter operam navant, spiritualia exercitia clericis et laicis subministrantes, omnia demum suscipientes officia quibus Cor Jesu sacratissimum cognosci, amari et digne coli possit; sed et solemne habent, ad populorum aedificationem, austerioris vitae et religiosae perfectionis exempla praestare.

Tria Religionis voto simplicia emittunt in perpetuum; sed post decennium, sponte quarto se obstringunt vota erga Sanctam Sedem, promittentes se ituros quocumque Summus Pontifex illos mittere voluerit.

Et jam habet Societas multa signa protectionis sacratissimi Cordis Jesu nec non et B.M.V. Immaculatae, quam colit sub nomine Reginae sacratissimi Cordis Jesu, vulgo (Notre-Dame du Sacré-Cœur.)

In domo principalis Exoldunensi (Issoudun) duodecim sunt sacerdotes, quorum alii parochiam ejusdem urbis regunt, alii, non solum supradictis ministeriis, sed et missionibus intra vel extra Galliam vacant, alii directioni scholae dictae (Maîtrise) allaborant. Ibidem sunt tres Fratres laici coadjutores.

In collegio demum Casalis sancti Benedicti, vulgo (Chezal-Benoît) septem degunt nostrae Societatis sacerdotes, educationi christianae centum et viginti puerorum intenti.

Noviciatus habetur in loco dicto (Saint Gérard) ubi mansit aliquandiu Pius VII, sanctae memoriae, in diocesi Molinensi. Ibi sunt, sub directione magistri Novitiorum et quorundam Religiosorum nostrae Societatis aliquot scholastici professi, novem tyrones ac decem alumni ad sacerdotium vocati.

Jam ad diversas regiones, praesertim in Bituricensi, Molinensi et Torontinensi in Canada dioecesibus, radices ac ramos extendit Societas, annuentibus, imo et petentibus Episcopis.

In dioecesi Americana, in civitate vulgo (Toronto), petente Reverendissimo Domino Archiepiscopo Lynch, et annuente Sanctitate Vestra, duo sunt ejusdem Societatis sacerdotes, cum Fratre Coadiutore, missionibus et educationi puerorum vacantes.

Neque profecto, ex quinquaginta datis aliunde testimonialibus litteris, ambigi potest quin apud omnes fere Antistites, sive Galliae sive aliarum gentium, benevolentiam et approbationem eximiis cum laudibus, obtinuerit Institutum nostrum.

Cum ingenti gaudio Missionarii sacratissimi Cordis Jesu missionibus, educationi christianae puerorum in collegiis, necnon et prudenti ac pia Clericorum institutioni se impendunt.

Presbyteres item saeculares, scientia, pietate ac amore erga Sacratissimum Cor Jesus conspicuos, in variis provinciis aggregatos habent. Per talem associationem promovetur renovatio Cleri saecularis, cultus et ardens amor sacratissimi Cordis Jesu, simul et Beatae Mariae V. Immaculatae, ad majorem utriusque gloriam.

Institutus est etiam quasi tertius ordo sacratissimi Cordis Jesu, cujus finis est, piis fidelibus utriusque sexus, qui, variis de causis, a statu perfectionis amplectendo prohibentur, media ad sui status perfectionem obtinendam, in devotione erga idem Sacratissimum Cor Jesus, suppeditare.

Tandem scholam clericalem et apostolicam, vulgo dictam Petite-Œuvre du Sacré-Cœur, benedicente Deo O.M., instituit minima haec nostra Societas. Ibi viginti et ultra adolescentes gratis admittuntur et ad vocationem nostram accurate informantur; ita ut numerus membrorum nostrae Societatis certissime quotannis crescat.

Quinam vero sint sensus Missionariorum a Sacro Corde Jesu erga sanctam Apostolicam Sedem, satis superque demonstrant Antistitum litterae testimoniales, et charitativa illa tributa quae quotannis, ad sublevandas Summi Pontificis necessitates, ultro impendunt.

Illam quam ex intimo corde erga Petri Sedem promunt devotionem atque reverentiam, operibus semper et factis volunt significare.

Quoad doctrinam, omnia tenent quae tenet S. Romana Ecclesia, semper et in omnibus Pontifici Infallibili credentes et obedientes.

Quoad bona temporalia, in Providentia confidit nostra Societas. Attamen, in Domino statuit quasdam habere possessiones, scilicet sexcenta fere francorum millia; et ex redditibus, necnon et eleemosynis christifidelium vivant ejus membra.

His de causis, plurimi Galliarum Episcopi, per litteras authenticas, hujus nostrae Societatis approbationem definitivam a Paternitate Vestra humiliter petunt; eamdem R.R.D.D. Archiepiscopus Bituricensis, le Prince de la Tour d’Auvergne, instantè postulat, et nos suppliciter et enixe flagitamus.

Issoudun, April 30, 1874

Your Grace,

Fr. Chappel had already informed us about Your Grace's return. We are glad to know that your health has not been affected by such a long journey. The Lord be praised! We pray continually for you. As well, I sent on your little ticket to Lyons to get back what Your Grace left behind, but I have had no reply. I would like to think that they sent it on to you directly.

I would beg Your Grace to be patient with dear Father Chappel! He is motivated by the best intentions. He will carry out what you judge best in the interests of our little Congregation which you so kindly boost and support.

I leave for Rome tomorrow. On my return, we shall do all we can to please Your Grace.

My confrères send their regards.

With all respectful good wishes, Your Grace,

To Sister Caterina Volpicelli, Naples.

Issoudun, May 7, 1874

I am in Rome for the past three days, dear child, and I cannot wait any longer to share with you my news and bring myself up to date with your health and the work for which you are responsible.

It is like an age since you wrote to me. What is the reason for this prolonged silence which I cannot at all understand? Sister de Montaignac, it is true, wrote to me some months ago that your venerable Archbishop no longer wanted you to be associated with the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart or the Montluçon Third Order. Is this true? What is the reason for it? Two years ago, when I was in Naples, nothing could anticipate this separation; rather the contrary. I cannot believe then that it is to.

My health, thank God, is very good. I should like to think that your own no longer leaves anything to be desired. Each day I pray for you and your fervent companions. I no longer hear any mention of Madame de Fusco. How is she? Remember me to her and give my good wishes to all these ladies, especially your aunt, the Marquess Amati, etc.

With my best wishes, dear child, in C.J. I send you my blessing.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I am at Santa-Birgitta, Piazza Farnese, Rome, until the end of May. I enclose with this letter some flowers I picked in the Pope's garden.

To His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges.

Rome, May 9, 1874

Your Grace,

Your blessing, if you please. We arrived in Rome on Monday morning (May 4, accompanied by Jouët) and on Tuesday the delegation for the pilgrimages' committee was received by the Holy Father. The address was lovely and Pius the IX's reply magnificent. Your Grace by now knows it all from the papers. It was a moving sight. Pius IX has not aged; his health is excellent. I left our dossier with the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Religious (for the approval of the MSC Society). We met with exceptional considerateness everywhere. Bishops de Luca and Vitelleschi received us most graciously thanks to Your Grace's letters. The approval should meet with no difficulty, so we were informed, but there is such a back-log at the Sacred Congregation that we were given to understand that we shall have to wait several months. What can be done?

The Our Lady of the Sacred Heart album is splendid and has a marvellous impact. In keeping with Your Grace's advice we had it bound in Paris. We shall present it to the Holy Father next week, most likely in a private audience.

Great problems, however, arise, Your Grace, with regard to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Both in Rome and for Rome, the Issoudun image (presentation) is not approved; another presentation is acceptable, that of the Overbeck Virgin (Frederick Overbeck, 1789-1869, head of Catholic schools in Germany) in whose hand is placed the Heart of Our Lord to make her an Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I am sending you a copy. As well, Your Grace, the Rome associates of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart have obtained a Brief from the Pope setting up a Rome Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart as an Archconfraternity for the world, with the rights of affiliation to it understood and approved. Its centre will be the Church of San Andrea-della-Valle.

The Brief, entitled Sodalitia Fidelium, was dated August 1873 and it made clear that the Roman Archconfraternity was judicially superior to the Issoudun Association erected by the Archdiocese of Bourges.

I have seen the new medals, the membership forms and the Archconfraternity statement, etc. We are ignoring all of this. It was when coming through Turin that it was brought to my attention, and then the parish priest of Osimo, hearing we were in Rome, came quickly to see us. (Don Sante Giorgetti, organizer of the Devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in Italy.)

What is to be deplored is that the Committee of the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, within which the lay-section is the more prominent, has, through its secretary, informed all the Italian Bishops that the Holy Father is leaving the Issoudun presentation (of Our Lady) there, where it is. All the new Associations of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart taking shape must get in contact with Rome and accept the new presentation as that favoured by the Pope.

As a consequence of this, there is a confused Association and this can only grow among people and one will not know what to abide by, with people thinking that the Issoudun model is disapproved of. From enquiries and getting to the bottom of things, I have traced the hand of the Bishop of Marseilles in all this (see above, passim, in relation to Jouët, Charles-Philippe Place, Bishop of Marseilles from 1866), and also Bishop Bertolini (curia official). His Eminence Don (Cardinal) Pitra (OSB, Cardinal since 1863) and Bishop Mercurelli, whom I have just met, very much regret this change and tell me that Your Grace alone, given the way things are, can help to remedy the situation by getting in touch with the Holy Father to make clear to him that a statue which has been crowned at Issoudun and in Holland, etc., and approved by His Holiness, which has more than 12 million associates spread across the entire world, known and venerated as presenting authentic devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, an image accepted by 5 or 600 bishops, venerated in upwards of 2,000 sanctuaries, cannot be banned or impeded in its circulation. The biggest objection is that nowhere does one find the child standing before his mother, who is also standing, and that this unusual posture has something unacceptable about it (this has always been the complaint of the Bishop of Marseilles).

If Your Grace could write a line to His Holiness or the Cardinal Vicar asking him to hold things over and await your shortly forthcoming arrival in Rome, Don (Cardinal) Pitra thinks that this would be adequate for the moment.

And, moreover, I think that as in the case of the fraternal Archconfraternity of the Sacred Heart of Jesus at Moulins and the Immaculate Heart of Mary at Our Lady of Victories, Paris, it should be the case that our Issoudun Association should also enjoy the privilege of an Archconfraternity for the whole world.

You will pardon me, Your Grace, this much too lengthy letter; you understand my reason for writing it.

Respectfully, I have the honour to be your humble and obedient servant and son in the Lord.

Dear Madame,

Just a new words to let you know that I had a good journey, saw the Pope and that he gave an apostolic blessing for you and your family. In every sanctuary where I knelt I prayed for you and all your concerns. For your part do not forget me either. I am in utter confusion arising from all your kindness. How can I express my gratitude? In my helplessness, I shall pray to the Heart of Jesus through the intercession of Her who is beside Him to repay our indebtedness by showering you, your daughters, your houses and works with the most abundant blessings.

Please accept, Very Reverend Mother, my most sincere thanks and respectful regards.

L 18740528

To His Lordship Felix Dupanloup, Bishop of Orleans.

Rome, May 28, 1874

My Lord,

I am honoured to be forwarding to the Holy Father the wonderful letter which you have so graciously written to him in support of our institute. It is an additional reason for Your Lordship to be appreciated by us. It is already a good number of years since I had the pleasure of visiting you at your residence and benefiting from your advice and encouragement with regard to this work of the Sacred Heart, then in its infancy. Today the Holy See most sympathetically favours us thanks to the sixty episcopal recommendations which petitioned the apostolic decree.

I am no less grateful to you, My Lord, for the letter you kindly wrote to me about Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Your remarks are full of balance. Yes, the most holy Virgin is no more than creaturely and as such she cannot exercise strict rights over the Creator. Her influence comes from God, at omnipotente Filio, omnipotens mater facta est (St. Bernard). It is this we have always said and printed. It is this likewise which is so well expressed by the enclosed picture of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, of which Your Lordship can see for himself. It is this likewise which is grasped by all the faithful since their Faith makes them aware that the most holy Virgin is no more than a simple creature, nothing of herself, and who owes all she has to the Lord's munificence. There are in the Sacred Scriptures and the Father's (of the Church) statements susceptible to the wrong interpretation: Mecum sunt divitiae et justitia. – Mater divinae gratiae. – In manibus tuis sunt thesauri miserationum Domini (St. Peter Damien). Desperatorum spes (St. Aurelian). For the rest, where could one find a stronger title than that of Mother of God? All the other titles pale into insignificance before it.

Translation of the Latin in the order given above: Riches and justice are in me. Mother of divine grace. In your hands are the treasures of the Lord's mercy (compassion). Salvation of all. The only hope of the despairing. The hope of the despairing.

In the different briefs we have had from Rome, my Lord, the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is sometimes translated as Nostra Domina a Sacratissimo Corde Jesu (June 13, 1870, Brief). And the "Remember You" of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart written on the accompanying leaflet, which Pius IX has read very carefully several times, approved of and indulged, contains these words: O Sovereign Mistress of the Heart of Jesus, that Heart which is the inexhaustible source of all graces and which you open at your wish, etc. etc.

Moreover, three hundred and fifty bishops have already approved of this devotion and more than twelve million Catholics are acquainted with it and practice it, with so many benefits accruing from it for them that they have in fact sent us one hundred and ten thousand thanksgiving letters for graces received, which we preserve in our archives, and there are more than eight million acknowledgement letters over the past ten years alone.

Permit me, Bishop, to quote an extract from the pastoral letter of His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, the Archbishop of Bourges, on the occasion of the solemn consecration of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I am sure that Your Lordship will read it with interest: "We declare that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is the Sovereign, the Mistress, the Queen, or the Lady of the Heart of Jesus." Assuredly in making use of such expressions we do not intend to associate with Mary any absolute, necessary, irresistible power over the Heart of the Son of God which could not be reconciled either with her creaturely status or the dignity of her divine Son, nor, in consequence, with ideas derived from a sober theology; we only wish to refer to her all-powerful supplication, as the holy Doctors would have it, omnipotentia supplex, before which Our Lord would withhold nothing, and which, consequently, permits Mary to have an unchallengable impact on the Heart of Jesus, a positive and real power, the reality of which it is no longer possible to deny, misconstruing, otherwise, the basis and implications for this claim. But on what foundation, in effect, is this power based? On that alone whereby Mary on the ever blessed day of the Incarnation became the Mother of God's Son, benefiting personally from a legitimate authority, a natural jurisdiction, a sacred and unchallengable right within what is truly a kingdom; her maternal right, jus maternum as it has been so eloquently expressed by one of the most learned of Scripture commentators (Corneille – Pape – sic), is much greater than that of other mothers since it is from Her alone that her divine Son has drawn all his human reality! (The two latter words better translate Chevalier's "toute sa substance".) Here is her maternal right by virtue of which she can ask and order him, jus quo ei, quasi filio potest praecipere et imponere (idem); her maternal rights which drew from St. Bernadin of Sienna this wonderful comment: Within the Virgin's empire, all obey, even God; you have only to wish, Virgin, and it will be done. Then there is the maternal right which Our Lord himself acknowledged, and to which he voluntarily submitted, not by necessity of nature, but through humility and love; the thirty Nazareth years are there to testify this! Et erat subditus illis, and he was obedient to them. "But what has happened, then, to this maternal authority of Mary over her Son's heart? Has Jesus, crowning her queen of heaven and earth, deprived her of it? The whole tradition of the Church rises up to answer one, a thousand times so. God's gifts are without regret. God, then, having once and for all wished to make Mary His Son's Mother, and having granted her for this purpose, her maternal rights and dignity, such an ordering of things does not change thereafter. The glorious state of the Risen Saviour provides no hindrance; in heaven as on earth, the maternal right of Mary is maintained and, consequently, her power (influence) remains... From all of this proceeds the wonderful acclamations which the acknowledgement and piety of the faithful have attributed to her. She distributes all that is good, creates the environment for grace, a safe harbour from shipwreck; she commands Christ, mater praecipit (St. Cyprien). She is not servant, but sovereign, Domina non ancilla (idem). We would not have satisfactorily concluded the foregoing if we hadn't furnished all the titles which the Doctors and Saints have attributed to her. So, then, I ask what all these attributions can mean unless it is that Mary is all powerful before the Heart of God? Either all these texts, these testimonies, are meaningless, or they mean that Mary exercises, in heaven as on earth, a sovereign power over her divine Son's Heart, that in heaven as on earth she continues to enjoy her maternal rights in all their extensive scope, that in heaven as on earth she can speak as Mother, Mistress, Queen and will always be heard!"

Pastoral letter of His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges for the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, September 1869.

I ask your indulgence, My Lord, for this lengthy letter, but the interest Your Lordship has always shown in our work drew me to provide these varied observations which cannot but edify.

With my deep gratitude and respectful good wishes, in CJ, My Lord.

Beatissime Pater,

Quomodo autem audient sine praedicante ? Quomodo vero praedicabunt nisi mittantur? Necesse est ergo ut mittantur qui praedicent Cor Jesu, et ostendant in saeculis supervenientibus abundantes divitias gratiae Ejus in bonitate super nos.

Et nunc, illustrissimi et dilectissimi nobis Archiepiscopi Le Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne benedictione, suffragio et vere paterna protectione fovetur et amplificatur.

Imo Sanctitas Vestra dignata est, in audentia anni 1872, hanc societatem quasi suam agnoscere, verique Fundatoris ac primi Superioris titulum accipere.

Tria Religionis vota simplicia emittunt in perpetuum Missionarii a Corde Jesu; sed post decennium, sponte quarto se obstringunt voto erga Sanctam Sedem, promittentes se ituros quocumque Summus Pontifex illos mittere voluerit. Non solum omnibus apostolicis muneribus gratis et pro Deo indesinenter operam navant, spiritualia exercitia Clericis et fidelibus subministrantes, omnia demum suscipientes officia quibus Cor Jesu sacratissimum cognosci, amari et coli possit; sed et solemne habent ad populorum aedificationem, austerioris vitae et religiosae perfectionis exemplar praebere.

Et jam habet Societas multa signa patrocini sacratissimi Cordis Jesu, necnon B.M.V. Immaculatae.

In domo principali Exoldunensi (Issoudun) duodecim sunt sacerdotes, quorum alii Parochiam ejusdem urbis regunt, alii missionibus ministerio Peregrinantium, directioni scholae dictae “maîtrise”, allaborant; ibidem sunt tres Fratres laïci coadjutores.

Noviciatus habetur in loco dicto Saint Gérard, ubi mansit Pius VII, in Dioecesi Molinensi; ibi sunt novem tyrones ac decem alumni ad sacerdotium vocati.

Jam ad diversas regiones, praesertim in Bituricensi, in Molinensi et Torontinensi in Canada dioecesibus, radices ac ramos extendit Societas, annuentibus imo et petentibus Episcopis. Et in dioecesi Americana, in civitate vulgo Toronto, duo sunt ejusdem Societatis sacerdotes cum Fratre coadiutore, Missionibus et Educationi puerorum vacantes.

Neque profecto, ex triginta datis aliunde testimonialibus litteris, ambigi potest quin apud omnes fere Antistites, sive Galliae, sive aliarum gentium, benevolentiam et approbationem eximiis cum laudibus obtinuerit nostrum Institutum.

Per talem Associationem promovetur renovatio Cleri Saecularis, et gloria, cultus, ardens amor vehementissimus sacratissimi Cordis Jesu, necnon et honor B.M.V. Imm.

Sacratissimum Cor Jesu suppeditare; imo per hanc in eodem Corde unionem, vires ipsis praebere, quo efficacius tueantur causam Christi D<sup>ni</sup> et Sanctae Romanae Ecclesiae.

Tandem, scholam Clericalem et apostolicam, benedicente Deo Optimo maximo, instituit nostra minima Societas. Ibi viginti et ultra alumni gratis admittuntur et ad vocationem nostram accurate informantur ita ut numerus membrorum Societatis sic certissime quotannis crescat.

Quidam vero sint sensus Missionariorum a Sacro Corde Jesu erga sanctam Apostolicam Sedem, satis superque demonstrant Antistitem litterae testimoniales et caritativa illa tributa, quae quotannis, in sublevandis Summi Pontificis necessitatibus, ultro impendunt. Illam quam ex intimo corde erga Petri sedem promunt devotionem atque reverentiam, operibus et factis, significare volunt, Deo adjuvante. Quoad doctrinam, omnia tenemus quae tenet S. Romana Ecclesia semper et in omnibus Pontifici infallibili credentes et obedientes. Quoad autem bona temporalia in Dei providentia confidit Societas. Attamen in Domino statuit ex reductibus necnon et ex eleemosynis Christifidelium vivat ejus membra.

His de causis, plurimi Galliarum Episcopi, per litteras authenticas, praefectam Societatis nostrae approbationem definitivam a Paternitate Vestra humiliter petunt; eandem R.R.D.D. Rome, June 17, 1874

Madame,

All my engagements are happily concluded. Our Society has been approved by the great Pius IX. It is he who has done everything. He wanted to put his signature to the Decree on the very day itself of the Feast of the Sacred Heart. The Decree should be sent to me on Monday morning and that evening I shall leave Rome to return to Issoudun where I hope to arrive on Thursday night.

I am praying earnestly for you and your family.

With my best wishes to your kind family, and embrace your dear little children on my behalf.

With my respectful good wishes,

To Pope Pius IX.

Most Holy Father,

Our work is based at Issoudun in France, Bourges Archdiocese, under the title of the Association of Priests of the Sacred Heart. These priests are associated with the Society of Missionaries of the Sacred Heart through spiritual affiliation, without compromising in any way their responsibilities as diocesan priests in complete commitment to their bishop as regards all their ministerial responsibilities.

The aim of these priests in this Association is:

To safeguard themselves from the danger of isolation;

To boost and build up their morale in meetings which take place every three months by sharing with each other their experiences in parochial ministry;

To share among themselves, at least once a year, their experience of preaching and confession in their respective parishes;

To profit for their greater well-being from this association with the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

This Association began sixteen years ago; it continues to develop with the approval of the Bishops, and there is its morale-raising impact on the priests who are part of it together with its very significant impact on the parishes. Most Holy Father, be so kind as to bless and encourage this apostolic initiative. We presume to ask Your Holiness for the following favours:

1. An hundred days' indulgence for the prayer which precedes and ends the three-monthly gatherings (Veni Sancte... Ave Maria – Sub tuum – Ave Maria).
2. An apostolic blessing once a year for the parish which one of the associate priests builds up either by his word or ministry.
3. An indulgence of three hundred days for each spiritual service undertaken in the interests of the Association by one of these associate priests.
4. An indulgence of sixty days for every good work carried out by these priests of the Sacred Heart.

Your Holiness' most devoted son,
J. Chevalier, MSC.

Hoc pium opus jam in dioecesi nostra adprobavimus;
illudque dignum judicamus quod petitis indulgentiis
a Sanctissimo donetur.

Issoudun, June 25, 1874

Very Reverend Mother,

Until the very last moment I had hoped to thank you in Rome, but the Lord did not have it so. Please accept my gratitude today. My confrères (Jouët and Vandel) experienced so much kindness and support in your edifying house that I am still overcome by it. I am sending on a statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for your house and it will give me great pleasure for you to have it. I shall make it my duty to pray to the divine Heart of Jesus for you and all under your care.

I commend myself to your good prayers.

Please accept Very Reverend Mother my respectful good wishes.

Issoudun, Thursday night

Dear Sister Marie,

I have just returned; my rheumatism has worsened; I am exhausted; now I must rest, care and your good prayers will restore me. Once again many thanks for all your kindness and to all your sisters, your good novices and postulants for their prayers and support. I have already prayed for you Mother General, for you and your community, to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of Issoudun.

If Fathers Jouët and Vandel are still with you, give them news of me and tell them that everything goes well at Issoudun. Please forward this letter to your kind Mother General.

Cheerio, my child. I bless you, all the sisters and children in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Convey to dear Sister Léontine all my good wishes. I pray particularly for her; I send her a special blessing. (This is J.M. Vandel's niece, at this time in the Rome community.)

Concerning a letter from Sister Marie-Françoise Lefebvre, Paris.

Undated, likely June 30, 1874

Dear Reverend Father,

Just now we received your letter. We shall pray very much for you. We have thanked the Sacred Heart through Our Lady for the favours granted in Rome. We shall be expecting you from day to day.

Here are two hearts embroidered and mounted differently. One hesitates to mount those which are embroidered without knowing what you would like, with or without cardboard, and it is a little difficult to find a way of attaching them which looks good. We think that the stitching on the soutane would make it look better. (Presumably with reference to the emblem of the Sacred Heart.) This can be done easily from the inside without being seen. We have about 15 finished. One word and they can be shown. We have followed the measurements you sent on to us. I shall not bother you any longer today.

Please bless, dear Father, this little community which is so happy to be of service to the Sacred Heart in your care and silently awaits a word from you to carry out whatever pleases the Heart of Jesus.

All your children are at your feet asking for the grace of your blessing.

Your most respectful and unworthy daughter,
Sister Marie Françoise
Religious of the Holy Name of Jesus.

PS: We would have much preferred to have spoken to you about your intentions concerning the work, but this was not possible.

Chevalier replies briefly:

Send me on the hearts in question and which you should have received this morning.

On August 30, 1874, she arrived at Issoudun with some sisters to become the first Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. To His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges.

Undated, only the signature is Chevalier's; a letter written after his return from Rome

Your Grace,

To you, Your Grace, I can speak freely and open my heart. Laymen in Rome, Messrs. Scalsi and Angelini, Scalsi's father-in-law, have set up with the approval of the Holy See an Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart at St. Andrea-della-Valle (well known Roman church). These gentlemen have chosen a particular representation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and have had it authorized and blessed, so they say, by the Holy Father; and over the past year they never give up criticizing ours in what they write and try to ban it in Italy. They have already obtained a decree from Cardinal Patrizi through the intermediary of his secretary, Canon Scalsi, brother of the Mr. Scalsi mentioned above, a decree ordering the modification of our statue for Rome alone. But these gentlemen are not content with that. They want yet more. Just a few months ago, they threatened us with an extension of this change to the whole of Italy and go as far as to condemn our Issoudun statue. At this juncture, they had Canon Scalsi, Secretary of the Cardinal Vicar, appointed president of their Archconfraternity's directive council, and since then the newspapers have put it out that the Issoudun Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statue must be changed, and such a process has begun already.

France has begun to receive leaflets where it is stated that Pius IX, a new Maecenas (patron of the Arts), has himself changed the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statue, and this work of art is to be found in oils at Messrs. Scalsi and Angelini, via Cesarini, 33 (Rome) and at Bologna. Is there in all of this some hidden intrigue or some business calculation?

Circular Letter to the French Bishops.

Issoudun, July 2, 1874

My Lord,

Aware of the great interest with which Your Lordship is drawn to favour us, I hasten to bring to your notice the decree by which the Holy See has definitively approved our humble Institute. (Pia Presbyterorum Societas, June 20, 1874.) This distinctive honour was bestowed on the very day itself of the Feast of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. In the private audience (June 3) which marked the occasion, the Holy Father said to us: "When before, in being requested to consecrate the Church to the Sacred Heart of Jesus Christ, I did not find myself so inclined, as the moment had not yet arrived. But as of now if requested by good Catholics I would willingly do so.

These words, sentiments, have been challenged by Fr. H. Ramière – see above – passim – who bases his views on J.M. Vandel's understanding of what the Pope said at the audience. It is questioned, also, if Jouët, like Vandel present at the audience, might not have added to the Pope's comments words he had not said.

We then made the enclosed petition by way of replying to the wishes of the great Pius IX. If Your Lordship, following the examples of our worthy Archbishop, would be so kind as to approve and recommend it (the Decree) to the diocese its success would be assured.

Please accept my respectful good wishes, Your Lordship,

To Alphonse Portal, Novice at Saint Gérard.

Issoudun, July 11, 1874

I am very pleased to gather from you that the major retreatant exercises of St. Ignatius have been helpful and I greatly appreciate the observations you have offered me about them. I notice from these remarks that you have a fervent love for the Blessed Virgin and that when meditating on the mysteries of Our Lord's life you apply yourself to a consideration of the feelings of His divine Heart. This leads me to hope that you will be a good religious and worthy Missionary of the Sacred Heart. St. Ignatius, finding himself in the company of two religious who had no devotional interest in the Blessed Virgin, predicted that it would not be long before they left the religious life, which is what exactly happened. Noting that you are drawn by a tender devotion for Mary, I predict that you will persevere in your vocation.

On the other hand, since you engage most attentively in your prayer with the perfections and attitudes of the Sacred Heart, I like to think that more and more you will come to know the divine Heart, love Him with ever growing warmth, try to embody His wonderful virtues so that eventually you will become a perfect religious. It is this that I ask for in you my dear child. On your part do not forget to pray for the betterment of my health affected by my journey to Rome. I need your supportive prayers and those of the whole Novitiate. Several novices asked me to have their profession in the sanctuary of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, you among them. If nothing comes in its way, I shall be pleased to accede to this request.

With warm good wishes, dear son, in Sanctissimo Corde.

Issoudun, July 11, 1874

Dear Son,

I am grateful to you for your good wishes for the restoration of my health which at this moment is somewhat shaken due to tiredness brought on by my journey. But I am sure that your fervent prayers directed to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will help towards my recovery. I can see that you are profiting from the great exercises (of prayer and discipline). I congratulate you. Be courageous, then, and try to put good resolutions into practice. Obey the rule with a continuing fidelity. Everything is to be had there for God lives in him who lives by the rule. You are right to apply yourself to silence and calm. This is the nerve-centre of the religious life, in silentio et quiete proficit anima devota (the devout soul advances through silence and calm).

The enemy of all that is good has tried to worry you during your retreat, not surprisingly: you know he fishes in troubled waters; he uses the same strategy to frustrate the good of a retreat; be on your guard. Cherish carefully your peace, the peace which comes from the Heart of Jesus and is beyond all feeling. I understand your wish to make your vows at the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Sanctuary. It is possible, given that nothing unforeseen comes in the way. I shall be pleased to accommodate your wish, but I would not want this issue to come in the way of the peace you have experienced during the retreat; in this as in all things, there has to be a holy indifference, total conformity to the will of the Superiors. You know the Imitation (of Christ) saying: Imaginatio locos multos fefellit (imagination hides itself in a variety of places).

With warm good wishes, my dear child, in Sanctissimo Corde.

To His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, July 26, 1874

Your Grace,

On December 28, 1873, all the available priests of the Sacred Heart came together in a General Council to revise their Constitutions, and it was decided to introduce a habit which would relate to the Sacred Heart colours. On consulting Your Grace it was suggested that the matter be referred to the Holy Father and his recommendation followed. This is what we did on the 3rd of last month ("we" meaning Chevalier, Jouët and J. M. Vandel at a papal audience). Puis IX favoured a habit but in reference to Your Grace, His Holiness left the decision with you.

This then is the habit which we have agreed on:

1. a soutane in white wool;
2. a cord tinted wool as a waist-band;

3. an image of the Sacred Heart on the chest, like the one chosen by the Pope;
4. a great coat in wool for going outside the house or on a journey;
5. a small cape in red wool to be worn, in choir and when preaching, over the white soutane as a surplice replacement.

We humbly ask Your Grace to sanction the wearing of this habit as described. Over the centuries Religious Societies formed for a particular mission wore a special distinctive habit which represented to everyone their purpose and the reason for their existence. Our little Society, wholly devoted to the Sacred Heart, has arrived at this moment with its own distinctive and providential mission now authorised by Rome. It is for this reason that we ask Your Grace to look favourably on our request.

Undated

Your Grace,

On December 28, 1893, all the available Sacred Heart Fathers present, there was a General Council Meeting to examine the Constitutions, and a decision was taken to introduce a habit which would embrace the Sacred Heart colours, a white soutane with a red heart on the chest.

Your Grace, on being informed, advised us to refer the matter to the Holy Father and follow his advice, which is what we did on the 3rd of last month (again as with the letter heading there is no date). Puis IX, as expected, favoured the habit, but in deference to Your Grace His Holiness referred the decision to you.

Here then, Your Grace, is the habit we recommended to the Supreme Pontiff:

1. A soutane in white wool with a cord in red wool as a waist-band, and a heart on the chest. A dark wool great coat to be worn outside and travelling. A small cape in red wool for choir and church ceremonies, replacing the surplice and worn over the white soutane.

There you have, then, Your Grace, the habit which we are drawn to ask you to sanction on our behalf.

Over the centuries Religious Societies founded with a special mission have presented themselves wearing a special, distinctive habit which represents to everyone their purpose and the reason for their existence. Ours has come in its own hour, representing a distinct and providential call approved by Rome. It is for this reason, Your Grace, that we ask you to look favourably on our request.

In the first draft Chevalier has "that the Church has founded" before changing the wording to "Religious Societies".

To His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, July 26, 1874

Bishop Dabert of Perigeux is complaining about our undertakings.

Your Grace,

The letter from the Bishop of Perigeux makes me as unhappy as much as it amazes me.

I do not accept that a respectful and humble presentation to their Lordships the Bishops, of a request which is in keeping with the wishes of the Holy See, responds to the needs of the faithful and what is required at this time, should be considered as being at variance with the rule set out for the Church by St. Paul: Omnia in ordine fiant.

Moreover, I do not think that in sending this appeal to the parish priests of the Perigeux diocese there could be anything challenging the Bishop's thinking, he who has otherwise been always so supportive of us. It seems to me that, in this instance, we have done nothing more than has been the case in comparable situations such as infallibility, the proclamation of the dogma of the Immaculate Conception, or for St. Joseph or for the national consecration to the Sacred Heart. Four years ago the initiative began with a simple priest, Fr. Ramière, SJ, to consecrate the universal Church to the Sacred Heart, and it is what we are looking for today; there were no objections made at that time.

The Bishop of Perigeux complains, moreover, that I have allowed my confrères to whip up some kind of commotion in dioceses, his own in particular, on the occasion of the most recent pilgrimage. This complaint, Your Grace, is without foundation. Last year Fr. Jouët was asked to invite, on your behalf, the Bishop of Perigeux to the celebration on the 8th of September and he was very well received, the Bishop appointing the senior curate of his cathedral, director of the religious Week, to undertake the organizing of a pilgrimage to Issoudun. This is all that has happened in his diocese.

If you think, Your Grace, that a letter from us to the Bishop of Perigeux could make him forget the pain which we have involuntarily brought upon him, we would do so very wholeheartedly in keeping with Your Grace's wishes.

As far as other dioceses are concerned we have received no complaint; on the contrary the undertaking goes forward very well everywhere, exemplified by the early episcopal letters already arrived. We are expecting a good outcome, particularly so if Your Grace would care to support and recommend our appeal in writing just as you have given it your support and encouraged it personally in Rome.

We enclose with this letter a copy of that addressed to Their Lordships the Bishops and a copy of the petition.

With respectful good wishes, Your Grace,

Your most obedient son,
J. Chevalier, MSC.

*Undated letter, likely the end of July
Being a reply to Guyot's July 20 letter.
The handwriting is not Chevalier's*

In the first place I have to begin by saying that it seems to me and everyone else that Fr. Chevalier should have the qualities and sense of purpose to know best what is for the good of the Institute, that which is to its advantage or an impediment, that which is appropriate to proceed with or not. We are sufficiently aware of his prudence and love for the Society to place our confidence in him and give him our support. All that he has achieved up to now, through the grace of God, should hearten us for the present and future. What would become of the direction of a Congregation if everyone held to his own ideas and tried to impose them?

The Reverend Father Superior has directed me to let you know that the spirit, the threat of recourse to higher authority which pervades your letter like the previous one from Fr. Ledoux which is no more than an echo of yours, have been particularly painful for him, particularly on returning from a journey in which he exhausted himself on our behalf when accomplishing so much for our Society and its works. He would have been expecting something other than sharp, unacceptable criticism and such precipitous criticism of his authority. The spirit of unity is to be desired, that which is convincing because it is based on humility and charity and not in that carping spirit which foments break-up because it usually is the offshoot of pride. He loves you despite all this and prays, etc.

Council Meeting, August 1, 1874

In attendance Very Rev. Fr. Superior, Fathers Piperon, Jouët, Georgelin, Albert.

Money for Fr. Albert

A sum of 200 francs was allocated by the Council to Fr. Albert for his work.

Lodge for Novitiate

At this Council it was decided to build a porter's area and parlour for the Novitiate.

Juvenile section of school to return to Chezal-Benoît

The section of the 'Little Work' (Petite-Oeuvre) called "the juvénat" set up at Saint Gérard the previous year must now return to Chezal-Benoît because of the inconveniences arising from the detrimental association of this section of the 'Little Work' with the Novitiate.

Vichy, August 6, 1874

Dear Father,

I am forwarding the brief communication from the Archbishop of Bourges. Send out the enclosed invitations (for September 8 and the inauguration of the smaller basilica, Pontifical Brief, July 17, 1874). You put your signature on my behalf and send the letters to the Archbishop of Bourges so that he can add his seal to them.

It seems to me that the Universe (Catholic newspaper) does not want to print our appeal (to ask the Pope to consecrate the universal Church to the Sacred Heart). Look at the editorial and you will come to know what the word enigma means. Have the appeal placed in the other Catholic papers, for example, the Union, the Français, the National Assembly, the Religious Weekly.

Our regards to the ladies (very likely the Vanves Sisters of the Holy Name of Jesus, who were getting ready to come to Issoudun at the end of August on the occasion of the founding of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart).

Vichy, August 10, 1874

Dear Father,

1. I am answering your letter straightaway. You have done your best to find financial support. Bless you! But we shall be looking for our money, although I doubt if we shall succeed. Meanwhile, go into this more closely at the designated place. (The reference may be to an Issoudun pilgrimage.)
2. Have no reliance on Mademoiselle Marchand. This good woman gossips too much. She already shared a confidence with Madame du Quesne who herself went on to tell the Sisters etc.

Anna Marchand, Secretary of Pilgrimages at Issoudun, member of the Sacred Heart Third Order, would die at Issoudun, January 16, 1927, aged 97. The Sisters confided in by Madame du Quesne were the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul at the Issoudun Orphanage.

The Vanves ladies will so act as if they were coming on pilgrimage and will be just like the other pilgrims; they will be looked upon as two helping-ladies.

Chevalier is referring to the two Vincent de Paul Sisters from Vanves, Marie-Françoise Lefebvre-Duruflé and Sister Arsène Rime, who came and stayed, incognito-like, at Issoudun while preparing for the August 30 foundation of the Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

That's all, but be discreet! Do not have Mademoiselle in the house and don't say anything about the project to her, and ask both Frs. Durin and Piperon not to breathe a word about it to anybody either here or there. The time to do so has not yet arrived. Advise Madame Baraton's domestic servants that on Friday at 2.35pm the two religious (sisters, see above) will arrive as pilgrims and to have two rooms made ready for them. That is all.

Mother Marie-Françoise wrote to Jouët on August 11, quoting Chevalier's letter to her: "...You will arrive as pilgrims. It is not yet known in Issoudun that we have bought this house." The sister's letter to Jouët continues: "We prefer to go to Issoudun to see things for ourselves, it will be much easier for us to organize everything." Dossier FNDS, 1874, General Archives.

3. It is a very good idea to have a picture made of Our lady of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun. Send on the large crowned picture as the model. Write to the artist or to the parish priest of Osimo about making arrangements. It is necessary (A) to hold on to ownership or, that being impossible, we forego our right to the artist for a sum (not specified) on condition that he works only on the picture and not on copies or reproductions. (B) Find out what fee he demands for the work. (C) If the right of ownership is granted him, he will need to give us as much as we stipulate, or otherwise it will be returned to us. (D) We shall include all this in the French and Italian Annals, etc.

Cheerio, dear friend.

Wholly yours,
J. Chevalier, MSC.

Would you be so kind as to pass on this little letter to Madame Pirinoli; she is a little downcast. See her as soon as possible to take this letter to her. Give her yourself this little note.

Madame had left the Vanves Sisters to return to Issoudun on August 10. Mother Marie-Françoise, see above, wrote to Jouët saying that "...she had left us yesterday as if she was one of us, as I said to Fr. Superior. Certainly the devil will not fail to make a thousand twistings but he will not succeed".

Vichy, August 22, 1874

Dear Father,

Take care to demand straightaway a copy of the register of our addresses. We were given assurances about it and it is absolutely necessary. Mr. Gagnault was supposed to make it available within the three months following on January. It is now six months late. Demand it; he made his promise. If he answers in the negative, he is a dishonest character who should be disengaged from. Leave over also your wells.

The thrust of this last short sentence cannot even be guessed at!

Ask Mademoiselle Baptiste not to breathe a word of her business while the Ponroy house is not yet bought. Since you will be meeting the Archbishop on Monday or Tuesday, tell him that I forgot to ask him whether, as a replacement for the surplice, we might not wear, though only in choir and pulpit, the little white cape with the red border. There's the short cape, but the arms cannot pass through the openings since these are closed. It would have to be a little cape then which would be simple and graceful. We shall wear the surplice (for) the ministry of the sacraments and benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. Take with you to Bourges the little white cape; it is in the small cabinet of my bedroom at the presbytery. Ask Fr. Georgelin to translate immediately into Latin the sheet here enclosed. It is the first chapter of our Constitutions. Then he will pass it on to Gagnault who will send me a proof-copy. Give Gagnault straightaway this copy of the Third Order. He is to work on Father Georgelin's revised copy, following which I shall be sent a new proof with the ceremonial and the little office.

Cheerio. Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

At the head of the letter, in the margin:

Have a Novena of prayers said and light a lamp over 9 (days). Here's a command.

To one of the priests in the St. Cyr parish.

Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has granted a further favour to Issoudun, her special town. For quite some time many of the faithful, keen to consecrate themselves to the service of the Sacred Heart, had been petitioning us to bring them together in community. The moment was not as yet opportune and, particularly, the Providential hour had not yet arrived. But now particular circumstances make it possible for the Archbishop of Bourges to put these expectations, so many times voiced, into effect. This very day this new community, with the support of His Grace, is being established and the religious of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart are being installed.

They shall engage themselves in pious work, looking after women who come as pilgrims and those who would like to spend some days in retreat under the protection of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and also the education of young girls. We ask the Lord to bless this new undertaking which could be so helpful to Issoudun.

What follows are the announcements from the pulpit for the parish of St. Cyr, August 30, 1874, in Chevalier's handwriting.

Perpetual adoration of the Sacred Heart September 1,2,3.

First Friday of the month. Next Sunday, St. Cyr, solemnity for the first Sunday of the month.

Preparatory retreat for the September 8 feast beginning with adoration on Tuesday next and continuing each day, 8.30am, 7.30pm.

Tuesday, September 8, feast of the Nativity. Anniversary of the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and the special pilgrimage attended by several Bishops and a very large gathering of the faithful. On this day there will be Masses from midnight to midday; in the afternoon, 2.30pm, the procession will take place.

The sermon will be delivered by one of the most famous preachers in France. The course taken by the procession will be the same as that for the previous year.

We ask the faithful to decorate the streets as well as possible. At the end of the procession Benediction in the Sacred Heart Square.

Admission to Profession

Those proposed for profession of vows were Fr. Ramot, priest, and the brothers Barthou, Grom, Barral, Lanctin, Portal, all of whom were admitted to take vows. On the recommendation of Fr. Guyot, Novice Master, it was decided that certain appropriate precautions be taken given the character and temperament of brothers Barral and Portal. The Very Rev. Father Superior made known to the Council the wishes of Fathers Marie and Hamel to make their profession at the end of the Retreat. The Council decided to accept both. It was agreed that an explanatory letter should be written to the Bishop of Chambéry with reference to Fr. Marie and have the letter forwarded by the Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, September 12, 1874

Dear Vicar General,

I present myself to be favoured with your permission to erect two Stations of the Cross, one in our underground chapel for the use of the Community and the other in the chapel of the Religious of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

With regard to the organization of seminary work, this issue was considered by the members of the Issoudun group while I was in Rome. The secretary, Mr. Batailler, was due to send on the views of these gentlemen to the Archbishop.

From the information I gathered, the members of the committee thought that the former practice was very suitable and one could not do better than to revive it.

I have the honour to be, most respectfully, your humble and obedient servant.

The Father Ledoux Issue

At this meeting a letter to Fr. Guyot from Fr. Ledoux was read, being a reply to a letter from the Very Rev. Superior. Dear Fr. Ledoux stated that the proposal of the Very Rev. Superior to join Fr. Chapell in Canada was not acceptable. The good father stated that he could not leave either his mother or his sisters because of their concerns. As well, he asks permission to make his retreat at Paray-le-Monial. The Council agreed on this latter issue to accede to his request because of the exceptional circumstances, feelings, state of mind, of the good father. On the first issue, however, it was agreed that he be firmly notified that the Council could not in any circumstance involve itself with his sisters' financial affairs or come to their aid, and the issue would hasten his departure if he intended to leave the Congregation.

Chapter Style – Morning Session

Present: The Rev. Fr. Superior General, Frs. Píperon, Vandel, Guyot, Jouët, Georgelin, Albert, Marie, Durin, Miniot, Batard, Captier, Morisseau, Hamel, Bazire.

The Very Rev. Superior having asked that there be thanksgiving for all the special favours granted by the Sovereign Pontiff to the Missionary Congregation and to the Association, made known to the Chapter the comments made on the Constitutions by the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

Assistants or Counsellors

1. The members present were asked for their views about the number of assistants or counsellors who would be part of the Very Rev. Superior General's Council.
A second question, arising from the first, was put forward. Does it mean that one should move immediately towards electing new counsellors? This last question was answered in the negative.

Four Assistants will be chosen.

The question of Assistants, having once more come up for discussion, by a majority it was decided that the Superior General's Council should consist of four assistants.

Novitiate: One year only.

2. The length of the Novitiate, discussed at the last Council in Chapter form, was again put to the vote of the Congregation's fathers in keeping with the expressed wish of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars to have the duration determined uniformly for all the Congregation's members. It was decided by a majority of those voting that the Novitiate should be of one year's duration only.

Council Meeting, September 17, 1874

Evening Meeting

Present: The same as at the a.m. session.

Calling together the Council

It was asked if, in the event of special circumstances arising needing to be addressed by the General Council, the Very Rev. Fr. Superior could meet with the available members to take a decision?

The answer was in the affirmative if the issue was urgent and could not be put back without serious inconvenience.

The General Chapter: the members who form part of it.

2. The Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, having requested the Society to state what number of its members should be part of the General Chapter, it was agreed that in addition to the members who are by right part of the General Chapter, six members will be elected from present or former Superiors, and from among those who have made the fourth vow.

When the Congregation is divided into Provinces (may the Sacred Heart in his goodness hasten such a happy moment!), each Province will send three of its members to represent it at the General Chapter.

Fourth Vow

3. Proposed by the Very Rev. Fr. Superior General, the Chapter expressed the wish that the professed judged worthy could make the fourth vow six years after their entry to the Congregation in place of the ten years hitherto required.

The Lay Brothers' Vows

4. The lay brothers will, following their Novitiate, renew their vows annually if they are considered favourably; they cannot make their perpetual vows until aged thirty and following six years' membership of the Congregation.

Wearing Apparel

5. For dress, one wears the three-cornered biretta, the three-cornered hat, the Roman-style soutane with a cape in black wool without tassels; in winter an overcoat without a cape, closed at the top. This overcoat should be emblazoned with the Sacred Heart just like the soutanes. Shoes should be simple and laced. Both in the house and chapel outside the liturgical offices when the soutane is not required, one can wear normal garb. One must always wear the soutane and hat when going out in the street. The biretta is in particular to be worn in choir, but it can be worn within the community. (In the house.)

Proposal concerning the parish of Saint Gérard.

The Very Rev. Superior read a letter in Council from Fr. Guyot stating that the Bishop of Moulins had invited him to come and see him to talk about the parish of Saint Gérard which His Lordship would like to hand over to the Congregation. The good father added that he had replied and expressed the Congregation's gratitude, but had not considered it appropriate to go to Moulins since we haven't two priests available for the Saint Gérard parish.

The Council having considered what it thought of the good father's initiative was agreed that:

1. Father Guyot should be written to stating that he should send his letter to the Rev. Fr. Superior so that he could present it to the Council.
2. The reply to the Bishop of Moulins should have taken the form of thanking him and requesting him to hold over his decision until later if that is possible, since at the present time we were not in a position to take over the Saint Gérard parish, and His Lordship would be informed when it became possible to accept his offer. L 18741002

To Mr. Louis Veuillot, Editor-in-Chief of The Universe.

Issoudun, October 2, 1874

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Mr. Editor,

I write requesting you to bring to the attention of Catholics, for whom you are a most doughty defender, the following article taken from the Unita Catholica for September 25 (Italian Catholic paper). The disgraceful fact which this respectable publication announces, and which provokes the indignation of all worthy people, is pertinent at the highest level to the cause of religion and freedom.

Already a year ago on the occasion of the memorable Our Lady of the Sacred Heart September 8 pilgrimage (Issoudun) we saw for ourselves where the municipal Councils of Rimini, Cesena, Osimo, Tivoli and the Vice-Prefect of Ancona, outrageously scorned the banners which these Catholic towns sent to Issoudun for purely religious reasons. The harassment went so far as to punish in the name of the law Italian religious who had made innocuous symbols of Christian piety and, as well, the worthy priests who brought them in the name of their fellow Christians and bishops. At the present time the damaging harassment of the Piedmont government is wholly out of control.

The under-secretary of Ancona can no longer accept the growth of our Association in Italy because it takes particular pride in warmly admiring the infallible Pope and being especially well regarded itself by him. The Sub-Prefect, intent on being destructive as soon as he possibly could, found nothing more uncomplicated than to strike at the very heart of things when on his own private initiative, and from the most falsified and unsubstantiated considerations, he suspended the Osimo Association, our central hub for the whole of Italy and canonically set up by the esteemed bishop of the diocese.

Our Italian Annals have been suppressed, our correspondence blocked, millions, that is, of signed appeals whose aim was to petition the Pope to consecrate the universal Church and world to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. Everything has been withheld. Even the Bishop's letters have disappeared. And yet this initiative is exclusively religious. Accordingly we protest in the strongest possible way, on behalf of our twelve million associates throughout the world and the six hundred thousand in Italy itself, against an attribution of political motivation to our Association. We protest against the unjust and violent onslaughts being undertaken at this moment against Father Georgelin, parish priest of the Holy Trinity, Osimo, and the many subscribers to the Italian Annals of which he is the director.

We particularly protest as French Catholics against the sacrilegious withholding, in disregard of all laws and guarantees, of thousands of letters addressed to the Sovereign Pontiff, of which a certain number were personal letters from Italian bishops whose specific purpose was the consecration of the Church and world to the Sacred Heart of Our Lord Jesus Christ.

Please accept, Editor, my deep appreciation for the significant contribution you are making to the Church, and with my sincere regards in the Lord.

Departure of Fr. Ledoux

The Very Rev. Fr. Superior read a letter from Fr. Guyot to the Council making known Fr. Ledoux's withdrawal from the Congregation because of the family situation. The news, which was not unexpected, was received with regret.

At the same Council meeting the Very Rev. Fr. Superior asked the Council's views on the following question: Should the Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart open a normal boarding house or, in association with it, a half-board guest house for outsiders? The Council having considered the matter came to the conclusion that for the well-being of the children it would be better to adopt the half-board suggestion.

Dear Father,

Since I made you aware of my intention to pursue you in the courts, you and your religious supporters, who caused great harm to my sister, you have made no effort to meet me; quite the contrary because Fr. Piperon in answer to my brother on your behalf treated the whole affair amusedly, indicating that he was not greatly worried.

I shall before long commence my pursuit of the issues if I do see approaching me the ill-disposed people doing their utmost for the clergy and convents. In so far as I can manage to do so, I shall do my utmost to prevent this scandal. You are playing a dangerous game, Reverend Father. If you set going a public meeting, I shall try to ward you off. I have my rights and I want to see them prevail; you will answer for everything. I shall wait 24 more hours and when the time has passed I shall commence my action; you will answer for the scandal.

Please accept, Rev. Fr., my respectful good wishes.

Issoudun, November 10, 1874

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Jouët's letters, of which this is one, are characterized by the above invocation; but not so with Chevalier at this time.

Your Grace,

The directive committee of the Roman Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart (namely the Scalsi-Angelini family of Rome) continues more strongly than ever its attacks against the Issoudun Association. (Chevalier is referring to husband-wife, Carlo Scalsi, Anna Angelini, and the secretary, Salvatore Angelini.) It contends that we have no right to have any inscription for Associates outside the Bourges Archdiocese, that we have never made public the Pope's brief setting-up at Issoudun the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association, that the presentation of the Issoudun Virgin should be no longer propagated, that we are in bad faith, and that all our Associations worldwide should newly be certified with Rome in order to partake of indulgences.

The letter which Your Grace received last week, and which he was so kind to send on to us, gives a good idea of the disastrous trouble created for the ninety Italian bishops who have already approved the Association in their dioceses and the presentation itself of the Issoudun Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. In any event, all this is no more than complaint, confusion, astonishment, arising from such odd reaction. Letter after letter is being written to us referring to the need to bring this daily developing scandal to an end.

Fr. Bréchet, Sulpician, bursar at the French Seminary, Rome, assured us that all the bishops in the Pope's entourage find the Issoudun picture perfectly appropriate and are unanimous in stating that the change (in the picture) only holds for the city of Rome. Be that as it may, Il propagatore del culto a Nostra Signora del Sacro Cuore di Gesù (the magazine since August 1873 of the Rome Archconfraternity), which is published each month in Rome, beginning last August, under the direction of Mr. Angelini, provides evidence to the contrary. In this particularly painful situation, Your Grace might consider taking in hand such an important issue. We are seriously convinced that Bishop Mercurelli will take care of everything. This splendid prelate has on several occasions made known to us how he personally feels about the difficulties placed in our way and he would be pleased, for his part, to convey this whole issue to the attention of His Holiness. He does not doubt that it will succeed, but he will not act until Your Grace delegates him to do so.

There would be, so it seems to us, one of the three following procedures for consideration:

1. The setting-up of our Issoudun Association as a Universal Archconfraternity such as Our Lady of Victories, Paris; or
2. Have the Status Quo officially acknowledged and as valid as previously, that is to say with the right to register individually all the faithful who so wish from whatsoever country; this, for instance, is what happens at Our Lady of Lourdes, at St. Joseph's Angers; or
3. The amalgamation of our work with that of the Apostolate of Prayers which is not subject to any of the formalities required for the setting-up of Confraternities, and which is considered as an association of prayer. Several years ago, the Apostolate of Prayer underwent a trial similar to what we are undergoing. Representations were forwarded to Rome and everything was brought to an end by Pius IX's decree approving and confirming the Statutes of the Apostolate such as they were adhered to from the beginning. This decree was achieved by Cardinal Quaglia. A petition from you, Your Grace, would, so we believe, have the same effect as that sent to the Holy See by Bishop Mercurelli or by another prelate of your choice. One could point to the present state of the Association which, this year alone, September 1874 to September 1875, received requests at Issoudun from twelve hundred and fifty thousand signatories wishing to be inscribed.

Such an attractive Catholic enterprise, so admirable in its unity up to the present, could become, if Mr. Angelini continues with his attacks, truly confusing, subject to purposeless debate threatening the total ruin of the undertaking. We have made copies of the main briefs and documents sent to the Issoudun Association and we can forward the folder to Your Grace to obtain the 'visa' and become aware of what other pieces we would be required to add to it. The forthcoming dispatch to Rome of more than two million signatures petitioning the consecration of the Church to the Sacred Heart would be a favourable moment to present to the Holy Father the request relevant to our Association. (It would appear that Chevalier's dates immediately above are not correct. It should be September 1873 to September 1874.)

At the very least, Your Grace, it would be appropriate to obtain for the Issoudun Association the same indulgences as enjoyed by the Associations of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in Rome and Belgium since it does not seem right that the cradle and centre of this work should have fewer privileges than its different offshoots.

Please accept, Your Grace, my deepest regards as I have the honour to remain,

Your obedient and devoted servant.

L 18741209

Issoudun, December 9, 1874

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Dear Father,

Your splendid letter of November 29 only came today. Before everything else, I want to thank your praiseworthy concern to end the unhappy misunderstanding between the Roman Archconfraternity and the Issoudun Association. His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges is very touched by the concern you have for our work which is so close to his heart also. He delegates me to inform you that as from his side he is placing this issue in your hands. He is convinced that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will help you to clear up and arrange matters. His Grace is convinced that there is a quite obvious source of confusion from which all the difficulties arise, and once identified everything will be in order. Here is the problem. We have received two quite different instructions from Rome, one giving us the right to enrol individually the associations of the whole Catholic world, the other giving us the right only to affiliate confraternities within the Bourges Archdiocese.

I

The first brief is dated June 7, 1864. It canonically erects the Issoudun Association as an Archconfraternity with indulgences for all already enrolled and for all who will be enrolled in the future. The wording is formal: Omnibus utriusque sexu Christifidelibus, qui dictam confraternitatem in posterum ingredientur... And again: tam decriptis quam in tempore describendis.

To all Christians of either sex who will become members of the Confraternity according to the conditions laid down at this time.

This formal wording is an affirmative answer to the no less formal statutes of our Confraternity, statutes sent to Rome at the beginning of 1864 and of which Fr. Jouët in his last letter sent you a printed copy enclosed with a printed copy also of the brief in question. The Statutes declare that "any Catholic of whatever age, sex, nation, can become part of this Prayer Association". And further "This Association is not for France alone but for the whole world."

This formal wording has a natural explanation in the general rule followed by all confraternities. They enrol individually as associates anybody from any country who so wishes. This formal wording becomes more so again in 1869 with the official letter which the Archbishop of Bourges sent to the Holy Father. His Grace wrote, dated February 2, 1869: "...ita crescit benedicente Domino, (illa confraternitas vulgo dicta de Notre-Dame du Sacré-Cœur d'Issoudun) ut hodie in toto pene orbe terrarum diffusa videatur, et nomina sociorum, in tabulis inscripta plus quam 2.400.000 numerentur. Quae propter Sanctitatem Suam enixe rogamur ut imagini Beatae Virginis Mariae sub nomine Notre-Dame du Sacré-Cœur solemnem coronationem velit impertiri..."

This Confraternity through God's grace flourishes... and today one sees it spread throughout the world. The number of its registered associates is as many as 2,400,000. That is why we presume to ask earnestly His Holiness to favour the solemn coronation of the statue of the Blessed Virgin Mary under the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

It was in answer to this appeal and the extraordinary growth of associate members that Pius IX on February 23, 1869, sanctioned the coronation. This formal wording was again repeated in a subscript from Pius IX, dated June 13, 1870, granting to all associates wherever they lived an indulgence of a hundred days, already granted to all the associates of the Bourges Archdiocese for the recital of Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and a new brief dated that same day from Pius IX declared: "Gratulamur vobis, quod Sodalitas a Domina Nostra Sacratissimi Cordis apud vos instituta propagetur quotidie magis."

We rejoice with you that the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Confraternity set up by you spreads more widely by the day.

Cannot it be said, after all this, that we have been given the privilege of enrolling everybody from any nation when the enrolling is undertaken individually?

II

Besides this primary brief of the Association and others which confirm it, there is another one within which the Holy Father gives authority to enrol Confraternities, but this new privilege is limited to the Archdiocese of Bourges alone. This is what we carried out. We only made this affiliation known within the Archdiocese of Bourges alone, nothing outside the diocese; we would have infringed our rights, and we were very much aware of it. But this new brief, which dates from the very year of the crowning, does not interfere in any way with the privilege already granted whereby we can individually enrol the faithful of whatsoever nation.

It is easy, Reverend Father, to see from the foregoing, how the Rome Archconfraternity confuses the two briefs in the different complaints addressed to us. When it states that we have been limited to the Archdiocese of Bourges alone, that is to be understood with reference to the second Archconfraternity brief and not to the first. When the Roman Archconfraternity tells us that we have gone beyond our rights when establishing centres in Italy and elsewhere, evidently under the impression that we have affiliated Confraternities in different parts of the world, such is not the case. Our associates in Italy, Spain, Holland, etc. are all associated with us to the extent that they have forwarded their individual names only. This has always been the condition laid down by us.

There are not, then, centres properly so-called which we have set up, but quasi centres (veluti centris) which the Holy Father wrote about when replying to an Album we sent on to him in the name of all the Association's centres. Pius IX congratulated us on the prodigious number of our associates: "Gaudemus prodigiosum numerum nomen dedisse Sodalitio..." and he thanked us for all the testimonies "...quae nomina innumerorum Sodalium, a compluribus Sodalitii veluti centris mittebantur".

We are delighted with such a large number of names forwarded to the Centre; June 22, 1874; brief signed by Pius IX.

It should now be easier for you, Reverend Father, to end all equivocation on this issue. In order to ensure the safeguarding of the work, it is urgent that you obtain for us the title and right of a universal Archconfraternity such as Our Lady of Victories. In no way whatsoever do we wish to tamper with the Rome Archconfraternity, but we insist on the same favours for Issoudun, where devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart began. Here was to be found the first confraternity which, like a mother, has given birth to all the others of the same name, even that in Rome. If, however, the title and right of universal archconfraternity can only be granted on condition that Rome and Italy are excepted, we shall be always greatly indebted to you in obtaining it for us. If the organization of all this necessitates a new visit to Rome, however awkward for us at this present time, we shall undertake it nevertheless for the cause of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and the good of the faithful. We hope, for all that, that you will overcome all the problems and we shall be eternally grateful to you.

Please accept, Father, our appreciation of your endeavour to bring this issue to a successful conclusion.

Yours sincerely in the Lord,
J. Chevalier, MSC.

Dear Father,

The Archbishop of Bourges feels that I should go to Rome myself. I shall leave on Friday and I hope to be in Rome at 9.30 on Monday morning. Thanks for the hospitality you so kindly offer me. In the document you have sent on, the Archbishop of Bourges thinks that it is outrageous that we cannot enrol individually an Italian who might like to have his name in our registers. At least if we have to make this concession in the cause of peace, His Grace claims that all Italians already enrolled in our Issoudun registers should not be obliged to do the same again in the Rome Association. The condition, then, which is now being imposed on us, would only concern new Italian associates and not former ones (this is reasonable). Soon we shall discuss together this number of the document which alone creates problems. Many thanks for your help. The Archbishop of Bourges would like you to take this issue in hand and attend the discussions.

Please accept my sincere good wishes, and carry my good wishes for the New Year to the Very Reverend Father Superior.

Your Grace,

I had forgotten to tell Cardinal Pitra that I was presenting myself to make his acquaintance at the very same moment he was writing to Your Grace to say that I had yet to come to Rome. I forwarded this morning to the Cardinal those two letters I brought with me, together with the episcopal documentation. Having looked at the latter, His Eminence said to me that he didn't think it would be worthwhile to present these volumes to the Holy Father who would pass them on to the Congregation of Rites, and it would be better, therefore, to send them to Bishop Bartolini who is a member of the committee involved in their evaluation. His Eminence added that in all probability I would not meet the Holy Father because in an audience he would speak effusively of the consecration issue and the committee wanted this to be kept secret. I do not know any longer what to do. Should I insist on seeing Pius IX in order to present him with your letter and the testimony of the bishops since Cardinal Pitra sent both back to me? Here they are not impressed by the Archbishop of Toulouse's letter to all the bishops of the Catholic world; such an undertaking is only the privilege of the Pope, His Eminence said to me.

I am now about to concern myself with the issues involving the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association, and I can easily foresee a lot of problems. I count on the support of your prayers.

I remain, Your Grace, with deepest respect, your humble and obedient servant and son.

Dear Confrère,

I am here in Rome since Monday morning. I haven't yet met the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart committee. Here is the gist of a common understanding forwarded to me at Issoudun the very day I left.

1. These gentlemen recognise the right of the Issoudun Confraternity to register individually all the names forwarded to us from whatever country in the world except Italy.
2. These gentlemen want the different Italian centres to be associated with the Roman one. (No doubt they are not so pretentious as to insist that all the Italian names registered with us [at Issoudun] should be newly registered in their Archconfraternity?)
3. They would have it that our Association be made an Archconfraternity for France and its colonies alone.
4. They would obtain a brief making our Association share in all their indulgences present and future.

What do you think of these proposals? It seems to me that a number of them need to be changed or modified. I have just now received a communication from Issoudun informing me that you are making it known that His Grace the Archbishop is arriving in Rome to engage himself with this issue. Could you tell me where His Grace will be staying so that I can go and see him and talk with him.

To Monsignor Gallo Giacomo, Consultor to the Roman Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Issoudun, February 4, 1875

Monsignor,

I have just returned from Bourges where I had been called by His Grace. Our distinguished Archbishop, principal director of the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, protector of its rights, has carefully examined the concordat and regulations which were presented to him. There is an important issue which His Grace cannot accept as formulated, identified with article 3 of the concordat. In pursuit of requisite harmony and peace, the following are the changes which His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges presents to you in the well-founded hope that you will accept them since they provide satisfactory safeguarding of the principles of law and freedom.

Chevalier now proceeds to numbers 3 and 4 without naming 1 and 2.

3. The Issoudun Archconfraternity will continue as hitherto to enrol individually all the faithful throughout the world inclusive of all its privileges. The new Italian associations will keep the right to enrol either at Rome or Issoudun, and in the case of the latter the document giving the number of names or the names themselves will be sent under the auspices of the Missionaries to the Rome Archconfraternity.

As for article 4 of the Statutes it will be modified in the following manner:

4. All the enrolling centres set up in Italy for the Issoudun Archconfraternity will be maintained, but it is to be understood that the document providing the number of names, or the names themselves sent to Issoudun, should in turn be sent on by the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart to the Rome Archconfraternity.

I very much hope, Monsignor, that the directive committee will experience no difficulties in accepting these two modifications which infringe nobody's rights. All the numbers of the concordat and the agreements have been accepted by His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges. I myself was as amazed as disappointed to notice, almost as soon as I had left Rome, that the directive committee had printed in your January presentation both in the Osservatore Romano and the Messenger of the Sacred Heart, etc., comments and decisions at odds with what had been decided. (The first draft here has: "...imprudent views and wrong decisions".) We were persuaded that the Issoudun viewpoint would have been accepted in Italy by anybody who so wished and yet I note that straightaway the contrary is being expressed. (The text here replaces: "...it followed that the Holy See wants the Rome view alone to be accepted in Italy".)

This way of acting has caused us a great deal of distress. (An earlier version read: "This way of acting is not acceptable.") It's in this way one causes spirits to be troubled. One appeals then in the name of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, who favoured Issoudun with this great privilege, for generosity of spirit, very sensitive prudence, and a sincere conciliatory spirit. Only in this way can real good come from the Association. (This last sentence was added on.)

With respectful good wishes in the Lord, Monsignor.

To the Rome Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Issoudun, March 6, 1875

Dear Sir,

I have read your reply to the parish priest of Osimo. I find it incorrect.

1. You are aware that when a brief does not at all limit association to a place, one may apply it everywhere. It is appropriate; it is common law: favores sunt ampliandi-odiosa sunt restringenda. Our approval brief, far from limiting, draws its inspiration from the purpose and the undertaking itself which is universal, and from the statutes which were submitted to the Holy See where it is expressly stated: That everyone of the faithful from whatever nation may be part of our Association, etc. You must, Sir, be well aware of this! Whence comes it that you are obstinate in maintaining and trying to persuade the contrary? This behaviour is not alone painful for us, but disrespectful to the Apostolic See. Your familiarity with issues should make clear to you that there is a significant difference between associating confraternities and writing down individual names! We never suggested that we had the right to associate the Confraternities since our Association is only an Archconfraternity for our diocese, but we have maintained, and will always continue to do so, based on Papal briefs and other documents to hand, that we have the right to enrol individually all the names of the faithful throughout the world and that they share in our indulgences and privileges.

2. Where does it come from once again that in your polemical statement (which I cannot rightly explain) you continue to confuse association of confraternities with enrolment of individual names? The meaning is significantly different and yet your reasoning is based on this confusion of issues.

I would appeal to you, Sir, to respect our rights and each one's freedom. Give over making war on our Association to which you owe everything. Feelings of delicacy and appreciation should draw from you another line of behaviour. You must be aware that Issoudun is the cradle of the valued devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You are also aware that it is us who gave this glorious name to the most holy Virgin and that without us your Confraternity would not exist at all and you would have nothing. For these reasons alone you should make the effort to protect and offer your support to our work which is the mother of yours. A serious union of the two Associations with reciprocal sharing in their privileges, each with its own freedom of action reinforced by charity, would be much more desirable.

With respectful good wishes in CJ.

Dear Father,

I am sending you on the letter addressed to dear Mother Lefebvre. Having read it, you will see whether that it is wise and prudent to pass it on to her, or if it might not be best that you should deal with all the issues referred to (in the letter) as if I only wrote to yourself. Act for the best and try to get the Mother Superior to do as from herself all that I am suggesting. The situation is tense. Madam Pirinoli is jealous and life is made awkward for her.

These young women wholly wish to live as hitherto. They are, so it seems, very offended by what I said about all of them being novices in the same way in the new Society of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and would once more make vows after the Novitiate year. But it is that which was decided. As well, there is their erroneous view that they do want to be led by a true novice, my sister Felicity. This is unacceptable! The good Mother should say to Sister Ardène that in reality it is she who is the Superior in her absence. It is obvious. The time has long since arrived to remedy the situation.

Cheerio, dear Father. Until next time.

Wholly yours in CJ.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

On second thoughts, I am sending my letter directly to Reverend Mother Superior. Ask her to let you have it. I shall tell her to do so.

Dear Reverend Mother,

We received your kind letter addressed to Fr. Jouët; before returning it to him we are sending you a word by way of reply concerning the issue of the decree which is causing you concern. This decree is in effect of great importance; it was never in any way officially sent to us. In the meantime the Archbishop of Bourges has taken charge of the matter. He has sent his representative to Rome (Monsignor Druon, one of the Vicar Generals), accompanied by Father Jouët to ask for an explanation from the Holy See, which we will hasten to share with you when we receive it. While awaiting the reply, we are placing in abeyance any orders for pictures, which explains why you haven't received anything. The decree at issue seems to us to be identified with a group opposed to the devotion, but we are firmly confident that we shall overcome this difficulty and that matters can be satisfactorily worked out in Rome as they have been in Spain.

Dear Father,

Thanks for your latest letter and the expectations it allows us to hope for. You must not leave Rome without a document written by the Pope, or in his name, compensating for the carnage caused by Cardinal Patrizi's letter. It is massive. The trouble is all of his making. There are over-zealous priests and laity who go so far as to tear the pictures and smash the statues of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. They are truly iconoclasts looking on us as heretics condemned by the Holy See. We cannot stay quiet before this charge. Accordingly, an official letter coming directly or indirectly from the Pope is absolutely necessary. Convey our gratitude a thousand times over to Monsignor Druon. (Vicar General of Bourges - see above.)

You should have had a letter from me the day before yesterday.

2. Monsignor de Luca has forgotten that we sent 50 letters from bishops to him 9 months ago asking not only for the approval of the Society but likewise for the Constitutions. It seems to me that these letters should be sufficient since if asked for again the bishops would refer us back to the preceding ones, creating too much bother for them.

Ask Monsignor de Luca: with reference to p.40, No.2 of our Constitutions, if he considers it opportune to have: "Superior Generalis ad perpetuum eligitur." The Archbishop of Bourges would like to have it so. Give consideration, together with Monsignor Druon, to the prospect of a house in Rome which would be suitable for us.

My regards to the Seminary priests, to Monsignor Luca, to the Bocca sisters, to Mademoiselle Koepper, rue du Quirinal, 45.

Dear Father,

Your letter this morning offers little reassurance. If our pictures and statues of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart are not authorized for public veneration in the future the Association will suffer a terrible blow. Nobody would want to have the former ones because they would be considered discredited... May Our Lady of the Sacred Heart defend her interests! I pray for you; I am with you. I accompany you everywhere; we are on Calvary, and let us hope for the Resurrection. My regards to Monsignor Druon, etc. I shall forward to you all the letters and weekly papers which deal with our problem.

Issoudun, April 15, 1875

Dear Father,

I am forwarding you an article against Our Lady from the Messenger of the Sacred Heart. It is a piece mischievously incorporating Cardinal Patrizi's letter. This is how what is outrageous is spread about. One is led to understand that we were already warned about this, resisted, and then the Inquisition struck us down, although the letter was addressed to Poland. Anyway, let us be patient and pray. Keep this piece. (The Messenger of the Sacred Heart article.)

I received just now your letter. I do not think that a Papal letter to the Archbishop of Bourges is what we need. If the statues of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart are forbidden to be placed in public for the future, the problem remains and the blow is mortal. Fiat, fiat!

I shall let you know the contents of the letter sent to His Grace (Bourges) if you do not have it. If our statue is banned for public worship, the Archbishop must appeal against it. Besides the issue of the statue, there is the deeper, more serious, problem arising from Cardinal Patrizi's letter making us say what we have never either put forward or upheld. It completely misrepresents the significance of our thinking on devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. It is condemnatory of our worthy Archbishop, 400 bishops and the Pope himself who has wholly approved and sanctioned it with indulgences. Truly this is an example of nothing being understood in all of this...

Cheerio, dear friend. Everybody is well here, but sad in spirit. My regards to Monsignor Druon. What you tell me about Fr. Freyd greatly surprises me. As for the Bishop of Autun, I would have expected it to be so.

Again, farewell. Wholly yours in CJ.

Dear Father,

I received your letter and your copy of the circular. (Letter from Cardinal Patrizi to the Archbishop of Bourges in reply to the latter's request for an explanation about the reservations concerning the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart devotion.) Because the official Roman letter has been sent to Bourges, we shall shortly be made aware of its contents. It would be best to wait two or three days before publishing the May issue (of the Annals). Send on an article.

The May 1875 issue of the Annals contains (a) the text of the circular edited by Jouët, now in the Rome General Archives; (b) the Latin text of Cardinal Patrizi's letter, February 28, to Bishop de Przemysl; (c) the French translation by Fr. Georgelin, MSC; (d) the letter from the Archbishop of Bourges to Fr. Chevalier, May 1, 1875, with reference to Cardinal Patrizi's reply to the Archbishop, and not to be made public; (e) a short communication from Monsignor Mercurelli to Monsignor Druon on April 26; (f) an article by Father Jouët dealing with Cardinal Patrizi's letter to Bishop de Przemysl, including also Chevalier's letter to the Pope, March 19, and the article of Monat Rosen, Innsbrück, this April, 1875.

As for an acceptance, it will be made in advance whatever the thrust of the letter. Nobody could question our whole and entire acceptance of Roman decrees. Cardinal Patrizi's letter has disastrous consequences for our Society, our work and our dear Association. God has allowed this to happen! May his holy name be praised!

Dear Father,

His Grace sent me just now the official reply.

Cardinal Patrizi's communication to the Archbishop of Bourges, April 14, 1875; the Archbishop's letter to Chevalier was written on April 22, received on the 24th.

The Cardinal states that all the problems, and his letter to the Bishop of Galicia, have nothing to do with the Issoudun Association, that there is nothing to change in our undertaking, that our statues and pictures, public or private, already before the public, remain as they are, and with regard to the future only those which are part of public worship will be modified a little. The Cardinal forbade the publication of his letter and, accordingly, the Archbishop (of Bourges) will present a résumé of it which he will sign and we shall place it in our Annals and the public press. That's all. You may now return when it is convenient for you. I was pleased to read the account of your audience (April 20, 1875). All the same, an unfortunate blow has been levelled at our dear Association! A St. Vincent de Paul sister has written from Cracow reporting that the Jesuits in that city have set up our Association in their church and are not unused to changing of statues.

What is happening to our Constitutions with Monsignor de Luca? (Chevalier will have to wait about two more years until February 1877!) Near the Propaganda College, could you locate a house which would be suitable for our young men and under what financial conditions? Circular from the Office of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Associations.

Chevalier wrote at the head of this letter:

I declare to anyone concerned that I never had any awareness of this letter and I did not sign it. It is, then, inappropriate for it to be signed in my name.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

M...

Several of our associates have questioned us on the issue of the reply from the Congregation of the Holy Office according to which the title Our Lady of the Sacred Heart does not give expression to the sovereignty of the Blessed Virgin over the Sacred Heart of Jesus, but her sovereignty over us alone. The Sacred Congregation does not in this reply deny that the Blessed Virgin has sovereign power over the Heart of Jesus, but what is meant is that she has not this power as from herself, something which we do not at all query. Following from the same reply, the statues and pictures of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart involved in public worship should present the Blessed Virgin holding the Infant Jesus in her arms.

But it should be noted:

1. That this reply is addressed to a Polish bishop and only refers to that country! This is what the Holy Father orally stated.
2. It concerns only statues which are part of public worship, and in the supposition that the reply concerned us, one could always promote our statues and pictures based on the Issoudun model for private worship.

Wishing to end all uncertainty, the Archbishop of Bourges took control of the situation. His representative is in Rome with one of our priests seeking explanations which we shall share with you when we receive them.

Please accept my respectful and devoted good wishes in SS.CC of JMJ.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

*This circular most likely dates from the end of April 1875 while Druon and Jouët, see above, were in Rome. The letter's hand-writing is identifiably that of J.F. To Fr. Victor Jouët, MSC, Paris.

Issoudun, May 9, 1875

Dear Father,

There is nothing new to report from here. I am hurrying on the dispatch of the Annals. It seems certain that we are going to have barracks beside our house, ten metres from our cloister. The local paper has mentioned it and the Mayor came to tell me. This matter was kept quiet so as to prevent us from intervening. It is a calamity in every respect. To begin with, it is too close to the new hospice; the sick will be continually under strain from the beating of drums, etc. Then if there happens to be an epidemic either in the hospice or barracks, these two establishments will suffer.

Now with regard to ourselves, what an unhappy neighbourhood! Our community has been here 20 years. By vocation we are studious and recollected. How can we pray and work (in the new circumstances)? Furthermore, the soldiers will have us continually under their gaze – ten metres' separation is nothing. Moreover, it has to be said that our house was set up by His Grace to be a sanctuary for those who wished to make retreats. How can this work go ahead if the barracks are there? Moreover, we have an authorized school (the maîtrise, kindergarten); what neighbours for the children! How can they work? Furthermore, our Sanctuary is a very frequented place of pilgrimage. What quiet recollection can the pilgrims have? They cannot go out or step outside without coming into contact with the soldiers. Make all these arguments weigh with the Archbishop who is in Paris. Ask His Grace to contact the War Minister. The Archbishop's wishes would suffice for the barracks to be placed elsewhere, particularly so when it is the wish of the majority of the population. There are other parts of Issoudun which would be more suitable. Here two articles already in the local paper which challenge the project; I am sending on that of today; show it to the Archbishop. React quickly and forcefully. If the Archbishop cannot intervene, see Monsignor Druon or get going yourself with the encouragement of the Archbishop. Time is not on our side.

On the First Communion certificates sent by Fr. Durin it is not stated that .....X made First Communion in the Church of..... etc. This is not very helpful. Then I would want to give more than 0.15 centimes (about 48 euros) with each (certificate). I would like you to see Fr. Bouasse about this. Greetings to the good Father. Fr. Ariens drew the approval of all for his soutanes.

Issoudun, May 12, 1875

Dear Father,

1. I am sending you a document signed in my name. Last evening I wrote a paper for you in which all the arguments in our favour are put forward. Write a letter with Fr. Durin to the Archbishop for the War Minister. By presenting it to the Archbishop who is in Paris everything will go ahead more speedily.

2. The Statues of the Virgin and Child are unappealing, being ugly and unattractive; the crowns make a very unappealing impact, being too narrow, in particular that of the Child. The Child's fingers pointing towards the Mother are not prominent enough...

It would be a pity if our associates came to know the new model through this inadequate presentation. If the sculpture is in wood that's fine, but if in steel it is frightful. When we have it done in steel it will be necessary to choose an artist who can bring himself to make perfect figures. But for that one needs to reconstruct the model. The Virgin's eyes are too large, her veil too much towards the front and the figure of the Child, as you are aware, leaves a lot to be desired.

3. Vanves worries me: his forbidding of the "Remember You" (Souvenez-vous) is a worrying sign. Who might give advice? I pray for our dearly loved Fr. Vandel. Let me have news of him. It is absolutely necessary that he avoids becoming tired. He would do himself a favour if he stopped giving retreats. Complete rest at Issoudun and being well looked after would do him, I believe, a lot of good.

4. I am replying to Fr. Durin. See my letter.

To His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, June 16, 1875

Your Grace,

No solution to the problem has yet come about with regard to the camps. We are very threatened in having them just beside us. The civil authority refers to the military authority and vice-versa. The Prefect whom I was privileged to see frankly admitted that, having been side-lined by the Government in this matter, he did not want to become involved officially in any way. All he could do, so he said, was to favour us if consulted by the Minister.

The Mayor of Issoudun informed me yesterday that he was not authorized in any way by the War Minister to deal with us, and otherwise, he having handed over his competence here to the War Minister, it is with the latter we should be engaging, and that in any event the Minister would make known in an official document addressed to the Town of Issoudun that, for reasons that he would appreciate, the new camp should be set up elsewhere. One must, therefore, Your Grace, by all the means possible, obtain this official declaration since, otherwise, we shall never succeed. Would Your Grace be so good as to importune the War Minister! Because His Excellency has already had the work postponed, this proves that he took our pleas into consideration.

Otherwise, it is obvious that encampment at the Sacred Heart is in no way convenient for the reasons already mentioned, and the Minister faced with formal opposition would provide evidence of his shrewdness in taking to heart the best interests of the troops and the town of Issoudun itself.

With deepest regards, I am Your Grace's very humble and obedient servant.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Vichy, June 27, 1875

Dear Father,

I have come here from Saint Gérard; the Bishop of Moulins tonsured our good scholastics. It was very touching. I wrote to the Prefect and the Mayor yesterday about the camps. Mother Antonie is exaggerating. The good Mother must accept a new picture for public worship in her Dutch association, since otherwise the work of her architect will come to nothing if her picture is approved, with ours also affected. I await your reply concerning the marriage of Mademoiselle Emma Doidy. Is it Wednesday, or is it Thursday? Send a reply by return of post. I am still waiting for the Weekly Religious (periodical) of last week and yesterday. This is the third time.

Cheerio, dear Father. Nothing new. The Daniel business is making no progress.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Article 455To the President of the French Republic.*

B 18750630

Undated; perhaps the end of June, 1875

Dear Mr. President of the Republic,

It is the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, through the offices of their distinguished Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, who make bold to call on your sense of justice and seek satisfaction. It concerns the setting up of a garrison at Issoudun. The previous municipal administration chose a site called The Bernardines, which by everybody's reckoning was the most convenient. The military engineers were satisfied.

New elections led to a change in the municipal council. Due to antipathy directed against a former councillor who would have greatly profited from these undertakings, the present administration is bringing forward changes to the original plan and suggests other sites than that originally chosen. Three replacement sites have been suggested and one of these has consequences for our undertaking. Now, Mr. President of the Republic, you must know that we have been here at Issoudun for twenty years. Our Society's aim is to give ourselves over to serious study, to prayer, education. We have in our house over a number of years a voluntary school attended by the youngsters of Issoudun. His Grace the Archbishop has officially recommended our establishment to the priests of the archdiocese for retreats where, over several days, they can revitalize the priestly virtues. Accordingly, our aim and all its accompanying activities require an isolation incompatible with a camp and the continuous sound of drums and bugles when one knows that this camp is no more than ten metres away from our cloister wall and thirty from where we live.

Moreover, Mr. President of the Republic, our community's church has become a pilgrimage centre over the past ten years, frequented by people not only from the Berry but the whole of France. Our sanctuary, which holds the miraculous statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, crowned by Pius the IX, and the centre of the devotion spread throughout the world, several times each year hosts ten thousand, twenty thousand, sometimes forty thousand pilgrims. Prayer in silence looked for by all these people, and our preaching, would become impossible with the continuous noise I mentioned above. Our work for the honour and betterment of our country would become impossible.

And, moreover, if the legal formalities in the choice of site had been met with, we would have less right to make our case, but it is not at all like that! The Mayor of Issoudun kept quiet about this plan. He fixed on eight spaces for the site of this undertaking beside our house, although entitled to two only. He furtively took hold of the instrument of appropriation, purchasing without notice and in a definitive fashion all the needed terrain. The very important issue of a public enquiry prescribed by law and so necessary whether de commodo or de incommodo (conveniently or inconveniently) becomes a pretext from which one is exempt. No attempt was made to discuss this project with interested parties such as ourselves, and which we only came to know about through a notification in a local paper when the ground was already purchased. We protested to the Mayor, but he said it was too late. The Archbishop of Bourges protested to the War Minister and we have had a reply to say that we can freely choose another site if we wish to take back some of the land purchased by the town, discharge the latter of all responsibility and take upon ourselves all future expenses. This proposal is unacceptable in the sense that we cannot go into a thing blindly. We find ourselves faced with two claims: a) from the twenty owners who will look for compensation from us if the barracks is transferred elsewhere. And who will determine this compensation? b) that of the town which would want us to take financial responsibility for the new sites which it would want to buy and the other expense issues which this transference could entail.

We cannot, Mr. President of the Republic, in any way take on such an undertaking given that the town itself created these problems by its failure to forewarn us about its project of installing a barracks beside us, as was indeed its duty, neglecting thereby the legal formalities of a public enquiry which is required in parallel circumstances.

Secondly, Mr. President of the Republic, I am obliged to inform Your Excellency that the barracks which one wishes to place beside our house could not be more disadvantageously situated not merely for the reasons given above, but also because of its proximity to the cemetery and the town's hospitals, from which it would be no more distanced than by 15 metres or so. Moreover, if the garrison presently suggested is increased, which is likely, one cannot enlarge the barracks because it is narrowly hemmed in on all sides. All these drawbacks are so serious and sensitive for the inhabitants of Issoudun that the enclosed appeal has in a short time been filled with a very large number of signatures. We present ourselves, thus, most humbly before the President of the Republic, appealing to your lofty impartiality for the transfer of the barracks in keeping with the conditions laid down in the enclosed letter from the Archbishop of Bourges.

I have the honour to be, Mr. President of the Republic, etc.

Dear Minister,

Knowing the keen interest you are kind enough to have for our undertaking, you will permit me to present to Your Excellency the difficulties under which we are labouring at this moment. Here are the final stages which have been reached concerning the issue of the barracks which was to be built at Issoudun.

1. Choosing to build it in the Field of Love (Champs d'amour) beside our residence, that is to say fifteen metres from our enclosure wall in its full extent and within thirty metres of our dwelling-house.
2. Besides these considerable inconveniences, the building would be close to the cemetery and hospital; the sick, obviously, would be affected by the noise from the barracks and, given an epidemic outbreak, who could envisage what ill-effects would follow? Furthermore, if the garrison at Issoudun became enlarged later, it would be physically impossible to extend this new barracks since it is hemmed in on the northern side by the hospital, on the east by the cemetery, in the centre by our premises and on the west by Red Cross St. As all the world knows, this siting is the worst one can possibly choose.

Article 457To a Minister.*

B 18750630 C

*Undated
The last two sentences by Chevalier*

I consider it my duty to keep you well informed about the latter stages of the barracks' issue. I begin by stating that the choice of the Field of Love (Champs d'amour) site, in addition to its serious disadvantages, was undertaken without our knowledge. We became aware of it in a local newspaper when the site had been already bought. We could not have been more astonished when this important issue was dealt with without our knowing about it or having anything to do with us.

Having taken on so much for Issoudun over the past twenty years, having changed the character of the town and drawn so many outsiders to it, we should have the right to be informed about the neighbours we are being given, and having neighbours like these is most inopportune. It considerably affects our undertaking, paralyses our activities and makes it very difficult to engage in our work such as the education of the young, clergy retreats and religious exercises preached in our church before a vast number of faithful and participants from elsewhere. All this compelling us through dire necessity to take ourselves somewhere else, most assuredly with considerable loss. If the public enquiry de commodo and de incommodo (about advantages and disadvantages) had taken place we could have protested, but this very important requirement (in law) was not adhered to.

3. (There is no 1 and 2) When we did protest, the Mayor of Issoudun informed us that it was too late, and the site had been bought. I put it to him that we would buy it; he said to me as well that there should be no difficulty. I asked him to draw up an act of purchase. Eight days had passed by when he informed me that we would have to take on responsibility for any debts incurred. I agreed. Following that, the ministry letter requested by the Archbishop of Bourges laid down the same conditions, which we accepted.

The Mayor also demanded other undertakings from us which the Minister of War did not look for. He wanted us to be responsible for the most valued part of the Alouettes site, 6 hectares rather than 3. And, in addition, 6,000 francs (roughly 19,145 euros) to carry out canal work taking water to the barracks. Aware of all these problems, the gentlemen (councillors) of Issoudun, having in mind our concerns and those of the town, considered the former Bernardines' site, chosen by the previous municipal administration, as perfectly situated, easily accessible to the water works and satisfactorily acceptable to and approved by the military authorities.

The new municipal council rejected this on the pretext that the owners wanted to sell their ground for 20,000 francs a hectare (roughly 63,815 euros). These gentlemen, I repeat, on finding these owners so unyielding, went on to find them very co-operative and accordingly bought three hectares of the ground for construction work at 5,000 francs a hectare, whereas beside our house the Mayor had to buy four acres for 6,000 francs an acre. These gentlemen, in order to reconcile the interests of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and those of the town, went to the Mayor offering him the Bernardines' site in exchange for that of the Sacred Heart. You (the Mayor) will benefit by 9,000 francs (in this transaction) since you will only have to pay 15,000 francs whereas you would have to pay the Sacred Heart 24,000 francs. Moreover, if you so wish it, you can commence work tomorrow.

You can rest assured as of now that the military authorities will not be opposed because it was contrary to their wish to give up the other site which had been their choice. The Mayor did not agree. Why? We do not know. The Archbishop of Bourges is about to bring these problems to the attention of the Minister of War.

With good wishes, Minister, we seek the help of your influential self, for which we shall be lastingly grateful.

I have the honour to be, Minister, your humble servant, etc.

L 18750709

Issoudun, July 9, 1875

Your Grace,

Following Your Grace's advice I again went to Chateauroux to discuss the barracks' issue with the Prefect. Mr. de Cazes was pleased to come to Issoudun yesterday to preside over a meeting at which the Mayor was present. Two proposals were put to me:

1. To put at out disposal the site and area of the town where the ground has been bought and meet the expenses which the vendors can claim, in keeping with their rights. This was all the Ministry letter demanded. I accepted this condition without reservations. But the Mayor, supported by the Prefect, put forward another proposal, and here it is:
2. The Sacred Heart should, moreover, take on responsibility for the most valued part of the new ground, if there is such, and in addition seven or eight hundred metres of the canal area taking water to the barracks for 10 or 15 francs (32 or 48 euros) a metre. The town, he stated, should come away from this (MSC) favourable agreement indemnified. I protested, stating that the Minister's letter had nothing whatsoever to say about this last stipulation, going outside his intentions, and that the Sacred Heart in accepting the conditions laid down by the town, so it seemed to me, had no other demand to meet, and since no public enquiry, as the law lays down, had taken place, it was for the Council to meet any responsibility for a surplus of expenses, if there was any, arising from the barracks' negotiations. This is how things stood (at the end of the meeting). Only the Minister can solve this problem. I humbly ask, Your Excellency, what we should do now.

I am, Your Grace, your obedient servant and son.

Concerning a letter from the Superioress, Vanves, to Mother Felicity.

D 18750709 A

Issoudun, July 9, 1875

Here is the reply sent this morning to Mother Felicity by the Superioress, Vanves.

"It would be appropriate meanwhile, so I believe, for Sister Arsène to carry out her intention and send a letter to Canon Dedoue, giving him at the same time a copy of the open letter sent to the Mother Superior. I shall put together this little work and send it to you before posting it.

Your devoted child."

V. Jouët

Our houses, as you say, should be separate in everything and each should look after itself for its necessities and pay its debts.

My Dear Mother,

The two houses, as you say, are distinct and each should look after itself and make do with its own personnel. This means, therefore, that the Issoudun house is there for the Religious who are in Issoudun. The immediate foregoing comes from Jouët.

Chevalier now adds:

It is 5,000 francs (roughly 15,650 euros) and not 3,000 francs which we have to pay by the 20th of this month; the matter is urgent. I can understand that the material side of a society's houses should be distinct with regard to upkeep. But to meet the expenses for the purchase of a house becomes impossible. My sister Felicity, who has paid 14,000 francs (about 43,820 euros), is prepared to provide the remainder, but on condition that the house will belong to her alone. It is, then, a new undertaking and rightly so. We are living at a time when one must expect anything because of political events. One cannot take enough precautions. It is necessary, then, for the Issoudun community to look after its own affairs, and for such to be so involves the religious in Issoudun alone and not those who are in Paris. This requires a new act (jurisdictional) which should be speedily introduced.

Undated, possibly July, 1875

If I had to stay by myself, I would do so.

Well, then, my good Mother, having prayed and reflected at length, the grace of the divine Heart of Jesus has moved us to clarify things; we now clearly gather that we are estranged from the will of the good Lord and those sacred promises pronounced at the feet of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in Issoudun on the day of our foundation with the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and with the Archbishop of Bourges on the 8th of December last. May Our Lord pardon us for all the sorrow which we have brought on his divine Heart over the past 6 months!

My Sisters, together with me, are firmly resolved to be true daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in adhering to the Rules and Constitutions, observing them very faithfully.

The mission which this good Mother has confided to us is too beautiful to forsake. Since Vanves no longer wishes to be involved ("that is its choice" is crossed out) we greatly regret it, but for our part our choice well reflected on and well presented before the Lord is to remain faithful. My Issoudun sisters want it so... Sister Valdegg is going to write, etc.... who herself alone has made 14,000 francs available in a down-payment.

Since you are leaving us, my good Mother, this matter must be regularized and the conditions of purchase renewed, since it is not right that you remain proprietor with my sister, Louise, of a house towards which you contributed no funds. In consequence, we are taking responsibility for the 5,000 francs due to be paid on the 20th of this month and also the other sums due to be met, until the final payment of 26,000 francs which our Issoudun house cost. As well, the lease of the Ponroy house, which we are also responsible for, has to be met. I bring all these issues to your attention so that we can deal with them as soon as possible.

May the Heart of Jesus etc.

L 18750713

To His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, July 13, 1875

Your Grace,

I am sorry that the barracks' issue is not any further advanced. This is where it is at the moment. We accept, as Your Grace is aware, the conditions laid down by His Excellency the War Minister, for the displacing of the barracks. We shall take it upon ourselves to be responsible for the ground bought and we shall meet the indemnities which those who sold it lay claim to, if they are so entitled (something I do not accept).

The Mayor of Issoudun, on instructions from the Prefect of the Indre, met the vendors yesterday and informed them that the military authorities were moving the barracks elsewhere to please us and asked them if they wanted to take back their land or give it to us at the same price. All of them replied that they would take their land back, but wanted to be indemnified by us since this repossession was only taking place because they wanted to be favourable to us. They went so far as to ask for 50,000 francs (about 159,538 euros) as the enclosed Mayor's letter makes clear.

To find our way out of these difficulties, and such as the following, which I have the honour to bring to Your Grace's attention, there is only one way open: it is imperative that the Minister declares frankly to the town: "We overlooked the investigation de commodo and incommodo (about convenience, inconvenience); as a consequence of the serious objections to the siting of the barracks beside the Sacred Heart, we withdraw from this site. Here, without any delay, we present another."

The town, accordingly, will be obliged to take over the most worthwhile ground, if there be such, and all the consequences of this take-over. Without such an undertaking, we shall be dragged into disputes and endure the lasting inconveniences arising from a barracks. As for the new replacement (of the barracks) at Alouettes, both the Mayor and Prefect insist that we undertake as our responsibility the most valuable part of the ground which is quite considerable. The proprietors do not want to give over their ground for less than eight thousand and ten thousand francs an acre and, moreover, they want to sell everything they own in this area, that is to say a total of six hectares.

The military administration are looking for no more than three hectares for the barracks; this means that we would be obliged to hold on to three acres, and we could only sell on at two or three thousand francs a hectare (this is the normal price of this land). Beside the Sacred Heart, the town has purchased land for about six thousand francs a hectare: which, one must say, is very dear.

Besides this demand, the Mayor and Prefect are calling for another: they want us, besides, to be responsible for six or eight hundred metres of the canal taking water to the barracks, costing ten or fifteen francs a metre, and giving rise to expenses of eight or ten thousand francs. Their reasoning is that if the barracks stayed beside the Sacred Heart only thirty metres of canal would be needed whereas it is six or eight hundred metres at Alouettes. The real motive for all this haggling is that the town council wanted to have the barracks beside our place. What makes me certain about this is the following fact which I bring to Your Grace's attention.

On the 3rd of November 1874 the municipal council unanimously (Mr. Guignard was Mayor at that time) agreed that the ground for the barracks should be that of the Bernardines; it was on the road to Chezal-Benoît beside the Octroi. This site, suitable in every respect, was accepted with pleasure by the military authorities as the best of all that was on offer. But, unfortunately, new elections changed the municipal council and the Mayor. Through antipathy for a former councillor who would have greatly benefited from the proximity (of the camp) because he owned a lot of small houses nearby, the new Mayor rejected this siting by the Council under the pretext that it was being sought to sell him this ground at 16,000 and even 20,000 francs an acre.

Aware of the real reason for this refusal, two Issoudun gentlemen, very attached to us, went to meet the proprietors of the Bernardine ground, and bought it unconditionally on printed paper, signed by the sellers, for only 5,000 francs an acre and not at sixteen or twenty thousand francs an acre. They went to see the Mayor and said to him: "You have turned down the Bernardine site as it would have cost you too much. Very well! We have bought the three acres at 5,000 francs a hectare. We are offering them to you in exchange for the ground of the Sacred Heart. At the Sacred Heart you have bought 4 hectares for 6,000 francs a hectare because the owners did not want to keep the pieces of land which were theirs. In accepting our proposal which pleases all interests and which will also please the military administration, you are immediately saving 9,000 francs. You therefore have no reason whatsoever to refuse our offer with every advantage accompanying its acceptance; from this very evening if you so wish you can commence work on your barracks."

The Mayor replied "that he didn't want this siting at any price, that he would contest against everyone in this proposal and that his council would never agree that the barracks should be at the Sacred Heart or the Alouettes quarter and nor was it for us to decide".

If the Minister can speak in the manner expressed above, we shall soon be free of our embarrassments.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's humble and obedient servant and son in C.J.

B 18750719

Issoudun, July, 19, 1875

Dear Sir,

At one and the same time I make you share surprise and rebuke. The Analecta (Ecclesiastica, a French language publication from 1852, in Rome first, then in France, lasting until the death of its founder, editor, Monsignor Louis Chaillot in 1891) in its second-last number presented some incomplete extracts from the letter of Cardinal Patrizi against devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I am amazed that your publication did not include the whole letter from His Eminence to the Bishop of Presmyl as it appeared in the Unita Catholica, the Osservatore Romano and our Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You could see that you have made him say what he did not say and its significance becomes exaggerated.

The Archbishop of Bourges demanded an explanation from Rome. The same Cardinal wrote a letter to His Grace in the name of the Pope where it is expressly stated that these issues do not in any way apply to the Issoudun Missionaries and that the Roman Court never had any intention of calling into question our statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, which is beyond reproach.

His Grace the Archbishop in an official letter which appeared in the Florence paper, in the Universe, in our Annals and many religious publications set out the facts, and in the name of Pius IX calmed the concern of the faithful. Today I am forwarding this letter to you petitioning you to include it in your next publication number.

2. The Analecta faithfully presents the Decrees of the modern Congregations and the official notifications of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. Yet since the 12th of June, 1874, our Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart has been formally approved by authentic decree, published in the Florence paper, the Monde, the Universe, in our Annals, and yet the Analecta has not as yet referred to it however much it has published much more recently pieces coming from Rome in the same vein. I shall be obliged to you, then, to remedy this oversight. I am forwarding the decree.

With my respectful good wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

We shall give serious consideration to offer five hundred francs (1,595 euros) towards your Catholic Society if the Archbishop authorizes it.

Since we are about to undertake this project, we come, Your Eminence, to submit our request for your authorization. Some of our professed religious, not yet priests, are ready, under the care of two priests from our Congregation, to leave for Rome to set themselves up there to follow, as externals, the Propaganda Seminary courses. We humbly ask Your Eminence to let us know if there are other formalities to be dealt with in relation to this taking up of residence in Rome.

Council Meeting, August 6, 1875

In attendance: Very Rev. Fr. Superior, Frs. Piperon, Vandel, Jouët, Guyot, Georgelin.

Admission to Profession.

Fr. Guyot read the reports on the Novices and asked that those shortly ending the Novitiate be admitted to vows, Brothers Bizeuil, Carrière, Benjamin Grom. Brother Delimoges, given his medical state making him unsuitable for the priesthood, should only be accepted for vows as a lay brother. A dispensation was sought for him. Brother Thomas is held back. Father Vigerat asked to be considered for profession; the Council did not consider it opportune to accept him.

Chapter.

The Council next considered the election of a new Council, that of the Superior's four assistants. It will take place following the retreat of the priests who are part of the Chapter. These members will consist of, besides those presently members of the Council, Fr. Durin, General Bursar, Fr. Miniot, Superior of the 'Petit-Oeuvre' (Little Work) and Fr. Marie, Superior of the Chezal-Benoît college. It was also agreed, since the number of those who have taken the fourth vow is not yet enough, to go ahead with the election of Chapter members according to the Constitutions.

Brothers Barthou, de Mondiou, Postal, Bekel, and Thomas if he is professed, would be sent to the Rome scholasticate to follow the courses at Propaganda College.

Courses in the Humanities at St. Gérard.

Assistant (Socius) to the Novice Master.

3. Father Ramot will become Socius, replacing the Novice Master in his absence.

The final arrangement of personnel at the 'Petite Oeuvre' (Little Work) for 1875-1876. It was decided:

Issoudun, August 15, 1875

Dear Monsignor,

How good you are, your devotedness to Our lady of the Sacred Heart is wonderful! May you be blessed a thousand times! We shall follow your instructions. What you suggest in the way of answering the Lyons Catholic Week is perfect. Change, correct, whatever you think appropriate. What is essential is having a reply through the official magazine of the Bourges Archdiocese. The presumption of these detractors cannot be stopped, left to themselves. It is very much time to put an end to it. The latest letter from the Archbishop in the forthcoming issue of our Annals will make a deep impression.

Please accept, dear Monsignor, my appreciation and respectful good wishes.

J. Chevalier.

To Mr. Daniel, maker and dealer in statues, Paris.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Issoudun
17 August, 1875

This letter is not in the style of a Chevalier letter.

Dear Sir,

I am returning to you the snapshot of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart with my comments; take note of the latter and send me another photograph showing the changes.

1. The presentation of the Virgin is too sad and too elderly.
2. She leans too much towards the Infant's head.
3. The gesture of the child acknowledging his mother is not like the original sent to you; try to make them the same.
4. The Virgin's figure is too tall and not very pleasing.

As for the St. Joseph statue, here are my observations which I should like you to carry out.

1. The figure is too thin.
2. The child's head is too close to that of St. Joseph; I refer to your statues of 6.40 centimetres. I don't know any others. The rest is satisfactory, but the tiara is not good.
3. With regard to the reproduction of the St. Joseph statue or any others which are our property, it is totally forbidden for you to reproduce anything in photography, sculpture, picture, painting, etc., and if you attempt to do anything commercial, I am forewarning you that a tribunal will hold you to account. I am altogether amazed that you dare to suggest that you sell to us the photographs of the St. Joseph statue; this matter has nothing to do with you. We have our own photographs.

My respectful regards,

Signed Chevalier.

NB: I am sending you a picture which we have had done, and would like you to use it as a model for the new statue, taking care, however, to raise a little the index of the child's hand which points towards his mother, and shorten a little further the third finger of the same hand so that it becomes very obvious that the Child-Jesus is pointing to His Mother. In the gesture such as it is at present he seems to be blessing and we do not want this interpretation.

Be kind enough to return this picture as soon as you no longer need it.

Signed: Fr. Chevalier.

Devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is associated with the beginning of our Society which goes back to December 8, 1854. It was following a solemn promise and an unsolicited special favour received on the very day of the promulgation of the dogma of the Immaculate Conception that we gave the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to the Blessed Virgin. This name relates immediately to the Mother of God for the fervent faithful who call upon this name and wondrously obtain the most marvellous blessings. Witnesses to the wonders which take place each day through the invocation of Mary under the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, we thought of founding an Association for the benefit of difficult and hopeless cases both in the temporal and spiritual order (such situations are so common today). We said to ourselves: Since the adorable Heart of Our Lord, source of all grace, has been formed from the virginal blood of Mary, nobody better than this divine Mother can obtain whatever help is needed. Moreover, is not her prayer all powerful with the Heart of her Son? The Holy Doctors of the Church itself speak of her as: Omnipotentia supplex – ab omnipotente Filio, omnipotens Mater facta est (St. Bernard). We shared this undertaking with His Grace Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges. His Grace approved and asked us to draw up ourselves the Statutes of this new Association to which he gave his approval on the 29th of January, 1864. The centre of this Confraternity was canonically set up in the chapel of our mother-house, Issoudun.

Our distinguished Archbishop then wanted to have this pious Confraternity extended to the whole world and sent a copy of the Statutes to Rome where, in article 2, these words can be read: "All Catholics of whatever age, sex, nation, can become part of this Association", asking that Indulgence be granted for certain days and specifically named feast days. Our beloved Holy Father, Pope Pius IX, approved the Association and granted indulgences to all mentioned in article 2 of the Statutes cited above: "Omnibus utriusque sexus Christifidelibus qui dictum confraternitatem in posterum ingredientun..."; and again "...tam descriptis quam pro tempore describendis in dicta confraternitate", that is to say the faithful throughout the world.

The awareness of this pious confraternity into which Pius IX himself wished to be enrolled, and of which we have kept the entry form signed in his hand-writing, soon spread everywhere through the repute of the special favours obtained by confidently invoking Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. From all over Europe and the rest of the world names were forwarded to us for enrolment in our registers. We received many from Italy and from Rome itself. The distinguished Angelini and Scalsi family, and their friends, contacted us. Wholeheartedly devoted to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart from whom the family had received many favours, it became a supporter of our Association and sent us names to register a number of times, requesting, and obtaining, the authorization to set up a centre of our dear Confraternity in Rome. Up to that moment, the most perfect understanding prevailed between us, but Mr. Angelini and Mr. Scalsi, for no reason I can think of, decided to cut themselves off from Issoudun, felling the branch from the trunk which produced it. They attempted then to set up to their advantage in 187... (the exact year in the 1870s not made clear) our very own Confraternity into a worldwide archconfraternity.

Since then the Issoudun Association has become a rival which must be obliterated, the daughter wishing to choke the mother. God is our witness that never, whether in our magazines or particular letters, have we said anything which could be derogatory of the Rome Archconfraternity, while the latter whether in private correspondence or in its monthly magazine, has done its utmost to discredit the Issoudun Association. It went so far as to say that it was only the associates within the Archdiocese of Bourges who gained the indulgences granted by Rome, that others were excluded, and that we did not have the right to enrol the names of foreign associates even though the pontifical brief states the contrary.

As I have pointed out above, Archbishop Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne in his letter to Cardinal Ferrieri has proved that we were within our rights, and Bishop Sara, secretary to the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences, appointed by His Eminence the Cardinal Prefect to study the Archbishop of Bourges' letter, came to the conclusion that His Grace was right and that our behaviour was irrefragable. We can provide these two documents for scrutiny if wished.

In addition, the Roman Archconfraternity accuses us of taking advantage of members, male and female, setting up centres to collect names to be forwarded to Issoudun. Where are the proofs for this assertion? We sent nobody for this purpose. The members, male and female, are involved in all the undertakings, making possible the functioning of the Confraternity and its success. I can say the same about the centres. The latter in our Confraternity have neither the right or the role to register names; the associates cannot gain indulgences except through enrolment with Issoudun. Our centres, then, are no more than centralizing areas for the names recorded which the different directors of the centres send to the centre of the Confraternity (Issoudun), thereby avoiding overwhelming correspondence which would be too unwieldy, and unnecessary expenses, which the inscribing of names would gratuitously, pointlessly, involve Issoudun. What would become of St. Peter's Pence, etc.

Undated, likely summer 1875

Your Eminence,

The title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is identified with the foundation of our Missionary Society dating back to December 8, 1854. This salutary devotion, spread today under our direction throughout the entire world, had its origins in an Institute. We were chosen by divine Providence, despite our unworthiness, to be the Founders and acceptable propagators of this undertaking which does so much good to souls, and has had the approval of 400 archbishops and bishops, 75 of whom are Italian, and which has through our zealous endeavours, as our worthy Archbishop remarks, obtained for St. Peter's collection more than a hundred thousand francs. (Close to 32,000 euros.)

Observing the graces of all kinds, extraordinary, unexpected, which the most Blessed Virgin was pleased to bestow on those who invoked her under the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, we thought of founding our Association for the benefit of difficult and hopeless cases both in the spiritual and temporal orders (such situations are so common today). We said to ourselves: Since the adorable Heart of Our Lord, source of all graces, has been formed from the virginal blood of Mary, nobody better than this divine Mother can obtain whatever help is needed to obtain what is necessary to bring about what is asked of her.

His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges, approved this undertaking and asked us to draw up the Statutes for this new Association. We did so assiduously, and His Grace gave it his full approval on January 29, 1864. And at the same time Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne forwarded to the Holy See the Statutes of this new Association to obtain, together with Indulgences, its formal approval. We enclose here the authentic copy of these Statutes. One reads there the significant wording to article II: "All Catholics of whatever age, sex, nation, can become part of this Association." Some months later, that is to say on March 22, 1864, Rome approved the Association. And the brief, with reference to these immediately quoted words, granted indulgences: Omnibus utriusque sexus Christifidelibus qui dictam confraternitatem ingredientur", and again "tam descriptis quam pro tempore describendis in dicta confraternitate".

One can clearly gather that this Association, according to its Statutes, looks to the whole world, and the Pontifical Brief in no way whatsoever limits it. Besides, the Holy See in all its correspondence with us, and with the favours granted us, has always given it to be understood that our worthy Confraternity was there for the whole world. We can cite as irrefutable proof the Remember You to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart indulged first for the members in the Archdiocese of Bourges and then for the whole world, while the Pontifical Brief in reply to the Archbishop of Bourges when he petitioned in favour of the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, stated that this devotion like the Association had already spread throughout the world, etc. The many and marvellous blessings available in this Association led to its rapid development everywhere. We were being sent not only from France but from everywhere in the world many lists of names to be enrolled in the register of the new Confraternity. More than 400 bishops, archbishops and cardinals, among them 75 Italians, asked to be enrolled. We received from Italy and Rome itself many requests for enrolment. The Angelini and Scalsi families forwarded their names and those of their friends, showing themselves to be very zealous about spreading our Association. Seeing the success which attended their efforts, they thought of establishing it (the Association) in Rome, having asked for and received our permission.

Up to that moment cordial relations existed between that worthy family and ourselves. The Roman Confraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart looked upon itself as Issoudun's daughter. But the sapling wished to detach itself from the tree which produced it. The Angelini and Scalsi family managed to have our Association established as a universal Archconfraternity. From the moment it cut itself off from Issoudun. Our Confraternity which it had taken to with so much appreciation at the beginning, now became a rival to be avoided, or to put it better an enemy to be put down. Then to our great astonishment and sorrow we read in the monthly publication of its Annals and in specific correspondence how our work was devalued and difficulties created for our thousands of associates by letter stating that our Confraternity was identified with the Archdiocese of Bourges alone, and that we hadn't the right to enrol outsiders to this diocese, that the faithful could not gain indulgences there, and that our Statue was not accepted by Rome, etc., etc.

The Archbishop of Bourges answered all these complaints in a letter addressed to His Eminence the Cardinal Prefect for Indulgences, and Bishop Sara, Secretary of the same Congregation, asked to give his views about this letter, found it in every respect to be in keeping with right and truth. These two documents can be consulted.

If, then, we do not have the right to enrol the names of foreigners in the Archdiocese of Bourges, why is it then that the Scalsi family hurried to send us its own names and those of all it collected in Rome? It is sad that for reasons relating only to making its own case, it has recourse to parallel arguments and places itself in flagrant contradiction with itself. We are also accused of making use of supporters, women and men, to develop the Association and seek applicants. Where is such procedure forbidden? This way of proceeding has always been used to spread Catholic undertakings. Without it, how could Peter's Pence, and the Propagation of the Faith, for example, function efficiently? We say the same about the centres; these are not Confraternities with the right to Indulgences. It is quite simply the centralizing of names received by men and women workers sent to us by the different centre directors in order to avoid excessive correspondence, which latter would be all the more burdensome if we looked for any contribution from our associates. The faithful then do not gain Indulgences until the day their names are enrolled in the Issoudun registers. In what way is this procedure against the law? On the contrary, it promotes its accomplishment.

Coinciding with this letter, I have pleasure in forwarding to you before it goes before the public a pamphlet entitled: The Rights of the Parish with regard to Schools. The law acknowledges that we have such rights: these are the rights too often lost sight of which I consider it opportune to call to mind.

If, despite his onerous tasks, His Grace can look at this little work, I do not hesitate for the well-being of the faithful to ask that his comments be addressed to me, and to bless at the same time him who has the honour to be, with the greatest respect, Your Grace's very humble and most obedient servant.

Fr. Chappel has written to inform me that he has left Toronto for the province of Montréal. I greatly regret his precipitate departure. We intend to send to America, in the month of March next, two or three of my associates, serious and able men, among them Father Durin, bursar at our mother-house and who is known to Your Grace. On going to Canada, they will journey to Toronto to meet you so that Your Grace can help them with your wise advice. Meanwhile, I wish to thank Your Grace greatly for the kindness and keen interest you have shown towards us. Once more I commend to your consideration our work for the Sacred Heart. I have the honour to be, Your Grace, your humble and obedient servant in C.J.

October 24, 1875

Very Reverend Father,

It is under the empowering patronage of the Holy Virgin that I move quickly to reply to your letter. If it is the love of truth which inspires, which I do not doubt, agreement will soon be restored. Permit me, Very Rev. Father, to deal with you in keeping with the same simplicity which characterizes yourself.

Your criticism of the title and devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart seems greatly regrettable to me. You have brought to the discussion an unfortunate confusion; you have become the source of great trouble and general disturbance, throwing, without serious reasons, more than ten million souls into confusion. It is a grave responsibility you have taken on yourself.

I am forwarding to you the letter which His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges wrote to me and the reply of Monsignor Druon to the editor of the Lyons Catholic Weekly. These two weighty, important documents should clarify your mind and make clear to you in what sense the question should be understood.

You attribute to us, Very Reverend Father, most unjustly, views which we do not share. Where have you, for example, gathered that we identify the Holy Virgin as absolute Mistress of God, a Queen who is independent of the Heart of Jesus? We are aware, like yourself, and our writings prove it, that Mary is no more than creaturely and as from herself could exercise no dominion over God; her authority is no more than conceded, her all powerfulness none other than that of supplication, omnipotentia supplex. We never said otherwise, nor did our distinguished Archbishop or the four hundred bishops who approved the title and devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart; they at no time saying anything else. And our twelve million associates never held any other teaching. You will not, most certainly, find one person who was led to believe that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was above God, gave orders to her Son as absolute mistress and was queen independently of the Heart of Jesus. To entertain such ideas would mean that one was no longer a Catholic. All our great Church Doctors, without excepting St. Paul and Our Lord, Himself, could be charged with heterodoxy if one took a sentence from their writings without taking note of the context in which it should be understood.

Do you accept, Reverend Father, that the Blessed Virgin has at least the right to the same titles and privileges as the saints, male and female, of the Catholic Church? Indeed, and quite clearly, St. Basil, Church Doctor, clearly lay down for us the principle of this doctrine.

Listen to him: "Who does not acknowledge the great influence of the Mother of God, the pre-eminent manner in which she surpasses all the saints we know? For if God has granted so many graces to his servants whereby they heal the sick not only by touching them, but even when projecting their shadow on them... what power should we not acknowledge in Mary?" "Quis ingentem Deiparae potentiam non miretur? Quis non miretur quantopere superemineat quotquot honoramus sanctos? Nam si Deus servis tantum impartitus est gratiae, ut non tactu solum aegros persanarent, sed et umbrae projectu idem protestarent ... qualem Matri virtutem inesse cogitabimus?" (Migne, Volume 85, p447-449)

For more such as this, let us look among others at the life of Blessed (then) St. (now) Margaret Mary Alacoque and St. Gertrude. "I shall make you inherit from my Heart and all its riches both in time and Eternity, allowing you to partake of it as you wish." (Volume 11, 129) To the Second (St. Gertrude) Our Lord spoke these words: "Yes, Sovereign Mistress, you can indeed ask me because I shall respond in all things according to your will and wishes, more promptly than any servant would obey his Sovereign." In Latin: Ita, Domina regina, tu optime potes mihi imperare quia voluntati tuae ac desiderio in omnibus promptius obtemperabo quam unquam aliquis minister Dominae suae possit ministrare. (Lib. III, ch. XXXIII)

If the Lord, Very Rev. Father, bestows such privileges on St. Gertrude and St. Margaret Mary, do you think that he would refuse them to Mary? Indeed not! And Our Lord himself says so formally to the Blessed (St.) Margaret Mary when he makes reference to the subject of some ungrateful souls: "My Mother (Mary) you have plenary power to dispense my graces as it pleases you. I am prepared out of my love for you to suffer the abuse to which they subject me." (Volume 1, 267)

We have never said more than this, and indeed we never went so far in our explanations. The onslaught directed against Our Lady of the Sacred Heart cannot but be prompted by the devil, outraged by all the good, the healing, the extraordinary conversions taking place in the Association. Over 11 years we have filed 162,315 singular blessings obtained through the intercession of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. We keep them in our archives and we place at your disposal these personal letters made available to us. These favours were granted only after Our Lady of the Sacred Heart had been called upon or prayed to before her statue or her picture which you rail against today. Well then, if the invocation to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is unacceptable, her statue or picture to be disapproved of, how explain all these wonderful facts? Hell and Heaven are for the first time at one! God and Baal shake hands with each other! This is preposterous. Certainly the Holy Father could say, and should say, that the Madonna is in no absolute way whatsoever mistress of the Heart of Jesus. We all speak the same language. Assuredly the Sacred Congregation could not, and should not, authorize the invocation, as formulated, Regina sacratissimi Cordis Jesu, because this isolated phrase out of context could be taken to mean that Mary, in an independent and absolute fashion, is Queen of the Heart of Jesus, something which is not correct. The refrain Queen of the Sacred Heart is no longer sung by us since Cardinal Patrizi's first letter, although this invocation was always explained in the most Catholic sense through its context. We have removed it from our hymns and writings.

Likewise you must also have noted that the Sacred Congregation approved the translation of the title Our Lady of the Sacred Heart into that of Mother of the Sacred Heart, servandam esse invocationem, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart... "sub quocumque idiomate".

I am astonished, following on this, that you persist in holding on to the title Mother of the Sacred Heart which offers nothing in addition to Mother of God which says all that needs to be said, and that you would like, nevertheless, to put it in place of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, this last approved, upheld, by the Sacred Congregation, supported and indulged by the infallible Pius IX.

Chevalier, to buttress his argument, notes that the Roman authorities, supported by consultors from the Congregation of Rite, approved the work of Blossius, whose book on the Sacred Heart published in 1774 presents a theological argument (thesis) against the title of Mother of the Sacred Heart. The Polish critic is, from the theological point of view, living dangerously.

The title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is in no way "ambiguous"; it excellently explains the Church's doctrine with reference to the powerful influence of Mary over the Heart of Jesus, formed like the rest of his body from her virginal blood. I invite you to read the theological treatise of Father Vigili Sedlmayr who argues convincingly for the impact of Mary on her divine Son presented in the September (previous) number of our Annals (Le Domaine de Marie sur son divin Fils).

In your letter, Father, you present certain words which the Pope addressed to you while you were speaking to him and which you call vivae vocis oraculo. If I were to make use of parallel arguments, I would have, since 1869, twenty words contradicting yours since the encouraging words, good wishes, approval of the great Pius IX were spoken before witnesses and quite obviously contradict yours! But, in an issue of such importance, let us keep to what is written, where alone the force of law holds. I present what we have for your consideration.

In March 1869 I went to Rome with one of my confrères to request the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. We presented a statue in bronze of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, 0.50m in height, faithfully reproducing that of Issoudun. His Holiness was pleased with it and had it put in his library. As well, he was pleased to give his name for membership of the Association, receiving the entry form which has the authentic reproduction of Issoudun (Our Lady's statue). Pius IX approved of this picture, writing at the bottom: Pius IX qui desiderat diligere B.M.V. Then, with the goodness and tact of which you are aware, he bade goodbye, giving us his pen, saying: Keep it, I am aware of what you wish.

And that is not all: the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which you consider "ambiguous" also pleased Pius IX. He had gathered its meaning from the "Remember You" (Souvenez-vous) which I had presented for his approval. And the great Pontiff, following a serious perusal, sanctioned it with his formal authority, according 100 days' indulgence to all the faithful who say: Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, pray for us. This document, with the Holy Father's signature, is recorded in the files of the Sacred Congregation for Indulgences. Moreover, Pius IX in 1869 having read repeatedly the "Remember You" to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which begins like this: "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the unlimited influence which your divine Son has given you over his adorable Heart. Full of confidence in your merits, we come to seek your protection Sovereign mistress of the Heart of Jesus, that Heart which is the inexhaustible source of all graces, and which you can open at your wish, etc. Pius IX, I want to say, approved and indulgenced it for the associated of the Bourges Archdiocese. Later, the following year, we asked him to extend the indulgence of 100 days to associates all over the world. The Pope, read, re-read, again the prayer, and granted in writing, aware of the reason, the favour requested. This new indulgence and renewed approval were also confirmed by the Sacred Congregation. In June 1874, accompanied by two of my confrères, I had the privilege of an audience with the Holy Father. We paid tribute to him with a magnificent and splendid album in the name of all our Association's centres, several pages offering for the perusal of Pius IX a splendid snapshot of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun. He considered this presentation to be very beautiful and had it placed in the Vatican library, presenting us with a brief warmly congratulating us. At the same audience he granted one hundred days' indulgence to anyone who prayed in his name before a statue or a picture representing the statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart at Issoudun. His new indulgences are still registered by the Sacred Congregation.

And despite this weighty documentation, so precise, so authentic, official, coming from sovereign authority with the requisite formulation which makes it obligatory, you come along, Rev. Father, with your advice to destroy all the statues, pictures and medals which represent Issoudun's Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and all because of a word which you say you heard in conversation! Truthfully, this is taking zeal much too far.

You must not overlook, Rev. Father, the fact that commerce has made unworthy copies of the beautiful and graceful statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun. There are outrageous counterfeit copies where the child Jesus, at much too young an age, is positioned like an orphan at the feet of his Mother, and which have been presented to the Holy Father and, quite rightly, have drawn his disapproval. Moreover, Pius IX, on seeing similar copies, was drawn, naturally, to criticize them, remarking that the Infant God should have been in His Mother's arms at that age and not at her feet. I fully appreciate this, but the Issoudun statue is not like that, being, in the opinion of all the artists, a veritable artistic masterpiece. The Infant Jesus is there presented at the age of twelve instructing people like a doctor that the source of grace is to be found in his adorable Heart and that the dispensatrix of this grace is his gracious Mother. Is it feasible to have a youngster of twelve years in his mother's arms? If we were to do so, there would, and with reason, be a general complaint, and the Sacred Congregation of the Inquisition (more recently the Congregation of Doctrine and Faith) would have severely censured us, as one of its most influential members remarked to Monsignor Druon (Vicar General, Bourges Archdiocese).

Following the letter of His Eminence Cardinal Patrizi to the Bishop of Presmyl, the Archbishop of Bourges immediately saw that there was a situation of error and confusion affecting the issue. Accordingly, His Grace dispatched immediately to Rome his private secretary, Monsignor Druon, both to seek and provide explanations. He presented to the Holy Father and to members of the Holy Office faithful reproductions of the Issoudun statue, and the Holy Father had Cardinal Patrizi address an official letter to His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges where it was expressly stated that "...the letter sent to the Bishop of Presmyl had dealt with a Polish issue...", and their Eminences the Cardinals and Inquisitor Generals, gathered together again to examine the issue, formally stated that in the reply to the Bishop of Presmyl, there was not a word, not even a comma which had any reference to the shape of the Issoudun statue or picture, and, consequently, it is erroneous to draw the conclusion that it has been proscribed or condemned. What the Holy Father wished found expression where he laid down that, for the future, statues and paintings intended for public worship should take a different form. But one cannot in any way conclude that this refers to the Issoudun representation already honoured over a number of years.

In any event the following is the Latin text of the letter:

You will gather then that the Issoudun statue model, having been judged unobjectionable, may be held on to for the homage of the faithful wherever it is to be found, whether in churches or elsewhere. It is only in relation to the future, "in posterum" and with regard to public worship alone, "cultui dicandae", that the statues should conform to the new model for our Association approved by Pius IX on the 29th of April last. As for the older models which are a reproduction of the lovely Issoudun statue, one can always spread, and promote them for private worship since they have not had any prohibition slapped on them: "Ibi namque, nec vola nec verbum occurit relate ad formam simulacri seu imaginis quae Issolduni veneratur, proindeque perperam conjicitur ipsam proscriptam damnatamque fuisse." Given this solemn, authentic, official declaration, it is, therefore, particularly regrettable that this phrase was released into the public domain: "Bisogna distruggerli", they should be destroyed, since it is the opposite which holds.

There you have the facts, Rev. Father, concerning this important issue. For now you will agree with me that it was a mistake in this manner to place the Pope in opposition to himself. What need was there for this? As well, what was to be gained for the faith and piety of the faithful? What indeed? Here we have the Sovereign Pontiff, through authentic documents signed by him, bestowing privileges, setting out the true facts, recognizing and sanctioning a devotion, determining its meaning and limits. It might please such and such a one on the basis of a third party's statement, or a word passed in conversation, to attribute a contrary statement to the Pope and present him publicly in open, 'flagrente' (flagrant), contradiction with himself, and all this following the proclamation of his infallibility! There you have what scandalizes the weak and makes the ungodly rejoice.

Please accept, Rev. Father, my respectful good wishes in C.J.

Council Meeting, November 5, 1875

Change in the Council.

The Very Rev. Superior General's Council was elected for a three-year term following the retreat in September 1872, and this year it is necessary to have a renewal of membership.

The Election of Four Assistants.

On the 5th of November the Very Rev. Superior called together a chapter which chose as assistants or counsellors: Frs. Piperon, Vandel, Guyot, Jouët.

The Congregation of Bishops and Regulars having requested that the number of assistants be chosen, it was decided on September 17, 1874 in a general meeting of the Congregation's professed priests that the number should henceforth be four.

Dear Father,

Many thanks for your kind letter which pleased us all. When all your undertakings are finalized, we shall take a decision. I am forwarding a letter from Mr. De Molder; see what you can do. But be cautious. Nothing new otherwise. My regards to all for whom you think they are appropriate.

Dear Father,

Your second letter came just now.

1. Many thanks. I await your recommendations. It looks as if the Lord wishes us to be at Propaganda. We shall agree on lodgings for 130 francs (about 415 euros) a month if you do not find a better prospect.
2. You might perhaps go and see Monsignor Montault asking him to keep his mouth closed, telling him that what has been reported to him about trickery in regard to a legacy is a cock-and-bull story, and we are facing no judicial process. This is a fact because the complainant has disengaged, without getting in touch with him, from what we can gather about the L. business.
3. I am forwarding the letter (I sent, see above) to the Polish priest. You can decide for yourself in Rome what use you can make of it. This Polish priest has answered me with an inconsequential letter in which (without proof) he maintains his views. It is pathetic having this kind of debate with characters like this. He sends me the Memorare of the Rome Association, cleansed, he says, (of errors) by the Congregation of Rites. I replied that ours was approved and indulged by the Congregation of Rites, adding: What conclusion do you want to draw from this? That Pius IX was wrong, superseded his rights, and that the Sacred Congregation re-assessed the situation? You would not dare to say that.

If you can do so, try and clear up this issue, but be prudent. I do not deny that if the occasion arises for offering a golden rose, you could get some privileges.

4. If there was any way to make the Scalsis favourable to us, it would be a good thing, but very difficult. (See previous letter about the Rome Confraternity.) I would like to think that they no longer have the pretence that we do not have the right to enrol members from outside the Archdiocese of Bourges and grant them indulgences. Try shrewdly to find out where things are in regard to this issue. I hope the letter from the Archbishop of Bourges to the Cardinal responsible for Indulgences, or the briefs to be drawn up, will produce a result.

5. Bring again to the notice of Bishop de Luca our request that three months be given over in the Novitiate to priests who wish to enter the Novitiate, this permission having expired since the end of May. They would not be admitted to vows until they had spent one year in the Society.

6. The approval for the production of the Annals has not yet been sent on from Bourges. The Annals will be forwarded to you.

All goes well here.

Cheerio, dear Father. Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

7. I am forwarding Sister Talbot's letter; in my reply I am sending on my letter to the Polish priest.

L 18751128

Issoudun, November 28, 1875

Dear Father,

We are of the view that you follow the advice given to you. Rent for one year the lodgings offered to you at 130 francs a month in the fourth sector. (This description of the particular part of Rome is vague; for Paris one knows more clearly what the first, second, arrondissement means.) Put in place the essentials for 6 or 7 people to live and eat there. Fr. Miniot is totally useless. In Rome he would do more harm than good. He has half-baked ideas about an ideal community which he will find nowhere, and a narrow outlook and somewhat at cross-purposes. Accordingly, he is in no way suitable.

François Miniot, 1830-1903, was ordained at Bourges with Piperon in June 1854 and became a member of the MSCs in July 1867, perpetually professed September 27, 1969. Following various postings, being twice Rector of the 'Petite Oeuvre', Little Work, by August 1875 he was in Issoudun, hence Jouët's suggestion of his name to Chevalier. Despite Chevalier's dismissory letter, Miniot did go to Rome in April 1876!

Fr. Guyot thinks that Fr. Ramot, with his precipitate movements which resemble the dancer of St. Gui, wouldn't be suitable either.

The reference is to a neurological condition featuring brusque, involuntary movements. Ramot, 1846-1928, was assistant Novice Master to Guyot at this time and would replace him.

There remains Father Ariens who would be best for this posting. I shall give serious consideration to him, inculcate in him a spirit and liking for our Society which he already has, and then we shall see about it later.

Ariens, a Dutchman, came to the Society from the Dutch diocese of Roermond for which he had been ordained in 1845, becoming professed at Issoudun, April 30, 1875, going on to be Ramot's assistant Novice Master.

Meanwhile lay down a solid foundation for our Roman house. Stay there as long as necessary, a month, two months, as the case might be. Fr. Vandel will go there to replace you, if it is necessary, and we shall let him know. Brother Charles hasn't made his profession yet, and it would be hazardous for him and for us, perhaps, to send him to Rome.

Charles Bono, a Swiss from Berne, born 1831, ex-Jesuit brother, then working at the Issoudun secretariat even though a novice. Professed in 1876, he went to Watertown, USA, in October 1879.

Ask the Saint Vincent de Paul Sisters (as remarked already, Vandel's sister Léontine was a prominent member) or Mademoiselle Koepper to find you a capable and good man who could cook and take responsibility for the running of the place. He should be the kind of man comparable to the likes of those who are with the Bocca della Verita Sisters. They might, perhaps, be able to offer you someone. I believe that a man like that from the neighbourhood who knows people and situations would be a thousand times more helpful. Nowadays, when communities are spread out, it is better to have employees in whom one can be confident and who are recommended and who are pleased to be with us. Proceed along these lines. Moreover, Brother Charles is very helpful at the office (Issoudun) and staying there he will continue to help us.

Mademoiselle Koepper was a former parishioner of Vandel's at Nyon, now staying with Madame Caroline Courbally, 49 Quirinal St., Rome. Very absorbed in the 'Petite Oeuvre', Little Work, she died in 1881, February 28.

Bishop de Luca has the latest copy of our Constitutions. He told me that he would examine them during his holidays and would make me officially aware of his comments, and the changes we would need to make so that the Constitutions, on being presented officially, would be less faulty. Have a word with him and ask him to get on with this work immediately.

Farewell, dear Father. Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I am sending on to you a letter from Monsignor Druon (to the Archbishop of Bourges) and one from Madame Munster (London; see 'Late But Not Too Late', passim.) I have written to Monsignor Druon telling him that you are in Rome and that I sent you his letter.

If you find that the new lodging is more convenient, you could take it. I find that 2 francs or 2 francs 50 a day (between 6.50 and 8 euros), coming to 12 or 14 each per week is dear. For one alone it would be little, but for a large number the amount is very steep. Try and see if it would not be more advantageous to do the cooking ourselves, finding a capable man. In any event, such a one would most likely be absolutely needed and then, if you were laid up, one or more... There should be an oratory where the Mass can be celebrated so that the young students do not have to go out. You will see to this. As soon as you are ready, send a telegram to us and we shall send off our young men to you. It is likely that Brother Thomas will accompany them. December 2, 1875

Dear Father,

I received your letter and telegram. We were very pleased with the offer from Fr. Régis (the Trappist procurator in Rome) under a variety of headings:

1. The support of the Reverend Father which is weighty in Rome.
2. Great economizing.
3. Spacious lodgings, plenty of fresh air, a garden.
4. Assured religious life, very edifying example for our young men.

5. Normal supervision by Fr. Régis and his helpful suggestions.
  6. Library, etc., etc. This avoids going outside.
1. This activity seems helpful for our young men.
  2. They could study while walking.
  3. When it's raining they could take the bus.
  4. If over some months the set-up seems to be impractical, one is not far from Propaganda (College).
  5. We shall perhaps in this way prove satisfactory to Fr. Régis.
  6. On the supposition that the omnibus would cost more or less 0.50 centimes (1.60 euros) a day, this would at 200 francs a year still be advantageous.

In any event, dear Father, what you are doing and what you have done will be, or is already, approved. Act, therefore, for the best (as you see it) and do not be at all worried. While in Rome you might, perhaps, have some snapshots taken of the new picture in a favourable setting. Guillon hasn't finished (the work) yet.

Issoudun, December 3, 1875

Dear Father,

My letter yesterday expressed our preference for St. Clement, and the Trappist Fathers, despite the distance. We continue to express our preference for it because of the great advantages we can identify with the place. If you, nevertheless, associate the place with serious drawbacks, act for the best.

I didn't get your letter until this evening. The St. Vincent Sisters, Issoudun, provided me with the magazine where that famous cure is recounted. We may, then, publish it with full assurance.

To Father Victor Jouët, Rome.

Issoudun, December 4, 1875

Dear Father,

I am led to believe that if our young men become used to St. Clement's, that is the house which will be the most suitable in every respect. The issue of distance becomes negligible with the omnibus and, besides, our young men can take out their books and study during the journey. If you in the beginning can yourself stay at St. Clement's you could over some months or within a month, having experienced any inconveniences there, be on the look-out for another residence. You would always have the time. In any event because that which you suggest will not be available until January, do not come to any arrangement beforehand; that is our advice.

If you find it satisfactory at St. Clement's remain there as that would be the best; if not look elsewhere. In any event, I repeat, do what you can, and when you are ready quickly send me a telegram letting me know when our young men should be sent off.

Wholly yours in C.J.
J. Chevalier, MSC.

Then with regard to our taking up residence in Rome, there is the very serious issue of economizing. We shall find this absolutely necessary at St. Clement's. As well, the question of neighbours seems to me a serious issue. Having women in the same quarters strikes me as being, at least, greatly inconvenient, if not a hazard (moral). There would be nothing like that at St. Clement's. Taking everything into consideration, then, let us pick first on St. Clement's and we shall see what happens after that.

Issoudun, December 5, 1875

Dear Father,

You are the one who decides. Do your best; leave the Trappists, since there are very serious drawbacks there, and close in on the house suggested by the Reverend Superior of Propaganda (College). Meanwhile should we send on our young men straightaway or wait over until January? Brother de Mondion could go to join you, followed by Brother Barral, in the event that we must wait until the month of January for all the rest. Would you be able to lodge these two and where? I hope that you can arrange things to coincide with the Immaculate Conception; a lovely date and happy coincidence.

Cheerio, dear Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Our young men will impressively make their beds, look after their rooms, tidy the house and wash the utensils as a challenge. That's the way it should be! At St. Bridget's you will, hopefully, be advised about a suitable man (help) or indeed have recourse to Father Piraldi, the Oratorian, or either Mother Irène, Mr. Turgis, or Mademoiselle Koepper!

De Mondion, a native of Sassay, near Chinon, went to Rome, returned to Issoudun, left the Society for reasons of health in 1878 to become incardinated in the Bourges Archdiocese. Pierre Barral had a varied career in the Society, Rome, France, Holland, Belgium, Austria-Salzburg, Barcelona, Quito, before disengaging in 1891 to found the Institute of Bethlehem in Switzerland, later called the Foreign Mission Society of Bethlehem, Switzerland, and in addition he founded the Bethlehem Missionary Sisters.

Issoudun, December 11, 1875

Dear Father,

We received your telegram and letters. Many thanks. Our young men will leave next Monday at 7am and arrive in Turin on Wednesday at 4am, having stayed over at Lyons on Monday night. They will go straight on from Turin through Genoa. I believe that there is a departure from Turin at 5 or 6am which means that they would arrive in Rome most likely on Thursday morning.

You could map out their journey from Turin to Rome since you are familiar with the route; it is a serious consideration since these young men will be ill at ease. (Chevalier uses the word 'children'!) Young de Mondion is not well; he will leave in a couple of days; he will take with him the golden rose which will not be ready until Thursday morning. Since he will go on the express train, let me know what route he should take. Fr. Ariens will not be going to Rome, and who can we send to the Novitiate replacing Father Ramot since Fr. Guyot is never there? A big problem! Meanwhile stay by yourself in Rome with your young men. You will accompany them to Propaganda and bring them back. But during the lectures you can disengage from being with them, and might ask the Superior to make over to you a little room where you could work during the lectures; he will not refuse you. You might at 11.30 dine with the Brothers at the Paoli residence (Palazzo) and that would be ideal. In these circumstances, our installation at St. Clement's would be a blessing.

Let me know all the criticism or questionable brothers we have in Rome and what is said about us and our little Society. It is good that I be kept informed about everything. Have no fears.

I shall ask our young men to send you a telegram from Turin or Genoa on Wednesday letting you know what time they will arrive in Rome. The Ledoux case (legal) ended last Monday. Our victory is complete; they keep their house. Father Ledoux was in denial about his letter which you copied, etc., and the sisters likewise, etc. Here is their verdict as signed by them: "...the undersigned personages declare that during the discussions which took place between them, it has to be clearly affirmed that not the slightest reproach should be levelled at Father Chevalier in this matter in relation to tact, the requisite safeguarding of his obligations and requirements and that in particular nothing justifies the accusations of irresponsibility which had been so wrongfully levelled against him.

Bourges, December 7, 1875.

Signed: Ancillon, A. Petit, D.C. Mingasson."

We shall let them forego the cost of 4,000 francs (about 12,765 euros) out of considerateness and 2,000 francs for renting their room as an office. That's that. So much to be thankful for!

Would you kindly give the enclosed letter to Fr. Régis and make his acquaintance.

Wholly yours in C.J.
J. Chevalier, MSC.

Sister Henriette is looking for the list of the young girls who won awards for persevering with their catechism lessons so that they might be enrolled. Pray for me.

Célestin Ramot, born in 1846 at Bard les Pesmes, came to Issoudun from the Besançon diocese for which he was ordained in 1870. First assistant in the novitiate, he then became Novice Master and, when religious were expelled from France, he went from Saint-Gérard to the Low Countries before leaving for Watertown, USA, in the Summer of 1881. He returned for the 1891 Chapter, following which he went to Glastonbury. He died at Asse, Belgium, May 24, 1928.

Mr. Burnet forgot to put on it the initials of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. It is a pity. The Archbishop has seen it and thought it marvellous.

Dear Father,

1. Thanks for your letter. You were very kind looking after Brother de Mondion.
2. Offer the Fr. Rector a little gift. It would be very nice.
3. With regard to approval for our Constitutions I am not sure if it isn't too soon to be getting in touch with the Bishops again. Bishop de Luca told me that he would himself revise our Constitutions and share his comments with us, which we should take into consideration, and following that the Congregation would approve them more smoothly. Find out if he will be willing to do this.
4. I fear a new storm is breaking concerning the issue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Everything you mention is not a good omen. Let us play things down in Rome, I beg you. There is too much causing a stir with the golden rose. Why this presentation of financial sums in the Rome newspaper twice, in Le Monde, the Universe, etc.

All this emphasis in the press creates jealousy, alienates the good-will of other Congregations and makes people become bored (annoyed) with us. Do not forget our motto: Ama nesciri et pro nihilo reputari! I ask you, I implore you, to see to it that there is no longer any gossip about us. Our indiscreet zeal has done us a lot of harm, and has, one may say, been the cause of all our problems. Be prudent, prudent, prudent and do your utmost to see to it that there is no longer attention focused on us, and we can be left in the shade. Council Meeting, January 9, 1876

In attendance: Very Rev. Fr. Superior, Fathers Piperon and Vandel.

The admission to orders of Brothers Angereau, Hériault, Lanctin, Ignace Grom and Mètayer.

1. It was decided at this meeting that two of these Brothers could be put forward for ordination next Lent: first Angereau for the priesthood, second Hériault for minor orders and the sub-diaconate, third Brothers Lanctin, Ignace Grom and Mètayer for minor orders.

The Archbishop of Bourges would be asked to decide the time and place of the ordinations. If His Grace thought it convenient that this ordination should take place at Issoudun in the Church of the Sacred Heart, those brothers being ordained would come from Saint-Gérard.

Dismissal of Fr. Albert as Director of Youth Work.

2. Discussion followed about the difficulties which have arisen between the committee of the youth work and Fr. Albert. The good Father having handed in his resignation, it was agreed that the members of the committee should be consulted about providing a chaplain for this work. It was also agreed that Fr. Albert, since he no longer had responsibility for the youth work, would not receive for his services from now on more than three hundred francs for his family, and could not demand more for his work or service. If a member of the Congregation's work and activities results in some financial rewards it must be available to the Society.

Issoudun, January 10, 1876

Dear Father,

I sympathize with you; I feel for you because of your tiredness. I should like to send Father Ramot to Rome, but Fr. Guyot is against it. He believes that it is absolutely necessary that he should be at the Novitiate, saying that he is the only one who is suitable for this very important work, and that Fr. Ariens is not the right man for the Novitiate, etc. Write to Fr. Guyot, share your views with him. I sent him your last letter. If Fr. Ramot cannot be made available to you, something which seems certain at least for now, I can only see Fr. Ariens as a possibility. What can one do? You (Jouët) try to start and bring about something and then you will return because your absence from Issoudun leaves me with an excessive amount of work which makes life very difficult for me.

Fr. Guyot did not seem in favour of Brother Thomas going to Rome; Fr. Ramot held the opposite view more or less. What is to be done? My God, what a predicament I find myself going through! I think that you could release yourself from accompanying the young men (to classes). You could ask the brightest one (of the students) to take (lecture) notes and on returning home go over them. This is how it's done at the Bourges major seminary and elsewhere... It would be best to do so while awaiting something better. A young Italian priest, 30 years old, assistant curate at... (nothing given in the original), excellent in every respect, has asked to enter our Society; could he not be accepted in Rome as a novice? He could take lectures and be very helpful. Write to him; this is his address. Our good Father Sauret died on the first Friday of this month, his death like that of a saint; you can get the details from Fr. Ramot.

Mademoiselle (Sister) Guichard de Choisy from Marseilles again asks if we would definitely agree to accept her and her community which becomes more and more thriving. She will carry out, so she says, whatever we ask of her. She feels drawn to the Sacred Heart, would accept our Constitutions, take on the title of Missionary of the Sacred Heart and place herself at our disposal in every way, even with respect to going abroad. Look after the photographs yourself. Fr. Albert in his work with the youth group (Jeunesse) creates further problems for us. Pray unceasingly.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in CJ.

Dear Father,

Calm down, be at ease with yourself as I have no intention of even directing the smallest reproach to you. It is not you on whom the responsibility for correspondence with papers rests. I know very well how things can happen. My confidence in you, believe me, is unlimited, absolute, without reserve. You are my right-hand man and the man of my heart. The situation with regard to Brother de Mondion (his health) greatly worries me. See to it that he returns as soon as possible without prejudice to his health situation. I am very busy.

In Attendance: Very Rev. Fr. Superior, Fathers Piperon, Vandel.

Admittance of Brother Thomas to vows.

The Very Rev. Fr. Superior read a letter from Fr. Ramot about the novice, Brother Thomas. The good Father wrote approvingly of this novice and noted the serious efforts he made and his great good-will, placing no opposition to his admission to vows. It was decided to admit him to profession and send him to Rome for his theological studies.

2. You should have received my letter about Brother de Mondion. He should return as soon as you consider it appropriate.
3. Brother Thomas has been accepted for profession. As soon as this takes place, he will go to Rome. You will be a good tutor for him. There is the need for him to be firmly dealt with and not to be manipulative.
4. Fr. Albert has handed in his resignation as director of youth work and Fr. Piperon will replace him for the time being.

Dear, kind Monsignor,

I have come across in our archives a copy of the letter from the Cardinal Prefect of Indulgences and a copy of the Archbishop's reply. I sent both on immediately to Fr. Jouët who replied that the new Prefect, Cardinal Oreglia, was well disposed and, if the Archbishop of Bourges took direct charge of the matter of the Association and the Statue, we would straightaway attain our objectives. It will be very easy to unify our Blessed Sacrament society with that of the diocese. Come among these ladies on a Friday. Let me know beforehand and everything will take place as you wish. If you cannot come, and this would disappoint me, write a letter to the lady-president outlining your proposal and views and the reply will be favourable.

Many thanks for your kindness, devotedness.

Please accept my respectful good wishes in C.J.

Dear Father,

I received both your letters enclosing the items. I await the third. I read with the keenest of interest what you had to say about the golden rose (see above). Many thanks. Do not kill yourself; take care and look after yourself. We are awaiting Brother de Mondion; he is due to be here next Saturday. Brother Georgelin could not take over in Rome, especially in your absence, the direction and supervision of a house. He would be better than nothing. Fr. Vandel said to me yesterday that since he had come to know Fr. Ariens he appreciated his worthwhile qualities. He is, he said, flexible enough, willingly gives up his opinion to place himself on the side of his superiors. Brother Thomas will arrive (in Rome) next week. I am sure you will be a good tutor.

I have had a letter from Fr. At (sic), Sacred Heart Missionary, Toulouse; he is very well disposed. He is in Rome for the break-up, attached to the Montauban house where Fr. David is also. These latter wished to be associated with us. I think Fr. At might be at the French Seminary. Call on him and thank him on my behalf. Bishop de Luca appears to hope that they will join us.

We are getting the Rome paper; the subscription ends in February. You could get it first and then send it on to us to avoid two subscriptions.

All the confrères send you good wishes.

Fr. Durin asked the Very Rev. Fr. Superior for someone to help in the bursary. It was thought, in keeping with the view of the Bursar himself, that Brother Alexandre Delimoges could help with correspondence.

To His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges.

Undated, likely end of January, 1876

Your Grace,

Father Albert went to Bourges yesterday asking to be made a parish priest in the Archdiocese. He said it was with Fr. Appé he had shared his confidences. If it would please Your Grace, I should like to share my thoughts about Fr. Albert with you. He is an ex-Dominican, and inconstancy belongs to the very depths of his nature. During the six years he was with us he never lasted more than one year in any work assigned to him, and this, with modifications added, still holds. The youth work of which he was the Director had a committee made up of the town's leading citizens. Acting independently of them, he so displeased them that they all handed in resignation notices to their President, the Count of Bonneval, recently. The latter told me 15 days ago that Fr. Albert made working with him quite impossible given his volatile nature and authoritarian manner, and that it would be better if the work ceased or Fr. Albert withdrew.

Father Albert, aware of the problems he had created, suddenly decided to leave us under the pretext of family problems. We put to him some well-founded observations, telling him that: 1. His vows tied him to us permanently and only the Pope, according to our Constitutions, could dispense from them. 2. He had been involved in the purchase of Saint-Gérard and his departure would lead to very awkward complications. 3. He had imposed himself (that is the word) on the committee members of the youth work and made them buy a house at an exorbitantly high price; accordingly, his departure would compromise matters. 4. We should undertake responsibility for the welfare of his family.

The unfortunate priest, being as little religious as he is theologically weak, took no notice of our remarks. He would like, prompted by a concern for change, to become a parish priest. Other than the fact that he will not stay very long in a parish, we consider it a serious embarrassment for our Society, something which Your Grace will not be slow to appreciate, if he exercises sacred ministry in the Archdiocese. We have thought it to be our duty to inform Your Grace so that Fr. Albert will be given appropriate advice in the circumstances, that which His Grace's well-known wisdom will draw him to offer.

With deepest respect, Your Grace's humble and obedient servant and son.

Dear Father,

1. Brother de Mondion has returned and is suffering so much. The left lung is affected. You did the best thing sending him back. He is well on the way towards a serious lung condition; a well-known Parisian specialist, Mr. Guéneau de Mussy, did not hide it (his condition) from him! Pray and ask for prayers.
  2. Father Vandel is thinking of opening a Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) in Rome for the two Italians who have come forward. They would stay in Rome, he says, for 4 or 6 months, to make sure of their attitude, ability, vocation, and then they would be sent to Issoudun. By publicizing this in our Italian Annals, he thinks it would be a means of eliciting interest and financial support. Brother John would go along and be associated (as a student) with St. John Latran on under your guidance. Is this a possibility? What do you think?
  3. Father Ariens cannot arrive before Easter.
  4. I hear that you are fasting on Fridays and Saturdays. That is too much for your health. Act as at Issoudun. Look after yourself carefully and don't fall ill. Take good care of yourself and carry out what you have to do without overdoing things; the good Lord will, otherwise, take care of us.
  5. Do you know the reason for the present coldness of Bishop Manetti? Does his distancing come from the Pope? What has been said to him?
  6. As for the pictures, do what you can if you so wish with the Modena artist, but there are all the attendant risks and dangers. For the present we must avoid additional expense since it is frightening to note all the money we have spent one way or another on things which weren't needed. Keep in mind that we are 100 to nourish and be looked after every day.
  7. I received the snapshots from Rome of the new statue, well taken. Here again we must proceed cautiously. If Osimo cannot print what you want, it can be done in France.
  8. Do not get involved with any publicizing in Rome for the present as it would be dangerous. Keep quiet about the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association. Do not draw attention either to yourself or our undertakings. You might draw jealousy on yourself which would be very damaging to us. You must be extremely prudent.
  9. I am sorry that you have forgotten to visit Cardinal Pitra. If you haven't already done so, make up for this omission as soon as possible.
- Cardinal Pitra: Benedictine Cardinal since March 16, 1863, Bishop of Frascati, Head of the Vatican library.*
10. The Archbishop of Toronto is asking for Father Captier who was promised to him. Father Durin would like to take his place and go to America with Brother Mètayer to ascertain what chance there is of seriously setting up a foundation since Fr. Chappel cannot stay on his own too long in the interests of the honour and reputation of our little Society. What do you think about the Fr. Durin project?
  11. Thanks for your letter of yesterday which arrived too late as the Annals were already printed. The brief of the Holy Father to His Grace (of Bourges) can be found there (in the Annals).

12. For 15 days now things do not go well with dear Sister Arsène. Her head is 'swollen'. Mother Felicity and Fr. Morisseau have spoken somewhat seriously to her. In a little talk I gave them eight days ago I laid down the number of communions as is the practice in all communities: twice a week for postulants, three for novices and four for professed, without taking into account feasts of Our Lord and the Blessed Virgin. Good Sister Arsène took off saying that she was accustomed to communion every day and could not understand this regulation, etc., etc. I am forwarding one of her letters as a sample of what she is saying. If she remains much longer in this state of mind she will truly become a danger to the community. Totus tibi in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The context here is unavailability of daily communion, a liturgical state of affairs which would last until 1903. Sister Arsène Rime came from the Sisters of the Holy Name of Jesus to the newly-founded Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, professed August 30, 1874. Having been first Assistant to Mother Françoise, she returned to the Holy Name Sisters, possibly not drawn to remain following such an issue as that of more frequent communion.

6. What a crazy idea wanting to make a mitre of St. Sylvester into Our Lady of the Sacred Heart! The devil will again play around with us somewhat.
7. There is still talk about the departure for Lyons of His Grace of Bourges.
8. Yes, I believe that we should not hurry ourselves about having a Petite Oeuvre in Rome.
9. I would revise the Constitutions, but the time... I haven't a minute, or anybody to help me.

Dear Father,

1. Yes, I am impatiently waiting for your contribution to the March Annals.
2. The legislative elections are particularly bad all over in the first phase, but especially so in Issoudun.

This election followed the proclamation of the French Republic, January 30, 1875. The election to which Chevalier refers took place on February 20, 1876, the results favouring Republicans, the 'radicals' in particular.

Where can we go? I believe that we should think of America.

3. You did well not to answer Sister Arsène. It is a blessing that she left in this way.
4. With regard to our Constitutions, this is how I have changed things. Ask Bishop de Luca if it is alright like this: p66 Formula for vows. I put immaculata (instead of regina etc.) and instead of friend of the Sacred Heart, I put Sancto Joseph, protectore nostro. Page 48. At the bottom of the page, instead of "General Procurator" I would have "Bursar General"; then on page 46 where the Assistant Generals are mentioned I would include at the end of number 3, following "quales sunt" Procurator General, Provincials, etc., and on page 49 before "De Procuratore Generali" I would insert:
  - I. Procurator Generalis, qui Romae penes Sanctam Sedem res Societatis gerat.
  - II. Procuratoris generalis nominatio spectat ad Superiorem generalem de consilio Adsistentium. (This is how it is in the Marists' (OSM) Constitutions.)

On page 33 there is nothing contradicting what is on page 55. It is an explanation which has to be added. One must understand that if we are to set up a Novitiate sometime in America, Germany, wherever, the Superior General cannot be consulted about the admission of each novice or each professed. It necessarily follows then that the Superior General, with the consent of his Council, must grant to the Provincial or Novice Master of such countries the jurisdiction to admit or refuse admission to the Novitiate or to profession since the inconveniences of distance prevent the Superior General from being consulted and sending his decision.

The following are the corrections which I think should be added:

Page 34: After "qui tamen" I would add "de consensu Adsistentium hanc facultatem", etc. at the top of the page. Then at the end of number 6, I would place immediately following "ad majus Societatis bonum; sed Provinciales et Superiores Novitiorum, servatis servandis, in admissione Novitiorum agant de consensu ipsorum consiliariorum". Let me know as soon as possible if the foregoing is acceptable and if there are other corrections or improvements to be made. Bishop Gagnault has plates (typing), facilitating his corrections; I shall print out his copies and send them to each bishop.

5. There is much talk about the Archbishop of Bourges being transferred to Lyons. I believe quite firmly that we are going to lose him. What a misfortune for our diocese! May God be praised, none the less.
6. I have only received one consignment of photographs. Everybody is well. Take care of yourself. Do not be unwise and do only what you can.

Cheerio, wholly yours in C.J.

The Issue of Foundations.

At this meeting there was a discussion about the Petite Oeuvre, Little Work, and the expansion of the Society. It was thought that the founding of a house in England, America, Holland or Belgium, with a Petite Oeuvre associated with the different foundations, would have great advantages for the advancement of our Society.

Meeting to deal with the eventual succession to Fr. Chevalier, Superior General.

In this year, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, on the twenty-fifth day of the month of February, Very Reverend Fr. Chevalier, Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, together with Rev. Fathers Charles Piperon, Jean-Marie Vandel and Jean-Baptiste Guyot, Assistants, constituting the General Council of the said Missionary Society, in association with Fr. Victor Jouët, at present detained in Rome, came together at Issoudun, where they normally hold their meetings, in the mother-house of the Sacred Heart, to hold a Council meeting to which they unanimously invited Rev. Fr. Durin, General Bursar of the said Society. Having called upon the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit, the help of the divine Heart of Jesus, the intercession of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, the Very Rev. Father Superior put it to the Council that in anticipation of the need to preserve and assure the well-being and safety of the Society and its members, the responsibility for the faithful from his role as arch priest of the Issoudun parish did not permit the Very Rev. Fr. Superior to get away to a safe place if there was violent persecution, and it was agreed that if death or incapacity (which God forbid!) deprived the Institute of its venerated leader before a chapter could be summoned according to the regulations, the leadership of the Society would immediately and ipso facto be exercised by Rev. Father Victor Jouët, Procurator General of the Society, under the title of Vicar General, and, in the event of his inability it would be undertaken by Rev. Fr. Jean-Baptiste Guyot, Assistant, or, in the event of the latter's inability, by Rev. Fr. Fernand Durin, General Bursar, all in whatever place or position they hold provided they can exercise their freedom.

If it is impossible in the circumstances to have recourse to the Holy See, whichever one of these priests it is who is called to take over the Society's leadership in tragic circumstances should seek the approval of the Sovereign Pontiff who will be very humbly requested to provide approval and validity to the present meeting. Even in a situation where the supreme Pontiff would be absolutely prevented from ratifying what has been laid down above, the Very Rev. Father Chevalier and his Council enjoin, in virtue of holy obedience, on all the Superiors of the Institute's different houses, on all the priests and brothers, whether scholastics or lay brothers, to acknowledge as their lawful Superior him who will be chosen at the present meeting and to obey him with respect to everything which he will lay down according to the rules, until happier circumstances make it possible for the Very Rev. Fr. Jules Chevalier to exercise his authority once more, or for the General Chapter, lawfully called, to elect, canonically, another Superior General.

The present statement will be sent out in four copies, all signed by the Very Rev. Fr. Superior and the members who took part. One of these copies will remain in Issoudun without being placed in the ordinary file for decisions; another will be sent to Rev. Father Jouët in Rome, the third to Father Guyot, the fourth to Rev. Father Durin.

Given at Issoudun on the day and month noted above. Stamped for the Society:

To His Grace Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Montreal, Quebec.

Issoudun, February 27, 1876

Your Grace,

The latest elections must give us religious lively concern. We can hear the radicals shouting. Within a few weeks they will be in power and we know what they will do. Humanly speaking, within a period of time more or less far off, we shall be seriously threatened. You will favour me, Your Grace, as I put forward the prudent precautions which the circumstances would seem to suggest to us.

1. Fr. Chappel as ever is alone in America. Divine Providence has provided him with a chapel and suitable house in a large new town where there is a shortage of priests and there is not as yet a community. We are thinking about sending Fr. Durin there, at present Bursar at Issoudun, together with one of our professed scholastics, to prepare the way for a more plentiful emigration if the storm comes to pass. Fr. Durin is a disciplined man, virtuous, intelligent, knowing how to get by. I would ask Your Grace then, if you think it appropriate, to forward the enclosed letter to the minister.

2. Foreseeing the possibility where our Petite Oeuvre (Little Work), our novitiate and scholasticate, would no longer be feasible in France, we shall have to think about moving, during the turmoil, our diverse works either to England, Belgium, Holland, where we have many Associates and very good helpers. I had for this reason intended to send Fr. Durin, before he leaves for America to these different countries to provide for refuge homes in case of necessity.

3. If the radicals, as is likely, gain the upper hand, many communities will be dispersed and their property confiscated. We have properties of our own at Saint-Gérard, at the Petite Oeuvre and Issoudun; to secure them we are thinking about selling them to some dependable lay people in a formulaic manner (not really and truly), bringing us a lot of interest, through French non-nationals, e.g. an English, Belgian, German family, etc. Through their representatives the new proprietors would respect their 'properties', returning them to us as soon as peace reigned once more.

4. In the event that the situation is still more serious, we have drawn up a formula here enclosed which we are presenting to Your Grace. We should be pleased if you might tell us what you think of the contents of this letter.

I have the honour to be, with deepest respect, your most devoted son in C.J.

Dear Father,

1. Let us hope that things will not turn out as we foresee. The future as I see it is full of storms.
2. Could you ask Bishop de Luca if young men of illegitimate birth, orphans or not, could be taken into our Society without a dispensation from the Holy See.
3. Could you also find out from him if our scholastics need a dismissorial or exeat letter from their Bishop for sacred orders? The Archbishop of Bourges does not think so. His Grace is of the view that they can be presented for ordination without this measure. I myself favour the opposite view. I have until now always asked for a dismissorial letter. Clear up the issue, if it's possible; I believe that the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars can exempt.
4. Petition for an Indult which would allow us to have a Novitiate lasting but three months for those priests already trained who asked for it and with which we ourselves would be satisfied. The first Indult has expired.
5. An excellent 52-year-old priest, a curate in Paris, is entering the Society as a Novice. All the recommendations are good. Good wishes to our dear scholastics. My thanks for their kind letter.

Cheerio, dear Father.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Issoudun, March 15, 1876

Dear Father,

The curate from Paris is in the Novitiate. We are very pleased about this.

2. We are considering the acceptance of Mr. (Fr. ?) d'Aigueperse. He should meet his expenses and the cost of his journey to Saint-Gérard. That's all we are asking of him. He will not have to pay anything in the Novitiate. Find out what you can and see if he can accept (the foregoing). Have a word with Bishop de Luca about him.
3. What is happening concerning the Toulouse Sacred Heart priests?
4. Here is the Daniel prospectus.
5. I am waiting impatiently for the April Annals' copy. Try to send it always on to us a month ahead.
6. Yes, show the piece (of writing) which I sent you dealing with the election of the Superior General to Bishop de Luca to find out what he thinks of it.
7. It's disappointing that Sister Catherine Volpicelli in Naples has had her statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart changed. Father Ramière is involved in all of that. For the Rome Annals it is, obviously, a boost.
8. You should do as you think fit in facilitating the Propaganda lectures.
9. Yes, do not have more than half an hour's prayer in the morning, and arrange things as you mention.
10. See what you can do with Brother Antonio. You are totally free to act as you think fit in this matter.
11. I sent Brother Thomas' letter to the Bishop of Puy.
12. Yes, reply in the way you mention to Sister Eulalia about the blue rosary beads.
13. I haven't yet seen dear Fr. Sorin. I shall be very pleased to meet him, but I strongly doubt if he will sell his St. Brigid house. Try and find out.
14. You did well to lodge a protest against the pretentious editor of the Annals of His Holiness. This is an unbecoming manoeuvre. Track him down and challenge him. Write, if you think it opportune, to Rev. Father Ramière. It's best that you do this rather than me.
15. Ask a dispensation for Brother Romain, a lay novice who is illegitimate, that he make temporary vows for three years.

Everybody here sends you good wishes.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

L 18760316

Issoudun, March 16, 1876

Dear Father,

1. The Sacred Heart of Toulouse priests' problem is a sad one. Get in touch with Bishop de Luca to see to it that they do not take the title of Missionaries of the Sacred Heart to which they have no right, since their Constitutions, which I have, and their favouring brief, do not make them known other than as priest adorers of the Sacred Heart or Calvary priests. This is all the more serious as there is a confusing of them with us, and their divisions could be linked to us. For example priests in Tours said to Fr. Angereau, our confrère, that our Society was about to be suppressed because of scandals, and that there were splits among us and the matter was reported to Rome. From the information they had, they were referring to the Toulouse Society.

2. Brother Angereau was ordained to the priesthood on Saturday; he will be a curate in Saint-Cyr until something better comes along. Brother Hériault is a sub-deacon and Brothers Mètayer and Lanctin in minor orders.

Louis-Arthur Lanctin was a native of Issoudun; ordained at Bourges June 15, 1878. In the closing years of Chevalier's life he was elected Vicar General of the Society at the 1900 General Chapter, succeeding him as General from 1901 to 1905, later becoming French Provincial. He died in his home town, Issoudun, on June 28, 1928.

3. Try and find out if there are any advantages to be had if our little Society was in dependence on Propaganda; what initiatives should be undertaken?

4. The Scalsi issue is serious. It was fitting that Pius IX, who is our Superior and Founder, should be pleased to confer on us responsibility for the Church of the Sacred Heart in Rome, we who are the official Missionaries of the Sacred Heart approved by him. It was only to be expected. Our situation, then, is rightly proper and this church would appropriately become the centre of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association. Look at things, sound out matters, speak and act in this sense, but always with prudence.

5. Yes, indeed, spread as much as possible in Italy our new image. Act without having any airs and become the heart of this operation without placing yourself too much in the forefront since we must be particularly prudent.

6. The Frascati priest could be very helpful to us, Mr. Vuillaume and several others, perhaps!

7. I immediately brought the first articles for the April number (Annals) to the printer; send the remainder as quickly as possible.

8. The state of France provides lively concerns to worry about. I am very apprehensive about the future. The constitutional assembly gave way to the Girondins, and soon it will be the turn of the Jacobins. MacMahon is another Louis XVI; he is weak, going from concession to concession. Finally, God watches over us.

9. We shall proclaim the Act of Consecration of Africa to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart on Sunday.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Issoudun, March 26, 1876

Dear Father,

I sent on your letter to Monsignor Druon immediately, but he has been in Paris with the Archbishop for the past ten days; I do not know when he will return to Bourges. Fr. Cloq, whom I know for the past 23 years since I was a curate in his home town (Aubigny), is a very dignified priest, exaggeratedly self-regarding, projecting himself as a superior person. While no more than a curate at Levroux, he left his parish, without warning the authorities, to enter the Jesuits. He stayed with them for two or three months, and then left. On returning to the Archdiocese of Bourges, he tried to set up a Catholic printing works at Vierzon in which women were numerically prominent. After what became a fiasco, he went to Paris where he tried to set going an enterprise and magazine for the Missions which, like the printing press, also collapsed. He wrote about indulgences; Rome placed his book on the index. He was involved in controversy with everybody.

He is a schemer (more colloquially in English an "operator") who needs to be challenged because of his judgment. I thought he was pious and zealous; it is the opinion, so it seems to me, His Grace (the Archbishop) has of him. Since I was in no way asked for my view, what I have said above is for you and Bishop de Luca, if you consider it pertinent, and with the discretion you can rely on.

The issue concerning the Bishop of Marseilles is odd. I should like to know what happens. Like you I would prefer Father Miniot to remain on in Rome, but he is creating obstacles because of his mother. Write a word or two to him directly. The issue of the paintings has worked out very well. Make out the agreement among yourselves or Mr. Georgetti. The Bishop of Puy has sent on an exeat for Brother Thomas and hands over to the Archbishop of Bourges his jurisdiction over the subject. It will be the Archbishop of Bourges who will grant the dismissorial letter when you will need it. (The reference is the acceptance of canonical suitability for ordination.) It would be ideal if we were ever to be installed in the Rome Church of the Sacred Heart. Let us hope and pray. You did very well to get rid of Mr. d'Aigueperse.

I am delighted to hear that Bishop Mermillod is at this moment in Rome; he could be very helpful to us for the success of all our undertakings. Relate to him as best you can and make the most of your opportunities in relation to the Holy Father or the Cardinals, either with respect to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and her Association, or with reference to the Toulouse priests of the Sacred Heart. If the Sovereign Pontiff advises them to unite with us, it's that which would be best. One of the priests from the Toulouse house, presently preaching Lenten services at the Trinity (Church), Marseilles, has asked to come to us. I replied sending on all the information he wanted. Otherwise, I am sending you his letter; hold on to it. Mention this to Bishop de Luca. Fr. Blanqual's idea to go into the Toulouse house and take it over is wrong and dangerous. He should come among us first of all, and the grace of the Sacred Heart will have an impact on the others as is proved by the enclosed letter!

I am not sure if we have any colour snapshots of the completed new model. I do not think so; I shall try to find out. If not you can get one coloured in Rome. It is easy. My regards to our dear little colony. May they always be fervent and exemplary in everything! Cheerio, dear Father.

Totus tibi in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Mademoiselle Guichard from Marseilles is in Issoudun. She has offered to help us with our Arles foundation; she prefers to have us outside the limits of the Marseilles diocese. She is going to speak to the Bishop of Aix. She tells me that it is common talk in Marseilles that Bishop Place was appointed to Lyon and that the Reverend Father Favre or Fabre, Superior General of the Oblates, would be Bishop of Marseilles. She also informed me that serious complaints against Bishop Place had been raised in Rome. That's what explains his journey (to Rome).

Issoudun
April 4, 1876

Dear Father,

1. I am sorry that this worthy bishop is creating difficulties once again concerning "Remember You" (the prayer to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart). A letter should be directly forwarded to him offering proof of the indulgence's authenticity and an explanation of "Remember You". My letter to the Polish priest could, perhaps, be forwarded to him. In any event, the Bishop of Osimo could well reply, sending him an official letter as proof. His letter would make a greater impression than ours.
2. Indeed, a serious, basic, work on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart would be very opportune. If our sources are ready, send them on to me, and I shall make it my concern.
3. Brother Charles will indeed forward all the different types of pictures of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for Osimo; it is a good idea.
3. A Spanish major seminarian entered the Novitiate last week; he makes a good impression and speaks a little French. The letters supporting him are excellent. It gives hope for the future of the Barcelona house.
5. Father Durin is setting out for America on the 22nd of this month with Brothers Mètayer and Benjamin Grom. If you could obtain a Papal blessing to mark their departure, it would have a boosting impact. I would like to have on Easter Sunday evening and on Wednesday, the day they will be leaving Issoudun, a public ceremony to mark their departure, and then to say a word about it in the Annals which would, hopefully, make an impact; what do you think about it?
6. Father Ariens is waiting impatiently for the Indulgence faculties which he asked you (to get for him).
7. It is Madame Miniot who does not wish to see her son leave; he is very keen, but so timid that he dare not contradict her. I hope that the decision will be made.
8. Write directly for Rome, without its passing through our hands, a letter to the Archbishop of Bourges mentioning this bishop's letter (see above, introduction to this letter), asking him to take the matter in hand and write to him himself. It would be worth the trouble, and the Bourges letter would not counteract that from Osimo (see above, first paragraph).

Your Grace,

Once again I wish to thank Your Grace for all the kindness you have shown to my confrère, Father Chappel.

I hope that he will stay in your diocese when you have welcomed him so willingly and kindly. Providence directed him to Watertown (New York State), the principal town in Jefferson County. He came across Canadian families left without any religious support, and families from Alsace. Things have gone very well for him, he says. He speaks highly of the place and tells us that our Congregation has a big future in those countries.

To rid Fr. Chappel of his isolation and establish a house in America, I am sending out three of my confrères: Fr. Durin, a priest whose qualities are known to Your Grace, and two of our scholastics, one of whom is in minor orders. Fr. Durin will be the Superior of the little community. I hope it will expand and that we shall find vocations in these countries. Fr. Chappel will be Fr. Durin's assistant.

Fr. Chappel, Your Grace, wrote to me saying that it was with Your Grace's consent he left the Toronto diocese. I should like to believe that Your Grace will always be good enough to show interest in our little Sacred Heart group which, if it grows, as I am quietly confident, would make us happy to establish a house under Your Grace's strong and supportive patronage.

Please accept my good wishes and deep appreciation in C.J.

2. I received the contributions for the Annals.
3. Make clear to dear Father Miniot that he is Socius and not Superior; consequently he is completely under your dependence and responsibility. Let him make no innovation on his own, or be responsible for any expenditure; everything is to be overseen and approved by you. He will be your replacement during your absence from Rome, but in keeping with all your wishes and instructions. He already states in his letter that the heat will be too much (for him) in the month of July, and malaria is to be feared; consequently he will have to leave Rome for sometime. You must understand that these concerns and plans are unacceptable. The situation will be no worse than what it is for visitors and communities of women and men who never leave Rome. Fr. Miniot, while a saintly man, is little mortified and likes his ease, keen that nothing should be wanting to him. Make sure to supervise him well and watch him closely.

2. You will be seeing Mademoiselle Guichard, and will also go to Aix and meet His Grace the Archbishop if it becomes necessary to discuss the foundation he is suggesting to us, and then to Arles, if needs be, to look again at sites.
3. The parish priest of Osimo writes to say that he would like very much to see you before you come to France; I replied to him and asked him to go to Rome and have a discussion with you, which was his intention in the first place.
4. I got the little parcel with your notes (observations); we shall discuss these on your return.
5. Since you are not likely to return to Rome until the end of September or the beginning of October, you could spend the greater part of May in Rome, maybe the whole of Mary's month is if it convenient, and part of the month of June. It is enough that you should be in Issoudun for the feast of the Sacred Heart. There will still be time to prepare for the pilgrimage in September. L 18760518

Issoudun, May 18, 1876

Dear Father,

I am sending you on the latest letter from the Bishop of Aix.

1. Consider carefully the significance of what he is proposing. First of all, is there a future at Arles and in Provence for our Congregation? Is the house offered to us in Arles a good one? Suitable? Suited to a religious community? Then of course the climate there is mild in winter and we could send there those of our priests who want warmth during the winter. Would a Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) succeed in Arles and would the resources be available there?
2. The house, if suitable, must be made available to us and, moreover, it is to be hoped that the Bishop either from himself or through benefactors should provide us with an income of 1,000 francs (roughly 3,190 euros) as rent money in order to live, for example. It would be impossible to go and minister to the population in the swamps (towards the coast). Our ministry would be independent and decided on by us. I have heard that during the summer Arles, because of its proximity to the swamps, is not healthy and gives rise to fevers. Could you find out about this?
3. We could promise, if financial support is made available, that one of our priests would give missions in the diocese.
4. Has the house being offered to us a chapel? Would it be possible for us to get one?
5. Father Guyot is now very much in favour of a house for our Society in the Midi (South of France), at Arles or somewhere else; Marseilles would suit us best. But that is impossible at the present time.
6. We shall make arrangements on your return to establish this house if the offers are advantageous. We could, for example, concentrate our undertakings such as the Novitiate and Scholasticate at Chezal-Benoît in keeping with the wishes of the Archbishop of Bourges and take aside two priests and two scholastics for the Midi (Arles). Have a word about all this with Mademoiselle de Choisy.
7. If you can find good coffee in Marseilles you might bring 50 or 100 kilos here with you. Perhaps you might also find there good quality rice and beans. See what you can do.

My regards to the kind sisters and to Sister Guichard.

We have had good reports from Fr. Durin and his companions. They had a pleasant journey. Convey my good wishes to your good sisters and to Sister Guichard. Examine the project. Fr. Durin is asking for sisters at Watertown where he now is. Could some, 3 or 4, be made available?

There remained to consider the conditions being laid down and personnel. To Mr. N., Association of Sacred Heart Crusades.

Issoudun, June 8, 1876

Dear Sir,

I read your kind letter with the greatest interest. I am very pleased about the beginning of such a worthy project which could save, if well organized and led, Catholic society. I regret very much that those who enrol in this militia do not bear the name of Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart. Why discard this title, so spontaneous, opportune, expressive, glorious and appropriate for the Heart of Jesus? The word crusade means nothing. It makes no sense in this instance; is it that perhaps one can go on a Sacred Heart Crusade? You do not wear a cross on your chest! The hermit preaching, cross in hand, placing the cross on the chests of the faithful would and should be described as being crusaders. But our rallying sign, the Sacred Heart, marching in the name of the Sacred Heart, means that we should call ourselves Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart. For the rest, this is the basic interpretation. I believe it comes from heaven; or so I consider, uphold. This word lets it be known who we are and what we should aim to be. It is what has been inspired by the Sacred Heart and will make the undertaking a success. This title, Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart, does not compromise on anything; quite the contrary. Accordingly, we hold to it before everything else. Ask the gentlemen to substitute it for that of crusader.

I think that it would be most fitting if the association of Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart dated its beginning from June 16, 1875, a date when this project was first introduced, with its foundation on the feast of the Sacred Heart, June 23, 1876, when on that day the association had representatives in our church where the undertaking began and the solemn consecration took place through one of its members or by an official delegation ratified by the President.

Some days ago we met the Marquis of Coqueray, founder of the Saint-Michel pilgrimage, here at Issoudun. He supports the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart, willing to become part of this militant apostolate and propagate it, but he is anxious that the fourth invocation should be: "St. Michael, archangel, save the Church and the world through the Sacred Heart." It is simple... What do you think? Suggest it to those gentlemen.

With all good wishes and devotedness in Corde Jesu.

La Bourboule, Monday, July 10, 1876

Dear Father,

I notice that our undertakings in England are not rapidly going ahead; nevertheless you cannot return without our knowing what we are committing ourselves to one way or the other. May the divine Heart of Jesus help you to overcome these obstacles which the devil must be responsible for.

1. It is not possible for us at present to build in the field made available to us by the Duke (of Norfolk). Our being established (in England) is urgent because of foreseen events, while a building would take years. Moreover, money, which we do not have, would be needed.
2. The plan to have two of our confrères in lodging with Mr. Denis at a cost of 6 francs a day for each, that is to say 4,320 francs a year (around 13,784 euros) is impractical. And, moreover, we would not in this way achieve what we have in mind.
3. Is it that Mr. Danell (unclear wording, more likely Daniel), the Duke or some other person might make available to us a house immediately ready to house two priests and 5 or 6 youngsters in a suitable place? That is all we need for the moment. Then, later, we shall see.
4. Is there anything to be hoped for in Brighton, Mr. Munster's town?
5. We are leaving La Bourboule on Tuesday the 18th of this month and I shall be at Issoudun on Wednesday the 19th at 4pm. My health is better. Take care to look after yourself.

In reply to Previtali's of July 13 letter

I (Chevalier) answered that the Reverend Father Cros had declared this to be so, but could not offer the slightest proof.

Previtali's Letter:

Dear Father,

I read in the book on devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, printed in Rome, that the original idea for this devotion was thought of at Paray-le-Monial. I have not found this statement in any of the books printed here which refer to this devotion and, consequently, in order to bring together what is said in this book with that which is stated in the Issoudun Annals, I am drawn to think that the origin of this new devotion was to be associated specifically with Paray, when missionaries prayed to the Virgin in order to have it made known to them in what way they should honour her. For reasons of simple historical curiosity with regards to the origin of this devotion, I would like to know from you, Father, if it is rightly the case that the idea of this (devotion) was first thought of at Paray-le-Monial?

If Father you would care to meet my wishes, address your letter to the under-signed at Saint-Cassiano parish, Venice.

I am with deepest regards,
Yours most humble servant,
Fr. Joseph Previtali.

Foundation of a Clerical College.

Its relationship with the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work).

The Very Rev. Father Superior submitted a proposal from Fr. Bardin to the Council with reference to the foundation of a clerical undertaking (school) at Chezal-Benoît and the mutual relationships between this school and the Little Work. The Council, on studying Fr. Bardin's proposals and having listened to Fr. Vandel's observations on the matter, unanimously decided that it was appropriate that both these undertakings, excellent in their own right, would best fulfil their purpose if each went its own way and that the links between them should not be other than common emulation and a proximity of good will. Nevertheless, given the present needs of the clerical college as it begins to take shape, by way of offering the Archbishop a token of our deep appreciation and making Fr. Bardin a gesture of appreciation for his work by helping him as much as possible in the projected foundation, the Council decided: 1. in relation to the curriculum, that if there were not at first sufficient personnel available as teachers, the pupils could follow the lessons at the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) and would be answerable for studies and discipline during school hours to the rules and regulations of the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work). Outside class there would be complete separation of the youngsters; 2. in regard to dining arrangements, the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) could provide meals for the pupils and teachers of the clerical school at an agreed price. The bursary of the clerical school would meet the cost of bread, wine, desserts, the lighting, heating for the teachers and students, medical care, dispensary items, laundry, clothes' care, specifically everything which does not involve directly the kitchen.

To General de Charette.

B 18760826

Issoudun, August 26, 1876

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

My General,

I am pleased to invite you in the name of His Grace the Archbishop and in our own name also, to attend the religious festivities which will take place at Issoudun on the 7th and 8th of this coming September, marking the anniversary of the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart by Pius IX. We shall have in our basilica on that day a great gathering of the faithful and many pilgrims from Paris.

A very good reason draws us, General, to make our invitation more insistent, and makes us hope that it will be favourably considered, namely the bond which associates you with the Sacred Heart and makes you a most noble and gallant Chevalier.

Our basilica has been drawn to perpetuate this wonderful memory with a magnificent stained glass window in which General Charette, at the head of his zouaves, is to be found splendidly represented bearing in his hand the flag of the Sacred Heart.

We shall use your presence for the occasion to discuss a project with you which we thought about on June 16 last year, the consecration day of the faithful to the Heart of Jesus. This project which has the weighty approval of His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges, is likely, so we believe, if properly carried out, to render great service to the Church and Society. Its aim is to organize under the title Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart men who are wholly dedicated to the Heart of Jesus and to the Church so that in a time of danger they can, even with recourse to arms, defend the Holy See and France. This letter is for yourself alone. If you would like a copy of the plans of the Sacred Heart Chevaliers with a view to giving your views, to which we would attach great significance, I am at your disposal.

Father Jouët's text:

I have pleasure in inviting you to the religious feasts taking place at Issoudun between the 4th and 8th of September next marking the occasion of the anniversary of the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in the name of His Holiness Pius IX. We shall have in our basilica that day a great gathering of people and many pilgrims from Paris. One of the reasons which draws us, General, to make our invitation more pressing, and makes us hope it will be favourably received, is the close bond which characterizes your apostolate and ours. You are the warrior and chevalier of the Sacred Heart, we are the joyful missionaries. Our basilica has made permanent this wonderful souvenir with a magnificent stained glass window where General Charette is splendidly portrayed holding in his hand the Sacred Heart flag being happily unrolled underneath by Generals de Saunis and de Cathelineau. We hope, General, that nothing will prevent you from coming.

Please accept, General, our deepest regards and respect in the Sacred Heart.

Dear Brother Scholastics,

Thank you for your latest letter. It brought me much pleasure. Keep working hard and earning your lecturers' praises. But remember that knowledge without piety means nothing. And you will not be truly pious unless you become perfect religious, and you will not become perfect religious except through observance of your Rules and Constitutions in their whole scope and perfection. I have gathered that several among you give rein to your own desires in a self-willed way, trying to impose yourselves on Father Miniot who is, in Fr. Jouët's absence, your Superior, either in taking walks as you see fit or in prolonging your stay in Tivoli. I am insistent that a contrary spirit (attitude) should not in any way take root among us. There should be a spirit of absolute obedience and the mortifying of one's own will. You must not, then, express any such kind of attitude. It is for your Superiors to set out, lay down, everything for you and you will return to Rome at the end of this month or the beginning of the next.

Pray earnestly for me.

To Mr. and Mrs. Zieu, benefactors in the French Midi.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Undated

Dear Sir and Madam,

Fr. Guyot in writing and Father Jouët in conversation have brought to my notice the kind proposal with which you favour us in respect to your Roquefavour property. The heartening information which they have provided about the present condition of the little monastery, the land you have made over, and the future possibilities of our Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) in this setting, as well as your well-disposed acceptance of us, all this draws me as soon as I can to bring this project to fruition with a speedy foundation.

Having considered many possibilities and having given thought to the requirement of beginning nothing without laying a solid and lasting foundation, I find that in spite of myself there is an absolute requirement to begin nothing this year or next, and hold everything over until two or three years from now. It would be quite irresponsible at the moment to find two or three Fathers to begin with and we do not wish to send one there on his own. This would not be enough.

But if you willingly accept this postponement, completely contrary to our wishes, and offer or promise us for later what you make available now, we can promise you that a Roquefavours foundation will take precedence over any other and we shall set it up as soon as possible.

Meanwhile I see no problem if Father Guyot, Superior of our Arles house, finds it feasible and the cost of the trip can be met, in one of our priests going to Roquefavours to say mass each Sunday. This would be the beginning of the taking over, and the blessings of the Sacred Heart, I have no doubt, would be on your good will and ours. It would please me greatly if I could take myself to the Midi and discuss with you in detail a project which is very important to us, but this is completely impossible for me at the moment. Perhaps I could do so within two or three months on my way to Rome.

Meanwhile, be assured of my deepest regards and gratitude in C. Jesus.

Here is the arrangement with which we can come to terms:

1. To accept immediately the generous proposal which you have put to us and proceed forthwith to the hand-over deed whereby there would be guarantee from your side and obligation from ours.
2. Since at present we do not have enough members to provide the desired personnel, we undertake to begin this work in a seriously involved way within two or three years at the most, promising to make every effort to meet your wishes, and sooner if we can manage to do so.
3. Meanwhile, one of the priests from the Arles house could, perhaps, go every Sunday to say Mass at Roquefavours if you would wish it so. In this way, Madame and Monsieur, nothing will be lightly undertaken and the very important undertaking which we are identifying with Roquefavours will be all the more serious and lasting.

I should like to think that through love for what is good, for the Heart of Jesus and His missionaries who already look lovingly upon you as benefactors, you will wholeheartedly accept these proposals. And later, I shall go to meet you and finalize this important issue.

Awaiting your reply, please accept my sincere gratitude and respectful good wishes in C.J.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Issoudun
October 17, 1876

My Lord,

By so kindly inviting into your Aix diocese the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and giving them so wholeheartedly the house they are occupying and the chapel they are so delighted to service, Your Lordship has charged them with a triple apostolate:

that of preaching in commending them to the diocesan clergy for retreats and missions; that of promoting the apostolate of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in setting up this devotion which is so efficacious with its Association of prayer for difficult and hopeless cases;

then the apostolate of the 'Petite Oeuvre' of the Sacred Heart, so called from the 'sou' (English, shilling) a year, inviting it (a school) to open in your diocese as a branch of their Issoudun enterprise to foster missionary vocations.

The very supportive and kind welcome already shown to us by the worthy clergy and good people of Arles prompts us to appeal, with your weighty approval Your Lordship, to the priests and people of your diocese and their Lordships the neighbouring Bishops, for the resources needed to set up these important undertakings.

Our chapel is impoverished, but we would like, nevertheless, to make it worthy to be one of the main centres of devotion to the Sacred Heart in dear Provence which had the signal honour of being evangelized by the first disciples and friends of the Heart of Jesus: St. Maximin, St. Trophen, St. Lazare, St. Martha and St. Mary Magdalen.

Our Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) will gladly accept poor children who have the vocation, good disposition, aptitude for the missionary state. To support and bring up these youngsters, we ask from pious people a modest contribution of one sou (shilling) a year. What Christian family, what religious community could refuse us this offering when it is known that Your Lordship supports our endeavours, and Pius IX himself, in his own modest circumstances, wishes to give in his own name a golden sou, saying: "there's the Pope's sou for the Petite Oeuvre".

We are strongly confident, Your Lordship, that you will be supportive of our undertakings and that your kind approval will be the strongest commendation for us among their Lordships, the Bishops, the clergy and laity, and a most assured pledge of success.

I have the honour to be your most respectful, humble and obedient servant.

B. The Directors should look for helpers and resources in the neighbouring dioceses.

2. Directions.

- A. They should, when admitting youngsters, use the Issoudun programme and questionnaire.
B. They will have their promotion sheets approved by the Very Rev. Father Superior and the diocesan Bishop.
C. They should not keep the youngsters beyond the 6th year. They will send on to Chezal-Benoît the youngsters they have trained. If they are presented with a youngster who has completed his 6th year and has the support of guarantees, they may take him in for some weeks to get to know him, after which he will be sent on to Chezal-Benoît if he is thought to be suitable for the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work).

Issoudun, December 3, 1876

Confidential

Dear Father,

1. I have been to see the Archbishop of Bourges; His Grace advises us to accept the Rome Archconfraternity novena of prayers and spread it. By giving way to them on this issue, His Grace hopes they will calm down, be pacified and make them, if not friends, at least well-wishing. The Archbishop, conciliatory in spirit, would like you to meet the Scalsis, get close to them, make yourself available either for preaching at St. Andrea-della-Valle or at their meetings, or whatever else. Is this quite possible? See what you can do. The Archbishop would also like you to make friends with Bishop Jacobini, the Substitute for Briefs, visit him frequently, gain his confidence in offering mass stipends at a higher rate (!) or through some little gifts, always preserving one's dignity, you understand. The Archbishop would also like you to cultivate the good will of some high-ranking influential ecclesiastical personalities, or officials and secret allies of Congregations, prudently, no doubt, but perseveringly. His Grace is convinced that in so preparing the ground, we shall achieve our aim without fail. He is of the view that we should not deal directly at the present time with the Holy Father to find satisfaction before all that has gone on. The time hasn't yet arrived; it is, he says, too soon. The Scalsis are still too powerful, have too much influence and too many protectors at present. His Grace does not want any direct action in this matter to be undertaken at the moment because, as he says, we might compromise what little there's left to us. Caution, caution... and being as conciliatory as possible, that's what he wants.

2. I have in my hands a substantial indicting document which has been forwarded to Rome. This is diabolical scheming! Dealing with certain issues there might be the semblance of truth, but a ridiculous mounting-up of absurd exaggerations pervades everything. Here is the basic thrust of it all: 1. Disappointed ambition. 2. Pride becoming too humiliated. 3. Demands ignored. 4. Sensuality checked. 5. The love of well being (ease) not met (satisfied). 6. The spirit of independence challenged. 7. Family visits and other requests of this kind refused. 8. The likelihood of this or that kind of work left aside because something else was wanted. 9. Poor judgment, and imagination running away with itself etc. These are the statements which you will be called upon to answer.

Father V. (Vandel), Father Pip. (Piperon), Fr. G. (Guyot), Father Marie, in moments of discontent hard to fathom and devilishly prompted, have spoken imprudently, like inexperienced children, more than once. Fr. Captier (very likely supported by Fr. Marie) made himself the mouth-piece of these exaggerated complaints, true or false, all directed against me. I am the scapegoat, it has to be so. My part in this is humiliation, the chalice filling to the brim, and the cross as far as moral death. I must put up with this. I have deserved it all through my infidelity. The Lord be praised! Long live the Sacred Heart! But what makes me feel keenly and be so upset is to think that everybody, or almost – I exclude you and some others, was aware that this was brewing, even Brother de Mondion, all except myself.

Fr. Marie under the direction of Father Captier (who is in bed laid up) wrote these baffling words to me which are truly part of the mystery of human aberration when devilishly prompted: "The state of the Congregation was sincerely and conscientiously presented to 10 or 12 theologians and canon lawyers, distinguished specialists, some religious from different Orders, others highly placed in the ecclesiastical hierarchy, many of them with great and sincere regard for our Congregation. And the virtually unanimous decision of these gentlemen was that if matters did not, in keeping with Canon Law, make for requisite orderliness, there was an obligation in conscience on the Congregation's members to leave." Do you, dear friend understand this way of behaving? If there were grievances to be expressed, would not normal good sense dictate that I should be first informed about them? Then if I had not considered the issues in the Council, and the hoped-for remedying of the situation hadn't been addressed, then one should make representations to the Archbishop of Bourges, and then, if this had not worked, there was nothing left but recourse to Rome. Not so, however; outsiders are contacted in contravention of our Constitutions. Our Congregation is disparaged, crushed in an abyss nonchalantly, icily, and to applause. There, dear Father, is the two-edged sword which smites me.

Fr. Captier has written two letters, in one of which he expresses his dissatisfaction, the other rounding off what he has to say. Here is what he has to say for himself:

1. "The Congregation is not governed according to canonical regulations." I would very much like to know in what way? It is administered in keeping with our present Constitutions, and I do not believe that after two years there has been any derogation of standards.

2. The assumption of all powers, roles, by the Superior General: parish priest, bursar general, local superior. I do not know if it is contrary to Canon Law for a Superior General to be parish priest. Nowhere have I seen this stated. In any event it is known in Rome. I mentioned it to Bishop de Luca and he passed no remark about it. In any event, it was the Archbishop of Bourges who so arranged matters. General Bursar: it used to be Father Durin; before him Fr. Piperon, presently it is Father Vigerat. It is correct that I like to approve of all expenses, and revise them. It is my duty and right. It is true that I have, together with you and Fr. Morisseau, the keys of the safe. It is correct that I oversee expenditure and take note of the receipts; experience has shown the necessity. Otherwise, who in our Society has truly and seriously this ability? As for local Superior, it's yourself and before you Fr. Piperon.

The Memorandum declares that: "there should be a spiritual Father in our Congregation, and we haven't one". Reply: Fr. Vandel was appointed and then Fr. Morisseau: it's not my fault if these gentlemen have neither the feeling, talent, or health, for that. I appealed for this at conferences in Issoudun, etc. Why doesn't the Superior in the other houses name one of his confrères for this? Again, is it always feasible?

We began yesterday and we are in a development stage. Our dear complainants would like us to be so organized as if we were existing 200 years. They do not want to know that beginnings are always difficult, that everything has to be organized and done, and formidable difficulties have to be faced. Yes! It's already a great miracle if in such a short time our Congregation is what it is.

The Assistants, it is again stated, should be permanently, or as good as being so, in a fixed posting, or effectively so. Frs. Guyot, Jouët and Vandel are absent most of the time. Reply: these are only rare exceptions. As for Fr. Guyot, it is neither my fault or yours! There are complaints also about our precipitate foundations. Reply: I do not see that we have done anything so questionable. What has happened? Arles was undertaken only because the Chezal-Benoît College was no longer functioning.

Third Complaint: my varied work-load prevents me from paying attention to formation. Reply: formation takes place in the Novitiate. The Superior General should only involve himself with the general direction of things.

Fourth Complaint: A total lack of spiritual direction. Reply: Spiritual direction should come from the local Superior and in the serious carrying out of the Rules. Our Constitutions are quite explicit about this issue. If each religious did what the Constitutions state he would quickly become a saint.

Fifth Complaint: A lack of intellectual formation because each one is overburdened with work. Reply: this is true, but it is a requirement in the present situation which will lessen eventually. And, for all that, if anyone so wished, there is plenty of time available for study. Our scholastics, the Memorandum adds, lack time for and over-seeing in their studies. Reply: for some, this is so; nevertheless, the examinations they take at Bourges (major seminary) provide quite satisfactory results. Besides, there is a house of studies in Rome and we are only at the beginnings of our Congregation and this is a demanding time.

Sixth Complaint: It is said that too much attention is given, focused, on material issues, that I am too parsimonious with regard to members and houses by refusing what are virtually necessities. Reply: It is an exaggeration which borders on calumny. First of all it is not true in relation to the members, and then each particular house has fixed revenues allotted to it by us. If the Superior of these houses does not know how to administer, or authorizes expenditure which is an outrage against our vow of poverty, I must, to this way of thinking, overlook and sanction the abuses. An accusation of this kind is unbecoming!

There (above) you have (an example of) the Chezal-Benoît spirit! The source of bloody-mindedness and intrigues at the present time is to be traced there. The Chezal-Benoît administration has in 6 years cost us 25,000 francs (79,769 euros roughly) in debts. It seems to me that this is a fairly shattering experience. I should like to look at the new foundations of other communities and whether everything is flourishing with them. It seems to me that Fr. Marie has failed in this matter. If he had carried out his duties, he should have seen the letters addressed to the ten theologians, canon lawyers, etc., and if so why did he not stop them and bring it to my knowledge? Furthermore, Brother de Mondion was aware of all this because he said to me when I stopped his letter to his mother that the most respected priests of the Society had consulted noteworthy priests, religious, even bishops who had advised them to appeal to Rome. You will yourself recall that Fr. Ariens said during the year that Rome should be asked to send a Visitor who would meet expectations. All this, then, was a concerted effort, and the changes in the curriculum, the rules and discipline at Chezal-Benoît brought everything to the fore.

Could you find out what time the complaint document was sent to Rome? Fr. Marie said to me in his letter that I should anticipate events, and forthwith ask the Archbishop of Bourges to make a Visitation of our houses himself, and listen to the complaints of each religious before recommending a modus vivendi which would please everybody. What do you think? I believe that these complaints come from those, small in number, who are big-headed, and it would be to encourage an unwholesome outlook and set going, in effect, a mania of criticism against the Superior's running of things, to forward for no good reason complaints to Rome: all this could, indeed be very serious. Do you think that the Council and the well-disposed priests might not make a protest signed and sealed by the Archbishop and that this would be the best response? And if the Congregation placed the blame on Fr. Captier and his supporters, this would be to cut off at source the evil. If this is your view, it is yourself who should set things in motion since I am too involved in the issues. In any event, dear friend, do what is best. Let us leave everything to the Heart of Jesus; it's my failings which have drawn on us all these storms. If I were to be replaced by someone else I would be happy!

I shall engage myself with our Constitutions and make through our Administration the likely reforms thought necessary to provide satisfying results. But it is impossible to do everything all at once.

I am delighted you got the statue and have the patrology... Pray, and have me prayed for. Things are going well in America. I shall go to Arles, perhaps, next week. Bayonne is not going anywhere. My regards to Reverend Fathers Régis, Bricchet, etc. My good wishes to the little colony (students). I cannot read this back.

Cheerio, dear friend.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Father Captier's memorandum is very comprehensive.
Is it truly appropriate? Is it correct? Is it necessary?

I.

Is it truly appropriate?

We do not at all think so. Last year all hell furiously broke loose against us almost leading to the kiss of death for the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. This malevolence is still pursuing us, and now one of our own is rocking right to the very foundations our religious structure under the pretext of consolidating it. Can this unexpected, violent, onslaught be turned around? Or should it be left to disintegrate? He does not appear to be very worried about this. And what moment will he choose? Such as that when the revolution swore to destroy the Religious Orders and used every means to annihilate them!

II.

Does he rightly remember?

Is the author well informed about the state of the Congregation? We doubt it. And in any event how could he? It is not from himself since he has in fact never lived in Issoudun. The Superior of the Society has always been particularly kind to him. He, despite the Council's advice, opened the Institute's doors to him; he never neglected bringing the Rule, which he often ignored, to his attention. On many occasions he took his part and prevented him from being expelled. It is to him he owes the blessing of the priesthood (because all the confrères were against it). Quite recently did not a parish priest save him from shipwreck when confirming him in his vocation, and Fr. Captier, as an expression of his gratitude, wrote him two most fulsome letters. Yesterday's Hosanna becomes today's Crucify him. What has happened, then? Ah! It simply is that Fr. Captier has without a doubt been challenged about his views, his way of seeing things, and he has made himself the sounding-board of some malcontents.

Is it through others he has been so well informed? By those, no doubt, mentioned in the Memorandum as being the best, the most devoted, the most influential, that is to say the members of the Council, since we consider nobody but these as having all these qualities. But Fr. Captier must know very well that since the Society was established and approved the Superior never undertook anything important without submitting it to the Council for its approval. It endorses and carries out his decisions. He who reports, then, obviously cannot base his case on the consultors; he will have to acknowledge, therefore, that he was undoubtedly the recipient of confidences from some discontented religious who superficially, without knowing the facts, came to conclusions precipitately, and, in particular, without asking whether in the actual circumstances, given the available personnel, faced with the beginning of a Society trying to cope with a thousand problems, one could do any better. A Superior is sometimes forced to take severe, even harsh measures, in special circumstances with regard to such and such, and which he cannot divulge to everybody. There you will have your criticism, your fault-finding, for simply upholding the Rule.

"One deplures," the Memorandum says, "that our Congregation is not governed according to the canonical regulations." Would one first of all be more precise about this and state in what way? It (the Society) is administered according to our Constitutions as approved by Rome. What more does one want? And if there are some issues which are not yet being undertaken, for example, that of Provincial, Procurator (Bursar) for the foreign missions, it is because it is not possible at present. We touch on, so to say, the beginning of our Society here. It dates from yesterday, daily grows, and yet there is the desire to make it so developed as if we had 200 years of existence behind us. Give time for the undertakings to develop and do not try to be more wise or move more quickly than the Holy Spirit!

"The second complaint blames the Superior for taking over himself the exercise of all power." He has only the powers of office and those required by the circumstances. While away from the Sacred Heart, he is always replaced by an assistant: Fr. Jouët when there or, if not, Fr. Vandel. (Jouët was Superior but not in residence, involved with the Roman house of which he was in charge.) And while in the house he obviously exercises authority since it cannot be that there should be two Superiors for the ten religious who live continuously at the Sacred Heart. As for the duties associated with a General Bursar, previously it was carried out by Fr. Durin, and presently by the Superior (Chevalier first wrote Fr. Vigerat, but not being judged suitable, wrote 'Superior') who was asked by the Council to take on overall responsibility because it was impossible to do any better. And the Society does not have anything to regret – far from that! It is proper that the Superior, at the beginning of such an important undertaking, should be able to have an exact awareness of income and expenditure, and authorizes only that which he considers necessary for the good of the community. Would that he had always done so! For the rest, he is greatly helped in this important role by an assistant bursar who deals with details.

And there are complaints about precipitate foundations. Where are they? We are only aware of that in Arles which was asked for four years ago. The Council gave it a lot of thought before accepting, and it only took place because the closure of Chezal-Benoît College made available some members to the Council, and a large house in the South of France (the Midi) could be helpful (climatically) for the Society's invalids.

It is also said that the Superior General has too much to do. This is true, but he is not complaining. In any event, nothing essential is being neglected; we are not that many! The Novitiate knows that it is spared neither advice or encouragement; likewise for Chezal-Benoît; Arles is already aware of all his concern; the Rome and American houses could likewise testify to the same concern.

It is said that a spiritual father (adviser) is needed and the Community does not have one. This is an exaggeration! It is enough for the present that each Superior of a house be the spiritual father for that house; that is plainly enough. If he explains and has the Constitutions well observed, fervour will take hold of the Community!

Again the lack of intellectual formation is mentioned. Yet we have our Rome house of studies for the more intellectually able, and we try to do our best for the other scholastics. In each house they have a priest-professor (from the Community), and the examiners at Bourges are quite pleased with our young men when we put them forward for Orders.

The Memorandum then finds that we give too much importance to material issues. We know this all too well, we who do not give enough attention to this. Could one possibly make a more undeserved reproach when complaining that the Superiors of a Congregation provide themselves with bread and resources while their members go needy? One can see here just how far the spirit of criticism and prejudice can go!

Here then, the author of the Memorandum declares, we have all that which endangers the Congregation. The problem is not there. It is to be identified with those individuals who are full of themselves, who are only religious in name, who project themselves as censors, absurd reformers lacking in experience, humility and religious obedience, imposing, oracle-like, their views and bringing into the Society a deplorable spirit of denigration and insubordination. Oh. If everyone lived by the Rule and tried to aim for perfection through the means it offers, not only would everything be in order, but our Society of the Sacred Heart would be a true earthly paradise. Mercifully those individuals to whom we refer are not many.

III.

Was this recourse to Rome necessary?

1. We straightforwardly answer: No.

There is that in the first instance which counsels prudence, fairness, and reasonableness, speaking in confidence to the Superior about all one's complaints, true or false, making known to him abuses if there are any, and the reforms one seeks for the good of the Congregation. One needs to know if he seeks this more than anything else and if he will stop at nothing to bring it about. But not so; he doesn't know anything; everything is kept from him and he doesn't fear anything except from outsiders when the damage is done and there's no longer a remedy.

2. If no attention had been paid to his comments, the complaints should be directed to the Society's Council which would itself have looked into the matter. But it is submitted that the Council does not meet regularly. How can one put forward such an assertion when it was with the Constitutions to hand we went ahead last year counteracting any such criticism?

3. If the Council had failed in its tasks one could then have recourse to the Archbishop of Bourges, whose pre-eminent qualities everybody is aware of, as well as the regard he has for our work which he makes his own concern. In this way the complainants would have been assured about everything. His Grace is the normal and immediate representative of the Holy See for our Congregation. But not so. His Grace in this sad affair, like the Council and the Superior (Chevalier), was completely pushed aside. It was a process which we do not dare to evaluate and what can one say in trying to excuse it? As if the Archbishop of Bourges was no longer our Bishop. And who is if not he, since we are not exempt religious? And what happens next? The worst and most dangerous scenario that one can imagine. Effectively, the author of the Memorandum says, the complainants got in touch with 10 or 12 distinguished theologians and canon lawyers, some religious from different orders etc. Such behaviour is deeply regrettable; it is contrary to our regulations which forbid us so wisely from making derogatory statements. There is a sharing with outsiders, less prudent or more prudent, less so or more so, friends of the Society, of troubles often thought upon or exaggerated which should remain hidden among ourselves, but which, due to the indiscretion of some, become already known to certain members of the public. Is there not here a serious letting-down which nothing can excuse and which demonstrates the anonymous imprudence and the total lack of a balanced judgment on the part of those responsible for this memorandum. We cannot explain these unqualified exaggerations other than through the good Lord's permitting of it as he once more tests us, and through the Devil's machinations in wishing to destroy us.

We would, then, have understood and approved of it wholeheartedly if the Superior (Chevalier), the Council and the Archbishop, properly informed, had not, presupposing legitimacy, given any satisfaction, and the issue was addressed to Rome, something which we accept a religious is always entitled to do if he so wishes. That is why we said that the appeal did not seem necessary to us because one could achieve the same result without recourse to the Sacred Congregation in what will always be ill-conceived whatever the truth or falsehood of the accusations. Fr. Marie, who seems to take Fr. Captier's side, advises the Superior to ask the Archbishop to be an official visitor and settle this matter. It is precisely what he would have liked and which he still wants to do; but would it not have been better for him to have done so from the beginning (in contrast, that is, with jerk-like reaction of immediate recourse to Rome).

But what saddens the Superior and his Council is knowing that the initiative began with and from Chezal-Benoît where Fr. Marie is the Superior. If the latter had carried out his duties, he would have seen the letters sent to the twelve theologians and canonists and informed the Superior General about it. He should have been aware of the abyss being stirred up in which our little Society could have been engulfed, and he kept quiet about it all... He, Fr. Marie... he, whom the Society saved from the precipice.

The Memorandum's author states that our Congregation suffers and that vocations are not coming in. It is not true! Our Novitiate has never been so flourishing; at the moment there are 16 or 17 novices. Besides, there are 4 priests who wish to join us. Our undertakings are flourishing and we enjoy the esteem and good will of all who know us. I hope that in Rome justice will be done in the face of these delations (written complaints).

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Perhaps it's not known in Rome that the author of the Memorandum is a fanatic who more than once has demonstrated his foolishness.

Dear Father,

You should have received my long letter about the deplorable activities of Fr. Captier, and the Archbishop's advice about the Scalsi. I called a meeting of the Council; Fr. Guyot was there. All our confrères were outraged by Fr. Captier's behaviour. You are aware that he is not right in the head; more than once, at Montluçon, St.-Gérand, Chezal-Benoît, he has provided many examples of the onset of folly, and when challenged he becomes outrageous. This is the explanation for such deplorable behaviour. All this must be conveyed to Bishop Luca. The Archbishop of Bourges, who knew nothing about this, is appalled. Meanwhile His Grace, noting the absurdity of the accusations, thinks that the Congregation will not reply to Fr. Captier or lay the blame on him. Perhaps Brother de Mondion and Fr. Marie share, somewhat, his views; these are the only ones... I am sending you very shortly a copy of what I intend to send the Archbishop of Bourges. Fathers Piperon, Vandel and Guyot are leaving at this moment for Bourges to clarify the Archbishop on the falsehood of the accusations and protest most strongly. It would be no bad thing for yourself, perhaps, if you wrote a letter to the Archbishop in the same vein. (Jouët's letter to the Archbishop was dated exactly a week later, December 10.) Do not speak about this matter to our confrères in Rome or anyone else. We have together considered Bishop de Luca's observations in respect to those issues reserved to the Council in 14 instances, or only 7 where it is de consensu Adstantium, and whether the other 7 should stay as they are: de consilio Adstantium when placing them in order. That is my view. The others think that the 14 issues cannot be decided except de consensu. I can see that there could be awkward situations arising in some issues of no great significance. One would like to know, also, if the refusal enforced on us about accepting religious who have taken the habit in another community is only applicable to the prestigious Orders which take solemn vows and not to Religious from Congregations which take simple vows.

Cheerio, dear friend.

Observations on the Constitutions sent by Bishop de Luca.

At this meeting the corrections made to the Constitutions by Bishop de Luca, substitute at the Congregation for Bishops and Regulars, were read. This venerable Prelate, having stated that most probably the Congregation would look for the same corrections, and that, otherwise, except for one issue only, all the modifications would not in any way alter the spirit of the Constitutions, the Council agreed on acceptance. In relation to the vows, Bishop de Luca expressed the wish that they be changed in the following manner. After the Novitiate year one will take temporary vows for three years and then perpetual vows will follow. The Council, on giving serious consideration to the reasons supporting this new situation, were drawn thereby to align their thoughts with the helpful good will of the venerable Prelate. The fourth vow is also changed in the sense indicated by the substitute of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

Issoudun, December 9, 1876

Dear Father,

Yesterday I celebrated a sad anniversary of the beginning of our little Society of the Sacred Heart. My heart was, still is, sadly affected by all that has gone on and still goes on. It is a new storm set going by the Devil. Fr. Vandel has contributed a great deal to the Captier and supporters' campaign because of the decisions taken about the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work). The poor man, as naïve as a child, has created havoc here and there. Fr. Guyot, as I wrote to you, came on Wednesday. We had a Council meeting. What a pity you were not here! It is clear that Fr. Guyot's unsupportive attitude, Fr. Piperon's whimsical sallies, and Fr. Vandel's weakness for his Petite Oeuvre have contributed enormously to the dissatisfaction and current murmurings from a certain number of ill-disposed characters against the leadership. These three worthy priests are neither prudent or discreet; they have made too much of their way of seeing things, evaluating situations wrongly and incorrectly. These three worthy fathers, then, went to Bourges to protest, so they said, against Fr. Captier's Memorandum, while repudiating the recourse to Rome which they rightly considered an annoyance, inopportune and very imprudent. When with the Archbishop they agreed on principle with Fr. Captier's basic argument. They presumed to inform His Grace that I did not consult the Council, acted independently of it, had forced Arles on them, and that I did not account for my actions, etc., and that I laid hold of all the Petite Oeuvre resources leaving it without an appropriate share, and that I had introduced a new set of regulations which damaged people's health...

The Archbishop said that he wanted to see me. I arrived. When he told me all the foregoing, I fell into a dark mood. Given that these were men on the Council whom I consulted like a child and wouldn't lift a straw without informing them, often absurdly giving way in the face of their views, most of the time contrary to the best interest of the Society, giving them exceptional latitude not known in other communities, how could these be the same individuals, good, pious, basically dedicated, now performing in this way? Truly the Devil is at work here.

I provided the Archbishop with the answers he was looking for and he appreciated very well the whole issue. His Grace is very supportive and asked me to call together again the Council members and to engage with them in order to please, if possible, the discontented. What can I do, dear friend? Tell me. What do you think? What advice would you give? My brain is addled from all this. I am heartily sick of it all. Oh! How I miss you!

1. The Archbishop asked me to tell you to advise shrewdly Bishop de Luca if he needs information or explanations about the Captier issue, and to get in touch with him, the Archbishop of Bourges, when he will explain to him that Fr. Captier will not return a second time because he is outraged by his conduct.

2. The Archbishop again said to me to make sure that you took care to say nothing about my statue which you have with you in Rome, not to draw the public's attention to it, and leave it in your private oratory, saying nothing about it. It is because, as His Grace remarks, the Scalsi would, if they knew about it, not hesitate to say that we are thumbing our noses at them under their eyes, and this would draw more trouble upon us. Do as I say then and be careful.

3. As for Saint Yves des Bretons, the Archbishop knows and is particularly friendly with Baron de Baude, France's new Ambassador in Rome. With his help, he (the Archbishop) is certain that we shall have that house since it all depends on him. As the Archbishop is going to Rome in April, he will, so he tells me, come to an agreement with the Ambassador about arranging this important undertaking in our favour. The Archbishop does not doubt that it will be successful. He would like you, for your part, to pay Baron de Baude a visit.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Issoudun, December 16, 1876

Dear Father,

I received on Thursday morning your invaluable reply to Fr. Captier's absurd Memorandum. I find it very clear, very succinct and very compelling. It seems to me that it reduces to insignificance the whole edifice built up by this unfortunate who is light in the head. Fr. Captier will go and that is certain... When I received your letter on Thursday I left for Chezal-Benoît straightaway accompanied by Fr. Vandel. I was particularly kind and prudent. This is what happened:

I had my doubts about Fr. Marie being fully aware of what was going on and I wasn't mistaken. Fr. Captier confided in Fr. Marie who became aware of everything and read the Memorandum to him and also to Father Augereau. Fr. Marie kept his lips sealed until Thursday (the day of Chevalier's arrival), and yet still by Thursday he made bold enough to say that he knew nothing about what was happening. Nevertheless, Fr. Captier when I was speaking to him said that he had both mentioned and shown everything to Fr. Marie. The latter, at this stage, in order to wriggle out of it, said that he was obliged by secrecy. I expressed my total disapproval, stating that this kind of secret did not hold in conscience because there was the issue of a religious society's ruin. This happened when I was leaving and in the courtyard, and I couldn't say anything further.

As for Father Augereau, who is no more than a child, he assured me that he was open about the unfortunate issue with Fr. Piperon from the beginning and genuinely thought that Fr. Piperon would have spoken to me about it. Would you believe it that Fr. Piperon never said a word about all this to me and professed himself to be amazed at the Council meeting when I exposed this plotting? Here you have one of those mysteries either of forgetfulness or stupidity, complicity, which distresses me and causes me as much pain as the rest. What depths will not these people go to? This is dangerous nonsense. Oh, how I suffer! I have not yet made Fr. Piperon aware of his unbecoming conduct.

On Thursday, then, I asked Fr. Captier for a copy of his Memorandum. He said to me that he had kept nothing and as soon as he had got rid of the Memorandum he threw the rough draft into the fire (I don't believe a word of it). "But at the very least," I said, "you must be well able to remember what you wrote." "I would rather," he said, "speak to the Archbishop myself. I would be more free. I am asking you for 8 days to put together my ideas." "Very well," I replied. "But following on what Fr. Marie wrote as coming from you and from what I gather from Fr. Augereau, allow me to provide you with explanations which you have overlooked, to establish the facts, to present the situation to you, and you can judge for yourself."

I went right to the heart of things, and without any difficulty demolished his argument point by point as you yourself did (in the letter to Chevalier). I spent two hours with him. At the end of the session he said to me: "Yes, I understand and I acted too hastily; if it is like that, I wrongly judged and acted, etc."

"Well then, my dear friend," I said to him, "take your time, reflect over it. What is best for you to do is to write again to the Sacred Congregation stating that on being better informed about the state of the Congregation you are withdrawing your Memorandum and that will be the end of the matter. Otherwise it is you yourself who will be the casualty of your imaginings and imprudence, because our self-justification being easily assured, confirmed, the Sacred Congregation will pronounce a verdict against you, and it will be enforced departure from our Institute for you." It seemed to me that he understood all this. When I left him he was well disposed. What he is going to do I still do not know since, with a brain like his, what can you expect?

Little Brother de Mondion became also involved when he sent a Memorandum to the Archbishop of Bourges about the state of the Society as not being to his liking. He drew His Grace's attention in particular to the state of the Novitiate which seemed to him badly led and lacking in a religious spirit. He said that Fr. Ramot was too young to be Novice Master and, contrary to our Constitutions, inexperienced, incapable of forming candidates. Then he went on to say that we are in too great a hurry to have our Constitutions approved, that our formation is not yet quite right, and premature in many respects. There's the basic thrust; he is a little notionalist, of proud and dangerous judgment. Shared with the Archbishop of Bourges these comments, while very unfortunate, are not so damaging. Fr. Guyot, to whose attention I brought all of this, wrote me an exculpatory (mea culpa) letter stating that he himself was largely to blame for what happened due to his being indiscreet, making false, exaggerated, tactless, criticisms of my leadership and the Council at Issoudun to his novices and the disaffected who took him into their confidence.

You know, my friend, that you always said that Fr. Guyot projected an unhealthy attitude which could become damaging. We can see, so see it at this moment. He seems, it is true, to be sorry about it, but it is too late now. And, indeed, you can be sure that Frs. Piperon and Vandel, for their part, have made their own contribution to this damaging attitude through their short-sighted views, their unacceptable indiscretion, and in virtually always going against me when faced with the criticism of such as Fathers Albert, Bazire, Ariens, Marie, Captier, etc.

It is high time to remedy this unhealthy situation. Since Fr. Guyot is in our sights, I am disposed to ask you to come from Rome after Christmas and have an important meeting of the Council to deal with the serious issue (under discussion), and provide a satisfactory outcome insofar as that is possible, examining the Congregation's morale and taking heed. What do you think? I would not want to bring together these gentlemen (on the Council) without you being present to discuss such important issues. You would be away from Rome, perhaps, for fifteen days or so. Let me have your views on this. Tomorrow, Sunday evening, I shall pass on to Frs. Piperon and Vandel your reply to the Memorandum, and in confidence. Then we shall see.

Fr. Bazire has tried the Trappists at Sept-Fons, but found them too harsh for his health. He left on Monday to go to the Bernardines in Savoy. Do not say anything about this for the moment; I shall keep you informed.

Fr. Marie and Father Captier are complaining about the absence of several assistants (consultors) who should, so they say, always remain in Issoudun with the Superior. Fr. Guyot is at Arles, still Superior there; Fr. Jouët is in Rome, and Fr. Vandel often away travelling. Please ask Bishop de Luca if it is correct that Assistants should always be with the Superior. Once they are present at Council meetings and their views are forthcoming for normal situations, is there any need for more than this? I am pleased to hear that you have received the Patrology (book). I am very sorry that Brother Postal is indisposed. Look after him well. I am grateful to our dear scholastics for their kind letter. I pray earnestly for them. May they do so for me also! I send them a thousand blessings. Warmest good wishes to dear Fr. Miniot. His good mother is very well. I am pleased that Dom Pitra has come to terms with our statue. Prejudices give way in time. But remain cautious! Particularly in Rome do not create any commotion for the present. Stay out of the limelight. The Archbishop says that the statue should stay in your private oratory and nothing should be done to draw attention to it. This will come in its own time. Say the Masses as you wish and for all you have in mind. My respectful good wishes and lively greetings to Fr. Régis.

Cheerio, dear Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

In the chapter on the vow of obedience, what phraseology should be used to distinguish the vow from the virtue? What is the point of keeping the 4th vow if the vow of obedience implies going anywhere "ad nutum S. Pontificis et Superioris generalis"? Ask Bishop Luca. (A) On the first line, p33, should not the word "perpetua" be taken out since we have, following the novitiate, vows of three years' duration? Your phrasing in article III "de tertio gradu" is not, so it seems to me, comprehensive enough. You write: "votis in perpetuum emissis, ad nutum... ad missiones pergunt". Should it not be: "votis in perpetuum emissis votum addiderunt ad nutum" etc.? Page 36, number 4, after "recurratur" you have added: "quatenus perpetua ea sciat" (Chevalier misread "sciat" for "sint"). What does that mean? At number 5, on the same page, I think that one should add "perpetuum" after "professionem" because of the 3-year vows: this privilege is only applicable to those who have made final vows. On page 41 of the Constitutions, number 2, one should insert "perpetua" after "vota" since those who have only made three-year vows cannot be electors. On page 49 do not the words "Romae penes Sanctam" etc. mean living in Rome? On page 53, section II, should not we add to the word "vocali" with respect to the three-year vows, a clarifying word making it clear that one must have taken final vows to take part in the Provincial Chapter?

Issoudun, December 17, 1876

Dear Father,

Fr. Guyot has written to say that he cannot come to Issoudun for the Council meeting on January 18. It is imperative that you are present. Consequently, make your arrangements. Come as soon as you can after the Epiphany. You could perhaps come through Arles and stop-over for one day to see things for yourself. I shall do my best to be there at the same time. Fathers Ariens and Lavielle have infuriated the clergy ("got their backs up" is closer to Chevalier's phrasing) by their imprudence and excessive zeal. With regard to our Constitutions and the vow of obedience, p24, I don't think anything should be changed. The beginning of this chapter presents our Lord as model and invites us to see God in our Superiors. That is excellent, and then it goes on to give an outline of what characterizes obedience. I do not think one should leave out anything. One might, perhaps, add, in order to distinguish vow from virtue, the following words which should come, I imagine, on page 25, line 5 after "promittit": "Ita tamen ut tantum modo quisque peccabit contra ipsum votum quando Superiores dicti in virtute sanctae Obedientiae imperabunt. At vero ut perfecta sit virtus Obedientiae humilis esse debet..." What do you think of this sentence? Is it satisfactory, presenting Bishop de Luca's thinking?

This evening I handed Frs. Vandel and Piperon your reply to the Memorandum in the utmost secrecy; they seemed to approve of it. In this way His Grace will be up to date with the issue. Your presence among us will greatly help in all this.

Cheerio, dear friend.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, December 19, 1876

Dear Father,

Thanks for your kind letter. Like you I also would like to have a lovely, splendid, Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) in Rome. Speak to Fr. Jouët about this. I warmly thank our young men for the letter they wrote to me. Tell them that on my side the greatest pleasure they could give me is to make themselves holy religious by observing the Rule faithfully, having a recollected spirit, a prayerful, docile, spirit of sacrifice, generosity, humility and obedience, leaving nothing to be desired. Make them understand that those about whom you are not happy will not be called to orders, and I shall have them back in Issoudun. I intend that our Rome house should be a model one in every respect. I would ask you to let me know about those who are not wholly submissive, ill-willed, or acceptably pious (virtuous). Try to keep expenditure as low as possible, and limit yourself to what is absolutely necessary. Try to find funding for the Petite Oeuvre; start organizing for it. As soon as it is set up, I shall send you the cheque. Your good mother, whom I saw yesterday, gets better and better. Would you kindly give Father Jouët the enclosed letter.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Tell Father Jouët that Mr. and Mrs. Zieu accept the conditions and that I have received nothing yet from Bergamo.

Father Angereau asks to leave (the Society).

The Very Rev. Father Superior read a letter from Fr. Angereau asking to go home to his family and be dispensed from his vows because of his health. It was decided that he should go to Issoudun where he would be looked after with all possible care at the Presbytery, and that Fr. Cramaille should move from Saint-Gérard to Chezal-Benoît to take up his former duties in this house.

I undertake responsibility as Superior of the Religious of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to engage with the Reverend Mother Superior in complete confidence and openness with respect to that which concerns the Community. While he is resident in Rome she will be free to get in touch with him, ask directly for his advice and replies without any intervention on my part. I give Fr. Jouët full permission on this issue. If there are (God willing, not) some problems which need to be submitted to the Archbishop, I willingly agree that Fr. D 18761231B

Notes dictated by the Very Rev. Father Superior towards the preparation of a reply to the petition from Messrs. Gallo and Scalsi.

Undated

All the appeals from the directive Council of the Rome Archconfraternity and the letters from the directors of these confraternities sent either to the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences or to the Holy Father, convey a regrettable confusion and contain errors which it is our duty to correct.

1. The directive Council's Petition

The Council members in their plea passed over without mention an important issue. To be exact they should have stated that a prayer association under the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart had been established at Issoudun by the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, with the approval of the Archbishop of Bourges, for the benefit of difficult and desperate cases, and this association took in the whole world according to the sense of its statutes as expressed in Article 3..., and Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges, presented this Confraternity for approval to the Holy See and obtained indulgences for all who were, or would be, enrolled. In consequence, then, the Pontifical Brief of 1864 far from limiting the Association extended it to the whole Catholic world, confirming thereby this privilege. We are so saddened or astonished to note that the directive Council does not say one word about the origin of this Association.

2. The directive Council erroneously gives the Holy See to understand that the Issoudun Association is not prior to and different from the Rome Archconfraternity. The truth of the matter is that it should have said that the Rome Archconfraternity owes its existence to the Issoudun Association which began this devotion and founded this work, establishing it in Italy and Rome through enthusiasts, among them Mr. Angelini and Mr. Scalsi. At first the fervent Roman section was a branch drawn from the Issoudun tree, a daughter still acknowledging her mother. It is disappointing for us that the directive Council has thought it necessary, in support of its own argument, to omit stating these facts.

3. The directive Council, in its letter to the Holy Father, lets it be understood that our Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association was made into an Archconfraternity by the Archdiocese of Bourges alone. To state the truth it should be said that our Association intended for the whole world dates from, as noted above, January 29, 1864, and it was only in 1869 that the Archbishop of Bourges asked that it be created into a universal Archconfraternity, but the Holy See considered that for the time being it should only be raised to the dignity of an Archconfraternity in the Archdiocese of Bourges, though withholding in no way its previous right to enrol faithful from all over the world.

Before this factual evidence we cannot understand how the directive Council presumes to state the following:

"The Apostolic Brief of March 1869 grants to the Issoudun Archconfraternity limited to the Archdiocese of Bourges alone the right to enrol the faithful..."

To speak more truthfully it should have said that the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association erected into an Archconfraternity for the Archdiocese of Bourges alone did not have the right to affiliate or aggregate confraternities or moral bodies, favouring them with its privileges, outside the said Archdiocese, but it always maintained its right to enrol Catholics from any nation whatsoever in virtue of its Statutes and the Pontifical Brief of 1864.

4. In the same letter the directive Council again accuses us of having established everywhere centres or moral bodies when granting them our indulgences. Here again there is an odd confusing of things and what is inaccurate.

The Council did not say (note) that we have two Briefs, one dated June 7, 1864, acknowledging the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun with the privilege of enrolling all Catholics, and the other, dated March 5, 1869, granting us the right to form a moral association, sharing in indulgences, for the Archdiocese of Bourges alone. It is stipulated, then, and our distinguished Archbishop clearly confirms it, that we never have outside the Archdiocese affiliated a moral body or confraternity to ourselves since we know very well that we haven't the right, and this is a calumny against which we protest most forcibly.

5. It is correct that we set up centres in different places, but our centres have not the same connotation which the directive Council would like to give them, being quite simply the centralizing of names gathered by the helpers, male and female, and sent on to us by the respective directors of these different centres to avoid unnecessary correspondence, and this is all the more demanding since we do not look for any contribution from our associates. The faithful are only granted indulgences from the day their names are enrolled in the Issoudun registers.

Issoudun, January 1, 1877

Dear Father,

1. Happy New Year to you and all our dear fathers and brothers. I thank you most sincerely for your good wishes. May the divine Heart of Jesus grant them.
2. I received your contribution for the Annals. I gave no encouragement to Mr. (Fr.?) Naudet (unclear in original). You are in charge. I am even sorry that he writes in our Annals.
3. I have Underground Rome, a summary of Mr. Rossi's work by two English specialists, translated by Paul Allard, a large volume with prints. On page 378 one finds a painting of the Virgin from the St. Agnes catacombs. The authors identify this painting with the 4th century, and with irrefutable arguments prove that the Child Jesus is standing up before his Mother and in a footnote add that this catacomb painting "is after the fashion of a presentation of the Virgin very popular in Russia called Znamenskaia". I am going to ask Sister Talbot of Cracow to try and get us a snapshot of this picture.
4. Sister Talbot has just written to say that the Bishop of Leopol is sending a priest to Rome to find out about the title Queen of the Sacred Heart which is the name being given in Poland to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. A Jesuit, she adds, left at the same time (for Rome) to defend the title. The Holy Office, she writes, stated that the matter was being studied, and that there would be an official reply. That very likely is the presentation being prepared at the Holy Office on the doctrinal aspects of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart devotion. These informative details will very likely draw Bishop Jacobini to mention something to you before long.

I am delighted to know that you are well.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

Indeed! Many thanks for your good wishes. In no way have I forgotten you. You know what I am looking for from you. I hope that very soon you will break free of the chains which are holding you in captivity and that you can come to a place which is restful for you. Make sure to look after your health, but do not worry about yourself too much. I would very much like to go to Arles as I feel it is necessary to go there. Fr. Jouët will be there in eight days and you will meet him. If I cannot be there at the same time, greet him for me.

Due to activities on the eve of New Year's Day, the weekly Council meeting did not take place.

Council Meeting, January 7, 1877

In attendance: Very Rev. Fr. Superior, Frs. Piperon and Vandel.

Postulant.

A postulant who had left the Novitiate of the Blessed Sacrament Fathers and presented himself, was refused on the grounds that he had left the Novitiate of another Congregation.

There followed a letter from Fr. Angereau asking to be released from his vows for reasons of health and conscience. No decision was taken.

Vandel, MduSC.

18770116X

Special Council Meeting, January 16-22, 1877

In attendance: Very Rev. Fr. Superior, Fathers Vandel, Guyot, Jouët, Piperon.

During the different meetings which took place over these days the Council members considered personnel, responsibilities, undertakings, in relation to the Society's well-being. The following decisions were taken:

Choosing to aim at perfection.

1. The Council members resolved to work with more generosity than ever to live the religious life so that they could involve themselves more efficaciously in the formation of the Congregation's other members.

Admission: Measures to be taken.

2. One must, accordingly, take the necessary measures to ensure that new admissions are subject to requisite discernment and acceptably mature standards, so that only those candidates are accepted who have a proper and solid vocation.

Thirty-Day Retreat.

3. An effort will be made to find a saintly religious man of God, both experienced and prudent, to provide retreat exercises in the Novitiate lasting a month. The priests from other houses who are not otherwise engaged will go on this retreat.

Disengagement for the Very Rev. Fr. Superior where possible.

4. It was decided that the Very Rev. Father Superior should, in accordance with the Constitutions, be entirely relieved of undertakings not in keeping with his responsibilities, but given the actual circumstances of the Congregation, a small membership, a great variety of undertakings, it was impossible to achieve this desirable aim.

Father Jouët, First Assistant.

In order to relieve, release, in some way Very Rev. Father Superior, when Fr. Jouët is in residence at the Issoudun house he will carry out the role of First Assistant such as laid down in the specific regulations relating to this function, and one will, accordingly, have recourse to him in relation to normal requests.

Fr. Morisseau will help (Jouët) in carrying out his role as First Assistant. In Fr. Jouët's absence, Fr. Vandel will preside over those exercises when the Very Rev. Father Superior is not present, and he will also in the same circumstances be responsible for the parlour (meeting visitors); otherwise, Fr. Morisseau will replace Fr. Jouët in relation to his other responsibilities.

General Bursar.

5. The role of Bursar General will continue to be carried out by the Very Rev. Father General, helped by Fr. Morisseau and Brothers Charles and Alexander, as things are at the moment, until it becomes possible to find within the Congregation a religious who has an aptitude for this post.

Rendering of Accounts.

6. Up to the present, making available the expenses of the mother house and other houses was carried out every three months. To facilitate this work there will be uniformity of account books and the accounts will be presented on a sheet of paper specially adapted with the headings of the sections presented as agreed in Council. Extraordinary expenses should be submitted to the General Council and approved by it. At this meeting the Very Rev. Fr. Superior presented to the Council a summary of the Issoudun house accounts from the departure of Fr. Durin to December 31, 1876. These accounts were approved and signed by the Council members.

Assistant Bursar.

7. The role of Assistant Bursar will continue to be carried out for the time being by Fr. Vigerat, a diocesan priest at present available, until such time as it will be possible to hand over this role to a religious. He will need to study carefully the regulations which have a bearing on his role and act in keeping with them.

Spiritual Minister.

8. Fr. Guyot was appointed Spiritual Minister. He will visit the houses of the Society in France at least once a year.

Visitor.

9. Fr. Jouët is formally appointed visitor of the Congregation's houses.

Concerning the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work)

Separate Financing of the Petite Oeuvre.

10. Everything (financial) given specifically to the Petite Oeuvre belongs to it; it has its own account. It remains responsible for those of its pupils who enter the Congregation and for leading them to the priesthood.

Financial Reserve.

11. Those priests responsible for the Petite Oeuvre's administration should make every effort to set up from the yearly financial resources a reserve fund sufficient to meet the upkeep of fifty or so youngsters at the Chezal-Benoît Petite Oeuvre.

Overall Direction of the Petite Oeuvre.

12. The overall direction of the Congregation's Petites Oeuvres (plural) is the responsibility of the Very Rev. Superior General and his Council.

Fr. Vandel, Director General.

13. The Council will appoint a Director General of the Petites Oeuvres. Rev. Father Vandel was given this responsibility. As a member of the Council he has a deliberative role on all issues relating to this undertaking. This right does not create a precedent for any Director Generals who would not be Council members.

Admission to the Petite Oeuvre arranged by the Director General.

14. The Director General is the official intermediary between the Very Rev. Superior General and the Council responsible for the running of the Petites Oeuvres; it is for him to get ready the list of those youngsters entering Chezal-Benoît for the Council's approval.

Director General. Visitor of the Petites Oeuvres.

15. The Director General will be the official Visitor of the Petites Oeuvres. He can call a meeting, ask both the teachers and pupils if everything is in keeping with the regulations and if there are any abuses. He will provide the local Superior and the other members of the house with those observations which he judges pertinent, and make the General Council aware of his observations.

Uniform.

16. The uniform for the Petite Oeuvre students will be the same in all the houses, consisting of a cardigan closed to the neck in black wool, and a waistcoat and trousers of the same colour, together with a simple black cap – that called a sailor's cap.

The St. Joseph Petite Oeuvre will be transferred to Saint-Gérand.

17. The preparatory Petite Oeuvre, St. Joseph, presently at Chezal-Benoît, will in future be at Saint-Gérand to avoid thereby a spate of inconvenience. The bursary of the Petite Oeuvre will provide the expenses involved with these students, while the priests at the Novitiate will for their part take account of the contributions and gifts they receive for the Petite Oeuvre and also the students' fees.

Fees at Saint-Gérand.

17. The Issoudun house will contribute a sum of 490 francs for each pupil, of which 400 will be made available to the Novitiate account for nourishment, lighting, heating, laundry, in relation to each youngster. Other expenses are kept separate.

The Same at Chezal-Benoît.

19. An annual contribution of 490 francs will be made available to the Petite Oeuvre's bursary for each youngster being cared for. This sum of 490 francs will be increased if experience shows it to be insufficient. Besides, one must provide clothes and new laundry.

Time allocated for these contributions.

20. The General Bursar must send on in advance each month one 12th of contributions being made either by the Mother house or by the Petite Oeuvre to the different houses. Exception is made, however, for houses abroad; these houses, in agreement with the Superiors, will decide on the time and manner of contributing which is most convenient for them.

The Petite Oeuvre students accepted for the Novitiate.

21. The health of several older boys at the Petite Oeuvre having been seriously impaired in recent months, with the doctors recommending withdrawal from studies and a change of air for some, the Council thought it best to call to the Novitiate those youngsters of entry age who were willing to go. Those are Henri Verjus, Émile Merg, Ricardo Fora, Henri Peeters, Eugene Meyer, Jules Vandel, Léopold Hartzler, Jean Ilge, Albert Bergeret, Jean Pierre Védère, Emile Schultz, Mesmin Fromm and Henri Chétail. This course of action seemed all the more worthwhile when three of their older fellow students, George Meyer, Gérard Van der Bosch and Pierre Tréau, commenced their novitiate for the same reason some time ago, and got on very well. It is to be hoped that it will be the same in the case of those now being called.

The boys leave the large dormitory.

22. The Council in addition decided that the pupils staying at Chezal-Benoît should move from the large dormitory at the College where they have been sleeping up to now and take over that of the Petite Oeuvre. If the number of pupils became too great for the Petite Oeuvre dormitory, one need only use the wing in the middle of the large dormitory. Those supervising should sleep in the dormitories.

Infirmary.

23. The infirmary will be set up in the Petite Oeuvre's basement.

Brother Lanctin appointed to oversee class books.

24. Brother Lanctin will be in charge of overseeing class books. Nothing should be bought without permission of the local Council.

Local council.

25. In each house of the Society with respect to issues brought to the attention of the local Council, the Superior should act on his own initiative where he considers it unnecessary to refer the matter to the Mother house.

Custom to be established.

26. The Council expressed the wish that there be set up customary procedures in every house of the Congregation. Those of the Mother house should serve as a foundation and model for all the others.

At this meeting the Novitiate chapel again came up for discussion. The decision was taken, given the events which threaten the Congregation in the present circumstances, that it would be desirable to postpone the permanent building of this chapel; a chapel will be temporarily set up in the large room to be constructed in the middle of the barn at present situated in the middle of the Novitiate buildings.

Brothers Thévenot and Legros Appointed to Watertown.

At this meeting it was decided that the novices, Brothers Legros and Thévenot, would be sent to Watertown, if they were authorized by the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars to finish their Novitiate at Watertown where they would take their vows in this house when their Novitiate year had ended.

Fr. Durin cannot receive (canonically) novices.

It was, moreover, agreed that as soon as it could be arranged a professed religious would be sent to take charge of the Novitiate which would be set up in this house. The reason is that Fr. Durin, the present Superior, cannot be given authority to accept postulants as novices when they arrive before a Novitiate is set up.

Dear Minister for Foreign Affairs,

I have the honour to request through your good will free passage for three of my Missionary of the Sacred Heart confrères who are due to go to New York in America on their way to Watertown on the ship which leaves Le Havre, I understand, on April 10. Here are the names of these worthy missionaries: Jean-Baptiste Legrand, Désiré Legros and Gustave Thévenot.

Please accept, Minister, my respectful regards together with my gratitude.

Issoudun, March 23, 1877

Dear Father,

1. I received the information about the American Novitiate. Many thanks. And what is happening about the Bishop Jacobini issue?
2. We were delighted to hear about the appointment of a Cardinal protector.
3. Let me have your opinion about our young men shortly to be ordained; let me have your views on each one, and also from Father Miniot.

4. Have you received the Sacred Heart statue? I am sorry about the accident with the St. Joseph statue.
5. The letter to the Archbishop of Bourges from the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Religious about Fr. Captier was not about release from his vows, but simply to have the Archbishop's advice. Fr. Captier, when interviewed by His Grace, replied that all this was a thing of the past and he wanted to stay on. I am forwarding a letter from him in which he says the same thing to me. Should we continue to keep him? What do you think; also Bishop de Luca? If he stays with us, he must blot out his memory.
6. Fr. Angereau, to whom I forwarded Bishop de Luca's decision in terms which you are aware of, wrote me a surly letter which I am forwarding to you. Following this, there is no more to be done other than obtain the dispensation from his vows both at his request and ours for health reasons, serious illness which in the view of the doctors could be very prolonged. Indeed, short of taking these precautionary measures this little boy (lad) could continue to take us for a ride (this terminology captures what Chevalier has in mind - a mischievous parting). Here we have the fruits of Chezal-Benoît discipline.(!)
7. We are awaiting with some impatience your contribution to the Annals; we are again going to be late. Try to send on your work a month ahead if possible.
8. I am forwarding you a letter from Mother Felicity and that which occasioned it. I am drawn to think that she wants to make her house collapse. Prudence and what is proper should make her realize her duty to answer immediately, take advice, contact me, discuss the matter with me since the letter was addressed to me. Not all however. Her hobby-horse is her anxiety about boarders. Since these girls have their diplomas it becomes, a priori, a reason for her to turn them away. She then says to me that it is truly outrageous. For self-justification she always withdraws within her own particular understanding of God. I told her what I thought about particularly dangerous procedures; my words were lost on her. She says that as Superior it belongs to her alone to look after her house. She once again made it clear to me that neither you or myself could give her disinterested advice. Let us pray. There should be a woman with a head and good sense in that house; let us try to find one. Let us ask Our Lady. The problems associated with Fr. Bazire are stirring up again; I fear a scandal. I am doing everything to placate him. I am going through agonies. Pray and ask for prayers.

Cheerio, dear friend.

Issoudun, April 26, 1877

Dear Father,

My telegram to you this morning will have conveyed the great shock we are experiencing due to the sudden death of dear Fr. Vandel. O My God, what a loss! What trials at one and the same time! There should be something written in the forthcoming Annals about the death of a saint. You should straightaway write something on the very pious and saintly life of Fr. Vandel. Draw on from one place or another all the documents you are able to get hold of. Who is going to devote himself to such an important undertaking as the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work)? I can only see yourself... and you are 1,778 kilometres from Issoudun!

What is to be done? Oh! How I wish the feasts in Rome were over so that you could be with us!

Forward the enclosed letter to my sister, Léontine. This morning at 6.30 I was in the sacristy, vested, about to say Mass, when, suddenly, Brother Maillard came in crying and said: "Fr. Vandel is lying in his room covered in blood. Come quickly. I think he is dead." I ran as fast as I could, and what do I see? The saintly Fr. Vandel stretched out on the floor, the door open, his head out in the corridor covered in blood. I lifted him up, felt him, moved him about, but sadly he was no more, though still warm. We moved him on to his bed. The doctor arrived and gave it as his view that death had taken place around 4 or 5am.

Last night Fr. Vandel dined with the community in the refectory, was in good spirits during recreation, went to prayer, and it would appear that it was only on returning to his room to go to sleep that he felt unwell. He had taken off his cape and sash; his bed wasn't rumpled; perhaps, beginning to feel unwell, he would have moved to open the door to call for help when he collapsed. And as there was no-one else in that part of the house (Fr. Morisseau is away for 8 days) he remained stretched out the whole night. He died from either a stroke or an aneurysm. My God, what a calamity!

The burial will take place on Saturday at 9.30am.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Dear Father,

Thanks for your kind letter this morning. You should have had one from me. I got your contribution to the Annals. Thanks! Yes, write something about Fr. Vandel. Write an article for next month and write about his life if you can; he was a saint. I am sending on two snapshots for yourself and one for dear Sister Léontine. Dear Fr. Vandel was buried yesterday; there wasn't the slightest deterioration or change in his features to the point that, after 60 hours, one would not think he was dead. Before placing him in his coffin we sent for the doctor so that we could be assured that our saintly confrère was truly dead. We felt we needed his confirmation before deciding to leave. It would not surprise me in the least if Fr. Vandel worked miracles. I should not be at all surprised either if the good Lord preserved his body from corruption. Is your presence in Rome absolutely necessary? I expect so until the month of June. O! How helpful you would be at Issoudun just now!

I greet you all in sorrow and tears.

Dear Father,

What we have collected through the Annals for the Holy Father, some 5,000 and more francs (see below), was taken by me yesterday to the Archbishop of Bourges. In addition I gave him 150 francs for one of the 50 silver chalices the Archbishop has on offer at a special price. In all I handed the Archbishop 5,260 francs (roughly 13,950 euros). Besides there was a little ciborium, and a purse for the Sacrament of the sick with 60 francs enclosed; care should be taken with it. The Archbishop will be in Rome at the French Seminary with Monsignor Druon from the 17th of May. Make use of the Archbishop's presence for:

1. The question of St. Yves des Bretons or St. Claude, etc. (sic!)
2. The Sacred Heart Third Order.
3. The Sacred Heart Scapular.
4. The Jacobini appeal.
5. The setting up in each of our houses of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association.
6. While awaiting a breviary of our own, could we not have, for greater uniformity, the Roman Breviary, since it would make a difference to be associated thereby with the saints, female and male, who were associated with the Sacred Heart, and, as well, there would be the offices of Our Lady of Gracious Love, of all Grace, of Perpetual Help, etc., etc? Do some research on the feasts of all the saints, female, male, to whom we could relate, and their Rites. There should be no difficulties. Besides there would be St. Longin, the good thief, etc. For this one would also need to have the proper rites from different religious communities and certain dioceses.
7. Please give my letter to the young students at the French Seminary. My reply is 'no'.
8. Fr. Guyot was in Issoudun yesterday. We have appointed Fr. Morisseau to the Council.
9. Fr. Captier has been called to Issoudun to provide lectures for our Scholastics. Our two young men have arrived.

Cheerio, dear friend, wholly yours in C.J., with good wishes to everyone else.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I received your letter just now.

1. Have approved by Bishop Jacobini the changes you mention.
2. We are not sending on any new Scholastics to you until November. As for the four about to be professed, Fr. Captier will give them their philosophy.

J.C.

Fr. Morisseau should have sent you yesterday 1,000 francs for 800 masses, 4 copies of our Constitutions and the Third Order. 15 days or so ago you should have received my letter for the Cardinal-Vicar, and another for Fr. Régis.

Dear Father,

The feast of Our Lady was a splendid occasion. The triduum preached by Father Maugenest (Chevalier's earliest companion who did not stay – see above) was wonderful and his Month of Mary in the parish was a great success. I received just now your latest letter with your article on dear Fr. Vandel. Thanks for all the details which you have provided for me. The issue of Fr. B. [sic] was frightfully blown up; things have quietened down now... Just the same you did well to take all necessary precautions to prevent this becoming known to our young men.

2. Father Guyot would very much like it if we accepted the Tarascon offer (a foundation), but he would prefer if the Bishop held it over for two or three years since at present we are unable to accept it if it means setting ourselves up there straightaway (I am of the same opinion). Discuss the matter with the Bishop of Aix from this perspective. He might, perhaps, hand over this property to us straight away, leaving it open for us not to take it over for three or four years. See what you can do. Yes, travel by way of Marseilles, Arles and Saint-Gérard.
3. As for the picture on the Sacred Heart scapular it's an old one and nothing prevents us from creating another one like it, but a little more like our heart.
4. Take note of what Monsignor Druon and Fr. Régis say to you about publishing in our Annals Bishop Mermillod's remarks, and also what the Archbishop of Bourges has to say. If there is nothing objectionable, I shall fully go along with them. I am greatly looking forward to your visit. All good wishes to our dear confrères.

Dear Father,

1. I received the St. Joseph (picture); it is very beautiful. I also got the Berry Review and the Religious Weekly; thank you. It is a mistake to have put down the confirmation for next Sunday. It doesn't take place until the month of October.

2. I am sorry that the ex-votos are not yet installed and that Mr. Grandin is not at work. Really I shouldn't, given these circumstances, have left Issoudun. Instead of a Thursday 4pm arrival I am arriving next Wednesday afternoon at 3.45. The train leaving Vichy at 9.35am has a connection, and this will suit me better; I shall be less tired.

This work is urgent and has been ordered a long time.

4. Convey my good wishes to the dear Daughters of Our Lady. I shall be with all of you in heart and mind at the ceremony tomorrow. I find dear Mother Felicity more and more closed and distant with me. I have to offer, then, this new trial to the good Lord. Tomorrow I shall pray fervently for these dear Daughters of our Lady.

The Very Rev. Father Superior brought to the Council's attention a letter from Fr. Arthur Grival, a seminarian from the Rouen diocese, asking to enter the Novitiate, and since the young man had favourable reports he was admitted to postulancy.

Acceptance of Fr. Neenan and Brother Tréand to vows.

The Rev. Father Superior asked next that Fr. Neenan and Brother Tréand be accepted for vows. The Council, having taken note of the favourable report by the Novice Master, accepted them for vows.

Various other issues were put before the Council. Any decision was postponed until later.

Appointments and Changes.

1. The appointment of Novices who had finished their Novitiate was discussed at this meeting. Fr. Neenan was marked out for the Watertown house. Brother Tréand would remain on for the time being at the Saint-Gérard Petite Oeuvre.
2. Fr. Deidier having completed his three-month Novitiate was directed to complete it at Issoudun directing the Scholastics' theological studies.
3. Fr. Lavialle from the Arles house is called to Issoudun to teach philosophy to the Scholastics.
4. Brother Jan who has begun his Latin course will become a lay brother.

Programme of Studies for the Petite Oeuvre.

5. A programme of studies for the pupils of the Petite Oeuvre was considered. It was agreed that a course of studies should be set up which would include for the most part the Fathers of the Church and Christian authors, without excluding the great pagan writers [sic!]. The course would be so set up that the boys from the preparatory Petite Oeuvre at Saint-Gérard would undertake a preparatory course lasting two years, following which they would take an examination before admission to Chezal-Benoît. One could abridge these two years for the more advanced or intelligent pupils who could without detriment take the course. Two years would be taken up at Chezal-Benoît with courses in grammar and different subject matters which should be learned prior to the humanities. Finally, following a demanding examination, one is allowed to go forward for the secondary courses and rhetoric. The Novitiate follows on the rhetoric course. Normally the Novitiate does not begin until after the rhetoric course. The programme of studies set out on this basis will be considered in Council and submitted for the approval of His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges who will have the last word on the matter.

The Novitiate follows the Rhetoric course.

To His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges.

B 18771018

Issoudun
October 18, 1877

Your Grace,

I consider it my duty to draw your attention to the religious community of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Having, with your Grace's approval, started this foundation, I cannot forget that my responsibility continues to be involved. When everything first got under way, Your Grace very much wanted me to become Superior to these young women. I placed a copy of their Rule in Your Grace's hands.

Mother Felicity (formerly Countess Pirinoli of Turin), Superior of the house, is very pious, but it is the kind of affective piety from which judgment and rationality appear to be excluded. Particularly so over the past year this pious lady has enveloped herself in a sentimental and cloudy mysticism full of danger. She doesn't believe she needs any advice either for herself or her house. It is the Lord, she says, who is her inspiration and guides her in everything. Relying on these false principles, she in no way whatsoever accepts my comments or my help. She does it all by herself. She accepts and sends away people as she wishes. I never meet the sisters. When some have expressed the wish to speak with me or write, her answer is that it is pointless since there cannot be two Superiors. I wanted to go once a week to discuss the rules and give conferences, but she judged it pointless, thinking no doubt that she herself was sufficient.

What religious formation these young women, basically pious, are getting, I cannot imagine. What awareness they have of the vows, their implications, obligations, etc. I cannot say.

2. The rules of our Lady of the Sacred Heart religious sisters were formulated after the example of our own, offering two main aims so as to meet different expectations. The contemplative life... with its exercises of piety, adoration and reparation and the active life involving the education of young girls and other zealous undertakings compatible with their vocation. Mother Felicity, at the beginning, was the first to commit herself specifically to this latter aim, leaving it to divine Providence the opportune moment when there would be advantage accruing not merely because of the ensuing resources (financial) which the community so greatly needs, but also because of the accompanying spiritual impact on people.

I do not know how she has been influenced, but at this moment Mother Felicity does not want anyone to give her advice. Her concern is to enclose herself within the contemplative life. One would love to say to her: "But your Rules say the opposite. It is not for you to change or reverse the aim of your Congregation. You have a great need of resources in order to live. You have debts; who will pay for them? But you cannot prepare for the future, or send away from this growing community candidates who come forward in the best possible way with the abilities and requisite interest in teaching."... This reasoning, so compelling, makes such little impact on Mother Felicity that without the intervention of Your Grace everything will be compromised. Sister Charles (otherwise Mademoiselle de Beaulieu de la Martinique) left everything to become a religious of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, with all the qualifications which the ministry acknowledged, and she was virtuous and very intelligent. As she had shown a liking for teaching, however, Mother Felicity, despite everything in her favour, forced her to leave the community. The unfortunate Sister Charles remained heroic; despite her tears and appeals she had to look for another community 1,800 leagues away from her country (roughly 8,000 kilometres). Providence directed her to the Providence Sisters of Saintes who were delighted to have her.

Another example: Mademoiselle Marthe Lapparent decided to enter the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. This young girl came to make a retreat. Being well educated, very distinguished, having all the qualifications, speaking two or three languages and with a liking for teaching, Mother Felicity on her own initiative said to her that as the community was not associated with teaching it was not a suitable one for her. She has recourse to the same kind of language with anyone who listens to her, not at all afraid to go against me and the Rule. I believe, Your Grace, that the time has come to set out exactly the purpose of these ladies so that we do not have two different ways of communicating. I accept in advance everything Your Grace will decide. These two last lines were at the heading of the letter.

This young man had brought along a supportive letter from his parish priest and was accepted for the postulancy retreat. But further, more positive, information must be sought from the head of the major seminary at Clermont where Mr. Lepetit had spent a year. 2. Fr. Guyot, having proposed to link with the Arles house an association of young people from good families, the Council took the view that it was necessary to hold over this proposal.

December 6, 1877*

Your Grace,

You should have received this morning the signatures of all the Religious of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, including that of Mother Felicity, accepting everything Your Grace considered necessary to be upheld for the good leadership of the community. Mother Felicity's two letters were written beforehand. This good Mother, once back in Issoudun, did not want to stand by what she promised, Your Grace, basing herself on this pretence of enlightenment God was granting her. She called together her community and informed the sisters that Your Grace thought the same as herself and approved what she was doing. Fr. Jouët, who had just arrived from Bourges, told them quite the opposite, giving rise to great annoyance on the part of the Mother. Aware that the upset was widespread, I went to the community, called the sisters together and read to them, in Mother Felicity's presence, the two documents signed by Your Grace, clearly pointing out to them that these two documents were no more than a résumé of the Rules and changed nothing whatsoever. Mother Felicity accepted this, and then admitted that Your Grace told her that she had to accept what she signed. After a brief plea for peace and goodwill, all were unanimous in signing the document which Your Grace should have received this morning. Mother Felicity's amour propre has been greatly diminished.

If Your Grace, through my mediation, should care to send Mother Felicity a congratulatory word on her acceptance which could be read out in the community, I believe that this would be very well received.

With good wishes...

L 18771224

Issoudun, December 24, 1877

Dear Father,

Many thanks for your kind letters. Take good care of yourself and don't get sick.

1. Father Guyot is due to arrive in Issoudun on the 7th of January to preach a retreat to the youngsters of the Bourges fee-paying sisters' school and we shall be seeing him; in conversation with him we shall discuss the issue in keeping with the terms of your letter.
2. We shall pray earnestly that the issues attending Our Lady of the Sacred Heart can be solved satisfactorily in relation to our Society and its undertakings. We commit ourselves to a lovely gift for the Cardinal and an ex-voto for Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.
3. I shall calmly await your contributions; do not torment yourself.
4. The Mother Felicity issue was no more than face-saving. On her return from Bourges she had the audacity to tell her sisters that the Archbishop had, in my presence, taken her side when in fact the contrary was the case.

This unfortunate woman, there can be no doubt, is full of stupid pride, going along only with what she wants, and perish everything else. On Friday, the 7th, I heard confidentially that she wants to break up her community; Sister Paula and herself would go to the Sacred Heart once the changes were made; Sister Michael would return to the Vannes house and the others would go away. I went straightaway to the community and met each sister individually. Everything was really so, Mother Felicity set and determined. I asked, implored her, to do nothing of the kind, confronting her with all the disastrous consequences; she remained unmoved. Finally, submitting to reason, she agreed to go to Bourges with me, leaving things as they are for a year if the good Lord does not take her during the night. The following morning, full of life, she travelled with me. The Archbishop was gracious, giving her to understand that nothing had changed, etc. She left on the understanding that she would act in conformity with the signed documents. But as soon as she returned, she fell back on the same ideas. I shall leave her to herself and avoid contradicting her in any way. She wanted Father Georgelin for ordinary confessor, Father Guyot as extraordinary. Then myself as Superior, and you no longer; the Archbishop accepted all this. Pray, dear friend. All goes well here. Cheerio, dear Father. My good wishes to Father Régis, etc., and my regards to our dear little colony. Thank good Fr. Miniot for his kind letter. His mother is well. I thank Brothers Klotz and Lecorre for their letter. Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

After a varied somewhat turbulent career as an MSC (see below, passim), Tilburg, Salzburg, Chezal-Benoît, Vichy, in 1892 Klotz, an Alsatian, was expelled from the Society; Lecorre died at Arles, aged 21, in 1879.

To Mother Eulalia, Superior of the Jesus and Mary Sisters, Tarragona College, Spain.

Rome, December 24, 1877

Most Esteemed Mother Superior,

The latest letter you sent to us in the names of Canon Vionnet and the Archbishop of Tarragon, informing us that you are obliged from the 1st of January to change the former presentation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart on the cover of the Spanish Annals, gives us serious and disturbing grounds for concern. We consider this change as being as much hurtful to the association as all the others. The former representation has been consistently reproduced without any problems whatever in regard to private worship; the Italian Annals reproduce it every month on their cover, and are very widely produced here in Rome, just as in the past. As well as the Gubbio statue which we forwarded to you last year, with its striking likeness to the Issoudun Madonna despite being five centuries older, you will shortly receive the Troyes Madonna, a more ancient presentation than that of Issoudun, and also presenting the Child Jesus before her. The Dutch Annals have likewise not changed anything on the cover. The Spanish, with this change, stir up this whole issue once more and it is regrettable. Cardinal Monaco, Vicar General to His Holiness, said to me the day before yesterday that he was about to bring this issue, of such importance for us, to an end. This is not the time, then, to broach the issue. I would ask you, Reverend Mother, to make every effort to maintain the status quo, that is to say, keeping things as they are. And in the event that it becomes absolutely necessary to dispense with this picture from the first of January, it would be better, in place of putting the new picture on the cover, to put nothing at all there, replacing it with the figure of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which you have at your disposal and makes a good impact.

I send this letter to you, Reverend Mother, having had it looked at by our Very Reverend Superior General, Fr. Chevalier, who on reading it gave it his approval and changing what he thought was needed.

The Our Lady of the Sacred Heart devotion has had demanding, challenging, experiences in Spain, but it has also, most assuredly, done good there, and Our Lord has been pleased to favour it. Let us hope that everything will work out for the best, and that your next letter will bring me news of a satisfactory outcome.

We shall pray earnestly here at the feet of our dear Lady of the Sacred Heart whose statue is the exact replica of that of Issoudun. All those which are old here in Rome remain intact and venerated. What you tell me about smashed, burnt, statues and buried medals, breaks my heart.

Finally, Reverend Mother, we leave this matter with you; the good Lord who has up to now supported you will not abandon you. Let me know if I should write to the Archbishop and I shall most warmly do so. Get in touch with the Canon who has always given you good advice and see what you can do, but it would be distressing if the Annals were affected... (taken out of circulation).

Good wishes for the feast (Christmas) to you and all your community!

Your devoted and appreciative servant in Corde Jesu,

V. Jouët, MSC.
95, Stradone S. Giovanni Laterano

Seen and approved.

My good wishes and gratitude to my very Reverend Mother Eulalia for her devotedness.

I wish to thank you warmly for the good wishes with which you so kindly favour me. If the good Lord, as I hope, hears all I have addressed him on your behalf, your health will be restored and you will enjoy being with your children and your grandchildren for many more years.

I received appreciatively the 1,500 francs enclosed in the letter you were kind enough to write to me. The expressions of concern and devotedness, Countess, which you convey to me are all the more sensibly experienced since for long I have known from experience your great-hearted qualities. I shall never forget all the gestures of goodwill you have shown to us. It is a matter for regret that we have necessarily been forced to end for the moment the chaplaincy posting which we were so happy to carry out for you. Issoudun, January 10, 1878

Dear Father,

Many thanks for your kind letters.

1. I am pleased that the Fr. Captier issue is over.
2. We haven't received any "ordo" (liturgical year book) from Rome. Look into the matter. While awaiting the outcome of your enquiries, send on one at least; it should arrive more promptly.
3. I met Monsignor Druon this morning and he mentioned that he no longer had a copy of the letter on the subject of debated indulgences which you sent on to Rome. He said that he had given it to you and that you will find it if you look carefully. Would it not have been left in your room? What can we do to write another? It's you, I believe, who provided the substantial part of the letter. Perhaps Bishop Jacobini will find the third copy.
5. The Archbishop of Bourges would, just as ourselves, like very much if the former statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was reinstated, Cardinal Patrizi's letter withdrawn, and the direction of the Scalsi association restored to us. Monsignor Druon said to me this morning that a nice gift from us to Cardinal Patrizi and to Bishop Jacobini would be a splendid argument in our favour(!)

6. Father Guyot continues to give his retreat to the Bourges sisters and will likely return: fiat.
7. I had all the pieces you asked me copied, and I shall have them verified by the Archbishop and sent on to you.
8. Father Morisseau has lost his mother. He will be away until Saturday.
9. Sister Marie-of-Jesus de Salbris wants to leave; she does not get on with the Mother Superior any longer, wishing to re-enter the world and be associated with one of her friends who gives herself to good works. She wanted to leave this evening, but I asked her to wait another eight days. She promised me that she would, but she seems very decided on going. I greatly regret this. I fear that this poor little community which has caused us so much pain and concern will break itself up. Pray and see if you might have in mind a responsible and serious candidate who wishes to enter and in whom one would have confidence.

Everybody is well.

Cheerio, dear Father.
Regards to everyone.

Scholastics called to Orders.

2. The reports on the Scholastics at the Issoudun house were then considered. Brothers Postal, Maillard and Vatan were called to the diaconate with the proviso that Brother Vatan should provide more satisfying evidence of progress in science. Brothers Casas and Joseph are called to tonsure and minor orders, Brothers Hartzler and Cessat to tonsure. And at Chezal-Benoît Brother Ignatius Grom is accepted for the diaconate and Brother Géraud for the subdiaconate.

Scholastic preaching.

3. It was decided at this Council that the number of sermons and talks (papers) delivered in the refectory should be restricted. It should suffice to have two sermons and two talks (papers) a year from each scholastic, the subject matter drawn from what has already been covered in lectures. The rest of the preaching would be replaced by a little edifying talk relevant to scholastic life (one each month for the present).

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, January 17, 1878

Dear Father,

1. I am forwarding what you were looking for with regard to the Cardinal Prefect of Indulgences' letters.
2. Shortly you will receive the complete dossier of all the Roman documents about Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and validated by the Archbishop of Bourges.
3. With regard to St. Bridget, I shall wait on the initiative from the Holy Cross Fathers.
4. I received your two ordos (liturgical year books). If the others have been lost (in the post), more must be sent on. Chezal-Benoît got none, so also Saint-Gérard, I gather, and Arles. Get in touch about this.
5. Make a serious appeal to the Archbishop of Bourges by letter to intervene personally with Rome about our Association. You will sketch for him in advance the thrust of the letter's argument so that he need do no more than copy it and send it on to the Holy See as if it came from himself. If it is possible, seek the help of Monsignor Jacobini or someone else in getting this done.

6. Write to Mother Felicity. Sister de Salbris leaves today or tomorrow.
7. It would be very much better if you could meet Cardinal Aurelia accompanied by Bishop de Luca, or some other important and influential personage such as Bishop Mercurelli.
8. Poor Victor Emmanuel! I hope that the tranquillity of Rome will not be affected.
9. Shortly you will receive the printed sheets for the scholastics' (examination) marks.
10. Fr. Guyot left very pleased with himself. And if you can get approval for the Third Order of the Sacred Heart his joy will be complete and in his eyes you will be the very best.

Cheerio, dear friend. My regards to Father Régis, Bishop de Luca, etc. Best wishes to all. Fr. Miniot's mother keeps well.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, January 22, 1878

Dear Sir,

Arising from the law dated December 29, 1876, I am honoured to favour you with a reply:

1. The headquarters of our Congregation is at Issoudun (Indre).
2. Our Congregation is a diocesan congregation in dependence on the Archbishop of Bourges and subject to his jurisdiction under the title of auxiliary priests, Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.
3. The members of this Congregation have as their financial aim support for the priests in the parishes while laid up, over-worked or away.
4. This Congregation was founded at Issoudun in September 1855. (!)
5. The site of the Mother House is in Issoudun.
6. The total number of auxiliary priests, Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, has risen to sixteen (this number only applies to those working in the diocese).
7. Issoudun is the only town in the area which has members of this Congregation.

Please, Mr. Mayor, receive my respectful good wishes.

J. Chevalier, MSC, Sup.

The primary purpose of this letter had legal implications, and it follows directives of the Archbishop, Sautereau, the Vicar General, writing to Chevalier, January 22, 1878:

"Do not fail to add that your Congregation is subject to the diocesan ordinary."

Issoudun, January 26, 1878

Dear Father,

1. I am forwarding as you required the complete dossier with everything in order.
2. I have received the two briefs which are in keeping with the octave, and the two Fr. Eudes offices, but we forgot something which you can remedy. The feast day of the holy and immaculate Heart of Mary, celebrated in France on the Sunday after the Epiphany, coincides with the special favour granted us in 1855 when the Cardinal Archbishop of Bourges was led to approve our Congregation. Could you not, then, mindful of this special occurrence, arrange that the feast and office with octave of the Sacred Heart of Mary, at present granted to us for the Sunday following the octave of the Assumption, should be transferred to the last Sunday of the Epiphany or the preceding Saturday so that we could have it on the final day of the octave which would be the eve of the Septuagesima. Engage yourself straightaway with this issue.
3. The unfortunate Father B. has been sentenced, as being contumacious, to the maximum sentence, that is to say 20 years (he was not an MSC). Father Vigeret remains at the Dombes monastery. His problem is very much in the past.

4. Ask Bishop Agnozzi to put aside a good foreign mission for us for which we would make ourselves available and take on as soon as possible if he could let us know well in advance.

5. They have written from Arles today and they have not received their ordo yet (see above, article 560). Ours has arrived. Many thanks. Pray for that unfortunate house. Fr. Guyot is not in the least interested. Fr. Ariens is disillusioned, Fr. Captier more so. Fr. Hamel, so it seems, has reverted to his difficult characteristics. Write a supportive letter to them.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

L 18780126 A

Issoudun, January 26, 1878

Dear Father,

I am sending you an answer to your last two letters. This morning the dossier approved by the Archbishop was sent to you in the post. I registered it so that it would reach you more safely. There you will find the evidence to help us vanquish attacks from our enemies. Try to engage seriously on behalf of our interests the Cardinal Vicar and Bishop Manetti through the intermediary of Fr. Régis, and then Cardinal Aurelia through Bishops Agnozzi or Mercurelli. Cardinal Nina was helpful to us while he was assessor at the Holy Office. Cardinal Bilio, the Barnabite, was also sympathetic. Try to bring these gentlemen together with Cardinal Franchi. Bishop Chigi, close to the Archbishop of Bourges, whom he knows well, would, perhaps, be on our side.

Try, then, to draw the Archbishop of Bourges towards a formal involvement with the issue. Have him written to from Rome by an important personage to engage himself with this matter. He will then set things in motion since it is impossible not to support an association which began in Issoudun, was cradled in our Institute, and should not be devastated and led by outsiders. This last is scandalous! What would the Dominicans say if the laity wanted to take over and control their Association of the Holy Rosary? What would the Carmelites say with regard to the Scapular? What reconciliation, unity, could there be with the Scalsis? Let them return to us what they have taken from us! It is as if Pius IX was advised to make peace with the despoilers. In any event, try to put this peaceful pact in writing; examine its conditions, present it to Issoudun and to the Archbishop of Bourges with your observations. The new brief should not deny Rome its privileges, or call for any change in the Issoudun statue which Cardinal Patrizi's letter considered irreproachable.

In any event, you will again deal with the Archbishop of Bourges about this issue if it crops up; let us hope not. We shall pray and have prayers said.

Try to preserve our privileges, if you can, with regards to the little Rosary. The 'toties quoties' (each time, as often as) for the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart indulgence is absolutely necessary because of, so it seems to me, the request made to Pius IX. Keep that before you as the primary petition and you will forward me a copy. Do not force issues too strongly; proceed gently and prudently. Make every effort to ensure that we take over the direction of the Rome Association (it is only what is right!) and the endorsement of our statue. See to it.

Cheerio, wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Mother Felicity has written to Father Dierien (unclear wording). Write to this good priest advising him about the situation so that he doesn't in any way offer bad advice.

Your Eminence,

I am pleased to share with you the joy we experienced in coming to hear of your elevation to such an important post as that of Secretary of State.

His Holiness, Leo XIII, could not have made a happier choice nor one more dear to our hearts. For quite some time I have appreciated, Your Eminence, the particular paternal interest you have always shown in our Society. And during my recent visit to Rome, on the occasion of the take over of the Church of St. James, we were the recipients of particular acts of kindness on the part of Your Eminence. I shall never forget how graciously you heard our proposals, which seemed so right to you, for the direction of the Rome Archconfraternity and the changes to the statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Despite the added work, we hope, Your Eminence, that you will deem it so to be always for us an advisor, protector and father.

I fall at your feet, Eminence, asking you to accept this expression of our gratitude, etc.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, February 1, 1878

Dear Father,

I received your two letters dealing with our Association and your meeting with Cardinal Aurelia. Thanks a thousand. Given the bad faith of Angelini and Scalsi and their influential impact, given the virtually hostile reactions of the Cardinal, the air is thick with problems. Oh if only Our Lady of the Sacred Heart would come to our aid and take (her) interests in hand! The situation is very difficult if not desperate. It is providential that you are in Rome. No, it is not possible that the Roman Court, identified with justice and wisdom, should damage so considerably our esteemed association, our interests, reputation, and cause lies and skullduggery to triumph. The light will shine through the valuable documents you have in your hands and we shall triumphantly overcome these problems, especially so if the Archbishop of Bourges will take things in hand with determination. In an issue of such importance and seriousness, if we were forsaken by our Archbishop we would very likely go under. It is not irrelevant that associations, while not archconfraternities, inscribe names on their registers from all over the world, particularly so when their statutes formally say so. The Confraternities at Paray-le-Monial, Montmartre, Saint-Michel, Lourdes, Notre-Dame du Salut, La-Saletta, la Sainte-Face, etc. all work in this way.

Be careful, Father; you are on ground which is boiling over; do not be precipitate; move calmly and slowly; do not push yourself to the front; carefully cultivate supporters, those who can be influential, supporters and friends. Keep your ears open for the schemings of the Scalsi, frustrate their plotting, etc. The Sacred Heart, dear Father, will reward your endeavours. I shall say nothing about the Pope's letter to the Archbishop of Bourges... I shall wait for it (to be mentioned). We pray for you and the success of your endeavours. If necessary I could send you when opportune the picture of Our Lady signed by the Pope.

Cheerio, Father; wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Enclosed, Fr. Marie's letter; let me know what you think of it. It is absurd that we are compelled to let him remain as Superior. Father Captier is "fed up" with Arles. He has gone to the Charolles; in no way does he want to go back to Arles. What am I to do? Please return Fr. Marie's letter.

Your Grace,

The storm rumbles on: the Scalsi are powerful. The lightening will shortly break. It is Your Grace alone who can turn things round by taking in hand with the Holy See the interests of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and her association. I fear, Your Grace, that the doubts have not yet been explained away by Fr. Jouët. Could not Your Grace present another case to the Congregation formulated like this:

"If an Association approved by the Holy See, spread throughout the whole world, for the great benefit of the Church and souls, containing already more than twelve million associates, having by its foundation a priority before that of Rome, can, by virtue of its statutes which give it the right, continue as in the past to register the names of new associates through men and women associates who enrol members in the registers so that they can share in the spiritual favours."

Tomorrow, Tuesday, at 3.30pm, I shall be favoured to see Your Grace.

With respectful good wishes from your devoted child in C.J.

L 18780206

Issoudun, February 6, 1878

Dear Father,

I. I was in Bourges yesterday and saw His Grace who is greatly pained by what is going on. He re-worded the query to be submitted to the Congregation. I am sending it on to you; it should be copied out in legible writing, and the secretary of indulgences should be asked if he thinks it appropriate and could be accepted. If it is presented, it will be accepted. The Archbishop hopes that it will be one or the other. If the secretary says "No" to you, then he and the Cardinal should be asked to hold over the response and leave the status quo in abeyance, and, thereby, we shall have time to prepare things. I have just received your letter with the Scalsi memorandum to Cardinal Monaco. I sent everything on to the Archbishop of Bourges. I do believe that His Grace will write to Cardinal Aurelia. Meanwhile he does not wish to become officially involved in this matter, while at the same time being supportive in our trials. For the rest, let us hope.

Yesterday His Grace, appraising himself of all the problems, said to me: "I predicted all this to you. You should have signed a document agreeing with Angelini and Scalsi. You would leave Italy to the Rome Association and the rest (of the world) would be yours, and this still remains a welcome alternative. If the issue cannot be resolved, it would be best to return to the previously agreed arrangement with the Scalsi and go to Rome yourself to deal straightforwardly with the matter." I had with me a copy of this contract. The Archbishop read and approved it in its entirety; he substituted by name for individually as you can see in the copy I am sending on to you. What, then, is to be done? Present the formal agreement to Cardinal Monaco and to our influential protector; find out from them what is to be done. The Archbishop of Bourges strongly and expressly favours the signing of the agreement which the Scalsis would still be pleased to accept, but less so I think. I replied to His Grace: "But we are giving up Italy and Osimo... And we are making a concession which is not fair since according to the approval brief, we are in our rights." The Archbishop replied: "What you are looking for is only a detail. It is better to sacrifice Italy than to allow yourselves to have everything, except Bourges, taken from you." Oh! If we only could arrange with the Pope and Cardinal Aurelia to have control of the Association by way of strongly indemnifying the Scalsis, we would arrive thereby at what would be advantageous for us. If you could bring this about, it would no doubt be the most favourable outcome. Survey the ground and act from this viewpoint. The Archbishop of Bourges freely admits that it would be the best solution. Look into the matter, discuss, consider all possibilities and let me now what I should do.

If my presence is needed in Rome and if you cannot arrange matters without me, even if I am very busy, send me a telegram and next Monday I shall leave for Rome. Send your instructions on to me.

The lovely letter of appreciation which the Archbishop has received from the Pope will appear next Sunday in the Bourges Religious Weekly (Semaine Religieuse) with the Latin text. You may give it all the appropriate publicity. Send it to the Catholic papers of France and Italy if you think it appropriate. I have asked Fr. Morel to send you straightaway in Rome several copies of the current Religious Weekly.

Together with the Archbishop's observation, I am sending on to you a former document which we worked on; see if it can be helpful for something or other. Keep all these documents. If there is movement in Rome towards reconciliation and a signing of the former agreement, by way of compensating us, could not the restoration of our statue of the Issoudun Our Lady of the Sacred Heart be requested for public worship outside of Italy?

Cheerio, dear friend. Take care of yourself; don't get sick. Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: You will have noticed that in the Archbishop's proposal he avoided writing Confraternity, Archconfraternity, centre, quasi-centre, which could be hazardous.

Most Holy Father,

For the spiritual well-being of the faithful, the two unions (Confraternities) of Issoudun (France) and Rome, under the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, we appeal to Your Holiness to favour them with the following privileges:

1. That the Issoudun union share in all the indulgences and privileges which the Roman Universal Confraternity enjoys and will enjoy for the future. For its part also it will share with the latter confraternity all its present and future privileges.
2. Permission for the Issoudun Archconfraternity to be so declared for all of France and its colonies.
3. The faculty for the Roman Archconfraternity alone to list in its registers all new members from the Kingdom of Italy. Issoudun will continue as before to enrol the names of faithful throughout the world who participate in all its privileges, with the exception, however, of Italy.

The undersigned directors seek the confirmation of all these privileges already received by the two unions. This agreement will not be submitted to the Holy Fathers and put into effect until it has received the approval of the Archbishop of Bourges.

L 18780209

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun February 9, 1878

Dear Father,

1. The death of Pius IX is a thunder-blow for us. We have lost a distinguished benefactor, a powerful protector, a well-loved Father. He is the founder of our Society, our first Superior, the animating force of all our works. Over nine days each priest of our Society will say Mass for the repose of his soul. I hope that this great Pope, at the same time a great saint, will look after us from heaven. (Pius IX was beatified by Pope John Paul II, December 3, 2000.) We need his help to overcome all the problems which hell stirs up for us. Let us call upon him, together with our dear Fr. Vandel whom he created Chevalier of the Sacred Heart.

I hope that your article in depth for the forthcoming Annals will pay tribute to Pius IX who founded our Society, who in September 1860 foresaw its canonical approval, who never ceased to bless and encourage our efforts, who adorned our chests with the emblem of the Sacred Heart, approved the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, founded the Association, crowned her, enriched the Association with privileges, etc., etc.

2. I am inclined to think that during the time the Holy See is vacant the Congregations will not be working and my presence in Rome would be pointless. The Cardinals wouldn't have the time to meet us or solve our problems. Accordingly, I draw the conclusion that I must remain in Issoudun for the moment since I could not, without evidence to the contrary, bring anything to a conclusion in Rome – unless you sent me a telegram to come straightaway. I await, accordingly, you giving me the details and bringing me well up to date on the situation. You should have received a large envelope enclosing an important statement from the Archbishop of Bourges for Cardinal Aurelia; the preceding letter expressing the queries which the Archbishop has now modified and containing also the wording for an agreement with the Scalsis. What do you think of all this? What does the Cardinal Vicar think, etc.?

3. The Holy Father's brief to the Archbishop of Bourges on the issue of jewels has been published in the Religious Weekly (Bourges diocesan paper). There isn't a word about Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. The wording is not exact when we are called Missionaries of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. It pays tribute to our zeal, the piety of the faithful in the diocese of Bourges, the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work), our scholastics in Rome, but not as much as a word about Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, her Association spread worldwide, the devotedness of the associates from all over the world who sent on these jewels. All that needed to be said, and nothing whatsoever was mentioned. It is unfortunate for our Association that the brief appears to limit itself to the diocese of Bourges alone: gaudemus itaque pusimas consociationes gliscere, florere, latiusque semper propagari in diocesi tua...". Quite obviously, having nothing said (about us) would have been a hundred times preferable to this brief which the Scalsi in their present circumstances can exploit to their advantage against us since it (the Brief) appears to favour excessively their pretentiousness.

4. The unfortunate "Nota" (Notes) which have appeared in the Annals, in the communication from the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work), and about which I was in no way informed, are opening up all the wounds of Fr. Guyot which I thought had been well healed. I am very upset. See for yourself from his letter. I am about to answer him and say that it is forgetfulness and a misunderstanding easily understood in the midst of preoccupations, problems of all kinds and concerns, and in the next issue we shall try to make amends.

I hope my letter will have an effect. Write to him on your part. Let us pray a lot.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Father,

We are getting near the time when you assured us that you would come to preach for our dear Catechetical work and give a retreat to the associates of the Blessed Sacrament. I am drawn, dear Father, to remind you of your promises, although not doubting that you are well aware of it yourself, always available to come and work among us for the glory of the Blessed Sacrament and the Sacred Heart.

Allow me, then, to send you the enclosed sermon on the work of the Catechists and a report on this for the year 1877, and to let you know, Father, how much we hope, on this first occasion for you, that you will do well in making this work known and commended to your audience. The undertaking always needs teachers who are committed to giving a class to young girls once or several times during the week; it has, moreover, the financial resources to reward once a year the commitment and knowledge of the youngsters with lovely prizes. It is for this reward that one preaches appealing for financial contributions. I add to this, Father, the little programme for the Retreat so that you can ratify it before printing. I would ask you to return it straightaway for the time has arrived to hand out the leaflets, and by Sunday the 17th at the latest we should begin to distribute them. We would ask you, Father, to remember before the Lord our community and its undertakings which engage us as our vocation and we thank you for being willing to come among us to promote more and more devotion to the Blessed Sacrament.

Dear Father,

I received your telegram. Thank you. I shall wait. The problem at the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) is attributable to the reason you give; that is certain. We must try to make it go away as soon as possible. I am going to ask Fr. Marie to send you on the report on the feast of St. John. It is necessary since you have the right and duty to be informed about all that happens at the Petite Oeuvre. Cheerio, wholly yours in C.J.

Would it be possible for you to leave Rome just now? This would be desirable because of your commitment to this retreat. While you are away, will not the Scalsis be up to some mischief against us? Take precautions.

L 18780218

Issoudun, February 18, 1878

Dear Father,

1. We celebrated at St. Cyr this morning a solemn requiem service for the repose of the soul of our dear and well beloved Father and Pontiff, Pius IX. There was a huge gathering and everything went well. The civil authorities attended. Fr. Laviaille preached a lovely panegyric in praise of Pius IX. On coming down from the pulpit this dear priest got a telegram with news of his father's death.

2. Your letter to the Archbishop of Bourges was uplifting, letting us hope for a universal thrust in our beloved Association. Let it be so, let it be so... It is there we have the better and more efficacious solution. May all your actions lead towards such a result, even if we have to provide the Scalsis with large compensatory sums, etc.

During the troubled times we are living through, will the Holy See remain on in Rome? Following the conclave, might not the new Pope be forced to flee by the revolution? What would become of the Rome Archconfraternity's direction if it was in the despoiling hands of the Scalsis? Whereas we, as a Congregation, always live here and there, everywhere Providence places us, those in charge born for a work which is ours. This rationale is, perhaps, not to be ignored!

3. It was myself, dear Father, who defended you against Fr. Guyot when pointing out to him that the 'Nota' were printed without premeditation and the slightest failure on your part, your life affected both by extreme tiredness and constant feverish activity for the good of our Congregation. Next, I would add that I do not understand how through discontent, whether true or false, one threatens the Superiors with dismissal. This anti-religious behaviour would be a Society's ruin! "Yes," I would say to him, "if there is anyone in the community who has reasons to disengage, it is Father Jouët and myself for whom life is nothing other than a tissue of boredom, what is contradictory, demanding, exhausting, and often what is deeply painful without anything to be gained. And, for all that, we do not complain that much as we concern ourselves with the interests of our dear Society which we love enough to sacrifice ourselves without let-up for it."... I shall send you on his reply which is not bad.

The Council has decided that Father Guyot was in error, putting his 'amour propre' and personal convenience before the general interests of the Society which would mean concentrating, as in the past, everything in Issoudun since one does not know if the Petite Oeuvre will last much longer at Saint-Gérand. Meanwhile to soothe feelings and preserve the peace, the Nota (Notes) will not be printed in the Annals for the time being, and one will try, insofar as that is possible, to make up to Fr. Guyot by treating him tactfully.

The Issoudun Council has charged Fr. Marie:

1. to send you a complete report about the feast of St. John;
2. to see to it that the older boys at the Petite Oeuvre in turns write a letter each month letting you know everything that is going on at the Petite Oeuvre;
3. that our news bulletins should be sent tri-monthly to the parents.

We share your views on the running of –Benoît and Father Marie.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

L 18780222

Issoudun, March 1, 1878

Dear Father,

Two words in reply to your letter this evening:

1. The affairs of our Association are being made seriously complex to our disadvantage. If what you say to me is the teaching (doctrine) on Indulgences we are without hope if we do not have control of the Rome Archconfraternity. Mr. Angelini is shrewd, influential, particularly so at the moment with (Pope) Leo XIII. Our position, then, is desperate. Let us pray and have prayers said.
2. Bishop de Luca could be our salvation if the issues were placed in his hands and his decisions were followed.

3. If you meet the Scalsis, see to it that you are neither cold or brusque with them; it is best to be associated with them, or at least able to deal with them. Bishop Cataldi (name not clear) is very friendly with Mr. Scalsi, and also with Father Prichet (name not clear).

4. If you think it helpful and worthwhile, I shall leave for Rome as soon as you say so. I could leave on the first Sunday of Lent at 1.40pm. That evening I would leave Paris at 8pm and on Tuesday at 1.30pm I could be in Rome, I understand, travelling without a break in the journey.

5. The departure of young de Brinon is baffling; if this youngster never had intention of staying at the Petite Oeuvre it is uncalled for and undignified to be left there over four years by those responsible.

Octave de Brinon, born November 12, 1862, Flayat, temporary profession, October 17, 1880; died Rome April 16, 1881, having made his final profession with the permission of the Holy See.

6. I am sending off this evening your letter to the Archbishop of Bourges so that he can appreciate how serious the situation is. The Archbishop will say: It is your fault, you should as I advised you have signed the Scalsi concordat. If we cannot achieve anything better, we shall, if there is time left, return to the contract.

7. I received your contributions for the Annals.

Dear Father,

Is everything ready for my trip to Rome? If the answer is "Yes", send me a telegram while I wait for your official letter stating positively "Yes" or "No". If in the affirmative I shall leave on Sunday at 1.44pm. I shall take a train in Paris at 8pm and Tuesday at 1.30pm I shall, as I already mentioned, be in Rome.

If the issues are ready to be dealt with, I would much prefer to make the journey now rather than later since I would not then have the time, especially if it was in the month of June. Here there's nothing new. The Annals are coming out today.

Cheerio, dear Father. Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

My thanks for the Holy Father's blessing; it will make us happy.

To His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges.

Rome, March 15, 1878
95 St. John Lateran St.

Your Grace,

I am here in Rome since Tuesday; I have already gone about a great deal. I met His Eminence Cardinal Monaco who received me most warmly and seemed very supportive. Saturday, tomorrow that is, we are due to have a meeting at the Vicariate to consider the issue in depth and reach a conclusion which is favourable to us.

I also met Bishop Panici, secretary of the Indulgences' Congregation; he was very kind, listened with much good-will, and would like to end this issue in a conciliatory manner to avoid presenting it to the general congregation. He favours ratification of the status quo: we would, as hitherto, have complete control worldwide, but in order to please the Scalsi, a condition would be laid down whereby the Bishop of Osimo would appoint another director as head of the centre in his episcopal city.

Bishop Jacobini, Secretary of Briefs, told us yesterday that a brief signed by Leo XIII approves our Third Order of the Sacred Heart and enriches it with indulgences.

Next Monday at noon we shall have our audience with the Sovereign Pontiff. It is a great honour. If our affairs, as I hope, end next week, I shall be returning immediately to Issoudun.

My respectful good wishes in C.J.

*To Bishop Panici, Secretary for Indulgences.Undated, likely March 20, 1878
Not written by Chevalier but signed by him.*

The title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is associated with the very foundation of our Missionary Society dating from December 8, 1854. This devotion, which is so salutary, has spread under our direction throughout the world, and it began from our Institute. We have, despite our unworthiness, been chosen by divine Providence to be the founders and natural promoters of this work which does so much good for souls and has already through our zeal, as our worthy Archbishop observes, contributed more than one hundred thousand francs for St. Peter's Pence.

Noting the favours of all kinds, extraordinary, unexpected, which the Most Holy Virgin was pleased to grant those who invoked her under the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, we were drawn to set up our organization of prayer for the well-being of difficult and desperate cases both in the spiritual and temporal order, of which, sadly, there are so many today! We said to ourselves: The adorable Heart of Our Lord, source of grace, formed from the virginal blood of Mary, nobody better than this Blessed Virgin can better obtain the necessary help to bring about a positive result in those cases commended to her. The Church itself, in any event, and its saint doctors, teach us that her prayer is all powerful before the Heart of her Son: "Omnipotencia supplex... ab onipotente Filio omnipotens mater facta est." (St. Bernard.)

His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges, approved our proposal and asked us to draw up ourselves the statutes for this new association. We carried it out straightaway; His Grace approved the statutes on January 29, 1854, and the Confraternity was then canonically set up at our Issoudun mother house. Our distinguished Archbishop next wished to have this pious Confraternity approved by the Holy See which, according to its statutes, was co-extensive with the whole world. He then forwarded to Rome a copy of the statutes where, in article 2, we read these words: All Catholics of any nation whatsoever can become members of this association. Our Holy Father, Pope Pius IX, of happy memory, in a brief dated June 7 of that year, 1864, approved the association and granted indulgences to all those referred to in article 2 of the above cited statutes with no restriction: Omnibus utriusque Sexus Christifidelibus qui dictam Confraternitatem in posterum ingredientur, and elsewhere: tam descriptis quam pro tempore describencis in dicta Confraternitate.

One clearly sees then: this association according to the sense of its statutes is for the whole Catholic world, and the pontifical brief, far from taking away these privileges on the contrary confirms them, as we shall see. We may add that the Holy See in all correspondence addressed to us, and in all the favours granted to us, has always understood like ourselves that our pious confraternity was extended to the whole world. We can cite, for example, as irrefutable proof, the Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart (prayer) indulgenced alone at first for the associates of the Bourges Archdiocese, and then for all the faithful worldwide. We could produce many other documents of this kind also, and we have them at the disposal of anybody who wishes to read them.

Awareness of our dear Association into which Pius IX wished to be enrolled, and whose entry form we have kept signed with his own hand, soon spread far and wide enhanced by awareness of the special favours obtained by the faithful when calling confidently on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. As of now we have registered more than 200,000 favours which we have officially been made aware of. From all over Europe and the world numerous lists of names have been sent to us for enrolment. As of now, we have counted 12 millions. More than 400 bishops, archbishops and cardinals, 75 of whom are Italian, support our Association and ask to be enrolled. We have members from Italy and Rome itself. The honourable Angelini and Scalsi family forwarded their names and those of their friends. Having received, no doubt, several favours from Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, they showed themselves to be full of zeal in propagating our Confraternity. They became promoters and sent us names to register on a number of occasions. They made themselves one of the centres of our work in Rome. Before that, Signora Carlotta Antonelli, of blessed memory, the St. Vincent de Paul Sisters at the military hospital, Mademoiselle Käper (via de Quirinale) and several others became very devoted promoters of our Association. Thus far the most cordial and proper relationship prevailed between this family (the Scalsi) and ourselves. Aware of the success attending its efforts, the thought occurred, I do not know why, of separating from Issoudun. Our rightful confraternity was then made into a universal and independent Archconfraternity. The branch detached itself from the tree which produced it.

From this moment on, the Issoudun Association became a rival which needed to be avoided, or, to put it better, an enemy which had to be fought and destroyed. It is daughter wanting to choke her mother in order to come by her inheritance. It was from this moment, to our great astonishment and sorrow, we began to see the Rome Archconfraternity in its monthly publication, the Annals, and in specific correspondence, disparaging our worthy confraternity and causing trouble among millions of associates. God is our witness that never in our magazine writing, or in letters, have we said anything which could be considered unfavourable (to the Rome association). It, the latter, went so far as to publish and write that our Association was only for the Archdiocese of Bourges alone, that we didn't have the right to enrol the names of people from outside this diocese and that the faithful so enrolled (not from the Bourges Archdiocese) would not gain any indulgences, etc. His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges forcibly answered all these complaints in a splendid letter addressed to His Eminence Cardinal Ferrieri, Prefect of the Sacred Congregation for Indulgences. And Bishop Sara, substitute (secretary) of the same Congregation, asked by his illustrious prefect to give his views on the same letter, found it corresponded in every respect to rights, justice, truth. These two documents, which we have at our disposal, can be consulted by anybody who wishes to look at them.

In addition, the Rome Archconfraternity accuses us of using promoters, male and female, and setting up centres to promote our work, collect names and forward them to Issoudun. Where is such procedure forbidden? I am not aware of any law against it. This way of proceeding has always been availed of when promoting Catholic works. Failing this, could St. Peter's Pence, for example, the Propagation of the Faith or the Holy Childhood, function effectively? The faithful only gain indulgences from the moment their names are registered at Issoudun; the Archbishop of Bourges is a witness to that. We are not aware of any regulation which forbids centres such as I have described and which have been set up. They are to be expected and even necessary for successful growth, and any Catholic undertaking which is narrow and inward-looking ends by dying away. In order to re-establish a friendly relationship, and bring about agreement and the needed peaceful relationship, we venture to put forward three solutions to the problems weighing upon us. We commit ourselves in advance to accept wholeheartedly whichever one of the three our very respected, impartial and judicious arbitrators will in their wisdom decide on.

The first would be to give us the control of the universal Roman Archconfraternity. It seems to us, moreover, that we have some claim to its direction, particularly now since we are established almost three years in Rome. Devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart began among us: we are the ones who founded this devotion; we were chosen by divine Providence to be its true apostles, original propagandists. Committed by our special vocation to preach the devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus everywhere in the world, we have no better way of spreading this devotion than by inculcating the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, of which a decree of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, dated March 8, 1869, makes us its recognizable missionaries: "Piae Congregationis missionariorum, qui nomen habent a Domina Nostra Sacratissimi Cordis Jesu, ob cuius praevisa merita Divina Mater ab originalis peccati libera praeservata fuit, Exsolduni, vulgo Issoudun, in dioecesi Bituricensi, in Gallia, sacerdos Julius Chevalier, fundamenta jecit." Would it not be odd, therefore, if we were limited in the direction of this undertaking which we are called to spread everywhere?

The second solution would be that of elevating the Issoudun Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to the dignity of a universal Archconfraternity such as that of Rome with the same privileges. There are examples of several Archconfraternities having the same name and purpose. There is, for example, the Universal Archconfraternity of the Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary whose centre is at the Church of Our Lady of Victories in Paris, and there are several Universal Archconfraternities of the Blessed Sacrament, among others one at Brussels in the Church of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament and another in Rome in the Chapel of Mother Courbelay, Superior of the Daughters of Mary, Quirinal St., etc.

The third solution would be to approve and ratify the status quo, that is to say, the Rome Archconfraternity would remain as it is, and the Issoudun Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart would continue to do what it has always done from its beginnings, enrolling in its registers through its auxiliaries and centres the names of people throughout the world, making these members share in all the privileges. We would look for, in addition, as a gesture of mutual respect and complete unity, that: 1. The Issoudun union has a share in all the present and future indulgences of the Universal Archconfraternity and vice versa; that 2. In the event of the respected directive council for one reason or another ceasing to function, the direction of the Rome Archconfraternity should be placed in the hands of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart who are the founders of this work. This last solution which seems to us more favourable than the other two, is also in keeping with the wishes of the distinguished Cardinal Vicar, Monaco de la Valetta, the protector of our little Society. It meets as well the wishes of His Grace, the Archbishop of Bourges, as clearly stated in his letter to His Eminence Cardinal Ferrieri; what follows are the conditions stipulated.

"Quo igitur, clementissime Domine, servetur integer, quod summopere aptandum est, pro bono animarum Ecclesiaeque decore, splendor innumeri nostri Exsoldunensis sodaliti, cui hodie adscripti numerantur 14.000.000 Christifideles, quorum plurimi a diversis Catholici orbis regionibus, nihil opportunius tentandum videtur, nisi ut praesens rerum status sustineatur confirmeturque ac approbetur sodales adscribendi modus per ministerium zelatorum, juxta morem jam abhinc 14 annis vigentem. Quaecumque alia agendi ratio, attentis praesertim rerum circumstantiis quam maximam inter innumeros Confraternitatis Exsoldunensis sodales, suscitaret perturbationem sine ullo pietatis ac devotionis incremento."

In this manner, Your Lordship, the two undertakings would live like two sisters in the closest bonds of love.

Your Grace,

According to His Eminence, the Cardinal Vicar, whom I saw yesterday, and Bishop Panici, Secretary of Indulgences, it is today, Thursday, that our business should be concluded. The status quo which is maintained has been ratified. We are very happy with this outcome. But on going to visit Bishop Panici the prelate informed us that the directive committee of the Rome Association, on discovering that we were awarded the better part of the agreement, demanded a meeting next Tuesday. What is likely to be the outcome? Very likely nothing good. I am walking on hot coals. I would prefer to be in Issoudun but I feel that my presence is needed here. What is to be done? I commend this matter to your good prayers. I prostrate myself before you, Your Grace, petitioning your blessing as I send you my respectful good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, March 30, 1878

Dear Father,

1. I hasten to tell you that I had a good journey, arriving on Friday at 2.40pm. All our confrères are well. Madame Miniot keeps very well. She was delighted with the Rosary beads and the news I had for her of her dear son.
2. The Archbishop has returned from confirmations. I shall see him as soon as possible. I am waiting for the picture of Leo XIII. Passing through Paris I saw Daniel who is going to change the statue according to my instructions. I shall look it over and then send it on to you. I shall, however, be all the happier when the Archbishop of Bourges, on going to Rome, can have Cardinal Patrizi's letter withdrawn, which one gathers from all sides is disapproving, and, besides, Bishop Barbier de Montanet, a Roman prelate in a book shortly due to be published with great publicity entitled "A Practical Treatise on the building, furnishing and decoration of Churches", formally alleges in article 11 on decoration and chapter 2 on iconography that the image (statue, picture) of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is condemned by the Holy Office! You will find all this in the summary of subjects dealt with in the issue of the Universe for March 21 (1878 - just over a week previously). Ask Rev. Father Régis for this issue. I have requested this book from Viver (book shop) to read for myself in detail what is said. It is absolutely outrageous to write history so flippantly in this way. There's a man to whom I have granted favours in sending masses (sic: stipends) on to him, and, without contacting us, he proceeds to write like that.
3. I went to see Burnet the goldsmith; the chalice for the Cardinal-Vicar has been ordered; it will be splendid.
4. Another item of news, but confidential. The parish priest of St. Trophine, Arles sent me a confidential letter this morning informing me that Fr. Ariens has compromised himself by pestering, and even being familiar with, a young girl, and he is contacting me in his role as archpriest, and that three people know about the situation, and since a scandal is about to break it is imperative that I recall him straightaway to forestall the scandal. He says that he speaks as a friend and has said nothing yet about it to the Bishop of Aix, but as he (the Bishop) is shortly due to visit Arles he will very likely be informed about everything if I do not bring about the desirable change. I believe he (the parish priest) is exaggerating. The parish priest tells me that if I intervene with Fr. Ariens, I will precipitate the scandal, and changing him straightaway would be better. What am I to do? We have nobody to send to Arles – Fr. Captier is already there. Let me know what you think. If Fr. Guyot had stayed there none of this would have happened! Last year, on returning from Rome, I came to know about Fr. Bazire's problems. Now it's Fr. Ariens. Really, this is too much. We must pray.

My regards to Bishop Manetti, Fr. Régis, Fr. Stanislaus, and warmest greetings to all in your world.

Cheerio. Wholly yours, dear Father, in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Father Piperon sent letters to Rome after my departure. Send them on to me. Tell the parish priest of Osimo that if the Archbishop preserves the status quo he can hold on to his centre for the whole of Italy. This would be more to his advantage than being affiliated to Rome.

To His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, March 31, 1878

Your Grace,

While waiting before I have the honour of seeing Your Grace, I hasten to bring you up to date on the outcome of my journey. Due to the high regard in which you are held in Rome, Your Grace, I was received most graciously everywhere, despite the huge Scalsi dossier and the support of their friends. Most of the members at the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences were not aware of the issue. Your Grace's splendid letter to Cardinal Ferrieri was, so it must be said, forgotten. Cardinal Aurelia, the new Prefect, and Bishop Panici, his secretary, seemed to know nothing about it. We found it in the middle of documentation with a very favourable report by Bishop Sara, substitute of the same Congregation. The latter was asked by Cardinal Ferrieri for his views on Your Grace's letter and replied positively, drawing the conclusion that Your Grace was perfectly within your rights both as to law, justice, and truth. I am sending you a copy of this. Asked by the Cardinal Vicar, who showed himself to be extremely kind, and by Bishop Panici, who did well in presenting the issue, I presented the enclosed summary, copies of which I presented to Cardinal Monaco, Bishop Panici, Secretary of the Sacred Congregation, and Bishop Sara substitute. It would seem that this undertaking threw light on the issues.

Having considered the situation, His Eminence and Bishop Panici immediately decided to maintain our association in its present status quo, confirming its privileges, which is all that we wanted.

I was called to a meeting with the Scalsis in the presence of Bishop Panici in order to bring this issue to an end in the sense explained. But on the eve of our meeting, the Secretary of the Sacred Congregation and the substitute, going through the archives, came across a decision of the Sacred Congregation from the preceding century, having the force of law, but up to now forgotten and ignored, "forbidding enrolment in whatever confraternity or archconfraternity of the absent under pain of gaining no indulgence". What it means is that all the enrolments of the absent carried out by the Scalsi in relation to our Association are invalid and worthless. One must come oneself to the centre of the Archconfraternity, or the confraternity, to give one's name. All the world's bishops are about to receive this decree which was printed last Wednesday. We were together last Wednesday, not for debate but to listen to the promulgation of this forgotten decree. I therefore enquired as to what should be our course of action. Bishops Panici and Sara who are truly friendly with us and very supportive said to me: "We are very pleased about this discovery; it will be supportive of you. Here's what you must do: Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne is very likely about to come to Rome to meet the new Pope as all the French Bishops have done already. Let me know beforehand, and I shall immediately go to meet His Grace to discuss the matter with him and everything will be settled in keeping with your wishes and to your utmost satisfaction. Before I undertake to do anything, I shall wait for the arrival of your esteemed Archbishop, for three months if needs be." I replied that "If the Scalsis got in touch with the Holy Father during this time, we could still be losers." "No," he answered, "from the moment the Congregation is informed about the matter all their documentation will come to me and I shall hold on to it." "But what," I countered, "if the Archbishop of Bourges cannot come?" "Yes, His Grace will come, necessarily so. I know that Leo XIII is aware of him and would like to see him." "But, again, given the supposition of an insurmountable impossibility, what then is to be done?" "Well in that case let the Archbishop appeal to the Pope asking for a general resolution and your 14,000,000 associates will gain their indulgences, together with an indult enrolling those who are absent all over the world. These two favours will be granted to him (the Archbishop). I would like to be informed in advance and receive a copy of the letter to the Holy Father. Then the Archbishop would do well to complain about the behaviour of the Scalsis, the impropriety of their behaviour, etc. And if His Grace so wishes it, the direction of the Rome Archconfraternity will be handed over to you. As for the statue it shall not be difficult for His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne on coming to Rome to lift the interdict placed upon it. All you need to do is to separate the Child from the Mother, raise Him by 10 or 20 metres on a stool, placing him in the same position. Present the statue changes in this way to Leo XIII and you will have your triumph, while the impact it will have on the Catholic world will be tremendous since the whole world thinks that your statue is condemned."

I then read out to him a copy of Cardinal Patrizi's letter addressed to Your Grace. Bishop Panici took no notice of it. "Very well, then," he remarked, "by carrying out what I advised you, the Archbishop of Bourges will most assuredly succeed." Passing through Paris I asked our sculptor to change our little statue of Our Lady in the manner suggested. I shall show it to Your Grace. When you have returned to Bourges, Your Grace, I should like if you can let me know the day when I can come and discuss things with you.

Please forgive, Your Grace, this overly lengthy letter, and receive my respectful good wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I briefly saw the Holy Father and received his blessing.

1. I am forwarding a letter from Sister Jeanne. We shall offer the 9 Masses she is requesting.
2. I am sending you on a copy of what Bishop Barbier de Montanet wrote. It's outrageous! It's a lie! This is how history is fashioned. This man will be believed; his book which I have here has episcopal approval. What is to be done? It is absolutely imperative that the Archbishop of Bourges receives an apology or the reinstatement of our statue.
3. I am going to write a nice appreciative letter to Bishop Panici. I would like to send him the Life of Saint Cecilia by Dom Guéranger, and Louis Veuillot's Life of Jesus Christ to Bishop Sara. What do you think?

Certainly not! I am not displeased with Bishop Panici; on the contrary, I agree in every respect.

4. I haven't yet received the promised pictures.
5. I wrote to the Archbishop of Bourges giving him an account of my trip. I asked His Grace on return from Confirmations if he would meet me in Bourges so that I could talk to him more freely about my trip (to Rome). His Grace replied that he will do his utmost to be helpful in this matter, but he said nothing at all about my going to Bourges, or if he will be going to Rome, or if he will write.
6. Father Ariens, to whom I mentioned nothing about the parish priest of St. Trophine's letter, wrote this morning to inform me that after Easter he wishes to go home to his family and leave the Society. He asks to be released from his vows. I await your return. I can well believe that Fr. Guyot and the other members of the Council will try to profit from this episode in order to give up Arles. What is to be done? What do you think?

L 18780409

Issoudun, April 9, 1878

Your Grace,

When enquiries were being made about the situation with respect to unauthorized religious groups, I wrote to the Superiors of the different houses to make answer that "our Congregation was a diocesan Society of auxiliary priests whose role was to help the parish priests in their varied ministry".

The Superior at Saint-Gérard-le-Puy from whom I asked to be given information straightaway replied today: "All the information I can give you about the misunderstanding that has arisen comes to this: the employees of the Allier Prefect never took the trouble to go, or at least write, to our Saint-Gérard house to make themselves conversant with the situation. They did no more than take themselves to some incompetent gabbler." How the Allier prefect came to the conclusion that the Saint-Gérard house belonged to the Congregation of the same name, whose centre is at Chezal-Benoît (Cher), I cannot explain. It is clearly a false presupposition. Perhaps they might have been trying to say that the preparatory Petite Oeuvre which is at Chezal-Benoît (Cher) depends on that of Chezal-Benoît?

I am sorry, Your Grace, that I cannot provide you with more complete information. I enclose with this letter 304 francs (about 802 euros) which we collected for St. Peter's Pence. I add 50 francs for the Saint Solange undertaking. I promised 500 francs if our Rome affair ended up as the status quo. I already forwarded 100 francs to Father Vallière and hope that shortly I shall be in a position to send on the remainder if, and when, as I am becoming convinced, the glorious patron saint of the Berry will help to bring about our triumph. I have got myself, Your Grace, Bishop Barbier de Montanet's work entitled 'A practical treatise on the construction, furnishing and decoration of Churches'. In this book, Volume 1, page 438, I read these odd words: "The interdict placed on the Issoudun Virgin, known under the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, is condemnatory in so far as it is against faith and tradition not to have the Child Jesus in the arms of his Mother." "Huc demum subsequens Pontifici mandatum ut simulacra seu picturae cultui dicandae representare debeant Virginem, puerum Jesum, non ante genua sed ulna gestantem." (Letter from the Holy Office to the Bishop of Presmyl, February 28, 1875.)

Here, Your Grace, we see how history is made. This book, because of its author who lives in Rome, the subject-matter he treats of, and the episcopal approval it receives, etc., will be sought after and read... What is to be done?

I am with deep respect, Your Grace's humble and obedient servant.

Issoudun, April 20, 1878

Dear Father,

His Grace is a little better and hopes to celebrate pontifically tomorrow, Easter Sunday. The diet recommended for him has done him good. Monsignor Druon has written to say that he fears the Archbishop will not be able to go to Rome in June, but he hasn't given up hope, just the same. He himself hopes to go there after the feast of Saint Solange (May 10). I am sending on to you the programme for this feast. Monsignor Druon wants our Association to be involved. He would like to see a group of young girls from Issoudun bearing the statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. He wants us to make available all our banners! And he also wants the Petite Oeuvre to take part with its banner, etc. Come as soon as you can to organize all this. Fr. Deidier is getting on very well in Arles. It was not before time. I am forwarding a letter to you from the Administrator of the Spanish affairs. Write the address and send it on to him.

Cheerio, dear friend. Happy Easter.

Wholly yours in C.J.

My dear Sister,

A thousand thanks for your praiseworthy devotedness. I am awaiting the arrival of Fr. Jouët this coming week. I am forwarding his letter addressed to you. I hope that he can go to Spain soon and everything will be taken care of. Since it is needed, be so kind as to put the new picture on the cover (of the Annals) instead of the old one. It is better to make this accommodation than to put ourselves in danger of losing everything. Be hopeful. The Sacred Heart and Our Lady will not wish to abandon us.

Please accept, dear Sister, our gratitude and respectful good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, April 22, 1878

Dear Monsignor,

I wish to thank you most sincerely for letting me have news about His Grace's health. My heart was heavy; you have lifted an enormous weight from me. I am sure that he will continue to improve. We are praying so much to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. This condition, taken in time, cures easily. An appropriate health regime, and that of Vichy (source of the Célestins) especially, would be ideal. I know here in Issoudun three gentlemen who some years ago as a result of this complaint were in a state of desperation; they are in excellent shape today thanks to Vichy and the treatment they underwent there. And in Paris there is Dr. Bouchardat, a member of the Medicine Academy, and a quite senior professor, who is a most distinguished specialist in treatment of this kind. He is to be found close to Notre-Dame, rue Chanoinesse, I believe. If His Grace, and for this we pray in the name of the diocese and the Church, allows himself to be directly cared for and takes all the required precautions, his health can only return better than ever. You can be assured of my discretion and that of my confrères with regard to His Grace's illness, but I am bound to say that it is known and openly spoken about.

I hope that His Grace will be restored to health by June, and that His Grace can, without being imprudent, take on the journey to Rome. Leo XIII holds His Grace in the highest esteem and the same holds for the Cardinals. I had the most obvious proof of this on my last visit. My filial heart was delighted and proud.

Our problems with Our Lady will, I hope, have a very satisfying outcome. The Scalsis' web has been laid bare, and one begins to understand the insensitivity of their behaviour, to say no more. Bishop Panici, Secretary of the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences, Cardinal Aurelia, prefect of the Congregation, and the Cardinal Vicar, are all on our side in fact. There is a readiness either to confirm the status quo or to grant us the overall direction of the Scalsis' Rome Archconfraternity if the Archbishop of Bourges so wishes it. Everything is left in His Grace's hands.

Fr. Jouët wrote to me this morning to say that Cardinals Aureglia and Monaco had mentioned to him that they were waiting on a letter from His Grace (Bourges) either making known his arrival (in Rome) or letting it be gathered what he would like to be fully carried out with regard to our affairs so that everything could be completed as soon as possible. Perhaps we are not far away from withdrawal of the ban on the early picture of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Fiat! Fiat! Oh! How I wished you were in Rome at the same time as myself! As well, your presence after the feast days of St. Solange could not do other than have the very best impact. Fr. Jouët is returning next week to take part in your lovely Bourges festival. I hope Issoudun will be prominently represented. You can count on 1. our most beautiful banners, all of which are at your disposal; 2. a group of not less than 20 young girls robed in white carrying a banner and statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart; 3. a reliquary containing relics of Blessed Margaret Mary, St. Joseph, and the Blessed Virgin; 4. a sizeable group of youngsters from the Petite Oeuvre carrying a St. Joseph of the Sacred Heart banner; 5. about twenty young people from our youth association with their banner; about twenty youngsters from our teachers' choir robed in surplices, with lilies in their hands, a dozen priests and scholastics of the Sacred Heart, carrying the statue of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. Would you want the Holy Virgin's little cradle sent to us from Nazareth carried in the procession?

If you could make a little visit to Issoudun, we shall discuss all this, or otherwise you might prefer if I went to Bourges to have a chat with you; let me know.

Please accept, dear Monsignor, my respectful good wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: Fr. Jouët again wrote to me informing me that Leo XIII had said when discussing the Rome Association and ours that... "it is not right for the daughter to dispossess the mother: Issoudun should keep its rights and privileges. I would wish for the future that nothing like this happens again". The Lord be praised!

To Fr. Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, April 28, 1878

Dear Father,

I have just received your letter. The good Lord allows the foolhardiness of the Scalsis to make it possible for the Congregation of Indulgences to make up its mind about putting them in their place and making our rights properly vindicated. I well believe that if this issue is to end soon, it would be best if you stayed longer in Rome. We have nothing special on here during the month of May; the inauguration ceremony for our organs is put back until September 8.

The feast of St. Solange will go ahead without you. Monsignor Druon (Vicar General, Bourges) has written to say that it is very likely, given his being laid-up, that the Archbishop will not, as he had hoped, be travelling to Rome in June, but he himself (Druon) will very likely go to Rome after the feast of St. Solange. You could, then, write to him bringing him up to date, about our Association's activities and asking him, if visiting Rome, to bring a letter from the Archbishop dealing with the issue, as you will make clear to him, so that these problems can be resolved to our satisfaction.

2. Fr. Ariens is here at Issoudun; he is afraid he will be sent away immediately. I reassured him to the contrary, offering him a holiday of some months which he will take with his family in Holland. After that, we shall see. He leaves tomorrow, Monday. He would like to interest himself with our Association in Holland and Belgium, and also with the Petite Oeuvre; I am about to tell him to have a chat with you and to do nothing without your approval.

3. I have the chalice which we intend to offer the Cardinal Vicar; it is quite beautiful, with many emeralds. At its base in metal there is a representation of Our Lord showing his Heart, the Cardinal Vicar's coat of arms, and the initials of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Then on the (chalice) cup, symbols of Faith, Hope, Charity. Should I send it on immediately to you with a declaration of its value so that you can present it yourself with a letter from me, or should I give it to Monsignor Druon if he goes to Rome?

4. Brother Thomas has returned; he is being called to St. Gérard to lecture on the sciences to the young scholastics.

5. Father Papin is due to preach in the parish during the month of May; we shall be very attentive.

Father Papin was expelled from the Society a little over two years later, August 7, 1880.

6. Fr. Deidier is doing very well at Arles, but his absence is a great loss because of our scholastics. Fathers Piperon and Morisseau want him back in Issoudun. I don't know how I am going to solve this awkward issue because we have nobody to replace him (Deidier) in Arles. Let us pray.

7. We are near the end of the month and we haven't yet received the contribution (that of Jouët) for the Annals. These delays are making things awkward. Everybody is in good health. Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, Thursday, May 2, 1878

Dear Father,

I got your telegram this evening telling me that the decision has been put back. I fully believe that it is a decision having a bearing on our side of the Association. Yet this decision, according to Bishop Panici, should favour us; as well it cannot be made until the Archbishop of Bourges has either written or gone to Rome. Your telegram adds as well: "(it is) necessary to publish our manual". What manual? Is it a manual to be brought out... and in what sense? Is it a manual already brought out? Which one? I have just arrived from Bourges. His Grace is much better; he had left for a series of Confirmations and came back to preside at the holy oil ceremonies before going off again. He is not due in Bourges until Wednesday. The doctors advised a visit to Vichy, and His Grace will go there in June. They also recommended rest and taking every precaution. His Grace doesn't think he can go to Rome this year, unless a very significant improvement is evident following his visit to Vichy. This is what I hope, and then His Grace could go to Rome in July or August. In any case His Grace wants to write a letter about the issues affecting our Association to the Pope to bring matters to an end. His Grace favours the view that we should have the general direction of the Rome Association because it is our work, and in order to bring all problems to a conclusion he asked me to write out a draft of a letter and send it on to him (in Latin).

Take on responsibility for this (the letter) then my friend; discuss it with Bishop Panici, Bishop Sara or Bishop de Luca, Fr. Régis, or Bishop Manetti so that you will know how best to put together this letter for the Archbishop; you will then send it to me and I shall hand it on to the Archbishop of Bourges.

When this work is finished come to Issoudun if you think it opportune, and nothing better than if you were to return with Monsignor Druon. If you think it worthwhile, however, having prepared the ground-work for the Latin letter, you could leave on Monday or Tuesday to speak to the Archbishop of Bourges, and having brought the letter with you. I send you a copy of what the Scalsis through Raffl are getting up to in France. Complain about them to Bishop Penier, showing him what they are laying claim to. It is outrageous and unjust, being nothing more than absurd and scandalous speculation which must be brought to an end.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours and, until shortly, in C.J.

Dear Mr. Fernand,

I have just this minute heard about the terrible accident which has befallen you. Oh God what misfortune! How I feel for you! And how I feel for Madame de Bonneval! Dear little Germaine, so kind, so intelligent; I cannot bear the thought that she has taken flight to Heaven: dear little angel! I have been to see Madame du Quesne; she is wonderful in her faith and resignation. May 3, the feast of the finding of the Holy Cross, has brought with it to both of you a cross which is both very painful and hard to bear.

Mercifully your faith will confirm in you the conviction that your dear little crucified one, since her death is crucifying, already enjoys eternal glory and she is praying for you! We can without any doubt call upon her.

I shall be favoured, Fernand, if you convey to Madame Bonneval my sincere sympathy on your great sorrow, together with my most respectful good wishes.

To Alphonsus XII, King of Spain.

Issoudun, May 6, 1878

To His Majesty,
Alphonsus King of Spain.

Sire,

The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, whose Mother House is at Issoudun, Bourges Archdiocese, France, are established in Rome for three years, but in a very provisional way. They live with the Trappist Fathers at 95 St. John Lateran St. Wishing to set themselves up in the city centre permanently, they have cast their eyes on a large Spanish church situated within Piazza Navona and falling into ruins, indeed deserted. Aware of your kindness and the faith which impels you, they approach you confidently petitioning you to do them a favour.

Our Institute, Sire, wholly devoted to the Sacred Heart of Our Lord, founded on December 7, 1854 under the great Pius the IX, was approved by him of blessed memory on June 12, 1874 and its Constitutions on January 12, 1877.

His Holiness Leo XIII, whom we had the honour of seeing last month, would like to see us installed permanently in Rome.

Our intention, Sire, would be to restore this church, dedicate it to the Sacred Heart of Jesus and make it available for public worship. Your Catholic Majesty would cap his munificence if he was kind enough to make available at the same time the adjoining house formerly in use as a sacristy for this abandoned church, both of which continue to belong to Spain. We shall be lastingly grateful, and for Your Majesty this kingly gift would be the source of many blessings.

We have the honour, Sire, with deepest respect, to be Your Majesty's most humble and obedient servants.

For the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart,

J. Chevalier, MSC, Sup.Gen.

I presume with this petition to appeal to Your Majesty's good-will. The Issoudun Fathers of the Sacred Heart are worthy in every respect.

Issoudun, May 6, 1878

Dear Father,

I received your letter. The handbook you mention has to be brought out. Like yourself I think it is needed, but I do believe that it would be better to wait over until our problems with regard to the Association are resolved and our role more clearly defined, something which should not be too long in coming because the Archbishop of Bourges intends to write a letter to the Holy Father in keeping with our way of thinking, and he says that the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences is very favourable to us. While waiting over, there is nothing to stop us from putting together the necessary resources for this hand-book, beginning straightaway. You have the ability for and interest in this, having to hand all the necessary material.

If you think it worthwhile come to Issoudun and go to see the Archbishop of Bourges on all these issues, and then, having met him, you can then return to Rome accompanied by Monsignor Druon. Leave as soon as possible if you are ready. You will be here in time for Sunday next which is the procession day at Bourges for St. Solange. I got a letter from Fr. Henri telling me that the pilgrimage will not arrive at Issoudun until Wednesday, the 15th of this month at 7am. We shall be delighted to see you there if this is possible. The Duchess of Parma and all her family are coming to Issoudun on May 31. The Duchess is very keen to send Cardinal Franchi, with her approval, my request to King Alphonsus (of Spain) to place at our disposal the Spanish church in Piazza Navona. The Duchess wants to know to whom Cardinal Franchi will pass on this request once delivered. I replied that she should tell the Cardinal to address it to the Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, 95 St. John Lateran St. If you are there, you should send it directly straightaway to Alphonsus, King of Spain, and if you are away from Rome tell Fr. Miniot to do it for you. Keep the address to hand. If just now you could write to some influential Spanish friends who would commend this request to the King, it would be very helpful.

Fr. Marie has, as he did last year, returned to his complaints against the Petite Oeuvre's (Little Work's) schedule and the excessive workload. He says that several youngsters are ill for these two reasons and all the rest will be so in a short time. It is unacceptable that a man like this should be in charge of such an important undertaking! Brother Casas could go to Rome to build up the little colony if you deem it opportune. He is to be ordained subdeacon on Trinity Sunday.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Council Meeting, June 1, 1878

In attendance: Very Rev. Fr. Superior, Fathers Jouët, Morisseau, Georgelin, Piperon.

The Rome Undertaking: The Church of St. James.

At this meeting the Rome house and the Spanish Church of St. James were discussed. Fr. Miniot sent a telegram (as given above).

1. The decision was taken to make every effort to take on the overall direction of the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to coincide with the purchase of this church.
2. Approval will be sought to make this church, planned for Rome, one in honour of the Sacred Heart.
3. If authorization is refused to make this church that of the Sacred Heart, St. James will only be purchased on condition that the direction of the Association of the Confraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will be officially and definitively confided to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, with the proviso that restoration work will only be carried out in keeping with their resources.
4. An effort must be made to ascertain in what way the Sovereign Pontiff would care to be supportive in this acquisition.
NB: Father Jouët must make every effort to get this church from the Spanish Government free of cost.
5. If the overall direction of the Association is refused and, likewise, the gratuitous gift of St. James Church, the Society cannot become part of such an acquisition other than through half the amount of money requested. This purchase, then, cannot be definitively undertaken except under the condition that the Association's affairs are soundly and advantageously arranged.
6. The Very Rev. Fr. (Superior) must turn down any co-operation with a commission which is not part of the Society.

Scholastics called to Major Orders after perpetual vows.

It was agreed that henceforth the professed would not be called to sacred orders before their final vows. Scholastics should not either directly or indirectly seek to influence their being called to orders; they should leave this decision to their superiors. Those being ordained to major orders should make a full eight-day retreat.

Dear Father,

I received your telegram which with a detailed letter I forwarded to the Duchess. If the Duchess had sent on my petition to the Cardinal when she said she would, he should have received it. Your letter, which I received this morning, has still nothing to say about the two issues which are engaging you in Rome. On the supposition that we are given St. James the Spanish Church gratuitously, or for a certain sum, we shall most assuredly need an accommodation residence; touch this chord. It is imperative that we react positively to the good-will of the Sovereign Pontiff. His wishes will be for us his command. Father Sorin, Superior General of the Holy Cross Fathers, was here at Issoudun last Tuesday. Once again he offered us St. Bridget's. I replied that we were in negotiations about another house, and I couldn't say anything to him at the moment. He left next day. Fr. Chappel is returning to Issoudun with Brother Legros. Brother Mètayer travelled with them to New York, giving it to be understood that he was coming to France with them, but in New York at the moment of embarking he couldn't bring himself to board and took off. A pitiable young man, what is going to become of him? Where is he going to take himself? He is penniless. I shall ask for him to be released from his vows, which I shall have signed by the Archbishop and sent on to you towards the end of the week.

Give my regards to Monsignor Druon, Fr. Régis, Fr. Stanislaus and good wishes to all our dear confrères.

Dear Father,

I got your letter. Yes, ask Mr. Carimini to make himself conversant with all the issues and necessary formalities. This is an absolute requirement! As all the houses nearby belong to the Spanish Government, one can and should release ourselves from any demanding and bothersome undertakings.

We shall provide Mr. Carimini with whatever payment he will be asking for. It is only right. I am inclined to believe that the Duchess has not sent on anything yet to Cardinal Franchi. If you have to write to her about this matter, address your letters or telegrams to: The Duchess of Parma, Maison Mouhan, Biarritz, Lower Pyrénées.

Let's hope, dear friend, that the St. James issue (the house in Rome) and that of the Association will take shape in accordance with our expectations. I am waiting anxiously for the resolution of the issues involving our Association. If our expectations work out for both issues, what acts of thanksgiving will not be called for! Let us earnestly pray. I shall not be seeing Brother Mondion until Monday next. I shall speak to him about his dispensation. According to the letters with which you are familiar, and in which he says that he no longer wishes to stay with us because of his health, I believe that you could act in his name without any problem (arising). He will not, surely, repudiate you.

Issoudun, June 17, 1878

Personal Confidential

Dear Father,

I received your letter this morning in which you tell me you met the Cardinal, the Spanish Ambassador and Minister. Just now I got your telegram which informs me that the Pope and Cardinal Franchi have left it to the Cardinal Vicar to make prompt arrangements for the resolution of the issues involving the Association. Obviously there is a need to hurry. By next Friday everything should be brought to a conclusion with regard to St. James. It is ridiculous if we are buying St. James without having the overall direction of our Association or what is virtually the equivalent by way of the status quo well confirmed by the Holy See, together with the privilege of having the centre of the Association associated with our Rome church, and being able to enrol as hitherto through the helpers, male and female, the names of people from all over the world.

Dear Fr. Guyot, despite these advantages, seems to be wholly opposed to the acquisition of Saint James because of the excessively high expenses being necessarily incurred by us. He does not seem to take any account of the formal wish, and the concurrence, at least moral, of the Pope, and, in this hypothesis, the arrangement in our favour of the Association's affairs. It pleases me to tell him, both as regards the faithful and the material interests of our Society, that the Pope's support, and having the overall direction of the Society in our hands, would be of great benefit to us, and if the contrary became a possibility it could mean decline and, perhaps, the break up of our Association. As he is going to Rome, I hope that the light will break in and he will come to change his mind.

The whole Council, except Fr. Guyot, agrees on the purchase of St. James under the conditions outlined. You will take notice of all this if there is a problem, and you will introduce Monsignor Druon as representing His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges. You will preside and your voice, when there is a sharing of views, will be the significant one. Fr. Miniot will also give his views. Let me know by telegram about anything which is important whether it leads to the conclusion or not of the issues.

Bishop Mermillod has written to me to say that he will appeal on our behalf to the Spanish King. It is inconceivable that King Alphonsus will do nothing in our favour. Ask the Cardinal Vicar to send a telegraph to the King of Spain so that we can know positively what his intentions are with regard to us since he now has my request to hand. If the Cardinal is unwilling, consider who might helpfully telegraph him. If you can find no one, undertake it yourself with my signature. Send the telegram twice if necessary, but we must know before Friday what are the views of the Spanish King.

It cannot be glossed over that we are incurring enormous expenses; the thought is frightening. We must try to have an understanding also with the Pope whereby he pays half and we shall pay it back at 3 or 4 per cent. We have a lot to be responsible for. On this issue Fr. Guyot is frightening. We have Saint-Gérard: 150,000 francs; the Chezal-Benoît house: 50,000 francs; the Ponroy (unclear) house: 40,000 francs; Placé sur l'Etat: 100,000; as well as our Issoudun house, with the grounds and enclosure: 500,000 francs. Fr. Guyot reminds us as well that we must not overlook the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work). That is so, but a house purchased by us in Rome would partly contribute towards the Petite Oeuvre. It would be advantageous if it benefited from this acquisition. Anyway, see what you can do for the best. Try to gain from Pope and King as much as you can. Then if things don't work out, it is because the good Lord does not want it so. Try also to arrange that the Church of St. James becomes the Church of the Sacred Heart, and thereby resources for its restoration will not be lacking. Make every effort in this respect; it would be marvellous! If Alphonsus (the King of Spain) gives us nothing by way of a house for ourselves, what are we going to do? This is serious. If the King gives something, send him a telegram. My appreciative thanks to Monsignor Druon. I haven't found his little book.

Wholly yours in C.J.

I have only one regret, that of knowing she is so far away from Issoudun... Could you not ever think of coming to see us? Make an effort, then... You would be so happy as would your dear children. Dear Father,

Your telegram yesterday gives ground for hoping that the Association's affairs will be concluded before Friday. May God grant it so! You now have with you Fathers Piperon and Guyot. You have all three of you plenipotentiary power to conclude this affair in keeping with the interests of our Society and the Association. If a serious issue crops up or a failure of agreement send a telegram to the Archbishop of Bourges acknowledging him as judge and interpreter of the issue. His decision will hold for all of us, whatever our differing views, and on the supposition that there is not a majority in your gathering favouring a conclusion, that which in accordance with the wishes of the Pope and also in my own view, must be adhered to. Any failure to meet these clearly expressed wishes could lead to disastrous consequences both for our Association and our Society, and this also, so it seems to me, is the view of the Archbishop of Bourges.

And have you thought about anything for the June Annals? I am aware that you haven't a minute for yourself. If you have some material, for example your impressions of the feast on May 31, send it on immediately. I shall shortly send on the documents about the release from vows of Brothers de Mondion and Mêtayer according to your directions.

Try to come to Issoudun as soon as possible, for the feast of the Sacred Heart if you can make it, so that we can all of us sing a hearty Te Deum in thanksgiving if everything ends in keeping with our wishes. I am sending Frs. Guyot and Piperon 10,000 francs (26,526 euros, the equivalent of 11,000 lira) for their use if needed. Kind greetings to our dear fathers and brothers.

My appreciative gratitude to Monsignor Druon, and my regards to Monsignor Manetti, Fr. Régis, etc.

Cheerio, dear friend.

Dear Father,

I am disappointed that nothing has yet been concluded. Fr. Piperon told me in his telegram that purchasers were not to hand, that the sale of St. James of the Spaniards has been adjourned and one can look forward to a successful outcome for the Association; may it well be so, but we have to await for a successful outcome. Do you think that Leo XIII might not be displeased about what we haven't succeeded in buying? To everyone's way of thinking, this would, if he were of this viewpoint, please him. Have you nothing new to offer with regard to King Alphonsus? I don't trust the concerns expressed from Paris and elsewhere; these are only words. Let the Cardinal try to get the Scalsis to give over at the opportune moment because they are his accomplices. How have Fathers Piperon and Guyot been behaving in Rome? What have they been arguing for? Are they in favour of St. James or very much siding with the opposition? Are they happy, having gone back to more positive thoughts? Yes Mr. Giorgetti must be diplomatically handled, and a copy of the Archbishop of Bourges' letter to the Holy Father sent to him. The Archbishop leaves on Monday for Vichy. I am forwarding the request for release from vows for Brothers de Mondion and Mêtayer. I have in this matter done what you asked me. They are very accepting both of them as the enclosed letters make clear. If Fathers Piperon and Guyot are not needed in Rome, let them return immediately as I already telegraphed them. And as soon as you are finished dealing with the Association's business, you also should come back straightaway. You need to relax yourself. My appreciative thanks to Monsignor Druon. And regards to dear Fathers Piperon, Guyot and Miniot.

For You Alone

Dear Father,

Fr. Piperon's letter which I have just received leaves me with a very unhappy feeling about these latest meetings with Cardinals Monaco and Franchi. If Fathers Piperon and Guyot have spoken as recounted in this letter, it is deplorable. They presumed to lay down the law to both Cardinals and impose their will, ultimatum-like, even on the Holy Father, demanding to know in which interests Leo XIII would put the sum (of money involved in the purchase) to use, and in what manner would the affairs of the Association be arranged.

It is not in such ways one deals with cardinals who are well-wishers, and especially with regards to the Pope, Jesus Christ's Vicar, who has shown himself to be very kindly disposed to us. Fathers Piperon and Guyot should have had only one thing to say: "We will do what the Pope wants. His wish is an order for us. We entrust ourselves to his fatherly wisdom." And with respect to Cardinal Franchi's statement, "Not so, the Pope does not wish to limit your freedom by imposing his will" their answer was most unhappily expressed: "We only have 50,000 francs (about 132,630 euros). With what rate of interest would we be favoured by the Pope? And then we want the Association issue to be decided in our favour." One may speak like this to an equal, but not to the Pope!!! To make such a demand of him in the person of his first minister suggests that kind of human wisdom I would, with St. Paul, call folly. Cardinal Franchi who will understand the embarrassment of such like procedures, replied with wording which I find in Father Piperon's letter, "...what we have to do then for the best is to take ourselves to the Holy Father". Clearly it was the only thing our presumptuous wise men could do. The Pope would never have wished us to become victims of our obedience and our loyalty, not even the good Lord either!

I drink then of the chalice and I say to the Lord: Voluntas tua. The good Lord punishes our Society because of my failings. Let us now face up to new trials. We do not merit any more the good-will of the Holy See, and the Lord will make us expiate this. I foresee the future as full of contradicting and bitter experiences. I am very upset. Did we need to make known to the Cardinal-Vicar that our Associating would provide great resources? All this was badly thought out! I accept this. It would have been easy to speak differently, e.g., we can count on the support of a large number of friends, etc. The damage is done, however. The Lord could make it work to our advantage. I would hope so, but I am not counting on it.

Fathers Piperon and Guyot, if they are still in Rome, should return immediately.

Wholly yours, dear friend.

Issoudun, June 25, 1878

Dear Father,

I received just now another letter from Fr. Piperon, and a word from yourself about your contribution to the Annals. Thanks for all of this. I sent you on last evening, or more exactly this morning at 7am, a telegram in answer to the three queries sent yesterday asking me to authorize the purchase of St. James-of-the-Spaniards because it was a necessity, and the Pope thought so also, and I replied that there should be no hesitation, that it be bought immediately and every effort made to please the Pope as the consequences of stalling and putting things off would be a disaster for everyone! Otherwise, I hope that the issues involving our Association can now be sorted out quickly in keeping with our wishes. Keep me informed. I am sending you on a telegram this afternoon informing you not to delay the acquisition of St. James because the Holy Father very much so wants it.

Fr. Piperon informs me that my request to the King of Spain is still with the Minister because he didn't send it on; this is too much to take! I have just now had a letter from Mademoiselle Lassire informing me that Cardinal Franchi sent on the letter immediately to the King. Look into this issue and send on this petition immediately. The Spanish Minister has nothing to do with it. Thank profusely Monsignor Druon for me. I shall never forget either his kindness or good-will to us. In my name thank all the Cardinals who are supportive of us. Greetings to Fathers Guyot and Piperon if still in Rome.

Dear Father,

1. The deed of sale is at the registry office, being sent on to Paris this afternoon for ratification by the Minister for Foreign Affairs and the Italian Ambassador. I am told that all these formalities will take 15 days. I would like you to hurry matters up because the third appraisal should take place on the 12th of this month according to the information I have received. I hope you have this deed by that time. In any event, if it so happens that you haven't got it, there is nothing to stop you buying in your own name initially, and then pursuing the final formalities later, placing our names on the deed of purchase before the ratification. The Rome notary will leave space for this in the document. Fathers Piperon, Guyot and myself will send you our ratification, and it will include everything which can be anticipated for the future, a general ratification which looks to all issues and with which there is never a need to go back on. It is in your name it should be undertaken. Your name is not on it now, but you will write your signature in Rome. This is how it's done, so we have been told.

2. Keep your eyes open with respect to all this on the day of the sale, and make sure that the transaction goes in our favour. Do not leave the occasion go without being pleasant to the Pope so that we are assured of his powerful support as well as the good-will of the Cardinals who interested themselves in the whole issue; this is very important.

3. Frs. Piperon and Guyot now seem very well disposed to this purchase. They believe that by going there they helped to lower the sum by 35,000 liras, the price reached at the second bidding, because, so they say, without their presence in Rome, you could (might) have purchased at the second bidding, whereas the third was 35,000 francs less (roughly 92,840 euros). Let us leave them this consolatory boost, but make sure the third verdict favours us. These worthy Fathers who didn't want it so that the Petite Oeuvre should in all justice contribute to the purchase are now of the view that it should contribute three quarters (!). They are at present envisioning magnificent restoration and construction plans. Let us first get hold of St. James of the Spanish and then we shall see.

4. I very much hope that the Holy Father will come to our help in a twofold manner. We shall, with respect to whatever he would want us to, contribute in keeping with the conditions which he will stipulate, assured in advance that they will be to our advantage. This works much better than putting all our money into it. We have enough to meet our obligations.

5. What is the position as regards our Association?

6. A representative of the Holy Cross Fathers arrived here yesterday from Paris to offer St. Bridget's to us officially in the name of the Congregation. They are wholly determined on selling this building. They are very sorry that Fr. Sorin did not positively end negotiations about it before I went to Rome. I answered Fr. Lecoïnte (uncertain spelling), the name of the delegate, that we were already negotiating for the purchase of another house, and that while our efforts would very likely be successful, he might care, nevertheless, to wait 15 more days. He so promised me... But St. James in my opinion is 100 times preferable, and Fathers Piperon and Guyot are of the same view.

7. Fr. Guyot left this morning for Saint-Gérard. What a baffling man; he has taken against Arles and the priests of the Aix diocese. He promised the Bishop that he would preach the pastoral retreat, but believing himself to be ill-regarded by the priests, he refused outright to go to Aix. The Archbishop wrote to me expressing his astonishment, displeasure, and extreme embarrassment. I did all I could to make Fr. Guyot change his mind. I tried to deal with him in every way, but I was only wasting my patience and my time. It is outrageous; I sent a telegraph to Fr. Deidier who accepted out of a sense of duty! Just in time...

8. And my request to the Spanish King? What has been the outcome?

Cheerio, dear Father; a thousand thanks; I excused you and supported you as I was obliged to do. Do not be afraid of anything. Confidence and courage: the Sacred Heart will bless you.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Father,

I have just now received your kind letter. The news you convey to me from Rome could not be more welcome. You have been, and will continue to be so, a means of many blessings for our undertaking. The supportive language which the Holy Father had for you is an inestimable treasure for our little Society. Do not change places since it is I who must thank you for all your kindness and devotedness. Our work is your concern (you have demonstrated this over a long period); it is particularly appropriate, given your sharing the intimate thoughts of the Archbishop of Bourges, that you involve yourself in our undertakings, and to be able to call upon your clarification, wisdom, appreciation of issues, is for me personally something to be greatly valued.

Because of your significant contribution, I am sure that our business in Rome will shortly have a successful outcome. Fr. Jouët has described the situation and has asked me to set out the procedures he should follow when dealing with arrangements for the acquisition on the 12th of St. James of the Spanish. Taking inspiration from the Pope's wishes, the views of our very committed and well-loved Archbishop, and all you mention in your letter, I replied: "Do your best. Go ahead; we must have the Church. Do not be slow in offering more."

I am impatiently waiting over for the 12th. If you are visiting Vichy to see His Grace, convey to him my warmest appreciation. If the Archbishop, while in Vichy, would like to visit our Saint-Gérard house, write letting me know the day and the time and I shall go there unless it is otherwise impossible.

Please accept, dear friend, my respectful good wishes with deepest gratitude.

Council Meeting, July 6, 1878

In attendance: Very Rev. Fr. Superior, Fathers Georgelin, Morisseau, Piperon.

At this meeting once again the acquisition of the St. James Church was discussed. Fr. Jouët had written from Rome asking what he should do if, at the auction which is due to take place on the 12th, he presents bids, and if he should put down a surcharge with respect to the sale price, and how high should he take the surcharge.

The St. James enterprise.

The Council agreed to reply to Fr. Jouët, 1. that he should be sensitive to the situation and act for the best. The Council authorized him to make an oral submission reaching above the highest already offered if there is bidding, indicating, thereby, an unquestionable proof of our commitment to the Holy Father. 2. It goes without saying that in the absence of bids, he (Jouët) must not submit his bid above the sum of 189 thousand francs which had been committed.

Dear Father,

I received your telegram. Yes, you must figure among the named buyers for the sale. On the 12th bring those people along whom you mentioned and who will let you know if there are bidders. If there are none, you will put forward the bid referred to in the document, 139,000 lira, I expect. If there are bidders, and if a round figure is in question, you should consult Cardinal Franchi or the Cardinal Vicar to find out how far you can go in order to have the marking-down (price). The bidding has to be in our favour if it is to be acceptable to the Pope. I would like to think that the Spanish Minister will be loyal to us, and will keep his word about your being the preferred bidder. It is to be hoped that there will be no fictitious bids to increase the price and take advantage of us. Keep your eyes open! See Cardinal Franchi. It is imperative that we acquire St. James of the Spanish because the Pope so wishes it. As for my request to the King, send it to the Duchess of Parma in Biarritz asking her to seal and send it herself to King Alphonsus. If she doesn't wish to become involved, take it yourself when you go to Spain.

I have had the little statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart changed by 50 centimetres, the former model from that provided by the snapshot you sent me. It looks very well to me and above reproach (theological). The Child Jesus is totally separate (from His Mother) and raised on a globe representing the world. Should I sent it on to you by rail, second class, or wait until your return? I think that we shouldn't get involved in too many things at the one time.

J.C.

I have just now received your second letter. The Council is of the view that matters should be left to you for a decision. If there is bidding you are authorized to go a little above the highest bid if necessary so that St. James of the Spanish could become ours, and thereby provide the Pope with incontrovertible proof of our dedication. Make every effort to avoid being duped. Keep in touch with Cardinals Franchi and Monaco: I hope there will be no other bidders. By undertaking to hand over at least a part of St. James for worship, all things being equal (otherwise), you must be given first choice.

Dear Father,

I have just seen the Archbishop of Bourges who came to visit us at Saint-Gérard. His Grace is very happy. He spoke to me about St. James of the Spanish. His Grace said that it was absolutely ours from the moment the Pope so wished it and the moral support of Leo XIII would have a tremendous and inestimable impact on our Society and its undertakings.

On Friday, make certain that we shall have Saint James. As for finance, make sure that the Pope gives us as much as possible, 150,000 lira, or 100,000. The Archbishop of Bourges will reassure the Pope in this respect. We shall accept the conditions set out by the Holy Father for us; they will be continuously favourable.

Aside from a number laid up, all goes well at the Novitiate.

Issoudun, July 14, 1878

Dear Father,

Thanks for your telegram. We are, then, property owners. It is a demanding undertaking, but the Sacred Heart will support and bless us. Carefully lay down all the conditions for the contract:

1. That the walls on each side should be partitioned and, if it is possible, the contract should stipulate that this double partition has been acquired and paid for by us, included in the price paid for the purchase of the church, with nothing further to be paid by us. It would be to our advantage if you could arrange this. The building of our monastery on the foundations of the church would then become less costly.
2. Stipulate that all the windows and views of the nearby houses are blocked off on each side of the church if we are going to build and that there will be no right of way.
3. Fr. Piperon tells me that the façade of the church giving on Piazza Navona is statutorily regulated by Italian law, that is to say that if we wanted to modify it or build above it, there would have to be a drawing in (a taking in) which would align it with the nearby houses. This could mean enormous expense. Try and see to it that nothing like this occurs, getting the Spanish Minister to request the Italian authorities to arrange that this façade should be free of any alignment and not compelled to be drawn in.
4. Try to get hold of all the works of art and everything taken from the church to be transported elsewhere. Our aim, obviously, is to restore in time the whole church and consecrate it to the Sacred Heart. St. James will remain the secondary patron so that we can attract the good-will of the Spanish.

The Archbishop is returning to Bourges on Monday night. I shall be seeing him next Tuesday. As you seem to think my presence would be helpful, I hope to leave for Rome on the 23rd or 24th of this month. Prepare things in such a way that I need only stay for a short while. I am about to lay hands on the 100,000 francs (roughly 265,460 euros) and take them with me. Expedite also a satisfactory outcome in keeping with our wishes for the Association's projects. It seems to me that, henceforth, there should be no more problems since we have a church of our own which could be the centre. I should like very much if this matter ended in our favour when I am about to arrive in Rome and can feel more carefree and pleased as a result.

I got your letter enclosing the notorious decree against the absent. I read that one can formally overlook with respect to the past, but I note also a readiness to refuse an indult as regards enrolling for the future those who are not present. This would be calamitous for our Association. It is absolutely necessary that we be granted this indult because our Archbishop is also asking for it. We are well owed this request, having made enough sacrifices for it. In any event, Bishop Panici definitely promised it to us. Make every effort to get it. If you think it worthwhile that I should go to Rome, should I bring with me the little modified statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart? It is very nice. If you think it necessary that I should leave earlier for Rome, send me a telegram. I am putting back my departure until the 23rd or 24th because the perpetual adoration at Saint Cyr is taking place on the 22nd, 23rd and 24th. If it is necessary, I could leave next Wednesday.

Everybody is very pleased with our acquisition.

I have just now been speaking to the Archbishop. His Grace who relates so well to us in sharing our joys and sorrows seems to be delighted with the outcome of the St. James-of-the-Spanish issue. Monsignor Druon has at last returned and mentioned so many good things to the Archbishop. He is as supportive of us as if he were one of us. I am taking out 80,000 francs to you (roughly 212,210 euros), leaving Issoudun on Tuesday or Wednesday of next week; if my being there is necessary before that, telegraph me straightaway. If there wasn't the Saint Cyr adoration I would leave as soon as I could put together the 80,000 francs which I shall be taking with me.

The Archbishop advises me to leave as soon as possible, that is to say, Sunday evening. I should be in Rome, then, on Tuesday at 1.30pm. How does this seem to you? The Archbishop hopes that the issues with respect to our Association will be decided in our favour and that an indult will be granted to us for the enrolment of those not present.

I am also taking with me a letter for the Pope from the Archbishop of Bourges. This letter is a splendid one, full of good-will and kindness for us. The Archbishop, having warmly and most agreeably thanked the Pope for being so well-favoured to us, kindly requests him to permit us to consecrate to the Sacred Heart of Our Lord the Church of St. James-of-the-Spanish. You will see the letter and be ever so pleased with it. Try and arrange our audience with Leo XIII for next Wednesday or Thursday. To a Holy Office official.

*Undated. After Friday
July 26, 1878*

Monsignor,

In the name of His Grace, Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges, in the name of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and of our twelve million associates, we humbly come to ask the Holy Office to sanction for public worship the statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart crowned on September 8, 1869 by His Holiness, Pius IX of blessed memory, and as of now re-modelled. The reproductions which commercial interests unfortunately introduced for advantageous reasons have disappointingly defaced the original marble statue which is at the centre of... (illegible writing here) in the Issoudun sanctuary which His Eminence Cardinal Patrizi judged to be unobjectionable in every respect in his letter to our distinguished Archbishop dated ... (not given). These inaccurate reproductions present the Child-God (sic!) quite small nestling at his mother's feet like an orphan, whereas in the beautiful Issoudun statue, aged 12 years, he exhibits his heart with one hand to the world as the source of grace and with the other he points to his most blessed Mother as if to say to the faithful: go to her; I have given her the key to my treasury.

The Holy Office, on becoming aware of the unbecoming commercial reproductions, was understandably alarmed, and in particular did not consider it appropriate that the Child should be separate from his divine Mother at her knees and accordingly, rightly, forbade this statue or any representation thereof for public worship. We come, then, to request an assessment of the new statue which we present today where the Child, aged 12, is completely separate from his Mother, raised on a globe, affirming thereby His sovereignty over all creatures and no longer at the Blessed Virgin's knees but to her left. Otherwise, we are agreeable to accept willingly the new change if the Sacred Congregation considers it proper. His Holiness, Leo XIII, on Friday last, at a private audience, saw the new model and found it unobjectionable.

With good wishes...

B 18780830

Issoudun, August 30, 1878

Dear Mother,

Since 1876 I do not believe I have engaged myself very much with the running of your little Society of religious of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You have done more or less as you wished. I understand, dear Mother, that in order to avoid any misunderstanding or concern, and to attract the blessings of God on this new undertaking as well as sensitize consciences, there should necessarily be the most perfect and acceptable relationship between the Mother Superior and the representative of His Grace the Archbishop whom it pleases you to name as Founder.

In the rules I laid down for you, which I based in part on our own, you find everything acceptable, you say, except that which has to do with the leadership of the little Society. I understand, dear Mother, that the first paragraph, which at the very beginning of your Society would have been necessary, does not have the same purpose today. Very well! Change it as you wish, rephrase it according to your thinking. Let me have it and if, as I hope, it is acceptable, I shall approve it, and also, without a doubt, the Archbishop. Then order will be restored, peace and unity reigning in all hearts, and Our Lord spreading his most precious blessings on the dear and beloved Institute of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

All good wishes, dear child. I bless you and your dear Sisters in the Lord.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. C.

Felicity Pirinoli de Briançon was the childless widow of Count Guiseppe Pirinoli whose hospitality was extended to Chevalier at her Turin home. In 1874 she came with him to Issoudun and presented herself for entry to the new foundation. When Mother Françoise left, Chevalier appointed Pirinoli Superior. She fell out with him when attempting to motivate the community towards a contemplative life, withdrawing on 25th March 1882 to enter the Poitiers Visitation Convent, after which she joined the Religious of the Sacred Heart in Rome.

To Mother Felicity Pirinoli, Superior of the FNDSC.

Issoudun, September 1, 1878

Dear Mother,

Put your ideas down on paper with regard to the leadership of communities. Set them out in a paragraph and when you will have put this little task together let me know and we shall both consider it; it will be easy to reach an understanding.

I am aware of the regulations, my child, concerning the government of female institutes fully formed, where the institute is approved (canonically) and as such functions with legal appropriateness in conformity with its Councils and Chapters, etc.

It is not the same with respect to your little Society which is in its infancy and formative stages, without customs and past traditions, having a woman of the world as Superior without any experience of the religious life, with no experience in the direction of a community, a novice in respect to the direction of souls and their religious formation, lacking in theological knowledge to provide an adequate explanation of the rules, constitutions and vows, and the resolution of certain problems. Not being sufficiently versed in spirituality to direct on her own, and with a sure touch, her sisters in the often difficult way of perfection as it is so considered, not having the requisite ideas or the necessary experience to decide as for herself without being advised, the delicate issue, so difficult at times, of vocation, etc., etc.

You will be aware, then, dear Mother, that the founder of this dear little community, in agreement with the Archbishop, has thought it wise, indeed necessary, to offer you his support, advice, at the beginning of this undertaking so that it could be set up on a solid foundation with the help of God, giving it thereby a good thrust so that it can set out on the way the Lord would wish it to go and be, thereby, affirmed.

Accordingly, while this undertaking in its early demanding formative stage of coming to be has been completed, with the little Society set up on a solid basis, through its regulatory rules, and, thereby functioning according to the Sacred Canons, my ideal clearly would be to leave it to its own proper control, saying to the Rev. Mother Superior: "Since you are now fully formed in the religious life, having your own assistants and counsellors, mistress of novices, established undertakings, resources for living, my duty is to disengage and no longer be involved in your government since you have been established (canonically) and all goes well for you." But from the very beginning, dear Mother, you have thought that you could and should go on your own and act like the great orders which have been existing for years. Instead of looking upon us as helpers, friends, fathers, disinterested advisers, you have persuaded yourself that we wished to get in the way of your work and thwart your efforts. Not so! My child, the very opposite, believe me, is the truth! All of us who did not share your views, who challenged you, no longer enjoy your confidence, not even the Archbishop. And what is the result? Serious inconvenience. You only take your own advice or that of outsiders, and under the pretext that the Lord bestows his light upon you, you go along with your own ideas, your particular appreciation of things and your own views as if coming down inspired from heaven. And relying on these suspect principles you consider yourself dispensed from obeying your Archbishop and ecclesiastical superiors because they do not share your views. This is where I find, dear Mother, the nub of all your problems.

Clarify difficult issues with your Superiors by all means. Change together with them what seems to you impractical with respect to the community's good, and bring to their attention those parts of the Rule which to you appear questionable and difficult to carry out, and in all this you are within your rights. But in the present circumstances of your little Society, still in a formative process, with your Bishop the representative here of the Holy See, after prayer and reflection, you should set course on a way of acting which is not as of now contradictory of God's laws or those of the Church, becoming appropriately obedient by subduing your own judgment and personal feelings, since otherwise there is no subordination or serene assurance. If you think it appropriate, read this letter to your dear sisters, and I am sure that they will be, like yourself (!), all of my viewpoint.

Let us then, dear Mother, come together in pursuit of what is best... May the most cordial relationship always exist between us. From all its past problems there will come about something very worthwhile for the advancement of this dear little Society of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Prepare this little undertaking; I shall call on you some day soon and, putting everything in order, the Sacred Heart will bless our endeavours.

Cheerio, dear Mother.

I bless you and all your daughters in the Lord.

Dear Father,

I received all your letters; a thousand thanks. The future is not clear. I am beginning to think that we have been played about with. In any event, let us keep on going to the limit. The request made to the Pope to grant us the Association's centre seems very good to me. I had a copy made of it and took it to the Archbishop whom I had been led to believe was in Touvent, but His Grace had left for Amiens. I sent it on to him for his endorsement so that it would have more credibility. There is a delay of some days; wait and see what you can do, or if not go ahead.

As my telegram stated, we are responding in the affirmative to all the questions put to us by Mr. Vuillaume, and we are going along with the all advice you offered us because it is necessary. I sent on your letter and that of Fr. Ramière to the Archbishop. His Grace will assess the situation. I shall return the Jesuit's letter to you. I am grateful to our dear Brothers for their kind little letter; I am very moved by their thoughtfulness.

Issoudun, October 28, 1878

Dear Father,

I sent on the petition signed by the Archbishop. You may use it as you think fit in relation to the Cardinal Vicar. I just now received by registered mail the dispensation of age for Fr. Berthon. It is a little late. The Rome stamping is that of October 12.

I received Fr. Miniot's letter this a.m. looking for 3,000 francs for the Rome house, and 20 or 30 thousand francs to continue with the work on St. James of the Spanish. You are aware that we haven't got a penny. I shall try to find one or two thousand francs for the house. As for 20 or 30,000 francs, try to ascertain the feelings of Cardinal Nina and see if there is any feasibility of getting a new contribution of 30 or 40,000 francs from the Holy See for the work going on at St. James.

I can assure you, dear friend, that all the disappointments coming out of Rome to us are such as to paralyse our courage. They do not want us, you say, to seek financial help in Spain for the restoration of St. James. We should have been informed about this before it was bought and not give us to understand the contrary. Now, you say, we cannot presume to assure ourselves that we have the direction of our Archconfraternity; it's like wishing to put a dagger in our back. What is going to become of us if it is like this and we carry the heavy burden of the Church of St. James on our shoulders and the accumulating debts? Where then will good faith be, or justice...? No, I refuse to believe it will be so; it cannot be like this.

Fr. Captier has finally written to me to say that his health is not getting any better and he wishes to leave the Society. He is with his family. Fr. Albert was involved in an outrageous episode with Fr. Deidier last Thursday. He doesn't want to stay in Arles any longer, etc. I had a telegram from Fr. Albert asking me to come immediately to Arles. Fr. Deidier wrote a letter describing the whole episode in detail. It is pathetic! Last Friday I sent Fr. Piperon to Arles to try and quieten down things. I do not know yet what the outcome will be. We shall be involved next Monday with Fr. Papin's petition to take vows for three years. Fathers Ramot, Morisseau, Piperon, Georgelin and myself are in favour of his taking vows for 3 years; Fr. Guyot is opposed; what is your view? We are putting back for the time-being Brother Lethonnier's ordination to the subdiaconate; perhaps also Brother Bizeuil; what do you feel about this?

Cheerio, dear friend.
 Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

There will very likely also be a question of Bothers Giroux, Casas and Balzer for the priesthood. What is your view?

Bizeuil was ordained, became a curate in Saint-Cyr, laicized January 19, 1901.

Giraud worked at Watertown from July 1881 to June 1882 when he left the Society, but returned later as Bursar in Watertown. He went back to Issoudun and in October 1888 left for Rome, returning to Issoudun in December before his departure for Barcelona, where he left for the second and final time.

Balzer died at Salzburg, December 22, 1888, aged 68, having been a priest for ten years.

Issoudun, October 30, 1878

Dear Father,

You should have received the Archbishop's signed appeal. Put it to whatever use you deem fit. If it is not suitable you can change the wording and adapt it as you think fit for your purposes. I think that you would do well to leave Cardinal Aureglia out of things. I have already sent you three letters, not taking into account the two telegrams. You will be aware, my friend, that I have a crushing surcharge, and nobody to come to my help. The more I carry on, the greater the needs increase. The day is no longer enough for me; I have to make use of the night also. Be kind to me and do not interpret this as any coldness towards you. Nothing makes me more unhappy than to think that I worry you. My confidence in you has never lessened in the least; it rather increases if that be possible. You know how much I like you and hold you in high regard, I plead with you, then, to believe what I say and let the matter rest there. Yes, the most basic, wholehearted respect holds between us and the Council members. If there are sometimes differences, the basic unity is not in any way compromised; that is the truth.

Fr. Piperon has returned from Arles. People have calmed down a little and made up; let us hope it will last. In Arles they are looking for another confrère because Fr. Captier is not returning there. We are sending them Fr. Navarre, and Fr. Maillard, at least provisionally, will go to Chezal-Benoît. This means one less at Issoudun.

On Wednesday Fr. Guyot will be coming for a Council meeting. Send all your observations on to him. Cheerio, dear Father. My regards to Fr. Miniot and to all our confrères. I wish you a very successful retreat.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Work on the Church of St. James.

1. At this meeting the house in Rome and the work on the Church of St. James was discussed. The decision was taken not to press ahead with the restoration work on the church to have it ready for worship on December 8. Time will be taken to carry out the work as economically as possible. It was again decided to halt the work with the completion of the first floor and this would be finished off in such a way as to make use of the building as soon as possible.

Brother Lepetit asked to leave.

2. Brother Lepetit, put forward for vows, was not considered intelligent enough to be accepted; he will be bade farewell.

The acquisition of the Church of St. James in Rome.

The circumstances of the decision reached on this matter in the month of June this year.

In July 1878 Fathers Guyot and Piperon were sent to Rome to discuss, together with Fr. Jouët, the acquisition of the Church of St. James. These three Fathers forwarded to the Very Rev. Fr. Superior their appreciation of the matter, having in mind the wish of the Holy Father, several times expressed, that the Congregation should acquire the church relative to the price sought by the Spanish Embassy. The Very Rev. Fr. Superior sent a telegram giving his approval of the transaction. It was unanimously agreed: 1, that a sum of 189,000 lira would be put forward to meet the public auction requirements about to take place; 2, that if the church was to be taken over by the Congregation a sum of 100,000 lira put forward in the name of the Congregation would be withdrawn and a sum of one hundred thousand lira accepted from Cardinal Franchi in the name of the Sovereign Pontiff in lieu of a three per cent tax. Ten thousand francs had been taken to Rome by the (Issoudun) priests to become part of the purchase. From this amount, added to by the surplus left over from changing one hundred thousand francs, all the expenses of the sale and registration were met; there remained over twenty-two thousand lira which was set by to meet part of the restoration work.

This decision which was taken by the Council, half of whose members were in Rome to deal with this matter and the rest in Issoudun, could not be ratified until the members involved in the negotiations returned (from Rome), here and now becomes validated.

Building and restoration at St. James, Diverse issues.

A letter from Mr. Vuillaume in charge of the work at the Church of St. James was read to the meeting. The letter referred to the need to build a second storey to the house which was built on top of the St. James Church, and the reason for this is that the neighbours would have a view of what is being built and only in this way could they be impeded. Such lack of privacy would make the house virtually impossible for the community to live in and it is necessary to exercise the right one has to counteract this lack of privacy by constructing a second storey. If the ambassador who signed the purchase deed and conceded this right was charged, very serious issues might later arise. Fr. Jouët confirmed these facts in a letter.

From a different perspective the architect and works' manager put forward to the Council several proposals which dealt with the restoration of the church's two façades. From a distance it was difficult for the Council to give an answer and it was agreed that Fr. Píperon would go to Rome and make himself familiar on the spot with the current state of affairs and the work proposed, and that the foundation of the living quarters in that section overlooking Piazza Navona should be lowered if at all possible, and that the most economical ways and means should be considered with respect to carpentry, the roof of this building and the pavement, and also the use of old materials should be taken into consideration: wood, stones, marble, tiles. Then the arrangement of the different areas necessary for the small community would have to be considered. In consequence, 10,000 francs is made available to the Father (Jouët) for repair work.

Next it was decided that Father Papin, now coming to the end of his Novitiate year, should make a thirty-day retreat, and a decision about his being accepted for vows would be taken after the retreat.

Brothers Casas, Baltzer, Giraud, Barral, Veron and Thomas were accepted for Orders, Casas, Baltzer, Giraud to the priesthood, Barral, Veron and Thomas to the diaconate.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, November 12, 1878

Dear Father,

Mr. Vuillaume's letter this a.m., together with your note, has changed the Council's viewpoint. One accepts that a second storey is needed to close the roof top windows since, otherwise, the first floor would be uninhabitable. But we must keep expenses in check as much as possible, and be content with the bare necessities. Father Píperon is going to Rome precisely for this reason. If the expenses continue to mount, where do you think we are going to get the money? I have borrowed 10,000 francs (about 26,535 euros) which Father Píperon will take out to you. Our financial resources are barely sufficient now for our usual expenses. What can be done? We must hold back on expenditure at St. James of the Spanish since otherwise we are facing financial ruin.

The architect has moved too quickly. It is unbelievable that an architect should go ahead and start building without offering a serious plan carefully considered and an estimate provided to the owners before going ahead with their approval. At St. James nothing like this has happened. I never authorized going ahead in such circumstances. According to Mr. Carimini's estimate, the cost of the façade seems to me to be appalling. I believe it can be lowered, as well as the construction work. If I were to say that we would build a first storey on the sides of the lateral naves, that would be in the more or less remote future and not at present. As well, at the present time, we are justified in expecting some contributions if our church is to be dedicated to the Sacred Heart and made the centre of our Association. While these expectations remain in part unfulfilled or postponed, all is significantly changed. Fathers Píperon and Guyot have done me an injustice with regard to Saint James when accusing me of being responsible for all that has gone on. I am very hurt by the injustice of this. These gentlemen have also taken the decision that Giovanni (an Italian student) should be sent home to his family. Father Píperon, who leaves this evening, will take him with him.

Cheerio, dear friend.

Dear Father,

I am sending you on the purchase deeds which Fr. Miniot needs to sign; he must endorse what is already done, for example, I agree with what is written here-below, and then sign his name, writing in the appointed place. He must sign on all four pages. If Father Píperon is still in Rome, he will bring back the document; if not you will send it on by registered post.

Father dear, nobody ever had the idea of taking the Annals from you. Despite your variety of work, you carry out this responsibility with such devotedness, zest, insight, pertinence, and success, so much so that it is quite unthinkable that any member of the Council would have thought of offering to anyone else the direction of the magazine. You have my assurance on this; in any event, I would protest with all my determination against this happening. No, no, keep calm. When you think it opportune make use of Fathers Marie and Lavialle by suggesting yourself what you would like them to do. Rightly understood, of course, their articles would be read over, corrected, abridged by you, put aside, in accordance with whatever you consider most appropriate in the circumstances. If you so wish, Fr. Deidier could, perhaps, also help you out. You can see then that you are free, entirely so, and do as you wish. Only yourself, and not the others, is in charge.

Fr. Morisseau will write to you about the masses; he is getting them (mass stipends) ready for you. Fathers Guyot and Piperon are ill-disposed towards the Church of St. James of the Spanish. Their criticism of myself and yourself outrages me. It is so unfair that it deeply wounds my heart. May the Lord forgive them!

All good wishes to our dear confrères and the scholastics. I am very pleased to hear that your retreat went well. May the Lord be praised! I have heard that Monsignor Druon has at last been named Superior at St. Louis of the French. Official notification has not yet been released.

Dear Father,

I have just now received your letter enclosing Mr. Carimini's latest proposals (about the building). I should have liked to give you our decisions before this, but the Council was so ill-disposed that I felt I could not take anything on as from myself, particularly so when I had been unfairly accused of doing everything myself and being responsible for that which was carried out today. This is the reward I get for all my commitment, for all my sacrifices night and day, and the great concern I have for our Society. The truth will come out some day. The inexplicable behaviour directed towards me over some time will be regretted later on. I have also received a telegram from Fr. Piperon informing me that the Pope has issued a rescript making our Church of St. James the Spanish become consecrated to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Is not this rescript very advantageous to us? Is it not a good omen? Shall we have at last the centre of our Association? I think the time is coming soon for you to make a trip to Spain to collect contributions for St. James so that we can cope with our expenses. It was only with this in mind and with such expectations that we launched ourselves into these restorations and acquisitions. What do you feel about it?

If Brother Le (Letonnelier, very likely) cannot bear the climate, he should come back. Think about the December Annals. We shall be soon engaged with it.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Dear Father,

1. I received a copy of the rescript authorizing us to consecrate St. James to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and the appraisal of the Rev. Father Abbot at Sept-Fonts, if it rightly is Sept-Fonts? For I believe that Brother Letonnelier did not go to the right place about his health. It is a serious issue. Frs. Piperon and Morisseau, in particular, are supportive of Brother Letonnelier. If the Abbot of Sept-Fonts is still in Rome find out from him, confidentially, the reason which would explain why Brother Letonnelier was asked to leave.

2. Yes, you can take on the Marseilles retreat; before you go to Spain come and see us; this would greatly please me.

3. Father Piperon hasn't yet returned having been held up in Turin because of the snow and flooding. I expect him to arrive shortly; he is due to come by Marseilles.

4. I am surprised, following on my letters, that you do not mention anything about the impact on Fr. Piperon while in Rome when he saw the work on St. James and the reconstruction of the first and second storey, and what he thought about it. What decision has to be taken about this issue? I should like to have your own view and personal impressions. What do you think of it all, what is your opinion on this issue? etc. I received the November Annals article and I await that for December. As for the little volume on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, I shall send you on a proof next week. It was laid aside. I changed and added to it.

Cheerio, dear friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The rescript (about the St. James Church) seems very good, don't you think? It is a blessing and, obviously, without our trials we could not hope to be so favoured. I firmly believe that the consecration of the church to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will lead us to the overseeing of the Rome Association. Fiat! Fiat! I got the item signed by Fr. Miniot. There were two kind letters which I wrote to Fr. Deidier, and as he didn't answer me I wonder what his silence means? He well knows, however, how much I like and regard him...

Issoudun, November 27, 1878

Dear Father,

I am sending you on the proofs without page numbers of the brochure: Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Better Known. It is a work which I wanted to make more significant and somewhat complete. Correct it carefully. The chapters on the divine Maternity and the legitimacy of the title and devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart seemed to be of the utmost importance, irreproachable, I believe, with respect to doctrine. If you could have this work looked at by some Roman theologian friends, and then obtain Holy Office approval, it would be marvellous. But as it is too delicate an issue, I dare not count on it. Having had the work examined and approved, together with the appropriate corrections called for by the Roman theologians, you will return the proofs to me. I shall make a second copy, and then I shall look for the Archbishop of Bourges' approval, that is to say continuing on from the first, which was very good. I shall send on to you this second corrected proof which, either through Cardinal Nina or Monaco, you can present it to the Pope in order to have a brief, and that would be most invaluable. You will see if this is possible. It is best to take one's time, hold back for a little while the printing of the work and thereby be rightly ready.

Fr. Marie is sending his work on to you this evening. Time is short.
Cheerio. Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Father,

I received your letter. I am sending on to Gagnault (publishers) what you have added on and it's very good. May Pius IX triumph and see out 25 years of the Immaculate Conception (he died this year, 1878, February 2!). I am sorry that the Scalsis are still very much in favour. Oh if only the Cardinal Vicar could obtain for us the approval and restoration of our Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statue, as well as the direction of our Rome Association, how wonderful it would be. Work at this.

Fr. Guyot is here; he has opened his heart; all is in order; he seems to be animated with the best intentions. Nothing else new here. Cheerio, dear friend; my regards to everybody and a good year.

Dear Father,

1. We are very anxiously waiting for the Annals material and once again we are going to be very late.
2. Father Captier has written to me saying that he would like to come and make a retreat in Issoudun, and that he doesn't want to leave the Society, had a rush of blood to the head, and asks me not to put into effect the letter from the Sacred Congregation releasing him from his vows. I have held on to this letter and have not yet forwarded it to the Archbishop of Bourges so that it can be acted on (according to the requisite procedures). Should one reply favourably to Fr. Captier, who, deep down, is not a bad sort? Discuss this with Bishop de Luca.

Issoudun, December 3, 1878

Dear Father,

1. I got your contributions for the Annals yesterday. They are now with Gaignault (publisher).
2. Since the terrace roof is cheaper it is best, taking Carimini's advice, to go ahead with it.
3. You must not worry to much about Brother Mayer (it should be Meyer). He will not be unhappy, or no more so, his parents. The Prussians, so I am informed, do no more than threaten.

A Georges Meyer, student, died on August 31 this year, 1878. Eugène Meyer, here referred to, went on to a most distinguished career in the Society; see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, passim. An Alsatian from Schlestadt, born 1861, he studied at Rome, Tilburg, Paris. He held responsible posts in the Society, becoming Assistant General in 1897 and General in 1905, taking up residence in Rome. From 1920 to 1929 he was French Provincial. He died April 28, 1931.

4. Something odd: the Abbot of Port-du-Salut, where Brother Letonnelier stayed, wrote a very good letter commending him and would very much like to see him ordained sub-deacon. How does one explain such a contradiction? But a new episode which the Lord has willed has abruptly changed Father Morisseau's view up to now supportive of Brother Letonnelier. The latter having gathered from Fr. Morisseau that the Father Abbot of Sept-Fonts was opposed to his ordination spoke about this to the scholastics and boasted about challenging the Abbot and seeing him off. When this was made known by Brother Romain (the latter would leave the following October, 1879) to Father Morisseau, the latter was so disappointed that he drew the conclusion that the pathetic Brother Letonnelier was totally lacking in judgment and that his ordination should be postponed for the time being. This is the view of us all, and, therefore, this problem has been solved.

5. We pray continually for the unfortunate injured. I am informed that Monsignor Druon has left for Rome. I had, nevertheless, asked him in a nice letter to come to Issoudun before he left.

6. When you have returned the corrected work on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart I shall send you another copy in proofs which you can present to some good theologian, or to the Holy Office if you think it worthwhile so that you can get, if that is possible, a rescript from the Holy Father.

Cheerio, dear Father. Good wishes to our dear confrères. My regards to Fathers Régis and Stanislaus.

Issoudun, December 10, 1878

Dear Father,

1. The Annals are being printed. Your article on the stained glass windows is superb.
2. The letter from the parish priest of Osimo is very good and gives us ground for hope. Have you been able to meet the Monsignor to whom the Bishop of Osimo spoke? What does he say? What are his views? Has he spoken to the Pope about the interests of our Association? And with regard to the issues involving Madame de Mens, what is the position about them? I am close to thinking that we are in sight of a satisfactory conclusion since the Devil seems once again to be tearing into our Society and, in particular, against myself in making use of the unfortunate Fr. Albert (this is most confidential). I don't know what went on at Arles. Fr. Albert couldn't be more worked up, being in such an exasperated state that everyone is shaking. A few days ago he wrote an outrageous letter to me stating that if he wasn't immediately given full satisfaction he would forward to Rome a lengthy memorandum which he has ready. It's upsetting! He wants to repeat the Father Captier scandal. I wrote a kind letter to calm him down, but I am sure I was only wasting my time since Fr. Deidier wrote to me this evening telling me that Fr. Albert had sent him his resignation as assistant on his council. How will all this turn out? Tristis est anima mea usque ad mortem. Let us pray earnestly, and you, my friend, pray a lot for me.

If there is anything which Bishop de Luca brings to your attention, keep me informed.

Dear Father,

1. I am very pleased to be informed that Bishop de Luca has made a decision that when the Assistants are away they have, by indult, a deliberative vote; this decision greatly pleases me.
2. I am delighted to gather that you have been invited to the celebrations at Monserrat (in Catalonia, northwest of Barcelona, a centre of pilgrimage to the Black Madonna at the 9th century Benedictine Abbey).
3. I share your view, and we must not turn down the mission we are offered in Spain and wait on before accepting it. When you go to Madrid you will see for yourself.
4. Father Papin was put forward to preach in Lent at Chambéry in the Church of Our Lady, but Father Guyot did not approve, and he doesn't think that Fr. Lavialle should go there either(!). The Arles house, to whom I made the suggestion, cannot help. The parish priest is very disappointed. Could you not, yourself, do something about it, at least during the last 3 or 4 weeks?
5. Has Monsignor Druon finally arrived in Rome?
6. I am sending on by post a new corrected and revised proof. Send me as soon as possible your corrections and observations, together with anything you add on, etc. I shall send back a paged proof for submission to some theologian, and this would be ideal. I am keen on adding a new chapter entitled: Mary Mother of mankind, showing that this dignity which gives to Mary rights and duties demands, calls for, in keeping with her status as the Mother of God, the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Mary, as Mother of mankind, must come to its aid; it is appropriate that she should have this efficaciousness. The title Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is expressive of this role, Mankind, being unhappy, etc., can have recourse to its Mother, and has the right to be succoured, and the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart engages their confidence! What then do you think of the foregoing views? Let me have yours, and develop them. You will be doing me a service. I believe that with all of this the little work will be completed.

Otherwise, nothing new here. Cheerio, dear friend.

Go to meet him at the station and it will greatly please him. He is delighted that Father Laurençon will no longer be at Saint-Louis; he didn't know this.

He told me that the Archbishop of Bourges will leave for Rome on the 28th of this month and stay there two months. That's good news for us. I don't wish to say anymore about Fr. Albert. If there is anything new, I shall let you know.

L 18781224

Issoudun, December 24, 1878

Dear Father,

Happy Christmas.

1. Brothers Casas and Balzer have been ordained priests, Thomas and Véron deacons, and Brother Legros to minor orders.

2. Mr. Vuillaume sent me a telegram asking for money. The Archbishop of Bourges, who leaves for Rome on the 28th of this month, will take 12 or 15,000 francs with him (31,830 or 39,789 euros, roughly). It seems to me that the workers could well wait another week. Money is not so quickly come upon. It comes in very slowly and there's barely enough for the normal needs of our houses. Here is 15,000 francs which I have got together; it is a lot, perhaps more than we can afford. If we are not careful, the Rome house will ruin us and cause us to collapse financially; it is inevitable. It's fine to ask for money, but one must find out if there is any and if it can be made available. Ask Mr. Carimini and Mr. Vuillaume to stop the work as soon as they have paid out the money about to be taken out by the Archbishop. They can begin work again if you bring back money from Spain. We still owe 23,000 francs (61,000 euros) or, perhaps 25,000 francs (66,315 euros). Mr. Merklin is asking me to settle this account. We still owe 10,000 francs towards a subscription for our parish church, 2,000 francs to Mr. Blondin in Tours for paintings, and all the workers at the end of the year. It is a frightful prospect! And where can one come by money? I really don't know.

Add to all that the daily cost of our houses at Issoudun, Chezal-Benoît, Saint-Gérard, Rome, all of which have to be met by the Mother House. It makes me despair. A lot of people are writing to us saying that they do not want to renew their subscription to the Annals because of the delay which happens so often in the delivery of our Annals. I foresaw a quite considerable drop in subscriptions for the year 1878. Every effort must be made to see to it that our Annals arrive at their destination by the first of each month just like the Messenger of the Sacred Heart. It would be better to take articles from Our Lady (magazine) or from elsewhere in time than to put ourselves in the way, by these delays, of upsetting our subscribers whose complaints are so incessant. It's a question of life or death.

4. The parish priest of Notre Dame, Chambéry, wants three weekly sermons throughout the six weeks of Lent. I don't know what to do. Given the importance of our interests in Rome, you cannot leave the city for 6 weeks, with the Archbishop of Bourges and Bishop Mermillod also there. Their presence and your own could be very helpful to us and bring our issues to a satisfactory solution.

Dear Father,

I have arrived back from Bourges. I saw the Archbishop who was unbelievably kind as ever. His Grace will arrive in Rome next Tuesday, New Year's Eve, at 1.30am. I gave him 15,000 francs for you (roughly 39,789 euros). With discount this comes close to 16,000 liras at your disposal. When this sum of money is paid out we shall see what is left over and can be lodged for us; we shall advise you.

The Archbishop does not want to stay more than 3 weeks in Rome. He says that it is absolutely necessary for him to be in Paris for the 25th of January. It really is very little (time). If the nave is ready and you could open the church while the Archbishop is there, that would be marvellous. You will have to see for yourself! Oh! If His Grace could get permission from the Cardinal Vicar for our statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, at present with the Trappist fathers, to be installed at St. James of the Spanish, that would be very appropriate. Make every effort to bring this about.

It seems to me that it will be out of the question for you to leave Rome while the Archbishop is there. What do you think? You could perhaps ask the Marseilles parish priest to postpone the retreat for another time or write immediately asking Father Deidier to replace you. He will willingly do it; you can go there another time. You could perhaps come to Issoudun at the time the Archbishop is returning if matters are taken care of. And the Chambéry Lenten mission. With the Archbishop no longer in Rome, could you preach it? I think that it shouldn't be too tiring for you! New stories are beginning to come in from Arles. I am sending you on Father Albert's impertinent and haughty letter. He says that he has informed Rome (the Vatican not the MSC house). Keep your eyes open and try to ward off the storm. I am sick with worry. Pray, let us pray. All good wishes to our dear confrères.

What you do will be satisfactorily carried out since I am aware that you never sacrifice the general good in favour of the particular. Come to an understanding with the Archbishop of Bourges and Monsignor Druon about helping out effectively if needed when you are away. If my presence in Rome was judged necessary, write to me. I would make every effort to get there. While you are in Marseilles, I shall try to get to Arles and from there go on to meet you and have a chat with you. After your Retreat are you returning to Rome immediately if it is likely that the Archbishop is still there? If not you could come to Issoudun. 2. The release from vows of Fr. Captier being in the hands of the Archbishop of Bourges, and with Fr. Dear Father,

I am very anxious that our business in Rome should be settled. When does your Retreat in Marseilles end? On what date is the Archbishop of Bourges leaving Rome? In returning straight to Rome, will the Archbishop be still there? Your presence in Rome before the Archbishop leaves is necessary or at least very useful in activating or completing matters! If the answer is in the negative you could come and spend some days here in Issoudun, or it might be better if I went to Arles and Marseilles to see you and discuss matters with you. I shall bring along 10,000 francs for you to finish the work on St. James of the Spanish (roughly 26,520 euros). Fr. Deidier does not seem very keen on my going to Arles where disorder and divisions are prevailing. The good Father tells me that Fr. Piperon's presence lessened his authority and that it would be the same if I were to go there. We are not in agreement with him. My purpose in going to Arles would be to draw Fr. Albert towards making a decision himself to leave the Society, and promising him that I would approach the Archbishop of Bourges on his behalf to support him in dealing with the Bishop of whatsoever diocese he chooses.

Fr. Albert complains that Fr. Deidier acts without consulting his Council, does things, leaves over doing things, without consulting his Council; and the Rule is not followed, etc.

Please convey my good wishes to the good sisters and priests of Marseilles whom I know.

Cheerio, Father.

NB: Fr. Papin went on a month's retreat over Christmas at St. Gérard. He has accepted this imposition very well. He must inform us about his willingness to take vows for 3 years. Dear Father,

It isn't possible for me to go to Rome. We shall discuss all these issues which concern me so much. We do not see, my confrères and myself, what concessions we should have to make to the Scalsis. If it is the acquisition of their work and indemnifying them, let it be so; we undertake that most willingly. In order to have control over our Association we have made an offering of 200,000 francs (530,500 euros roughly) in purchasing St. James of the Spanish (church). I believe that it is worthwhile and should weigh in the balance and count with the Cardinal Vicar. Moreover, we have always been assured that the decision made by Madame de Mens would hold also for us. Let's wait and see. One cannot have two weights and measures.

The Chambéry Lent (mission) greatly embarrasses me. We promised him and the Notre Dame parish priest has nobody. He asked to find at least some worthwhile preachers. Try in Marseilles or among your acquaintances if you can find someone for him (the parish priest).

Fr. Ramot has written to us that he is happy with Fr. Papin whom he finds well disposed to him, and is getting along very well with his month's retreat. For all these reasons he supports his being accepted for vows of three years' duration. I do not see any problem in admitting him and if, during this period, we are not happy with him we shall always have the option of saying goodbye to him.

I want you to get it before you leave, and you will at least have time to correct it on your journey. If you cannot deal with it, let me know because then I shall not be counting on you to do it. Start thinking already about the March Annals so that we shall be ready in time. I haven't yet received the telegram from you about the Archbishop and our Rome issues. I am awaiting it. Tomorrow, my friend, I shall send on to Rome the letter you requested. I hope that the Sacred Heart, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph will look after our interests in the best possible way. Do not worry. That which you undertake will be well done and ratified by all, I promise you. I am pleased to note that the Arles issues have been solved. It is a great worry to have over. Ask in particular Fr. Dear Father,

We are delighted that you are about to undertake the Spanish journey to ensure a successful restoration of the Church of St. James of the Spanish in Rome which we take on in accordance with the wishes of our Holy Father the Pope and which you have pursued with so much dedication on behalf of our Congregation.

We have made great sacrifices to preserve this ancient church from inevitable secular use in buying it with the help of the Holy Father. Then we began the reconstruction at great cost, repairing a side aisle to promote devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, but it is quite impossible for us to proceed further with the work unless the faithful come to our aid. Our undertaking should greatly interest the Spaniards who are so devoted to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and St. James the Apostle. We have then the greatest expectation that this very Catholic country will welcome you sympathetically and make available some stones towards the restoration of a Spanish monument in the Eternal City. With this hope we entreat the Sacred Heart of Jesus, through the intercession of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and the glorious Apostle, St. James, to bestow abundant blessings on you and your journey.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

I repeat again, Father, my best wishes. I have spoken about dear Fr. Miniot. We have in the novitiate a young priest from Nancy, Fr. Chatelat, who is about to end his three months (training). He is a priest of quality both as to virtue and intelligence. He would very much like, if we think it appropriate, to go to Rome for studies and take the requisite degrees so that he could be of benefit later to the Society. Try to get Fr. Miniot to look for a change and we could make him socius at Saint-Gérard, and Fr. Chatelat should take his place in Rome.

Cheerio, my friend. My regards and thanks to the Archbishop of Bourges and Monsignor Druon, etc., etc.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Father,

1. We fully approve of the union project. I am returning the document to you.
2. I am sending on the letters of the worthy priest who is in the Novitiate. I believe that he could advantageously replace dear Fr. Miniot if you so wished it. Try to get Fr. Miniot himself to ask for a change.
3. The dear and well regarded Fr. Deidier is disheartened, so Fr Navarre writes to me confidentially. He doesn't see himself any longer as Superior in face of Fr. Albert's demands, who, so it appears, continues unchecked. It is agreed that if Fr. Albert is not happy, the Archbishop of Bourges will try to place him without commotion in another diocese. It is then only a matter of time. But why is dear Fr. Deidier so discouraged? I wrote him a kind letter full of faith in, and regard for, him to try and boost his morale. Let him do his best.
4. What about the Lenten mission at Chambéry; have you found anybody; what can be done?
5. I don't know what Fr. Guyot has against Fr. Papin. He says that he will make known his views to you, and says that Fr. Ramot shares them. I have asked Fr. Ramot and he has written to say that he will continue to vote for the acceptance of Fr. Papin despite the objections of Fr. Guyot, Fr. Papin accepted very well the postponement of his profession by three months, and I was very impressed by his attitude. I promised him, as you are aware, to the Archbishop of Bourges for Lent. We shall see what observations will be forwarded to us from Bourges.
6. On Wednesday I shall forward another more complete and corrected proof for "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Better Known". You will study it and send on your comments to me.

Cheerio, dear friend. How much I miss you here. Good wishes to Father Miniot. His mother is well. Regards to everybody.

Dear Father,

At Marseilles I discussed Fr. Papin with you for the Lenten preaching in Bourges since his acceptance was postponed for three months. Like myself you saw in this a double advantage: a, that of pleasing the Archbishop, and b, evaluating Fr. Papin who would be under the scrutiny of the Archbishop and the leading vicar generals who could give us their views on him and his style of preaching. Fathers Piperon and Morisseau to whom I mentioned this initiative on my return (from Marseilles) totally approved of it. I saw Fr. Papin about this and he accepted. It seems to me that it would be awkward to withhold from Fr. Papin what was promised to him.

2. As soon as your presence in Rome is no longer so imperative, come to Issoudun to spend as long as possible with us before you go to Spain. Your presence here among us is very desirable for us. Re-write the Spanish letter as you wish. You have our full endorsement.

3. I am sending you on a more complete proof of "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Better Known". I have already presented it to our Issoudun, Arles, Saint-Gérard confrères; they consider it a very serious work, compelling, doctrinally correct, and very worthwhile for us. As soon as you have made your comments known to me, I intend to accompany the proof with the correction pages, and then submit the work to the professors at the Bourges major seminary and to the Archbishop who will have it officially considered. Then if the reports are favourable, and the Archbishop, as I hope, approves, I shall make a certain number of copies which would be sent to the bishops if we think it opportune. Then, much later, if it is thought to be worthwhile, we might get a brief from the Holy See. By so acting I do not think any compromise is being made. Tomorrow, the feast of St. Francis de Sales, is a lovely day for us.

The unification project for the two Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Associations, Issoudun, Rome.

D 18790131

Invited by His Eminence the Cardinal Vicar to present our thinking on the kind of union to be set up between the two associations we humbly present the following proposals after the example of that proposed by pontifical brief on August 17, 1877 and in a circular letter from the Vicar General of the Dominicans, November 15, that same year, concerning the two Rosary associations, the living Rosary and the holy Rosary, becoming one and the same Archconfraternity under the direction of the Order of Saint Dominic.

Article I

The Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, at present established at Saint Andrea-della-Vale (church) in Rome, and which owes its foundation to that of Issoudun, becomes transferred with all its privileges, rights and indulgences to the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Piazza Navona under the specific direction of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, constituting with the Issoudun Association one and the same Archconfraternity.

Article II

The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, will undertake responsibility for the direction of the Roman Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and all that is involved in the material and spiritual administration of the work.

Article III

The picture of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart venerated in the Church of Saint Andrea-della-Vale can remain there in keeping with the devotion of which it is the centre. The Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, being set up in the church of the Issoudun Missionaries of the Sacred Heart at Piazza Navona, will reserve its rights of patronage over the centre of the Association at Saint Andrea-della-Vale as well as all the others.

Article IV

All the directors, promoters, female, male, at present working in Rome and elsewhere are confirmed for life in their tasks under the direction of the Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart who alone in the future will either himself or through his delegates, be new directors or promoters under the distinguished patronage of His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges and His Eminence Cardinal Monaco la Valletta, the Pope's Vicar.

We approve wholeheartedly this unifying project and we very much wish that it will come about.

Dear Father,

I have sent on to the Archbishop your letter together with the appeal and the decree of Madame de Mens. It is very good. I am amazed that Bishop Panici, after all his promises, refuses to grant us what he has given to Madame de Mens. The Pope will be more kind! Try not to accept definitively being ordinary confessor to the Sisters. It is a constraint, and you would no longer be free to absent yourself. And we would often need you in France for a variety of circumstances. This responsibility would keep you in Rome. Moreover, you will have to go to Spain and France. How could you do so in these circumstances? Make all these reasons clear to the Cardinal Vicar. He could easily replace you with Father Miniot, and that would be preferable. Try to arrange it in this way. I am waiting for the corrected proofs of "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart". I intend to ask Fr. Marie to write an article on St. Joseph.

The lands at Saint-Gérard.

At this meeting a letter from Fr. Chappel on improvements and what to grow on the Saint-Gérard land was considered. The Saint-Gérard priests having expressed the wish to look after the property themselves, the Council is of the view that it is more in keeping with the Constitutions and the Congregation's ethos to rent out the land either at an agreed price, or in appropriating financially to ourselves half the produce from the crops. Fr. Chappel had a letter sent to him conveying this decision.

Proposal to the Council from the Prefect of Propaganda about a mission in Auckland.

1. At this meeting the Very Rev. Fr. Superior presented a letter from Fr. Jouët in which he gave notice of a proposal from His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni, Prefect of Propaganda, by letter and a conversation which followed with the Eminent Cardinal about a mission to the Auckland Islands (sic) in Oceania. The Cardinal would like to grant this mission to the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and make the choice from among us of an Apostolic Vicar. It was decided to make a Novena in all the Society's houses before making a decision on this issue.

Proposal to buy the pavement in front of the Church of St. James.

2. Another letter from Mr. Vuillaume was read in which he spoke of the intention of the Spanish Administrators to sell the pavement outside the church in Piazza Navona. It was agreed that if the price of the pavement did not mount above two or three thousand francs, and having consulted the Cardinal Vicar, this acquisition being worthwhile, the purchase could go ahead.

Issoudun, February 16, 1879

Dear Father,

1. I would be very keen to accept the Auckland Islands mission under the conditions made available to us by Cardinal Simeoni. Try and get as many documents as you can which would inform us about the matter. According to the geography of the place the climate in these islands is pleasant, healthy; the soil is fertile; the natives are intelligent and easy to lead. There are about 82,000 indigenous. Is this true? How many diocesan priests in the place? Where do they come from? What is the language of the country – English is very likely the official language? Where should we embark? How far is it? Is the journey paid for? What are the geographical connections? The Antipodes for France or Belgium! If the Council agrees to this, I shall offer two suggestions. Let me know what you think. I would suggest Fr. Durin, who already knows English, as Apostolic Vicar, with Brother Giraud as his companion. Fr. Ariens would become Superior of Watertown, and another priest would have to be sent to him. Or, alternatively, and what might, perhaps, be better, I suggest that Fr. Maillard, who is in very good health, should be Vicar Apostolic; he is a man of piety, wise, prudent, committed; moreover, he is calm and well disposed. I would have Father Casas and Brother Giraud accompanying him. To replace him at the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) I would send the priest from the Nancy, about whom I have written to you, or Brother Barral. One could have Fr. Maillard accompanied by one or two scholastics as catechists who would become priests in a couple of years. We are about to have a Novena in the different houses relative to this important matter.

2. Father Piperon will reply to Mr. Vuillaume about the purchase of the pavement, and about consulting the Cardinal Vicar and Cardinal Nina on the desirability of this acquisition. If in the affirmative, the price should be kept to a sum from 2 to 4,000 francs (5,300-10,605 euros); no going beyond this.

3. I forwarded to the Archbishop the appeal to the Pope to obtain the equivalent of Madame de Mens' from him. The Archbishop must have sent it on directly to you because I saw nothing.

4. Your choice of chandelier is very good. Do what you think best, but do not get into debt. We are weighed down with debts.

5. The Vincent de Paul Sisters have not acted wisely in having the older style Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statue removed from their chapel. I do not think that doing so will bring them happiness.

6. Yes, Fr. Guyot's indult should be renewed for Saint Gérard, not for Arles.

7. The Archbishop has agreed that the inauguration ceremony for the organs should take place on May 31, but that is Saturday, the eve of Pentecost, and it isn't possible then to have it on this date. I wrote to the Archbishop asking him to pick another day, the Tuesday of Pentecost week or another. I await his reply.

8. I am very pleased with Brothers Carrière and Klotz's examination results. Convey to them my congratulations and tell them that I am pleased to have their letter.
9. Jules Vandel's health worries me. Warn him and advise him firmly not to be careless about his health.
10. I received your proofs and comments. Many thanks. My regards to dear Fr. Miniot and all our young men.

Please make any corrections, changes, additions or withdrawals such as you would wish in this same proof I am sending on to you. I shall have more; but in this way I shall get to know your thinking better.

We shall consider later if it should be presented to the public. Send me your corrections as soon as possible. Would Father Lavialle in your opinion be acceptable as Prefect Apostolic? Who would you suggest? The 31st of May is Pentecost Eve. On what day should we have the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart? Would Monday or Tuesday after Trinity Sunday be all right with you? And will it be possible for us to have Bishop Mermillod?

Dear Father,

Thanks for your kind letters.

1. The corridor offers parallel and complete unity with the overall construction. Meanwhile do what seems to you best. If you think it appropriate, build a second room for visitors beside the dormitory on the second floor, above the parlours. The dormitory is too lengthy otherwise. You are a member of the Council, my friend; you have a vote like ourselves and you can and should intervene when things, in your view, are not going the way they should. Speak firmly to these gentlemen. We must be concerned about economies. Halt Mr. Carimini where superfluous expenses and what is luxurious become an issue. Hold him back. You have every right.

2. I don't understand the hesitancy we are experiencing about that which was given to Madame de Mens when there was such a beautiful plea by the Archbishop. It is not right to live at the expense of another. The Theatine Fathers have no right to hold on to something which doesn't belong to them. After so many promises, it is sad to find ourselves no further forward at this moment.

3. As for the new statue, it is best to put it in your church until things are otherwise arranged. We shall see later. Are not those people doing an injustice to the memory of Pius IX; wanting to condemn a statue which the great Pontiff crowned after admiring the copy, accepting and blessing the presentation? It is truly baffling!

4. Thanks for your information about the Auckland Islands. Let us pray, and then we shall see.

Dear Father,

See if you can return without too much trouble Fr. Piperon's letter to Mr. Carimini. Fr. Piperon forgot to mention to Mr. Carimini, in order to avoid displeasing him in fact, to leave in place the supporting girders which he had already put up (in Piazza Navona) for the pillars and to continue using bricks, because the difference is no more than 450 francs (1,190 euros roughly). We are very willing to meet this excess charge. But everything else – cornices, pillars, the frames of doors and windows, etc. – must be in brick and stucco.

Father Morisseau is very concerned about the financial cost of the Auckland mission. He is convinced that we shall have to lay out a considerable amount of money for the upkeep of the missionaries, for their work and travel. Try and find out and see if you can reassure him on this issue.

Chevalier added to this letter of Piperon's to Jouët some remarks at the end.

Issoudun, February 28, 1879

Dear Father,

The Very Reverend Father Superior handed on your letters to us, that from Fr. Miniot and the one from Mr. Vuillaume.

I am forwarding to you our reply to Mr. Vuillaume, and a note for Fr. Miniot. Read both of them and see what is to be done. I shall enclose a letter for Mr. Carimini if I have time, and if not I shall send it to you this evening. It goes without saying that you are a Council member and must be listened to; you have the same role as ourselves. You will find enclosed in this envelope your letter to Cardinal Simeoni with changes. The remarks on your letter and my observations will make clear to you where you should insert these two changes. I left out one page of your letter. You will see about replacing it with the second note, and accompany the wording with S.V.P.

Here then is our thinking as we return these changes to you. It was thought that the latter part of your letter changed too much the earlier section and was too readily an acceptance. That then is the reason why it was thought necessary to change it. We really have nobody ready for this mission! If I were thirty years of age I would want to go already today! I would be drawn to accompany the chosen confrère if I were accepted. It is very kind of you to say that I would be suitable. Hold on, let us come to an understanding: if you can arrange it that I can, in six months, come by the knowledge necessary for this mission, and the aptitude to learn a foreign language in this period of time, a miracle will have taken place. If you arrange this, I say 'Yes' to everything. If not, well then, No! It occurs to me that the whole world would laugh somewhat at our expense if one followed your proposal with regard to myself. Let us leave aside my personal situation and come to something serious.

You will find two thousand francs in this envelope. According to Mr. Vuillaume's statements 60,000 more francs are urgently required. We have only a little more than eighteen months to find this sum. We are already in debt, besides the pontifical contribution, for the money last sent on to you. We are faced with some debts here also, and more to come. It is, accordingly, necessary to get by with all possible economies and with care.

If only we had been granted what is our rights, the Association. If that were to happen, let this thought be foremost. Despite these difficult times, we shall go forward more courageously. I sympathize with you, Father, in the middle of all your problems, your being made weary and bothered by the Rome Association. Our Lady, it has to be said, crucifies you not at all badly. If she wants us to go to Auckland, to make the Sacred Heart loved and spread devotion to her, may she achieve complete victory for us, and a mission area.

We pray and shall continue to pray for all these intentions. Believe me, dear Father, wholly yours in the Heart of Jesus.

Ch. Píperon, MisduSC, Vic.

If some thing does not seem to be quite right in my letters, return them to me with your comments before giving the letters to Mr. Carimini and Mr. Vuillaume. This has always been my aim, but I addressed them to you. Or, if you think best, convey yourself to these gentlemen the gist of the letters.

Dear Friend,

Fr. Píperon and yours truly are in favour of the proposed missionary undertaking (that of Auckland, New Zealand – see above). I can see great advantages, also Fr. Deidier (then in charge at Arles). Write to Fr. Guyot, try to persuade him also and everything will be moving favourably. Present several proposals, variations, to Fr. Guyot. Fr. Morisseau is opposed. If we refuse I do not think we shall make the Cardinals and Pope displeased. If Cardinal Simeoni were to get the Pope's approval for settling immediately the issues concerning the Association, I believe that the mission would be taken on, especially if we were allowed two years to get ready.

Cheerio. Wholly yours.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

My Dear Child,

I am delighted to become aware of the zeal which fires you for the missions in Australia, and I hope that one day you will be a worthy Missionary of the Sacred Heart in those far away lands. But he who seeks the end seeks the means. The missions require from those who commit themselves preparatory studies and more weighty study. The missionary often comes across in his ministry those who preach (teach) erroneously and whose views must be refuted with convincing arguments. One must study in a committed fashion at the Petite Oeuvre to prepare yourself for the work of the apostolate.

I hope that since you have before your eyes the thought of the missions you will leave nothing to be desired in terms of application and success. Work hard; the Sacred Heart will bless your efforts and you can become a person qualified to save souls.

Dear Father,

1. You are right: leave until later the office of the Sacred Heart of Mary, and do not look for anything from the Congregation of Rites for the time being.
2. Finish off that part of the wall at Piazza Navona corresponding to the nave which will be opened for worship with the modifications or simplifications which you refer to in your latest letter. One has, in fact, to open the church as soon as possible for public worship. At the same time I don't know what we can do to find the money; short of borrowing, I fear that we can no longer meet our obligations.

3. The behaviour of the Congregation of Indulgences, what the Cardinal Vicar and the Pope hold out with regard to our Association, following on what has been agreed on for Madame de Mens, is altogether a mystery to me which I find quite staggering. Nevertheless one must continue to hope. Do not get too much worked up! Look after your health and take good care of yourself.

4. Father Morisseau has sent you a letter with 2,000 francs (roughly 5,300 euros) for St. James the Spanish (church). Have you received it? If Bishop Mercurelli could bring Fr. Guyot around to the side of the (New Zealand) mission, all would be well, but...

Dear Father,

1. When are we going to be delivered from our unfortunate problems with the Association? Your letter this a.m. makes clear that the issues are more problematic than ever with the outcome adjourned indefinitely. I repeat to you what I said before: "It is an unfathomable mystery." To whom can one liken oneself? Who to trust? What now of the promises? Where's justice and truth? Oh how I sympathize with you! I share your suffering over this state of affairs! Let us, therefore, storm heaven! And may our Lady of the Sacred Heart support our cause... Exurge Domine! And may St. Joseph come to our aid!

Write, in consequence, to the Archbishop of Bourges and bring him up to date on all that's going on. There is no word left to characterize this kind of behaviour. The activities of the Marquess Serlupi are praiseworthy, that is if she is sincere. Try through a number of visits to bring her around to our position. I shall address a word of thanks to her; let me know if you think it appropriate to do so.

2. I am going to send on the statue to you – the decorated new-style one which has been in the Archbishop's room. This statue is, I believe, 1 metre 20 centimetres in height. I don't think Daniel has any bigger. What do you think? An immediate reply. I believe that later on the statue issue will work out in our favour. In the meantime let us place the new model of the statue in our church because Rome wishes it so.

3. Yes, hurry up with the church's opening because the Cardinal Vicar thinks it is very necessary for a good outcome to our problem (concerning the Association).

4. You have done well to replace the chandeliers with the lovely chalice you spoke about. I approve all you have suggested to me.

5. Father Morisseau was given responsibility, quite some time ago, to send you a reply that we are pleased to accept the Italian priest because he had good recommendations. You may then pass on this decision to him and present him with our Constitutions.

6. Brother Lecorre is near his end at Arles (he would die there just over a month later, April 19, 1879). As for Brother Klotz I fear the same outcome for him. Let us not send anybody to Rome except solid young men. What expense, losses, concerns! If there are serious concerns about his health, he should be sent back to a warm climate. You may, appropriately, put him forward for minor orders if you think it opportune.

7. Fr. Captier has been accepted for the diocese of Autun; he is to become a teacher at the ecclesiastical college in Paray-le-Monial, and he is very pleased.

8. On the Tuesday after Trinity (Sunday), June 10, the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will be celebrated, together with the inauguration of our organs. Fr. Monsablé (wording uncertain) could not accept the invitation. I wrote to Fr. Mathieu, and this worthy man agreed, but he has written to his superiors asking their permission. The reply, so I hope, will be in the affirmative.

9. Since our Novena for the Auckland mission ends on the feast of St. Joseph, I shall be grateful to you if you let me know your Council's decision. A. Can the Society take on this mission? If the answer is in the affirmative, present the reasons for the decision and the advantages which could accrue. B. Suggest those who might be nominated as Apostolic Vicars so that the Holy See could make a choice. C. Let us know how we could replace whoever will be chosen.

I believe that our confrères would like us to have this mission, Arles and Chezal-Benoît especially so. But we shall have strong opposition from dear Fr. Guyot and good Fr. Morisseau who do not want it under any heading. I have already made you aware of the threats from our good Saint-Gérard confrère (Guyot). Fr. Piperon wrote asking him to come to Issoudun next week to discuss this serious issue in Council. Fr. Guyot in his reply made known the reason for his opposition: it is that he has no faith in you in matters of administration and still less in me (!). He says, candidly, that he asks himself when I put a proposal before the Council if he should not always take the opposite point of view in order to get at the truth (!). There's the man (as he is)... He alone is infallible and has the right to impose his views because he sees things more clearly than the others, since the truth is always on his side. I shall write down his words and you can judge for yourself. "The lack of sincerity on the part of the Rev. Fr. Superior in administrative matters totally turns me off. My regard for him is hampered by a lack of confidence. Too many instances do not give me reason to hope that openness on a few occasions can solve the problem. I have held out against all I have heard over the past 6 or 7 years. I could not hold out against all that has happened before my very eyes over a number of years. It seems to me that I shall never have the possibility of disagreeing when I am obliged in dealing with an issue to think it should be black and I am told to say that it is white." What are these facts? I should like to know more about them. One of the biggest is undoubtedly the issue of the Church of St. James of the Spanish...

See my dear friend how I am judged, appreciated, after 28 years of a life of devotedness, sacrifice, bitter experiences of all kinds. The foundation of our dear little Society, the approval of our Constitutions, the building of our church and house, the coming into existence of the Association of Our Lady, the tremendous Petite Oeuvre, our scholasticate in Rome, etc. Without any debts, with 100,000 (francs, roughly 265,260 euros) in place within the State (country)... All this is not meagre. Let it not be said that I was piling up ruins... Is it possible to push any further the limits of impertinence, insolence, scorn? I am no longer amazed by the systematic opposition of this dearly loved confrère. I suffer all of it in silence. I shall not justify myself. I place all this bitterness at the foot of the Cross where I should be crucified for my sins a thousand times. I offer all this to the Lord for the success of our works and I am happy to say: Bonum mihi, Domine, quia humiliasti me...

Cheerio, dear Father.

Issoudun, March 16, 1879

Madame Marchioness,

The Reverend Father Jouët, our Procurator General in Rome, mentioned to me an interesting conversation he had with you. I thank you most appreciatively, Madame Marchioness, for the interest you have in us. Being on the spot, you are in a position to judge where justice and truth are to be found. I shall presume to draw on your kindness and powerful support for the happy and speedy resolution of an issue which is so very special to us. We shall pray in a special way to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to bestow upon you her kindest blessings.

I have the honour to be, Madame Marchioness, with deepest respect and appreciative regards, your most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, March 23, 1879

Dear Father,

1. The answer to the Auckland mission is very positive at the moment. We shall reply officially to you within a few days to inform you that it is very likely that we shall accept in principle this mission and make it our responsibility. We are only awaiting the Watertown reply. Arles is very supportive and Saint-Gérard (Father Guyot aside) favours acceptance straightaway. Fr. Ramot did very well putting the replies together.

I brought this important issue to the attention of the Archbishop of Bourges. Here is his reply: "In my view it is very difficult to turn down this offer from the Holy See. It is a sign of confidence, and this is good for the future. The only thing is that a little more time is needed. The three names mentioned (those you put forward) would appear to me to be suitable. My hopes are that this matter can go ahead, although there are serious problems at the present moment."

2. I do not think there will be a successful outcome for the Association's problems until a decree addresses the issue. Could we not have it after the 15 days mentioned by Bishop Panici?

3. You yourself should get a statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the new one, from Mr. Daniel. Hurry up! The arms of the Sacred Heart would, it seems to me, go well on the erased (Spanish) escutcheon. As for that of Our Lady we might find it best to have it elsewhere. Mr. Carimini does well to proceed in such a way that later on we might need a gallery leading to our lecture room. As for the two capitals on the stucco columns, since they are highly regarded by Mr. Carimini, and given his knowledge of so many people in Rome, he might try and find someone who could have them done in travertine, with the accompanying cost. We allow him every latitude, for example, with the Cardinal Vicar or someone else. How much more money do you think it will take to have your church open for worship? It is a bottom-less pit! Will it be another 6,000, 10,000 francs? You are aware that short of borrowing we shall end up ruining ourselves (financially). And we have yet to pay 20,000 for our organs and 15,000 to Mr. Letang, the mason at the Sacred Heart, etc. We very much need Spain to help us. As of this moment, I do not see anything coming. At least it is known that we are renovating.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Council Meeting, March 30, 1879

Decisions about different work in Rome.

This Council meeting discussed the Rome house and the construction work at St. James. The purchase of the ceramics necessary for the floor-tiling of the dwelling-house was authorized, given that the opportunity presented itself of buying the tiles in Marseilles at 27 francs instead of 35 francs a thousand, the normal price. It was decided that there would be cast columns in place of cement pillars to support the staircase landing, and that ordinary glass would be used for the windows in Piazza Sapienza which can be frosted if necessary by a coating of paint.

Called to Minor Orders.

There followed Brother Hartzler's acceptance for Minor Orders, Brothers Gérard, Tréand, Verjus, Roux, Brunet acceptance for Tonsure. If the Archbishop can carry out the ordinations in the Basilica, it will be placed at His Grace's disposal; if not the ordinations will be held over until the holidays.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

L 18790331

Issoudun, March 31, 1879

Dear Father,

I write in haste to you.

1. Buy the Marseilles tiles if you think it worthwhile.
2. The windows will be in square-shaped glass on the Piazza Sapienza side, not in round-shaped glass encased in lead. We shall see later.
3. I shall send on the exact measure and precise shape of the niche for Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. These would be the same as for St. Joseph if your statue is as big as his, and accordingly the niche would be the same as his. If the day arrived from on high, it would be so much better.

4. We need to send you the money for Saturday. We shall consider the other questions brought up by Mr. Vuillaume before answering.

5. For the staircase, cast columns would be preferable to ones in cement. And from the bottom to the top the staircase work should be carried out in the most simple and economic way. It is agreed. No elevator.

Other issues.

1. We are of a mind here to admit Fr. Papin to vows, his probation time ended, because he has given no reason for concern, put all his energy into checking the faults which had been brought to his notice and proved himself by his preaching. In these last weeks his talks have been truly deserving of the highest praise for solidity, clarity and logical exposition. Please let us have your views.

2. Fr. Durin wants Brother Charles called to vows. He is very pleased with him. His thinking is that he should be asked to renew his vows after three years. What do you feel about this?

3. Brother Romain is also due to renew his vows this year. There is nothing serious to be held against him. May we have your view on this also?

Be so kind to tell Fr. Miniot that his mother keeps well and that I most wholeheartedly send good wishes to him and also to our dear brother scholastics, and as for yourself, dear Father, believe me to be always yours most devotedly in the Sacred Heart.

Ch. Piperon, MisduSC.

Chevalier then adds his own letter. Undated.

I have taken your corrections for the Annals to the printer. You forgot to enclose Fr. Durin's letter with your own, having said you would. I don't know anything about what he is looking for from the Congregation. Fr. Morisseau had understood that in demanding an adjournment for Fr. Papin's taking of vows, you were not in any way obviously opposed since you would otherwise have followed on by saying so, like Father Guyot. This, it is likely, explains his remark to Father Guyot. On this issue, my friend, I maintain that our dear Fr. Guyot wishes once more to impose his views advantageously. Fr. Papin only remained 4 or 5 months in the Novitiate. During this time, Father Guyot was away almost all the time, and how then could he have fully assessed the situation? Fr. Ramot who had him all the time under his supervision voted in his favour (for admission to vows). I seem to think that you told me that Fr. Guyot stated the contrary in a letter to you. I wrote again to Father Ramot after Fr. Papin's month's retreat to find out if he had changed his mind about him; his reply was in the affirmative: he would always accept Fr. Papin for vows. Which of the two is deserving of the greater credence?

But this is not all. Fr. Piperon, on the occasion of Fr. Papin's petition for the first time, according to Fr. Ramot's notes and our information, had in Council accepted Fr. Papin to vows. Fr. Guyot, on coming to know this while visiting Issoudun, took Fr. Piperon aside, changed his (Piperon's) mind, and when the second vote was taken Fr. Piperon voted against Fr. Papin. It was at that moment you asked for an adjournment. What do you think of this way of acting (of carrying on)?

We said to Fr. Guyot about a year ago that Fr. Papin is here at Issoudun and we have seen him at work... We are pleased with him. He is dependable, a pleasant confrère, very willing, accepts well advice, reproofs. He is a good worker, very willing, takes to heart any advice given him. He has adapted his preaching style; he is informative and stimulates in a lively way the interest of his audience. For all these reasons we admitted him to vows, but only for three years. We see, thereby, less inconvenience than if he went on his way, and we would always be in a situation where we could disengage from him without recourse to Rome. Besides, he has agreed to teach if his Superiors consider it opportune. He withdrew without complaining from preaching during Lent at Bourges where a Dominican took over and also from Chambéry where Fr. Laviolle preached. He agreed to do that at Issoudun, although he had already preached there for the month of Mary (May) and in Advent when he drew many people. Despite all these positive reasons, Fr. Guyot always remains negative, opposed. As if not quite satisfied with this systematic opposition, he writes to you to try to make you, no doubt, share his view in order to make his victory complete since it is you who keeps the whole affair unresolved. Father, dear, you are by now fully informed; let me know, then, in your next letter if you are for or against the acceptance of Fr. Papin who will be receiving the votes of Fr. Morisseau, Piperon and myself.

We come now to consider the Fr. Durin issue. I am sorry that Fr. Miniot did not return that notorious letter to you. It is very likely that I didn't read it since normally I send all my letters sealed to you; in any event it would have less affected me than what you have to tell me today.

I know all about dear Fr. Durin... 1. Fr. Durin made some serious mistakes at Watertown which you did not know about because you were in Rome; 2. he behaved like a proper despot with his confrères brushing aside the rules in several instances; 3. he bought property and got himself into debt despite, and contrary to, our refusal; 4. he sold the Canadian parish church in Watertown despite the opposition of Fr. Chappel and without discussing it with us; 5. he built, contrary to our wishes, a new parochial church which is used as the community, MSC, chapel and as such it is very inconvenient! He built this parish church on ground which I gather is crossed by a street. This is unforgivable rashness. We haven't let up making it clear to him that this church was badly sited, that he had no right to act in this way, that he compromised the interests of our Watertown undertaking, that he was drawing on himself additional debts, and creating a quagmire of problems for the future, etc., etc. It was all to no avail.

This is what gave rise to harsh letters from Issoudun. Nothing happened as a result; he acted as he wished, anyway. And now what do I get today? Exactly as I had foreseen, what had been repeatedly said to Fr. Durin. You can judge for yourself from the enclosed letter.

Fr. Durin carefully saw to it that he would write no letter of bitter complaints to Issoudun which knew all about his behaviour. He preferred to write to you hoping, no doubt, to set about getting support. Very well then! Suppose it was Fr. Guyot who was in your place (as recipient) or someone else who would not be as prudent as you are with your good attitude and unlimited devotedness to the Society, then what damage might not come about from that type of shared confidences? I am not in any way against the Assistants receiving and writing letters which the Superior General hasn't the right to open; far from it. Since this year after our September feasts a General Chapter must be held according to our Constitution. I shall freely put forward this proposal if it is considered helpful for the well-being of the Society. Fr. Durin's three years as Superior finishes at the end of this month. Give him your vote for his reappointment. Here we cannot see anyone else for the time being who can replace him; despite his drawbacks he has good qualities. I am sending on a letter to you from the parish priest of St. Thomas, Turin; send him a word in reply as you understand the matter; it is a delicate issue.

The inauguration of the organs is due to take place on Tuesday June 10 coinciding with the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I hope you will be here. Oh my friend, I greatly miss you! And have the issues concerning the Association been sorted out? The fortnight sought by Bishop Panici has passed.

Issoudun, April 8, 1879

Dear Father,

The Council will not meet until Sunday or toward the end of this week to deliberate on the vows of Father Papin and the others. (It met on April 14, Chevalier, Piperon, Morisseau, present. Jouët wrote by letter in favour of Papin's acceptance for vows.) I shall immediately inform you and return to you those votes (the members cast) you were looking for. I shall look after them here. You can be assured of my discretion. Certainly it is not I who would place obstacles in the way of understanding (entente) and friendliness. I make, and will continue to do so, quite enough sacrifices each day in this regard. I am anxious to see this mutual respect present as much as possible, especially if it isn't there any longer.

You should have, by now, your answer to Mr. Vuillaume's requirements. Are you not doing well from the exchange rate with regard to the money we are sending on to you for the Church of St. James of the Spanish? How much is the exchange rate today? 8 or 10%? Neither correspondence, memoranda or accounts seem to take this advantage into consideration. It should count in what is given and what is gained. Pay close attention to this.

Do not make yourself ill, I beg you... Place yourself, if you can, above your emotions. You should in no way be at their mercy. Finally I very much hope that we shall succeed by triumphing over Bishop Panici (the Association issue). You must be in Issoudun for the 10th of June. And even before that, if you can; you didn't mention anything about this. You could perhaps bring Brother Barral with you, or send him on before you if you think it appropriate, or give him permission to go home. Then he would stop over here in coming to Issoudun. You are totally free to make whatever arrangements. I share your views about this dear boy. He greatly needs to revitalize himself in the religious virtues before he is ordained priest.

Barral was ordained to the priesthood in Rome on August 3 1879.

There are unhappy rumours circulating around Bourges about Monsignor Druon (the Archbishop's former secretary now in Rome as Rector of St. Louis des Français Seminary). It appears that he left a lot of unpaid debts, and that his furniture has not been paid for, and that he used for his own benefit money which the Archbishop had given him to pay the Archbishop's suppliers. The Archbishop, being obliged to pay them twice, is very displeased, so it is said... I warn you then not to give any money to the worthy Monsignor Druon. It seems that Fr. Paret, formerly secretary general to the Archbishop and at present parish priest at Our Lady of Bourges parish, is going to Tulle as Vicar General to Bishop Denéchau (the latter had become Bishop of Angers on February 28 this year, 1879). Monsignor Druon will be pleased to hear this news; convey our good wishes to him. My regards to your dear little colony (staff, students).

In sending Fr. Casas to you, it would perhaps be good to send Fr. Miniot (Jouët's assistant in Rome) to Saint-Gérard as socius (in the Novitiate) or to Arles if we want to save that house which is being compromised more and more by Fr. Albert and Brother Hamel. Think of some arrangement (of personnel) and we shall in Council give it consideration.

Cheerio, dear friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Casas was ordained to the priesthood at Bourges, December 21, 1878, and would go to Rome in June 1879 to work in the new church at Piazza Navona and study Canon Law. He left Rome for Spain in October 1880.

Miniot had been in Rome since 1876 when he left in September 1879 for the Saint-Gérard Novitiate as socius to Fr. Ramot.

Hamel and Albert left Arles in 1879, the former dying in an accident next year, 1880, November 27. Albert left the Society in October 1879 and became parish priest of Saint-Aubin, Tours diocese.

Issoudun, April 8, 1879

Dear Brother Barral,

Your letter gave me the greatest pleasure. I was delighted to hear of your success. Everyone here is also pleased for you.

Meanwhile give thought to preparing yourself seriously for the priesthood through earnest and sustained practice of the religious virtues. Knowledge without piety is nothing – what am I saying? – it is dangerous. It is a requisite, then, that you should be, before and above anything else, truly religious. That is to say, obedient to the point of self-immolation, dying to your personal judgment, regular in every way in your religious life-style, keeping faithfully to the discipline, rules, Constitutions, modest and unpretentious, available in every way even with respect to what you do not care for, drawn to and looking for opportunities of internal and external mortification, and the same for humility and what is humiliating. In a word, my child, try to be a saint; it is only at this cost you will do good, be a real Missionary of the Sacred Heart and serve our dear Society.

Cheerio, dear child. I embrace you warmly in C.J.
Wholly yours,

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, April 10, 1879

Dear Father,

I am greatly pleased that the decree has been issued which brings to an end our concerns, and that it rules in our favour concerning the issues relating to the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Anticipating what I would do myself: present at the feet of the Holy Father my most respectful homage and keenly appreciative acknowledgement. Convey to His Eminence the Cardinal Vicar my deepest gratitude for the great concern he has shown to us, and the active role he played in bringing this matter to an end, and let Bishop Panici know that I shall never forget the outstanding contribution he rendered to us on this occasion. His name will be honoured as that of a remarkable benefactor to our Association.

My rejoicing, however great it may be, is, I have to tell you, somewhat subdued. I would have preferred it if the decree gave to the Church of St. James of the Spanish the title Our Lady of the Sacred Heart because we have been authorized to do so by a Papal rescript. The matter can be easily put right. But what seems to me will create problems is the declaration that we must put into our church either the picture or a copy of it like that at St. Andrea-della-Valle. This is impractical and quite impossible, likely to stir up a hornet's nest of fresh, tortuous problems. This, then, can neither be the wish of the Holy Father who has been so good to us, or the Cardinal Vicar who is so supportive of us, nor Bishop Panici who is keenly interested in us.

As you say we could be the servants of Messrs. Scalsi, etc., and at the mercy of Raffl and speculation. This would be terribly damaging for us. We have a contract with Daniel, we need his resources, etc., etc. Make prevail all these reasons which you understand as I do. Argue our case and these gentlemen will become aware of it. If necessary take it to the Pope. You will be listened to; it is impossible otherwise. No conditions: we must be allowed to choose between ours (the statue) modified by Pius IX or that of Saint-Andrea; again, with regard to the latter I fear Raffl with his pamphlet. Oh, if only we had been allowed to keep our old statue! But let us not think about it at this moment; it would be a miracle. Do your best. Le Monde (newspaper) in today's issue already mentions this decree. This kind of indiscretion could be damaging to us. The nation's wishes and Saint-Michael have received permission to enrol those elsewhere. I hope the same privilege will be granted to us.

Fr. Papin has been accepted for vows. I said that you were abstaining. If you could prepare an absolute negative, return your slip to me.

Issoudun, April 11, 1879

Dear Father,

Your letter to the Archbishop is very good. I forwarded it to him straightaway. Yes, proceed in the following manner. Try to arrange:

1. that the decree says nothing about the statue! That's what would be best. If not...
2. endorse the statue approved by Pius IX on April 26, 1875. If not...
3. request that we be left free to make a choice between one and the other model.

To impose on us the Scalsi model is quite impossible as I said to you yesterday. If it is maintained that the Scalsi model shall be in our Rome church, hanging in a chapel or from a wall, I do not see any great inconvenience in this since we would have our own model ourselves and receiving public homage.

If it's absolutely so wished, the Theatines may keep in their church the Scalsis' picture as a private representation, with the accompanying ex-voto offerings, foundation mass intentions, current or yet to be received. But all public devotion in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart must be forbidden there, as well as all assemblies involving the faithful. This is imperative; without this being the case, de rigueur, we shall have a thousand headaches!

In this way (as detailed immediately above), agreement can be reached and we shall be in peace.

Thank most gratefully in my name Monsignor Sara. Let it be his concern to settle this issue in our favour! I shall be lastingly grateful to him.

Easter Day
April 13, 1879

Dear Friend,

I received your good wishes for the feast. Thanks a thousand to yourself, Fr. Miniot, and all our dear confrères, etc. I wrote a letter to Cardinal Oreglia in accordance with your wishes. If it isn't satisfactory, change it and sign it in my name. It is wholly imperative that the Scalsi statue should not be imposed on us. This is also the view of the Archbishop of Bourges as you can gather from his letter. I think that it would be better for the time-being not to have the decree than to have it with such a condition, as it would be a veritable disaster and seriously affect our undertakings. If Cardinal Oreglia wishes to lay down such, you should not accept it and accordingly you will have recourse to the Pope. Once Pius IX approved the statue for us and for the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, it would be disrespectful to him, insulting to us, very much a major prejudicial act giving rise to problems, anxieties, and all too easily leading to a collapse. We have a contract with Daniel, and a variety of concerned issues, etc., etc. We cannot, then, accept the Scalsi statue. If we are left with our old one, which would be the most appropriate thing since Pius IX accepted the model and crowned it, let us at least be given freedom to make a choice...

Cheerio, dear friend. How much I would like to see this issue brought to a satisfactory end!
Wholly yours in C.J.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, Monday, April 21, 1879

Dear Father,

Last night I went to see the Archbishop of Bourges. His Grace carefully read your letter and the decree. He would like you to thank in his name, and in a very special way, Bishop Panici; convey also with it my own appreciative thanks. We are overwhelmingly touched by such extreme kindness from one who also brought to our attention the significance of the decree. Bishop Panici has a lasting claim to our gratitude. The Archbishop of Bourges, on the margin of the decree's first page, has included a snapshot as a reminder of the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. His Grace would be pleased if this significant fact was taken note of, ourselves also, if that is possible. His Grace approves what you have added on to the decree. He hopes that it will be taken into consideration. What is important is that we are free to choose our new model. Try to obtain, in addition, all you can, but without over insisting. As for the privileges granted to the Theatine Fathers, His Grace takes the view that it is an issue with which we shouldn't be too preoccupied; it's not for every place but for Rome alone. They haven't the right to enrol the faithfuls' names, to spread the devotion at large in a widespread way, to promote it in their annals etc. All these privileges together with the general direction of the Association, etc., have been granted to us (alone). In virtue of the present decree, which leaves them with their Masses and their ex-votos, they haven't the right to have public gatherings in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart with the participation of the faithful. At least the decree has nothing to say on this important issue. And if it ever happened that these worthy priests wished to put altar against altar in calling public meetings on Thursdays and Sundays, you would have the right to protest since, as it seems to me, they would be acting contrary to the letter and spirit of the decree. If, nevertheless, you could insert "privation" which I have placed in the margin, that or such like wording would be prudent. See what you can do.

His Grace says that there shouldn't be too much insistence on inserting within the decree "donec aliter provideatus a S. Sede" which you refer to in your letter, since we always have the right to ask the Holy See, at an opportune moment, to deal with the statue; if there is too much insistence the Archbishop feels that we give the impression of giving way only through duritiam cordis (very reluctantly) and this would make an unfortunate impression on the Holy See. If, nevertheless, you can obtain it without too much difficulty, set about doing so. Also, if Our Lady of the Sacred Heart draws them to favour the old model instead of the new, that would be marvellous and a cure for all our ills. But a miracle would be needed to bring this about. Express our thanks also to Monsignor Druon for all his kindness and devotedness to us.

It is impossible for me, my friend to go to Rome. First Communion is on May 25. I am teaching catechism every day to 200 youngsters. Then there's the inauguration of our organs on the 10th of June, preceded by confirmation on the 9th. You will have to do the best you can. If my presence became absolutely necessary between the 15th and 20th (May) I would try to make the utmost effort (un tour de force). I am sending you an appeal to the Holy Father to obtain permission for us to enrol those who are not present. But we are not making this request until the decree of the Association has been signed. I am sending on 3,000 francs (about 7,955 euros) which you should receive tomorrow. Our dear little Brother Lecorre died last Saturday.

Cheerio, dear friend.

When sending you the proofs I forgot to mention that Fr. Guyot would be happy to go and preach at Marseilles. Since he is committed to Macon for the coming Lent, he wrote to the parish priest suggesting Fr. Lavialle. He hopes he will accept him. You will be notified later.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, May 2, 1879

Dear Father,

I received your kind letter with the original copy of the signed decree. May the Lord be praised a thousand times! May the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart be forever blessed! You yourself, Father, should on your part be the recipient of our gratitude for all your trouble and efforts. I immediately forwarded to the Archbishop your letter and the decree. His Grace has already answered with a splendid letter. Fr. Guyot has been here at Issoudun; he leaves today. He is very pleased, also Fr. Piperon, with this triumphal outcome. It is even a source of pride to him. But he does not yet approve straightforwardly the acquisition of St. James-of-the-Spanish. It is, nonetheless, that which has made possible this wonderful outcome. In this way it has turned out that the Lord had his reasons, and also Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. However it may be, there you have the patroness of hopeless causes officially acknowledged in Rome at the very centre of the city, close to the Vatican, the most radiant hearth of the revolution where all despairing souls meet each other. This is providential! The Revolution will be stymied and the Papacy saved from its present dangers. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is now enthroned. It's inevitable that the Romans, the Cardinals, will come to place at her feet their cry of distress and hope. You will become aware of all this. The Queen has the freedom of the city in the capital of the Christian world. That is enough; the triumph is guaranteed. From there, like her Son, she will be in charge, preside over all and conquer. There she will draw on the treasures of grace found in the Heart of Jesus and spread them abundantly on the Church and Society. Let Our Lady of the Sacred Heart be praised then; her reign has begun. We shall witness still greater blessings than those we have experienced up to now at Issoudun. If the blessing of our Church could take place on the 25th, the feast of Gregory VII, or the 26th, the feast of St. Philip Neri, I would try, I think, to be present for it. Our first communion day instead of taking place on Sunday the 25th of this month, could be brought forward by 8 days. I would, then, make every effort to leave Issoudun on Thursday, the feast of the Ascension, May 22, at 1.40am. I would be in Rome at 1.30am on Saturday, the 24th. You must in these circumstances try and arrange straightaway an audience for me either on the Saturday afternoon, the day of my arrival, the following day or Monday, the 26th, because I must leave at the latest on Tuesday morning because of the Confirmation due to take place on Monday, June 9, and for which I need to get the youngsters ready, and also there are the peoples' confessions for the feast of Pentecost.

Even with a Tuesday departure I would only arrive at Issoudun, non-stop, on Thursday at 2.40pm. I shall bring you back with me. Reply by return of post, or better still send a telegram if you think that my presence is necessary or at the least could be very helpful. As you know, it is a tiring journey, but especially so in these circumstances. Nonetheless, what would I not do for the well-being of the Society and our undertakings!

Fr. Guyot doesn't want Fr. Chappel any longer at Saint-Gérard. It has been decided that he should go to Arles and have Fr. Hamel recalled to Issoudun to work at the presbytery, where he can be supervised and make some contribution. What is your view on this? Fr. Guyot thinks that they can get by at Saint-Gérard without replacing Fr. Chappel for the time being. Poor Fr. Albert is not getting along at all in Arles. I don't know what we can do with him. What a cross to bear!

I am sending you on the proofs of "Our Lady Better Known" (Chevalier's work on Our Lady). The Archbishop of Bourges has read it and liked it very much. The Superior of the Major Seminary (Bourges) found it free of criticism from the doctrinal point of view. Fr. Champgrand (see above, the beginnings of Issoudun), a learned Sulpician, a good friend of ours, is prepared to check (proof read) the whole text. This is being exceptionally kind. The Archbishop has advised me to write an article in advance of chapter 11, page 9, where the powerful suppliant role of Mary is developed, setting out very emphatically that Our Lord Jesus Christ is the unique mediator, etc. I am sending this work on to you also so that you can assess it in proof form. His Grace thinks that you might officially submit this text to one or two distinguished Roman theologians who, for example, Monsignor Salua or the Cardinal Vicar might, in friendship, suggest to you. The Archbishop does not doubt that this work will be approved by Rome. In no way whatsoever does it go against Cardinal Patrizi's letter. It even provides support for it, justifying the teaching presented in the Cardinal's letter. Read it carefully. It (the letter) is to be found in the May, 1875, issue of our Annals on page 99. The letter states: pie asseri nmquit quod imperium super eodem exerceat. That's what we have done. I have benefited from your remarks as you shall see. Try to hurry on this critical survey of the text and its approval. If I were to have it before I go to Rome I would be very pleased indeed. We could then rather easily obtain a brief from the Holy Father when paying our respects to him. This would be marvellous for our Association.

Cheerio, dear friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

If you need another proof copy, I can send it to you straightaway. Let me have a reply. Hurry up with your article for the month of June. The Annals must come out on the first of June. The feast is on the 12th, and it's Father Olivier, a Dominican, who will preach. We have no one for the triduum. Could you take it on, or should we ask Fr. Deidier?

Issoudun, May 4, 1879

Dear Father,

I have just now received your letter and that of Mr. Vuillaume.

1. The observations of Mr. Vuillaume seem pertinent to us; go ahead then and do the best you can; and likewise with the staircase; let it come down where you think most appropriate.
2. What you have to say about the small altars (in side chapels) seems very satisfactory to us. Do what you consider appropriate.
3. If the blessing is arranged to take place on the 24th of May, I shall leave Issoudun, then, on Monday the 19th of this month and arrive in Rome on the eve of the Ascension. Let me know what is best.
4. Dear friend, nobody more than you has the Council's confidence and nobody would get on as well as you in Rome. You have begun the year marvellously well. It is for you, then, to continue and bring it to completion.
5. What do you think of the appeal project to ask the Pope's approval to enrol (in the Confraternity) those unable to be present (due to distance)? I should be very pleased if I could be granted this (favour) while in Rome and get it with you. It is absolutely needed for the success of our work.
6. Should we give a present to Bishop Panici? If in the affirmative, the time is right. What should we offer him? A chalice? If so, what price? 300 francs (roughly 795 euros) would, I feel, be appropriate. Or, perhaps, he might prefer something else? Try to let me know. I shall take it along with me. And should we not also offer Monsignor Sara something? What? The Life of St. Cecilia by Dom Guéranger, or the Instruments of the Passion by Fr. Rohant de Fleury... or something else? What do you feel about it? Let me know what I should do.

Cheerio, dear friend, again, thanks.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, May 5, 1879

Dear Father,

I am returning Mr. Vuillaume's memorandum to your address, together with a comment. I am pleased to use this occasion to let you know, dear Father, how pleased we are at the good outcome in favour of the Association's interests. We are all grateful to our dear Mother who directed everything towards a happy outcome and who guided you in this whole affair. We are so pleased for the Congregation and for yourself also, dearly loved Father, who had this issue so much at heart and had to be so patient given the length of time it took to have a decision. We are all very sincerely grateful to you for what you have achieved with so much industry and with all that enthusiasm of which you are capable and which is anything but little.

We come then to the issue you broached in your last letter, that of the leadership of the Association. Flushed with success we hadn't thought about it; we couldn't consider it because you are in Rome and as you well know there is nobody here to replace you. It is pointless, then, to bring up the issue of your successor. I would add that if we did have someone, the thought would not have occurred to any of us. As for the organization of the work (Association) when the Very Rev. Fr. Superior is in Rome you will discuss with him what is to be done, and on his return, if an opportunity arises, the matter will be considered in Council.

I write in a hurry, having no more than a few minutes. Please forgive the shape of this letter.

Again, dear Father, please accept the congratulations of us all on the successful outcome with which Our Lady of the Sacred Heart rewarded your efforts.

Yours totally in the Sacred Heart.

Ch. Piperon, MisduSC, Vic.

I received your telegram. The feast on the 14th, that of Our Lady Auxiliatrice, would be a good choice for the blessing of our church. Accordingly, I shall leave on Monday the 19th of this month and on Thursday, Ascension Eve, I shall be in Rome. On the following Saturday the ceremony for the Cardinal Vicar will take place. Very likely we shall have to host a dinner. Where should we have it and what invitations need to be sent? Give this consideration. If you have it in mind to give a chalice to Bishop Panici (Secretary of the Congregation of Indulgences and Relics), is there a coat of arms to be placed on the base? Who is his Patron? What are his initials? Do what you possibly can to ensure the enrolment of those at a distance (the reference is to the Association's outreach). Bishop Panici has positively promised this to us. Without this benefit our work becomes paralysed. Make every possible effort (on this issue). The Archbishop of Bourges is about to send a parallel request to Rome for Our Lady of the Children (the pilgrimage to Chateauneuf-sur-Cher, thirty kilometres from Issoudun). It is imperative that we go ahead before the latter since it is not likely that two such privileges would be granted to the same diocese. Discuss this with Bishop Panici, etc. I am even informed that Leo XIII does not wish to grant this kind of request any more. It is absolutely imperative that he make an exception in our case. Have my work on "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" looked at as quickly as possible by one or two theologian friends and others from Propaganda (College) and elsewhere.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Father,

Fr. Guyot agrees to do the Lenten preaching at Marseilles next year. Notify the parish priest straightaway. Have you a lovely chalice for your church and nice altar cloths? Mr. Brunet tells me that he could have ready by the 19th, the day of my departure (for Rome), a silver and gold chalice with 4 emeralds at the base for 800 francs (about 2,120 euros). Should we have it done for Bishop Panici?

Issoudun, May 8, 1879

Dear Father,

I received your short letter and your telegram. Yes indeed! Arrange your benediction for the 24th, the feast of Our Lady Helper. I shall arrive in Rome on Wednesday the 21st, the vigil of the Ascension. I shall stay 8 days since it seems to me that this is long enough; it is impossible to arrange anything better. I must leave Rome on Wednesday the 28th. Arrange matters in such a way that:

1. I can have an audience on one of those eight days;
2. that I can go away with an indult authorizing us to enrol those who are dispersed;
3. there is a Papal brief promoting a "better-known Our Lady of the Sacred Heart".

Every medal has its reverse side. Fr. Albert has once again taken outrageously against Fr. Deidier whom he accuses in all sorts of ways. This pathetic confrère wrote to me today to say that he is bringing the issue before the Archbishop of Aix's court (tribunal). He is wholly determined that we withdraw Fr. Deidier from Arles. I fear that the parish priests of the town do not get on with Fr. Albert. What is to be done? A scandal is likely at any moment. Why are you not in Arles? I am forwarding in confidence Fr. Albert's letter which you will return to me.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Thank the dear scholastics for me for their kind collective letter; it gave me great pleasure.

Issoudun, May 11, 1879

Dear Father,

1. Just now I received your telegram informing me that the blessing of our church will take place on Friday the 23rd of this month. I shall then be arriving in Rome on Wednesday the 21st at 1.30pm. Try to arrange, if possible, an audience on Ascension Day, or Friday afternoon, or Saturday, or, at the latest, Sunday or Monday. Try to arrange things so that everything will be in order on my arrival.

2. There was a whole list of questions which I presented to you and to which you have not as yet replied although I should have received your replies over the last 4 or 5 days. Would you care to look over my last letters again. If I present something to you it is to ascertain your views and not, as in other instances, about keeping quiet.

3. Over the past 3 or 4 months you have written nothing for the Annals. Is it that you haven't time to do so? You have said nothing about this. Do not forget that it is you alone who is in charge of it (the Annals).

4. Should we invite the Cardinal to dinner, etc.? Should we send out invitations? It is important to know all this and you have been silent about it. If Monsignor Druon would like to, or could, make available a nice room to use at St. Louis (des-Français, the French Seminary), we would meet the expenses of the meal. It is in this context that Mr. Vuillaume, when requesting money, includes 800 francs (roughly 2,120 euros) for refreshments on opening day. I find this too much. It is likely that he takes it to include also a tip for the workers!!! He is not going empty-handed! 100 francs would be more than enough!

5. You have said nothing so far about Bishop Panici and the chalice (a gift) or about Bishop Sara. If this is the way you want it, time passes and I myself haven't any longer the opportunity. You said nothing to me either about the request to enrol absent members which is for all that quite important. I should like to have it officially approved by the Archbishop of Bourges prior to my departure. I find that I haven't got the time left, or scarcely at all. Nonetheless you are in the way of replying to me.

6. Next Sunday, the 18th of the month, we are having our First Communion. If you could get an apostolic blessing for the youngsters it would greatly please me.

7. Have you a nice chalice for our church? If not, I could, perhaps, offer you what the Renigault ladies presented to me last year for the first Communion of their little niece. It is in gold mounted silver with 4 emeralds on the base, one representing the Sacred Heart, the other the coat of arms of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the other St. Joseph, and the fourth my initials, J.C.

8. Have you a lovely vestment in gold? I could, perhaps, bring one out to you if you haven't any.

9. Have you some lovely altar missals? I have just been given a magnificent pair with appropriate inscribing on the occasion of a First Communion. I could, likewise, take these also out to you if you needed them.

10. If you have requests do not delay in sending them for I shall be leaving Issoudun on Monday the 19th at 1.40pm, no later.

11. Tomorrow I shall send on to you two or three proofs of "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart better known" which you requested of me in your telegram. If the Holy Father could provide a brief for this book, it would be very opportune. The Archbishop of Bourges is in no doubt about it.

12. Tomorrow morning I shall be going to Bourges to meet the Archbishop and take his orders and commissions since he leaves on Tuesday next for the round of Confirmations which lasts until Trinity Sunday.

Cheerio, my dear friend; I shall be delighted to see you, to greet and embrace you. I greatly miss you. My regards to Monsignor Druon. Until very soon.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

My regards to everybody. You should have received 3,000 francs (roughly 7,750 euros) to meet the costs of next Saturday. I shall make sure to bring the rest. I am confidentially sharing with you a letter from Fr. Navarre; it is disturbing. What is to be done to remedy this disastrous situation.? I believe that the departure of Fr. Albert is a matter of some urgency. We shall discuss all this.

Dear Father,

I saw His Grace yesterday. He is very well and as ever he has been very kind. He also wishes me to go to Rome. I shall arrive then on Wednesday, the eve of the Ascension. A thousand thanks to Monsignor Druon. Bishop Panici will have his lovely chalice. The Archbishop of Bourges read and corrected himself "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart better known". I made a number of corrections as suggested by the Archbishop himself. I am sending on to you three copies as requested. It is number 1 which contains the new corrections and additions. See especially pages 15,17,38,63,97. You can add these changes to the other copies. The Archbishop is very pleased with this work. He would, like yourself, be very pleased if we could have a brief from the Holy Father. Look into this straightaway. It is very important. This book is coming out at the right moment.

Fr. Fontugner (spelling uncertain), a Sulpician and professor of dogmatic theology at the Bourges Major Seminary, has formally examined the book and found it above reproach. I am sending his letter on to you. In the copies I am sending on to you it would help if you made corrections and additions if not there already from the last copy I sent you. Again, yesterday, the Archbishop referred to the need to get permission straightaway for the enrolment (in the Confraternity) of those living at a distance as before. Let us do our utmost to bring this about.

Council Meeting, June 11-16, 1879

In attendance: Very Rev. Fr. Superior, Fathers Morisseau, Jouët, Guyot, Piperon.

At these meetings the Congregation's different houses were in turn considered and the following decisions were taken:

The Rome House.

The Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is under the jurisdiction of the Superior General. Diplomas and registers of affiliation.

1. As regards the direction of the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the Archconfraternity is a unity entirely under the control of the Very Reverend Father Superior General. The affiliation diplomas should all carry his signature and be counter-signed by the Father Procurator of the Society in Rome. The register of affiliation should be a double one; one copy held at the Mother House in Issoudun, the other at the Rome office where the approving documents relative to the canonical setting-up of the affiliate Confraternities will also be held.

St. James in Rome: debts to be paid before any thought can be given to the restoration.

2. Every possible effort must be made to pay all the debts incurred through the acquisition and restoration of the ancient Church of St. James of the Spanish sited at Piazza Navona and now dedicated to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. One cannot envisage the opening and restoration of the naves still in fact closed, nor the completion of the nave used for worship, before the debts are paid and the funds for that become available. One must not undertake new work without having the necessary resources available. Conditions agreed upon with Fr. Georgetti, parish priest of.

The Italian Annals are to be printed at Osimo this year.

3. Fr. Jouët is authorized to allow the printing of the Italian Annals to continue at Osimo until the end of the present year. He will continue also with the arrangements made with Fr. Georgetti, parish priest of Osimo, leaving with him as before two thirds of the intake from the sale of the Association's objects, such as pictures, medals, prayers, etc., for the duration of the time that Fr. Georgetti will be director of the Osimo confraternity.

Brother Jan, lay brother, Fr. Casas, Brother Fromm, lay brother, sent to Rome.

4. Brother Jan cannot carry on with his studies; he will remain a lay brother. He is to be notified when he will be called to renew his vows. Fr. Casas will be attached to the Rome house from now on, and Bro. Fromm is being sent there to help about the house.

5. The Rome scholastics will follow the Roman customs for the siesta and the daily walks needed to boost their health. The scholastics can spend a month's holidays outside Rome in the countryside.

Courses at the Apollinaire University. Having in mind the health of these young men, it is preferable then that they follow the Apollinaire courses when the Superior of the Rome house has arranged the transition.

Brother Barral, at present in Rome, will, following his ordination to the priesthood, be appointed for some time to the Novitiate to help Fr. Master.

The St. Gérard House. Expelled seminarians forbidden entry to the Novitiate.
Novitiate.

1. Any young men expelled from a seminary either because of ability or misconduct cannot be accepted in the Novitiate.

2. All novices must, without exception, undertake the Novitiate regulations. When it is clear that a novice neither has the vocation, or sufficient ability, or the requisite health, to follow with regularity the Rule, the Novitiate should not be further prolonged for him.

3. The priest novices must undertake the common exercises without exception, placed among the other novices in the refectory, dormitory, chapel.

4. One may, nevertheless, if the Council of the Novitiate house considers it opportune and the Novice Master is not opposed, make use of the priest novices by way of experiment to preach outside the house, but only after spending three months in the Novitiate, and they will not be away from the house more than six non-consecutive weeks.

5. Experience having shown that the preparatory Petite-Oeuvre is a burden to the Novitiate and for the Novice Master, during the holidays it will be transferred to Chezal-Benoît. One must, well in advance of sending the youngsters to this new house, examine carefully those who are suitable and have the requisite qualities; the others will be sent home to their families.

6. Renting the Novitiate land. The section of the unused St. Gérard property should be wholly rented out for half the grape harvest according to the customs of the area.

7. The Novitiate Cloister.

The Novitiate house should be surrounded by a complete enclosure. There must be raised about the terraced area either a wall or a planked fence. A wall will link the parlours to the kitchen basement and a door will be made so that one can move from the interior of the cloister to the novices' parlour.

8. A month's retreat granted to Fr. Ramot.

Father Ramot will make a month's retreat under the guidance of Fr. Fessard enabling him to study under the latter's direction the way to run a Novitiate. He (Ramot) has been given the responsibility of preaching the community's general retreat which this year will begin on the 10th of September.

9. Admission to the Novitiate of seven students from the Petite Oeuvre.

The rhetoric class students from the Petite Oeuvre are admitted to begin their Novitiate during the holidays. They are: Dérichemont, de Brinon, Buisson, Louis Merg, François Barral, Suchet and Comte.

The Issoudun House. The Scholasticate.

1. The Scholastics are reminded about the careful observance of both general and particular regulations.

The Congregation's members called to Orders.

The following have been called to Orders:

1. To tonsure, Brothers Ilge, Merg, Verjus, Gérard, Tréand from the Issoudun house, Brunet from the Chezal-Benoît house, Léopold Hartzler from the Arles house.

2. Called to minor orders, Brothers Sahut and Hartzler from the Issoudun house; Vandel, Mayer, Forax and Védère from the Rome house.

3. To the subdiaconate, Brothers Bizeuil from the Issoudun house, Carrière from the Rome house and Benjamin Grom from the Watertown house; to the priesthood, Brother Thomas from the Issoudun house and Barral from the Rome house.

The Number of students at the maîtrise (special school).

3. The director of the Sacred Heart maîtrise should not take in more pupils that can be contained in the present class. He should apply himself to the selection of those youngsters who have an aptitude for singing and ceremonial.

4. The number of outside pupils. The director should not for the time being accept a number of pupils greater than the number of those presently in the class.

5. Fr. Batard: Assistant Bursar. Fr Batard is appointed assistant bursar replacing Fr. Cramaille; he remains director of the maîtrise and the pupils from outside. (See immediately above.)

The Saint-Gérard pupils intending to be lay brothers moved to Issoudun and Arles.

6. Of the four boys from Saint-Gérard meant to become lay brothers, two will be sent to the Issoudun house, and the one who comes from Arles will go to the Arles house.

7. Fr. Jouët confirmed as Superior of the Rome house.

Fr. Jouët, Superior of the Rome house over the past three years, is confirmed in office.

The Arles House. The Superior requested to enforce the rules.

1. The Superior of the Arles house will be asked to see to it that the community exercises should be regularly carried out in this house. One should either have readings in the refectory or be silent during meals when readings are not possible. According to custom little bottles should be used in the refectory, one for each individual, and not a common bottle.

Financial help provided for Fr. Albert's sister withdrawn.

2. The financial help granted in recent years to Fr. Albert's sister will be withheld as soon as this good priest has some money available. He is authorized to use this money to help his impoverished sister. Moreover, the permission granted him to forward directly the letters with the personal contribution is withdrawn.

The American House.

1. Fr. Durin, the Watertown Superior, having put forward a postulant for the Novitiate, the decision was taken that this applicant should be refused for the time being. It was suggested to Fr. Durin that this individual should continue with his studies or be placed in an American seminary until he was ordained priest.

2. This good priest, having again asked that a Novitiate be set up in his house, once more the decision was taken to postpone the issue.

Dear Father,

I saw Mr. Vaillant about the Daniel issues. I sent on to him the full dossier which he will again fully look at. Mr. Vaillant will be in Paris next Thursday from 7am until 4pm and only at this time. This is his address if you are in Paris on Thursday and able to go and see him, which would be something worthwhile. He will be staying at 99 Rome St., Batignolles, Paris.

I leave this a.m. for Saintes where I shall arrive this evening at 11.30. If you meet Mr. Vaillant you could go together to meet Daniel, and if there is something new you could leave Paris Thursday night on the express train at 7.40pm. You could send me a telegram to the Pinellerie near Saintes so that I could leave there on Thursday itself and then we could meet each other on Friday at Issoudun.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, July 23, 1879

Dear Father

I must thank you for your kind letter and the decisions about the Chapter.

1. I approve of the proposals which you present to me about Osimo, but look again more attentively at what is being drawn up so that it is very firmly established that the complete direction of the Annals is in our hands alone, and any privileges granted are only such through benevolence and not under any obligation. And this alone holds for the period when Monsignor Georgetti is parish priest at Osimo. As regards the printing of the Annals, etc., it must be arranged for Rome as soon as possible; this is an absolute requirement. In any event, the Cardinal-Vicar expressly made clear that the Annals should be printed in Rome from the first of January next; this must be seen to.

2. I do not see anything wrong with the diplomas being signed, as Bishop Panici says. While waiting for the issue of the inscription to be settled, ask for permission, on our behalf, to enrol, if it is possible, those who live elsewhere.

3. As regards the Chapter, all our Council colleagues are of the view that it is impossible to exclude Fr. Marie whose problems are not known and who is respected by the confrères. The Council members take the view that his exclusion from the Chapter would do more harm than good.

Fr. Durin has replied today that, given the distance and the serious inconvenience occasioned by his absence, he cannot attend the forthcoming Chapter. And meanwhile, is it necessary that Fr. Miniot should be there? You yourself will be there, and isn't that enough? Who would look after the Rome house, the church, our young men, if Fr. Miniot came to Issoudun at the same time as yourself? This is a serious matter! Moreover, there are heavy expenses. The particularly long distance referred to by Bishop de Luca in order to be excused from coming to the ordinary Chapter, and referred to with a note in the Constitutions, would seem to apply also to Fr. Miniot. Discuss this with Bishop de Luca. Given the circumstances where Frs. Durin and Miniot would not be attending the forthcoming Chapter, two other members should, I believe, be elected from the more elderly confrères to replace both of these. See Bishop de Luca immediately about this, and I shall wait for your reply before sending out the letters.

4. And what about the contribution for the Annals? We are going to be late again! Brother John cannot be allowed to go and take the waters and study until his three years as a vowed lay brother have expired. I think it will be the month of August next; he can wait until then. These expenses will have to be met by him. If he becomes a priest and later wishes to enter our Society, we could perhaps accept him then if there is nothing to be held against him.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

My regards to everybody.

The Very Rev. Fr. Superior has informed me that he received your letter and will shortly forward to you the 2,000 francs. Please convey, Father, our greetings to all our dear confrères, and particularly to Father Miniot.

Yours devotedly, in the Sacred Heart,

Ch. Piperon.

(Undated, truncated, the letter would appear to be written between August 3 and September 8, 1879. Original in Piperon dossier, General Archives, Rome.)

Dear Father,

Yesterday I received your letter and today the script for the Annals. I shall send on to you either Sunday or Monday the 2,000 francs you are looking for in order to pay your workmen. (Roughly 5,300 euros.) Saint-Gérard and Chezal-Benoît have taken all our money. We have nothing left. Fr. Morisseau (the bursar) returns from his retreat tomorrow. We are expecting you for September 8. I shall speak to you about the Brother Jean issue. I hope the 200 francs he is looking for (roughly 530 euros) can be made available to him. I shall send them to you on Monday.

Augustine Jan, born in Chavagne 1844, had been a De La Salle Brother, a Papal Zouave (soldier), a French soldier and an oil merchant in Marseilles by the time he entered the Novitiate in 1874. He left the Society aged 35 at the end of his temporary vows, and at Rennes began to publish a Catholic paper.

Since you know, my friend, the present state of our little Society, its personnel, works, needs, etc., and since you can moreover offer advice, let me know what you think is opportune to propose and carry out for the time being:

1. the question of a local Superior at Issoudun;
2. that of general bursar;
3. assistants elsewhere (than Issoudun), etc., etc.

I am obliged to you for your suggestions; we cannot carry out everything according to the letter; the best is often the enemy of the good. Consider things and let me know what is practical at the present time. I am of the view, like yourself, that the Chapter should keep the Assistants in their posts and that Rome will renew the required indults. Fr. Morisseau has written to me from Poitiers that Fr. Fessard's (a Jesuit) advice is that we should bring our Novitiate to Issoudun and install the Scholasticate at Saint-Gérard – a major undertaking which we shall consider.

Michel Fessard was an ex-Provincial of the Paris Province; died at Poitiers, 1893.

You have full powers to deal with the praiseworthy Italian ex-Jesuit priest who wants to join us. You could, if you think it appropriate, send him straightaway to the Saint-Gérard Novitiate. He could come with Fr. Barral or you could bring him with you.

I am pleased, dear child, to hear of your ordination to the priesthood. May the Lord be praised! Henceforth you will be a true Missionary of the Sacred Heart. You will give witness in acknowledgement of Our Lord by leading a life of perfection which is specifically religious.

On your return to France I give you permission to stay for some days with your family to arrange your business and you will remain there only for the amount of time which is strictly necessary. In any event you must be at Saint-Gérard, the Novitiate, by the 25th of this month. That will be your new residence for the time being. Always pray very much for us.

L 18790808A

Issoudun, August 8, 1879

Dear Father,

I am forwarding to you the answer to Mr. Vuillaume's three letters so that you can familiarize yourself with all the issues raised in these letters.

1. It is clear that, so long as one can see the roofs over the structures raised up for the church, there is a need to offset this inconvenience. Is the proposed solution itself free of disadvantages? It does not seem so to us. A wall put up seven metres from the façade will (a) leave you without air; and (b) is it likely to bring about what is desired, and what is the purpose of the plan? This is something one cannot come to a conclusion about at a distance (Issoudun–Rome). If one constructed this wall on the façade itself, and since it will only be 4 metres high, it could be slimmed down and set into the interior part of the façade wall going behind the tower. Try to look and have this suggestion considered. In any event, the idea is to embellish this arcade wall in the pinnacle style but in stucco. See to it that you get an exact quotation about the project being undertaken.

2. We would much prefer if a statue in plaster cast, either of the Sacred Heart or Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, were placed on top of the façade, the older model with two angels. Again try and find out the cost of these statues.
3. As regards the financial costs, the Very Reverend Father (Chevalier) has sent on to you within the past two or three days an initial sum of five thousand francs. That and what you have taken back with you will help you to settle your accounts for the month of July. You know very well, dear Father, that one cannot do what one would like.
4. The issue of payment for Mr. Vuillaume can be dealt with between yourself and him.
5. Your idea to place our monogram of the Sacred Heart in the drum is excellent. Have this seen to, then, as well as the inscription to be placed on this façade. Much better than ourselves, you know what goes best according to the Roman custom.

Cheerio, Father. My best wishes to all our members. Will Monsignor Druon indeed be in Issoudun for September 8? Encourage him; he promised me that he would. As regards September 8, what should we do this year? Have you any ideas? What bishops should be invited? Who might preach? And our Retreat begins on the evening of September 9!

My regards to Fr. Régis. Will he become one of us? Next week I shall send you "Our Lady Better Known" so that you can get a brief from the Pope for it.

1. I am forwarding 2,000 francs (approximately 5,300 euros) to you which you need to pay your bills. I am happy that all this is finished (the work on the church) since it would be quite impossible to continue much longer (with the payments). Everything has been swallowed up by it: savings, financial resources of the Petite Oeuvre, bursaries made available for the upkeep of youngsters, etc., and, on top of all this, money collected in Issoudun, to say nothing about that from the Holy See. Fr. Barral will take it if he hasn't already left. I am returning your letter from Fr. Georgetti. It is very good.

Issoudun, August 12, 1879

My Lord,

Under the patronage of His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges who blesses and encourages so paternally our endeavours, we write to invite Your Lordship to the forthcoming Catholic pilgrimage at Issoudun on September 8.

This great religious occasion honouring Our Lady of the Sacred Heart cannot happen at a more propitious time. If France at last launches itself towards the Sacred Heart of Jesus, is it not Mary who has prompted this thrust, and if the Heart of Jesus is now being honoured, does not something of this glory become reflected on His Mother, on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart?

We accompany with this letter, Your Lordship, the Circular from the Pilgrimage Committee petitioning Your Lordship to be so kind as to bless this work. We shall be so pleased, My Lord, if you can grace with your presence the solemnity of this feast and accept the modest hospitality with which we shall be so pleased to favour you.

Please accept the deepest regards, My Lord, of your humble servant.

J. Chevalier, MSC, Sup.

PS: The rail company Paris-Lyon in the time table forwarded to us, and which we are pleased to send on to you, offers 50% return reductions from Auxerre to Paris for a group of 100 to 180 pilgrims. Would you be agreeable, My Lord, to our organizing this trip? And in the event that the suggestion is acceptable to Your Lordship, we shall deal co-operatively and appreciatively with the individual who will be notified by you to us as the head of this committee.

Dear Father,

A Happy Feast of the Assumption to yourself and everyone else with you.

I sent on to you yesterday four copies of "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Better Known", paper bound only. Two have in the frontispiece the approved snapshot of the marble statue and the other two reproductions of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Mr. Lemercier hasn't yet finished the photographs of the statue which he was asked to undertake. As soon as he has delivered them, I shall put them in the frontispiece of each volume.

I forwarded to Paris a copy of the coat of arms of Leo XIII with an accompanying snapshot of the Pope as a present to His Holiness so that we might be given the brief. As the binding could take a long time, it is for that reason that I sent you two paper-bound copies so that you could ask Bishop Mercurelli to look at them, mention them to the Holy Father and have the brief composed which you will not forget to bring with you for the 8th of September. I am waiting impatiently for this brief in order to place it at the beginning of the book, the binding of which (for this reason) is held up. I am depending, then, on you. I am sending on to you a white page with my signature so that you can write on it the letter dedicated to the Pope when offering the work to him. Do so as you judge best; you have my approval in advance. There is not much time left. Send good Brother Vandel home on holiday if he is not there already. Fr. Miniot will travel with you to Issoudun.

Dear Father,

1. I am sending you by the same post as this letter "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart better known", sumptuously bound for Leo XIII so as to obtain the brief in question. The picture is enlarged; no further difficulties, therefore. Bring the brief with you if that is possible.
2. Indeed, good friend come as soon as you can; your health requires you to do so. Follow the itinerary you have arranged; nothing better.
3. Bring along with you Fr. Leonardi, the ex-Jesuit, who wants to enter the Novitiate. You say nothing about this. Is it that things have changed?
4. Texts about issues are often attributed to me concerning which I have said nothing. Do what you can for the interior arrangements of the Rome house.
5. I am forwarding the 2,000 francs you requested. (Roughly 5,300 euros.)
6. Fr. Albert is making his retreat with the Aix Capuchins. He wrote this morning to say that he has taken the decision to return to the world (!) if he can find a diocese willing to accept him and a posting to suit him! The Bishop of Aix, so it appears, would try to place him in Touraine.
7. As for Fr. Marie, do not look for any faculties for him since it is in accordance with the wishes of the Sacred Congregation that he is again forbidden to hear women's confessions. This is wise, and I am of the same view. We shall discuss this on your return.
8. How unpleasant the issues are involving the Théatines!
9. Bring Monsignor Druon along with you. We are expecting him to be here. We have nobody as yet to preach the preparatory Triduum for the 8th of September. It would be very good if he could bring himself to do so. Suggest it to him. If the answer is "no", I am counting on you, and also for the sermon on the day.

Letter from Piperon to Jouët, with, as before, above, some comments from Chevalier at the end.

The month of September will soon be upon us, bringing the welcome news of your forthcoming visit. (A General Chapter was due to take place from September 19 to 30, apart from Jouët's presence for September 8, see above.)

Mr. Vuillaume has written and sent us an approximate estimate of the work to be carried out. I have added, having taken advice, some comments which I am forwarding to you. We are awaiting the estimate for the pinnacle and the wall which is intended to hide the roof of the house from the public on the Piazza Navona side. If you can bring it with you we shall be very pleased. I know well that you cannot get everything you would like to have, and I am in no doubt that you will do your utmost to get it. Mr. Vuillaume ends his letter with a note dictated by Fr. Miniot asking for money. You should have recently received some more money which will help you with the more pressing financial claims.

Our wish is, as you well know, Father, that you avoid at the present time all expense which is not pressing and absolutely necessary. It is not from the heart one says this but rather cold, prudent, thinking as you well know. Mr. Vuillaume, so it seems to me, wants to finish the work and put the finishing touches to it. Make sure to remind him of the decision to carry out only that which is strictly necessary. That's why I have been asked to remind you that the community must be happy for the time being with the first storey. To provide more space the library could for the time being be located in the corridor, in the area set by for the Very Rev. Fr. Superior. Once we have our debts covered we can finish the work and you yourself can finish off the work in keeping with your resources. It is not that I wish to repeat these recommendations so often; I bring them to your notice so that you can depend on us when facing up to Mr. Vuillaume and others.

Until the near future, dear Father. Meanwhile let Fr. Miniot know that his mother keeps well and I send him my best wishes. Remember me to everybody and, in particular, to Fr. Casas.

Yours devotedly in the Sacred Heart.

Ch. Píperon, MisduSC.

Chevalier adds:

Fr. Píperon forgets that those 2,000 francs were for the upkeep of the house.

Dear Father,

I am forwarding 1,000 francs to you which I have collected to meet the worker's wages. The till is empty. The priests of the Bourges Archdiocese do not, it seems, wish to see Monsignor Druon at our feast (September 8) this year; do not encourage him; I shall tell you why later.

I am in the confessional with 50 people about. I must leave them to send on your request. I am forwarding, therefore, 5,000 francs from your account.

2. At last I received your contributions (for the Annals). Try always to send things on a month in advance.
3. If Fr. Miniot comes to the Chapter who will look after the house in Rome? Who will preside over the exercises (ceremonies)? Who will meet visitors, etc., etc.? Fr. Barral will be in France at that time. To leave the house and our young men alone there during all this time seems to me to be serious. I cannot in conscience agree to it. Speak to Bishop de Luca about this.
4. Assistants will be appointed at the Chapter. Ask Bishop de Luca if the same people can be appointed, or at least those whose responsibilities necessarily keep them at a distance, such as Fr. Guyot and yourself. If the answer is in the affirmative, the issue is made much easier. If in the negative, I don't know where to find two new assistants... In the end God will look after things!

Find out also if there should be at the mother house, given our small numbers, a local Superior, or if the Superior General can make use of somebody and name him as his assistant who would replace him in his absence. If Bishop de Luca answers you in the affirmative, that there should be a local Superior, can it perhaps be one of the assistants?

Cheerio.

Fr. Jouët may take a Secretary from outside the Congregation.

Fr. Jouët is, given the lack of personnel, authorized for the time being to have a secretary from outside the Congregation. Such a secretary would deal with the Association's needs, and would be provisionally based in an office on the 1st floor. The issue of building visitors' rooms and a secretary's office under the first floor is postponed for the time being.

Vichy, October 18, 1879

Dear Father,

Thank you for your letter. Look after yourself. You are exhausting yourself too much. It is a duty to look after your health. Reverend Father wrote me a nice letter thanking me for the book you sent him. He is much better, but the doctors advise him to remain on in France. I wish you well for the success of your retreat. Give my good wishes to the sisters I know. I return to Issoudun next Wednesday. Let us hope that the Sacred Heart will reward Fr. Marie (visiting Watertown). I don't know who could have told Mademoiselle Zoé what you have told me about the feasts of Our Lady. It isn't very important.

Dear Father,

Here I am back, but with a good bout of rheumatism, although it's not very serious. Take good care of yourself and do not become over-tired. See if you can do what Bishop Mermillod has asked you; it would be worthwhile. I would like it if you could take this on as I am too busy. Our Society owes everything to His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne. It was through his dedicated co-operation that we prospered and got everything from Rome. Our Society was dear to his heart; he was our Superior, our father, our brother, our friend, etc.

A heart attack carried off quite suddenly the benevolent Archbishop, at the age of fifty-three, a month previously, on the 17th of September.

2. As for the Association you will know all it owes to him. It was he who saw it taking shape and approved the picture which the title Our Lady of the Sacred Heart ratified, and to which 40 days' indulgence was attached for its invocation. He it was who became wholly caught up in this undertaking which he looked upon in a personalized way as being to the glory of his diocese and his time in office, and of which he was very proud. Our problems were his, and our joys his, etc., etc.

Issoudun, October 28, 1879

Dear Father,

1. Your letters have all arrived; I forwarded them to their addresses; let us hope they arrive.
2. Fr. Angelini wrote me a very nice letter informing me that the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences rejected all the Théatine requests despite their intrigues, and both Cardinal Oreglia and the Cardinal Vicar won our case for us. May the Lord be thanked!
3. I am delighted that you have been successful (with the above, 2). May your trip to Spain have a comparable result. Let us hope so despite the difficulties in these times.
4. I am forwarding to you an excerpt from an article in the Marseilles Religious Week. Fr. Deidier finds it hostile; he says he is demanding an immediate withdrawal, and would like you to write a reply immediately to the Bishop. Consider what is the best course of action to take.
5. Try to settle this business of the Annals at Tarragon. We are praying very much for this.
6. Pray, and get others also to pray, especially for Fr. Guyot. He is still depressed because of his father's poor health and things that have happened, very real problems, etc. Issues have gone to his head and he pushes himself to the limit, talks about leaving the Society. He wrote a letter which upset me. I am about to reply with a kind, supportive, warm, letter which I shall try to anchor in the Heart of Jesus. Fr. Albert has taken over his new parish, and he seems relaxed and happy. I have heard no further mention of the ex-priest Augereau since he left Issoudun. Mr. Vuillaume is looking for at least 15,000 francs (approximately 39,780 euros) by December 15, without taking into account the 2,500 francs I sent him to pay for the roofs, etc.

Issoudun, December 10, 1879

Dear Father,

I am sending you my reply to the two letters from Mr. Vuillaume, the first requesting money, the second informing us what you gave and that you were leaving for Osimo. You can read the reply. We were delighted to get the news that the Annals' issue with Osimo had been solved. We fervently thanked our good Mother. We await impatiently what you have to tell us about how our dear scholastics have settled into their studies in Rome, if they are happy and if their attitude is good. How is Fr. Giroux getting on, what does he do, etc.? Here the Scholasticate is breaking up. Brothers Roux, Sahut and Legros have all asked to leave over the past few days. Ceysa and Burnet do not seem very solid to me. Poor Father Barral has no students now and that makes him unhappy. As a consequence, he will have time to prepare his preaching and continue his education, on the understanding that he will not become bored with himself! Here we have had very cold weather and a lot of snow. We are experiencing the most severe cold spell I have ever known in Issoudun. The Very Rev. Fr. Superior is suffering from his throat and stays in his room without there being anything serious to worry about. All the others are well.

Cheerio, Father.

Always devotedly yours in the Sacred Heart,
Ch. Piperon, MisduSC.

A Chevalier letter of the same date accompanies Piperon's letter.

Dear Father,

Thanks for your letters. I am pleased with the peaceful solution of the Osimo issue. I approve wholeheartedly of everything you have done. (The transfer of the Italian Annals from Osimo to Piazza Navona, Rome.) See to it now that our scholastics make better progress in the religious spirit than in learning. Scientia inflat. Do not allow Fr. Giroux to exercise any important authority rule.

Fr. Giroux had just been ordained to the priesthood and had gone to Rome to complete his theological studies. He was appointed to Watertown in 1881 and left the Society a year later, though soon to return. He came back to Issoudun in 1888, had another spell in Rome before leaving for Barcelona where he again left the Society.

Try to make him pious and religious; he is neither one or the other. Obedience is not a strong point with him. He must begin to accept that he is only a student and nothing more than a student. Besides, he is not well disposed to serious work. Watch out, then! He has written a letter to me, and I am sending him a short reply.

Fr. Morisseau has sent on to you fifty or so Our Lady of the Sacred Heart books (Chevalier's own work). Send a copy to Fr. Daume and to Monsignor Druon, etc., with good wishes, etc. It must be promoted in Italy. You will try your best to give it as much publicity as possible and have it translated. Put together a prospectus of the work for its promotion and send it on to me.

I am waiting for the texts you promised me. There is much talk of Bishop Marchal going to Bourges (as Archbishop), but there is nothing official yet.

Joseph Marchal, born in 1822, a native of the Vosges, was an unqualified Ultramontane, an upholder of the Papacy in any Church-State issues - see here Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, where the issue is discussed in the context of Church-State relations in France during Chevalier's life-time. Marchal was politically astute and did not undiplomatically fall foul of any Republican political régime in France. He was appointed to Bourges from Belley diocese on January 30, 1880, about six weeks after Chevalier mentioned him in the above letter, bringing his brother, Auguste, with him as Vicar General and who would, eight years later, become his auxiliary Bishop. They had four episcopal years together before the Archbishop died in 1892, May 26.

Let our dear scholastics, who wrote a nice letter to me on the occasion of the 25th anniversary (of the Society's foundation), know that I appreciate it greatly and that I pray for them, and may they pray very much for me.

My regards to Bishop de Luca, Monsignor Druon, etc.

Dear Father,

We read with interest your kind letter of the 10th and all the details presented. We also considered carefully the memorandum from Mr. Vuillaume. We well appreciate the significance of both his and your comments. But what can be done? There is a superior force acting against you. We cannot in any way whatsoever come to your help. Believe me this is something we greatly regret on our part. The costs are enormous, the funds are lacking, and the present straitened general economic circumstances lead to diminished funds. If you yourself could achieve something without compromising too much the future and carry out a part of, if not all, the urgent work, you have complete authority. In such a situation we grant you total freedom. But if you undertake something, do so within the restraint that you can meet the financial demands of the workmen; on our side we can promise you nothing. We are not even certain that we can send you some contribution towards the next payment of the workmen at Easter. You can see that our embarrassment is also our regret. You decide for yourself, then, what you can do. Since this work can be done piecemeal, you might, perhaps, first set about what is most needed and leave the rest to be undertaken in keeping with your resources.

We await, Father, a little contribution for the Annals, one which is topical. There isn't much time. Our venerated Fr. Superior is still laid up.

All good wishes to you and our dear confrères.
Yours devotedly in the Sacred Heart,

Ch. Piperon, MisduSC.

Dear Father,

If Bishop de Luca still belongs to this world extend to him my very best wishes. We pray continually for him. May the Lord preserve him for us!

Dear Father,

1. I approve of all you tell me and all that the Cardinal Vicar suggests in relation to Messrs. Angelini and Scalsi, etc. Do what you can.
  2. I think your new cover is very acceptable – only the Issoudun coat of arms are surmounted by a crown.
  3. If the Post Office find this address acceptable, it would be preferable to address it to the Reverend Fr. Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, 32 Sapienza St; my preference is for this. If this address is not acceptable, use your name.
  4. I greatly sympathize with you on your problems both at Osimo and with Fr. Giroux (see above, article 709). Do what you can.
  5. I have recovered my health, thank God.
  6. Thank our good scholastics for the kind letter they wrote to me for the feast of Christmas and for the New Year. I send them through you my sincere good wishes. Let them be before all else good religious striving more and more towards perfection! May they be edifying, industrious, modest, obedient, mortified, free from the exercise of their own will, etc.! Let them all pray for me and become saints.
- 6.(sic) Do not keep us waiting too long for the next article for our Issoudun Annals.

7. Brother Legros became bored; he has left. Brother Ceysat is shaking in his boots (he left on the 30th of December this year), and Brother Brunet isn't dependable. Brother Sahut, as you are aware, has left... These are passing vocations. Father Lanctin has written informing us that Brother Véron is bad for the youngsters because in no way whatever does he have a religious spirit; he very assertively calls for him to be removed. I fully agree that we should release him. Fr. Deidier writes to me that things are not going very well with Brother Gérard, that this unfortunate youngster has no religious or even priestly vocation. He wants him to be recalled and sent away. What do you think? His health is much better, so it seems.

The Watertown house is in the same circumstances as before. Fr. Durin is not thinking of leaving any longer, but he wants to come to France... Fr. Marie gives offence to all, getting the backs up of everyone with his brusqueness. I don't know what to do if I am to keep this house, and, nevertheless, it is imperative that it be kept. What is to be done?

My good wishes to Bishop de Luca. How is he? I am so concerned about him!

Dear Father,

I received your kind letter this evening; many thanks. I am annoyed by the problems that the issue of the Council is creating for you (in Rome, presumably). Since it is laid down, why not come? Try to do the best you can to make them see reason. Fr. Albert asks to be released from his vows. The Bishop of Aix has written to me to say that he has asked his secretary to reply to him because he himself (Albert) petitioned him (the Bishop) before his last trip. (The Bishop left for Rome around the 15th of November 1879.) Engage yourself with this and set it going.

Thank our good scholastics for their kind letter. I am sending the proofs of the Annals to you this evening to be corrected. See if they are acceptable to you and return them immediately. Also send on the thanksgiving of grace you mention. Fr. Morisseau has been suffering from fatigue over 15 days. Brother Letonnelier is very ill; one greatly fears for him. This is what explains the long delay in everything. There is scarcely anybody available for the office because little Brother Alexander is also laid up (the latter worked in the office).

Article 714

To Monsignor Gallo Filippo.

B 18791231A

Undated, late 1879

Monsignor Gallo,

The very venerable president of the Council décretif (this word is not in the dictionary) in reply to a letter from the Archbishop of Bourges has given rise to an odd confusion. One would have to say that His Excellency has not understood the matter. There are three issues quite distinct: the Association which is worldwide, the archconfraternity for the devotees of Bourges, and the archconfraternity centres at Issoudun set up by pontifical brief dated (Chevalier doesn't provide the date), creating the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart with the authorization to enrol individually the names of Catholics from all over the world. Article 2 of the Association's statutes clearly states this to be so, and the brief, far from contradicting it, by its words granting indulgences to all (omnibus, etc.) states the contrary. This specific issue is, then, indisputable.

Secondly, the Archbishop of Bourges asked Rome in 1869 to favour the Issoudun Association by having it constituted a Universal archconfraternity, granting it the right to grant indulgences or privileges to all the particular confraternities established by it throughout the world.

The Holy See replied that, for the time being, the title of archconfraternity would only be granted to the diocese of Bourges alone, together with the privilege of associating the Confraternities of the same name and granting them the indulgences and privileges originally granted by the Holy, Apostolic, See to the said Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart: "ejusdem nominis et instituti Sacerdotes in Diocesi Bituricensi tantum ... ut possent aggregare concedimus illisque omnes et singulas indulgentias ipsi confraternitati a Sede apostolica concessas communicare valeant". One can look at the decree. From the foregoing, it clearly follows that the Association, while becoming an archconfraternity in the diocese of Bourges, has always enjoyed the right to enrol individual names from all over the world since the brief in no way whatsoever takes away this privilege.

Never, but never, did the Issoudun Confraternity associate to itself particular confraternities outside the Archdiocese of Bourges since, aware that we did not have the right, we never did so. To state the contrary is a calumny against which we protest, together with our Archbishop, with total conviction.

1. Yes, it is regrettable that we are always late bringing out our Annals. Because of this uncertainty we lose subscribers. We must return to regularity. Try to be in readiness a month beforehand always.

Issoudun, January 10, 1880

Dear Father,

I am overwhelmed with work.

1. Many thanks for your kind letter. From the moment that there is a purpose in that to which you give your signature, nothing should come in the way... You may do so, then. Since the matter is appropriate you will be granted 600 francs (about 1,855 euros) for each scholastic who is not a priest. Fr. Morisseau will forward this amount to you. I don't know how much longer we can keep meeting all these expenses.
2. Fr. Durin, under the pretext that he is in need of money to meet his debts and claiming that the mother house owes money to particular houses, presents a claim for 2,150 francs (roughly 6,660 euros) without being embarrassed in any way. How do you fit in such a claim with all our other financial responsibilities? It's quite impossible.
3. I forward a little communication for the Superior of the Polish sisters. Would you kindly forward it to her. Do what you can for these good and saintly women. If they were dependent on our Society alone, it would be better. There is nothing, absolutely nothing, to be done with Mother Felicity. Her approach is to ignore all we offer her and whatever is a sensible way of acting.
4. Fr. Bontemps from Niort has decided to come to us. The Bishop of Poitiers is holding him back until he has a replacement. He is a good candidate. I have heard nothing further about the former priest Augereau following his time in Issoudun. It's hard to understand.
5. Take advantage of the proposals in the 'Voice of Truth' (Voce della Verità) if they seem helpful to you.
6. I am very pleased with the good attitude of our dear scholastics. I hope that they will continue to be like this and become good and holy religious. Let me know quite frankly what you think of Fr. Gérard. I am no more than half confident about him. I do not believe that he has a true religious vocation. Supervise him at close quarters so that he is given to regularity and adaptability under your direction, follows the courses with the others. If you think sufficiently sound, point him towards our American house which will fall apart if nobody is sent there.

The Archbishop of Montreal, who was very pleased on Friday last to stop over at Issoudun, seems to have a lively interest in our Watertown house. His Grace is persuaded that if we can wait and make some sacrifices by way of personnel, we are likely to have a very prosperous undertaking within a few years. He was very pleased with our house in Rome.

7. Fr. Guyot is once again the devil's whip. (Does the adjective suggest that Chevalier, teasingly, is making name play with his correspondent?!) This man, with his questionable judgement, fixed ideas, real pride, is a danger to our Society. If one says to him that the Petite Oeuvre is doing very well, he replies that it is so much worse and the pupils would be better off elsewhere. If one says to him that the scholastics in Rome are motivated by the best intentions, and are a good group, he again answers that they are in bad shape. If one says to him that such a one as Brother Véron has no vocation, that Brothers Legros, Sahut, Leroux, Cressat are lacking in ability and that it's a good thing that they are no longer with us, he will disagree. If one says to him that the priests of the Sacred Heart and the parish are edifying he will say: "I don't believe any of that." As for the present novices who are good and intelligent, he writes to Fr. Píperon that it would be so much better for them if they were in another Novitiate where they would have a proper religious training... The Arles house can no longer put up with him, that of America (Watertown) horrifies him. What is to be done with an assistant like this who wants to be listened to and believed? Fr. Miniot is beginning, somewhat, to share Fr. Guyot's views. Fr. Ramot has become absorbed in them. I am sending you on his letter.

Fr. Ramot speaks approvingly of Fr. Navarre for Rome, but Fathers Píperon and Morisseau think that he is not to be associated with that level. Father Chatelat would certainly be better suited to the place, but Fr. Guyot does not think it is his (Chatelat's) kind of calling, and for the rest with regard to his bearing, piety, conversation, religious spirit, we are more than happy with him at Issoudun. What is to be done? What is your view?

Fr. Guyot has written me a very impertinent letter concerning the assessment of Brother Marie. I am sending it on to you with my reply which has the approval of our confrères. Fr. Píperon said to me: your letter to Fr. Guyot has opened my eyes. You are completely in the right. You will return this letter with Fr. Guyot's piece of paper and the report. I have received another report which is very favourable (to Marie); I shall send it to you.

8. We got the ciborium from the Duchess of Parma. It is magnificent, monstrance-like in style on a pedestal. There are emeralds in the two medallions representing St. Pius V and St. Robert. The cup has a mounting of the figure of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in enamel. It is very large. The names of princes are engraved around the top. I am sending you a line of verse by Mademoiselle J. Pierrot. Correct it, and let us have a word about the ciborium in the next issue (of the Annals). Are you hurrying to send on material (for the Annals)?

Cheerio, dear friend.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Is there anything yet about an Archbishop for us? Could you shortly receive Brother Ilge and Brother Gérard who is feeling much better?

Ilge, a native of Werdigen, Germany, born 1860, priest, 1884, held various appointments until expelled from the Society in 1897, dying a Carthusian in Lucca, Italy, in 1931. He will figure prominently, almost to the point of tedium, before finally leaving the Society – see below, passim!

L 18800115

Issoudun, January 15, 1880

Dr. Moulin is dead. Pray for him.

Dear Father,

1. You should have had my letter today which will provide the right kind of answer you were looking for. Do what you wish, then, since it is for the best, and do not worry in the least about it.
2. I am sending back the article by Mr. Vuillaume. It is very good. Thanks a million.
3. We are running out of patience waiting on the article for the next issue of the Annals.(!)
4. Fr. Guyot forwarded to me a long memorandum of complaints which is nothing other than a summary of his gripes. It was sent to me alone. As far as I know he sent nothing to the Council. I showed this piece for the prosecution, as absurd as it is unfair, to Fr. Píperon who was painfully saddened by it. Having read it, he exploded: "...the unfortunate Fr. Guyot is blind. That which is good seems bad to him. It is a frightful experience; I have been through that. He is obsessed. All this is the work of the devil who is letting himself loose against our work, etc.". Fr. Píperon wrote a good letter to him trying to disabuse him of his ideas, but it made no impact on his prejudiced, sick, mind. I replied to him putting paid to all his erroneous presuppositions or interpretations. My reply only served to agitate him yet further. He wanted to leave the Society under the pretext that we have no formation process whatsoever and the Institute was dead-born. He appeared to calm down somewhat as six weeks went by in silence before the report of Brother Marie again led to his being beside himself. I am sending on to you this report, Fr. Guyot's unbelievable letter, and my reply. After that we prayed and asked for prayers, and then today Fr. Guyot wrote a nice letter to Fr. Píperon in which he says that there is a calming impact making its presence felt in his spirit, that his mind is becoming clear by grace, and he realizes his errors, understands that he was under the influence of an evil spirit, and, in consequence, not yet having enough courage and humility to make his apologies to me, he asks Fr. Píperon to do so for him. He acknowledges that the thought came to him to prepare a memorandum to be forwarded to Rome (the Vatican), etc. It would be repeating what the ex-priest Captier had done. One must feel sorry for this good priest and pray for him. The grace of the Sacred Heart and Our Lady will prevail.

Fr. Piperon cannot find Fr. Guyot's original memorandum. Here is virtually what it substantially had to say:

- a. The Society was a human foundation and in no way whatsoever directed (led) in a supernatural manner.
- b. We have produced no worthy individual of value and solid piety.
- c. That all the Congregations had saints from their beginnings and we have none.
- d. That I am crushing the Institute into the tomb by bad, wholly human, leadership riddled with expediency which I am forcing on it.
- e. That I am neither open or in good faith! He offers as an example my giving my vote at the Chapter to Fr. Marie in order to make him my Assistant, and to his disadvantage since I had committed myself to do the opposite, something which is completely untrue. And that I promised Fr. Papin that he would preach for Lent at Bourges Cathedral, when I had said the opposite.
- f. He identifies me with the opening of the Arles chaplaincy and the take-over of St. James of the Spanish, stating that I had recourse to duplicity, etc.
- g. That I accept people without a vocation and that I refuse to send them away, etc. Here you have more or less the thrust of what he is saying. I am happy to tell you that the work of grace is having an impact on him. The Devil has thoroughly shaken him. I think my letter made an impact on him.

Cheerio, my friend.

I also fully approve the phrasing by the Master of the Sacred Palace, together with what you have added to it. Fr. Do not worry yourself as much as you are doing. The answer I gave to Fr. Thomas about the paper applies also to you and the other fathers. As for supervision, do whatever Fr. Lanctin wants.

Moreover, this coming Tuesday I am going to Chezal-Benoît with Fr. Piperon and everything will be arranged. Try then to get on as brothers with each other, I beseech you, and do not be continually bothered about things which could so easily be solved. I do not see anything inappropriate in what you have written to dear Fr. Deidier; it could, in fact, do you a lot of good.

Dear Father,

It is pointless, then, to rent the Spanish lodgings. I haven't had anything yet from Spain... The 29th is close. What is to be done if there is a dispersal? Ask Cardinal Nina to write immediately in our interests to the Spanish Government. For my part I shall write to the Bishop of Barcelona and to Father Morgades. It is our novices we would be sending there if it were possible.

I shall be writing at the same time to Belgium, Holland, Switzerland and England to find out if there might not be a refuge on offer for us if Spain closed its doors.

2. If you could find a kindly soul who would like to buy a little house in the country at Albano (Italy), I would gladly approve. As for us, we are unable to do so for the moment.
3. Yes, I got all your letters, and you should have had mine also.
4. The Chapter decided by way of experiment that each one should formulate his own private prayers. I foresee this as a disaster. We are not sufficiently trained (educated) to do that. Bishop de Luca should change this part.

Dear Father,

1. Many thanks for your letters and the good news you have for us. I read with keen interest the account our young men sent to us about Cardinal Nina's mass and your audience with the Pope.
2. Brother Bizeuil is a sub-deacon, and Brother Letonnelier is getting better.
3. The unfortunate Fr. Papin on the eve of his departure to preach for Lent at Moulins compromised himself with little Leon through out-of-place familiarity. He cannot remain. In any case he does not have a religious spirit. We are of the view that we should bid farewell to him after Lent... What do you think?
4. Fr. Morisseau believes that he has not as yet come to any arrangement with Daniel about the Spanish statue. He will act according to your wishes.
5. I am forwarding the unhappy news from America. You can see the abyss which the unfortunate Fr. Durin has dug by taking no notice of the advice I continually gave him when requesting him not to spend more than he was getting. What is to be done now? I don't know from what side he should be given his head... He is looking for money and we haven't any. What do you think?

6. It is quite impossible for us also to let you have the 17,000 francs (about 52,660 euros) which Mr. Vuillaume wants for the month of March. Try to find at least half of it.

7. I am sending on the proofs of what was decided at the Chapter about religious discipline. I think this is very useful, very worthwhile... Check it, correct, add on to it, and let me know what you think of it.

2. The Constitutions of the Religious of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Russia, seem impressive and well presented to my way to thinking. Try to bring this Society into association with ours. It is all more propitious if Mother Felicity refuses to accept anybody, and very likely waits for the new Archbishop of Bourges to close the door of her convent which would be scandalous and calamitous. You don't know a good and saintly woman who would devote herself to, and take charge of, this little Society which under different leadership would recruit quite well? Write to the good Russian sisters to find out if they might not help out.

Issoudun, March 3, 1880

Dear Father,

1. I got your telegram today. What is the reason for this? Why is the Pope sending this candle?

2. And the April Annals, have you thought about it? One is taken aback; and then in Issoudun one has to offer an article come what may. This disjointedness in our Annals is not of its nature likely to make it flourish. If you cannot do everything, and I understand, fair enough! Draw up plans. Decide in advance on the articles in depth, and then entrust this article with its follow-up to Fr. Deidier for example, another to Fr. Lavialle, one to yourself, and also Fathers Guyot and Ramot if you think it opportune. You, having thought about it beforehand, will co-ordinate your contents and we can have something worthwhile which will always be available in advance. Otherwise one is using broken rods. Think about it, my good friend, think about it. Make our Annals exciting. This is most particularly important!

3. I don't know when it will be possible to send you the 8 or 9,000 francs (24,780 or 27,879 euros) you need to finish off your payments. Perhaps towards the end of the month. Try and be patient.

4. What are we going to do about the Watertown house? You suggest borrowing, but from whom? Through a mortgage... with all the debts we already have and the Rome house which never stops draining us (financially) and, then, our other undertakings, which would lead to the certain ruin of the mother house, particularly in the bad times we are now passing through. We are on the threshold of a social storm and it cannot be ignored... May the good Lord have pity on us!

Cheerio, dear Father.

NB: Could you get an Apostolic Blessing for our young girls who are ending their retreat on the 18th of this month? Madame de Bonneval would like you to get for her on a lovely printed sheet of paper a Papal blessing for herself and her family through to the third generation from the hour of death, and a blessing for her niece's first Communion, Miss de Nicolai, also in writing.

When are we going to have approval for the enrolment of those at a distance? (This refers to the archconfraternity.) When can we distribute the membership diplomas to our archconfraternity? We are being asked about it. It's not very pleasant to keep on saying: wait!

L 18800311

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, March 11, 1880

Dear Father,

Like yourself I am moved by the candle sent by the Pope, but why? And for what purpose? This is something your letter today does not touch on.

I approve the Scalsis' plan which you have forwarded to me, being the same as that which you sent on a little while ago. But what I do not approve of is the Cardinal Vicar's change of mind. On the first of February you wrote to me: "At last the Cardinal Vicar accepts that we must both in Issoudun and Rome have the right to enrol those elsewhere, etc." And you (now) state that His Eminence now only wants one centre alone: that of (in) Rome. This is a joke! How can it be that Issoudun, the cradle and origin of everything, etc., would no longer be significant? It is being despoiled of its essential and natural rights. This is unacceptable! It represents an outrageous act of injustice which we shall never accept and against which we shall always vehemently protest because it offends against the most sacred titles and the most just rights. If the issue has to be taken up with the Pope once more, so it will be. For two years now there is no end to lovely promises... all leading to what? I am beginning to be weary and sick of all this... Stand up for Issoudun and challenge this with all your determination. This would finish us off.

Have you received the proofs of a little work on Religious Discipline which I sent to you three weeks ago? You did not mention anything about it to me; it was accompanied by a letter. Where has Fr. Albert's release from vows gone? Ask at the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars if it would be acceptable if I had no more than the title of parish priest and Fr. Piperon that of assistant parish priest, while having the parish looked after by three or four curates. I would then retire to the Sacred Heart, but would, nevertheless, spend one or two hours at the presbytery in the afternoon to deal with any important issues, and on Sundays, if necessary, I would spend the whole day there.

Cheerio, my friend. Look after yourself. Do not become over-tired. I am aware of your situation; it is impossible. Do not worry yourself too much. What do you want? The good Lord will in the end have pity on us.

Wholly yours in C.J.

L 18800314

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, March 14, 1880

Dear Father,

I wrote to you two days ago expressing somewhat vehemently, perhaps, my thoughts and expectations. Nothing has changed. We cannot accept under any circumstances what is being put forward: Roman centralization after all the promises made to us... It would destroy the Association, our undertakings and the Society itself. If things were left as they should be, the Rome archconfraternity would become the centre for Rome and the whole of Italy. It seems to me that this is quite enough. Otherwise, it is suicide... the infringement of every right and a promise made many times; no, never! We shall call upon the kindness, the uprightness and fairness of Leo XIII. This baffling vendetta has become virtual persecution... I approve of your latest letter to the Cardinal Vicar which you sent on to me today. Hold tight and be firm! We cannot capitulate. Remain unyielding and do not allow yourself to be taken unawares. In the copy of the new regulations you sent me in the other letter there is mention of a ticket or an admission form which has to be given to each association on entry. This condition is an embarrassment, very much so. Why is it being brought in since in our statutes of the Association of Our Lady there is no mention of it. It is enough to write or to have one's name enrolled in the register. This is perfectly satisfactory. Try and have this required formality of the ticket done away with. One may provide it by all means, to those who ask for it, but it must not be made obligatory! Once an associate dies, God is aware of it and he shares in the fruits of the masses. What more needs to be done? Cheerio, Fr., take good care of yourself.

Your telegram came too late. Everything was over. Thanks for your good will. Yesterday the Pope's candle arrived (26 francs for postage!). It is quite lovely. Once again one has to ask what is the purpose of this gift? There it is anyway. If there is something which is to be recalled in connection with this gift, perhaps you could refer to it in a forthcoming issue of the Annals. Speaking of this last, what are you thinking of doing? I thought that you would have sent an article in depth. But there's nothing!

You do not string a word together. Why this omission, my friend? Is it because you haven't had the time? The bringing out (of the Annals) is important. It is only you who can successfully bring it out.

Issoudun, March 25, 1880

Dear Father,

1. I have just now received your letter. Yes, I appreciate the importance of Leo the XIII's candle. One can put it to good use, and I thank you.
2. I was expecting 8,000 francs (roughly 24,780 euros) which is still due to us from Madame Boucheron for the mass of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart foundation at Issoudun. She was due to bring it on the feast of St. Joseph and she didn't come. I wrote to her. I hope that one day or another I can very shortly send it on to you. Be patient.
3. Madame Boucheron wants to set up another mass in perpetuity at Issoudun in honour of St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart. The intentions of this new mass are very beautiful. I am forwarding the letter to you. Hold on to it. You could write an article on this topic.

4. I am sending on to you an article by Fr. Lavielle which I have only just now received. You can deal with it as you judge opportune.

5. I am so sorry about the work (writings) you have carried out for the Annals and which hasn't been used. It could perhaps be drawn upon later. Normally the contents of the following month must be here by the 15th of the preceding month. Without such a time table we would never meet the deadlines... So, for example, if our April Annals were not printed, it would be the 15th of the month of April before they came out. The print workers do nothing during the final days of the month, or on the first days of Easter week. As you are now aware of the need to be ready in advance, bear it in mind and prepare your articles a good month beforehand.

6. No, the directory (on the Religious Life) is not urgently required. I appreciate your advice. Change the text. Soften that which is harsh and give certain statements another shape.

7. I haven't seen Fr. Morisseau's reply on the issue of mass stipends. What you are asking for seems to be fair. I shall talk to him about it; he will provide you with a satisfying solution.

8. How much I regret, my friend, all you have to worry about. I would like to spare you by taking all of them on myself! I am very much one with you in heart and feeling. I understand you because you likewise understand me... courage. The Sacred Heart coming to our aid, we shall win out.

Dear Father,

1. I am sending on 5,600 francs to complete the 9,000 francs you looked for as you already received 4,000 last week. Let me know you got them.

2. What is going to become of us following the passing of laws to expel religious Congregations? Within three months. They are being offered to us for approval. It is unworkable! Our position, as well, would be more disastrous still. And, otherwise, would the Government be favourable? I doubt it! And, moreover, on what conditions? We must keep our heads, then, before the storm, and get in touch with Rome to find out what line of conduct we should follow. If the Novitiates are dispersed, which is more than likely, where are we to take ours? Barcelona? Perhaps the house which was offered to you? Find out if it is still available to us. This would be providential! The Little Work will also be displaced... Where can we put it? Would Barcelona be also here a possibility? I foresaw that we would be faced with veritable disasters. All our financial resources are exhausted. Rome has swallowed everything (the Rome house). We are in debt. Oh how we need to hand ourselves over to divine Providence and ask the good Lord to have pity on us, as well as appealing to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph! I hope that Our Lord will not abandon us... Let us always cry out; let the difficulties come. Isn't that so? It should be like that.

3. And your Annals article does not come quickly! If we had to wait for it, what would become of the Annals? Think seriously about this publication and be helpful to it... Keep it in mind well beforehand. Here everybody is well. I have returned from the Novitiate. I am very pleased that all goes well. Brother Letonnelier has returned to his family. We shall do everything possible to see that he stays there. The new Archbishop has not yet been installed. I cannot understand the delays.

Issoudun, April 7, 1880

Dear Father,

I am sending on to you the requests of Fathers Ariens and Grom. They cannot get on any longer with Fr. Durin and wish to stay in America. Brother Thévant also wishes to be released from his temporary vows, and, likewise, Brother Charles whose bad attitude according to Fr. Durin makes him impossible to deal with. (He had been in Watertown since October, 1879, and would finally leave in October, 1881.) The Watertown house now comprises only Fr. Durin and Brother Benjamin Grom. Fr. Marie has asked to return home (to France), but he was requested to stay on at Watertown. We await his reply. We can foresee that within three months the French Government will break up:

1. Our Novitiate. I have given thought, then, to its transference to Barcelona and the house which was given to you. Write as quickly as possible to Mr. Morgades to find out if it is still at our disposal. Then I would go and visit it to find out if it was suitable for our purposes and carry out the appropriate adaptation. Let me have the address and let me know to whom I should address the letter. If we cannot have this house, could we get another? Get going immediately on this issue. Fr. Guyot is here at Issoudun; he has accepted, and he should benefit from it.
2. If the Petite Oeuvre is broken up I shall enter into negotiations with the new Archbishop of Bourges to have it joined to the Saint-Célestin minor seminary. Two or three of us would go to Bourges with the youngsters to look after them. The new Archbishop has not yet been inducted.
3. If we are driven from the Sacred Heart by the closure of our church, we shall take ourselves to Saint-Cyr to serve the parish. This is providential.
4. The scholastics involved can be sent to Rome.
5. I have received all the copy for the May Annals. It is excellent. I appreciate your comments on religious discipline. I shall make use of what you say (the reference is to the little work on religious discipline, see above, passim). Our problem has been that of living outside serious discipline... We have had superiors who have abused the motto: Ama et fac quod vis. Using this principle you, Fr. Vandel, Fr. Georgelin etc. have been excellent, whereas for others it has been ruinous leading to a pronounced weakness in religious observance. If we continue on this route, it will lead to a loss of vocations. We have to deal with humanity such as it is, needing the experience of firm discipline. It is only by such means that one can keep oneself in regularity and virtue. I have read the disciplinary rules of the Jesuits and Redemptorists... These are much more seriously different to what I am looking for.

We are not dealing with men confirmed in grace. We are continuously coming to grips with the demands of human nature which seeks everywhere and at all times to free itself from the yoke and take life easily. It is time to put ourselves to work, seriously so, without which we shall vegetate and never have a serious (proper) community.

Cheerio, my friend.

Brothers Vandel, Védère, Meyer, Fora and Léopold Hartzer are accepted for minor orders, Merg and Peters to the tonsurate, Bizeuil to the diaconate.

Benjamin Grom at Watertown is accepted for the diaconate, and the priesthood when Frs. Durin and Marie judge it to be opportune.

For the priests and brothers in the house.*

L 18800413

Issoudun, April 13, 1880

Dear Father and Brothers,

I warmly thank you for your good wishes marking the feast (Easter). This makes me happy and draws down on our beloved Society all the blessings we are in need of. Fr. Jouët and the priests of the Council do not consider, given the circumstances, it opportune to open a fund in favour of our Rome church. It is best then to postpone it as regards France. As for other countries you could, as something worthwhile, undertake it. So far as the Annals is concerned, I would only exclude the last sentence: today we open, etc. Everything else remains.

Your article (Jouët's) is very good, a hundred times better than that of Fr. Lavialle. Start thinking now about the June article. It must be forwarded in advance. I also leave in the footnotes (nota). I am of the opinion that this article, taken as a whole, will bring much pleasure and do good.

2. I sent you Madame Boucheron's letter setting up a daily mass in perpetuity at Issoudun in honour of St. Joseph with the gracious intentions you are aware of. Say a word about it in the forthcoming Annals.
3. We sent our eight Rhetoric students from the Petite Oeuvre to Saint-Gérard yesterday, not to commence immediately their Novitiate but to provide leisure time for them, while continuing their studies, so that they can give closer concentration to the religious life and be in a position within a few months to pursue their vocation with some awareness of its significance. This could be subject-matter for the forthcoming newsletter from the Petite Oeuvre. Think about it.
4. Fr. Bontemps from Niort has at last decided to enter the Novitiate at the end of this month. The Bishop of Poitiers has finally agreed. I was pleased to read in the Universe that he preached on Saturday in your church. That is very good. Try to get a copy of his sermon.
5. Fr. Papin has at last been sent away from the Society.
6. Fr. Thomas was with Fr. Barral, creating an unhealthy atmosphere at the Petite Oeuvre. Here is part of the reason why we also sent the students to Saint-Gérard (see 3 above). As for Thomas himself, we have sent him to the Arles house. I can well believe that he will create more problems for us!
7. As regards the archconfraternity's activities and the enrolment of those at a distance, what's happening? It is truly disgraceful. For a year we have been requested to provide affiliation diplomas; finally we are left in the lurch. Hurry up with an answer in keeping with what we have so many times been promised. In this present set-up we are heading towards discredit and collapse. Insta opportune et importune. Something promised, something owed.

Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Father,

I hadn't yet received the talk (that by the Bishop of Poitiers, see letter 736) when you sent me your telegram. Only this morning am I in receipt of your letter enclosing it. I took it to the printers straightaway. Everything was held up to print it this evening. Six copies as you requested will be sent to you. All those you have put forward will be called to vows and to orders. Within a few days I shall send you the printed profession ceremonial. It is on the Gospel side (in church) that Clement XIII is shown. I received your proofs for May (the Annals).

L 18800423

Issoudun, April 13, 1880

Dear Father,

I am commissioned to inform you that Fr. Casas, Brothers Klotz and Hartzler are accepted for perpetual vows. You will favour them by letting them become aware of the problems affecting Congregations at the present time so that they will not pronounce their vows without being aware of the circumstances. We decided in Council to provide this advice.

You can put forward Brothers Klotz, Carrière and Hartzler for the subdiaconate, Brothers Vandell, Védère, Meyer, Fora and L. Hartzler to minor orders, and Brothers Merg (Émile) and Peeters (Henri) to tonsure only. We shall consider later the minor orders.

The threat of the events pressing upon us led to our making a vow to St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, here is the thrust of it:

1. If we are safeguarded from disasters, that is to say if our basilica and house are not taken from us and ransacked, we shall do all in our power to crown the statue in our church and we shall engage ourselves to do our utmost to spread the cult of St. Joseph.

2. We commit ourselves as of now to recite each day, morning, noon, night, the "Remember You" to St. Joseph after that to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and this in each house; to celebrate each Wednesday the community mass at St. Joseph's altar if the community has one, and then to celebrate, and have celebrated, with as much solemnity as possible, the feasts of St. Joseph. You will, Father, see to it that these devotional practices are carried out in our dear Roman house.

We were greatly interested on reading about your audience with Leo XIII and Cardinal Pie's homily (delivered in the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Piazza Navona, April 10, 1880. The Cardinal, Bishop of Poitiers since 1849, was to die a month later, May 1880. For the ceremony of the coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, September 8, 1869, the future Cardinal Pie preached a memorable homily, see Annals, November 1869, p.282-298).

Pray especially for us at this time so that we do not fail in our task during the dark days about to come upon us. The hostile press more and more inflames the hot-headed. Only a miracle can hold back France from the horrors attending a revolution.

Please accept my good wishes in the Sacred Heart.

Ch. Piperon, MisduSC.

Chevalier adds:

PS: On Tuesday next Archbishop Marchal will be solemnly installed in the Cathedral (Bourges). There will be no celebration for outsiders (the faithful). I cannot attend the reception since on Tuesday, as I have written to you, I must go to Paris for a meeting of all Superior Generals to discuss and agree on a common course of action. I shall let you know about it. I am forwarding 2,000 francs to you, of which 1,500 francs is for the upkeep of the young students and 500 francs are stipends for the masses Fr. Morisseau sent on to you... The safe is empty. It will be very difficult to provide masses all the time at 2 francs for your two sacristan priests (not doing pastoral work outside the house; 2,000 francs, roughly 6,190 euros; 2 francs, roughly 6 euros). Only for 1 franc, and 1 franc 50 if the latter is possible. This is about all we can promise in these difficult times.

Fr. Bontemps has at last arrived in Issoudun. He leaves on Monday next for the Novitiate. What a candidate to treasure! (He would become the first Superior of the Gilbert Island Missions.) The curate at Selles-sur-Cher, an excellent priest, is due to enter the Novitiate on Trinity Sunday. (Chevalier is writing about Louis Couppé, the future Apostolic Vicar; Bishop of New Britain.) These are marvellous vocations.

Gagnault has just written a vicious article against religious Congregations. (An editorial in the Echo, newspaper, Issoudun, see below.) I shall shortly forward the reply. Next week you will be getting 12 copies of our ceremonial for the taking of the habit and for profession. You will make use of it. Cardinal Pie's homily sparkled like gold. Oh, how well you have done getting him to preach in our church. Try to get the other French cardinals and bishops to do the same when they come to Rome. Try to get hold of Cardinal Bertolini. (1813-1887, Prefect of the Congregation of Rites, unsympathetic to the MSCs since he was very close to certain members of the contentious Rome archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.)

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, April 24, 1800

Dear Father,

I have just returned from the Paris meeting (of Superior Generals). Everything went very well. There was full agreement on asking nothing in the way of authorization from the government. I went to see Monsignor Tonti at the Nunciature who complained that you hadn't answered his letter. Fr. Piperon was asked to write to you about air currents to be set up underneath the Church of St. James of the Spanish. The Council has approved this for quite some time. Set about this work together with what you refer to in today's letter and to which Mr. Vuillaume refers. Since it is needed, it has to be done.

With regard to Spain, how can we set up a foundation project there since we have no members? You say that we have decided on a Spanish foundation as superseding all others, and that is true. But what foundation have we made in the meantime? None, as you are well aware, excepting that of Rome. At this present time, if the revolution gets rid of us, we are then very much forced to look elsewhere for a place of refuge. Providence, then, will have something to say about this. But if we are left alone in France, it will for the time being be impossible for us to go into Spain. I shall go to Barcelona only if a house is offered to us. Then I shall consider the cost of improvements and purchases arising from taking possession. Without the security of a refuge, what would I be doing in Spain? We look forward to Mr. Morgades' reply. Mr. Sans only offers me temporary hospitality. You say that we must begin by wanting a foundation and going on from there to make a decision. But the foundation is sought, you know that... It will happen when we can do so. But there must be the likelihood, with the presence of members, and serious minded ones at that. We must not repeat the sad American story. (Watertown events, vicissitudes.)

To ordain with a dismissorial letter, if that is possible, is best. As for patrimony, since those in Rome do not have any, the question is solved. You should have received the 2,000 francs (about 6,190 euros) I sent you.

Dear Father,

I am, as you requested, replying to your letter by return of post.

The Council went back on its earlier decision on the understanding that there was no necessity to receive at the same time both tonsure and minor orders. But I understand now, having already informed the Cardinal Vicar, one cannot any longer withdraw. There is, accordingly, nothing wrong in putting forward your young men both for tonsure and the two minor orders. You may do so. I got the Bishop of Poitiers' homily. Many thanks.

May 1, 1880*

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,

With your leading article on Sunday last, the guardians of Issoudun were deeply taken aback. You have made us become accustomed, especially latterly, to a more frank, cut and dried approach. You are on a withdrawal course which could be disastrous for you and makes us worry. Without doubt you are a prey to fear, and before the presence of the advancing enemy, a threat on his lips, you do not hesitate to safeguard the pre-eminent status you have achieved. It was not, then, at all necessary to blow the trumpet so loudly. Who compelled you to do that? The politics of the balance of power which you appear to take on will have the disquieting impact of pleasing nobody. Our enemies will not believe in your sincerity and your friends will disengage from you. If you wish to fight on level ground, do so straightforwardly and without being devious. Leave aside dubious principles, those regrettable concessions which have left us in jeopardy.

Having condemned somewhat energetically in your issue of April 4 last the measures considered by you to be arbitrary, high-handed, illiberal, harassing, unfair, inconsistent, illegal, dangerous, condemned by all impartial papers, etc., etc., you yourself give it to be understood that you are about to share with them your complete approval. On what grounds do you argue your cause in order to justify this volte face? You provide none. Have you the power to change what is the essence of things, making error become true and what is good evil? One is drawn to think so. For you the justice of an issue will now depend on some court. It will suffice for you if the supporters are sufficient and you will accept the situation without more ado. You are henceforth on the side of those who maintain that force must always win out over right. It is not acceptable, Sir, for a man of serious purpose who has self-regard, to contradict himself in this way, giving himself such a short dead-line. You go on to prejudge the issue: "If the Senate," you say, "on its return does not accept the projected appeal and accordingly acknowledges the legality of the decrees (those of March 29), we shall approve the policy which is being chosen, and in the name of the law we shall protest against the inappropriate resistance which is being organized."

Some days ago you were saying exactly the contrary, looking upon the government as blind... You raged against it in every way as "...undertaking in this way a campaign of pit-falls, its decrees illegal, being in abeyance before an unfortunate line of thought, and it was on the way towards creating a powerful and unbeatable opposition..."

If the Senate, under the impression that its challenge wasn't worthwhile, or overcome by fear, sanctioned through its silence, or by voting, votes which violated the most sacred and inalienable rights, this could, in your view, lead us all to draw the conclusion that those conclusions were irreformable and wisdom was on its (the Senate's) side. It would, therefore, be acceptable to an ultra-radical Assembly to revive the proscribing legislation of (18)93, confiscating property, sending worthy citizens to exile or the scaffold. If a compliant Senate approved these outrages then, according to your principles (outlook), you must "acknowledge the position it has taken up and in the name of the law remonstrate against the inappropriate resistance of the victims...". There you have, my dear Editor, the logical conclusion which follows from your teaching.

"We shall be supportive," you again add, "of those who compel the Congregations to obey the law and seek that authority which is a pre-requirement for them to exist legally." What a peculiar word, that of order, you would appear to have welcomed, Sir, since April 4, in order to change so radically your way of proceeding. This is what you wrote at that time: "For the moment the authorization, which the Congregations are looking for, would be granted to them by law, they cannot be in doubt about the outcome of their request. The Chamber would reject it and it would be futile to try and make things advantageous for themselves by acknowledging the legality of the decrees. They would then, having had recourse no doubt to the courts at what would be considered an opportune moment, await the verdict. They (the Congregations) find themselves, for the rest, agreeing on this issue with the consultative committee, one of whose members, Mr. Delsol, yesterday presented a clarifying summing-up of the jurisprudence and legislation." Is it possible, Sir, to come up with a reputation as hurtful as this? What confidence can you expect from your readers?

You attribute to Catholics attitudes unbecoming to their honesty and which provokes their religious faith. Here are your words: "The Jesuits (that is to say good Catholics as you acknowledge elsewhere), are able characters, elusively write in all imaginable casuistry, not in the least shy to turn the law to their advantage when they cannot challenge it. They are aware of and know how to put into practice the famous Italian proverb - 'He who made the law knows how to dodge it'; certainly they will use it advantageously." That quotation from a foreign language, from which you leave out the first word, proves without a doubt that your articles consist of cuttings taken from here and there in different papers. I challenge you to choose better sources. Disillusion yourself, Sir, the Jesuits no more than Catholics do not have recourse to trickery, subterfuge, deceit. They are of Christ's school, not that of Machiavelli's. They seek to use their rights to challenge to high heavens what is high-handed and unfair.

What were you thinking of on the 4th of April with respect to that group of citizens which you so gratuitously now attack? It would be good to know. Let us recall your words: "The expelling of the Jesuits, on the supposition that this will come about, will not rid the government of the formidable adversary which it most fears since this opponent, as the 'Mot l'Ordre' (document) rightly notes, is not the Jesuit Congregation but the 'Catholic spirit' which radicals refer to as clerical but is no other than the religious spirit... This campaign is no more than a vexatious harassment damaging to the Republic. All the conservative newspapers are unanimous in laying the blame here."

What has so quickly changed your opinion? What has gone on in your office? What sort of pressures have you undergone? Shaking off your former self "following your fall on the Damascus road" you advise the government to become victorious "by greatly developing State education, perfecting all their schemes, engaging the best teachers, and going on to spread among the younger generation those truths and moral principles such that no-one can surpass the State in presenting before learned people and decent, patriotic, citizens. The Congregations and their spirit (outlook) will soon have disappeared, swept away by the powerful forces of liberty and progress". What is going to happen then to "their unshakeable sense of superiority" which you justly acknowledged on April 4, and which was attributed to them by their most hostile opponents in the latter Senate debates? Do not worry in the least because their striking successes of the past and present will assure those of the future. Your wish to see "religious Congregations and the Congregation spirit" disappear will not be granted. They will be there as long as the world lasts since they have the promise (assurance) of immortality. Their role is to spread the light of science and truth. If through some misfortune your irreligious expectations were fulfilled, society would soon be in the grip of the most unchained forces. Religion is as much needed by man as the bread which nourishes him. It brings order (control) to his conscience; it brings solidity to the family and it is the foundation of good government. There, and with it, you have the foundation stone and anchoring basis of any moral structure. Woe betide him who rejects it.

I cannot, in conclusion, Sir, hold myself back from saying to you that you abuse in the most amazing manner the trust shown to you by the Sacred Heart (the MSC Issoudun community). I appreciate these gentlemen's patience. This Congregation, which over 15 years has helped you to live and prosper, deserves more recognition and was entitled to a better way of behaving towards it on your part. You have then acted perversely.

Issoudun, May 6, 1880

Dear Father,

I received the release from vows of Fathers Ariens and Grom. The expression "blind obedience" must, obviously, always be understood with the meaning it has in the Constitutions. Add the corrective which you mention if you consider it helpful. Nothing better. If you think that it might be necessary to submit this intimate, private, particular, ceremonial for Rome's approval... do so. I believe, and continue to believe, that the approval of Bourges is sufficient in this respect. Take advice and do whatever is suggested. I am amazed that you haven't yet informed me that the 1,500 francs (about 4,640 euros) which I sent to you by registered post 15 days ago, haven't yet arrived. And the contributions for the forthcoming Annals, could you consider letting us have them? They should have been already sent on. The sermon by the Archbishop of Poitiers should be included, but what else besides that? I again appeal to you to be always a month ahead. Take care to ensure this. It is imperative.

Dear Father,

Your letter came this morning and the Invito sacro from the Cardinal Vicar. It is wonderful. Yes, there is in it so much to rid oneself of boredom and worry. Send this remarkable item to all the Catholic papers and weekly religious magazines: it can only serve to have a very good impact at the present time. I was delighted to read the talk given to our young professed students by the Cardinal Vicar. May the Lord be praised! If you think so, present our little ceremonial for approval, having first translated it into Latin and corrected it where you thought fit. Our young men in the Novitiate are delighted with the ceremonial which has greatly impressed them.

Thank especially for me the Cardinal Vicar and our good students for their kind letters.

Dear Father,

Your communication on the death of Archbishop Pie came too late (for the Annals). What I put in isn't as good. You can see for yourself. I am sending you a copy. Already have in mind the July Annals. It is on June 29 that we are due to be scattered (from religious houses). Have you heard anything from Spain? I have heard nothing. We shall arrive at this fatal juncture without knowing what is going to happen. I dread it all. If we cannot be given a place of refuge in Barcelona, look elsewhere. Time is short... here nothing new. What are we going to do with the scholastics, novices, pupils at the Petite Oeuvre? A great concern...

L 18800525

To His Grace Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, May 25, 1880

Your Grace,

The little Society of Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus belongs to your diocese. Its cradle is at Issoudun and its first members are from the Berry. We are auxiliary priests in dependence on your jurisdiction. The Archbishops of Bourges have always been fatherly and our first Superiors. Besides, we are pleased, Your Grace, to look upon you as our head; we are pleased to place ourselves under your paternal protection. You will be, Your Grace, our guide, our support, our Father. We shall always be pleased to have recourse to your enlightenment and advice. Our pleasure and our conviction will be that of doing nothing by ourselves, but rather to follow in every way Your Grace's promptings. It has necessarily to be so since our Congregation, Your Grace, is also yours; and your work is our work. As well, our joys, we would dare to hope, are yours, and our trials yours. Such feelings have always, Your Grace, been ours. Circumstances did not allow us to express them earlier to Your Grace. We are happy to place them in your fatherly heart today.

For some time we have been waiting for an opportune moment such as this to consider with Your Grace the problems which have arisen and to request that you kindly commend the procedures we should follow when faced with the events which are about to break on us. In law, after the Holy Father, you are our first authority, our natural protector and advisor. Accordingly we wait expectantly on your kindness. If the decrees of March 29 are carried out, Your Grace, how are we to act?

1. In the event of a visit by the representatives of the powers that be and being served notice, could we say in the first place that we are not religious but diocesan priests? (The Archbishop on reading this wrote in his own hand: One must not say "We are not religious, but rather we are diocesan missionaries of the Sacred Heart, so called as the ordinance of the diocese has it.") And might Your Grace associate with the diocese those of us who are not here yet? (The answer is: Yes.) We would leave aside all religious habit apparel and wear the dress of the diocesan clergy (The Archbishop: All change of costume is acceptable and could become a necessity.)
2. In the event of dispersal, could I have a presbytery? And curates or administrator priests of the parish of the Sacred Heart, if expelled, could be appointed by Your Grace! (The Archbishop: Yes, provided that the number does not exceed what is needed for the normal service of the parish.) You are aware, Your Grace, that the diocesan authorities in 1872, in order to promote greater unity of administration, and make greater spiritual resources available to the town of Issoudun, graciously asked us to take charge of the parish.
3. In the event that the government came to close the basilica of the Sacred Heart as the community's chapel, could we not keep it, Your Grace, as a chapel of ease, all the more needed in a town of 15,000 people where there would be only one church? (The Archbishop replied that: It would be very appropriate to look for this without any certainty of succeeding.) This project is all the more valid in that our basilica is at a distance from the parish church and situated in an area deprived of pastoral availability. Your Grace could appoint to its ministry those of my confrères whom he would appoint as if diocesan priests (The Archbishop, not surprisingly, answered in the affirmative.)
4. If this plan does not work out, could not, Your Grace, take out a lease on the Sacred Heart house which belongs to me, together with what goes with it, in order to place there wholly diocesan missionaries who would be none other than our confrères. The church would remain open and continue to accept the great number of pilgrims from all parts who visit the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart shrine? (The Archbishop agreed: It would be, I believe, the best solution.)
5. If there is urgency about my confrères needing to be seen, in the eyes of the government, as genuinely priests of your diocese, could not Your Grace provide them with the titles of parish priests or curates from the Issoudun neighbourhood such as: Chouday, Saint Georges, Diou, Chery and the Vicariates of Reuilly and Lury? We would leave the remuneration with the parish priests who serve these places. (The Archbishop thought this suggestion impractical because of the requirement of residential, continuous presence for the diocesan clergy.)
6. If none of these proposals above worked out, would it not be possible to go singly into certain residences with the title of chaplain, tutor, or better still, being completely available to Your Grace, in which case it would be appropriate to disengage from the common life and modify the demands of the vows. (The Archbishop replied that in such an extreme situation, he would not greatly favour taking refuge in particular houses unless it was absolutely necessary. It would be so much better to go to parishes where one could follow the Rule and come together sometimes in twos or threes.)

The Petite Oeuvre of the Sacred Heart.

1. If our apostolic school, made up of picked candidates, cannot remain at Chezal-Benoît in the circumstances which presently hold, would it be possible, Your Grace, to make this undertaking, without moving it from its location, making it either an annex of your minor seminary or a diocesan clerical college? (The Archbishop was not enthusiastic. He thought it would be more problematic to take the school to Issoudun then to leave it at Chezal-Benoît where it might be overlooked. As far as he was concerned he had no plan at the present time for Chezal-Benoît, and in any event he had decided to give the Petite Oeuvre serious consideration.)

2. If this hypothesis (the foregoing) is impractical, could we not, with Your Grace's approval, bring the boys together at the Saint-Célestin minor seminary in separate quarters under the supervision of two or three of my colleagues? The youngsters would share in common with the seminarians the teaching, dining-room, chapel and even the dormitory if that was necessary (This last suggestion was considered impractical by the Archbishop; he also queried Chevalier's suggestion about associating the Petite Oeuvre with the independent-like secondary school in Issoudun, querying whether it was authorized and if not there could be no amalgamation.)

Our Scholastics and Novices.

We have, Your Grace, several scholastics at Issoudun, Chezal-Benoît, Saint-Gérard-le-Puy, where we have our Novitiate. The putting into effect of the March 29 decrees will either lead to the dismissal of these young men or their conscription as soldiers if they are of age and other conditions are met.

To save them from the storm, (a) we would humbly ask Your Grace if, in the event that the Petite Oeuvre remained at Chezal-Benoît, attached either to the minor seminary or the diocesan college, we might not bring the students there and if you would be kind enough to accept them as ecclesiastical students? (The Archbishop was not agreeable because, in the first place, there was no suitable building, and besides he did not think that Chevalier's suggestion could be kept secret, and, once known, it would compromise the major seminary in the eyes of the government.)

It is, then, with the utmost confidence, Your Grace, that we submit these issues to the kindness and wise counsel of Your Grace.

Please accept, Your Grace, my respectful good wishes in C.J.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, June 3, 1880

Dear Father,

I am sending you on 1,500 francs for your last term. (Roughly 4,640 euros.) There is no lack of will in coming to your aid... I would like to have much more for you. Times are not good, financially.

I do not know what we can do about our novices. If we cannot find a place for them in Spain or Switzerland, could you take them? There are twelve of them. Do you have to hand a devoted religious, versed in spirituality, a man of interior depth, wholly given to God who could train them, likewise Fr. Ramot (Novice Master) and his assistant at the same time? Such a one would contribute an estimable service to our Society. It doesn't matter what order he came from provided he is saintly and able to train our candidates.

Then how would you go about separating them (the novices) from the scholastics – is contact not to be feared? Could you meet the cost of 600 or 700 francs a year (1,850 – 2,165 euros) if that is possible? If we are scattered I don't know what we are going to do for a living. An idle question? Providence, happily, is always there!

2. You are aware that Fr. Durin's Petite Oeuvre of the Sacred Heart has been broken up. No more than 3 pupils are paying. There is nothing objectionable in your asking a blessing for these 3 youngsters.

Fr. Durin is presently all excited about the Watertown minor seminary, pestering us with his letters, demanding that we send somebody to him, and that we commit ourselves to the upkeep of the house and make over immediately a sum of 4,000 francs (roughly 12,390 euros) to purchase ground... Poor light-headed man! Where can we find personnel? How can we come by the money? Then who will be found to take charge?

Fr. Marie doesn't want to stay in America. He wants to return in October at the latest and find a permanent posting in our Congregation, that is to say, preach to and confess everyone, in the absence of which he would, so he says, prefer to leave. What do you think? The new Archbishop treats us the same as the other religious in his diocese. Up to now I haven't noticed any special regard for us. Ah! What have we not lost with the demise of Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne! Yes, we would gladly accept a saintly body (context unclear; a preacher? another group? Jouët's letter is not extant to clarify matters), but it is imperative to make a wise choice, be well known, and able to stir up devotion and draw pilgrims. Do your best! Make it your aim that we can enrol those at a distance (in the archconfraternity). It is imperative since, otherwise, the work is seriously impaired. A mother, a wife, etc. comes to Issoudun and is not allowed to enrol her husband or children. This is not acceptable! And names cannot be sent to us from outside Issoudun. It is the death of zeal, and the devotion! What thorns are worse than the Angelini and the Scalsi! When will you be free of them?

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

I received both your letters. Many thanks. Our confrères are of the view that we should take advantage of the Barcelona offer and do what Fr. Sans has recommended to you. Ask the Holy Father or the Cardinal Vicar to write to the Bishop commending us to his good will. Act straightaway so that the matter can be expeditiously brought to a head.

For the past three or four years the white Presentation Sisters of Tours have been in Barcelona. The Superioress to whom I gave first communion when I was a curate in Châtillon, had come to know, inexplicably to me, that we were about to establish ourselves in Barcelona. She wrote to me offering me the chaplaincy and prepared to help in every way with our foundation. This is providential.

Fr. Casas and Brother Fora are getting on well together. We could send Fr. Navarre as Superior. You would look after the annals. As soon as the matter is agreed on I shall immediately leave for Barcelona to take over the house. Get going as quickly as possible. We shall see about a Novitiate in Rome. Keep in mind also a Novice Master. Many thanks. Yes, our Rome house will be very useful to us.

Issoudun, June 20, 1880

Dear Father,

I received the proofs for the Annals, the copy of Cardinal Nina's letter and your reply. Many thanks.

1. I haven't kept the copy of our questionnaire which you presented to the Holy Father. Would you be good enough to send on a copy straightaway.
2. As soon as you have received the official reply from the Bishop of Barcelona, send it on to me straightaway. The Superior of the sisters about whom I wrote to you went to see the house. It would be suitable, she says, for two or three confrères, but if we intend it for a larger number it will need a considerable outlay to modify it. This kind sister is totally available to help us. I don't know what to say in reply. If the government forces us to send away our scholastics and novices, we would send on to you the scholastics, 12 or 15 in number, most likely accompanied by Fathers Deidier and Chatelat. And the novices, 12 or so in number, would be taken to Barcelona with Fathers Ramot and Navarre. Fr. Miniot would stay on at Saint-Gérard to look after the house as one of the owners. If things work out at Barcelona, you will most likely have to go there for some days to deal with the issues. It would be marvellous if you could get a more suitable house without financial liability from the Bishop. If not, you can take over Mr. Morgades' house for our purposes after it has been granted to us by a solicitor's decree. At this critical time, I cannot contemplate leaving France.
3. The members of the Council agreed to the priestly ordination of Brother Bizeuil on the 29th of this month. Do you agree? The case of Brother Letonnellier was debated. Given the situation, three of the Council members were of the view that he should be recommended as soon as possible for the sub-diaconate in the expectation that ordination would be good for him. Then on becoming a priest, and the outcome is not satisfactory, one can request for his release from vows and be could disengage without embarrassment. His morals are commendable; only character defects are levelled at him. Are you in favour of his ordination to the sub-diaconate? Reply straightaway.
4. Mr. Vuillaume is looking for 15,000 francs (roughly 46,460 euros) by the 15th of August. You will understand that together with our other expenses and the tragic events about to take place, it is wholly impossible to find this amount of money for you. You must, then, either pay the interest to the workers or find the money by some other way apart from us.
5. Archbishop Marchal of Bourges came on pilgrimage to Issoudun on Friday last. He didn't leave until Saturday afternoon. He was very kind, very committed, twice preaching in the chapel. He said some wonderful things about Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I spoke to him about the events overtaking us, about our situation and the measures to be undertaken in regard to us here and at the Petite Oeuvre. He was at Chezal-Benoît on Thursday, and is available in every way in order to be of help to us. He accepted that I should rent our Sacred Heart house to him, its enclosure, the basilica, for 10,000 francs (about 30,970 euros) per annum to prevent, if needed, the chapel from being closed, etc. He would, in government eyes, be safeguarding it for diocesan missionary priests, etc. He appears ready to intervene on our behalf in order, despite everything, to save us from shipwreck. May the Lord be praised!

1. Fr. Guyot is still here. Willingly we accept Brother Carrière for the diaconate. You may, then, ordain him when you think fit.
2. I am forwarding 300 masses (stipends). Deal with them.
3. I am so happy to gather that Bishop de Luca is restored to health. Extend him my deep regard and gratitude.
4. The Spanish issue becomes confusing. It appears that the government does not wish to accept French religious. Today's Universe, June 21, says so explicitly. I shall send to you this correspondence which may have escaped your attention. What is to be done? There is little time left. Try and see Cardinal Nina again so that he could intervene in our favour with the Spanish Ambassador to support our interests with his government. Without such help, what is going to become of us? I haven't yet had any reply from the Bishop of Barcelona. Do something about it, and if you have to go to Spain, do so.

1. I have heard nothing positive yet from Spain and tomorrow is the 29th. What is to be done? Should we send our young men anyway if they are uprooted?
2. The Bishop of Roermond (Holland) is looking for a haven if it's needed. Should we send to Holland our young men from that country together with those from Alsace under the care of one or two of our priests? And send our scholastics to you in Rome?
3. I am forwarding the 1,500 francs (roughly 4,640 euros) which you requested for the three months and in addition 600 francs for the 300 masses I sent on to you.
4. I thank you for charging interest on the money due to the Roman workers and on the 3,000 francs for the Pope.
5. If the persecution pursues its course and our chapel is shut, our relations with our associations forbidden, can we really keep on paying for the upkeep of our young men and forwarding mass offerings to you? I don't know. Let us pray and have prayers said. The new Archbishop lets it be understood that he is kindly disposed to us. I collaborated with him to avoid the impact of the persecution, prevent dispersal, and keep our chapel open to the public.

Protest document presented to the Police Commissioner coinciding with the expulsion (of Religious) from Issoudun.

Sir,

You come here to expel the religious; there aren't any. All who live this house are diocesan priests incorporated in the Archdiocese of Bourges whose status is endorsed by His Grace the Archbishop of this diocese.

The proof of my assertion (above) is verified in the letter of incorporation and the bestowal of authority by the Archbishop, and of which you should become aware before proceeding any further. We are all here at his request and in dependence on him and we cannot leave this house without his permission. Since you persist in your resolve, I submit to you before M... who are witnesses that I object, so far as it is in my power, both personally and in the name of His Grace Marchal, our Archbishop, to whom I shall report on this matter. I am submitting to you that I shall uphold my rights in my capacity as guardian of this house. I also protest on behalf of the domicile right which you transgress, as well as in the name of that freedom which the law guarantees to every French citizen of experiencing without threat his domicile, and in the name, as well, of all the other rights which you crush under foot. I make known to you that I shall not leave this house other than by being forcibly expelled. I appeal to you and request you to include this protest in the expulsion file.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I haven't heard anything yet from Spain. Saint-Gérard is not yet affected. Our young men will not move as long as they are left alone. If there is to be expulsion, you will be informed immediately. I doubt if any more than 10 or 12 (scholastics) will be sent to you. The status quo, then, remains the same at the moment.

With regard to Spain, go there if you think your presence might expedite matters. I think this is the best thing to do. You will provide yourself with a letter for the government from Cardinal Nina signed by the Ambassador. This would be wise since in this way we are in a position to be taken seriously. Go straightaway if it's possible for you. I sent you the letter from the Sister Superior in Barcelona where you can read for yourself about the sorry condition of the house being offered to us. Perhaps while on the spot you might get a more suitable house from the Bishop or one of those gentlemen. Here we are undisturbed. We had an alert on July 2; you will read about it in the Universe.

Different procedures to be adopted in the case of expulsion.

Your Grace,

I thank Your Grace for the letter you kindly wrote to me. I shall follow faithfully its advice. I have five curates at the presbytery, only two of whom have their authorization documents. Would it not be wise if the other three had the documents also so that they could be presented to the authorities if requested? Father Piperon will provide the secretariat (Bishop's office) with their names. I should like to ask Your Grace if, as before, Your Grace would be kind enough to provide certificates for ecclesiastical students to our young religious in Rome or elsewhere?

In the event of expulsion from France for our novices, we have the assurance of a haven in Barcelona about which I have spoken to Your Grace. The Holy Father has, through the intermediary of Cardinal Nina, written a supportive letter not only to the Bishop of Barcelona but, as well, to the Spanish government asking that we be received within the kingdom. Pope Leo XIII asked me to forward a request to the Ministry of Favours and Justice in Madrid officially stamped by you, Your Grace. Permit me to enclose the envelope.

I gather with pleasure that Your Grace is due to be at Issoudun on the 25th of this month for the St. Vincent-de-Paul conference. If, on the same occasion, it is possible to confer Confirmation we shall be very much obliged to you.

Dear Father,

I received both your letters and the telegram. Many thanks. I am so sorry to note that you have been in poor health. Take care of yourself. I am pleased that you found a way to give 3,000 francs (about 9,290 euros) to the Pope and were able to borrow. I now hope that the Rome workers will leave us alone for quite a while. Here at Issoudun things happily remain calm. Long may it continue! What's needed in Barcelona is a refuge centre in case it's needed. If the house being offered to us can take 3 or 4 confrères that will be adequate for the moment, and I do believe so, and with very little expense if at all. If our novices were expelled, one would put them up as best one could in Barcelona while awaiting some other more suitable place. What is needed is an exact plan of the house, its rooms, etc., with a view to the future. It would perhaps, be better if you went straight to Spain as soon as you can get away, see the minister about approval and, after that, travel to Issoudun to have us informed. You could then return to Rome by way of Paris. This would, so it seems to me, be the most reasonable thing to do. I sent you a work entitled "Memorandum in defence of Religious Congregations" etc. Did you get it? You did not mention it to me.

Cheerio, dear friend.

Reverend Fr. Chevalier... archpriest, parish priest of Issoudun, Superior of the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart whose mother house is at Issoudun, Bourges Archdiocese, humbly prostrates at the feet of the Sovereign Pontiff, humbly appeals to His Holiness to consider the situation which has arisen in France for Religious Congregations arising from the impact of the decrees dated March 29, and to favour his confrères and himself with the following requests:

In the first place, dispensation from community life, together with the right to remain in the dioceses where they find themselves at the present moment.

Secondly, that of belonging to the clergy within each of these dioceses under the Ordinary's (Bishop's) authority as Apostolic Delegate ad nutum Summi Pontificis, with no other dispensation from religious vows until such time as the circumstances permit the reconstitution of the normal working of the Order according to its Constitutions. Thirdly, for the Reverend Fr. Superior to occupy himself with whatever is called for in these internal arrangements, with the safeguard of exercising his authority, which basically remains complete, prudently in the maintenance of the rule within all the communities, and unity among them...

The foregoing was written by His Grace Archbishop Jean-Joseph Marchal.

The Vicar General of the Archbishop, Auguste Marchal, wrote the following part of the letter to the Pope.

The Very Rev. Father Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, Archdiocese of Bourges, in petitioning the Holy Father to grant him and his priests the favours and dispensations which the circumstances of the time would appear to make absolutely necessary, is doing no more than following the advice we have given him.

We are convinced that if the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart are dispersed from the common life and placed under the authority of the bishops of the dioceses where they are at present, being delegated apostolically, and ad nutum Summi Pontificis, it will be possible to avoid a break-up of the Congregation, retain its Juniorate and Novitiate, and continue the great Our Lady of the Sacred Heart pilgrimage.

It is for these reasons that the Sovereign Pontiff is asked to favour with his most kind and paternal concern the request of Rev. Father Chevalier, who wishes to have an Apostolic blessing both for himself and for the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

To the Minister for Religious Affairs, Paris.

August 31, 1880

Submission presented to the Minister for Religious Affairs by the Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun (Indre).

To mark the publication of the March 29 decrees, a section of the press directed sharp attacks against unapproved Congregations, identifying them as centres of opposition to the Republic's government. The pretext for these accusations was the silence maintained by these Congregations which, effectively, up to now, have not sought the authorization which the second decree laid down as a requirement. The reason for not doing so was, for all that, quite other than what has been attributed to them, and political reluctance has nothing to do with it.

Assured that authorization in the present circumstances of French law bestows a privileged place to the civil authority as favour rather than obligation, the Congregations did not wish to oppose the law while continuing to live under a régime which in their view representatively upholds the basic rights for all its citizens. It is not that they overlook the advantages accruing from a legal status, but they do not consider it appropriate for them to petition for these advantages in circumstances which could be considered condemnatory of their past and an avowal of illegality for which they do not consider themselves blameworthy.

To put all misunderstanding to rest, the Congregations here concerned have no problem declaring their respect for and acceptance of the current Institutions of the State.

The dependence they (the Congregations) acknowledge towards the Church, to which they owe their existence, is not constitutive of a sense of independence with respect to secular authority. This has never been their claim as their respective constitutions and history bear witness.

The moral and spiritual goals which they pursue do not favour in any way an exclusive association with any political régime, or exclude any one. There is no other banner than that of Christian charity, holding to the view that it would be compromising to place themselves at the service of volatile human purposes and concerns. They steer clear then of any involvement with political parties and party interests. Moreover, they do not involve themselves with what the government is responsible for other than to inculcate by word and example the obedience and respect due to an authority of which God is the source.

The foregoing are the principles which have inspired up to now their thinking and action, and they are determined that they will never forsake them. Accordingly, may they not be permitted to cherish the hope that the government will kindly welcome the sincere and loyal statements here formulated and, convincingly persuaded by the sentiments expressed, will without hindrance allow them (the Congregations) to get on with their prayer life, their teaching and their charitable work, to all of which they have dedicated their lives?

I, the undersigned Superior General of the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, (Indre), having consulted my Council, state in my own name and in that of my confrères, that the thoughts expressed in the above document are those of all our Congregation, and we are resolved to shape our lives accordingly.

Dear Father,

I got your letter. Try to get here as soon as possible. You can gather that your presence here at Issoudun is very much needed. Fr. Guyot refused to support Carrière under the pretext that he is too young and his being ordained to the priesthood would have the effect of making him proud. The other Council members support him if you are also in favour.

Madame Countess,

Fr. Deidier, Superior of our Arles house, will preach at the ceremonies in your Issoudun chapel on the 26th and 27th of September. I haven't yet had his reply, but I am sure he will accept the invitation. I thank especially Madame du Quesne for being feelingly considerate. I do not know any longer what became of the issue of the paper in question. France Nouvelle (newspaper) referred to it the other day. You are aware that Mr. Louet (Mayor of Issoudun, 1877-1880) forbade our procession, or virtually so. We had it in our grounds (enclosure) and it was marvellous. There was a large crowd and it was deeply reverent. The Archbishop of Bourges appeared to be very pleased. We pray repeatedly for all your intentions.

Please accept, Madame Countess, my respectful good wishes.

Dear Father,

Thank you for your letter. Young Mégret must be sent home to his family because he is in such a sad condition. One cannot hesitate, and it is pointless to wait on me for that.

Father Hériault continues to be poorly. He is in bed with a fever for the past two days. He is taking no nourishment as his stomach rejects everything. I think it's a mucous fever, but the doctor thinks it might be something else. I don't agree with him. Might not Fr. Morisseau come with me to Saint-Gérand next Tuesday or Wednesday if we have a Council meeting?

As for Fr. Guyot, get in touch with Fr. Jouët and find out what you should advise him to do in the present circumstances. I support whatever you decide on. We must find out if it's in the affirmative or negative as to whether or not he should continue as a counsellor. If in the affirmative he must go to Saint-Gérand on Tuesday evening.

My good wishes to all. Cheerio, Father.

From the Minister for Religious Affairs, Paris.

Paris, September 18, 1880

Dear Superior,

I received your communication sent on August 31 with reference to the forthcoming putting into effect of the second of the two March 29 decrees.

To end, you say, all misunderstanding and in reply to the charges in the press making it be understood that the unauthorized Congregations of both sexes are centres of opposition to the Government of the Republic, you put it to me, in your own name and in the name of the Council and members of your Society that "your abstention does not mean in any way that which is attributed to it and that political reluctance has no part in it". You affirm your respect for, and submission to, the present institutions of the country. You reject the claim that you are setting yourself up independently of the secular authority. You end by confirming that you are resolved never to deviate from this way of acting, expressing the hope that the Government will be pleased to welcome the sincere and loyal statement which you have taken on your own initiative and which will permit you to undertake freely the work of prayer, teaching, and charity to which you devoted your life.

The Government, Fr. Superior, can only be understandably pleased when it sees all its citizens, of no matter what class, witnessing publicly by their regard for, and obedience before, the State's institutions. It takes particular notice of the decision taken by the Congregations to reject any involvement with rabid political attitudes or political parties.

As for the hope expressed that the Government should use its good offices to see to it that Congregations be allowed to continue with their work, I can only bring it to your notice that the second of the March 29 decrees has specifically as its aim the termination of the state of tolerance you want to continue and put in its place the return of what is legally appropriate.

Please accept, Fr. Superior, the assurance of my complete considerateness.

For the Ministry of the Interior and of Religious Affairs.

Dear Minister,

On receiving the letter sent to me dated September 18 by Your Excellency, I consider it my duty to inform your Ministry that the Missionaries of Issoudun have become part of the diocesan clergy and under the jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Bourges have become a group of diocesan missionaries. (Chevalier had first written that they had entered the diocesan clergy....) In these circumstances they have handed over to His Grace in a legally authorized manner their Issoudun house and its effects, and Archbishop Marchal has appointed several of them to postings as curates, chaplains, teachers.

I am bound, Minister, to make all the facts known to Your Excellency and you may, if you so wish, refer the matter to His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges for further clarification.

Dear Father,

A thousand thanks for your letters and your negotiations. May the Lord be praised. It is truly providential. I wrote to the Bishop of Bois-le-Duc thanking him and sending on the signed agreements. We wait for what comes next. I am going to Saint-Gérard on Sunday, 17, for the novices' religious profession. Then on Monday, the 18th, they will, 7 or 8 of them, leave for Rome. Set out their journey time-table for me and forward it to Issoudun. Let me know the cost of the journey. I am also sending on the request for an indult with respect to the three months' novitiate for priests. Try and get this immediately as soon as you have returned to Rome and forward it without delay.

Everybody here is well. The church is always open.

I sent a copy of the letter we wrote to the Minister for Religious Affairs on to Bishop Agnozzi informing him that we are secularized, and wishing to find out the views of the Holy See. He replied through Fr. Casas that we must not put anything on paper and wait for the disbanding (of religious orders). That's what I have done. I was afraid of a blast from Bourges, but nothing at all. Everything has proceeded very smoothly. The Archbishop, if it's necessary, will take us into his diocese, and provide us with the appropriate legal documentation.

The house of Gerra situated at Haaren, beside the Seminary, is rented by the Fathers of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, under the following conditions:

1. The lessees have the right to set up there a Novitiate for their students, cultivate the garden and walk in the nearby woods.
2. The house is rented for one year for a sum of 400 francs (about 1,235 euros) payable at the beginning of the year. The contract can be renewed or disengaged from each year according to the wishes of the proprietor or lessees, notice being given three months in advance.
3. The basic rent will be met by the proprietor; other rents will be met by the lessees.
4. Those renting the house are expected to make use of the house in a responsible manner and in keeping with the purpose for which it was rented. It is not allowed to alter the shape of the house. Normal repair and upkeep are the responsibility of the lessees.

You come here to expel the religious. There aren't any. All who live in this house are diocesan priests of the Bourges archdiocese holding authority from His Grace the Archbishop of the diocese, and lodging in this house since the 24th of June last. The proof of my submission is to be found in the incorporating letter and the empowering document presented by the Archbishop and which you should be aware of before proceeding any further.

Since you continue in your course, I submit to you before the following gentlemen, Etienne Miton, Antony Piquet, François Malou, G. Dezpresse, A. Petit, former solicitor, as my witnesses, that I am, insofar as it is in my power, opposed both personally and as owner, as well as in the name of His Grace Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges, my landlord, who has enjoined upon me the maintenances of his rights insofar as it is necessary and appropriate. I also raise an objection on behalf of Fr. Piperon, owner of a part of this building. Moreover, I protest in the name of the proprietor's rights which you here infringe upon, and in the name of the right to freedom which the law grants every French citizen to live without being threatened in his home, and in the name of all the rights which you stamp upon. I reserve the right to vindicate before the courts all injury occasioned by an action as arbitrary as it is illegal, and seek compensation for the inconveniences brought about by your action.

I would ask to include this protest in the wording of the expulsion and to provide me with a complete copy of the proceedings.

My Lord,

The Sacred Heart has decreed in his goodness to associate us with the trials of other Congregations. All our houses have succumbed to the blows of the decrees. Yesterday at 9am our Issoudun house and novitiate were disbanded. Your Lordship has graciously offered an exile home to our good novices in what is your own country house. May I say, Bishop, how deeply grateful we are to you.

Our young men will set out on Monday morning. There will be about ten in number unless some unforeseen circumstance comes in the way of some of them. Three priests will accompany them. (The two Durin brothers, George and Ferdinand, nephews of Fr. J. Durin, Watertown, were forcibly prevented by their father from travelling.) Fr. Piperon who is in charge of the Novitiate will be pleased to offer Your Lordship my respectful good wishes.

It would be an additional favour, Your Lordship, on top of those we already owe to you, if you could make available to the aforementioned Fr. a reliable person to help him on arrival to get the basic necessities for the furnishing of the house. It is in an impoverished state we are sending these people on to you, My Lord, as we could take very little out of our houses. But for the banished it is wonderfully consoling to be welcomed so kindly in a hospitable country. Deprivation will be easy to bear for they will accept it with Jesus who was poor and out of love for his divine Heart. I grant responsibility to Fr. Piperon to finalize with Your Lordship the renting of the house.

Please accept, My Lord, together with my respectful good wishes, my sincere gratitude.

To the Subscribers of the French Annals.

The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart having been expelled from their residence and their basilica sealed off, the spiritual exercises of the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart have been moved to the splendid parish church of Issoudun recently renovated, and where there has recently been installed a splendid statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart exactly the same as that which was crowned. Before this statue, as previously in the basilica, mass will be celebrated each day, lamps will uninterruptedly remain lit and petitions will be made twice each week on Sunday and Thursday. While awaiting more favourable times it is to this imposing and well-known collegiate church of Saint-Cyr, Issoudun, that the faithful will come on pilgrimage to pay their homage to the patron of difficult and hopeless causes asking for favours. As before, objects of piety in relation to the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart devotion will be both provided and sent on. The ex-voto offerings requested cannot be placed in the basilica until its re-opening which, we hope, will take place in the near future. We are moving towards a cataclysmic situation, and now, more than ever, is the time to call upon Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. We appeal to our dear Associates to renew their hopes and direct their appeals to Her who holds in her hands the treasures of the Heart of Jesus.

We appeal to them to spread more and more her devotion, to send us continually, and very precisely, their requests, and make known to us favours received, and, as well, promote the Annals which will continue to appear at the beginning of each month. We hope that our subscribers will hurry to renew their subscriptions and get new subscribers for us. We depend more than ever on the prayers and good will of the Associates.

Send your requests, the expression of your gratitude, varied appeals and financial contributions to the parish priest of Issoudun (Indre).

Dear Father,

1. Only today did the Universe refer to our expulsion; Le Monde referred to it already seven or eight days ago. Fr. Bontemps is writing an article in depth for the Annals. It will go out with an invitation to make a triduum of reparation to the Sacred Heart and Our Lady.
2. See to it as soon as possible that you get authorization 'ad tempum' for the indulgences to be transferred to Saint-Cyr for the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.
3. I am waiting on the Indult for Fathers Bontemps and Thomas which is pressing.
4. The novices under the care of Fathers Piperon, Ramot and Maillard arrived at Bois-le-Duc in very good shape.
5. You should have Fr. Chatelat with you by now. He will be very helpful with your young men, pious, reliable, serious, very dependable. He speaks well, and will carry out your instructions in every respect. He will be your next-in-charge, your replacement, immediately following on you in the house. He will follow the course with the young men and be their 'repeater' if needed. (This last refers to the Roman custom for students to be helped, put at ease, in their studies by a 'repeater' in the respective colleges from which students attended the universities.) I thank the kind Fathers and Brothers for their prayers and good wishes. Be kind enough to tell them so.

6. Father Deidier has left for Barcelona with Father Marie and the two scholastics. It seems that he brought along with him from Arles two other companions, a teacher and a domestic help, so Father Casas wrote to me. It would appear that our confrères want to move too quickly, and Fr. Casas is worried about this, fearing, not unreasonably, that this precipitation could cause a lot of problems. Fr. Deidier has written to me and it appears that he doesn't want to take Bishop Morgades' advice. He is already opposed to him, as he is with Fr. Sans and the Spanish. Let the foundation take up some of your time. Write to Fr. Deidier to lay down a pattern of behaviour for him, and also to Fr. Casas. I don't know what to do: problems everywhere.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Issoudun, November 28, 1880

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I am grateful to you for having so promptly forwarded to me the translation of the archconfraternity's Statutes which His Eminence the Cardinal Vicar, our dedicated protector, has so kindly made available to you, and I want you in a special way to convey to him on my own behalf, and that of our Society, at present so infamously persecuted, our deepest appreciation. I am pleased to see that many of our original observations on the former edition of the Statutes were approved, but there remain others of equal importance.

I need do no more than point out to you, as you will yourself explain to the Cardinal, who will, I am sure, understand the situation, the exact seriousness of the situation in the present circumstances, and the appalling calamities which our cherished undertakings are experiencing in France, all of which have cost us so much in the way of work, problems, sacrifices, and, as well, a considerable amount of money. I am returning to you the document itself which you sent on to me: I point out numerically the areas which should receive specific mention, and I take each in turn.

A little later, through the initiative of some pious people, there began in Rome...

This sentence cannot be left as so formulated. It could leave it to be wrongly understood that the work began in Rome a little after ours and that we had no right to vindicate our involvement in its origins. It is the contrary which is the case, however. Our Association began in Issoudun, January 1864, that of Rome in 1872, that is to say 9 years afterwards, not a little afterwards.

Moreover, and this is the heart of the issue, the original initiative for a Rome undertaking came from us in the first instance. It was set up in co-operation with us and afterwards continued independently of us. From 1867, then, I myself went to Rome to make known to the Pope, Pius IX of blessed memory, the new Issoudun association, and I recommended it for the Eternal City after I obtained an indulgence of 100 days to accompany the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart invocation.

In the early months of 1868 one of our Issoudun statues of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was solemnly blessed and installed in the monastery of St. Paul - Tre Fontane so called. Fr. Régis, our much regretted benefactor, was one of the Association's first supporters in Rome. That same year, through your good offices, Father, and while you were still in Marseilles, Bishop Pagliari of Anagni in the Pontifical States, set up canonically our association in his episcopal town and he went on to mention it in the letter he sent to you on the 30th of November 1868 and which was published in the Annals that year. As well, the Rome (newspaper) Civiltà Cattolica that very year (1868) decided to translate and publish in two editions our little brochure on the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart with the approval of the Master of the Sacred Palace and his assistant bishop.

In 1869 we ourselves set up in Rome several centres for our undertaking and selected several helpers, female and male, whose names and addresses were published in our Annals for that year. In 1870 Pius XIX congratulated us on the expansion of our work throughout the world, encouraging us to spread it more and more, granting to all our associates in Rome and the rest of the world an indulgence of 100 days on reciting Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

In 1871 I wrote a circular letter to all the Italian bishops asking them to promote our beloved association in their dioceses and I received eighty favourable letters in reply. In 1872 we set up the Italian Annals. That same year you journeyed to Rome with me to set up the association canonically. We appealed at St. Louis, the Roman College, at St. Vincent's and St. Anastasia's. More than ten thousand Romans had already sent on their names to Issoudun. It was at this time that some of our associates were instrumental in having our Issoudun association canonically erected (approved) as declared by Cardinal Patrizi himself: Nostrae Dominae Exoldunensis. We are not then outsiders so far as the Rome association's setting up is concerned, and I believe it would be more appropriate to say: "Nine years later, the Issoudun Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association, on the initiative of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and thanks to the zeal displayed by several Rome associates, set itself up in the Eternal City, etc., in the month of September of the same year, 1872..."

And its direction was confided to the Fathers... As in the decree the following should be inserted here: the direction was entirely granted to the Society of the Issoudun Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, for the Society's overall control and direction. In dependence on us.

3 and 4. It is imperative that it be seen to that the whole of this paragraph from "being so set up" as far as "a specific centre for the diocese of Bourges" should be taken out completely since it would create insurmountable difficulties for the future and again create big problems for the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. If it isn't possible for you to suppress the immediate foregoing, it would then be for the best to obtain a reading which credits Issoudun as the cradle of the foundation, enjoying the same rights as Rome's central association... with the sole exception of membership signed by you in my name and in Rome by delegation; I give my consent to this. But it is absolutely necessary to see to it that Issoudun, like Rome, has the right to enrol individually people from elsewhere in the world. Without this latter (proviso) it is a complete destruction of our work. State this clearly to our Cardinal protector. The losses we have experienced over the last three years are immense and the undertakings which have suffered the most are:

1. St. Peter's Pence which we could not support as hitherto since we had to lay out up to one hundred thousand francs, that which we could afford diminishing due to the fact that the Roman association had created such an embarrassing financial impact on us.

2. The completion of our Issoudun basilica and the renovation of the Rome church (Piazza Navona), as you well know, meant that it was ourselves who up to now have made available five hundred thousand francs (1,548,882 euros !!) for our Rome undertaking... And the Rome project, far from helping us, is financially ruinous for us up to the present. Explain all this to the Cardinal. For the rest, the right to enrol those elsewhere has been granted to the Cardinal in Paris for Montmartre, to Our Lady of Victories and to other associations such as that of Saint-Michel, but in our case, which has done and still continues to do so much and has gone through such a lot, this same privilege, so many times requested and so many times promised, hasn't yet been in any way granted to us. Do not rest until you have succeeded in getting it! We shall be lastingly grateful to the Cardinal Vicar.

One might then, without taking out the paragraph, present the ending like this: "On condition, nevertheless, that Issoudun always keeps the privileges it enjoyed from the beginning, namely enrolling individually everybody in the Catholic world who couldn't come on the celebrated pilgrimage to the cradle of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart devotion, but could either write to or have the Missionaries of Issoudun requested to make the petitioner a member of the association, and that, moreover, the Issoudun basilica should partake of all the privileges which are, or will be later, granted to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Rome."

5. This paragraph does not indicate the essential purpose and the principal aim of our dear archconfraternity. It only deals with the external aspects, and would seem to the faithful as taking no account of the regulations which were in force from the beginning, approved by Rome and again published in the Rome Annals for this year. Accordingly, the following change must be introduced. In place of simply saying "and which has for its purpose to recommend", insert: "and which, besides the specific aim of glorifying Mary under the new title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart as explicitly made clear following on from this number, has that of recommending", etc., etc.

6. Put it like this: "And there are the following statutes which have been made public from the beginning of the undertaking and which we entirely approve of, together with the changes set out by us...". Write at the end of article 6 "all the statutes".

7. Ask straightaway that the title of Director General, which, and rightly, by way of exception, is associated with the present Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, since he is its founder, should go to all his successors on condition that there is in Rome a delegate general appointed by him and approved by the Holy See, the Superior General retaining the right to change this individual for other purposes and appoint another in his place, but always, it is to be understood, in consultation with his Eminence the Cardinal Vicar. This change does not affect in any way the Rome undertaking's good development, maintaining that unity which is the most important element in God's undertakings, as well as the most difficult, and which the devil works most at to destroy.

8. In place of "The archconfraternity's council is made up of the same individuals", something which in fact is not correct since several have retired, put "is made up of people who up to now made up the Rome archconfraternity's council and who freely wished to make available to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart their devoted commitment towards moving the said archconfraternity to the new Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart..."

9. Leave out this last sentence: "It is also with a majority of votes that one has to accept the new membership", or if it remains, add these words to it: "In those instances where some exceptional issues would arise." Apart from these exceptional cases, membership follows its normal procedure.

10. "The Secretary". Change in the following way the text. It is imperative; you will be aware of its significance and you will explain it if the opportunity calls for it: "Besides the Secretary and the Assistant Secretary of the archconfraternity who will be chosen from the Missionary of the Sacred Heart priests, at the Roman house, who will be responsible for the registers and be as of right members of the Council, the Director General, or whoever replaces him, will select from the lay members a special Council Secretary who will take down what is said at meetings and will offer her his help and experience in requesting from the Congregations those favours or dispensations which the Council would have considered as being needed.

11. Change in this way: All in conformity with the manual which will be printed with our approval.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

J.M.J.

Issoudun, November 1880

No precise date

No. 9.

Dear Confrère,

The Sacred Heart has not wished that his missionaries be deprived of the opportunity to suffer persecution for justice's sake. Just like other Congregations, we have been forced through violence to leave our peaceful settings, and you could read the details of our expulsion in the papers. Today is the First Friday of the month, a day specially consecrated in honour of the Sacred Heart of Our Lord and his sorrowing Passion, and on which we are called to suffer for him who has suffered so much for us.

The First Friday of the month was a special day of recollection and retreat for us, a day of adoration during which we were pleased to go and kneel before the Blessed Sacrament in exposition until late evening in our basilica.

On the First Friday in November, at dawn, we were thrown out into the street and forced to seek refuge among well-disposed people, but the most painful experience of all for us was that of witnessing our magnificent basilica placed under seal. The pious pilgrim can no longer enter to offer his thanksgivings to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and ask of her new favours. The faithful have nothing left since they are without entry to this venerated sanctuary. One sees them every day, sometimes in great numbers, coming to pray before the closed doors, kissing the sill of the door they cannot open, placing there bouquets and bunches of flowers as a testimony to their devotion and their disappointment. Sometimes one can identify among them strangers from quite far away who have come to intercede with her who is the Patroness of hopeless causes.

Very dear and appreciated confrère, we are part of the same family, our concern is yours; you have, then, been affected by the same blow which struck us. You have very much felt for us, and several of you were drawn to let us know by letter how greatly overwhelmed you were with well-wishing concern for us. We thank you with all the outpouring of our heart. Have confidence, dear Brothers, soldiers, of the Sacred Heart, we shall suffer together and be glorified together. Let us not be overcome by these passing trials; they are daunting but they are as nothing compared with the Church's travails. They are as nothing compared to the countless outrages the divine Heart, to whom we are consecrated, is subjected to each day at every moment; for Him it's renewing the Passion all over. He is crushed by the inequities of mankind, by the waves of impiety and immorality which flood our towns and flow over into the countryside. Our duty is to comfort this bruised Heart with whatever we can offer in the way of consolation. We do so through fervent prayer, through acts of penance and mortification, through the Holy Eucharists celebrated with particular devotion.

Just now, our Holy Father the Pope, on being informed about the closure of our basilica, has granted his blessing to the pious faithful who give themselves to works of reparation for the insults inflicted upon the Sacred Heart and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. In these circumstances we do not doubt that our estimable confrères would also wish to receive this blessing from Jesus Christ's representative on earth.

Apart, on our own, our reparation would be purposeless, but united to that of the Sacred Heart himself, it will have a powerful efficacy, appeasing divine justice and hastening the moment of the Church's deliverance. We must not become discouraged like those who are without any hope. Humanly speaking, it is true that we see no sign of salvation (release), but it is when all seems lost, when one acknowledges that nothing more is to be humanly expected, that the All-Powerful God intervenes to bring about a striking victory for His Church. There you have the divine promise: Portae inferi non praevalent.

Please accept, dear, respected, Confrère, my respectful and dedicated good wishes.

Dear Father,

Yesterday poor Fathers Hamel and Berthon were buried together. It was a sad ceremony.

I read the Statutes carefully. They are unacceptable such as they have been presented to you. The changes which you have sent on to me and which I return to you signed are absolutely necessary. Only on ourselves would such like requirements be imposed. We were given without conditions the direction of our Association, what is uniquely ours, and here we are now faced with a situation where there is a surreptitious attempt being made to take from us what was granted to us by the Holy See. Does it hold like that with the Dominicans for the Rosary, with the parish priest of Our Lady of Victories (Notre-Dame des Victoires), the Vincentians, the Carmelites, etc...? As regards the Statutes which must be maintained one is struck by the fundamental premiss that the original Council must be de-established... and when it has ceased, the Statutes will still hold; one must then go back to the same members (of the Council). This is incredible! Yes, it should be the case that Issoudun remains the centre and has the right to enrol those at a distance, something which has been promised us so many times, and which otherwise would be outrageously unfair. I shall never accept otherwise. We shall appeal to the Holy See... The same holds for the forthcoming representative since it shall be the Superior General of the Congregation, whoever he may be, who chooses him... All our changes are absolutely necessary. Exactly so. Do not give way on anything. We are being played with and they want to continue doing so. It has to be all or nothing.

Cheerio, my friend. I support you.

Dear Father

Given the circumstances continuously more threatening which are affecting our normal life in France, we have decided in Council to end as soon as possible, and as economically as possible, that part of the work on our Piazza Navona house which is not absolutely necessary. Accordingly tell Carmina Muller on our behalf to stop working on the decoration project for the façade of Piazza Sapienza, replacing what should have been done in stucco with an ordinary type of rough casting, and leave all ornamental work aside. We are altogether obliged to take this course, and it has become an obligation in conscience for us to act like this in the present circumstances.

At a more favourable moment, we shall consider what might be possible.

Dear Father,

I received your letter together with those from our young men. I wish to thank them most sincerely for their good wishes.

1. Do everything possible to check the intemperate zeal at Osimo (in relation to the association's activities).
2. Fr. Chatelat will carry out what you consider appropriate.
3. Tell Fr. Deidier that he must not act too precipitately and that he should not make himself too conspicuous because the government is quick to take offence. And he must not mount up debts! Fr. Chappel has written to me that Deidier left 1,700 francs (5,266 euros) in debts behind him on leaving Arles. Then he should see to it that the religious life should be seriously lived out according to our Constitutions and Rules. It would appear that Arles left a great deal to be desired (under Deidier).
4. And the Scalsi business, etc. Stay with it and hurry up with a satisfactory solution.
5. I am forwarding a letter from Fr. Durin; what do you make of it? Would Fr. Giraux be prepared to go to Watertown? Would it agree with him? Find out what his feelings are. Fr. Thomas of Limoges, so I believe, would not be unwilling to go there.
6. Our feast of the Immaculate Conception was a marvellous occasion.

Cheerio, Father.

L 18801214

Issoudun, December 14, 1880

Dear Father,

Thanks for your kind letter and that of dear Brother Roussel.

The latter, after various postings, went to Yule Island, New Guinea, 1892-1893, where he died two months after his arrival.

1. Yes, I am awaiting the indult for the priests and that for the transference of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association to Saint-Cyr, our parish church.
2. Here is a second letter from Fr. Durin which is satisfactory, giving serious consideration as to whether or not something might be done for our American house. Events taking place in France are more and more sinister as there is a wish to destroy at root Religious Congregations and confiscate their property. This is no longer to be doubted given the latest votes in the Chamber of Deputies on the Brisson Law. Disaster is about to overtake us. We must try to sell Saint-Gérand and the Sacred Heart. But how are we to do this?

Fathers Navarre and Thomas have decided to go to Watertown. You must advise Fr. Giraux to go there... he must learn English, and prepare himself for ministry in the missions, and as soon as we are entrusted with the Auckland Islands or some other missions, something which I believe cannot now be long delayed, he will leave with Fr. Durin and a number of others. Perhaps Fr. Giraux should leave on his own for America and wait there for Fr. Durin. Then in the spring, maybe before that, Fathers Navarre and Thomas would go there. In which case Morisseau suggests that Fr. Durin should be changed and would be no longer Superior, and this is also what I think. What do you think about all this?

3. I am forwarding a letter to you which I have had from Fr. Casas. It is disturbing if he isn't exaggerating. Fr. Deidier is not, then, what he was expected to be. See to it that you look into this matter and give your instructions.

If your temperature remains high, could you not go and spend 15 days or a month in Barcelona for a change of climate? This would, perhaps, be the best way of getting better and at the same time you could help to set up the Spanish house which could turn out badly. See what you can do.

Cheerio, Father.

L 18801217

Issoudun, December 17, 1880

Dear Father,

Thanks for the indulgence on behalf of the priest novices. Hurry up with the others. The document from Mr. Vuillaume claiming a further 14,000 francs (over 30,000 euros) is all the more of a surprise because we thought we no longer owed him anything. When are we going to be free of all these expenses? It is quite impossible for us to meet any more of this. Given the borrowings we have already undertaken we cannot at the present time, you will quite understand, commit ourselves to any more. We had to give 5,000 francs to Fr. Piperon for his and the novices' journey to Holland and towards the expenses involved in taking over the house. Then it cost about 2,000 francs for the journey to Spain and the initial expenses. Mr. Grandin from Tours sent us a cheque for 2,000 francs towards paying our painters. And 1,500 francs were sent to Fr. Durin (Watertown) to pay for the journey of Fr. Marie and Bro. Charles. Mr. Merklin sent a cheque for 5,800 francs to pay for the organs. There remains 5,800 francs. We still owe nearly 10,000 francs to Mr. Letang, the mason, for the walls of the cloister in the new enclosure and for the outside of the day school. Then there is upkeep of the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) and provision for the scholastics, etc. How do you think we can cope with all this?

Consequently, despite all my good will, I cannot forward to you the 14,000 francs you need nor can I borrow this sum. We already owe 30,000 francs in borrowings. Borrow for your needs if you can, or ask for time so that you can give this sum to the workers. We were agreed, my friend, that no more expenses would be accepted and that no work could be undertaken in the other part of your church without having fully paid for what had already been done: and the Pope's 100,000 francs. And now from Mr. Vuillaume's letter I gather that a quotation at 2,500 francs has already been presented for the apse of the central nave and another to complete everything. The whole enterprise goes up to 51,000 francs, much too costly. And who pays for all this? Kindly check the unwise zeal and intensity of these people who have not, as from themselves, the money needed to pay, or unless you can come by the money yourself without any cost to the community. Try, then, Fr., to pay off what is owed and do not have any further work carried out. Prudence... The situation which threatens us is terrible. Very soon we shall have no more resources and be completely ruined. This catastrophe must be averted.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Article 792To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.*

L 18801219

Issoudun, December 19, 1880

Dear Father,

I repeat what I already said to you. If the sanctuary in the main nave does not cost the Congregation anything, you are fully authorized to have the work carried out. Have the whole church done in these circumstances. You will be well deserving of the Society and be the recipient of much gratitude. The plan for this apse is not, as it happens, so it occurs to me, that which I thought it was and, effectively, it is a replica of our great Sacred Heart nave. In your new Rome apse you should have three or five windows overlooking the sanctuary, and the bottom of these windows could be opened. Then between these windows and the Sapienza wall your pulpit could be placed. You could look towards the Sanctuary and the high altar through the bottom part of these windows which could be opened as with those of the Sacred Heart (Issoudun). These windows could in the future be embellished as here with figures.

They would give directly onto the main altar and the sanctuary would be lit up by a second source of daylight coming through the great window of the Sapienza façade. Whereas, according to the plan you have forwarded to me, four or five metres above the sanctuary pavement, between each arcade, there is a railing at the foot of these arcades going right around your sanctuary, in such-wise that those in the gallery will see everything going on in the church and be themselves visible to everybody in the church. This is not practicable for a religious community. The gallery, wherever it is, should be closed. If on the other hand it is placed above the entrance (door) on the Piazza Navona side where the organ is as in Issoudun, and the choir and faithful could go there, then the arcades should be left open. Accordingly, the gallery which encircles the sanctuary, as at Issoudun, should be cut off by windows, but such that the bottom of the windows could be opened so that those confrères who want to pray could see the altar. And, further, I believe that only the bottom of two windows should be open, those which are nearest to the communion table (rail) since the religious would not then see the public or be seen by them. The latter would be preferable.

Then in your new apse, above the main altar, you should place a lovely statue of the Sacred Heart. You might, perhaps, place it in a niche made in the wall above the window in the middle (of the sanctuary). Send me rough drafts of these different plans so that I can judge for myself whether what I have been suggesting is rightly understood.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Dear Father,

A Happy Christmas!

1. I thank you for your kind and appreciated letters. I am pleased with the decree about the enrolment of those living elsewhere.
2. The members of the Council were not in favour of sending people to Fr. Durin in America or about the opening of a Novitiate because, as they said, there is no Superior, and none of those proposed could be taken seriously or run a Novitiate. What is to be done? I am quite shattered.
3. Send a reply to Fr. Deidier about his school. I wrote to him saying that it was you (Jouët) who was made responsible for this foundation and should take charge of this matter, and he only needed to follow the plan you had laid out for him and which I approved in advance. As for the house in the country made available by a municipal council, it is very beautiful, but what can we do with it for the time being? If it were to become a country house during the summer, you could take it. See what you can do.

Issoudun, December 28, 1880

Your Grace,

With this letter which I have the honour to address Your Grace, my purpose is not to ask for anything new, something impossible at present, but rather to bring you up to date about the present situation.

You wrote, Your Grace, that "in keeping with my (Chevalier's) wishes" you put forward Fr. Morisseau as prison chaplain. It was Fr. Batard who was appointed by Your Grace to undertake this role, and may I be favoured to put him forward again. As for Fr. Morisseau I am putting him forward as the incumbent at the chapel of Sainte-Aoustrille to work for Fr. Carré, parish priest of Thizay. Otherwise the changes are quite acceptable.

I come before Your Grace deeply grateful and with respectful good wishes.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I should like once more, Your Grace, to bring the matter of First Communion to your attention. The Statutes of the diocese lay it down that the youngsters should attend over two consecutive years the preparatory catechises for first communion and that, moreover, they are 12 years old by the time they make their First Communion. Now I know from certain knowledge that there are Issoudun youngsters sent to lodge in Chateauroux or Bourges who have made, or are about to make, their First Communion in violation of this twofold regulation. Arising from this, there are unfortunate complaints and inextricable problems raised by parents and teachers. Uniformity of practice is absolutely essential. Only Your Grace should decide if there are to be exceptions.

L 18810104

Issoudun, January 4, 1881

Dear Father,

Thank you for your kind letter and all your good wishes; I was moved to tears. As well the Scholastics' letter greatly pleased me, together with their New Year greetings. Convey from me to your highly regarded community my best wishes to everybody for a good and holy New Year. Indeed the year cannot be good if it isn't holy and if it is holy it will be very good for everybody. Everything is there! Let us become saints! Let us aim to be privileged apostles because of their special virtue as mentioned to you by the Cardinal of Malines and which Fr. Grignon de Montfort foretold for these latter times. Let us seriously get to work and oremus pro invicem.

1. I await the translation of the decree with reference to those living at a distance, or, more exactly, the article dealing with this issue which can be put in the Annals. One must also mention those promoters and the centres because the decree allows this. What are the privileges of the promoters? Are they the same as in the Scalsis' time. What can be done? What can be stated? Time is short.
2. And as regards transferring the Association to Saint-Cyr, I cannot see anything developing for the moment...
3. The indult for transferring the Novitiate to Holland is absolutely necessary...
4. Look for authorization also to alienate those properties of ours which are necessarily deemed appropriate, for example Saint-Gérand.
5. The Brisson Law taxing communities has been passed; we shall be crushed!
6. I thank you for taking it upon yourself to find the 15,000 francs needed to pay for the work (in the church). If only that were the end of it... Let me know then quite straightforwardly what is the financial state of the Rome house at present. Is it still somewhat in debt? By how much? It is necessary to be aware of this to avoid surprising news which is always hard to cope with.

You mention that you hope to cover these last two loans which come to thirty thousand francs. With respect to the 1,500 francs which you are presently borrowing, I can readily understand this. But as regards the other 15,000 francs, I was not aware that you had borrowed them. When and for what occasion? As far as I am concerned, I cannot recall the occasion. When you asked for a further 15,000 francs at Easter (but this last not clear, it could be read as 'Porquer') last year, and when you were not able to pay in full, I sent you 9,000 francs. There would have been 6,000 francs, then, which needed to come from you. Has this debt been met? If not, to whom do you owe it? Is not the Society responsible in the event of death? I am forwarding you the five thousand and fifty francs which you need to meet all your requirements, over the next three months (term).

I am forwarding cards to you for the Cardinal Vicar, Bishop de Luca and Monsignor Druon, etc.

You asked me how the Archbishop (of Bourges) felt about us? He has pushed us totally aside, dealing with us just like the Jesuits, the Franciscans and the Redemptorists who are in his diocese. He did not keep any of his promises, neither for our church, of which he is the lessee, or for Chezal-Benoît, with the excuse that nothing was to be gained by his efforts. He made no protest on behalf of the communities expelled at Bourges and people are very unhappy about this. He is considered as being on the side of the government, liberal and not very supportive of Congregations. He would like to be in control and run everything. His plan would be that we should break up definitively and become part of his clergy. Happily the Sacred Heart has frustrated these expectations. Very confidential. (These two words are written by Chevalier in the margin of the page.)

With regard to the vows, I freely give you our views. Fr. Morisseau is hesitant about Brothers H. Peeters and Ilge who are given to shilly-shallying. Let us know straightforwardly what you think. It's you who will make the decision. I believe them to be sound.

Henri Peeters, born in 1860, went on to enjoy a distinguished career after his ordination to the priesthood in 1884 at Tilburg, Antwerp, as Dutch Novice Master, Superior of the Petite Oeuvre; as editor of the Dutch Annals. He spent eleven years in the Philippines, 1908-1919. He died aged 81 at Stein in 1941.

L 18810105

Issoudun, January 5, 1881

Dear Father,

Here is a serious issue which has arisen and against which I would ask you to protest to whomsoever has jurisdiction in this area. Fr. Ramière seems to think that he has his own Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. He calls her Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of Jesus praying. He has had a statue and pictures made of her which are already on sale. I am sending you on an example. It is a counter challenge to ours and will soon lead to an upheaval in our association: it is our original and only devotion which is associated with her. Arising from Father Ramière's inventiveness, in a short time there will be utter confusion within our dear archconfraternity, the purpose of which will no longer be understood. It is unbecoming manipulation which must be thwarted and which must be resolutely challenged. This ridiculous statue of Fr. Ramière's can be confused somewhat with the new one which has been forced on us. I believe that we must take advantage of the situation to have our earlier statue, so lovely and expressive, re-endorsed. It is all the easier to do so when the Holy Office Congregation has deemed it irreproachable theologically and worthy of public worship. You have the decree with you, of which you might care to send me a copy. Get going as I believe circumstances are favourable and we must make the most of them.

The Office of the Sacred Heart.

The feast of the Sacred Heart this year falls on the feast of St. John and it is moved. As it is our special feast, could you not try and see to it that it remains for our Congregation with the day on which it falls? See about this. And as regards the feast of the Sacred Heart of Mary could you not see to it that it takes place for us also, as with the Eudists, after the Epiphany and not during the month of August since we have, as you know, our plans for that also.

Dear Father,

I am sending you on the latest letter from Fr. Casas. What is Fr. Deidier up to at Barcelona? What is he doing? I have no idea. Perhaps you may know more about it than I do. What Fr. Casas tells me is not too much devoid of foundation. Look into the matter, sum it up and act! What do you think of the situation? What is your view? What do you think should be done? For the rest, nothing new here.

Cheerio, Father.

I am grateful to you for drawing Bishop Salua's attention to the new manoeuvrings of Fr. R. (Ramière)

My wish is that our debts in Rome will be quickly met and that you can finish the work on our lovely Piazza Navona Church. Very wholeheartedly, I would attend the formal opening. An individual from whom I borrowed 10,000 francs (roughly 30,970 euros) for the Rome project two years ago is looking for his money at the present time. If others from whom we borrowed were, like this individual, to look for their money now we would be very seriously embarrassed.

Again cheerio and regards to everybody.

To His Grace Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

L 18810115a

Issoudun, January 15, 1881

Your Grace,

The Administrators of the Issoudun hospital have, from January 1, 1881, lowered to five hundred francs yearly, the chaplain's fee, which over the years had gone up to 1,200 francs, but with that he was obliged to offer mass every day for the benefactors of the hospital (600 francs would be roughly 1,600 euros). If the chaplain, at the present time Fr. Cramaille, was not one of my own confrères living in our house of the Sacred Heart, a salary of no more than 1,200 francs would not be nearly enough. After we were expelled Fr. Cramaille withdrew to the hospice where he paid 800 francs for his lodgings. As he now doesn't get more than 500 francs from the administration and has still to pay 800 francs for his lodgings, it seems to me that he should give over saying mass for the benefactors and keep all his mass offerings, even those on Sundays. Your Grace alone can decide this question. He (Cramaille) will accept in every respect the decision you will communicate to him. I am drawn to ask Your Grace to favour my two confrères, Fathers Letonnelier and Eugène Bizeuil, ordained by Your Grace quite recently, for faculties so that they can help us with children's confessions.

I recently met with the Issoudun sub-prefect to discuss public prayer ceremonies. He told me that having received no notification from the Indre Prefect, he could not be present at ceremonies and would not call for any religious function himself. In any event, the law does not oblige the civil authorities, and he would not have gone with the church even if he had been asked to do so at the Prefecture. I was pleased in reply to say that it wasn't for me to get involved in these issues, and that I was simply saying to him that arising from the decree which deals with these issues, a place was set by for him in the stalls.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's humble and most respectful son in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

PS: Just now I have had a communication from the Prefecture office and, as no request from the Prefect had reached the Vice-Prefect, he and his aides will not attend the ceremonies. The municipal council will stay away for the same reasons.

Dear Father,

Just a word to tell you to take your time over the letter which must precede the new decree. The articles are ready for the February Annals and already printed. This will be for March. Fr. de Champgrand, our benefactor (see above, 1854), has died. He will be buried tomorrow. Pray and have him prayed for. After the Lord we owe to him our undertakings on behalf of the Sacred Heart.

When dealing with the issue of Fr. Ramière's statue, try to get our own reinstated, since it gave so much pleasure to all our Associates.

The members of the Council voted in favour of perpetual vows for all your young men. Are those (in the Vatican) bored with these problems, suggestions, as regards the Association...? I hope that you will win them over.

Fr. Chevalier's Spiritual Testament.

Issoudun, January 25, 1881

This is my Spiritual Testament

1. I, Jules Chevalier, Missionary of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and parish priest of Issoudun, die in the faith of the holy Catholic, apostolic, Roman Church, which I have always tenderly loved. I would have given my life a thousand times to defend the rights and prerogatives of its infallible Head. I have never failed to be deeply attached to the Holy See and its teaching. Gallicanism and liberalism, so detrimental to the faith and the well-being of the faithful, drew from me, even in my most tender years, an instinctive horror. I thank God for this since it was a great grace to be favoured with.

2. I entreat my dearly loved confrères to be always the most devoted children of Peter's chair and of its supreme head whose judgments are irreformable, and to live among themselves in the most friendly and perfect unity, to have great respect for authority as such and, in particular, for their superiors, to be obedient to the point of heroism, to renounce their own will and personal judgment, to submit themselves with good grace to the requirements of those who have the right to give them orders, to practise internal and external mortification, to accept generously sacrifice to the point of self-immolation, never shirking from the cross sent from heaven, only looking for the will of God in everything, his honour, the good of souls, avoiding vanity, self-seeking, one's ease, strengthening oneself with a great spirit of faith, detachment, flight from the world, practising with scrupulous fidelity their Constitutions and Rules, especially everything which has to do with the three religious vows. On bended knees I appeal to the many Superiors of the Society to uphold the exact observance of all requirements.

I also, at this moment, humbly ask pardon of all my dear confrères for any distress I might have brought on them, and for any bad example I may have given to them.

3. May they pray for the repose of my soul! I shall not in any way forget them while God is merciful to me.

4. I also ask to be forgiven by all the parishioners, the whole body of the faithful where they have been least edified, and for any scandal I may have given them (in words or actions). I commend myself as of now to their prayers and the communion of fervent souls. May the town's religious, the children of Mary in the parish, the dear brothers who teach Christian Doctrine (members of the St. Vincent de Paul Society), remember me before the Lord and through their good words speed my release from Purgatory. I pardon wholeheartedly my enemies if there were any, and all those who tried to discredit me whether by their words or actions, and those whose response to my devotedness and good work was either ingratitude or calumny. My soul is free of all resentment. I retract every word or action which will be misunderstood, and I wish to state that I never had any intention to discredit or cause anybody pain.

To Count Geloës, Holland.

Issoudun, January 27, 1881

Dear Sir,

I was greatly moved by the letter you have just written to me placing so graciously at our disposal the château you own near Sittard. Such a kind thought came to you quite obviously from Divine Providence.

Thanks a thousand... Had I known this earlier, I would have gladly accepted your offer for our Novitiate expelled from France. It was the Bishop of Bois-le-Duc who kindly made his country house at Haaren available to us. My confrères there are about twenty in number. Could they be all lodged in your château if the Bishop needed his house? Our apostolic work of the Sacred Heart, with 46 youngsters selected for our Congregation, was also expelled from its house of residence at Chezal-Benoît; we brought them to Issoudun where they are among the other students of the secondary school which we have charge of. We fear from one moment to the next that this school will also be closed, followed by another expulsion. We could then transfer our Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) students to your house if you think they all could go there. Among these youngsters are 6 or 8 from Holland, from Sittard, Venray, etc. You are aware, Sir, that we take some of these youngsters from every country and educate them without the payment of fees to make them missionary priests. It is altogether a marvellous undertaking blessed by God.

If it is acceptable to you, I shall ask my colleague, the Superior of our Novitiate near Bois-le-Duc, to go and visit the château (Elsloo), which you so kindly made available to us.

Please accept my lively gratitude and most respectful good wishes in Corde Jesu.

Thanks for your letter, dear Father, and all its contents. I am returning the letter sent to the Holy Office. I do not think that I should become involved in this matter. I am already out of sorts enough with Fr. Ramière. The appeal is a good one. I made a number of small corrections. I leave for the future that which is of the present moment; I believe it is the best course. Certainly not! A new storm against our earlier statue must not be stirred up. Yes, let us await the opening of our Rome church. We are likely to do better at that moment. Nothing new here. Fr. Chatelat wrote me a letter to say he was very pleased and he seems to be quite happy. We shall send you the pages, as with those from the Novitiate, and with these it will be easy for you to provide detailed information for each of the scholastics and priests who are with you.

Your Grace,

You may carry out what you consider appropriate in naming the prison chaplain. It matters not whether it's Father Batard or myself. What's essential is that in the government's eyes somebody should be so titled. Since Father Batard has already been named by Your Grace it would, perhaps, be better if he remains. With regard to the chaplain for the hospices, the Administrators were not wholly aware of the gravity of their intervention, and I asked the Sister Superior to explain this to them. Next Thursday they are due to take their final decision. I shall make it my business to have Your Grace notified.

I received your letter. Thanks.

1. I prefer the Ilge plan for the sanctuary.
2. I am pleased with the (examination) marks for the scholastics. I note that piety for the majority of them leaves a lot to be desired. There is only one among them who is very good, Brother Barral. Encourage the rest. Knowledge without piety is to be deplored. Before and above all else, make serious and pious religious of them.
3. I am sending the latest letter from Fr. Deidier on to you. I fear that himself and Fr. Marie will cause the Spanish undertaking to collapse. See what might be done. If you think a trip there might be helpful, go.
4. Bishop Steins of the Auckland Islands is dead. The Universe reported it. Is it likely that we might be offered this mission once again? Is it quite worthwhile? Fr. Navarre tells me that Fr. Deidier would be pleased to go there and I believe him; Fr. Navarre himself also, Fr. Giroux, with two scholastics. What is your view? I have mislaid the information you sent me about the islands. What is the population; foreigners, indigenous? Is there still idolatry? What might be in favour of the place, etc., etc.

What about your March article? I am waiting on it. Time is short. And the diplomas, and so on? etc.

Issoudun, February 14, 1881

Dear Father,

1. If we cannot have the feast of the Sacred Heart on the day on which it falls it would be preferable to have it the next day than to have it put back like this year.
2. You know that we made a Novena to the holy and immaculate Heart of Mary, patronal feast day of the archconfraternity of Our Lady of Victories which falls on the third or fourth Sunday after the Epiphany... This Novena's purpose was to solicit very special help so that the Archbishop of Bourges might approve the foundation of our Society. Our wishes were met in 1855 (February); hence this commemorative time. Ask for this date.
3. You would please us all if you could so arrange it that on each Friday we could celebrate a votive mass of the Sacred Heart, even if the feast for that day is a double (the higher, more solemnly celebrated feast; Chevalier is writing in the context of 19th century liturgies and celebrations). You will make everybody happy. Virtually all the sanctuaries enjoy this privilege.
4. Try to obtain at the very least a votive mass of the Virgin for us for the 31st of May, even when we have on that day a major double feast, or one of the second class. The 31st of May is the patronal feast of the whole Association spread worldwide.
5. The claims of the Reverend Jesuits, and of Father Ramière in particular, about the origin of the Paray (le-Monial) Our Lady are unacceptable, being both erroneous and ahistorical. They have enough glory in their Society without feeling the need to lay claim to this also. Everything for themselves and through themselves! This is not right.
6. We are waiting on your article for next month. With it we shall include the Latin text of the new decree authorizing the enrolling of those at a distance together with some introductory words such as in the Paray-le-Monial Pilgrim (magazine) and several weekly papers. It seems to me that we should no longer keep quiet about this document.
7. Yes, hurry on the diplomas' issue, and with a satisfactory answer. Thank especially our good scholastics for their latest letter which greatly pleased me.

Why not, following visits from bishops to the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart shrine in her Rome sanctuary, write about this in the Annals? It would be most interesting.

Many thanks for your letter, my dear child, and your prayers on my behalf. I for my part do not forget you... Yes, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is under siege... She is so honoured by persecution. It is a double-edged sword.

Your idea about honouring the Heart of Jesus in the final hours of His Passion is very good. It would have to be the April Annals when this is presented. Put on paper all your ideas on this theme, all the good Lord prompts you to say, and send it on to me as soon as possible. See to it in particular that it is written clearly as your writing sometimes leaves something to be desired...

L 18810219

Issoudun, February 19, 1881

Dear Father,

1. The pretentiousness, the attacks and the behaviour of the Jesuit Fathers and Ramière in particular, are beyond belief. I hope Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will win us victory.

2. I received a proof of the new certificate. I am awaiting an explanatory letter from you. I am surprised that I haven't received anything. Where the fourth section of the certificate begins: "Et revera ab anno 1854", etc. I suggest adding on something which would cut short the haggling of Fathers Klotz and Ramot. To the section: "Eamque Dominam Nostram a Sacratissimo Corde Jesu, vulgo" Our Lady of the Sacred Heart "primitus venerari coeperunt" etc. I would add the following underlined words which I consider absolutely necessary: "Eamque, gratia permoti Dominam Nostram a Sacratissimo Corde Jesu, vulgo" Our Lady of the Sacred Heart "primitus vocare atque venerari coeperunt", etc.

The Cardinal Vicar cannot object to this addition since it no more than expresses the truth; this would be the answer to the fabrications of Father Ramière.

3. Simultaneously with the publication of the certificate, it is absolutely imperative that you obtain a rescript making Issoudun a centre independently of Rome. It would be altogether unacceptable if Issoudun were not more privileged than whatever town wishing to be affiliated to the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart archconfraternity.

Issoudun, cradle of the devotion, origin of the devotion, hearth of the devotion, promoter of the devotion throughout the entire world, cannot be deprived of its rights and privileges. That the archconfraternity's centre for the granting of certificates should be in Rome, fine... but it must necessarily be so that Issoudun, for the reasons given above, should be an independent centre with the right to enrol in its registers those dispersed throughout the world and grant them all the indulgences and blessings contained in this new certificate.

Do not engage yourself any further in concluding this issue... It has to be like this on the day the certificate is officially published.

Here's another reason which makes it imperative that Issoudun should be an independent centre in its own right: Rome itself is on the eve of being a victim of the Revolution. Very soon, and don't have any illusions about it, foreign religious will be expelled from their houses, their churches closed and, maybe, sold. Short of a miracle, what would happen to the very centre itself of our Association? It would fall back again into the hands of the Scalsis and their supporters... This presupposition is not at all fanciful. At least we would have another centre which would be our saving plank.

4. Try your best to get the concessions I have already mentioned for the feasts of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, etc., etc., granted.

5. I am sending on to you a letter from Fr. Deidier. Let me know what you think of it.

Cheerio, Father.

To His Grace Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

L 18810120

Town Hall,
Issoudun, February 20 1881

Your Grace,

The Administration members met last Thursday to consider once again, at the instigation of the Indre Prefect, the question of the (hospice) chaplaincy. It was decided, four against three, that the salary should be raised from 800 francs to 1,200 francs (2,475 euros to 3,714 euros). With this new financial arrangement I am only obliged to offer one mass each week for the benefactors. All the other intentions will, accordingly, have to do with myself. If Your Grace thinks that these new conditions should be accepted, I shall continue as before with my services to the hospital. I thought it would be acceptable to Your Grace to provide you with the text of the Council deliberations at the end of this letter.

I am with deepest respect Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant.

Th. Cramaille
Hospice Chaplain.

The Council's decision.

The Council agreed to raise the salary of the chaplain from 500 francs to 800 francs (from approximately 1,545 euros to 2,475 euros) per annum, and this is added to by the same amount for his board and lodging. Nonetheless the Council will decide later if Fr. Cramaille, while remaining hospice chaplain, should have his board and lodging paid for.

The Mayor, the President and Messrs. Sineau and Courant did not agree to the increase in salary since they did not see any reason for it. In any event they reserved the right to look again at the matter, and whether it is appropriate to keep on paying Fr. Cramaille's board and lodging.

Cramaille wrote to the Archbishop on March 2 stating that he had received nothing from the Prefecture, and nor had he seen the named individual who was supposed to provide him with an official communication. If he is not given anything, the next communication has to be waited on.

Issoudun, February 20, 1881

I am returning your signed letter to you. It is very good, very explicit, very shrewd, perhaps a little too conciliatory for all that, or not expressing forthrightly enough what we want, and which we cannot, conscientiously, hold ourselves back from wanting to have. Father Ramière in giving himself over to the advice of the Cardinal Vicar knows that he has everything to gain and nothing to lose, whereas it is not at all the same for us. His Eminence when dealing with our adversary can accommodate himself to him, make concessions which we cannot accept; moreover what he decides will not have the force of law! When the Cardinal is there no longer, the Jesuits will return to the attack; is this not to be feared? Here are the secret instructions I am imparting to you, and you will let me know if you can go through with them:

Ask the Cardinal, as referee, to demand:

1. that there be no longer mention of this statue or of its title;
2. to get rid of it, have it withdrawn commercially and no longer propagated;
3. to compel, if at all possible, the Messenger to accept the devotion of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart such as it is with us in our former and new presentation as complementing devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, doing so as propagating in our name with direct relevance to our Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. Nothing more can be done in this respect than to take after us since it is we ourselves who promote the apostolate of prayer we have set up at Issoudun, in the town itself, at the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work), the Novitiate, and which we direct.

This unity, as you describe so well, could not be more effective for the advancement of these two undertakings. Instead of saying at the end of these articles: "Let us go to the Heart of Jesus through the heart of Mary", it is more acceptable and simple to say "through Our Lady of the Sacred Heart". Once again, sit tightly and do not give way on any of our rights. The verdict of the Cardinal Vicar must be invested with a certain authority to stop the Jesuits, on his death, from returning to the issue. Warn him about this...

Fr. Piperon spoke to me about a very unfavourable comment in the Actae Sanctae Sedis, 150th number, with reference to a decision by the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences concerning the enrolment of those at a distance. Could you verify this as we do not have this publication. It would perhaps be good for us to get it...

You did well to say nothing in your letter that I forbade you to write about the priority of the name, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. The Jesuits through their Fr. de Saint-Angèle, who for quite some time has been in his dotage, are truly ridiculous. We have made plain to them ten times that if this worthy Father has said in a Sacred Heart chapel that Our Lady should be called Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, he is associating no significance to this word. The facts are there to prove that the true title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, together with the devotion associated with it, and the cult arising from it, is specifically associated with the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun. This is undeniable. The evidence is there to prove it.

Although Fr. Ramière, as he said in his letter, placed for the first time my little contribution in the Sacred Heart Messenger, he completely overlooked the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which, he claims, he never heard of, and the significance we give to it. It was a complete revelation for him. He may claim the contrary today, but facts are facts.

Try also, Father, to place in the document those few words I sent on to you yesterday. They are absolutely essential, and arising from them the issue will be quietly brought to an end and the misunderstanding cut off at source. The Cardinal Vicar would not dream of refusing you since we are only seeking the truth. It is pointless providing him with our reasons for this word's insertion in the document. Here's the reason for what is added: moved to acknowledgement, gratia permoti, from the beginning they were wont to call her Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and to honour her under this title, primitus vocare, etc.

You can see my line of thought. If it is not that well expounded, you will put it right. The iron horse which encloses the figure of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart at the top of the document is not graceful; something oval-shaped like our letter heading would be better. I am putting my signature on the bottom of the page to the letter you sent me; you have space to add yet more if you deem it necessary.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

2. Send us on a monthly summary of what is interesting as regard what passes in your church, visits of bishops, ceremonies, etc., etc. All this would engage us greatly.
3. I am sending on to you further letters from Fr. Durin. Let me know what you think of them; then send them to Fr. Guyot asking him in turn to send them to Fr. Piperon who will return them with his observations.
4. It is in September that the Chapter for the election of a Superior General will take place. I am inclined to think that due to the current (political) situation it cannot be held. It would seem to me that in such a circumstance, Rome would allow everybody wherever living to send you confidentially his vote which Bishop de Luca would open in the name of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars and make known the one elected. Take advice on this and, if feasible, it would be the best solution.
5. The Archbishop of Bourges is unwilling to acknowledge that Fr. Carrière has been ordained to the priesthood because he was not consulted about the ordination of this young confrère, and he is not from his diocese.

The Prefect of the Cantal is looking for an official document I wrote to the Bishop of Saint-Flour; I await his reply. Perhaps he will provide it?

6. Our Archbishop tried to set up a third minor seminary at Chezal-Benoît, but discovered an obstacle in the way. Do you know whom he blamed for this? You would never have guessed it... Believe it or not, it was a triduum of reparation preached in your church in Rome!!! The two French Ambassadors in Rome, so he (the Archbishop) says, knew all about it, all the papers as well and the religious weeklies. It is a reprimand publicly inflicted on the government by people like you. There's the reason, then, for the opposition shown to your Society and this explains why I was refused my third minor seminary after I had been promised it. You are creating too much commotion, and fuss, etc.

You can see for yourself, my friend, that we cannot have any expectations. From that side (the Archbishop's) we have no support. Si Deus pro nobis, quis contra nos.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

26th February, 1881

Dear Father,

Nobody in the world can be more happy than we are on seeing the unexpected and distressing issue of the new picture and the accompanying devotion brought to a successful conclusion through the high level, supportive, intervention of His Eminence the Cardinal Vicar. The December 1880 issue of the Sacred Heart Messenger published it under the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of Jesus at prayer, referring to it as the only authentic reproduction for the apostolate of prayer.

Thank in particular, and very specially on my behalf, His Eminence, if you haven't done so already, for his wise advice about not having any recourse to the Holy Office before contacting Rev. Fr. Ramière, and trying as smoothly as possible to get him to acknowledge and refrain from creating the problems which, I am sure, he did not intend himself, but were very much so in reality, and of which I had proof to hand, and were being projected by him on to our Association. On the contrary, in the interests of the Sacred Heart itself, he should support and propagate the devotion as he used to do.

Convey thanks also to Fr. Laurençat for being so kind in providing you with a copy of the splendid letter from Fr. Beelk, the Superior General of the Jesuits, and also for making available Fr. Ramière's letter. I have finished a careful reading of both, and I align myself completely with the final conclusion leaving everything to the decision of His Eminence the Cardinal Vicar, protector of our little Society and our dear archconfraternity.

What the Cardinal in his wisdom accepts we shall do likewise, and the two wonderful apostolates, those of the Apostolate of Prayer and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, instead of being strangers (hostile) to each other will find, through this little issue, providential means of better understanding each other and come close without compromise, as well as providing mutual support in spreading the reign of the Sacred Heart, which is for both groups the unique aim of their undertakings.

To clarify the different approaches, I present briefly here some sections of Fr. Ramière's letter, and present you with the exact interpretation about that which, in my name, you must give reply if more detailed explanations are required.

1. What Fr. Ramière says in the introduction to his letter about his devotedness to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart is true in every respect in regard to the beginnings of the work. This worthy priest is among the first and the best benefactors of our Congregation as you yourself, like myself, well know, and to which you can testify. Our awareness makes it impossible to ignore what he has done to our advantage, but if anyone has suffered over a number of years from the change which has come about it is most definitely ourselves. When on the 3rd of June, 1874, Pius IX, without any request from us, inspired the thought (which for us was a command even though it was expressive of our souls' most ardent wishes) to call again for the consecration of the Church to the Sacred Heart, we proceeded straightaway to make the request and it led to three million signatures. Fr. Ramière was opposed to this initiative. He had taken the initiative for this request in 1878. The zeal of the Apostolate of Prayer members responded to this appeal; we freely made available the support of our Annals when publishing his request and collecting signatures... but the Providential moment had not yet arrived and this splendid crusade aimed at the pious faithful did not then achieve results. At the end of the same year, our Association repeated the appeal through fifty thousand new appeals. The Holy Father sent us a congratulatory brief, but the moment so hoped for had not yet arrived.

In 1874, arising from the suggestion of Pius IX, deigning to address us, a fresh enthusiasm enveloped souls. Fr. Ramière himself set about collecting the petitions of bishops and faithful, and what neither the Apostolate of Prayer nor the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart could do by themselves alone was brought about very successfully through their combined efforts.

The Director General of the Apostolate of Prayer, however, even before the results were announced, had expressed his dissatisfaction with us, and the evidence for this was to be seen in the Messenger of the Sacred Heart. We were obliged to answer. The Archbishop of Bourges, the regretted His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne, came to our defence. The Holy Father himself sent us a very beautiful brief acknowledging the support brought to the undertaking, and so the matter ended for the moment.

2. In 1875 a counterfeit of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart picture in a foreign country brought on itself, very much to our liking, appropriate criticism from the Holy Office. We were made aware of this from the papers and in the April 1875 Messenger of the Sacred Heart which, through its eleven editions and the well deserved influence it enjoys, contributed – unknowingly we accept, but in reality most effectively – to the upheavals which could have destroyed forever the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association. According to Fr. Ramière, nothing was more supportive of the Issoudun Apostolate than the Messenger of the Sacred Heart, and despite this, without contacting us or waiting for our Annals, and without adding a necessary explanatory word, the Messenger spread the fact everywhere and the weekly religious papers reproduced the translation of the Roman document, judged by the whole world as being condemnatory of the Issoudun statue, whereas Cardinal Patrizi had straightaway stated that the document in question from the Holy Office had not a word to say against the presentation of the Madonna, neither condemning or forbidding it, and to have it otherwise is to be mistaken. You have a copy of Cardinal Patrizi's second contribution, and you can make it available to anybody who wishes to read it.

How many problems would have been avoided if the matter, instead of being made public, had been brought from the beginning to the attention of those who were most directly involved in knowing about it! Despite the explanations provided by Rome and the support provided by the Holy See for the work of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the Messenger of the Heart of Jesus, which claims that it is supportive of all Catholic undertakings, has no longer any consideration for our work, and the most glacial silence between us has sadly been remarked on by a great many of the faithful. Each month the little Messenger provides excerpts from the Annals of La-Salette, Lourdes, Pontmain, St. Michel, Paray-le-Monial, etc. But rarely, less than rarely, from Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. We mentioned this to Father Ramière in Rome for the feast on the 23rd of May for the opening of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Church in Piazza Navona, when Fr. Ramière promised to make mention of the occasion. He kept his word, but since then there has been nothing. And it is when our work, so to say, has been forgotten by the Messenger of the Sacred Heart readers, that they are offered, by way of encouragement and as an accomplished fact, the new picture of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of Jesus in prayer, and this is published without as much as one little word about it mentioned to us, whereas Fr. Ramière thinks that we are going beyond the bounds of charity when we complain about it. What would happen if our Annals associated with the Apostolate of Prayer a new formula specific only to our massive Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart?

3. As for any complaints likely to be brought up by the Paris manufacturer, we are in agreement with Fr. Ramière... There is nothing to worry about from the legal point of view. But what is legal is not always right. Likewise we have nothing to say from the legal point of view when Mr. Angelini presents a signed document in his own name and in his role as Secretary of the universal archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, giving permission to the Paris manufacturer to publish each week in the papers that the statue was the only one approved by the Holy Father. This prospectus was sent to all the centres of our Association and to Issoudun... and nevertheless it has been necessary, and continues to be so, for us to contribute payments which cripple us in order to avoid involvement in a judicial process always likely to have unfortunate consequences. Fr. Ramière's statue-maker himself presents a statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart differing in name and shape. The Messenger of the Sacred Heart promotes it as the only authentic statue for the Apostolate of Prayer Association, and the issues of 1875 overcome with so much distress and sacrifices begin all over again. Fr. Ramière himself should realize what he has done, and what should be done.

4. The concern about orthodoxy has not been, and will not be, raised by us. Fr. Ramière's doctrinal position is ours, and he understands very well the meaning of devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Everyone preaches it following the mysteries he aims to set out, but this must not change or damage the unity of a work so demanding established.

5. Fr. Ramière has said that the image of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of Jesus was only once used and that was on the Messenger's cover... That is absolutely correct. He adds that nothing would be easier than to get rid of it altogether. If by this he simply means it to be understood that it is enough to discuss the issue no further and it will of itself tend to be forgotten, we for our part do not share in this instance his viewpoint, because the notification of a precise nature with reference to the purchase of new statues of all sizes, and kinds, at different prices, and the possibility of sending them abroad, carries, and will carry, long-term consequences.

We believe that the one and only way to bring everything together, that which will most accord with the Sacred Heart and Our Lady, should be the propagation of the devotion and the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, such as they are, and to commend this to the associates of the Apostolate just as we ourselves, as an obligation in piety, commend the Apostolate of Prayer to our associates.

The two apostolates would provide mutual support for each other in this way. They are drawn spontaneously by the very thrust of things towards each other without, however, being mistaken for each other. This is all the more needed since the changes and additions looked for by Fr. Ramière, if accepted as part of the apostolate, could mean that all other undertakings of the same kind could be adapted also to their ideas and practices and become detrimental to the devotion and statue representation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. There would be Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of Jesus in Prayer, the Sacred Heart of Jesus in Agony, the Sacred Heart of Christ in Glory, etc. In that case the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, which today exists solely as one for the entire world, would be set up in a particularized way. Whereas we hold to the view that the understanding of the Archconfraternity should be the same, and if the members of such and such a particular group wanted the image to be adapted to their idea, misunderstandings and problems would arise, which unfortunately we are all well aware of.

What Fr. Ramière says about devotion to the Sacred Heart being practised and explained in a hundred different ways, without anyone having to repeat himself, cannot in the present discussion be used for purposes of comparison. For on the one side, as Fr. Ramière knows, there really are difficulties as between the different works involving the Sacred Heart when they do not stay within the limits laid down; on the other hand there is the general wish to achieve unity as soon as possible, and the formula of the consecration on June 16, the same one for all Catholics in every country and nation, recited the same day at the foot of the altar during the solemn feast, is itself, because of its unity, one of the most beautiful religious occasions, and here the credit, for the most part, goes to Fr. Ramière. If everyone had sought, because of special aims, a wording different from that of the consecration form, we would not have had this wonderful coming together which has been so greatly and marvellously edifying.

It was in order to achieve something comparable with devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, that there should be unity about it all over the world, that we agreed, with greater sacrifices entailed, to set up a house of our own in Rome and recreate from its broken-down condition an old church. We, in fact, dedicated it to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart because Fr. Ramière feared that it might be dedicated to the Sacred Heart, as indeed the Pope himself had suggested to us, and thereby no threat would be posed to the national shrine of the Sacred Heart in Italy... We went along with the request straightaway. His Eminence the Cardinal Vicar is aware of this, and we now hope that Fr. Ramière for his part will also take note that the unity which should never have to be in jeopardy as between the two apostolates, those of the Jesuits and the MSCs, would be more closely maintained, and that the Sacred Heart will bless the work of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart whose overall direction is entrusted to our little Society under the distinguished patronage of, and dependence on, the Cardinal Vicar, just as Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will help and promote, since she is powerful, the wonderful work of the Apostolate of Prayer promoted by the Society of Jesus.

To sum up, Father, it is necessary to see to it that:

1. There should be nothing further about this new statue being put forward by the Apostolate of Prayer.
2. That, such as it is, it be withdrawn entirely from commerce and promotion.
3. That in its place the Messenger propagates and commends the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, such as it is with us, with our older or more recent picture, just as we propagate the Apostolate of Prayer such as it is, and as we get it from Fr. Ramière, without changing or adding anything to it.

Look into this whole affair most carefully, Fr., the consequences of which would be disastrous if it does not end with agreement between both undertakings which, without merging, can be united with each other and mutually support one another.

Dear Father,

Issoudun, February 27, 1881

1. I got your letter enclosing the rescript for the feast of the Sacred Heart. A thousand thanks. Yes, indeed, I sympathize with you. I understand your sensitive situation. Nobody more than myself shares your burdens. I also know you support me in mine.

2. Why has such an extended country as New Guinea not had missionaries or a mission apostolate up to now? Yet it is three centuries since it was discovered. There must be serious reasons for leaving this country to itself. Is it because it has always been unwelcoming and lethal for Europeans? With what apostolic mission is it associated? What is the climate like? Although hot, is it healthy? Has Christianity moved in there? What are the natives like, their morality? Their numbers? To whom does this large island belong? What is their industry (means of livelihood)? What do they produce? Would the mission become an apostolic vicariate? Would the Propaganda Congregation provide resources? Would not this mission be too difficult and dangerous for our little Society? Would not our pioneer members be effectively sacrificed? And then, what are we to do in order to replace them? In reply answer all these questions. At Propaganda (the Congregation dealing with the missions) you will be provided with the means of answering these questions... Is there not a little mission easier, more accommodating, less remote, with a less harsh climate, less scorching?

Today (February 27) in the Universe's reporting from Rome, there is an article on our Rome house and about us which seemed to me tactless, dangerous and compromising. It is of the kind likely to draw in an unfortunate manner the attention of the French Government on our Society, the Issoudun house and on my own role as parish priest. When we shall have been driven out of Issoudun and from the parish we (the State) shall be very progressive!

It is very risky to draw attention to ourselves at this present time. Make this clearly understood by the journalists of the Universe and the Monde. We have everything to gain by setting up a death process! Insist that the journalists make their articles available to you for perusal before they dispatch them. I am sure that you would not have approved all that has been written about us.

Cheerio, Father.

I cannot make sense of Fr Deidier's behaviour. Fr. Marie hasn't written a word to me since the beginning of the year. What is going to happen; what are they doing? I have no idea.

To Fr. Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, March 6, 1881

Dear Father,

I am forwarding the letter from the worthy Finistère (Brittany) priest who would like to join us. He seems to me to have a serious vocation. Since he has to go to Rome and wishes to spend some days on retreat, I advised him to visit you and do this little retreat under your direction. You will discuss with him and judge for yourself. If you think he is suitable, he can be sent to our Novitiate. Let us actively pray to St. Joseph to get us good candidates.

All our confrères are keen about the New Guinea mission, believing this proposal both providential and very advantageous for our Society. According to geographical data, the climate, however warm, would not be unhealthy(!). If the Sacred Congregation, to begin with, were to be satisfied with 3 or 4 priests and two or three scholastics, I believe that we could accept (the invitation)... And a mission such as this would make us happy and draw serious vocations to us. Fr. Morisseau, however, does not share this view, claiming that we should neither go to America helping out Fr. Durin or to Oceania because, as he insists, we haven't nearly enough members, nor anyone of sufficient stature to take charge. I am quite sure that neither Fr. Piperon or Fr. Guyot share this view. I have written to Fr. Guyot; and you, for your part, should write to Fathers Piperon and Guyot to influence them in making a decision. The two Frs. Thomas, Fathers Navarre, Cramaille, Vatan, Giroux, Deidier, I should think, and Brother Verjus would all be willing to go anywhere, but to New Guinea by preference. I would, even without a majority of the Council, accept this wonderful mission and I direct you to discuss it with the Cardinal Prefect. Look into it and let me know what should be done. Fr. Ramot very much wants to go abroad. Who would you commend as Vicar Apostolic? And who would you have accompanying him? If we were to take on New Guinea we could send 3 or 4 priests there, and give one or two more to Fr. Durin together with one of his nephews! If you thought that Fr. Deidier could go to Guinea (sic) as Apostolic Vicar, who would you suggest should take his place in Barcelona? Would Fr. Chatelat be available to go there? I could then make available to you Fr. Bontemps as his replacement in Rome... And as for Fr. Carrière, what are his feelings?

The big advantage is that we are, as you say, the only ones for New Guinea, and in time we could have a mission there of the utmost importance. Let us pray a great deal. What's happening about the issues being held over and for which we await an answer?

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, March 19, 1881

Dear Father,

I received your letter together with all the documentation on New Guinea and New Caledonia. I share your view: we must accept this wonderful and important mission. The circumstances could not be more favourable! We could easily make available to the place three or four of our confrères, together with one or two scholastics, without detriment to our undertakings in Europe. The acceptance of this important mission will bring great blessings upon our Congregation as well as many vocations. This is my belief. This is how I propose to organize matters: Fr. Durin already has some experience of missions. He is energetic, pious, dedicated. Moreover, he knows English and this will be a worthwhile asset. I would, accordingly, appoint him head of the mission as Apostolic Vicar, giving him as helpers Fr. Cramaille who is fervent, sound, willing; he is quite pleased. Fr. Thomas from Limoges, a 43-year-old priest, has asked to go; and then there's Fr. Giroux. In addition, Brother Verjus would be delighted, and, perhaps, you would provide another.

As for America, Fr. Ramot could replace Fr. Durin, and Fr. Navarre could go there with Fr. Ramot. Fr. Ramot is exhausted at present; we are expecting him next week. He will preach for us at the end of Lent and the month of May. This arrangement, I believe, could work out well. Here now is what you must do. Write me a letter which I can present to the Archbishop of Bourges (who very likely will not be supportive of this mission) and to the priests of the Council. You will point out to me in this letter that the Holy Father, through the intermediary of Cardinal Simeoni, wants us to accept the New Guinea mission, etc., that we would please him by doing so, that it is a new challenge we are undertaking for him and that he will take care of us, etc., etc.

Cardinal Simeoni should write a letter to me also in which he will say much the same things. He should not in such a letter leave it to be understood that we are free to accept or not, but rather state straightforwardly that the Holy See has entrusted us with this mission, etc. In this way there will be no difficulties raised either on the side of our Archbishop or of our priests who will give way before the sovereign wishes of the Holy Father. Since the Sacred Heart draws us to take on this mission, it must be done so immediately without delay. The Archbishop of Bourges will be at Issoudun on the 26th of this month in the afternoon since he is confirming on the 27th. I must have these letters, then, by Saturday next or Sunday, the 2nd, without fail. If vocations come to us for the New Guinea mission, and particularly when one of us returns in two or three years, accompanied by some native youngsters, and criss-crosses France appealing for support, we could set up a Novitiate at Barcelona... the climate is warm enough, and it's a centre for departure, etc. We shall see!

I eagerly await your letter and that from Propaganda in the name of the Holy Father. One must get moving straightaway. The hour has come.

Those religiously responsible for Issoudun are officially asking the government to have our basilica opened as a church of ease under the direction of the Saint-Cyr priests. We are not without some hope. Pray and ask for prayers. What about our chapter acts; the association document; the Fr. Ramière issue; our elections; our different briefs, etc.?

Cheerio, Fr.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Thank Cardinal Simeoni, in particular, for his proposal of the mission and for his general interest in us. When the New Guinea question is settled I shall ask Fr. Durin to come immediately to France before proceeding to Rome to receive instructions and become a bishop in partibus infidelium.

Issoudun, March 22, 1881

Dear Father,

Thanks for your kind letter. Yes, you may write to Fr. Guyot giving him what I wrote to you about Messrs. Piquet, de Bonneval and Gerard and your own thoughts about this matter. Give the impression that I have said nothing to you about Fr. Guyot's letter. You will be simply sharing your thoughts with him.

Three weeks ago Fr. Guyot forwarded a new proposal to me in the Pope's name from the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda. It is desired that at least in principle we take on the New Guinea mission and that of the Solomon Islands abandoned since 1854 and given over to the Protestants. There is only one Catholic priest from Nantes in these vast countries who accompanied 150 French, Belgian and Alsatian colonists as their ship's chaplain a year ago, their objective to develop one of these islands called New Britain which is close to New Guinea and which would be under our care. The account provided by this priest is very interesting. The natives would be well disposed to accept missionaries. Cardinal Simeoni encourages us enthusiastically, saying that the time is ripe, that Providence is with us, that the persecution in France will become still more intense, and that we shall have a new country (to look forward to).

Only three priests are being requested and over a number of years we would see about adding to them if possible. We can only do that which is in our capabilities. The main thing is to take it on so that it becomes known that this fine mission is under the patronage of the Sacred Heart. His Eminence is persuaded that its acceptance, which for the present does not demand too great a sacrifice, will draw down on our Society very great blessings and attract many vocations. Fiat. The Propaganda Congregation, he adds, will obtain for us from the Propagation of Faith the resources needed. The Cardinal forwarded me a file of documents to study the situation attentively. I replied that we were not yet quite ready for this mission, etc. The Cardinal replied saying the Pope so wished it and was taking it upon himself to assess the situation and that shortly he will make known to us his wish that in our best interests he would be making us responsible for this lovely mission, and it was a very significant vote of confidence on the part of His Holiness, the Cardinal went on to say.

What are we to do? Fr. Jouët urges us to accept.

Cheerio; greetings to everyone.

Issoudun, March 24, 1881

Dear Father,

On Sunday you sent me a telegram stating: "Do not send out the Annals; wait for an important letter which follows." It is now Thursday, 9pm, and I have not received anything. A letter would have had enough time to go and come. We withheld the printing. We await... If by tomorrow, Friday, nothing has arrived, the Annals will be printed on Saturday and sent out on Monday as a matter of course. What is the reason for this delay? Already on several occasions this has happened. It would be better to say nothing at all. Are you perhaps laid up, or would the letter have gone astray?

I am anxious about the state of your health. Take care of yourself. Have a change of air if you need it. Come and stay with us. If a trip would help, it should be undertaken. All the more so when you presume it would be pointless in helping to persuade the Council Fathers to accept the New Guinea mission. The more I think about it, the more convinced I become that we should accept it. This is also Fr. Ramot's view who has been here at Issoudun since Tuesday last. All the confrères think like us except the Council fathers. I believe that Fr. Morisseau will eventually come round. If the Pope expresses a real wish and puts it to me in writing I believe the issue is sealed.

I wrote to the manager of Nouvelle France, 5 place du Change, Marseilles, asking for advice in a very sympathetic letter; he forwarded the complete collection of his papers. The issue for the 15th of March last is very interesting and is worth reading. Try to get hold of it. He sent me at the same time the Marquis de Rays' address, the founder of the colony and a worthy Christian. He lives in Barcelona, Calle de la Ensenanza, 2 (second floor), Spain. See to it that he is informed either by Fr. Sans or the senior curate, Fr. Morgades. This Mr. Rays was prepared to buy an old château in the Barcelona neighbourhood as a Novitiate for the new New Guinea missionaries and for the elderly sick priests of the mission. This is very impressive. Tell Fr. Giroux that I take note of his request and he will be among the first to go.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Rome, March 24, 1881

Very Reverend and Dear Fr. Superior,

His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni urgently called me to Propaganda on Sunday last to consider once more the issue of the missions. The New Guinea Mission is once again greatly engaging the Holy See's attention. This island, the world's largest, hasn't seen a Catholic priest for twenty-five years and has already in many places several Protestant foundations. But these are only on the coasts of the island up to the present, not having penetrated the interior.

The Holy Father would like two or three Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, three at the most, to consider departing for this wild country to explore it a little, and consider how to go about setting up a mission, learn the language somewhat, and then provide an account of their little undertaking... If there is no other reward than death, it is already a recompense likely to reward us greatly for what little trouble was involved in the undertaking.

This is what Cardinal Simeoni said to me on Sunday, adding that it was never so easy to get to New Guinea thanks to the colonists from Cape Breton, whose ships and personnel would be at the disposal of the first missionaries to go there. His Eminence also said that he was asked by the Holy Father to write directly to us to ask us to make generously available three missionaries, and the Sacred Heart and the Church would be indebted to you.

You have already received from me the complete documentation relevant to this mission. You will receive very likely at the same time as this letter, or a little later, the official request of the Holy See. I do not know what your answer will be, but my own well-considered view neatly summed up is that we cannot but accept (this offer). Several of our priests and students only chose our Society because of the expectation that one day there would open up before them the prospect of apostolic work in pagan lands. If Providence draws us, the number of those who would like to go will be much larger than the number the Holy Father is looking for.

As for myself, I am wholeheartedly at your disposal if you so wish it and I shall activate as much as possible the consolidation of our dear little community here so that in the near future you could conveniently put someone in my place and make use of me as you wish.

The Holy Father is greatly interested in us; you will note this in the accompanying letters to be placed in the Annals. The Secretary of the Propaganda Congregation will meet me tomorrow to give me further instructions which I shall send on to you as soon as possible.

I am, Very Rev. Fr. Superior, your devoted child in S.S. Corde Jesu.

V. Jouët.

Chevalier's letter to Piperon now follows on from Jouët's letter.

Dear Father,

This is a letter I have had from Fr. Jouët. I asked him to explain our position to Cardinal Simeoni. The Cardinal in his reply to him said that our acceptance would be a very effective way of getting vocations, and the Holy Father thought the same.

According to this letter, a Vicar Apostolic is not to be considered for the time being, only when two or three years had gone by and following on live experience of the situation. Again, there is at the moment no compulsion about acceptance if one cannot realistically take it on at the present time. I am, very likely, due to get the official letter this week. How can I answer? To refuse is serious when the Pope makes a request.

The Archbishop of Bourges was here again at Issoudun this morning for Confirmations; I handed him Fr. Jouët's letter, and he rightly said: "You must accept, it will be easy for you to find three or four priests in the present circumstances without any disadvantage to your undertakings."

This is my considered view; I don't know if you agree. I shall send Fr. Durin to New Guinea. I shall have Fr. Cramaille, who is very willing, and Fr. Giroux, who has asked to go, accompanying him, together with one or two scholastics. Fr. Durin will be in charge. These appointments would hold for no more than 2 or 3 years. If things develop under Fr. Durin when experiencing the challenge, he would be put forward as Vicar Apostolic; otherwise the post would be offered to someone else. And if the mission was so demanding that we could not continue with it, we would disengage. At least there would be nothing with which to reproach ourselves.

Fr. Durin has, I accept, in his disfavour, a personality not greatly judicious...., but this undertaking is no more than an exploratory mission, becoming conversant with places, people, their life-style, language, etc... Just the same, Fr. Durin is assured, dependable, a good religious, a worker, committed, courageous, a man of faith. He has, moreover, a little experience of distant missions (the USA); he knows English which is a special asset, and, finally, he knows how to sort things out, and, besides, he is intelligent. For all the foregoing reasons, I would not hold back, despite his faults, from appointing him head of this mission.

The Administrators of the Issoudun hospitals no longer want a chaplain so-called; they have cut off his salary. The Archbishop, accordingly, wants a Saint-Cyr curate to take care of the sick and burials as previously. So dealt with, then, there would be no discontinuity. Fr. Giroux is of no use to us at the moment.

Meanwhile, who can be sent to Watertown? I could send Fr. Ramot there, together with Fr. Navarre, and Fr. Grom (Benjamin) could stay with them. The latter knows English very well, and is very good natured. Moreover, he is one of the house's legal owners. I think these three confrères would get on very well with each other, and could guide well this little American mission while awaiting other opportunities to offer further support in personnel. This set-up, so it seems to me, is the best, suiting everyone. Do you agree with it? What should one do? If your answer is in the negative, send on your comments immediately without delay to Cardinal Simeoni. I am pleased about your meeting with the Count and the Bishop of Roermond.

Cheerio, Fr.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Father,

I received your letters and that from Cardinal Simeoni. Thank you.

1. I put in your article. You are responsible for the April issue's being late. I appeal to you, once again, to take better care and try not to continue being late. Send on to us contributions from Rome each month.
2. I sent on details about the New Guinea project to Fr. Piperon. This is his reply:... (accompanying letter) I also sent him your last letter and that of Cardinal Simeoni where there is for the time being no mention of a Vicariate. Perhaps he will change his mind... Write to him. Fr. Guyot is not in favour. None of our important undertakings, and which they now approve of, had, on the contrary, the support of these worthy confrères. Fr. Morisseau is exactly of the same view as the other two. It's disappointing. Write to Fr. Guyot. The Cardinal Prefect has written to myself directly; he says nothing about the views of the Council. Does this mean that I myself, alone, can decide? If the answer is in the affirmative, my acceptance answer will be quickly forwarded to you. I see in all this a thousand advantages, and nothing disadvantageous.
3. If Fr. Chatelat is so useless that he cannot replace you, there is no reason for him to remain in Rome; the purpose of his being there has not been achieved. When we get down to the New Guinea appointments, a new posting must be arranged for him. Fr. Ramot could not go to Rome in the present circumstances because he will be sent either to New Guinea or to America. These journeys incur a great deal of expense and must not be undertaken except in urgent necessity. I wrote to the Marquis of Rays and await his reply. Fr. Deidier had your letter with the P.S. which, on your instructions, I added on to it. I shall forward a letter to you from him. You will see for yourself that everything goes marvellously well in Barcelona.
4. Fr. Ramière (S.J.), I gather, makes favourable concessions; this is a little too much. But what name will be given to the statue he is left with? We shall see.
5. Our Archbishop of Bourges, to whom I handed your letter on the New Guinea enterprise, said quite frankly that we couldn't refuse the request and should respond to this significant gesture of esteem by willingly accepting it. His Grace told me that he will not be going to Rome before December next when he will be there for the canonization of Blessed Benedict Labre.

Benedict Labre used to beg for the poor at the door of the then Church of St. James of the Spanish, the present Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Church, Piazza Navona. A statue in the church recalls his presence.

Here all are in good health.
Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

The immediate following is a letter received by Chevalier from Guyot, forwarded to Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Saint-Gérard-le-Puy, March 30, 1881

Very Reverend Father,

I hasten to inform you of having received a copy of a letter from Fr. Jouët which awaited me here on returning from a mission in Sazeret. As you wished, I sent Fr. Jouët my views on the question of a New Guinea mission pointing out to him that the request of the Holy See only arose through an error about the condition and significance of our Society, and that there is an obligatory need for him to clarify the issues in this respect. It cannot be doubted that if the Holy Father and Cardinal Simeoni were well informed, they would never dream of intimating to us the request which, perhaps, you have already received. I would advise Fr. Jouët that in the event of his not doing so, I shall feel compelled in conscience to disengage from this undertaking. Accordingly, in the event that this pathetic undertaking takes effect, I can do no more than deplore it and pray to the Sacred Heart to watch over the souls of those unfortunates who will be sent there, since experience shows that many missionaries better trained than ours lose their faith and morals in pagan lands. I fear even more for our Society, which already experiences so many organizational problems, one from which, perhaps, so many indispensable cogs are being lopped off. Before God, and with that due respect I owe you, Reverend Fr., I cannot commit myself to any other approach than this one. If it is saddening for you to get this news, I myself have no conviction other than this. If it is hurtful for you to be presented with this item of news, I ask you to pardon me while I assure you of my regard and filial affection for you in C.J.

Guyot, MSC.

Undated letter

You may, Father, from the foregoing letter, appraise our dear confrère's feelings. His attitude is unacceptable. Once again, I repeat, if the Holy See leaves it to my judgment, I shall unhesitatingly accept. All my Issoudun confrères, and those elsewhere without exception, are delighted with this offer and encourage me to accept it. Only the Council Fathers, other than yourself, oppose it. What am I to do? To go ahead is my contention, if the Cardinal approves, since we can do what the Cardinal asks of us.

I am forwarding the letter dealing with Fr. Ramière. It's very good.

Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I shall shortly be sending you some money.

No date, possibly May, 1881

Your Grace,

The undersigned inhabitants of the town and borough of Issoudun humbly ask for your supportive help to have a church of ease provided for the parish of Saint-Cyr, Issoudun, the church so-called of the Sacred Heart, sited in the town at Place de Vouet, and consequently what would be the reopening of this church.

You will be aware, Your Grace, that the building of this church compensated for the inadequacy of the parish church and met the religious requirements of 15,231 inhabitants (of the town) spread over an area comprising 4,300 hectares, and for whom adding to the number of services and having celebrations at inconvenient times create problems on all sides. The inconvenience is more especially experienced by the people of the area around the Sacred Heart Church. They find it hard to understand why they have to go so far away to the parochial church when they have a church in their immediate vicinity and which they, the undersigned, wish to be made available as a chapel of ease.

They are, with deep respect, Your Grace's most humble and devoted servants.

J.C.

Dear Father,

You are right; your letter stirred up sad feelings in me. Reading it one would be led to believe that the Holy See was looking for a dozen people from us and a Vicar Apostolic to set up a mission according to canonical regulations. At the outset when the first approaches were made to me I asked Fr. Jouët to make it candidly known to Cardinal Simeoni the current state of our Congregation, and the impossibility in which we presently find ourselves to accept the invitation made to us, however flattering it was for us (it did imply a proper Apostolic Vicariate). He (Simeoni) did as requested and passed on the message to the Holy Father. Following 4 or 5 weeks without contact, Fr. Jouët wrote saying that he had been commissioned by the Propaganda Office to make clear that it was no longer about a proper (canonical) mission being set up with reference to us since we were not ready for that, but rather sending to these distant missions two or three of our confrères over two or three years who could become aware on the spot of the natives' characteristics, their morals, the climate, the quality of the soil, etc., providing in consequence an exact appraisal, and this was the formal request of Leo XIII. Thereafter, within a year or two, if we were in a position to take on this splendid mission it would be entrusted to us, and it would be all the more pleasing for being under the patronage of the Sacred Heart. The situation was so understood when Fr. Jouët's letter was written to me and which I forwarded to you, and also that of Cardinal Simeoni which you should have received this morning. The Holy See, therefore, knows our situation, and it is with awareness of this that two or three priests are being asked for. Can we refuse to give them? No!

1. Because it is easy for us to provide them;
2. Because the future is not compromised;
3. Because, following two or three years' experience, we can withdraw if the burden is more than we can cope with.

The Apostles, likewise, made their remarks when the Lord asked them to put down their nets. The Master insisted, and these hard fishermen accepted without being hopeful of success and with a certain degree of discontent: in verbo tuo lexabo rete. What follows makes clear that his (Peter's) obedience was generously rewarded. Let us not be more rebellious than St. Peter! May our human prudence be self-effacing before the will of the Master. Let us set about giving way graciously and with good-will. God does not want to make us victims of our obedience if it is totally blind and heroic. We are entitled to be confident about a safeguarding miracle... and we shall have it... I assure you. Several of our undertakings began in contradictory circumstances, even the most lively; as you are aware. When a variety of circumstances took on a providential shape, we were drawn forward favourably. Today we are aware that God's spirit was at work in all this and we are thankful for everything.

Be confident, Father, the future will vindicate, I am certain, our keeping together. Let us be one in confidence, devotedness, love. If you do not wish to take upon yourself responsibility for this undertaking, leave it with the wisdom of your Superior. Let me have a vote of confidence and I take all responsibility on me. I do not believe you will ever have any reason to regret it. If, by way of answering the request of the Holy See, we must sacrifice the Arles house, we shall do so while the issue of rebuilding it is being considered. Besides who knows if we shall not be persecuted yet further in France. I think so, and the crisis could be long lasting. (Well foreseen by Chevalier.)

Cheerio, dear Father,

Issoudun, April 3, 1881

Dear Father,

1. I am sending you 3,500 francs (roughly 10,840 euros)... This is as much as I can do at present.
2. Fr. Guyot wrote to me this morning saying that he was agreeing to the lunacy about to be undertaken by us because he hopes the Lord will turn it to his advantage. Accordingly, he gives his vote to the New Guinea project. Fathers Piperon and Morisseau also. It is a big undertaking to stabilize. May the Lord be praised. Long live the Sacred Heart, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, St. Joseph!

And now whom shall we send there?

Father Ramot is too sensitively conscientious at the moment. Yourself you continue to be needed in Rome; Fr. Piperon cannot be taken away from the Novitiate; Fr. Deidier is not healthy enough; there remains Fr. Durin. Fathers Piperon and Morisseau would accept him ad duritium cordis (heavy-heartedly). Fr. Guyot wouldn't have him under any circumstances. He (Guyot) favours you and would replace you with Fr. Deidier. This is out of the question for the time-being.

The reader will be aware of recent critical comment on Deidier in Barcelona and, previously, at Arles. There will be England yet to come!

I would be inclined to send Fr. Durin there for two or three years to explore the situation, to examine and study things, on the spot, following which a report would be sent to us. Then within two years we would consider who might be put forward as leader of the mission.

I doubt if Fr. Durin would compromise matters from the present moment and extending over two years. I would give him Fathers Cramaille and Giraux. Fr. Guyot tells me that he would not favour the latter (Giraux) and couldn't vote for him... Are you not certain about Fr. Giraux? With regard to America, I would send Fr. Ramot there as Superior, together with Fr. Navarre, as I said to you.

Would Fr. Chatelat go to America with sufficient good-will?

I shall be writing to Cardinal Simeoni in the course of the coming week to thank him and convey officially to him our acceptance.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

*Undated letter,
likely early April, 1881*

Dear Father,

I received the letter you had from Fr. Deidier. I am sending you another I had from him. There is nothing to be gathered from it.

2. If the Marquis de Rays does not know Fr. Aurélian well enough, he who caused so many scandals in Vichy, let him write to the Bishop of Moulins who placed him (Aurélian) under interdict and broke up his pretence of a community, etc., etc. This man must be got rid of. This Fr. Denis is from the Sens diocese; it was Fr. Marie who accepted him, being a friend of his, and he came to the Sacred Heart. You must have met him. He even wanted to go to the Novitiate. He is a hot head, who became compromised because of a woman he kept despite the Bishop's disapproval. He would not be a welcome acquisition.

Fathers Guyot and Piperon are agreed on New Guinea. I shall send their letters on to you.

But who are we to send there? You are indispensable in Rome, at least for some years to come, and also Fr. Piperon for the Novitiate. Your view...

I shall shortly forward to you our official acceptance of New Guinea, and a long letter from the Marquis de Rays.

Cheerio. Wholly yours in C.J.

These gentlemen (of the Council) are not persuaded that scholastics should be sent on at present.

Issoudun, April 8, 1881

Your Grace,

The Issoudun Municipal Council is about to demolish a cross situated in one of the town sectors, a cross which has been there for centuries, respected even by the revolutions of 93 and 48. Having had wind of their plan, I anticipated things by going to see the Assistant Prefect. I informed him that he should have legal authorization since the land on which this cross is raised was empty and unused, and that, moreover, in 1842, the townspeople, through subscriptions, had raised up a Calvary in stone surmounted by a cross which replaced the older one which had collapsed from age. This monument belongs to them. The Assistant Prefect agreed with my thinking and he assured me that the cross would be respected. I also spoke to him about our processions which the municipality wanted to ban. I left a note with him reminding him that they didn't have the right. When I heard about the callous action undertaken yesterday, without being informed beforehand, I called on the Assistant Prefect straightaway. I am letting you have his reply. What is to be done, Your Grace?

1. Should the Fabric sector, normally concerned with the parish's religious buildings, make an official complaint?
2. Should the people who live in the area where the expenses of the cross were met, and who still remember the contribution of the workmen, legally reclaim the material (from the Calvary) left at the Town Hall?

I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant.

J. Chevalier, Priest.

Issoudun, April 10, 1881

Dear Father,

I am sending on the official acceptance letter for the New Guinea mission. Be kind enough to forward it to His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni when you have read it. You will give the letter whatever date you decide on, that of Good Friday for instance, which is the day of salvation, or any other one. (Chevalier's acceptance is dated April 16, 1881, coinciding, sadly, with the death of a young student in Rome, Octave de Brinon.) If it (the letter) is not in keeping with requirements add and leave out, and then I shall do the same. I worked on it (the original) in such a way that we can take out part of it for the Annals. I am sure that the same will hold for the Cardinal's reply since it is very likely that he will write to me. Give a lot of thought to the three we must send there (New Guinea). This is important. I do not think they can leave before the end of June. Mention this to the Cardinal, and take note of what he has to say. I am forwarding to you with this letter an article to be placed in the Catholic papers and religious weeklies in France, Belgium, Canada, with a Rome date. You will provide the exact date as you wish. It cannot be placed in the Rome or Italian papers, etc., until my letter has been received by Cardinal Simeoni. This correspondence, coming from Rome, could be presented in an article for our May Annals, if it appears early enough in the public domain.

The anonymous article by Chevalier was corrected, edited, by Jouët. On his advice it was thought better to wait for the resolution of certain issues before presenting a truncated script. The script appeared in July this year, 1881, under the name of the Rome correspondent of the Universe, Mr. de Maguelone, and then it was reproduced in the August issue of the Issoudun Annals together with an article by Jouët.

Read this article, taking out or adding what you think à propos. I think it will not be too long before it can come out. Forward it not only to all the religious weeklies, the major Catholic papers, but also to the conservative papers which come from the capitals and departments. It's an expense which for the most part we shall be repaid.

Do not leave it to be understood that it was I who sent you this article.

Chevalier's reserve finds an explanation in his being Archpriest of Issoudun and thereby avoiding any misunderstanding with the Archbishop of Bourges, since he was very much attached to the Archdiocese following the November 1880 expulsions.

Do not forget Le Triboulet, 35 Boulevard Haussmann, Paris, the Figaro, the Français Paris Journal, Gazette de France, etc., Le Rosier de Marie, le Pelerin, etc., etc.

150 copies of this article were sent to you by registered post. I am also forwarding to you the letter written to me by the Marquis de Rays. Hold on to it and let me know what you think. You would do well also to go and thank the Pope. Should one bring back (from America) Fr. Durin and send Fr. Ramot to replace him together with Fr. Navarre? Your advice. And there's enough for the moment.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours and my greetings to all in C.J.

Oceania

New Guinea, the Solomon Islands, their Archipelagos and the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

Text drawn up in April 1881 by Chevalier, but not published. Copy in the Rome MSC archives.

These far away countries contain millions of Savages (sic! today the word used is native) who are born, live, die, in idolatry. Since their discovery, which dates from the sixteenth century, some Catholic priests have tried to make contact with them, but without success. In 1845 the Marist Fathers accepted this large mission field. Only a few years had gone by when the ferocity of the natives and the hazards of the climate brought about a total collapse of their work. In 1852 Italian Religious from Milan demonstrated their devotedness to the Holy See by taking to these wild peoples the light of the Gospel. Following two years of fruitless zeal they also withdrew from these unwelcoming territories. Since that time not one Catholic priest has been seen in these areas... Some Protestant ministers, attracted by the prospect of gain, set themselves up on the western coast of New Guinea, where, commercially involved, they set about spreading their errors. This island, the world's greatest (!), is highly populated; it contains, it is thought, on its own, eight or ten million people (!); and the other Archipelagos strung about it have also a considerable number of indigenous. These Oceanic peoples allow themselves to be easily approached at the present time, so it would seem, and would appear to be well disposed to accept the mysteries of our faith. A Frenchman, the Marquis de Rays, a Breton and fervent Catholic, visited these remote countries some years ago. Moved by the warm welcome of the natives, the fertile land, the riches of the country and the beautiful climate (the temperature did not go above 29 degrees), he became set on founding a Christian colony there. He chose the Solomon Islands, New Ireland, New Britain and the south-east area of Papua or New Guinea, which he named New France, for the accomplishment of his project. On returning home to France he made known his plans. Eager people warmly took to it and responded to his invitation, and a departure date agreed on after many ups and downs. There were two other departures soon to follow and several hundred colonizers are still working there, successfully drawing on the immense wealth of the country.

On Sunday, July 4, 1880, the India, name of the ship, was in the port of Barcelona (Spain) getting ready to leave for New France with a large number of passengers. A priest was needed to accompany these generous Christians who were leaving from seven different places in their country. Divine Providence looked after them, drawing Fr. Lannuzel from Finistère (Brittany) to make himself available as the Colony's chaplain. His offer was accepted... He blessed the boat and consecrated solemnly to the Sacred Heart of Jesus all the areas which he had to evangelize. He thought, rightly, that only the Sacred Heart could make this mission develop and succeed. The large number present joined their voices to that of the Apostle and cried out altogether: Adorable Heart of the Redeemer, safeguard your children, aid them in their undertakings, and have pity on the poor natives of Melanesia by giving them missionaries to convert them. It was with these protestations and hopeful expressions that the ship lifted anchor and set out for Oceania. On October 14 they had arrived at these far away beaches, and on the first of November the priest of Jesus Christ offered mass there for the first time. He repeated in public the act of Consecration to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, installing Him as King of these pagan lands, placing under His all-merciful patronage the native inhabitants, tearfully imploring that new Apostles be sent there to replace those who had left 26 years previously.

O Lord how inscrutable are your plans! How marvellous your ways! The very year the last Italian missionaries left these islands tinted with their confrères' blood, a new religious Congregation began in France at Issoudun in the Bourges Archdiocese. Its members took for their name: Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. The Holy See looked after their beginnings and approved their first undertakings. After twenty years of embattlement and trials, the Holy See approved and sanctioned their Constitutions and acknowledged them as official Promoters of devotion to the Sacred Heart, giving them as motto these significant words: "Ametur ubique terrarum Cor Jesu sacratissimum"; May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved. Pope Pius IX invited them to Rome, gave them a habit and himself placed a Sacred Heart on their chests as a symbol of their apostolate. Leo XIII bestowed his favours on them, setting them up in the Piazza Navona where there are a large number of their students, Scholastics; made possible a significant extension of the house, set up an Archconfraternity for the whole world, that wonderful Association which was founded in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for the success of hopeless causes. America, Holland, Spain, are already providing evidence for this devotedness. This developing Congregation is armed for the fight; its children are true Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart. In consequence, all hell is let loose against it and plots its ruin. The Prefects of the Indre, Cher, Allier, the Mouth of the Rhine, declare its dissolution in virtue of the infamous March 29 Decrees, its members driven from their homes and thrown onto the streets, some, warmly accepted with great kindness, continuing their ministry in France, others taking the road to exile, Barcelona and Rome.

Those who fled there (Barcelona) were hardly settled in when the fourth ship of the new colonists was due to set out for New France with a large number of emigrants. Its passengers, on becoming aware that there were Missionaries of the Sacred Heart in the city, went to their church and prayed that the most cherished blessings of the Sacred Heart should be bestowed on them. This moving ceremony took place at the beginning of this year; on the 8th of March last they embarked for their new destination.

In these circumstances, (Pope) Leo XIII, who has the responsibility to work towards the salvation of all peoples without exception, cast an anxious eye over the numerous Isles of Oceania from the Moluccas to the New Hebrides, that is to say for 2,000 to 1,200 leagues lengthways and 350 in width, in which he saw many archipelagos forsaken, millions of natives without priests and given to the most degrading superstitions. Nevertheless, they have been created in God's image, destined for heaven, and Jesus Christ has given of His redemptive blood for them as much as for us. Who will cross the oceans to bring them the light of the Gospel and make their eyes shine with the flame of truth? To whom should this immense and dangerous Apostolate be given? The Vicar of Christ, then, considered the list of Religious Congregations, dedicated vocation-wise to the conversion of the heathens. The MISSIONARIES OF THE SACRED HEART came to his notice. He knew that they were children specially favoured by his immortal Predecessor who watched them grow and develop, who spoke of himself as being virtually their Founder, real and effective Superior, when in a genuine document with his signature he assured them that he would look after them caringly during his life, and with his prayers following his death. He was conscious of having enjoyed them, by virtue of their name, to work zealously for the solemn consecration of all peoples to the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

All these considerations draw Leo XIII to grant them the important Vicariate of Melanesia. He has made his mind known to the Distinguished Prefect of Propaganda, made his wishes known to him. Cardinal Simeoni accepted all the more readily because he knew personally the Religious in question, of whom many follow successfully the courses in the Roman College which is under his charge.

"I am asking of them," the Sovereign Pontiff declares, "a heroic sacrifice by sending them among these pagan peoples. Some, without a doubt, will spill their blood for the faith, but these glorious dead, if the circumstances so come about, will become the seeds of conversion for those sad idolators and a source of blessings for the Institute (sic) of the Sacred Heart. I have remarked that Religious Societies will not expand or have a serious growth in numbers through solid vocations until they have accepted missions to the pagans. It will be likewise for the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart for whom I have a great liking and to whom I wish all kinds of success."

His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni called urgently on him, the Procurator General of this Congregation, to convey to him the Holy Father's wishes. At this initial meeting Fr. Jouët put forward serious hesitations: "Do you not understand," His Eminence replied, "that the Pope has given his consideration to your Society? Make this known to your Superior General. Send on to him at the same time for his consultation the documentation in the Congregation of Propaganda archives about New Guinea. Then he will let you know what he thinks." The Very Rev. Fr. Superior was furnished with details about the area under consideration. Having thanked the Holy See for its extremely kind good-will, he requested, as before, that his reply be held over for a little longer as happened two years previously when the Vicariate of the Auckland Islands was offered to him. The answer came back declaring "...that the time, on the contrary, could not be more propitious because of the persecutions to which Religious (in France) were being subjected, and, for the rest, it was the wish of the Holy Father, and, as such, it would be officially communicated to him in a day or two". Accordingly, on March 25, the feast of the Annunciation, Cardinal Simeoni sent on to him (Chevalier) the official request letter. Following on the example of Mary, the Superior of the Fathers (sic) of the Sacred Heart respectfully bowed before the Messenger from On High, saying: "Our little Congregation as the humble servant of the Holy See declares let it be done according to your word (request). Ecce ancilla Domini. fiat mihi secundum verbum tuum. Then he wrote to Leo XIII: "In verbo tuo laxabo rete. Most Holy Father you can count on our blind obedience and on our absolute commitment." This is the way it is! The Melanesian pagans will from now on have their Missionaries and these are called Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. It is a good omen.

May I, Reverend Fathers, convey here to you this appreciation of my gratitude. Rome asks of you a superhuman, generous, sacrifice, and you accept without hesitation. Undertaking it, you are aware that you set out along the way of a demanding Apostolate in which some of you will undergo martyrdom; you are aware that you will have to struggle not only against the climate and privations of every kind, but also against savages among whom Satan rules as absolute master. You are conscious of leaving your country which is so dear to you and friends who are devoted to you, parents to whom you owe everything, a father, a mother, who are proud of you and who were relying on you to be the joy of their old age and the consolation of their heart. And there it is, we are leaving everything to go 7,000 leagues from France to draw souls to Jesus Christ. What wonderful dedication on the part of these Catholic priests! And all because of a simple request by an old man sitting in the Vatican, a wish scarcely articulated, you cut off so many bonds, face so many challenges, expose yourself to so much that is dangerous. This fact alone suffices to prove to me that the religion you preach is divine and that this man called Pope is the living image of Christ on earth and the repository of supreme authority... Brave Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart, you set out on a long journey where heaven sends you, but you do not go on your own... Our good wishes and prayers go everywhere with you; we call down upon you the Lord's blessings. Aided by grace, you will raise the standard of the Heart of Jesus on those distant shores where you will build altars to Him and give him adorers.

Moreover, you will have accompanying you Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, that divine Treasury of heavenly gifts, Mother of all peoples, illustrious Benefactress, Dispensatrix of all graces, powerful Patroness of hopeless cases, that first and true Missionary of the Heart of Jesus. It is to you that Mary is indebted for this glorious title. You are in advance, then, assured of her maternal protection. In this splendid mission you are about to undertake, you will have those coming after you. I shall be surprised if your dedication does not draw many vocations to your work. So many young people, levites, big-hearted, generous, so many holy priests who ache for an Apostolate among the pagans. The wide field of work opening out before your enthusiasm cries out for many workers and serious-minded recruits. You will get them...

And if my expectations are met, besides your apostolic school of the Sacred Heart, whose older pupils we see here in Rome, following in such an edifying manner the courses of philosophy and theology, you will have a special seminary for your great and important Oceania Mission which you might care to call The New Guinea Seminary. Place this Melanesian Novitiate under the beautiful Italian sunlight, or, perhaps better still, Catholic Spain. Barcelona, where you already have a house and where the colony's ships leave for New France, would, so it seems to me, marvellously suit you. You will come upon generous-spirited people who will help you in every possible way since we are dealing here with an important undertaking which involves at one and the same time civilization, God's glorification and the salvation of souls.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, April 12, 1881

Dear Father,

Thanks for your good wishes on the feast (that of St. Jules, April 12) and also to our dear Fathers and Scholastics for their good wishes. I received your letter letting me know of Brother Derichemont's illness. We shall pray for him. Keep me informed. (The student was more likely Octave de Brinon.) I received your telegram informing me that the letter about the New Guinea mission had arrived, etc. This article will not be placed in the Annals before it is sent to Rome to be published in a number of papers. You will forward it to me yourself as taken from a paper. This is the plan. Revise it (the article), change it; we shall wait on it at the right time. Send us on something immediately for our May Annals. I am forwarding to you a letter from Fr. Durin. You will see for yourself his haughty attitude and character. Having purchased and built despite our wishes, here he is now insisting on such and such from us so demandingly. This is too much to accept. But that's what he is like! Is it really acceptable that he should be put in charge of three or four of our confrères? I doubt it. We would be continually in the way of having issues to face with him. (Since 1876 he had been Superior at Watertown, a house he founded.) Would not Fr. Navarre be a better choice? And Fr. Durin would only be a second choice (to accompany Navarre). Then there would be Frs. Ramot and Thomas of Limoges for America.

Issoudun, April 14, 1881

Dear Father,

The Holy See desires that we take charge of a mission among the savages in Oceania: New Guinea, Solomon Islands, etc. The distant countries have been abandoned since 1854. There are no Catholic priests there. When the mission was first offered to us, I put forward serious objections. The Holy See has again invited us to undertake this work and has sent me an official letter, through Cardinal Simeoni, to that effect. The Archbishop of Bourges has been consulted and his opinion is that we can no longer refuse. I have, therefore, accepted this important mission.

Among the islands adjacent to New Guinea there are two principal ones, called New Britain and New Ireland, where a Frenchman – the Marquis de Rays – has founded a colony composed of French, Belgians and Spaniards, under the title of New France. His Holiness thinks this colony will be very useful to our mission. The Marquis de Rays is a fervent Catholic and has promised to assist us. The missionaries will have a free passage on a steamer that frequently sails from Barcelona to this new colony. My desire is to choose among the members of our society three or four who will not fear this dangerous mission. The Apostolic Vicariate shall be erected as soon as our missionaries have become acquainted with the country and with the customs and manners of the savages. In the meantime, the superior and chief of the expedition shall be vested with all the faculties and the title of Apostolic Prefect.

My wish is to choose you, dear Father, for the mission of New Guinea. Are you disposed to go? Tell me sincerely your feelings. Are you willing to leave for those distant and wild countries?

The natives are not difficult to access. They are hospitable. They are given to polygamy. They believe in the immortality of the soul. The climate is not intolerable; the temperature varying from 75 to 85 degrees. This mission will draw down from Heaven abundant blessings on our Society and will provide solid and good vocations for us. This is the firm hope of Leo XIII, himself.

If, as I hope, you accept my proposal, dear friend, send us a telegram to that effect, as I shall immediately send your successor with another priest to Watertown. As soon as you have sufficiently initiated the new Superior, you will leave Watertown and return to Issoudun where you will receive instructions for your new mission and sail from Barcelona.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Issoudun, April 16, 1881

Your Eminence,

The proposal which the Holy See deigns to present to us through the good offices of Your Eminence honours us as much as it makes us fearful. We were far from thinking that His Holiness would cast his eyes upon the lowly Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and put them in charge of such an important mission. To undertake the evangelization of New Guinea and its neighbouring archipelagos is an undertaking most certainly well beyond our resources. The morals of the natives, their ferocity of character, the language problems with them, the climate of Equatorial countries like this; all, in a word, makes us foresee the most demanding of apostolates. The official letter which Your Eminence was pleased to write to me conveying to us the Holy Father's request was dated March 25, a significant date, the day heavenly chosen to make known the message of salvation through the Word's Incarnation. It is also the day chosen by Leo XIII to put before us, through his faithful messenger, the Melanesia mission.

After the example of Mary, we have made known in a matter-of-fact manner our acknowledged drawbacks and our legitimate concerns. Since, despite this sincere avowal, Your Grace continued to say, like an angel, "Do not be afraid; accept what has been offered to you, God's Spirit will be with you, and the power of the Most High will cover you with its shadow," we are respectfully drawn to accept, and our little Congregation replies with the Virgin of Nazareth's words: "Ecce ancilla Domini, fiat mihi secundum verbum tuum" and in St. Peter's words: "In verbo tuo, laxabo rete."

We would very much like to send a legion of apostles to these unfortunate idolatrous people, but our numbers are still too limited. Consequently, despite our keen good-will, we are not, for the present, able to provide for this important mission more than a few missionaries asked for by Your Grace. You may say to the Holy Father, while placing before him our heartfelt acknowledgment and our respectful regards, that he can rely on our blind obedience and our absolute commitment.

Please accept, Cardinal, my grateful acknowledgement, and the expression of my deepest respect, as I have the honour to remain Your Excellency's most humble and devoted servant in Jesus Christ.

The Sup. of the Miss. of the Sacred Heart.

Easter Day (April 17, 1881)

We grieve on the death of dear Brother Derichemont. Let us remember him in our prayers. (As above, Fr. Chevalier confuses Derichemont with De Brinon. It is the latter who is dead.) Stay relaxed about the subject-matter of the article on New Guinea. Nobody, absolutely no-one, except yourself and myself, knows about it. I received this evening the altered copy. Change this article as you judge fit, and then send it on to me corrected in the way you wanted. I shall straightaway return it to you so that you can have 150 copies printed and placed in the papers, or you can let me know if I should have them printed myself and send the copies on to you. We must hurry.

The story of the Marists and the Milan Missionaries is very realistically presented in the article. I picked up all this information in Nouvelle France (magazine) for August 1880, page 16. It is authentic and made available to the public. Meanwhile, you yourself can change things or, if you wish, let it go through without comment. Do whatever you wish; take out or add. Hurry...

Issoudun, April 25, 1881

Dear Father,

I am happy to gather from you that you are in good health, and that the Novitiate is getting along quite well. All the same, you leave it to be understood that things could be better. You do not find enough generosity or eagerness to be virtuous. Why is this so? Is it because these young people have not a sufficiently deep spirit of faith? Or because they are not pious or mortified enough either within or without? Or is it, in addition, that they haven't high ideals with regard to religious or priestly life? I would ask you to crush the spirits of those who have become too accustomed, both at the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) and at Saint-Gérard, to follow their inclinations and set store by their own will. Keep to the Rule in all its rigour: absolute silence, total mortification, seriousness of purpose both in character and actions, blind obedience..., self-restraint in recreation and on walks... Do not let them out of your sight for a second and supervise them in all their recreations and walks. Never allow them to get their way as at Saint-Gérard. Do not ever allow them to go to the dining room outside those times for which the Rule makes provision. Only permit the authorized breaks (time off), and offer only at the dining table that which is on the menu. They have not been sufficiently trained in mortification of the senses and in being discreet. Those in charge (the prefects) were too much their comrades. This is an abuse of which the consequences for a number have been regrettable. We are challenged to make them men of faith, prayer, mortification, obedience, judgment, sacrifice. Dear Fr. Ramot himself, in a letter here in front of me, leaves a great deal to be desired in more than one respect, often projecting perfection where it is not. Give each of them a copy of our Constitutions and Rules. Let them ponder them continuously! And you, my good friend, read and put into practice everything which is contained in that little work entitled Religious Discipline, even if all hell was let loose against him when I brought it out. I knew what I was doing; everything is there for us.

I have written to the Bishop of Langres about Fr. Déchanet. The Bishop's letter is supportive, but do not especially favour him. Cheerio, my friend.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Fr. Bontemps will leave on Tuesday or Wednesday next. He also greatly needs the Novitiate, very much so. No special favours.

Issoudun, April 26, 1881

Dear Father,

Has Cardinal Simeoni agreed to our acceptance of the New Guinea mission, etc.? It would be wonderful and have a marvellous impact if you could get him to acknowledge the official reception of my letter in the name of the Holy See, and to send us an Apostolic Blessing from Leo XIII for the new (departing) missionaries and the pagan people they are going to evangelize.

Simeoni's hoped-for intervention and reply was conveyed to Chevalier and Jouët in the Cardinal's May 14, 1881, letter.

It is now time to break the silence and make known to the public at large our acceptance of this important mission, and this is also the viewpoint of the Marquis of Rays as you will see from his enclosed letter. I believe that in the interests of the undertaking there should not be too lengthy a delay. I haven't yet received the article that is to be placed in the papers... Is it the case that you do not think it appropriate? I returned it to you as changed in keeping with your suggestions. I await your final word on this. Do not delay. I also sent you a letter from Fr. Durin. You are in no hurry to give me your view on the American situation and the departure of Fr. Durin for New Guinea. Given these latter developments I fear that we might compromise the Oceania mission if we made him take charge of it. The more I think about it, the more my fears grow. He could, perhaps, go there as bursar and in charge of provisions. But to whom should we give charge of this mission? Fr. Ramot is too scrupulous and too cautious, so it seems to me. Fr. Navarre might not, perhaps, be sufficiently firm or intelligent. Those who might be suitable, such as yourself, Frs. Piperon and Guyot, cannot be replaced for the time being. Is Fr. Deidier healthy enough? Should it be put to him? Would Fr. Marie be suitable as a second or third missionary? I think so. But what is to become of the Barcelona house? I am totally perplexed. We are no more advanced than the first day, and meanwhile we must set about making appointments as quickly as possible. Let me have your views. Fr. Guyot doesn't want to get involved, likewise Fr. Morisseau, since both of them contend that they do not see anyone suitable. Fr. Piperon is likewise unsure as to the choice of people. You see the situation in which I find myself... I am sending on the latest letters from the Marquis of Rays.

Fr. Ramière sent me a copy yesterday of that which he is thinking of putting in his Messenger (magazine) about our concerns. I believe that we cannot expect any more from him than this. I wrote to thank him. And as for Fr. Chatelat, what do you make of him? He seems unreliable to me, unsure as to his ideas and vocation. His brother's future greatly preoccupies him. Does this good confrère understand the religious life at all well?

Dear Father,

I received your letter just now. I sympathize with you on Brother de Brinon's death. Yes, you may buy a tomb for 20 people at 800 francs (roughly 2,475 euros); this is much the best thing.

Clearly in the case of New Guinea and the Solomon Islands etc., it is better to work apart from the Marquis of Rays whose business is in the way of succeeding in a greater or lesser fashion. We are being sent out by the Holy See and in dependence on Propaganda; this is how I always understand it. You haven't said a word to me about either Fr. Durin's latest letter which I sent on to you, or the proposed article for the papers which I forwarded to you with the changes you suggested.

We must act on the one hand and come to agree on the other to reach agreement about those who will go to New Guinea. I think that at the present time we can send four there. I await your reply to my latest letters. Fr. Durin has sent me a telegram putting himself entirely at my disposal for New Guinea. Fr. Chappel, who is restored to full health, wants to go back to Watertown. What do you think? Who would replace him at Arles? Or should we give up this house?

Dear Father,

Thanks for your letters. If that young man cannot become a lay-brother, and since you do not find him sufficiently religious to train him, act accordingly. Fr. Morisseau will forward you a soutane belonging to Brother Romain. (He left the Society October 28, 1879.) Look after good Fr. Bontemps. Some months in the Novitiate will do him no harm at all. He needs it. After the retreat, you can come to a decision about him. I leave it to yourself to judge. He holds on to his ideas, likes his ease, is sensitive, doesn't like to be crossed, finicky, quite singular in his piety which is of the affective kind, not particularly given to abiding by the Rule, readily exempting himself. I find him rather odd and particularly engaged with modern-day politics, and in this respect not nearly enough mortified. He does not sufficiently appreciate the spirit of sacrifice; he is easily discouraged if things don't go as he would like them to, or if his Superiors do not appear to approve or appreciate him as regards what he does or doesn't do.

All this advice is confidential and for your benefit. Together with all these drawbacks, which are not serious, Fr. Bontemps has fine qualities. He has great faith and good will. He can offer us precious qualities. He passionately loves the Sacred Heart, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and the Congregation. You can make him a perfect missionary.

To His Grace Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, May 16, 1881

Your Grace,

I am favoured to send Your Grace the accounts and budget for the Issoudun Fabric as well as the list of priests who came for the Holy Oils. May I be favoured to add to the latter part of this letter mention of the Mayor's banning of processions. The people are most unhappy. These measures, for which there is no authorization, make even the most uncommitted unhappy.

I think it also worthwhile to bring to Your Grace's notice several other decisions of the Issoudun Municipal Council which in its overall make-up could hardly be more radical and free-Masonic. One can see in this the spirit which impels it.

The Council called on me to disengage from ministry, anxious to change the presbytery into a museum, lodge the new parish priest in an old house illegally leaning up against the Church of the Virgin, which isn't big enough and is both damp and unhealthy. It was once a Council school for young girls. The two (female) teachers died some years ago because of unhealthy conditions, a third nearly so, but the hygienic authority closed the place... One of the Freemasonry groups, called Lyre Berrichonne, presently holds its meetings there. This then is the cubby-hole being set aside for parish priests.

You can see for yourself, Your Grace, another decision taken authorizing the employee, Voger (name uncertain), to write these words in gold letters over the parish church; Liberty, Equality, Brotherhood and Public Property. These people think they can do what they like. They clearly haven't the right which they wish to abrogate to themselves. Several ministerial letters formally declare it to be so, among others one for the month of July 1878 as reported in the September 1878 issue of the Council's Building Journal, p.252. As far as these words, Public Property, are concerned, the issue is complicated, laden with problems, and hasn't yet been dealt with by the competent authority. But this doesn't in any way excuse the gentlemen of the Municipal Council. It seems to me to be quite a dangerous matter to allow them to write on our churches: Council Property. Should not those responsible for the Church Fabric challenge this, but in what way? Should not from the outset any writing be challenged when the workers appear, or should they be allowed to write and action is then taken later? Your Grace has the authority and role to advise us in this matter.

Mr. Bost in his "Encyclopaedia of Contested Issues Involving Councils Dealing with Building", under the word "Church" observes in part 1 that the right to Church property can, through proven argument, vindicate the claim that parish churches are neither the property of the Council or of the Fabric authorities, but of the State. He quotes in support of this view a judgment by the Court of Cession, given on July 7, 1840, a notable ruling. The Council of State appears to favour the Councils advantageously.

Besides, the new part of our church has cost 200,000 francs (about 619,550 euros). It was the Fabric alone (those responsible for the church) which provided this money. Not only did the Council provide nothing, but it never for one moment left over opposing everything even in the most ridiculous fashion. The Ministry and Council of State have always given us their support (and effectively against the Council).

Freemasonry, in this unjust and disloyal war it is waging against us, has up to now doubled in effect the number of faithful at our ceremonies. Our huge church is continually packed with worshippers. Last night it was full for the month of Mary (May). The 31st of this month, Your Grace, is the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and also the patron feast day of the Association, and if by way of enhancing the occasion Your Grace could send us one of your Vicar Generals we would be very happy since his presence would have a very satisfying impact.

I make bold to draw Your Grace's attention to the great feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart on September 8, the anniversary of her coronation. Since the centre of the devotion has been transferred to Saint-Cyr, the parish church, might we not have the pleasure, Your Grace, of having you here with us that day? It would make the day one filled with joy for us.

I have the honour to be most respectfully Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant.

J. Chevalier, Priest.

Issoudun, May 20, 1881

Dear Father,

I got your letter enclosing Cardinal Simeoni's official letter on the New Guinea issue. The issue is now settled. I see nobody other than Fr. Durin to put forward as Superior of the mission. Fr. Morisseau accepts it as the best in the circumstances. This leaves nobody opposed to the choice (of Durin) other than Fr. Guyot. In requesting him to name someone else, he replied that there's nobody, that all the others are needed where they are... What is one to do with a solution such as that? Ignore it? Fr. Durin will be here at Issoudun in fifteen days or so. We shall see. But who is going to replace him at Watertown? I see nobody other than Fr. Ramot. Then there would be Fr. Navarre as the second, Fr. Benjamin Grom as the third there, an imbalanced mixture, but what can be done? Let me have your own view. Fr. Guyot would not accept it and neither, so I believe, would Fr. Morisseau. These two would prefer to see the American house closed, whereas to me that would be disastrous.

Yes, change the printed article, and treat the Marists kindly since it would be very good to attribute to them the credit they deserve. Yet it does occur to me that they would prefer it if they were not referred to at all in that article about the Oceania mission. Do what you think is best. I am persuaded that we must not delay in getting through to the public about this mission entrusted to our Society in order to attract financial help, stir up interest, encourage supporters, make ready whatever is needed, etc., etc.

Should I write a letter to the Cardinal thanking him, and how should I approach it?

The Marquis of Rays maintains that the Spanish Government's opposition to his work is only superficial in order to please the French Government on the surface, whereas in fact and in depth Spain greatly supports him. Another boat has in recent days left Barcelona for New France. Fr. Deidier has asked to make perpetual profession, Frs. Bontemps and Thomas temporary vows; your view, please. And what about your church, what is the present situation? When are you thinking of having its official opening? Some days ago I sent on to you a large sum, 5,500 francs.

The Issoudun Municipal Council is trying to inflict a thousand miseries on us. In an April statement they wanted me to change residence. We shall see what happens. I do not believe that the ministry can be manipulated by the Freemasonry. I am immovable. Canonical arguments are required to do so. And supposing the Archbishop were to agree (with the Council), something which I do not expect, there would be recourse to Rome on my part. This is a very serious issue of principle.

Cheerio, my friend.

Your Grace,

I am pleased to inform Your Grace that I have received the documents which you kindly returned to me and the dossier about the churches at Bordes and Avail. The advisers for the Fabric (Church properties) resident in Issoudun are meeting officially tomorrow to consider this issue once more. The Prefect gives the impression that he is rather easily bored by the whole thing. The issue, its consequences, seem serious to me. Our Radicals are in no doubt about anything, quite freely placing themselves above the government and the law. Having taken over and broken up the village churches, their aspirations go much further. If the good Lord does not become involved, we are faced with veritable disaster. What appals me is that cold and calculated irreligiousness which is set at all costs on destroying religion and utilizes every possible means in order to achieve this diabolical aim.

I hasten to send Your Grace a copy of the letter His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni has written to me in the name of the Holy Father congratulating us on having taken on the New Guinea mission, etc. This is a massive undertaking, Your Grace, and now more than ever we need your advice and prayers.

Please accept, Your Grace, my respectful regards in C.J.

Archbishop Marchal read the following letter to Chevalier, given here in English translation.

To Very Rev. Fr. J. Chevalier, Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun.

I am pleased to make known to you that the Holy Father is very happy to gather that you have agreed to send some missionaries from your Society to evangelize in the Apostolic Vicariate of Melanesia and Micronesia, which takes in New Guinea, New France and a large number of other islands in Oceania. His Holiness in praising your zeal most wholeheartedly grants his Apostolic Blessing to you and all your Society's missionaries. For the time being, it is enough to make available for this Vicariate some missionaries who can meet a need. When you will have furnished me with their names, I shall straightaway grant them the necessary powers and name as Superior of the mission in its entirety whichever one you make known to me as a suitable choice to undertake this mission and to whom priests who may be there already in the New France colony must be also subject. Later, when the number of missionaries and faithful has increased, I should like to think that the place can become a diocese with a Vicar Apostolic. Meanwhile I pray the Lord to compensate you abundantly with his graces both yourself and your Society, which shows itself to be animated with such fervent zeal for the salvation of souls, blessing in a very special way the work which the new missionaries will be taking on evangelizing this immense Vicariate left for so long without apostolic missionaries.

Dear Father,

I am forwarding to you the letter from Marquis de Rays and from the priest who made himself available for the colony and was accepted by the Administration. It is advantageous that all this is known in Rome.

The Rome MSC archives have the de Rays letter, May 22, 1881, and the letters of the Vannes, Brittany, priest, Hervieu, sent to de Rays, May 19, 1881.

I am in agreement with the Marquis de Rays that the time has come to break the silence and make known to the public at large the important mission which has been entrusted to us, and for these several reasons:

1. We are living through a time of persecution and at any moment the storm can break more violently and seriously affect our organization and plans.
2. We need resources for this mission, both in money and natural resources. We are at present in the way of acquiring them, but later, who knows?
3. We must also have vocations. Shall we have them in some months' time?
4. In our Congregation peoples' outlook is ready for this mission. Do you know what could happen in one or two months, etc.?
5. We need time to organize the departure. Consequently it is not inappropriate to begin preparations now.

6. Think about it; it is already two months since this issue was left in abeyance. Get permission, then, to discuss it, and send me on the basis of the article which Mr. de Maguelone would have accepted as if it was his own and which should, as we said, be sent everywhere.

Dear Editor,

I am grateful to your distinguished correspondent for the article he felt compelled to write in my defence. If the truth be told, I would much prefer if my name did not crop up any more in these debates. If my life of devotedness and sacrifice, which very soon will have engaged me over 27 years at Issoudun, cannot stir up any regard and warmth in my opponents, then not even a whole page praising me will convince them. I set store by the good attitude of the people, their sense of fairness and impartiality, to do me justice, and my expectations will not be unfounded.

Be all this as it may, I pardon wholeheartedly those who are turned against me at this moment; if they ever need my help, I shall always be at their disposal. I pardon also the members of the Museum Committee (consisting of the Mayor who presides; Dardeau, the Clerk and Vice-President; Sanglier, Junior, Secretary; Courant and Brunet, assistants to the Mayor; Ligier-Pinard, the watchmaker; A. Masselon, junior; A. Masson the chemist; Wroblewski and Suhner, teachers; Ulrich Richard). These gentlemen, through a decision dated April 28 last, laid claim to the Issoudun presbytery, even though it is regulated for by a special decree as the parish priest's residence, bluntly, insensitively, recommending to the Municipal Council that I should be thrown out.

I have to confess that I was far from expecting any such behaviour on the part of the Council members. On the contrary, I considered that I had some right to be acknowledged by them. They had forgotten no doubt the works of art and the ancient sculptures I recently presented to them with great pleasure in the name of the (Church) Fabric. Quite clearly they have not grasped the full significance of their proposal, nor the problems to which it gives rise. For the rest, as I well know, they are too obsessed with their honour and dignity not to withdraw from their objective, the very stating of which leads to astonishment, if not a sense of outrage among fair-minded people.

Please accept, etc.

The Archpriest of Issoudun

Wait for the moment. I am sending you a copy of Cardinal Simeoni's letter.

NB: Fr. Piperon in a letter this a.m. wrote to say that he was supporting Fr. Durin (for New Guinea). But he was voting for the closure of the Watertown house. Frs. Morisseau and Guyot are clearly of the same views. As for myself, I am opposed to them. This step (to close Watertown) would be a shame and quite calamitous. During these unhappy times we are experiencing, that house could be greatly advantageous to us. Who do you think we could send there? Would Fr. Chatelat think of going there to help out?

Cheerio. Wholly yours in C.J.

Article 845To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.*

L 18810527A

Issoudun, May 27, 1881

Dear Father,

I received your letter this morning together with your Annals' article and your subscription plan for the Rome church. The article is late for the June Annals as it's already printed. It can only be for next month. Try not to be late, I beg you, but I very much fear that this request will be no different in its impact than the others.

The number of times Chevalier has chided and scolded Jouët for being late with his contributions is a marked feature of their correspondence over the years, Chevalier finding Jouët seemingly incorrigible in this respect.

2. I sent you 1,200 or 1,500 francs (3,715 or 4,645 euros), more than I should have. The same sum was counted twice in the office, so I am told by the people there. I shall let you know about the next consignment.
