3. You are aware that the Gerra (Haaren; Dutch) Novitiate is still not legally approved, something which is necessary if vows are to be valid. The move from Saint-Gérard to Holland requires an Indult. Could you deal with this straightaway? Fr. Bontemps is taking his vows on the 31st of this month, Fr. Thomas the following month, and also Fr. Deidier. Let us have your comments on these three.

I am very pleased that the Rome undertaking goes well. Unfortunately it's not like that everywhere! Here a thousand problems are continuously cropping up. And not a word out of the Bishop!

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The New Guinea mission should be expedited. The Marquis of Rays asks me what he should do about this priest from Nice; the recommendations from his bishop are not unimpressive. He also wants to know what he should do about another priest, Fr. Lervieu, who is waiting over with his family in Vannes. The recommendations are good. The issue (New Guinea) cannot be left indefinitely. I see no one else other than Fr. Durin to be put forward. In 8 days, I hope, he will be in Issoudun.

Issoudun, May 29, 1881

I wish to thank Your Grace for the letter he paid me the honour of writing to me, itself a proof of the keen interest he brings to our undertakings. I take occasion, Your Grace, to send you two copies of The Echo newspaper which refer to me. Your Grace can best gather from it the issue which is under discussion. Saying nothing about the debate in my letter would, I believe, lead to confusion. Those few words which I felt I had to write last Thursday in reply to the favourable article, which you no doubt have read, were, so it seemed to me, motivated by a spirit of prudence, conciliation and Christian charity, of which you continuously provide us with an example. What I can say is that it has had an excellent impact – even with extreme Republicans. The overall impact has been something like the following: "At the right time here's a letter worthy of a true representative of Jesus Christ within which one finds nothing violent, hurtful, provocative, but rather sheer evangelical goodness knowing how to pardon and forgive." If I have offended Your Grace, I humbly beg your pardon, I was putting forward something with a totally different purpose. With the greatest pleasure I look forward to our Issoudun meeting with Fr. Sautereau. If I know the day and hour of his arrival, I would make it my duty to go and wait for him at the railway station.

One of our scholastics, 25 years old, of Swiss origin, an excellent young man presently teaching at our Petite Oeuvre here in Issoudun, will be ready to receive Minor Orders at the Trinity Sunday ordinations, and indeed the subdiaconate if Your Grace has no objection. Due to recent events we have held him back. Your reply, Your Grace, will set out a date. Would you be kind enough to let us know what day we should take him to Bourges for his examination.

Processions are forbidden at Issoudun, much to the great regret of the parishioners. Could we not, Your Grace, set up an altar of repose by the side of our church in the area cut off by the iron rail and where, later, paths must be made? This land belongs to the Church and it is cut off from public view. Having benediction there on the feast of Corpus Christi, the local authorities would have no right to say anything to us, so it seems to me, and we would provide the population with the maximum pleasure.

I remain respectfully Your Grace's most obedient and humble servant in C.J.

J. Chevalier, Priest.

Issoudun, June 1, 1881

Dear Father,

Fr. Durin is here at Issoudun for the past two days. He has agreed quite willingly to undertake the New Guinea mission. All the Council Fathers, except Fr. Guyot, want him to be Superior of the mission. You may, therefore, go ahead and officially present him to Cardinal Simeoni so that this matter becomes settled. As soon as the official letter from the Holy See accepting Fr. Durin arrives, he will begin to make his choice of companions and organize for his mission. Should Fr. Durin go to Rome to thank the Holy See and be given his instructions? And at what time? He will go to Lyons to meet the committee members of the Propagation of Faith, with a commendatory letter from Cardinal Simeoni. Has His Grace had a favourable reply from the Council? There's a need to hurry. Mr. de Maguelone can now get down to writing his article, but you should look at it beforehand. Write your own also for the next issue of The Annals. The edition will be brought forward.

A terrible disaster! Mr. Gagnault's printing press has burned down. The section which has to do with our Annals has been destroyed. The list of addresses was salvaged. The unfortunate Gagnault is overwhelmed by despair, but he is insured.

Brother Tréand is being put forward for the subdiaconate this coming Trinity Sunday. Are you in favour? He is an excellent religious. (For more on Tréand, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, passim.) Are you voting in favour of Fr. Ramot as Superior in America? Fr. Morisseau goes along with him but ad duritam cordis (heavy heartedly!). Fr. Durin is called Fernand Joseph.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I would like to read the articles on New Guinea. I would prefer if no mention was made of me because of my role as parish priest. You will have noted that in the projected article which I sent on to you I deliberately passed over my name in silence.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, June 7, 1881

Dear Father,

Fr. Durin thinks that Fr. Navarre would be well suited for New Guinea, together with Fr. Cramaille. Fr. Barral is very keen also, saying that he would get on well with Fr. Durin, who would be pleased to have him. Given such a significant mutual understanding, Fr. Barral cannot but benefit. Fr. Ramot will, therefore, set out for America (replacing Durin) and his assistant will, accordingly, be Fr. Thomas of Limoges who will take his vows (final) at the end of this month.

Fr. Ramot would willingly accept Fr. Giroux who would only go to Oceania when he had spent one or two years in America where he would learn English and could, otherwise, be very helpful. Fr. Barral is not keen on experiencing America. Sound out Fr. Giraud and get in touch with me straightaway because an imminent departure for America is a matter of urgency. Fr. B. Grom is the only one there and he is bored from being all by himself.

Cheerio, my friend.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Here comes a letter from P.G. (Guyot). It is unspeakably depressing... He doesn't wish to take circumstances into consideration. Fr. Durin has so many serious issues against him from Watertown. His history will be a fresh scandal in Rome... Write to him (Guyot) if you think it's worthwhile. Once the majority of the Council Fathers favour Fr. Durin, Fr. Guyot, if he has an inkling of obedience and humility, will put himself on the side of authority.

To Father Charles Piperon, MSC, Gerra.

Issoudun, June 11, 1881

Dear Father,

I am returning your questionnaire (see next article) despite the varied activities involved with First Communion taking place tomorrow.

I am happy to vote for Fr. Thomas. He is a priest who has his fads, his piety misunderstood, but he is edifying, pious, and someone who, I believe, will never draw to himself disapproval of the Society, and can indeed be of some service to it.

I do not in any way share your opinion of the Watertown house, and I do believe you are wrong about this. Here are my reasons:

1. We have there a settled place in a reasonably good setting on the border of the USA and Canada. The biggest problems have been overcome. The house, spacious and beautiful, together with the church, belongs to us. The total value would amount, perhaps, towards 80,000 francs. From this amount we owe 25,000 francs on the house and 4,000 to the Bishop for the church. To get rid of all this would lead to considerable losses. The Canadian parish where French is spoken, and which is served by the Watertown house, provides 3 to 4,000 francs a year without taking into account mass offerings which could easily provide a living for 5 or 6 missionaries.
2. For our Oceania mission we need members who know English. There we shall find them.
3. The bishops of the surrounding areas, for example, Montreal, Ogdensburg, Boston, Albany, New York, etc., have a great regard for our Society and the Watertown house. I can gather this from the letters which have come here on the occasion of Fr. Durin's leave-taking. The closing down of this house, warranted by nothing serious, would be a scandal in the locality, a considerable loss for ourselves and damaging for our impact in America.
4. The Watertown foundation is approved by Rome. There has to be Roman authorization to end it. Do you appreciate, then, the harmful effect this would have and the inextricable problems in which without good reason we would find ourselves needlessly engulfed?
5. Yes, indeed, we could use this house to send directly there our members fleeing from the revolution. At present all the important Congregations are setting up foundations abroad, even in America, and yet we want to do away with ours. It is neither understandable or forgivable!
6. What must we do to hold on to it? Place three serious and pious subjects there; that's all. There would not be serious problems any more; the house is perfectly well set-up, and the ministry is stable, being easy to replace anybody.

Yes indeed! Do we have the people? Yes. Over three months I have considered Fr. Ramot. He is acceptable in every respect. His piety, blind obedience, his good attitudes, his intelligence, prudence, provide me with serious guarantees. Accordingly, I do not hesitate to conclude that, as of this moment, Fr. Ramot is the right man for America. If his health creates a problem, we shall always be in the way of recalling him. You state that he doesn't know English. You are wrong: he knows it very well to read. Being young and intelligent, he will very quickly know how to pronounce it, and later on knowing English well he could be very helpful for us in England or New Guinea.

But the Canadians, who make up the Watertown parish, speak French, and it is in French they are given sermons, etc. My plan would be to give Fr. Thomas, shortly about to take vows, to Fr. Ramot as his assistant. He would be in charge of this little Canadian parish and, assuredly, this good man would not create problems for Fr. Ramot, no more than little Fr. Grom who is very pious. I have it in mind also to let Fr. Ramot have Fr. Giroux as both of them get on well together. Fr. Giroux would look after the material side of things, learn English and in a year or two, when better prepared, he could be sent to Oceania. I believe, then, that with these changes, the Watertown house would get along very well. If some complications were to arise, these men would forward to us a fair-minded report taking inspiration from the Society's best interests and, frankly, letting us know if we should keep this house in America. At least we would be acting in a prudent manner.

Fr. Durin has stated that in conscience and before God he would be duty bound to leave Oceania and return to Watertown if we wouldn't appoint another Superior there. Fr. Jouët wrote to me this morning saying the same thing. Once I take on responsibility for the reorganization of Watertown, and specifically for the express advantage of our Society, it seems to me that there is no longer any reason for hesitation, and your vote, accordingly, should be in favour. Meanwhile, I respect your freedom of action.

One final word, if I may: there's not much time left. Fr. Grom, when writing a letter greatly regretting Fr. Durin's departure, went on to say, not unreasonably, that he couldn't stay too long on his own and wanted me to send him a Superior and confrères. And now, my friend, comes another, most sharp, sword, to pierce my heart. It is our good friend Fr. Guyot who drives it home. Having brought everything touching on Oceania to his notice, he ends up writing to me: "I give my approval to this mission... It is the most foolish thing we could undertake. But the two or three foolish things we have taken on already have turned out well, proving to me that God allows them to draw advantage later from them – such as the Issoudun parish, the Rome house, the Third Order of the Sacred Heart."

Having had the approval of the whole Council, I informed Rome that we would accept the mission. Cardinal Simeoni officially communicated the Pope's thanks to me, etc. He wrote on our behalf to the Propagation of the Faith Committee appealing for financial resources, etc.

I sounded out the views of the Council to ascertain who should be put in charge of this mission; yourself, Fr. Jouët, Fr. Morisseau, and myself, were all agreed on Fr. Durin. While acknowledging his drawbacks, we recognized admirable qualities in him, and we are of the view that he can meet the challenge of this exploratory mission (since there is no question of a Vicariate at present). I sought Fr. Durin's own views. He replied saying that while Watertown was very much his undertaking, and to which he had wholeheartedly given himself, yet he himself belonged entirely to the Society whose well-being he alone sought and for which he was prepared to make the greatest of sacrifices by going to Oceania, and his greatest wish was to accept, and I could depend on him. As he was due to come (to Issoudun) this year, I telegraphed him to come to Issoudun. He accordingly arrived. I found his commitment, humility, lack of self-interest, selflessness, very impressive.

I then wrote to Fr. Guyot asking what he thought about the choice of Fr. Durin, informing him that all the other Council members were unanimous. Within three or four days this unfortunate confrère wrote to me expressing his formal opposition to Fr. Durin's departure as Superior, and if I continued on this course he would immediately get in touch with Rome where memories of him (Durin) were still fresh, etc. We are once more on the threshold of a new scandal. Is the administrative functioning of a Society feasible in a situation like this? What is the purpose of having a Superior and a Council? If each isolated member does not wish to give way before the majority and threatens recourse to Rome, then it becomes continuous revolution. This behaviour once again is indicative of a complete lack of obedience, and a satanic pride which draws one to place one's judgement above that of others, and this on the eve of an act of the utmost good will: all the Council members were agreed on the sale of Saint-Gérard given the likelihood of its being almost certainly despoiled. That's what the Jesuits were doing, etc., etc. Fr. Guyot alone differed. I gave way to his wishes in order to satisfy him, committing the Society to a loss of 80,000 francs on the Sacred Heart (roughly 247,820 euros). What is to be done? I am shattered, and together with all the other problems elsewhere, and the daily burdens, it is too much...

What do you think? What should be done?

Wholly yours in C.J.
Cheerio, Father,

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Fathers Durin, Cramaille and Navarre will go to Oceania. They are very pious and serious men who will get on well together. (This last written in the margin, page 8.)

'Questionnaire' previously sent to Issoudun by Fr. Charles Piperon, MSC, Gerra, and now being returned to him, with the above letter, together with Chevalier's replies.

Questions on which I need an answer if that is possible.

1. What is to be done as regards renting?
Have it carried out by a Dutch lawyer.
2. What is to be done about Fr. Thomas? Should I get him ready for vows?
Yes, if you consider that he can be useful to the Society.
3. Can I print the "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" in Dutch such as I sent it on to you?
Yes.
4. Should I go and see the Count of Geloës on the 20th of June?
Yes, he wrote that he will be there on Saturday, the 11th.
5. When I go to Elsloo should I enter into negotiations with the Superior about commencing repair work and the necessary things needed for setting-up house? This is an important issue if one wishes to avoid what is seriously inconvenient and greatly worrying. Given the circumstances and what's common in the country, this would require more than two months' work.
Before anything begins, a plan of the house should be forwarded to us, and an estimate of the expenses likely to be incurred.
6. Will the Novitiate be transferred to Elsloo or will it stay at Gerra provisionally? Another serious issue which calls for a decision before anything is undertaken.
You are a better judge of the situation than we are. What is your own view? If the two undertakings are separate, who will be responsible for the Petite Oeuvre, such as it will be? Would Fr. Bontemps be suitable? Maybe the Petite Oeuvre will not be moved from Issoudun, or become re-installed at Chezal-Benoît. Only through precautionary measures shall we act.
7. If the Petite Oeuvre is moved here, who will provide its resources? I shall do my utmost to involve the Mother house, but what's possible is very little. Up to now what we have undertaken has had little success. We shall do what we can. It should not be forgotten that Elsloo no more than Gerra can only be a provisional arrangement, and here foreign religious are very plentiful. A permanent foundation cannot be set up either in one place or the other. Gerra as a novitiate would be preferable to Elsloo. On the other hand, Elsloo has some advantages not available in Gerra.

Without a reply to these questions, I am forced to do nothing: I ask, then, quite simply, pledging myself to do what is asked of me, neither more nor less, insofar as my wretched self is at a loss in knowing how to go about it.

Issoudun, June 14, 1881

Dear Father,

I got your telegram and I await your letter.

We are hurrying-on the Annals' printing.

2. Fr. Durin left for Lyons some days ago, with Cardinal Simeoni's letter, to promote the case for New Guinea.

I already saw in the English Annals the indiscreet statements you mention. I have already made a well-merited complaint to him (the Editor). He replied to me stating that he felt he had to include these letters to explain his own approach and he sincerely believed that this publicity would not get outside the Annals. I appealed to him to be more prudent and discreet in the future. I have experienced him as having admirable attitudes of obedience and devotedness. He is in readiness for everything. I really believe he is supportive of the Oceania mission.

Fr. Cramaille is also wonderfully well disposed; as a good religious he breathes obedience and sacrifice. He is a very special choice. I looked again at the article in our Constitutions, p.51, where it well presents the conditions demanded for those who take the vow of missionary work among the pagans, but it does not ignore, obviously, the devotedness of those who put themselves forward for such heroism. Fr. Navarre, given his piety, devotedness, serious personality, will be very useful, so it seems to me, for this pioneer departure. Two would not be enough. If one falls sick, or dies, what is going to happen to the other? To whom would one relate or take advice? And then if Fr. Durin was very brusque or froze out his companion, who would restore peace? A third, then, seems to me to be necessary. Brother Fromm could very well go there if you think it opportune. (For Fromm, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late.) Fr. Couppé is finishing his novitiate on July 22 and asks to make his vows; Fr. Piperon is very pleased with him. Send your comments to Fr. Piperon.

Cheerio, my friend. I hope that Fr. Guyot will return.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Thank you, Fr., for the snapshot of the dear little brother. I hope to be able to send you by Monday evening a number of the Annals and copies of the subscription lists which you can send to those you think should have them. Don't delay sending on your August article. We are again bringing forward that issue.

As I brought to your notice Frs. Durin, Cramaille and Navarre are the three priests (going to New Guinea). Fr. Navarre is greatly required. Fr. Giroux goes alone to America together with Fr. Ramot. Fr. Thomas of Limoges has withdrawn. If Fr. Giroux hasn't left send him off immediately to spend some days with his family, since his departure for Watertown must shortly take place.

Fr. Durin is in very good spirits. He is in Lyons at the moment presenting his case for the mission with the committee for the Propagation of the Faith. I had a letter from him this morning to say that he had been very well received. Today the proposal would be decided under the presidency of Bishop Mermillod and he was in high hopes. The Catholic Mission magazine has already mentioned our mission, and the papers have reproduced the Universe's telegram. There must be no delay then. If possible try to place in the Osservatore Romano and the Voce della Verità (Voice of Truth) Mr. Maguelone's article. It would then be from the Osservatore Romano that Mr. Maguelone's article would be taken, also that of Mr. Vuillaume (greater weight comes from the Osservatore Romano). Then have a hundred or so copies printed for the other conservative Paris papers and religious weeklies; you can send them on from Rome. The impact would be all the greater. The issue is urgent; that's certain.

Dear Fr.,

I got a letter this morning from Fr. Guyot informing me that he was forwarding his memorandum to Cardinal Simeoni protesting both against the mission being entrusted to us and against the choice of Fr. Durin. This is diabolical! Two months ago, Fr. Guyot favoured the New Guinea mission and now, when everything is agreed on and the information given to the public, with the Council of the Propagation of the Faith in agreement, here he is about to stir up a fresh scandal, comparable to what happened when the Church of St. James of the Spanish was taken over. Quite obviously we cannot withdraw. The mission, such as it has been offered to our Society, is very acceptable and we have taken it on unanimously. Moreover, Fr. Durin's choice was approved by all the Council members with the exception of Fr. Guyot. In my view, given the present circumstances, this was a very good choice. Fr. Durin is not what Fr. Guyot takes him to be. He is very pious, devoted, prudent, well experienced, able. This is how it should be; we cannot make a better choice at the moment. His reputation in America was excellent and he left behind him a sense of great regret, being well regarded and liked by the Bishops who knew him. The proof of all this is to hand. Support his case with the Cardinal. If Fr. Durin has to go to Rome to make himself known, explain himself and take instructions, send me a telegram, and he will leave immediately. This trip could, so it seems to me, be very helpful and, perhaps, even necessary at this moment. Consider it!

I am confidentially forwarding to you two letters from Fr. Deidier; you will let me know what you think. The news about the Port Breton colony is distressing, if true. Sister Marie-Arsène, formerly an Our Lady of the Sacred Heart religious, has retired to Avenue la Grotte, Lourdes. She remains very loyal and places herself completely at our disposal for the renewal of this little community.

I have had enough of Fr. Deidier's thinking. Drop a line to poor Sister Arsène.

Dear Father,

I approve of your arrangements.

Fr. Barral will leave on Monday and be with you towards the middle of the week. It is understood that he will not act other than in complete dependence on you. He is quite accepting. Keep him firmly in check nevertheless. He is inclined to run up expenses, particularly likes his comfort and gives himself to incurring expenses. Consequently you must watch him. Get him accustomed to obeying without being querulous. He likes to do what he wants and favours his own ideas. He strikes me (however) as very attached and devoted to the Society, greatly favouring the Oceania Mission.

The interview, if it has taken place, cannot be other than favourable to Fr. Durin. How one would love to write to the Bishops of Ogdensburg, Montréal, Boston! The reports will be very satisfactory and justice will be done to him. All the Council Fathers support Fr. Durin, except the unfortunate P.G. (Fr. Guyot). I am forwarding to you a copy of Fr. Píperon's letter to Fr. Guyot which could help you when enlightening Cardinal Simeoni. I believe that it's necessary for Fr. Durin to go straightaway to Rome to present himself. Fr. G. (Guyot) has done as much as he can, so I believe, to destroy our Society, while protesting his devotedness at the same time.

Cheerio, dear friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, June 23, 1881

Dear Father,

Thank you for your letter. The one you wrote to PG (Guyot) is superb, but for all that the damage is done. Fr. Jouët wrote to me this morning to say that Cardinal Simeoni had asked to see him about a memorandum written by one of the Assistants (Guyot) against the New Guinea mission. Poor Fr. Jouët is devastated, very upset. He will keep me informed about this unfortunate business. For all that, the Good Lord has allowed it to happen. We deserve this new trial! May His Holy Name be blessed. Good will once more come from this calamity as you say; let us hope so.

Fr. Jouët tells me that Fr. Chatelat, while being a saintly man, has poor judgment, is set in his ideas, narrow in outlook, giving himself to thinking that he is an eagle whereas in reality he is very, very, very ordinary (run of the mill). His presence in Rome, he (Jouët) says, is more annoyance than helpful to the scholastics, and, accordingly, he is asking me to recall him straightaway. He thinks that Arles, which awaits him, would be the best place for him. That's what I am about to do. Fr. Jouët is asking for Fr. Barral to replace Fr. Giraux, saying that he gets on very well with him and that he could be helpful to him.

Nothing better; Fr. Barral is delighted to be returning to Rome. As for Father Thomas of Limoges, you have done very well to speak frankly and seriously to him. Before everything else it is a requisite that he be obedient, give up on his own will (ideas) and that he impress upon himself that by virtue of the vow of poverty he will neither manage his affairs or administer financial matters. In this, as in everything else, he will go along with whatever the Superior General considers should be granted to him. From the moment this good priest became no longer interested in going to America, he spoke no more about it. Let him make, then, his profession, undisturbed, on the day fixed by you! After that he can stay some more days in Haaren. After his profession, he will straightaway write me a letter letting me know that he is a member of the Society, and I shall reply immediately letting him know his new assignment in France. May he bask in the wisdom of his Superiors! He can be sure in advance that they will always have his best interests at heart.

Fr. Ramot will leave with Fr. Giroux for America and, probably, with Fernand Durin whose father, I believe, will agree. Georges, who is too deaf to be ordained at present, will very likely go to Oceania with his uncle.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

The Elsloo issue is not urgent. Before totting up expenses, take note of the way things are taking shape after the elections.

L 18810625

To Fr. Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, June 25, 1881

Dear Father,

We read carefully the memorandum presented by our dear confrère (Guyot) to His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni. We respect the motivation which inspired it; it has to be considered well-intentioned, but we find it exaggerated, and even inexact on several issues, and moreover imprudent. Religious training among us has been that which has been characteristic in all Congregations starting off. For a number of years we had no more than two priests. We tried to do our best. A third came to join us. One of us was given the task of assessing the vocation of those who presented themselves, accepting and training them in the religious life which we wished to live. Poor, and lacking in so much, we were compelled to make use of the house we had and whatever was to hand. Purely as diocesan missionaries we studied what designs Divine Providence had for us. Over 14 years, that is to say from our foundation until 1869, we lived in obscurity, always very restricted in numbers. The setting-up of a regular novitiate was, therefore, impossible. During this period of time we were not inactive. We raised a magnificent temple (church) to the Sacred Heart of Jesus and a large monastery looking to the future; besides we introduced the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, her marvellous Association, spreading everywhere her cult and that of the Sacred Heart of Our Lord.

It was at this moment, then, while everything was being made ready for a serious undertaking, that Divine Providence seemingly wished our Society to experience a particular boost. With the good office of Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, we were granted an acceptance brief by Rome and we considered laying down the foundations of a novitiate outside the mother house. Without doubt it was not a perfect situation, but there was good will on all sides and those who came through this initial training, within which grace acted strongly, are not the most mediocre members of the Society. The great mistake of the memorandum's author is to presume that one can be a man without experiencing the weaknesses and trials of infancy.

Our members, without being eagles or saints in general, compare well with members of other Congregations. We are aware of our problems, our weaknesses, imperfections (so much the better!), but these same problems are more or less experienced everywhere. I know many male communities and I can truthfully and conscientiously say that we as religious are far from being inferior to others as regards the spirit of devotedness, obedience, poverty and regularity.

The worthy Fr. Guyot, when providing a number for our Institute's members, overlooks the three priests in the novitiate. Two are about to take vows and the third will do so in the course of the next month; and as well there are all the scholastics you know in Rome and elsewhere, several of whom are in sacred orders.

The drawbacks of Fr. Durin are exaggerated, greatly so...; but if he has his drawbacks (and who hasn't?) he has, also, splendid qualities. Nobody can gainsay his piety, zeal, devotedness, his bonding with the Society, his know-how (savoir-faire), his durability and firmness. I protest when the author of the memorandum asserts that I was in constant friction with Fr. Durin and that on both sides the situation was no longer tolerable. I also challenge his stating that from among ten members who were appointed to America, six lost their vocations when with Fr. Durin. All the Assistants (Chevalier's counsellors) know that these unfortunate confrères had already seriously compromised their vocations. Of all the missionaries of the Sacred Heart, I look upon Fr. Durin as one of those best suited to take forward to success the present mission which the Holy See graciously wishes to entrust to our little Society.

I protest, moreover, where the worthy PG (Guyot) brings himself to say that the wish to have members and undertake responsibilities has opened the Institute's door to individuals who should never have been allowed to enter. The Congregation Council, when admitting novices, has always been led by supernatural perspectives, and has always acted conscientiously in keeping with the interests of the Congregation. It could have been mistaken since it is not infallible, and it could, likewise, be deceived. We have never taken on anything in a whimsical way, always following the intimations of Holy Providence and the advice of our Superiors. We never had any reason to regret anything, whatever P.G. (Guyot) says at the end of his memorandum; quite the contrary. Our esteemed confrère no doubt is referring to your house in Rome which he didn't want at any consideration. I associate what you occupy at this moment with the acceptance of Issoudun parish which our saintly dead Archbishop (de la Tour d'Auvergne) made it, so to say, a duty for us to accept having the future in mind. What, then, would become of us today if we had neither Rome or Issoudun?

Yes, we have all thought it was right to accept, with deep appreciation, the important Oceania mission.

1. Because the Holy See offered it to us and our obedience is blind like that of Peter putting his nets out in the lake on the word of the Saviour.
2. Because it is an honour.
3. Because it is a seed-bed of blessings for our Congregation.
4. Because it provides the opportunity to work for the conversion of the pagans, which is one of the principal aims of our Society.
5. Because it meets the wishes of a great number of our confrères who came to us to commit themselves to such like missions.
6. Finally, because this providential offer comes to us at the very moment when we are being thrown out of our houses and while France closes its heart to religious.

We can send to New Guinea three or four of our members without at all weakening our undertakings. Here are the names of those who made themselves available, and which we have presented to the Holy See: Fr. Durin, Superior, Fathers Cramaille and Navarre; these are dependable men, mature in age and experience, of proven virtue.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, June 26, 1881

Dear Father,

I am forwarding to you the notorious P.G. (Guyot) memorandum of which Fr. Jouët sent me the enclosed copy. You will see for yourself the exaggerations, the errors, the inopportune and imprudent nature of this presentation in the present circumstances. He involves Fr. Morisseau who says himself he never shared his views on this issue. This will give you an idea of the quality of this unfortunate confrère's judgment and prudence in this matter. It is pathetic. Fr. Jouët wrote to inform me that Cardinal Simeoni had a very unhappy impression of the complaint and its author, and thought it all very saddening. He (the Cardinal) is taking no notice (of the complaint). I replied by setting out the facts and refuting all that was exaggerated and incorrect. Fr. Morisseau signed with me (856 above). We cannot allow anything like this to be said without protesting.

The young novice has been accepted, given the good recommendations provided. He must pay his fee after the postulancy, before he is accepted for the Novitiate. You will provide a report on him and you will present him to each Assistant for the purpose of getting their approval. It is Fr. Morisseau who was responsible for this matter and he forgot to advise you.

Fr. Ramot leaves from Le Havre with Fr. Giroux on July 2. Do not do anything about Elsloo; we shall see about it during the holidays.

I received your power of authorization document. Thank you.

Cheerio, Father.

Issoudun, July 2, 1881

Dear Father,

Your observations on PG's (Guyot) memorandum have done me a lot of good. Thank you! I greatly wish that things remain as they are. I wrote to Fr. Jouët at the time of Fr. Durin's presence (in Rome) to remind him that the election of the Superior General should take place this year in September. I requested him to consider if there might not be good grounds to anticipate the Chapter because of events likely to take place. He wrote to me that he had been informed that the time for the election could not be changed and a Chapter, accordingly, would not be possible, but each elective member could, at the appropriate time, forward his sealed vote to the Society's Procurator who would hand it on to the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

Since you are first Assistant, it is your role to get in touch with Fr. Jouët and then contact each elector to set out what is required. The elective members should be the same as those who were at the last Chapter, in addition Fr. Chappel, very likely, and certainly Fr. Durin.

Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Fr. Ramot leaves today from Le Havre for New York with Fr. Giraux. Fr. Barral has returned to Rome at the request of Fr. Jouët. Fr. Chatelat has gone to Arles.

Here is a copy of the telegram which Fr. Jouët has sent me just now on the issue of PG's (Guyot) memorandum. Everything in order – Cardinal, very approving, gave me all faculties, approval, today for Durin, Navarre, Cramaille.

Issoudun, July 3, 1881

Dear Father,

Thanks for your telegram and congratulations on your success. Fr. Durin is going to Rome. I am sending on to you a preposterous letter he wrote to me, full of imaginings and a utopian work. It demonstrates what weak judgement this poor (pathetic) confrère has, who with his bizarre, unrealistic, changeable plans could well compromise the mission's success. I wrote a letter to him in serious vein appealing to him to allow himself to be guided, to do nothing outside the bounds of obedience, to curtail his imagination, be on his guard against it and especially to do nothing which would compromise matters. To make his way to Rome not with the intention of laying out impractical, insensitive, plans at the present time, but rather to take advice and become set on a way of proceeding from which he will not have to disengage. I asked him to follow your advice in every respect. He replied that everything was no more than ideas he wanted to put to me. Impress upon him the need for prudence, and not to give himself over to anything adventurous. I believe that he should hasten his departure for the mission and not delay much longer since otherwise we shall be running into difficulties. I have already received many gifts and a thousand francs (about 3,000 euros) for Oceania. When the papers and our Annals mention it the contributions will be still greater. Le Monde (newspaper) has brought out an article; tomorrow it will be the turn of the Universe. Write immediately an article for our Annals which I would need to have by the 15th of this month. Don't be late.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, July 5, 1881

Dear Father,

I particularly wish to thank you on the outcome of the mission (New Guinea), so damagingly compromised by the unfortunate memorandum. It now becomes a great blessing for the Sacred Heart from your point of view and mine. But, unfortunately, are there not those who think otherwise, making it true that the good has to undergo persecution?

You make, my friend, an observation which I was far from expecting you to make. "You are upset," you say, "to find Fr. Chevalier abandoning you in the demanding moments while you in fact are working for the Society and for him above and beyond what can be articulated."

I don't know where you could have gathered that I was abandoning you. To do so would be a betrayal of the interests of the Society. I don't believe that anyone else is as close to my heart. You are aware of all I did when buying St. James of the Spanish and the setting up and construction of our Rome house (on the site). I exhausted the financial resources of the Sacred Heart despite the on-going complaints of the individual you are aware of. I borrowed 30,000 francs (about 92,930 euros) to pay for the construction work and this still remains due... Now the Council, that is to say Fathers Guyot, Piperon and Morisseau, has positively stated, and you have agreed, that the restoration of the second storey of the house will not be finished until we have paid the Pope the 100,000 francs (roughly 309,776 euros) we owe him, and reimburse the Petite Oeuvre the 100,000 francs we took from its account, and, as well, the other sums borrowed. With regard to all this, nothing has yet been paid back, and you can see for yourself that the expenses are still multiplying with regard to the completion of the church and your house, without the opposed Council members, who are in the majority, being consulted or giving their approval – this last is what they keep on saying to me.

Now then, my friend, where do you think I can get hold of money? Following the closure of the Sacred Heart (Issoudun) takings have dropped off and expenses have grown. I have to think about looking after the youngsters at the Petite Oeuvre, supporting the Novitiate, and payment towards travel to Holland, America, Rome, etc., the upkeep of all the confrères, and contributions to the Scholasticate.

Fr. Durin, before departure from Watertown, borrowed 5,000 francs (15,480 euros, roughly) to meet a debt. I must pay that with money which has just come to me. You do advert to all this. It has to be that all the worries, all the embarrassment, should be on my shoulders, no less than all the problems, disappointments, setbacks, the problems of the Society and the parish which begin and end with me, all scarcely allowing me a minute's rest, with little or no release from the strain, or any solace. I collapse under the weight, I cannot take any more, and then I have to hear from dear Fr. Jouët that I am abandoning him.

Following the appeal made in our Annals for the Rome project, to open a list of subscribers straightaway and send it to the same people as those contacted by the Annals, was imprudent (ill thought out). This was the view of all our members. (Chevalier is referring to his Council.) One had acted for the best, having in mind the interests of the undertaking, and then you go and make a mess of it... Have no illusions about this: all the appeals made on behalf of Rome are largely detrimental to our Issoudun resources since, generally speaking, the associates do not give twice over. That which was meant for us or for the Petite Oeuvre or for something else, was being sent on to you. You say that Fr. Barral brought nothing to you. You must be made aware that he had already left when your telegram arrived. And, anyway, the purse is empty at this moment. I shall do all I can to find this money you need. It's not just 300 francs which have been forwarded to you above the limit, but twelve or thirteen thousand francs. You say that you do not weigh up matters where the Society is concerned. That is so, but I believe that all of us work for its well-being.(!)

From your letter I am led to believe that I am greatly ill-spoken of in Rome, and that you often support me, engage yourself with our concerns, and work on my behalf more than I might think. Do me the courtesy of letting me know all the complaints with which I am reproached, and you will be rendering me a service. Do not fear that anything will happen to you. I can hear everything, and I also should, perhaps, come to know of everything in a modest way. (!)

The time has come for the election of a new Superior. Fr. Piperon, First Assistant, has already written to me about this asking me what he must do, whether he has to come to the Chapter or send on his vote by letter. In either care, he has to make arrangements. I replied asking him to get in touch with you, that you had already written to me about this matter informing me that a Chapter was not feasible, that each voter should forward you his sealed vote and you would pass it on to the Prefect of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. There you have what is to be done.

Cheerio, dear friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I haven't the time to read over this letter. Yes, you can send your appeal to all the bishops. It isn't very astute. I wish you all success. And the Gerra Novitiate, is it at last regularized?

I am about to reply to him asking for information which I shall pass on to you. I am forwarding a letter from Fr. Durin, a very good one, to you. (Written from Paris, July 4.) I am trying to find funds for you. Patientiam habe in me. (Be patient with me!) Thank, especially, good Fr. Barral for his kind letter. I kiss him on his two nice cheeks. Your print-out for the bishops is very good. Send it to all of them, and to all the religious weeklies where the Bishops have supported the Rome (MSC) undertaking, together with your subscription lists, asking that these be inserted with an appeal to the faithful. You should have thereby a good chance of success. This way of proceeding seems very practical and full of possibilities to me. Don't overlook anything. I await your Annals' article.

Dear Father,

In keeping with my promise, I am sending on your money to you, 4,222 francs 20 (about 13,070 euros). I come back to my idea. Send off from Rome, with your episcopal approval, a copy of your subscription list to all the religious weeklies in France, Belgium, Holland, Italy, etc. with a request that it be inserted. Could we not make available, for our confrères about to depart for New Guinea, the white soutane of Pius IX? In Chapter, we agreed in principle that it be adopted, but Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, to whom the Pope had referred judgment, thought it should be left over for another time. You are likely to have success. The circumstances, so it seems to me, should now be favourable. In the first place, it would be the beginning of its introduction, and besides, this white soutane would be more bearable in warm countries. Think about it. Discuss it. I think that the Oceania missionaries would appreciate this habit; we otherwise will dress ourselves up in it in better times.

No greeting.

I received the recommended formula. You may keep Fr. Couppé with you. We shall consider matters later.

Fr. Jouët has become extremely careless, since it is all of fifteen days since I sent three months' money to him and he sends me a telegram to say it hasn't arrived. He promised that he would have an article ready for the Annals eight days ago and up to the present I have had nothing. I am getting very impatient with him and if I hadn't heard from Fr. Durin, who as you know is in Rome, I would be without any news. When you write to him about serious issues register your letter and then you will be sure of its arrival.

Dear Fr. Jouët has become extremely sensitive. We commended his work in Rome in our Annals and this led to some thousands of francs being made available to him. Not content enough with this, he wanted us to include in the following issue a subscription list exclusively in favour of St. James of the Spanish (the church which was Jouët's responsibility). I again (in the Annals) recommended his work, but I left out his list because I was anxious not to take advantage of our associates by asking them yet again to contribute. Dear Fr. Jouët proceeded to write me a very dissatisfied letter, complaining that I had forsaken him, etc. There you have him! He will come to his senses, but it is disappointing when one tries to do all one can in order to please someone and sometimes more than is feasible in the circumstances.

Cheerio, dear friend. My good wishes to all.

Issoudun, July 27, 1881

Dear Father,

Your article came this morning. Many thanks; it's very interesting and needs to be well circulated. Our New Guinea mission, etc., has a marvellous impact on the public and it will lead to a great lot of interest in us.

I got a letter from Louvain, Belgium, in which the President of the University, or someone, is letting me know that he would be agreeable to renew the Captain Marceau undertaking, that is to say, set up a marine apostolate in support of our missions which he considers to be of the utmost importance. We shall see. I am sending on to you the first 83 pages in proof of the new (Chevalier's) book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart entitled: The Splendours of the Theology of Mary, or Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

The printer hasn't enough headings to print all the proofs at once. Once what I am sending on to you is corrected, he will print that number, and the same for the rest. I am forwarding the same proofs to the Archbishop of Bourges to look at them and give his approval. Look at them, yourself, also, and have them looked at as well by Fr. Côme and others such as I shall suggest. You will send them back to me with all the accompanying corrections. After that Mr. Pigelet will print another copy which will be submitted for Rome's approval in order to obtain a brief. This work will be a much more complete work than the other. What you have is only a third of the theological section. Hurry up with the correcting of these proofs.

Fr. Durin is delighted with his journey to Rome, with our house, with St. James of the Spanish, etc. He tells me that you are not well. Look after yourself. Come to France if it's necessary for your health. Rent a villa for our young men in which to spend their holidays if you think it would be worthwhile. Rest, take care of yourself. Fr. Piperon is occupied with the election of the Superior General and his Assistants. Arrange this matter with him.

On your way to Issoudun stop off for a little while at Arles. Fr. Navarre tells me that there are several pious young girls in this town willing to become religious of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in order to go to New Guinea. Mother Felicity takes this view and would appear to be returning to a more balanced way of thinking. It is, perhaps, the opportune moment to do something. It would be easy to gather them (these girls) at Issoudun. Meet these good girls.

Decree of August 9, 1881

Taking into consideration that the exercises of the Cult of the Sacred Heart have been forbidden and yet again re-introduced, contrary to the law, in the parish church of the borough of Issoudun, and that this fact is in the most noticeable manner made evident every day in the discourses delivered in the said church, and, particularly so, as propagated in a printed circular widely available and presented in the following manner:

The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart having been expelled from their house, and their Basilica sealed off, the religious exercises at Our Lady of the Sacred Heart (Church) have been transferred to the splendid parish church of Issoudun recently renovated where one finds installed a magnificent statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, like that which has been crowned. Before this statue, as hitherto in the Basilica, masses will be celebrated every day, lamps will continuously be left, and the petitions will be made twice each week, on Sunday and Thursday.

In expectation of better days it is to this impressive and prestigious collegial Church of Saint-Cyr, Issoudun, that the faithful will now come in pilgrimage to pay homage to the Patroness of difficult and desperate problems, begging her favours. As before, pious articles associated with devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will be made available and forwarded. Ex-votos requested cannot be placed in the Basilica until its reopening which, we hope, will shortly take place. We are approaching a cataclysm; more than ever this is the moment to appeal to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. We invite our dear associates to renew their confidence and direct their petitions towards Her who holds in Her hands the treasures of the Heart of Jesus. We appeal to them to spread Her cult more and more, to send on to us always, very precisely, their acknowledgements, to let us know about the graces obtained, and to promote the Annals which will continue to be published at the beginning of each month. We hope that our subscribers will hurry to renew their subscriptions and find others for us. We greatly, and more than ever, count on their prayers and the good will of the associates. Forward your requests, expressions of gratitude, different petitions, and contributions to the parish priest of Issoudun (Indre).

Issoudun, November 8, 1880

J. Chevalier,
Parish Priest - Archpriest of Issoudun

The Mayor, Lecherbonnier, now continues:

Given that on his own admission Fr. Jules Chevalier has renewed worship of the Sacred Heart, and will provide and forward as before all the commodities connected with this cult not recognized by the State.

Given that it would be purposeless to have it in mind to object that the expressions of devotion to the Sacred Heart do not signify a new cult. And given that the priests have set up again their association in the parish church, their recommending of it in their circular letter leaving nobody in any doubt about it.

Given that there is nothing else to engage us other than the exercises taking place within the church, and whose aim is the promotion of a cult, authorized or not, it could not be the same with regard to what would go on in the public roadway.

Given that the processions organized in the church have taken on in these latter years developments and characteristics incompatible with our morality and our law, finding there monarchical symbols of a seditious kind, and that they have given rise to unfortunate happenings of which several citizens have been the victims.

Given that these processions are an irritant to commercial undertakings, and interfere with movement on the public road.

Given that the religious spirit has sown seeds in the public at large of systematic opposition before everything delivered from lay-authority, and that it is relevant to everybody's freedom that religious activities should remain enclosed, and of a private nature, or be held in buildings authorized by the State since otherwise there could be serious problems which the Municipal Authority, taken by surprise, would not be able to contain.

Given that it is the duty of the Mayor to take measures dictated by prudence to avoid all conflict.

Given the laws of 16-24 August, 1790, in Title of 11, article 3, 19-22 July, 1791 – Title 1, article 46; article 16 of the law from the 7th month of year 4; article 11 from the law of July 18, 1837.

Given the findings of the Municipal Council, dated March 31, 1881.

We decree:

Article 1: Processions and all other forms of cult are forbidden throughout the entire area of the Issoudun Town Council.

Article 11: The present stipulation is not opposed to funerals or talks, prayers in the cemetery, or to the conveyance of viaticum to the sick.

Article 111: The present decree will be notified to whomsoever has the right to know.

Oh how I envy them on such an undertaking! What a sacrifice it is for me not being able to bless them and embrace them on this very special occasion! Give my excuses to these special people. Ask them to bless me and the Society, and give them from me a departure embrace. Oh, how I suffer because I cannot be in Barcelona at this moment.

Look carefully into what Fr. Deidier recommends we should buy. Make out a report on the matter and send it on to me. Fr. 5. I received the plans. Thank you.
6. I continually fear that the paper, La Nouvelle France, may compromise the success of our missions with the Propagation of the Faith. Its last issue was not prudent, too much inclined to make us its own missionaries. Would you write a letter to its director. I can understand Propaganda's anxieties. The plan you put forward is better. See that it succeeds.
7. We are at last about to sell Saint-Gérard to Madame de Saint-Géraud's nephew. I am going to Moulins on Sunday to settle this matter.
8. Mother Felicity is caught up more and more in her problems. I don't know in what way I can give her her head. There is nobody, nobody here to support me.

To Messrs. De Grootte and Surmée.

Issoudun, October 12, 1881

Copy of letter sent to the above-named on the occasion of the enclosed circular (not extant in Rome archives).

Sir,

I have just now received your letter and circular with regard to a contribution towards the Nouvelle France (New France) missions. I am sorry to have to tell you that Rome does not approve this word 'dotation' (endowment), the publicity given to it, or that which it is desired should be given it. At Propaganda (Congregation) it is thought that such a way of acting puts off the Propagation of Faith from coming to the aid of the Melanesian and Micronesian missions. It could say: "Because the Administration of the New France colony endows the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart annually, it is pointless for us to provide them with money."

If the Marquis of Rays provides more or less a considerable amount of financial help each year to the missionaries, so much for the better, but he must not publicize this. Besides this endowment mentioned in all the papers has the additional serious inconvenience of letting it be understood that the Vicariate of Melanesia and Micronesia are in dependence on New France and only established with reference to it, something which is not so, indeed quite the contrary. In Rome there is great amazement and, indeed, discontent with this way of acting.

Would you kindly change your advertisement in your next issue and avoid speaking of endowment in the sense understood in the circular. You could well compromise the overall outcome of this important and huge mission of which New France is only a tiny part.

Please accept my gratitude for all your kindness, together with my respectful good wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier.

Dear Father,

These gentlemen have already arranged for a posting on an island for a priest from the Angoulême diocese who wants to go there.

I told Mr. de Groote at the end of the letter that clergy from the same group were a prerequisite in these countries especially at the beginning of a mission, and that we wouldn't accept outsider priests unless they wished to go to our Novitiate, and discuss with (text uncertain here).

This suggestion would not seem to have pleased these gentlemen as you can gather from the reply here included.

Nothing further to report from here.

Dear Father,

I read with the greatest interest Fr. Jullien's letter. You have there what can be called a true vocation! May the Lord be praised. May many more like him come along!

Send him on to Gerra immediately. Once arrived at the Novitiate, his testimonial letters can be sought. My thanks in particular to Fr. Carbonel. There is no point in looking for other recommendations. We are sufficiently informed.

I received a letter from one of the young men who wrote to Cardinal Simeoni; he is from Rive-de-Gier. His vocation does not strike me as very serious. As for the two Italians who have come forward wanting to be lay brothers, you may accept them if you think it opportune and have them make their Novitiate. I am quite sure Rome will allow this. Yes, I would like to have a Novice Master whom I could send to you, or, simply, a Socius, and set up a Novitiate in Rome. Vocations would follow. Let us pray for this. I am pleased with Brother Klotz's letter. Convey to him my thanks.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

My good wishes to everybody.

J. Chevalier.

André Jullien was born on September 19, 1861, in Marseilles and became a priest of the diocese. He was in England from August 7 1877 until he returned to Issoudun on September 29 where he taught rhetoric. In 1890 he went to Chezal-Benoît, again as rhetoric teacher. He died at Marseilles, December 15, 1920.

L 18811018

To His Grace Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, October 18, 1881

Your Grace,

I hurry to reply to the letter Your Grace has done me the honour of writing to me. When depositing with Mr. Piquet, the Issoudun banker, the sum of 45,784 francs, 60 (roughly 141,800 euros), it was agreed that only the sum of 57,800 francs would incur interest, this out of consideration for Mother Felicity. There is, therefore, no need to worry about overdue interest (7,984 francs, 60). Mother Felicity was granted ten years from June 24, 1876, to discharge herself from her debt. She still has five years left.

We bought these houses for 60,000 francs for these newly-founded religious who were not in a position to do so themselves at this time (June 1874). When handing them over to Mother Felicity in 1876 for 60,000 francs, we ourselves undertook the expenses of the legal actions and registration at a cost of 4,000 francs or so, and also quite a number of other costs. The money owed belongs to our Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) of the Sacred Heart. Committing myself over five years to pay interest on the money in question is, effectively, a contribution of 10,000 francs or so for which I take responsibility without taking into consideration those already enormous sums which I took on myself to complete our parish church. I would like to think that if the new community becomes, as I hope, prosperous, we shall be compensated for this gesture of good will.

Your Grace will not be unaware that the upkeep of the boys in the Petite Oeuvre, of both our novices and scholastics, requires much in the way of resources, which far from increasing are on the contrary diminishing since the closure of our chapel. If I take account, Your Grace, of the concerns raised, it is for four reasons:

1. To facilitate the revival of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart community on a fresh foundation approved by Your Grace under the title Apostolate of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. This undertaking, well led, has a promising future. I am convinced of this.
2. Remove Mother Felicity from responsibility for this work through that arrangement Your Grace is aware of and which she is very willing to agree to. Experience over seven years quite clearly demonstrates that Madame Pirinoli is totally incapable of looking after a community. Her piety is wholly sentimental and her devotion rests on no solid foundation; she lives in a kind of dangerous visionary world. Accordingly she leaves it to be understood that she receives directly from God all the enlightenment which she is in need of. There arises from all this a baffling pigheadedness and a self-assured, unmoved, attitude to anything which challenges her; she allows herself to be influenced by the feelings of the moment, her spirit as flighty as her thoughts. For her the imagination controls everything; moreover she is lacking in judgment and the right approach; she acts without advice and doesn't want to hear anything about any issue.
3. Some girls who are with her need to be reassured since they no longer want to be led by her. One of them sent me the enclosed letter asking me to forward it to Your Grace so that you could become aware of its contents.
4. Meet the needs of several generous-minded spirits who would like to become involved in the world of the Apostolate of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart under wholly new leadership which Your Grace would animate in complete unanimity with the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

I should like to think, Your Grace, that these arguments are acceptable to Your Grace and a new Society will not be delayed in coming about. If it is agreeable I would send Your Grace the Constitutions which from the beginning we made available to the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart religious, with the approval of His Grace de la Tour d'Auvergne. They were based on our own. Your Grace will make an appraisal of them.

Please accept my respectful good wishes.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The subject matter of the letter is the Saint-Gérard-Le-Puy house, closed since November 1880. The Prefect, in an unreadable signature, had written from Moulins to the Countess on October 24, 1881, following a letter from her on the 17th, in which she states that she has become proprietor of the chateau and chapel. He informed the Countess that she would need to put in writing that she intended to put the place to a use other than what the Fathers of the Sacred Heart (sic) carried out there. If she intended to maintain the place for worship, it would be necessary for the Bishop of Moulins to get in contact with him and ask for special permission, as required by law, for the opening of an oratory. The Prefect ends by saying that he cannot meet the request of the Countess until he has received one or other of these requests. The Prefect's name is not legible.

Issoudun, October 27, 1881

Dear Father,

What is happening about Fr. Jullien from Marseilles? Has he left for our Novitiate? The postulant from Rive-de-Gièr who wanted to enter Propaganda has done something which I cannot understand. Following the good report you sent on to me about him, Fr. Morisseau made known to him that he was accepted, and since this young man said that he didn't have the money to go to the Novitiate, Fr. Morisseau, on my advice, sent him 100 francs (about 310 euros) in a registered letter. But this young man wouldn't accept the letter since it has been sent back to us. Has he changed his mind? It's all a little strange! I am sending a letter from Fr. Deidier on to you. What do you make of it? I am also forwarding a letter from Mr. Sumiez (rather illegible) about endowments. What do you think? Monsignor Druon has been relieved of his duties then! (Rector of the French College, Rome). Do you know why? What do you think of his successor? Do you think that you can open your church on December 8 next? Will the Archbishop of Bourges be going to Rome at this time? Do you fear there will be a revolutionary state of affairs in Rome itself? Are you giving thought to securing our Church of St. James and our residence in the event that foreign religious, especially French, would be expelled? Discuss this matter; the issue is worth serious consideration.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours, and to all, in C.J.

Dear Father,

Thank you for your letter and all the detailed news it brought me.

1. Your paving surface is very good. I agree with what you have chosen.
2. I don't know if I can go to Rome for the 7th of December. I shall try to do so if you think my presence there is necessary. I will leave on Sunday, the 4th, and get to Rome on Tuesday at mid-day or one o'clock, returning on Friday so as to be absent from Issoudun as little as possible.
3. Fr. (Jullien) has finished his Novitiate retreat. Fr. Piperon is very pleased with him.
4. The Rive-de-Gièr postulant behaved very inappropriately because, he claims, they didn't want to have him at Propaganda; he is entering another Congregation which he is familiar with.
5. Set up a Novitiate for your Italian lay brother postulants. Rome will, I am sure, give you authorization.
6. I am looking for an explanation from Fr. Deidier.
7. I am no longer interested in those gentlemen from New France.
8. I haven't had anything yet from Fr. Durin.
9. Think about the Chapter, the purpose of which would be to demonstrate the power of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart through the example of the Saints. You promised me documents which I don't see arriving. Would you be good enough to deal with this matter.

10. Thank the scholastics for their kind letter and the two Spanish brothers for the one they wrote to me.

L 18811113

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, November 13, 1881

Dear Father,

I got your letter about my trip to Rome. I shall see what I can do. The Archbishop of Bourges has decided to go to Rome in the near future. If he hasn't changed his mind in the past year, he has decided to make the case for the older statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and set about, cost what it may, its restoration. He is aware of the disastrous consequences for us of this change, and the great problems it created, and still does for our Association. From the theological point of view, he observes, the older model is the only one which can be supported, whereas the new one cannot be upheld (theologically). These are his words: "When I go to Rome," so he said, "I shall talk sense about this to the Pope."

Make the most of his (the Archbishop's) presence to attempt a fresh intervention. Archbishop Marchal could easily come by the signatures of several French bishops and some from elsewhere. Get ready the memorandum which you already prepared for Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne and Cardinal de Molines. You will recall this from before.

It seems to me that this is an opportune moment. It would be a lovely gift on the occasion of the feast (December 8th) made by Leo XIII to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, in endorsing her first (early) statue. Would you not consider placing a statue of the Sacred Heart of Jesus on the pinnacle of your church? This would be very appropriate for the day of inauguration.

Ask through the intermediary of the Archbishop of Bourges if we could not have for the 31st May, the feast of Our Lady of All Graces, a special office or, at least, a votive mass of the blessed Virgin, first or second class, with the privilege of having a votive mass each Thursday, even if the office is double class. And for priests on pilgrimage the privilege of a votive mass of the Virgin when they are visiting the sanctuary. These privileges are available for all other sanctuaries, which are in fact less visited.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours, and to everybody, in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: It would be imprudent and risky to be set on setting up the centre of our Society in Rome, and the centre, effectively, of our Association, since if I was no longer in Issoudun, a diocesan priest would take my place, and with our church closed, we would have to go elsewhere! What would become of the Association's cradle? Resources would quickly dry up. Who would provide for the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work), the scholastics and the novices, since all our houses depend (financially) on Issoudun.

Be careful and do not act in any way to compromise our situation in Issoudun. Keep on taking a close look at correspondence from Rome and New France.

J.C.

Issoudun, November 14, 1881

Dear Father,

I warmly approve your statue of the Sacred Heart on the pinnacle of the Church. It must be in place by the 7th of December. The one in our garden is in plaster, and I would greatly like to send it to you, but I fear you would be getting it in pieces. If it (the statue) does not arrive in time, which is not unlikely, or if it cannot be used, could you not design or paint a Sacred Heart on boards put together and place it on the pinnacle while awaiting something better. In Rome they do these things both very well and very quickly. Discuss it with Mr. Xaponi. On the sides I would prefer two angels: St. Joseph and Our Lady would lead to confusion, distracting from the central subject which is the Sacred Heart. Moreover, I don't greatly like it that the new statue should be placed there. As for the cross I find it wrongly placed. Why not have it like this:

It should be in bronze iron or in wooden gilt. It would be provisional while awaiting what will be placed over your pinnacles. If you cannot place a statue or a painting of the Sacred Heart on the pinnacle, why not put there a statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the original model which you have in your possession. It is not forbidden except for public worship in a church, and not for private worship. Besides, in virtue of a decree which you are aware of, it is permissible for us to present it (the statue) for public worship in a church provided we do not call it Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. In default of a Sacred Heart, the latter's position would appropriately be on the pinnacle since the church is consecrated to her.

Cheerio, Father, wholeheartedly in C.J.

Your Grace,

If I may take the liberty of addressing these two words to Your Grace, it concerns my daughter who, by mistake, followed the catechism course during the whole of last year thinking that she was old enough to do so, and she did not fail in any way to carry out her duties and attend to the requirements, and always with a view to First Communion.

This year it has become clear that she cannot be accepted because she is lacking some days: she will be 11 years on January 22. The parish priest, however, cannot accept her since he is forbidden to do so by the regulations.

I ask Your Grace to be kind enough, then, to give permission to the parish priest to accept her for First Communion, and this would greatly help me since I could not have her spending another year doing catechism, it would be against my wishes.

I shall be grateful if Your Grace can accede to the request of your humble servant.

The new government in France couldn't be much worse. I am expecting a total despoiling. Already the lending bank which loaned us 80,000 francs (roughly 247,820 euros) asked me, yesterday, to pay back as soon as possible the money loaned. Dear Father,

I had a very good journey, thank God! I am returning the letter from dear Fr. Casas to you. These people in Barcelona are rushing us too much. I received just now another letter from Fr. Casas looking for a priest or brother. I have no one available. Yet is it wise to leave him on his own? Then is Arevalo the town which suits us best? What is one to do? Fr. Deidier is also looking for someone. While Fr. Marie is away is it also a good thing to leave him on his own without being checked or supervised? I am, then, quite concerned. Perhaps one could, at a cost to myself, send Fr. Miniot to you (in Rome). Might not Fr. Barral be satisfactory in Spain? This pathetic character (Miniot) is becoming a serious embarrassment for the Society. What can be done with him? He has neither piety or humility, or blind obedience, or the religious spirit, or regularity, nor an economizing attitude, any discretion or judgment, etc. Try to reform and make a new man out of him. Keep him firmly in check, under surveillance and do not give him a free hand.

I received another letter from Fr. Durin; it is for yourself alone and Cardinal Simeoni to whom you may present it, though overlooking the parts which refer to Fr. Cramaille.

Thanks for your kind letter. I shall go and see the Archbishop of Bourges to thank him. Do not send anything to Fr. Casas. I wrote to him saying that it was Fr. Deidier, etc. I then asked Fr. Deidier to deal with this Arevalo issue and keep me informed.

I am sending on to you a new letter from Fr. Durin with a proposal which you can submit to His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni to find out what he thinks about it. You will let me know. In a separate letter Fr. Durin tells me that his wound isn't healed, has constant fever, and that his health has broken down. Would it not be a requirement to ask Cardinal Simeoni to name Fr. I shall have the pleasure of offering my humble respects to Your Grace on Tuesday morning next. If you cannot receive me I shall be grateful to you if you can let me know the day and the time when I can present myself.

The behaviour of Mother F. (Felicity) is a mystery to me. What she has done, and what she is still thinking of doing, cannot be inspired by God. She sent away three of her religious who had come to consecrate themselves to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I did not hear of their departure until it had already taken place. She carried out these latest moves during my visit to Rome. The confessor was not told about it. She forbade her subjects to speak to him. Having stated on all occasions that she only wished to do what Your Grace wanted, that she would leave her houses to the community of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, etc., here she suddenly does the very opposite, and it would appear that she wishes to impede the rehabilitation of this work after Your Grace had been making very serious and helpful efforts in Rome to this effect.

The good Lord will, I hope, draw good out of it. The new features are sufficiently numerous to reshape this important undertaking such as Your Grace understands it. It cannot but prosper all the more after this (episode); this is my contention. Mother F. came here yesterday to inform me that she was about to put her houses up for sale immediately, adding, Your Grace, that it was your express wish. Here is an example of the way she understands issues. I informed her that such precipitateness would have a very bad impact on the public who would not be slow in putting a malicious interpretation on it, that there was no need to rush things, pleading with her to wait until Easter and otherwise, before meeting Your Grace, she should wait until I came back from Bourges. She made me a promise to do that.

I learned with very great regret, Your Grace, of your painful illness. I am delighted to hear that there has been a significant improvement. We earnestly pray for Your Grace's prompt return to health.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's humble, obedient, filial servant in C.J.

Dear Father,

1. Your students will arrive tomorrow in Paris at 2am.
2. I am forwarding to you a letter for Fr. Lannuzel, addressed to him, and two telegrams.
3. I have been sent from Paris (I don't know by whom) the letters of St. Vincent de Paul. Two splendid volumes in octavo, edited by the Dumoulin Bookshop, 5 rue des Grands Augustins, and by the Catholic International St. Paul Bookshop, 6 rue Cassette. Consider one or the other for (editing) our book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. We might have here, perhaps, a serious editor. Get these letters of St. Vincent de Paul for yourself; they seem to me quite splendid and instructive. The format, the paper, the typeface would perhaps be advantageous for the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Look into it. We shall have a work nearly as large as one of the two.

How I thank the Lord that you escaped serious injury when you had that terrible fall. Yes, you could have killed yourself. Get a step-ladder or a little stool for your library.

Thanks for your good wishes, and may I extend you mine for yourself and your dear colony. Convey my thanks to Fernand Hartzler, Fathers Carrier, Klotz, etc. I saw the Archbishop of Bourges. He was very pleased about his hospitable visit, his brother also.

Issoudun, January 11, 1882

Dear Father,

The more you are given, the more you look for. Not alone do you make an appeal to our associates for the church in Rome, something which greatly diminishes our own contributions, but I make available to you 12,000 francs. Furthermore, I paid you on top of that, last November, the 28th, 1,200 francs by registered letter to meet the costs of the first three months of 1882, and here you are looking for 2,550 francs for the first three months of 1882. It's neither right or reasonable. Give over any work which is not absolutely necessary and pay what is owed for the renovation, etc. I am holding back from paying you the complete total for the second term. I have more to think of than the house in Rome, you know.

Fr. Durin has also written to me what he wrote to His Eminence. I think the same as you: he is too precipitate. He should have sought advice. His precipitateness and his demands could compromise the mission. Moreover, I believe he is exaggerating the disaster in the colony. He is extreme in his grasp of things, and cannot stand any delay. I am going to write to him asking him to check his enthusiasm and requesting him to be more cautious. In fact if they could set themselves up at Amboina making it a centre, a point of departure, that would be very much the best thing since they would have Dutch protection there, resources for living, natives a little civilized, and from this established station they could move out towards the other islands in their mission. And besides, there is in Amboina, as he remarks, a regular boat service which is exceptionally advantageous. Make an effort then, to make it possible for them to have this little island. It would make them feel encouraged, something they are in need of, and a rallying point which I should say is a virtual necessity. I am forwarding you the letter I had from Frs. Durin and Navarre. You for your part should write to them also asking them to be patient and remain confident.

Cheerio, my friend. Wholly yours and all the best to everybody in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The Municipal Council of Issoudun has, on November 13, in a fresh declaration, asked the ministry for my dismissal as parish priest, as if I were an expelled Jesuit and enemy of the government. The Indre Prefect, giving support to these absurd demands, forwarded them to His Grace asking that the request be met. His Grace sent me a copy of the Prefect's letter advising me that the best thing to do would be to stay silent and do nothing for the time being. I don't know what approach will be resorted to by His Grace when dealing with this issue. As for myself, I have decided to assert my rights as long as Rome does not think otherwise.

Dear Father,

It was too late when you sent on your article. It will be in the next issue... I very much regret Fr. Durin's precipitateness, his letters written without giving serious thought, and his mind made up. I fear he will compromise our mission. Write asking him to keep calm, be prudent, not looking to achieve the impossible, and engage considerably with his confrères since it seems he is handling them roughly. He had no need to become furious with the Jesuits and have a row about what belonged to them. I fear the worst because he has lost his head. What an example is this with regard to the colony? Fr. Durin has written a letter to a gentleman in Lyons rather like the one he wrote to me in which he rages against the colony, the administrators, the Marquis of Rays, etc. This man doesn't know what to think or say. He has written about it to Mr. Sumier, etc. I am very annoyed.

Your article is very good, it will please people. Have you given thought to the chapter you promised me for the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart: the power of the saints over the Heart of Jesus? May I still expect it, and shortly? In all candour, let me know as I need to be told.

Dear Father,

Like yourself I regret Fr. Durin's precipitateness. In his place I would have done my utmost to go to Port Breton. What is to be done now? I believe he is not short of money, and cannot get on at all with his companions. This situation worries me. What do you think I should say to Cardinal Simeoni? He knows better than we do what has to be done. He should try, if it is possible, to extricate Fr. Durin from such embarrassment.

I am forwarding a letter from Fr. Giroux. It doesn't surprise me. I replied that he should make the request himself if he continued on this course and make representation to the Bishop, sending me the reply. Then I shall forward it to you. The Redemptorist Fathers, it appears, are in Barcelona and want to set themselves up there. They are keen on getting the former St. John of God building which our confrères would like to buy.

What is to be done?

Issoudun, February 12, 1882

Dear Father,

My sincere thanks for your kind letters.

1. I fully agree that Fr. Miniot should replace you in Rome while you are away. As he is with Fr. Guyot for the past 8 days giving a mission due to last 4 weeks, I wrote to him conveying to him your wishes and my own. I asked Fr. Guyot to let him go on Ash Wednesday so that he could be in Rome on the first Sunday of Advent. Write to him yourself: this is his address: Saint-Clément, by Mayet de Montagné (Allier).
2. It is best that you go yourself alone to Lyons to petition the committees of the Propagation of Faith and Catholic Missions on behalf of our mission, Fr. Durin and his colleagues. The situation worries me; what is going to become of them? Are they really in Amboina? I haven't yet received any letter from them, or any official information. I dread things.
3. As for the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) there is no question of sending you the youngsters we have there. Try to recruit some in Italy from good backgrounds; that would be marvellous.
4. Keep Fr. Hartzler until he gets his doctorate. Then we might, perhaps, send him to America as a replacement for Fr. Giraux. He could learn English, which is absolutely necessary, and after one or two sojourns we could send him to Fr. Durin.
5. As for the three philosophers who couldn't pass their doctorates, leave them completely focused on theology since that is your proposal.
6. I am happy about our undertakings since you are going to Marseilles. Your presence, your words, your zeal will draw (financial) resources to Rome and vocations for the Society. But take care and look after yourself.
7. And what is happening about the Spanish house? I don't hear any more about their new purchase, or anything from Fr. Casas.
8. Mother Felicity is quite impossible. Nothing can be done with her. She no longer wants to rent out or make part of the large house available for new vocations who would be part of the Community of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. She has rejected all attempts at reconciliation from the side of the Archbishop. Not only does she not want in any way to be part of this work, but in no way whatsoever does she want to co-operate. Could this work begin freshly in Rome? Could you find a house suitable for 6 or 8? Could you take it over? Madame Boucheron, I believe, would pay for the rent. These ladies have nothing to live on! Madame Hartzler is paying out 500 francs in rent (about 1,540 euros), Madame Sabourain perhaps as much, and Mademoiselle Joséphine, brought along from Niort by Fr. Bontemps, 2 or 300 francs. The three others are sisters brought in by Mother Felicity - Sisters Claire, Emilie and Madeleine - who have nothing (financially).

Claire Dessailly, born at Abret, was professed at Issoudun in 1876, having entered earlier the Sisters of the Holy Name of Jesus. She was one of the three sisters who stayed close to Chevalier during the first eight years of the Society and went to Papua New Guinea with the first group of missionary OLSH Sisters, arriving at Yule Island in 1887 and staying there until her death in 1930.

Emilie-Désirée Sassin, born at Rouen in 1830, was a member of the Dames of Jesus Christ until she was thirty, then entered the Holy Name Sisters in Paris and then came to the OLSH in Issoudun. She went to Belgium and died there in 1913.

Madeleine, born Albertine Masselin at Bayeux, March 12, 1844, having been with the Holy Name of Jesus Sisters, became an OLSH Sister, September 9, 1884, and arrived at Yule Island in 1887, dying there on July 21, 1937. Almost blind in her latter years, she learned to type in order to write her memoirs.

9. Your contributions (for the Annals), following my journey to Rome, are insignificant to say no more. You send us your prints and your excuses most of the time. Nevertheless, I am sending you 1,500 francs (roughly 4,640 euros); this is all I can give you at present.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, February 14, 1882

Dear Father,

The letter you have sent on to me disconcerts me, but it doesn't surprise me. We must wait to hear everything from Fr. Durin. The more he builds himself up, the more, without justifying reasons, it becomes seriously depressing for him. This latest experience bares, opens up, his character and should rid us for good of any ideas we had of placing him in charge of any kind of work whatsoever. This escapade, for that is what it is, provides us with an example of what is to be expected from him. He could compromise everything and draw down upon us the most serious consequences. He is wholly caught up in his own ideas and totally lacking in judgment. If the worthy Fr. Durin returns, which is more than likely, his presence in France is out of the question. You can have him in Rome where you can do what you can with him, or, otherwise, if you haven't anything for him, he could be sent as a simple religious to Barcelona under the supervision of Fr. Deidier. He cannot go back to America. He would create havoc in the Watertown house. I do not want him under any circumstances in Issoudun where he would be the world's laughing stock.

If you find out that Fr. Navarre is in Singapore or Batavia, send a telegram to him immediately, or write if telegrams don't go there, asking him to stay in Batavia under the patronage of the Bishop, or in Singapore, awaiting what we shall advise they should do next. We shall first discuss the issue with His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni and the Port Breton colony. Even a temporary abandonment of this Melanesia mission would bring disgrace on our Society and be disastrous; it would be a shattering blow for the Holy See and a wincing slap in the face to Cardinal Simeoni. We must at all costs continue. Fr. Navarre could be put in charge, Fr. Cramaille would be his assistant, and we would try to add one or two more priests. If you hear that Fr. Navarre and his companions are returning to Europe with Fr. Durin, which would be a disaster, get them to come to Rome and keep them there until we have arranged their departure for Melanesia, or, otherwise, if you cannot have them, they could go to Barcelona; they must not return to France. If you do not receive any news from these unfortunate confrères before you leave (for Barcelona), give orders that, if they arrive in Rome following embarkation, they should remain there until new instructions arrive as to where they should go.

Come to Issoudun, before you go to Marseilles for Lent. We shall consider this sad business, chat about it, and then decide on the measures to be taken to avoid the scandal arising from this abandonment, or, rather, this débâcle. My God, what a cruel blow yet again! Fr. Navarre's faculties do not include that of giving Confirmation.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J. See you soon.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Say nothing to our confrères in Rome or elsewhere about this sad business. I wrote a few days ago to Fr. Piperon to go and see Bishop Panier, asking him to see the Dutch King in order to obtain for our Oceania confrères necessary authorization.

Dear Father,

Your return to France has hurt me deeply. I am amazed that on disembarking at Brindisi you did not go to Rome immediately to make known to the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda in person the reasons for your abandonment of the mission for which you were made responsible by the Holy See.

The aggressive, embittered, letters which you wrote prior to your departure from Manila and Singapore, to a number of people, about the Port Breton colony and its administration, have created a disastrous impact and led to a great deal of indignation. I received numerous complaints which I passed on to Fr. Jouët who will bring this up with you. Why did you have to let yourself go like this? In your situation, and given the role you had undertaken, it would have been both prudent and charitable to suspend judgment. Try to set about restoring your health as quickly as possible. Fr. Jouët will let you know what is to be expected of you until you are given a new posting. You will have had good reason to think that your presence at Issoudun in the present circumstances would have a very bad effect. I do not want you to be at the forefront for the time being; stay in the shadows, without being noticed.

My Lord,

I have heard from His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni, and His Excellency Bishop Panier, nuncio at La Haye whom I know very well, about your interest in my confrères who are going to their Melanesian and Micronesian mission. Before they could reach the natives they have been sorely tried. Happily, My Lord, God has put you, like a Providential angel, in their way to guide, support and help them. May you be blessed, My Lord! I shall be lastingly grateful for all your good-heartedness as apostle and Bishop in what you have done, and will continue to do, for these poor Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

The Superior of the mission, Fr. Durin, had to return to France as a result of a painful illness(!) and Fr. Navarre it is who has replaced him. Cardinal Simeoni, Prefect of Propaganda, is due to send him his faculties (authorization) at Batavia. If, while waiting there, you could make use of my confrères in your episcopal town, or elsewhere, I shall be very much obliged to you. Once their powers (authorization) have come from Rome, they will proceed, in keeping with your wise counsel, to New France, which for the time being will be their mission headquarters.

Please, together with my sincere gratitude, accept my respectful good wishes in C.J.

I am surprised that I haven't yet had any letter from you. Meanwhile you should have written to me about your meeting with Fr. Durin and the views of Fr. Sumier. The unfortunate Fr. Durin has replied to my letter which you gave him. His reply, which I enclose here, is an entanglement of blindness, poor judgment, pride, stupidity and bad faith! What is to be done with someone like this? His behaviour distresses me. I am constantly feeling very tired. Everything which has been going on is not likely to help me. After you left, I didn't leave my room. I don't see any improvement. I am more so than ever deprived of sleep and without an appetite. I am extremely weak. Pray for me. We must forward to good Fr. Navarre all the faculties which he needs as Superior of the mission. Will you look after this with Cardinal Simeoni?

Durin, asking to be forgiven for all the upset he has brought on us all. He is willing to go to Madame Gretton in England. (On the latter, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late.) Would it not be better for him to consider returning to Port Breton, consider the situation at first hand and then come back to make a report to Rome? Dear Father, Fr. Durin is an enigma...., his spirit more seriously ill than his body. Fr. Marie has written me a letter which I am forwarding to you; he favours Fr. Durin for dealing with the Port Breton issues. What are we to do? What does Fr. Sumier think? Does the Marquis de Rays wish to send some colonists to Port Breton? Should our confrères try to go there? Wouldn't this be the best thing for them?

Have you written to Cardinal Simeoni presenting Fr. Navarre to him as Superior and asking him to send on immediately to Batavia his faculties, so that they can get away from the impasse they are in as quickly as possible, otherwise it could be disastrous for the mission and the reputation of our Society? As soon as our confrères have reached New France we shall send them more personnel. Fr. Le Jacq will have finished his Novitiate and could leave with some good lay brothers. Fr. Thomas de Lyon is willing to make himself available for this endangered mission. He came forward to commit himself spontaneously and without reservations. What is your view? My health is not getting better; quite the contrary. Pray and have prayers said.

Dear Father,

I am getting better. Thank you for your prayers. I began saying Mass today. I am forwarding you a letter from Fr. Piperon who thinks like yourself that the mission should continue. I am also enclosing the latest letters from Fr. Durin, who seems to be more calmed down. I advised him that he shouldn't begin to say as yet that he was leaving his mission, leaving it to be understood that he had returned to ensure its success, and then after Port Breton this was no longer possible (sic). I advised him to take off of his own accord for Holland, get in touch with Bishop Panici and look for an audience with the King asking his permission to set ourselves up in one of the islands nearest to New Guinea, at Timor, or, for example, at Ceram (Seram) or at Aru. If he succeeds, which I do not doubt he will, our confrères Fathers Navarre and Cramaille would go to one of those islands which are part of the Vicariate of Melanesia. And on setting themselves up we would send them reinforcements, preserving thereby the good name of our Society, our prestige restored, and the Holy See made happy. After all this we now know that the Port Breton undertaking is aborted, and is not to be further considered. It seems to me that what I have proposed is the only prudent and practical suggestion for the time being; what do you think?

Issoudun, March 9, 1882

Dear Father,

I am forwarding another letter from the unfortunate Fr. Durin. When dealing with him one doesn't know what to think, say, or do. The best course, I believe, would be to leave him alone, and become no longer involved with him. But he, for his part, will he leave us alone? I doubt it, given the nature of his character... I wrote to Mr. Sumier. Read it yourself before passing it in to him. I believe that these individuals resort to unbalanced observations in their newspaper, compromising both the mission and the name of our Society. Try and get them to be more discreet, balanced and prudent.

My health continues to get better; thank you for your prayers. Advise as a very serious issue Fr. Barral not to be begging any longer from the helpers and associates with his insensitive appeals, printed in massive numbers, in support of the restoration of the Rome church (St. James of the Spanish). From France, Belgium and elsewhere, enormous bundles are being sent back to us, and there are complaints about our appeals being inopportune. You yourself should try to avoid trying people's patience and drying up resources, and, please, give over this propagandizing which has become very annoying. Do you really need to have so much printed out? What pointless expense! What a waste of money! What a waste of money in the Rome foundation! Why do you act so quickly, not waiting for the Providential moment?

It seems that Fr. Deidier is suffering greatly, the humidity, lack of air and sun in the house where he is staying is affecting his health. A change of residence would appear to be necessary, so he writes to me. Have they (the MSCs in Barcelona) in mind all the time the former house of the St. John of God Brothers? The Redemptorists would like it also, but we are favoured with first choice. What is to be done? A decision must be made. One would like to buy this house for 110,000 francs (about 340,750 euros). Should we make some such arrangement, or pass it up and try to set ourselves up elsewhere? But where, and on what conditions? Should we stay with the provisional situation? Fr. Morgades, who has been made bishop, cannot do anything for them any more. There should be an additional priest in the Barcelona house, and another with Fr. Casas, but who can be sent there? Having read the last issue of Nouvelle France, a parish priest sent me the enclosed letter. You can judge for yourself. Let me know what you think of our confrères in Batavia. What must be done in relation to them and their mission? Do you agree with what I said to Mr. Sumier on this issue?

Issoudun, March 14, 1882

Dear Father,

I am forwarding the piece for insertion in Nouvelle France. I believe it wise not to say or write anything beforehand. Many are unaware that Fr. Durin has returned. In naming Fathers Navarre and Cramaille, it would be normal to be asked what has happened to Fr. Durin. Have you written to Cardinal Simeoni asking him to send Fr. Navarre powers (authorization) as Superior of the mission and his being a replacement for Fr. Durin, whose health, seriously affecting him, has necessitated his return? You might ask him (Simeoni) to let you know when his letter was sent to Batavia for Fr. Navarre. The last letter from Fr. Navarre, which you read at Issoudun, mentions straightforwardly that he must go to Port Breton and is ready to leave, that the problems must not discourage them! God is on the side of his own, and they must not have less zeal than the Protestant ministers, etc.; and, besides, the honour of the Society and the wishes of the Holy See make it a duty to go forward and not abandon the mission.

Meet with Mr. Sumier and ask him when the Marquis de Rays will be definitely able to take our confrères to Port Breton, or directly to Cooktown if they have to go there, and which they mention, and then forward to Nouvelle France.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier.

Look after your health; take care. Fr. Durin no longer wants to go to England; he would like to go back to America. I am at a loss to know what to do. I forbade him to go to Watertown. He wanted to give a lecture in Paris against Port Breton. I sent a telegram to him specifically forbidding it, and I can only hope he obeyed me. It is being said that he is experiencing a softening of the brain. I can well believe it!

Dear Father,

The unfortunate Fr. Durin leaves this coming Saturday for America. He has written outrageous letters to me, threatening us if money is not sent to him. Despite all the sacrifices already made, I sent him 1,000 francs (about 3,090 euros) to rid ourselves of him. But I did inform him that he made this journey at his own risk and responsibility, and that in no way was I taking responsibility for it. As for his nephew, Fr. Piperon does not want to accept him in the Novitiate, finding no evidence of a vocation, and this is also our view. Father Barral must be written to and asked to send him home to his family.

In the jottings you have left me for the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, I do not find that your remarks are correct, as for example in the St. Gertrude text: "Ita Domina Regina, tu optime potes mihi imperare", etc. you say: Book I, Chapter III. I have nothing for this text. Where is this text to be found? For the Blessed (later Saint) Margaret Mary text: "I have promised you will receive my Heart's treasures", etc., you say that it is in the first volume, p.145. I don't see it there, certainly not for the reference given. As for your long Latin text: "Quis ingentem Deiparae potentiam; non miretur", etc., you merely say "oratio" (prayer), but whose? What is the author's name? Is it St. Ephrem, Saint Germain, etc.? This is important! Please send on this information to me immediately. Cheerio.

Wholly yours in C.J.

A shocking scandal has come to light in Chateauroux. The Superior of the Saint Pierre school has fled having behaved improperly with the youngsters. The establishment is closed down; the youngsters sent home to their families. The impact has been appalling.

I held over writing to you, my child, because we had to write to Fr. Piperon to discuss with him the object of your request. He is not willing to accept you for the time being because of your return from Oceania. He thinks that your presence would have a very bad impact. In a few years, if you are still interested, we shall reconsider the matter. You must, therefore, leave the Rome house as soon as possible, my child, and return to your family at Decize. Fr. Barral will provide the money needed to do so. We shall pray earnestly for you. Goodbye, my child. I give you my blessing.

All good wishes in the Lord.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, in Spain.

Issoudun, March 22, 1882

Dear Father,

I have just now received your letter for Lyons and Propaganda. I am sending off straightaway the one for Lyons. I enclose in this envelope the Cardinal Prefect's letter which I want you to send to his address. I have, as you see, added on a word. Yesterday I got a letter from Fr. Lannuzel, to whom I wrote in November commending our confrères to him. His reply is very significant and comes at the appropriate moment. Make a copy of this letter, or have it copied, and send it to Cardinal Simeoni if you think it would be helpful. It throws fresh light on the Port Breton issues. Judging by this letter I gather that our confrères who are in Batavia must go to Sydney and from there to Cooktown where they will be warmly received, and from Cooktown they will go to New Britain where they will meet Fr. Lannuzel. I believe then, Fr., that the forwarding of Fr. Navare's faculties must be hastened, with the journey set out by Fr. Lannuzel pointed out to them. What do you think? I said to the Lyons' President (Catholic supportive agency) that if he could forward straightaway the amount set aside for our mission, I would have it delivered by one or two of our confrères whom I am selecting for this mission. Do you agree with this? And Spain, what have you to say about it? You haven't replied to me on this issue. Should the St. John of God monastery be bought? They are asking for about 50,000 francs (about 154,880 euros). Fr. Thomas of Limoges is prepared to give 20,000 francs. I would try to find 30,000, borrowing. In whose name should it be bought? Who is to be sent there with Fr. Deidier as he is asking for someone? And also someone for Fr. Casas who is by himself. Fr. Ramot has written telling me that Fr. Grom is in bed laid up with pleurisy, but he thinks he is out of danger. And he informs me as well that Fr. Giroux is in bed with an attack of articular rheumatism. Who can we send to him (Ramot)?

Cheerio, Father.

Issoudun, April 8, 1882

Dear Father,

I am sending on the 2,550 francs due to you for the previous three months. It was impossible to provide any more. Cut down on your expenses in Rome. Fr. Durin's hot-headedness cost us more than 2,000 francs. Fr. Ramot (at Watertown) is very annoyed by the lavish expenses of his predecessor. He had to send him 1,500 francs. Fr. Piberon bewails that the youngsters in the Petite Oeuvre are costing too much. Add to all this the quite considerable shortfall in our intake. We have had nothing for you other than a great number of pictures and religious objects. As far as offerings are concerned, there's nothing.

You are doing the right thing to go back to Rome as soon as possible, as your presence there is absolutely necessary. Unless it is necessary, of which you be the judge yourself, leave over the trip to Gerra.

2. We heard with great sadness of dear Brother Neenan's death in Rome. We are remembering him in our prayers.

William Neenan died on April 7, cared for by his classmate, the future Bishop Verjus; see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, W. Neenan, for further details.

3. Georges Durin is due to be conscripted. He is deaf, not very bright, stubborn like his uncle, and an awkward character. For all these reasons, Fr. Piberon did not want him in the Novitiate, and I, from the same perspective, asked him to return to his family who were advised beforehand about his return.

Short sighted? Too superficial, prejudicial? So it would seem. Georges Durin died a nonagenarian Salesian priest following an apostolically meritorious life, 1860-1950.

Fr. Barral writes in great praise of a young man who wants to stay on as a lay brother in the Rome house. I replied and asked him to await your return and you would pay serious attention to the matter.

4. Will that good little priest who is acting parish priest in Rome be soon about to enter the Novitiate? The sooner the better. Be ready to take this up!
5. In the affirmative, with regard to Fr. Darbois (sic); I completely approve of your arrangements. You may tell and encourage him to go to the Novitiate. He will be a splendid acquisition.

Jules Darbon, Chevalier spelt the name wrongly, was born in Marseilles, April 4, 1862; he arrived as a postulant at Tilburg this year, 1882, but left in June 1883 for health reasons. He went back to the Novitiate in July 1884, but he was not accepted.

6. If you think Fr. Barral would be suitable in Barcelona, you could have Fr. Miniot. Look into this and consider the matter.
7. Fr. Ramot has written to say that Fr. Giroux suffers a great deal from articular rheumatism, that the Watertown climate does not agree with him, and that he is looking for a placement elsewhere. He tells me also that Fr. has inflammation of the lungs, and he fears that the harsh climate may well necessitate a request to return to France. What can be done for Fr. Ramot as he cannot be left alone? Should we send him someone? But who? Or shall we leave this house? This last would be disastrous. Well then! Who are the people we should send to him? He needs two.

Ramot, in this particular context, remains true to his basic motivation, never really keen on being in Watertown himself, a setting he thought to be of little advantage to the MSCs.

8. The Council for the Propagation of the Faith sent me the enclosed letter. I found it difficult to reply, but eventually I replied as best I could.
9. We cannot leave our confrères in Batavia indefinitely. Fr. Navarre is awaiting orders to leave. But before contacting him about leaving I would like to know for certain if Cardinal Simeoni has sent on to him the documents appointing him Superior of the mission. The way to go for our confrères in Batavia would be through Sydney and then on to Cooktown where they will find Fr. Bucas, referred to by Fr. Lannuzel. And, once arrived in Cooktown, they will take the first opportunity to depart for Port Breton or for New Britain where Fr. Lannuzel is. The plan of the Marquis de Rays to make our confrères his own private missionaries, exclusively associated with his undertakings, is impractical because it is fundamentally at odds with the mission confided to us, according to the wishes of the Holy See, that we undertake work in Melanesia and Micronesia. (This last is a particularly significant, and important, reading and interpretation of the situation by Chevalier.) It is for the present, then, understandable, that we help the Marquis de Rays as much as possible. But if the heads of colonies, or the colonies themselves, make life intolerable for missionaries, they (missionaries) should leave. The Marquis projects himself like a Pope King. The poor man; how many more disappointments lie in store for him? I wrote to the Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith that in the event of their giving us the amount of money requested, I would have it sent out to Fr. Navarre in Batavia immediately by one of my confrères here in France.

NB: I am sending you on the new book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart so that you can look through it in Rome and get it approved with a brief. This last would be marvellous. You may take out and correct whatever you think is called for.

Cheerio, my friend; look after your prized health!
Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, April 23, 1882

Dear Father,

Thank you for your kind letter. Fr. Deidier, without advising me beforehand, has bought a house beside the railway line about ten minutes from Barcelona. Did you know about this? In any case I am sending his letter on to you. He wishes at all costs to be rid of Fr. Marie and wants to keep Fr. Miniot. The pathetic Fr. Chatelat doesn't want to obey Fr. Bontemps any longer. He dreams of an independent life, etc. Besides, I released him from his vows which, anyway, were only temporary. It's a sad state of affairs. Who can be made available to Fr. Bontemps? And what can be done with Fr. Casas at Arevalo? He cannot be left alone, being neither prudent or good for him. Fr. Guyot is opposed to leaving him at Arevalo. Where can one place him once again?

The Treasury department of the Propagation of the Faith has asked me for a statement on the mission of our Oceania confrères. I replied to the best of my ability 15 days ago, asking for financial support and I haven't had a reply. Fr. Cramaille wrote me a letter from Batavia dated March 10 and I got it six days ago. It was the Bishop's nephew, Fr. Claessens, returning to Europe for health reasons, who brought it and posted it in France. Fr. Cramaille tells me that their health is very good despite the 29 degrees of heat and the virtually continuous rain. The Bishop is very good to them, and has given them much responsibility. This is all very well, but their mission is not there. The time spent in this country will help them to acclimatize, and that is a very good outcome. As long as they haven't reached New Britain or Port Breton we shall be discredited in the eyes of the public. I believe that they should leave as soon as possible for Sydney, first, then for Cooktown and from there for their mission. If His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni had forwarded to Fr. Navarre his powers as Superior, I would order our confrères to leave immediately. Would you be kind enough to find this out and let me know. And has Fr. Denis made his report, do you know him?

The Marquis de Rays has written me a long letter in which he outlines his new programme. He wants the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart to be his missionaries, missionaries of the New France, with Fr. Navarre parish priest of Port Breton and a member of the municipal administration. Given this situation, he says, that he (Fr. Navarre) will be given a financial salary of ten thousand francs (about 31,000 euros!). Such and similar pretensions are absurd and opposed to the aims and intentions of Rome. I am about to reply to the Marquis de Rays informing him that our confrères are being sent by the Holy See to Melanesia and Micronesia, not to Nouvelle France. What are your views on all this?

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Article 921

L 18820429

To the Marquis de Rays.

Issoudun, April 29, 1882

Dear Marquis,

I read most carefully the letter you kindly sent to me through the intermediary of Mr. Roubaud. Like yourself I regret the colony's failure. Like me you acknowledge that the unfortunate features which characterize it led inexorably towards bringing about this disaster. I regret all the more so that your proposal, motivated by the faith and patriotism which characterize you, could, if well executed, have led to wonderful results. It is beyond doubt, Marquis, that had you been better supported the ship taking my confrères to Port Breton would not have been impounded when ready to leave, and you would not have to deplore at this moment the collapse of your enterprise, while I myself would not have to undergo the disappointment brought about by the return of Fr. Durin, so unfortunately misinterpreted, nor the annoyance in having my confrères still in Batavia, virtually without resources and far away from the mission assigned to them by the Holy See.

You wish, you declare, to go ahead again with this colonizing, I very much support it also. But do not deceive yourself, Marquis, the undertaking is more difficult now than it was at first. To succeed you must have someone in charge of the undertaking who is another yourself, inspiring unlimited confidence through his moral, intellectual and openly Christian qualities. Besides, the first colonists and their early leaders should be before all else fervent Catholics, irreproachable with respect to morality and honesty. You will, perhaps, Marquis, be drawn to reply as in your first letter to me: "What do you wish for when one cannot, when a colony is starting up, always choose families, and one is often obliged to make do with those who come forward?" The unfortunate experience you have been subjected to will have opened your eyes.

As for my confrères, they are still in Batavia, and I await the latest instructions from Propaganda before giving them orders to leave. Fr. Jouët has written to me to say that Fr. Denis has arrived in Rome frightfully thin and run-down. He is preparing, so it seems, a report for His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni; he will be speaking from first-hand knowledge. Only on receiving this report will His Eminence pass on to me his latest thoughts. Will he order my confrères to go straight to Port Breton, associated with so many scandals, and where, as it happens, there is no one there any longer? I very much doubt it. I believe, rather, that he will advise them in the first place to go to New Guinea where, in the judgment of Fr. Lannuzel, there are already significant possibilities, and from there they could branch out to the nearby islands. In any event, they will stop over in Sydney where they will, at your request, see Fr. de la Croix, and then go on to Cooktown. If, as is likely, they come across some colonists, they could take them along with them. As soon as I come to know of their departure from Batavia, I shall let you have the news as quickly as possible.

I have the honour to be, Marquis, your Excellency's respectful and humble servant in C.J.

Dear Father,

You should have had, through the intermediary of Mr. Roubaud, ex public notary (solicitor) in Marseilles, a lengthy description by the Marquis de Rays on the deplorable state of the colony, together with a letter from Mr. Sumier which should inform you from the side of the Marquis that, given the complete abandonment of Port Breton, there is no reason for our confrères to be there any longer. I am sending you a copy of the letter I have written to him. I haven't yet had a reply from the Paris Council for the Propagation of the Faith. If His Eminence thinks that our confrères should leave for New Britain, where they will find Fr. Lannuzel awaiting them, by way of Sydney and Cooktown, which is what I would greatly like, I shall take myself to Paris immediately to expedite the Propagation of the Faith's contribution.

Fr. Piperon writes to say that he bought the former factory in Tilburg, already mentioned, to put our work into place there (about 35,000 francs; 108,420 euros or so). He believes it is a worthwhile purchase. As regards Fr. Denis, what is happening? What do you think about our brethren in Barcelona? What is to be done about Fr. Casas? Fr. Guyot's view is that he should be ordered to return to Rome or go to the Novitiate. This is somewhat harsh! Fr. Morisseau thinks the same, but Fr. Piperon believes that nothing should be done too precipitately.

Cheerio, wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Fr. Navarre,

I have gathered that His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni has appointed you Superior of the mission and provides you with the powers Fr. Durin had. (There is no extant copy of these powers!) His Eminence would like you to leave as soon as possible for Sydney and Cooktown with Fr. Cramaille and Brother Fromm. (For the latter, see more fully Twohig, Late But Not Too Late.) His Eminence will give you commendatory letters for the Archbishop of Sydney (Moran), for Bishop Cani, Rockhampton, Queensland (its first bishop, since January 3 this year, 1882, formerly Vicar General to Bishop O'Quinn, Brisbane's first bishop. Cani had, on the instructions of Cardinal Simeoni, paid a visit to New Guinea, especially the coastal area), and he had a letter for the Apostolic Administrator of Cooktown, Bishop Fortni. At Cooktown you will meet Fr. Bucas, a Breton priest who is very supportive of us. He will be very helpful to you. From Cooktown you will go to New Britain where you will meet Fr. Lannuzel. This excellent priest has just written to me from Cooktown, and would appear to like us very much. He will be a great help to you. Write to me from Batavia letting me know the date of your departure. If Bishop Claessens (Vicar Apostolic of Batavia) can provide you with 5,000 francs (roughly 15,480 euros), accept it, and he can charge it to me for reimbursement or I could give it to his nephew (the priest) when he is returning to Batavia. If this is not possible, borrow at a bank in Batavia or Sydney, and I shall reimburse them in the same way. You will let me know what you have done either by letter or telegram. Once arrived in Sydney send me a telegram immediately to keep me informed. Write often, very often to me. In reply to your letter from Surabaya (the second city in Indonesia, on the island's north coast), I wrote to you in Batavia. Did you get my letter? Stay assured, my friend, the Sacred Heart will bless you. When I come to know that you have arrived at your mission, I shall send you some confrères who would like to commit themselves like yourselves.

Cheerio, Father; my regards to everybody, and my respects and sincere gratitude to Bishop Claessens for all the kindness he has shown to you.

Cheerio, then, my blessing.

To Father Xavier Deidier, MSC, San Gervasio, Barcelona.

Issoudun, May 20, 1882

Dear Father,

I am pleased to know that your health has improved since you went to San Gervasio. May your strength be restored to what it was before! It would appear that your new residence is very suitable, but will it be so for the success of our undertakings in Barcelona, and for the future of our endeavours? There are different views about this. The issue, then, must be closely considered. Then, having experienced the matter, you will consider whether it is best to stay there or consider returning to the centre of Barcelona. The confiscation of our properties with which we are being threatened and a new wave of persecution not likely to be long delayed, make it necessary for us to consider different foundations abroad. It is for this reason the situation at Barcelona must be closely considered. It is possible that after Confirmation (in the Issoudun parish) I shall make a trip to Barcelona to look closely at the situation with the rest of you. Let not your wish, Fr., to have Fr. Marie elsewhere than in Barcelona, lead you to be imprudent or indiscreet. Never make use of my name to work towards your own purposes, at least when I have said nothing positive to you. If I reply to what you share with one in confidence, or share certain things with you, it is only for yourself alone. As local Superior, it is for yourself to assign to your confrères the tasks which you consider appropriate for them. It is your responsibility also to withdraw them if you think it helpful. You are responsible for your house and the observance of the Rule and Constitutions. But please do not place me at the front of everything. (Deidier must not take refuge in Chevalier's name and authority as justifying his every decision or action.) Take on all your responsibilities and handle tactfully the Superior General's authority. Let Fr. Marie frankly know what you think, what you want. Set out for him what is expected of him. He has sufficient virtue to obey you. He will make a thousand observations to you. Keep yourself in check. Look for what seems to you helpful and necessary for discipline and good order in the house. And if there is insubordination on his part, which I do not think is likely, then you may bring it to my notice and I shall intervene.

You complain that Fr. Marie is excessively taken up with matters outside and not nearly as involved with his community, makes far too many visits, is excessively taken up with the direction of sisters and their works, etc., etc. Take advantage of the move to San Gervasio to make clear to him in all candour that your wishes are none other than those of the Rule. This way of proceeding straight from the beginning is a hundred times better than recourse to détours (going round in circles). I wrote to the dear sister saying that since I was not on the spot, I could not reach a decision, and that it was you who could best decide what could or could not be done.

I have had a letter from our dear missionaries in Batavia. All are getting on very well. Cardinal Simeoni has forwarded to Fr. Navarre his powers as mission Superior with the request to leave as soon as possible for New Guinea by way of Sydney and Cooktown.

Cheerio, my friend.

Wholly yours in C.J. and greetings to Fr. Miniot.

We shall come back to this. The Council for the Propagation of the Faith in Paris asked me for information on our missionaries a month ago. I replied to them. I wrote again to them eight days ago, but no reply. What is the significance of this studied silence? Once the Sacred Congregation does not approve the invocation "Heart of Joseph", etc., it will have to be replaced by that of St. Joseph, or a pro nobis. Here there is nothing else to report except that there is a lot of boredom.

2. No, I have had nothing from the Propagation of the Faith in Lyons or Paris, despite our requests. You will, perhaps, be more fortunate. Financial aid is all the more needed since our confrères will more or less be short of money by the time they arrive in Cooktown, and I asked Fr. Navarre, anticipating their needs, to take a loan of 5,000 francs (about 15,480 euros) from my account.
3. Fr. Giroux forwards his request to be released from vows; I am sending it on to you.
4. Yes, we need to get back into favour with Propaganda. A thousand thanks for all the efforts you have made in favour of Fr. Navarre and his mission. The Port Breton colony seems to me completely abandoned.

I got Brother Brisalier's dispensation. The Council for the Propagation of the Faith has informed me that it has agreed to make 10,000 francs (about 30,970 euros) available to me for our Melanesia mission. Thank especially His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni. I wrote to Fr. Navarre today asking him to withdraw on my account that sum of 10,000 francs. I am sending on to you Fr. To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, June 18, 1882

Dear Father,

It was impossible to answer you sooner. I am certainly of the same opinion as His Eminence, and it is also your own view. I want the unfortunate and dear Fr. Durin to stay on as parish priest of Our Lady of Victories, Boston, or as a chaplain, while continuing to be a Missionary of the Sacred Heart and in dependence, so far as this is possible, on the Superior General of the Society. If Fr. Durin becomes prudent, reasonable, and, especially, submissive, if he provides us with guarantees of stability and administrative wisdom, we might perhaps consider associating his work with ourselves, and send him helpers with the approval of the Archbishop of Boston. I would prefer this outcome to an immediate disengagement. In any event, something must be tried.

We fully agree to the sub-diaconate ordination of our young men if you judge them to be suitable and ready.

Mr. Roubaud, former Marseilles solicitor who represented the Marquis of Rays, is imprisoned by governmental order together with the other representatives of the Port Breton colony in Paris and Le Havre. It was Mr. Roubaud's sister who gave me this sad item of news. We must wait to hear more of this.

Mother Felicity has left Issoudun and will not be returning there. She is, it appears, going to Lyons with the Daughters of Calvary (Dames du Calvaire). She says she will sell or lease her Issoudun house. Her Turin business agent must come here to arrange all this. What boredom!

Rome is very preoccupied with the revolution (in Italy) at the present time! Are you not worried about your church, your house, and your young men?

50,000 francs (about 154,880 euros) have been made available to me for the foundation of a house by us in England or Ireland, but when can we do that? The intention is that we buy immediately a property in England or Ireland for the sum being made available. What is your view? Should we give it immediate attention? (For further detail, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, Vol. 1, p91-103, Jouët greatly involved.)

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

These letters from Fr. Durin could be of use to you. I received a letter from Fr. Cramaille positively stating that he was never opposed to the Melanesia mission. On the contrary, his view, well considered, is that we should keep it at all costs. This, likewise, is the view of Fr. Navarre. Poor Fr. Durin.

To Bishop Claessens, Vicar Apostolic of Batavia.

Issoudun, June 22, 1882

My Lord,

I feel the need once more to thank Your Lordship for all the kindness with which you favoured my confrères and the keen interest with which you so graciously favour our Society. Fr. Navarre gives me to understand that if I could provide you with some good missionaries for your huge Vicariate, your intention would be in the near future to confide on us, with the approval of the Holy See, a taking forward of your work, or the setting up of another Vicariate in the huge expanse of territory confided to your apostolic zeal.

What Chevalier writes here is to be understood in the context of Navarre's May 1, 1882 letter to Chevalier.

If this is your wish, My Lord, I should like to become aware of it in order to probe the possibility of having a special seminary in Holland for the evangelization of overseas Dutch possessions. We have a house of our Society near Bois-le-Duc in Holland, being the Bishop's country residence. There we have our Scholasticate and Novitiate. The Bishop is very keenly supportive of us, and His Lordship has granted us permission to open an apostolic school at Tilburg in his diocese to support our missions. We have bought a former factory for this important undertaking. We already number among our Scholastics ten Dutch from the Roermond diocese, and there is much apostolic endeavour thanks to the zeal and devotedness of the Ursuline Sisters of Sittard and Venray. If, then, Your Lordship wishes to go ahead with your proposal, we shall return to Holland the young men it has given us, and send them on to Batavia under your direction.

The Propagation of the Faith has granted 10,000 francs (30,970 euros, roughly) towards our Melanesia mission. If my confrères haven't yet left Batavia, I should like, Your Lordship, to give them that amount of money, and you could reclaim it either by cheque or through your nephew, the priest, who is in Europe and will be returning to Batavia. I make bold to commend myself to your good prayers.

I have the honour to be Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant in J.C.

Issoudun, July 3, 1882

Dear Father,

I am sending you on another letter from good Fr. Durin. He is nowhere near Boston. He no longer wants to leave the Society! What a cool customer! What a character! Yesterday I had a telegram from Fr. Navarre telling me of this departure. In keeping with his wishes I am sending it on to you. And have you been looking over the new book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart? What do you think of it? Would you be kind enough to expedite this appraisal? Thank you.

I have arrived back from England. I was very well received by Dr. Clifford, the Bishop of Clifton. (Chevalier uses the French word for diocesan clergy, when in England and Ireland it would be Dr. rather than Monsieur Clifford as Chevalier has it.) He is quite agreeable to accept us (into the diocese). It is (the site) an hour from London and an hour from Dover. We could also set ourselves up there if we needed to. It is a little town of 6,000 inhabitants, with 100 Catholics. This mission would be fully made over to us. The location is appealing and very salubrious. I visited a house which is right beside the Catholic church, a very fine one, which could easily hold 25 or 30 people, and be rented for 1,400 or 1,500 francs (4,330 or 4,640 euros, roughly). I put by in London the 50,000 francs (see above) given to me for the foundation of an undertaking in England or Ireland, waiting the while until we can do so.

For further on the immediate foregoing, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late.

Within fifteen days I shall be travelling to Barcelona. Fr. Deidier is not getting on with Fr. Marie. What is to be done with poor Fr. Deidier? I would very much like to send him to England with a scholastic or Irish student. What do you think?

Cheerio, Father.

The suggestion you offer is the only one to follow. See to it that he leaves straightaway for Gerra with the two priests chosen. They will go there directly and economically as possible. The unfortunate Fr. B. doesn't know anything about this. Once sent away, this terrible scandal will, I hope, be hushed up. Look after these unfortunate young men; do not have them exercising any authority, and never let them out of your sight.

Dear Father,

I am pleased with the success of our dear scholastics, theologians and philosophers. May the Lord be thanked!

1. If you are assured about Brother Roussel you may put him forward for the sub-diaconate. If you make an exception for him because he hasn't made his perpetual vows, it is because of his solid vocation and the requirements of military legislation. You are the judge; I approve.
2. You can, then, direct Fathers Klotz and Hartzler towards Gerra and Fr. Piperon. As soon as they have rested and refreshed themselves, I shall let them know their destination. Ask Fr. Barral to accompany them on their journey; he can take advantage of his visit to Gerra by making his annual retreat. Since I am leaving for Barcelona I shall write to him on my return letting him know what the Council will have decided about the different appointments. Before returning to Rome he must wait at Gerra for my letter. As for Fr. Carrière you may keep him with you while waiting for the appointments to be made.
3. I am sending you on the latest letter from Fr. Durin who no longer wishes to stay at Centerville. What a light head!
4. I am counting on your commitment to look carefully at the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You can make all the corrections and changes called for.
5. Daniel's work is completed on the Our Lady statues. I would prefer not to renew the contract with him and to engage with someone else. We would also be handing over the Rome rights; what are your views on this? What conditions should be laid down?

I received your letter with the comments and your accounts. It's very good. Thank you. My journey passed without being tired. I leave for Barcelona on Sunday night, returning on Friday. Fr. Deidier is not getting on at all with Fr. Marie. He is very quick to take offence. I don't know what to do. I am sending you Fr. Marie's letter. You can judge for yourself. I am also sending you a very confidential letter from Fr. Jouët...

Issoudun, July 23, 1882

Dear Father,

I wrote to Fr. Piperon. He knows about the issues. He is waiting for your travellers. Are they in Paris? I have come back from Barcelona. The San Gervasio house would be very suitable as a novitiate or house of studies, but in no way whatsoever could it become a centre for our undertakings. It would be ridiculous to be situated so high up and so far out. Providentially I found myself in Barcelona at the same time as the Visitor (Provincial) of the St. John of God Brothers who had come to sell their former hospital for which, as you know, a number of buyers had come forward. Aware that I was in Barcelona he came to me with an offer, the conditions of which are very advantageous to us. He would like to sell it to us for 100,000 francs (roughly 309,770 euros), asking only for 40,000 francs on signing the purchase deeds. (I committed myself to have the money ready.) As for the remaining 60,000 francs, half would be paid within one year and the rest over two or three years. Bishop Morgades, whom I saw and with whom I discussed this undertaking, greatly encouraged us to make the deal, offering to pay the interest on the money owed. This is marvellous! He spoke a lot about you. I went to see the Archbishop of Barcelona who was very pleased to hear this news (of the transaction). He promised me that he would keep a missionary priest at the John of God's. I do not think, given all these advantages and all the regard shown us, that we can withdraw from this acquisition. I asked that we be granted 15 days to give a definite answer. Let me have your views on it straightaway. If in the affirmative you can act by proxy through your cousin who will sign on your behalf because you will be included in those making the acquisition. I asked that one month be allowed before the agreement is signed. For the rest if you can be in Barcelona three weeks from now, you can add your own signature. And after that you could stay for a few days to preside over the take-over and see to the necessary repairs. The Bishop must formally have us installed, canonically set up the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in the chapel and baptize the monastery with the name of the Sacred Heart just like Issoudun. Your presence at this time would be very advantageous.

Fr. Deidier cannot stay in Barcelona any longer; he has made things impossible for himself. He accepts with pleasure the invitation to go to England. It was my intention to ask Fr. Guyot to stay on for two or three months in Barcelona when you were obliged to leave. Then we would look to personnel. Fr. Casas would, I am certain, willingly return there. Fr. Miniot would also want go, as well as Fr. Marie who greatly likes being there.

Issoudun, July 28, 1882

Dear Father,

I am sending on Fr. Guyot's letter about the purchase of St. John of God in Barcelona. It expresses in particular a contradictory attitude, refusing such a favourable opportunity! He simply doesn't understand. Opposition of this kind is discouraging! I looked over the house in all its recesses and it is very sound. As for the danger of its being commandeered I saw a solicitor in Barcelona, a fervent Catholic, who assured me that in the event of a revolution in Spain properties bought by outsiders would be always acknowledged. Let me have your thoughts about it because the issue is urgent, and if the majority are in favour I shall bring the matter to a conclusion.

Have you written to Father Piperon about the unfortunate Fr. Barral? Our confrères have arrived at Cooktown. Here is the telegram which so informed me. The Council of the Holy Child sent me 2,000 francs (about 6,190 euros) for the mission. I believe you need a change of air and would, perhaps, do yourself no harm in coming to spend some months in France. Look after yourself.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, August 9, 1882

Dear Father,

I am heart-broken on hearing that you are laid up. Let me know straightaway what is the matter and how you are feeling. If you need a change of air come to France straightaway, Marseilles, Arles, Issoudun..., wherever you wish. But you must get better. We pray for Mr. Vuillaume. He is a loss to the Rome house.

Here is a letter from Fr. Barral. What are we to do with him? Where can we put him? Fathers Piperon, Guyot and Morisseau are of the view that he should be advised to go to a Trappist monastery, believing that if in active ministry he would once more collapse. Your suggestions. I am embarrassed!

I wrote to Fr. Piperon asking him to let me know if there were any scholastics able enough to go to Rome. Those ending their Novitiate this year haven't yet done their Rhetoric, and will do so at Gerra. We are sending to Gerra, or more likely to Tilburg, the two senior classes at the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work), Issoudun. We are only keeping the beginner classes at Issoudun. Fr. Piperon is not anxious to send scholastics to Rome because he finds that those who come from there are neither pious or studious, are lacking in religious training, and very much self-sufficient, demanding, very independent-minded and critical in outlook. Judge for yourself and write to him. I think that he could send you on one or two. That's my view. There is no doubt you need someone (on the staff). I can only think of Fr. Bontemps or Fr. Couppé. Fr. Bontemps is involved with our Annals and we have nobody to replace him. It is, then, impossible to let you have him. It would be easier to let you have Fr. Couppé, but would he go? It would appear that Fr. Maillard would not be acceptable to you, but nevertheless I would freely make him available if he could look after your affairs. When you are here you can more easily deal with this matter. As regards the purchase of St. John of God you should send on your acquisition form to your cousin since you will be one of the purchasers, unless you are going immediately to Barcelona to arrange the purchase and sign the documents.

My powers as Superior General only extend to one year, I believe. This has to be kept in mind, therefore. And what about the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart: at what stage is it? It urgently needs approval. Time is going by.

I can only send you 2,000 francs today (about 6,190 euros). There are 1,400 francs which I shall forward to you during the month. In this amount there are 1,000 francs for the 500 masses. The letter from your dear charges greatly pleased me. Thank them on my behalf. I think the same as yourself about the Rome house. It's a blessing to have it at our disposal. You can send on to Gerra those novices you mention. Yes! If you could keep all your scholastics and do for them what you do for the others you would be providing a wonderful contribution.

Issoudun, August 13, 1882

Dear Father,

Our letters crossed. I await your reply to my last one. (The reply is not in Jouët's file.)

1. The Fathers on the Council, it would appear, do not want to keep Fr. Barral. What is to be done now?

Fr. Barral and the scholastics were on holiday in Subiaco. They were called back to Rome, Barral ordered to Tilburg to make a retreat, leaving Rome on July 18 this year, 1882, accompanied by the two young priests, Klotz and Fernand Hartzler.

2. Fr. Lanctin would appear to turn down Holland where he would continue in charge of the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work). Our plan was to send the three senior classes and only keep the two junior ones at Issoudun, something dictated to us by the circumstances. Fr. Lanctin gives separation from his family as the reason for his refusal, saying that he is needed by his mother and sister to support and comfort them. What is to be done faced with disobedience like this which has no rational basis? (Yet Lanctin went on to become the second General of the Society succeeding Chevalier!) We are considering keeping at Issoudun Fr. Tréand as Director of the Petite Oeuvre.

3. Fr. Lannuzel is coming back to France; he wrote to me from Aden. He tells me that he will be in Rome with you by the 15th of August, and to write to him letting him know if he can come to Issoudun. Yes, most welcomingly. What do you think of these plans and proposals? From the 28th of this month until September 2 I shall be at Bourges on retreat, and then from September 10 to the 24th I shall, if it is possible, be in Vichy. I am forwarding his (Lannuzel's) letter (not extant in the Lannuzel file).
4. And yourself, when are you coming to Issoudun? Will you be here for our feast on September 8? Could you undertake to give three sermons for the preparatory Triduum?

The triduum was in fact preached by Fr. Morel, former editor of the Berry Weekly religious paper, at this time a parish priest. On the evening of the feast day Archbishop Marchal's brother, the Vicar General of Bourges, preached.

5. When can you go to Barcelona? They could do with your presence there to supervise the take over (of the new house). The deed of sale will be signed from here in eight days. Oh look after yourself, dear Father, and get away from Rome quickly if it helps.

Cheerio. Wholly yours in C.J.

Chevalier, before he writes a short letter of his own to Jouët, encloses Chappel's letter, the latter on his way back from France to Watertown, accompanied by Fr. Fernand Hartzler, leaving Le Havre September 7, 1882.

Issoudun, August 27, 1882

Chappel's letter to Chevalier:

Dear Father,

The preparations for the long journey we are undertaking for the glory of the Sacred Heart are now over. Courage, thank God, does not appear to be lacking. The heart holds steady in the presence of the final farewells being made tomorrow, Wednesday. I have a few quiet moments and take advantage of them to greet, at least from the heart, the absent brothers and, especially Father, your venerable self and your holy assistants who prepare with fervour for the holy battles of the Sacred Heart.

I wanted, as you are aware, to return to America for quite some time, and what you may have, perhaps, forgotten, and I want you to recall, is that I am going back to what is mine. It was you yourself who said this in your clear and positive words: To you one offers the whole of America; it is vast enough to please you. I accepted your gift. America is dear to me, having become my second fatherland. I offer it the remainder of my poor life. It is true that my endeavours will be of little value, but I go there just the same, and it will mean appreciating the work of my dear collaborators and sharing their happiness in the rich harvest they will be reaping. Like another Moses on the mountain, Reverend Father, with your dear community, do not stop praying for the combatants in those faraway plains; pray, particularly, for your poor travellers.

Fr. Hartzler arrived last night, and seems pleased to be with me setting out for America, and from there, later, Oceania. The same carriage brought us Fr. Lannuzel who is delighted with the welcome and acts of kindness he was favoured with in your community, and he pleased everyone here and at the Sacred Heart with the worthwhile information he had for us about the Oceania mission. Our young men, already so keen on giving themselves to undertakings for the glory of the Sacred Heart, will have the same delight as ourselves in hearing these accounts which are so interesting for us.

Their apostolic hearts should experience an increase of intensity for those far off missions. May the Sacred Heart of Jesus maintain them in this ardent spirit! The fields will not be found wanting due to their pious endeavours.

Would you be kind enough, Fr., to convey to the dear brothers my best wishes, kindest regards, and appreciation of their piety and zeal as they prepare for the apostolate, and for yourself my respectful and warm good wishes in SSCJ.

Chappel, MDSC.

Chevalier to Jouët.

Fr. Lannuzel, the dear man, is here at Issoudun. He seems to me to be in excellent shape. He will be a valuable help on our mission. He is very well disposed to do anything we ask him. I shall speak to you later about this. You might send Fr. Carrière to Fr. Piperon in Tilburg. It would be convenient. It's Fr. Couppé who will be going to Rome with three scholastics.

I am back in Issoudun. I think it would be good if you came to see us before you go to Barcelona. We need to discuss the house (Barcelona) and deal together with a number of issues. We are considering giving up the Arles house and have Fr. Bontemps here at Issoudun where I have nobody now to preach since Fr. Lanctin left. What is your view about this? What is the Bishop of Aix going to say?

Fr. Thomas of Lyons does not live out in any way whatsoever the religious life, being independent, unsubmitive, stubborn, easy going, etc. He doesn't want to be responsible in any way for the day school. Without advising me beforehand he wrote to the Bishop of Angoulême asking to be accepted in his diocese. The Bishop replied today informing me that he doesn't need priests. Should he (Thomas of Lyons) be sent away? This is an issue to be considered. But what will happen to the day school? We need, then, to see each other.

Until very soon, cheerio, Father.

Issoudun, September 24, 1882

Dear Countess,

I gather that Mr. Gérard is away (Solicitor in Issoudun). Here's what I think:

This taking out of credit would cost us a great deal; moreover we would remain permanently responsible vis a vis the backers of the funds. If it was Mr. Gérard who wished to anticipate his payment, the problem would not exist (would go away), but it is not like that. All things considered, I believe that it's best to wait for the expiry date.

I am sorry to hear that your dear little Aliette is very exhausted. I am not at all surprised because on seeing her, Friday, at the door, I thought she was suffering a lot. I shared my concern with Dr. Masson when I met him at your house, and also with Madame Bonneval, and they both didn't seem to pay any attention to my view. To be frank with you, I was very surprised by their unconcern. I am praying continuously for the dear little angel (she was only a year old), as I pray that Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will soon restore her to health.

I am, Madame Countess, with deepest good wishes, your humble and obedient servant.

Dear Father,

Dear Father Lannuzel arrived here this morning with his travelling companion. He will leave Issoudun this evening and arrive at your hotel at 11.45pm. Tomorrow morning, then, you will meet and have a chat with him. He is willing to go to Holland to the Novitiate with you and his companion, if you think it opportune. (The Novitiate had moved from Gerra to Tilburg on August 21 this year, 1882.) To make it possible for you to have more time in Paris, I shall not be sending off the youngsters from the Petite Oeuvre until Friday morning. You will be at the station, then, to meet them at 2pm Friday. It has been mentioned to me that the Director of Catholic Missions or of the Propagation of the Faith can obtain for missionaries a voucher for free passage on French or English steamships. Could you look into this. Fr. Lannuzel tells me that he must take back with him to Fr. Bucas (a Breton priest in Cooktown) two senior seminarians who are, he says, Fr. Bucas' nephews; he wants them and will pay the expenses of their journey. Take note of that. Fr. Lannuzel tells me, however, that he hasn't a penny for his trip nor for that of his companion. It is imperative that I give him 3,000 francs (about 9,290 euros). It makes a significant hole in one's purse. Fortunately Mr. Bouguin from Nantes has sent on 2,100 francs. You could have taken the treasury to Tilburg if Mr. Maurice had been in Paris.

The proposal made to Madame Pirinoli (Mother Felicity) to rent her house for three, six or nine years, by way of an annual allowance of 2,000 francs equivalent of an interest between 40 and 43,000 francs for this building, and altogether to her advantage. To sell at the present time would be disastrous. As long as this issue is not settled, it is quite impossible for us to undertake anything serious. Consequently, I presume to ask Your Grace who was involved as an intermediary in this business, to be kind enough to bring the matter to a satisfactory conclusion.

Jouët had gone to Tilburg for the setting-up of the novitiate and the transfer of the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre.

Issoudun, October 19, 1882

Dear Father,

I am sending you on Fr. Lannuzel's letter. I have just written to him. The Spanish issues are boiling up and your presence is needed there. Come to Issoudun as soon as you can, and we shall discuss things. Mother Felicity has brought up again the financial issues with regard to her houses; she wants to know what our intentions are. I already made them known to her, but here they are again:

I made the proposal to her about renting all her Issoudun property over 3, 6, 9 years at 4,000 francs per annum. On this sum I would pay interest at 4,500 francs which we still owe to her, and I gave assurances to pay 2,000 francs per annum with respect to the interest on the 40,000 francs which she paid for the purchase of the houses.

This arrangement is certainly the most advantageous for her because these houses on being put up for sale at the present time with the Sacred Heart (church) closed would lose a quarter or a third of their value. I already made this offer to her through Fr. Batard but she rejected it. The Archbishop of Bourges, to whom she has written, cannot understand why she refused this offer. Try to see her, then; it would perhaps be better to see before meeting her Superior who can come to a decision. Consequently, if she really wants to sell, and in order to avoid a scandal, this is, most likely, what I could put to her, if it is to your way of thinking also.

All the houses cost 85 or 80,000 francs. On this amount she owes us about 45,000 francs. I could, perhaps, buy them from her for 85,000 francs. I would forego the 45,000 francs due; she would have her 40,000 francs.

1. If she wishes to accept this sum, I would agree to pay 85,000 francs provided she herself meets the expenses of the legal arrangements and registration. She would sell through agreement to hand.

2. Besides, she will agree to payment over 10 years, and I would give her 4,000 francs per annum during those ten years.
3. I agree to pay her interest at 5% on the amount I owe her.
4. This sum of 45,000 francs would comprise the houses' furniture which in part belongs to her.

Try and get her to come round to this arrangement through the involvement of her Superior (sic). It is a requisite that you bring back with you her acceptance written by herself with respect to one or the other of these proposals. It will be a miracle if you succeed; nevertheless every effort must be made to get an agreement. Let us pray.

Dear Father,

Hurry up with the finalizing of this business (the purchase of St. John of God).

You do very, very, well by not allowing yourself to be tricked, making the contract absolutely correct (legally).

I am forwarding to you a very confidential letter from Fr. Piperon. You will gather from it that your presence in Rome is urgently required. Make every effort to train religious for us ahead of anything else. Judging by this letter it is most urgent that you get back to Rome in the quickest way possible.

Fr. Morisseau forwarded yesterday 1,000 francs (about 3,090 euros) as mass stipends to Fr. Couppé. We haven't a franc in the till! Cut down on your expenses in Rome, and do not allow yourself purchases except when you are certain you have the money to pay for them. You must, on your arrival in Rome, send us on your exact statements so that we can know exactly what has been paid out and paid in. The expense sheet must be frightening!

Your Grace,

I am pleased to send Your Grace the conclusions of the Fabric (upkeep of church) Committee. I believe myself that it is the wisest course to undertake while waiting for more favourable times.

Your Grace, I am about to make available a new selection of pictures dealing with the devotions we promote. I am pleased to present the first batch of them to you with appreciation.

I am most respectfully Your Grace's humble, obedient servant and son in J.C.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

An extract from the register of deliberations dealing with the fabric of Saint Cyr Church, Issoudun, Sunday October 1, 1882.

The Committee for the Upkeep of the Fabric at the Church of Saint Cyr, Issoudun, came together in ordinary session at the presbytery, comprising Viscount Bonneval, President, Chevalier, Archpriest, the elder Deséglise, Constantin Chatonillàr, Désiré Buissard, Alfred Borget, Antony Piquet, Treasurer, Petit, Secretary, Gérard, member. Absent: The Mayor of Issoudun and Mr. Guignard.

The President brought to the Council's attention the verdict of the Issoudun Municipal Council, August 13, 1882, about the Bordes and Avail Chapels.

According to what was agreed, "Part of the Bordes chapel threatened with ruin should be demolished as well as anything in the buildings of a religious nature. The clock would be moved to the school house and the walls rebuilt in order to secure the foundation and make it ready for the installation of a fire hose.

"As for the Avail Church it was agreed that its demolition should begin immediately, and as for any furniture in the two chapels, they should be sold to bidders to meet part of the expenses involved."

The Council, having taken note of the conclusions reached here, and having discussed and referred to previous conclusions, March 7, April 24, 1881, January 11, March 9, 1882, protested once again against the outrageous pretentiousness of the Issoudun municipality, and maintains its rights with respect to the property and fabric of the Bordes chapel and the rights it enjoys over the Avail church, as well as its ownership rights over all the furnishings adorning these chapels and relating to the exercise of Catholic worship, expressly reserving to itself the right to vindication of its rights in time and place, taking the decision to forward an extract of its present deliberations to the Archbishop of Bourges for insertion in the dossier dealing with these two chapels and, if required, to be shared with the Prefect of the Indre.

Dear Father,

How are things getting on in Spain? Is the contract finally signed? Fr. Morisseau has forwarded today another thousand francs to Fr. Couppé for 500 additional masses. I take out from my own account 1,000 francs (roughly 3,000 euros) for you which I am sending on to Fr. Couppé this evening since he says he is (financially) embarrassed. My friend, I am trying to do the impossible to help you (financially). We have nothing but debts at the moment. Over the past two years the intake no longer suffices. I had to pay 5,000 francs of borrowed money for the organs and 4,000 francs for my subscription to St. Cyr which had become due; 7,000 francs for Melanesia (the mission) which I provided from our house (Issoudun). I must put together all this again, and I have nothing left in the coffers. Keep down your expenses and do not act out of keeping with your financial intake.

Issoudun, November 17, 1882

Dear Father,

1. I am pleased to gather that the deed is signed at last, and that everything went well. Thank God! And yourself also! Nobody more than I appreciates your contribution and your devotedness which is beyond all praise. Yes, a couple of more days in Barcelona would have been very worthwhile! You can write and direct matters while being in Rome.

I wrote a second letter to you in Barcelona to tell you that Fr. Morisseau had sent on another 500 masses to Fr Couppé, and 1,000 francs in stipends, and I, myself, a thousand francs which I borrowed because Fr. Couppé said that he was very embarrassed with regard to meeting payments.

2. Yes, indeed, Fr. Couppé would have acted a hundred times better by bringing matters to your notice, or by writing instead to myself rather than conveying his views to others who haven't the right to know in the first place. This makes people feel ill at ease, become prejudicial and becomes the occasion for misunderstandings. I hope that the worthy Fr. Couppé will in future be more prudent.

3. What you foresaw has come to pass. Fr. Piperon has written to say that he needs Brother Julien, that it is impossible for him to do without him, and is keeping him on as a teacher. This worthy Father, who has brought the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) to Tilburg, cannot see beyond his own house. He is beginning to think that the Petite Oeuvre is too much to have there, and the Novitiate on its own is enough for him to be getting on with, which is what he has written to me. But it is too late now. But just the same I had foreseen this.

4. Mother Felicity sent your letter to her secretary in Turin. He replied that she should sell rather than rent, and that the sale price should be 95,000 francs instead of 85,000, and that from the 50,000 which she stands to receive, I should give her 30,000 francs on the day the deed is signed, and the remaining 20,000 francs within two years. Otherwise, he says, all the houses must be put up for public auction. These conditions are unacceptable. What can be done to avoid a scandal? Your views on this.

5. If you want 10,000 pictures with inscriptions and prayers in Italian, 3,000 of St. Joseph, 3,000 of the Sacred Heart and 4,000 of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart with Italian coats of arms, you must send on to me translations of the prayers at the back, as well as the sentences and words at the front with Rome replacing Issoudun.

Cheerio, Father.
Again, many thanks.
Wholly yours in C.J.

NB: There are twenty sentences of each kind and all different. If while waiting for them you would care to have 1,000 of each kind in our French pictures, I shall send them on to you.

Issoudun, December 5, 1882

Your Grace,

I am very appreciative of Your Grace's kindness in being so willing to ordain our sub-deacon. We shall take him to Bourges for the examination on the day arranged by the examiners.

Madame Pirinoli has replied to me through her business adviser in Turin, stating her Issoudun house will be sold not at 85 or 88,000 francs, but at 95,000 (about 294,280 euros), presuming to think that it is now worth more when the contrary is the case. I managed to get the address of her business adviser. I intend to get in direct contact with him, and I hope we can reach an agreement. While awaiting the outcome of this issue, which could be long drawn out, on the feast of the Immaculate Conception, the 28th anniversary of our foundation, we shall take up matters again with this little community, though more seriously than before, and this renewed beginning will likewise be on December 8. It is one year, at this very time, since Your Grace kindly presented this project to the Holy Father, Leo XIII, and received from him appreciative support.

A young Irish girl, a cousin of one of our members, is coming to Issoudun to become a Daughter of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Two other postulants are about to enter. While waiting until we have an outsider as mistress of novices (and it would be best if she didn't come until the problem involving the house was resolved) I shall engage myself as best I can with the religious formation of these women. When Mother Felicity left I asked Miss Sabourain from Issoudun, who lives with her mother, to look after the little community. I wished to find out through her involvement what this young woman might achieve, who, otherwise, is intelligent and virtuous. She is in no way suitable at the present time to be head of a congregation. Apart from her youth and her lack of experience, she is full of herself and sometimes lacks prudence. A serious experience of novitiate is a prerequisite for her.

Given the freedom graciously permitted by Your Grace in replacing Mlle. Sabourain, I accordingly appointed Madame Hartzler who has been living in the house for two years. She is a widow, aged 45, mother to two of our young confrères. She is very good, pious, prudent, balanced, I believe that she will be a good choice. I shall keep Your Grace informed about this work now getting under way and in which you are interested, and which I would like you to bless.

I am, with deepest respect, Your Grace's humble and obedient servant in C.J.

J. Chevalier, Priest (Père).

Marie-Louise Hartzler, née Mestman, born August 27, 1817, at Wissembourg, Alsace, married Victor Hartzler on February 9, 1858, who died young, leaving two sons, Fernand and Léopold, who became MSCs. Chevalier wisely chose their mother as Superior of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, flourishing under her direction, particularly so after 1884 when many sisters began to go to the missions. During the years of the French state's hostility to all religions, the sisters took refuge in Belgium, and it was there, at Thuin, having been the recipient of many letters from Jules Chevalier before his death, that Mother Marie-Louise Hartzler died on February 22, 1908, one of Chevalier's most choice and successful appointments.

L 18830127

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, January 27, 1883

Dear Father,

1. What's happening to you? Your letters are more and more infrequent! How are things getting on in your house, with your young men, your activities and yourself? You wrote me a hurried few words a month ago promising me a long letter, and I got nothing. What means this silence? I am worried. Fr. Marie tells me that he also wrote a number of letters, and there was no reply. (Marie would write to Jouët three weeks later, February 20, 1883: "We get less news from you than we do from our confrères in New Guinea...")

Fr. Piperon is also complaining about your cutting yourself off. Are you laid up?

2. Fr. Marie tells me that two priests have asked to join the Society. One is a diocesan, about whom he gives very good recommendations, the other a member of an order; I am sending his (the latter's) letter on to you. He has my support.

This second priest, Jean-Marie Caër, was a Claretian.

As our Novitiate is in Holland, should we insist that postulants from the South of France, Spain, Italy, should go to Tilburg without having repercussions on the Society? I think not. Prudence necessarily makes it incumbent on us to start another Novitiate, either at your house in Rome or in Barcelona, since we have nothing in France any longer. If it is your view also, ask for permission through an indult of the Sacred Congregation, which will certainly be granted to you.

Chevalier, as is clear from the foregoing, had early on focused on a Spanish Novitiate, and would return to this idea again and again, even though its realization would continually be postponed.

Meanwhile, would it be better to have the indult for Rome or for Barcelona, or both together? This last would be best because of the circumstances in which we find ourselves. Undoubtedly things would not be perfect in either Novitiate but, nevertheless, we would do our best and the situation would improve in time. In Rome you would be in charge and supported by Fr. Couppé; at Barcelona we would confide the task either to Fr. Miniot or Fr. Marie... What do you think of all this?

And what are your views about this piece of land which Fr. Marie would like to buy for 50,000 francs (about 154,880 euros), with Fr. de Sans as guarantor? One gathers that there is a rent of 150 francs to be paid and it will be more! (Fr. Marie wrote to Jouët on February 20 1883 referring to his previous request for Jouët's authorization: "Unfortunately it will be no help to us since the purchase of the ground does... will not mean anything to us. The proprietors are going to sell it one of these days. We shall see.") Fr. Marie would be inclined to pay more (than 50,000 francs). I would not be so inclined as this price seems exorbitant to me.

4. The latest issue of Nouvelle France (January) openly blames Fr. Durin and is very sharp with him. It is unfortunate that this pathetic magazine which is very hostile to us adopts this attitude... Then it brings itself to speak in an unbalanced way in support of Cardinal Simeoni. There is an unbecoming deceptive game going on here. The December issue is no less repelling and untrue (see p.67, first paragraph).

Issoudun, January 31, 1883

Dear Father,

1. Your article arrived too late and will go into the next issue. It is very interesting.
2. The behaviour of the Nouvelle France editors is unbecoming... They do not hold back from inventing things, or absurd contradictory statements, or indeed from lying. In the December issue they both, for the purposes of their argument, blame and praise Fr. Lannuzel at one and the same time, attributing to themselves rights over New Britain which they disavow in the January issue. This Mr. Vergue plays an outrageous part in all this. Yes, and unfortunately, it is Fr. Marie who recommended and supported Fr. Denis. You are aware that they are compatriots and friends.

Marie supported J.M. Denis in a number of MSC involvements, beginning with Denis' sojourn in England where he was in touch with the Duke of Norfolk when the Duke was interested in an MSC foundation. See here Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, and then with the abortive Nouvelle France adventure.

They distort the facts and lie when they say that our confrères didn't want to embark in Manila for New Britain so that they could go to Port Breton. They couldn't because the ship was impounded, and the Consul and Archbishop advised them to travel by another route. All this is pathetic. I think it would be best to say nothing at all. I am about to write forthwith to the editor (of Nouvelle France) in Marseilles appealing to him to be careful, balanced and truthful.

Issoudun, January 31, 1883

Dear Sir,

Your latest issue repeats the serious insinuations and attributions of lying to and about Fr. Durin and his confrères. I would never have expected this kind of onslaught given all the tact and careful handling we brought to this issue of the débâcle in the colony when we dealt with it in our Annals. The author of the article (on page 103) wishes at all costs to justify the Nouvelle France initiative and associate, for the most part, its failure with Fr. Durin. The charge is as unjust as it is outrageous. The editor in question knows very well the reasons for the disaster; he is, without any doubt, aware that Fr. Durin is wholly free of this charge. He blames him for not having remained on the Nouvelle Bretagne! But Fr. Durin was already on board with his other confrères awaiting only the signal for departure when the ship was placed under seal. What now? Fr. Durin, not wishing to take upon himself the responsibility for deciding, went to the Archbishop of Manila to hear his advice. Is not this as prudent as it is correct? Having consulted the Archbishop and those with him, the authorities were unanimous in advising him to leave the ship, which, following an extended process, would most likely be sold by its creditors, etc., and take another route to get to their mission, which is what they did when they got on a boat leaving for Singapore.

But you say that ..."the New Britain nevertheless left some days later for Port Breton!". In what circumstances, indeed? Could Fr. Durin foresee that the captain, against all sea-faring regulations, took off like an evading pirate under the cover of darkness and storms? When Fr. Durin's letters made known in Europe his impressions of the colony, its ruin was already a foregone conclusion. He is not then involved with the disaster in any way. The article's author seems to be unaware that Fr. Durin became seriously ill in Manila when with the Augustinian Fathers, and that he underwent a most serious operation which has lastingly damaged his health. Despite his frailty and the fever he was experiencing, he did not shirk from embarking for New Britain to take himself among the natives of New Ireland. It was the embargo placed upon the ship and the intervention of the Archbishop of Manila which led to his taking another route. Despite being seriously ill, from Manila he went to Singapore, and from there to Amboina, hoping to disembark in New Guinea from that side. The Dutch authorities (in Amboina) refusing to acknowledge his mission, he returned to Singapore exhausted and close to death, and there my other confrères (with him) and a Singapore doctor constrained him to return to Europe if he wasn't, almost certainly, to die. I have to hand Fr. Navarre's letter confirming this as the truth. And here, then, is your publication making free to say of Fr. Durin: Vade retro Satana!, treating him as a deserter, a man who flees from sacrifice, searches for his comforts, and then attributes ingratitude to him...

The kindness of Marquis de Rays was never overlooked by Fr. Durin. He (Rays) avows that he was fooled and exploited by characters who were not deserving of his confidence. Marquis de Rays, it is true, paid for my confrères' trip from Barcelona to Manila. Something I gratefully acknowledge.

But it's a bit much to assert as you do that the impounding of the New Britain, the poor administration and the colony's lack of success, for which they (Durin and his companions) were in no way responsible, made them terribly embarrassed, fatally compromised and totally damaged their mission, bringing upon them expenditure much more considerable than what had been paid to ship them to Manila. Nonetheless, I have made no complaints, or asked for any compensation. We have undergone all this patiently and acceptingly.

Where does it lead, the approach taken by your magazine? To nothing good. Let justice take its course, then, it will make us aware of each one's responsibilities. Why try to justify things which cannot be excused, attribute responsibility where there is no case for it, attempting to make people think there is something there when there really is nothing, giving rise for the time being to expectations which are wholly unreal.

To the Editor of New France, Marseilles.

B 18830131B

Unsigned, undated

Sir,

I am as much disappointed by your last letter as I was by the Nouvelle France article. The editor of the publication is free to presume that my confrères were reneging on their mission and deserting the honourable posting confided to them by the Holy See, betraying the colony's best interests, in part responsible for its failure and set backs, and holding back before the challenge by opting for their comfort and seeking an easier outcome, going on their own, etc. However, I deny these people the right to print and place in the public domain such like statements as they use without any foundation. At no time have we attached a word of blame in our Annals either against the Marquis de Rays or the members of his administration, for whom we have never ceased having a high regard. All the pleas, complaints, accusations forwarded to me from Australia, Manila, Singapore, Rome and from several Port Breton colonists have never been published and remain in the deepest silence. We have, therefore, good reason to be taken aback, following such discreet behaviour on our part, when you say "stop attacking us and we shall give over our attacks", and yet it is your magazine which has personally discredited our confrères. In place of incriminating before its readers the behaviour of Fathers Lannuzel and Denis, who had been so promoted by your publication, it would have been much more prudent on the part of your editors, and more helpful in the colony's interests, if you stayed silent, even in the supposition that there was some problem to be addressed.

You say that you would like to answer Fr. Navarre's letter in the forthcoming issue of Nouvelle France. Fr. Navarre in his letter presents the facts which he has seen for himself and which are known in Australia and all the archipelagos neighbouring Port Breton and New Britain. He reiterates what your magazine has mentioned, that there is no longer a colony in New France, that the Marquis of Rays was badly supported, his work made the responsibility of men little deserving of his trust, and badly run on the spot, its lack of success due to the negligence of those in charge and the colonists' insubordination... All this has been said and reiterated in your columns. You will not find in Fr. Navarre's account a word of blame against the Marquis de Rays and the dutiful staff who support him. On the contrary, he speaks highly of the splendid work associated with the colonizing... "which, well planned and executed at Port Breton, could," he says, "bring about a great deal of good". He speaks highly of the rich vegetation in these countries, their fertile soil, the beauty of the location and the healthy climate. Opening your columns to critics, you make the situation worse, and unhelpful for the good name of the colony. It would be more prudent had you mentioned Fr. Navarre's letter, selecting those passages which could give confidence to those associated with the place by pointing out to them that the islands provide great resources towards colonization, more especially at the present time when the missionaries find themselves there, since their presence among the natives can only facilitate this work of renewal which will take on a new lease of life after the release of the Marquis de Rays, etc. We are charged with being separatists! Can this be possible (credible)?

As soon as the Holy See granted to us the two Vicariates of Melanesia and Micronesia, the colony's paper made reference to the dedication of the new diocesan priests and organized, separately from us, the work (devotion) to Our Lady of New France, drawing on the charity of the faithful for the sake of the mission, appealing for everything needed for worship, money, gifts, etc., etc. Was not this a side-lining of us, or abrogating, without previous understanding, the right which truthfully only belonged to the spiritual authority designated by the Holy Fathers?

2. The publication of your Annals will provide a new thrust for your work.
3. As for Lent, last year's experience was not successful. Have carried out in your house in this matter what Fr. Beer does in his place and is also done in the Major Seminary. Follow the custom of the diocese where you are, giving consideration to the weak health of your young men, and the thin, very thin, you look after. To be healthy is a prerequisite.

6. I am returning your excellent work on the vows.

Manual of a Sacred Heart Religious, printed by A. Gaignault, Issoudun, 1884. Chevalier's introduction was dated August 15. Piperon's name does not appear as author, and nor does Chevalier mention him as the author.

Have it copied one hundred times, if you wish, and I will meet the expense, or, if you think it more worthwhile, have it printed. Take advantage of judicious and disinterested criticism. Challenge those who are drawn towards a lack of mortification, the pursuit of ease and indiscipline, etc. Your work is all the more worthwhile because it is a résumé of orthodox theology on the issues dealt with, and of the authors who wrote on these matters. I look upon this work not only as something very helpful, but also as greatly needed, since it is time we had a discipline seriously adhered to and a religious life rightly understood, something which has been lacking in us up to now and could create a sombre quality for our dear and well loved Society.

Chevalier is, presumably, referring to Fr. Captier's 1876 recourse to Rome against Chevalier in a Memorandum challenging MSC religious life as presided over and endorsed by Chevalier, but a couple of days later withdrawn by Captier in another Memorandum. See the correspondence from Chevalier, 1876, on this sensitive issue.

You are right about completing and presenting beforehand all you have written about: (a) the vows in general; (b) the worthwhile purpose of the three religious vows; (c) the excellent means of perfection they provide, etc; the duties with respect to Superiors.

Complete your quotations, even those you take from our Constitutions; provide in Latin below all the texts you quote, and those of St. Thomas, etc. Hurry up with this work. The sooner it appears the more worthwhile it will be for yourself and our other houses. Would it be possible for you to come here and preach during the last two weeks of Lent? You would greatly please people who would be delighted to meet you again.

Cheerio, Father.

Boulogne-sur-Mer, February 4, 1883

Our Lady of the Sacred Heart pray for us!

Reverend Father,

I wrote to Fr. Captier in Issoudun. I knew him in Chezal-Benoît where he was my teacher and supervisor. It was not Fr. Captier who replied to me, but Fr. Chevalier. (What has come over Fr. Captier, since he does not bring himself to reply to someone whom he virtually called a friend?) Here is his (Chevalier's) letter which I have copied:

Compain wanted Captier to know that he was interested in being a missionary in Oceania, much taken by letters written by Navarre and Cramaille. Chevalier replied to him because Captier had left the Society in 1878, and Compain then wrote to Fr. Piperon.

"We shall receive you very willingly in our Society as a religious of the Sacred Heart, and we would be happy to send you to our beautiful Oceania mission as soon as you become a priest and the good Lord calls you to ministry of this kind. Our Novitiate since the expulsions has been moved to Tilburg under the direction of Fr. Piperon. It's there you would go straightaway if you had made up your mind. You must get testimonial letters from the Bishop of Arras, the parish priest of your parish, or your confessor. You will make a year's Novitiate and then make your theological studies at Tilburg, or in our Rome Scholasticate, advancing progressively towards orders."

Following on from this letter I (Compain) decided to write to you (Piperon). I am thankful for your little book and the information you were kind enough to give me. According to the letter I had from Fr. Chevalier, I was far from addressing all the formalities. If you will pardon me, I should like to address some more questions to you.

He must only bring his linen: is this shirts, towels, table linen, napkins? He must be self-sufficient, and pay a fee, but what fee is this?

He must get his baptismal certificate, and the Catholic marriage certificate of his parents. I have that which already sufficed for tonsure and minor orders. Is it enough? I have not lived elsewhere other than in the Archdiocese of Bourges where I was born, and in the Arras diocese. What does a testimonial letter mean? Isn't it necessary to have a dismissorial letter from the Archbishop of Bourges? You inform me that there must be serious reasons for entering the Society of the Sacred Heart. Here are my reasons; I let you be the judge.

I am 35 years of age. After the minor seminary, which I spent at Saint-Gauthier (Indre), it was my intention to become a missionary, that is to say spend my life in bringing the word of God to the pagans. During the war of 70-71, I was with an ambulance as a nurse. I then entered the Bourges major seminary. I was overcome at the end of 1871 by great tiredness of the eyes, brought on by over-work, and forced to interrupt my studies. I was successively supervisor at Saint-Gauthier and Chezal-Benoît. I left the latter because I foresaw that it would be closed. I got a post as a private tutor and I settled down. I am about to end this year the education of a young man I have been teaching. The eye strain has merely left me with some migraines. I am about to look for information on the Paris Foreign Missionaries. When looking up the Catholic missions I noted that Fr. Navarre and Fr. Cramaille, whom I know very well, are looking for helpers to preach the word of God to 15 million pagans who make up their flock. I wrote to Fr. Captier and it was Fr. Chevalier who replied. I am prepared to sacrifice my knowledge of the sciences, as you call it, for the salvation of the heathen; there you have the thrust of my approach, and it's that alone. As well, I was altogether quite amazed when reading your letter that it didn't come directly from Tilburg but from Issoudun.

At the Foreign Missionaries (of Paris) one is trained for the missions only and not for preaching to Europeans. Their Novitiate is made while preparing themselves, that is to say while studying theology, and I do not think that when millions of the faithless need missionaries, one should leave those candidates living the lives of Carthusians or contemplatives. I beg your pardon, Father, for expressing myself so forcefully; I present myself such as I am, and it is zeal for the salvation of souls which dictates my words.

Over eight years I have devoted myself to the Catholic missions, eight years during which those intrepid apostles have had my support, sharing my prayers with them, and beseeching the Lord to allow me to follow in their steps one day. I finished my theological studies in my special subject. Now my health is restored. How long would it take me before I set out for Oceania since this is the only reason that I ask to be accepted? If I have got in touch with your Congregation rather than with another missionary Society, it is because elsewhere there are apostles (missionaries) whereas in your present mission there are as yet only two missionaries. These then are my reasons: it is for you to decide if I am called by God to carry His word to Oceania.

With respectful good wishes and hoping to become an Oceania missionary.

I forgot to mention my lifestyle. I say the Rosary every day. Also I go to Mass each day, meditate, and visit the Blessed Sacrament in the evening. I have nothing to distract me and no pleasure-seeking. I like a walk with my pupil over some hours on Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday. I am compelled to be excessively patient because my pupil is particularly myopic.(!)

Dear Father,

Nothing surprises me coming from the Colony's administrators (the management of the magazine La Nouvelle France, Marseilles). Following their disloyal article against Fr. Durin and the war they are waging with us to which they turn a deaf ear, I can well believe they are likely to get up to a lot of things. Their aim is to oust us smoothly from the mission and install others in our place. Not being able to catch us in their booby-trap, making us willing victims of their intrigues, they are now battering down the hatches in every possible way. Very soon, you will see, they shall declare open war on us. You are doing very well in facing up to them. Challenge this set up; it is serpentine and dangerous. If, calamitously, other priests are brought in, everything will collapse. There must be common action and direction. I am, then, in complete agreement with you.

Look after yourself, my friend. Come and stay for a month or two in France to recuperate. It is, I am persuaded, the better remedy; do not hesitate. Fr. Guyot could go and replace you, after Easter, if necessary. Yes, a Novitiate in Rome would be a good thing. That good and saintly Spanish religious priest, (Fr. Caër) whose letter I sent on to you, has asked to go to the Novitiate. What do you think? Would you like to have him in Rome?

Issoudun, February 18, 1883

Dear Father,

1. I am forwarding to you an engraving in which you can read that the Bétharam Fathers are taking to themselves the title of Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. Those of Toulouse are doing likewise.

The priests of the Sacred Heart, Bétharam, Pyrennés, were founded in 1832 by Michel Garicots (1797-1863,) being ecclesiastically approved in 1877. The Toulouse Congregation mentioned by Chevalier, known as Priests of the Sacred Heart of Calvary, was founded in Bayonne by Bishop Arras who became Archbishop of Toulouse in 1830.

Since this title is our patrimony, what Rome has approved for us, could you not so arrange it that ourselves alone would have the sole right to this title? The Toulouse Fathers were founded with the title of Priest Adorers of the Sacred Heart, or, otherwise, The Calvary Fathers. Those of Bétharam were founded under the title Priests of the Sacred Heart. Why then should the title of Missionaries of the Sacred Heart be usurped? All this would undeniably create confusion. Protest about this.

2. The individual who has contributed 50,000 francs (about 156,250 euros) for England (English undertakings) and 40,000 francs (about 125,000 euros) for Barcelona, offers another 40,000 francs for Vichy, where he would like to see us established one day in order to help those who come to the baths and, especially, those priests who come there to take the waters. At this very moment an excellent opportunity has presented itself (at Vichy) in every respect both as to situation and good value. I went to see the house which is up for sale. It is perfectly sited near a large building, having 25 living rooms and a garden in front, and to the rear facing two boulevards. It can be purchased for 45,000 francs and it is easily worth 80,000. It is Fr. Guyot who would purchase it in his name. The Bishop of Moulins has granted permission. In expectation of better circumstances, it could be rented out. What do you think?

3. You are making an appeal for organs. Isn't this somewhat premature? Don't you fear that this could militate against your main preoccupation? You have a house to look after and the debt to the Pope must be met, if indeed there aren't others!

4. If you could forward your accounts letting us know what your financial position is at the Rome house, I shall be grateful. Are you again in debt? To whom, how much? Are all your debts paid? Is all work completed in your church and your house? Are there still things to be done? What are they? See to it that all your accounts are well set out and in order.

The foregoing financial queries, not usually answered, increased this year, 1883, so much so that Fr. Louis Couppé was often in Rome helping, sometimes replacing Jouët. See below also.

Dear Father,

I received another letter from Fr. Navarre yesterday; it is very interesting. I am forwarding it to you, but be good enough to return it to me immediately when you have read it. Fr. Lannuzel also wrote to me, from Cooktown. He was about to embark for New Britain on a vessel which he rented for 4,000 francs (about 12,500 euros) in order to take with him a collection of animals which he had been given. Do you know that he asked me to send him on by telegram the 4,000 francs to hire the ship? It should have arrived by now. Let us hope so.

I am sending on to you by post today my work on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I am having it sent in three folders so that the post cannot charge. Everything in the one parcel would be too much. You can return the work in the one parcel so that they (the volumes) don't go astray in the offices. Try and have it looked at straightaway. I shall pay the examiner (reader) what it costs. You will carry out all the corrections and changes called for. Get it approved; that is essential. See to it that this assessment begins straightaway. Let me know by return of post if you received these copies. Their arrival is very important.

To His Grace Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, March 3, 1883

Your Grace,

I hasten to thank Your Grace for the letter which you did me the honour of writing to me about Madame Pirinoli. (She had written to the Archbishop on March 1.) Is this good woman finally satisfied? Earlier I offered to rent all her property at a very satisfactory price and she replied saying that she wants to sell. I accepted her wish. Despite the closure of our church and the current depreciation of our houses, I really wanted to pay the price asked: 88,000 francs, inclusive of the small amount of furnishings, half of which belong to us (the MSCs). In keeping with her wishes I gave her 12,200 up front, the rest payable in 6 years at 5% interest, but she wanted me to undertake half the cost of registration (carriage of sale). I replied that having in mind the high price, I wanted her to be responsible for the registration. She wrote to me that she wished to come to an arrangement. I agreed and endorsed the previous offers, that is to say 4,200 or 4,300 francs, which is the interest on the capital.

Meanwhile, Madame Pirinoli does not want to rent any longer, but rather sell a part of the building which, obviously, is too small for a mother house that should have a separate area for a Novitiate, classrooms for teaching the young girls, and rooms for those women who come on pilgrimage. The present terms of the sale are much more demanding than those of the general sale. I shall have over three months to pay out 20,000 francs, whereas for the other side of the arrangement I need only give 12,216 francs and the remainder in 6 years. However, what does she have to say for herself about the two houses? How much space is available? What furniture is Madame Pirinoli keeping for herself? She needs to provide answers. While we bought for 20,000 francs what she offered, and which we would like to enlarge, Madame Pirinoli, mistress of the situation, imposes exorbitant conditions on us which we shall be constrained to accept. We must challenge, hold out, against the Italian character.(!) Then to whom will we rent the rest of the property? This is a serious issue! I should much prefer a return to a complete purchase according to the conditions laid down in my earlier letter here enclosed, taking on as my responsibility half the expenses of the sale. I call upon Your Grace to witness this. Madame Pirinoli owes us 45,784 francs on the 88,000 cost of the sale. Paying her out 12,216 francs would leave 30,000 francs payable in 6 years. Yet in the present situation this, for which we undertake responsibility, becomes a heavy burden.

Will priests' property be always respected? Do we not have to fear confiscation more or less in the near future? I shall carry out, Your Grace, whatever you decide. It seems to me that Mother Felicity, who left the community on her own initiative when she had promised not to, has bequeathed to us through her fault the abnormal situation in which we find ourselves, and it behoves her, therefore, to be very conciliatory, particularly so if one considers that the furniture at the Sacred Heart square house, following the closure of our chapel, has lost a third of its value, such wise that what she bought for 88,000 francs could not be sold today for more than 60 or 65,000 francs. Besides, this house, since Madame Pirinoli became its owner, has never had any repairs done to it. The roof and the interior need to be renovated. The good woman gave no thought to anything such as this. Accordingly, then, if Your Grace could come by some concessions in the acquisition of this house, at least a remission of half the legal expenses Mother Felicity is demanding, I shall be very much obliged to you, for this expense from our own side will still be about 3,500 francs.

If Madame Pirinoli, by selling me for 20,000 francs the two houses to which she refers, wishes to leave me an entitlement to all the rest of her property, relative to the interest of 45,784 francs owed to us by her, with a written promise to sell to us in 6 or 4 years at the sale price, I shall fully agree, and we shall immediately bring the matter to an end, thanks to the welcome intervention of Your Grace. This would be the best outcome, as well as being, also, the most equitable. Would you be kind enough to put forward this proposal (to her)? We shall see what Mother Felicity has to say. If she refuses, we shall return to a complete purchase. What a number of apologies I have to make to you, Your Grace, as well as expressions of gratitude!

We have renovated our antique organs in rubber piping, and they are quite lovely as well as very powerful. They are about to be installed in our parish church and we intend to have a solemn inauguration ceremony on Quasimodo Sunday. If Fr. Marchal (Auguste, the Archbishop's brother) could come to preside over the ceremony or, if unable to, another Vicar General comes, we shall be greatly pleased. We have chosen the first Sunday in April because Mr. de Bonneval, President of the Fabric Committee, is due to be in Issoudun that day. But if this date does not suit the Vicar General we shall choose whatever date he cares to suggest to us.

I am respectfully, Your Grace's most humble obedient servant and son in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Your Grace,

I am pleased to send you the enclosed letter. It comes from Madame Pirinoli's former business agent. This good lady chose him for arbitration concerning the issues which engage us. Having done as she liked, and being on the point of breaking off, here's the reply she makes to my final proposal.

Besides, this good man seems to be demoralised, apprehensive about scandal.

Notice, Your Grace, that I am offering Madame Pirinoli the price of the property which she is looking for, that is to say 4,400 francs at 5% interest on the 88,000-franc value of her houses. There remains to deduct 2,300 francs, being the interest on the sum she owes us. She will have 2,100 francs paid to her per annum. What more could she wish for? I believe that she is no longer in her right mind.

Issoudun, March 12, 1883

Dear Father,

Your kind letters which I have received provide me with some of the answers I was looking for; you can send me on the others as soon as you can. Fr. Couppé's letter makes me worry both about your health because of the excessive demands made on you by your work, and also about the precarious circumstances of your house. My friend, why are you trying to do more than you should; damaging your health by excessive work and late nights... (?) I cannot approve of this, despite your best motives and worthy intentions. Your health, as far as we are concerned, is more important than anything else; leave aside whatever you cannot do in a balanced way, and never undertake anything beyond your strength. I have said this to you before and I repeat it. To act otherwise is to place yourself in opposition to the will of God. Try and get help from some supportive laity or some worthy priests who, if necessary, you can remunerate. But, please, take it easy. If you were to become seriously ill or suffer from over-exhaustion, what would become of our Rome undertaking? It would fold up or go into decline, be plagued by disaster. You must, then, take on less, or be helped and become relaxed.

Why, dear Father, could you not hold over the studies of one or two scholastics who could, effectively, become your helpers? Then the next year you could replace them with two more. In this way they would be a support to you, and it would also be a way for them to relax a little. In the main I think that these young men work too hard, damage their health, and return to us broken down in health. It appears that the state of health with your last three Doctors (philosophy, theology) was dreadful, requiring even now dispensations and special care. Fr. Ramot wrote to me quite recently telling me that Fr. Hartzler's health has been at a low ebb for quite some time and he is not likely to be restored to full health. My friend, if the studies are leading to this kind of result, the situation must be remedied at all costs. I draw your attention to this serious issue. As for financial matters, it disturbs me as well because it concerns and exhausts you.

Were it not for the Vichy purchase, where I had to pay a supplement, and going without the 7,000 francs (about 21,870 euros) which I sent to Fr. Ramot to avoid embarrassment for him, and the take-over of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart (which is just about to take place), and the 20,000 francs which Mother Felicity wants made available, and I don't know where to get it, I could, otherwise, have given you financial help, but it is impossible just now. I am so sorry for you because I know your resources are running short. And I share your worries! What can be done, Fr? While waiting, do not add to your expenses, I beg you, try even to cut them down if at all possible.

Cheerio, Fr.

Yesterday I forgot to mention good Brother Fora who, it would appear, is quite ill. If you think it would be helpful, you would do him no harm, perhaps, by sending him to our confrères in Barcelona; I think it would help to restore his health. Fr. Marie would be very pleased to have him. This would be a judicious course of action. Consider it, let me know... Have you been able to present my work to the examiner? How I wish I could help you... Issoudun, March 24, 1883

Dear Father,

I wish a happy Easter to you and all your colleagues. I am still waiting for a reply to my letters. Let me know if I can no longer depend on letters from you! Fr. Lannuzel has written two letters to me from Cooktown in which he informs me that he received my telegram authorizing him to draw 4,000 francs (about 12,500 euros) from my account, and within a few days he would be leaving to meet up with our confrères. I sent his letters on to you (see above, Chevalier letter for March 4). Today he (Lannuzel) wrote me another letter, sent much later, in which he tells me that he hasn't received anything yet... This is strange... I sent the 4,000 francs which the Paris discount bank made out for me in the name of a Sydney bank which sent on that amount of money to Fr. Lannuzel on January 30. The Sydney bank advised the bank in Paris about this transaction on the 5th of this month. I have a copy of the letter to hand. What are we to think of all this? Could Fr. Lannuzel be a swindler? I cannot believe it!!! I have written to Fr. Lannuzel expressing my astonishment.

What about your health? How are you getting on? And Brother Fora, how is he? Are you thinking of sending him to Barcelona? Fr. Marie wants to know if he can give the religious habit to two lay brothers who have been with him for three months and with whom, he says, he is quite pleased. He complains a great deal about Fr. Miniot who, he says, does nothing for him and is wrecking himself more and more. Fr. Piperon writes to say that he has a lot of laid up people at the moment who are a cause of concern to him. Is the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart yet in the examiner's hands? I beg you to get moving on this matter. I am sending you 500 francs (about 1,560 euros).

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, March 29, 1883

Dear Father,

I have been given 1,500 francs for the Oceania mission. With the expectation that some of our young men will be missionaries one day in these lands, I am sending it on to you. I cannot deter this sum of money from achieving its aim. In addition, I supplement it with 500 francs from some offerings made on your behalf, and the rest from my burse. My friend, as I have told you and now repeat, it is impossible to provide you with the money necessary for the upkeep of your youngsters. Do not count on this any more. The resources are not there. This is no longer a joke; we cannot even meet all our responsibilities. We still owe 5,000 francs to the mason for the outside of the house, 4,000 francs to Mr. Lachet, the solicitor, who gave that amount (on loan) to us, 4,000 francs to Mr. Piquet, and 1,000 francs to the contractor for the Saint Cyr Church, etc. It is impossible to pay these sums.

It is pointless to talk all the time about your young men's three-month term. Being thrown out and ruined, it's the particular houses such as yours, and as is customary in other Congregations, who should come to the help of the mother house. If you cannot meet your expenses, try at least to lower your costs... Do not take in young people unless you can support them from the resources of your house and what accrues from your work. Once more I repeat, do not incur debts to be paid in the future and hurry up paying those you have contracted. According to our Constitutions, "local Superiors should twice a year provide an exact account of their expenses and their income to the General Bursar" (p.83). Well then, my friend, in spite of my pleas, you always fail to abide by this regulation. I appeal to you that you send on a detailed presentation of your (financial) situation so that I can see for myself how things are with you. This is imperative.

I wrote some harsh letters to the administration of Nouvelle France in Marseilles. I do not know this Canon Verguierat at all. In any case, it is a bad set up. The Port Breton affair is more of a money issue than anything else. Thank you for sending on Cardinal Simeoni's letter. I am saddened by the serious nature of Brother Fora's illness. Fr. Marie has sent no money to me; instead, he is always looking for money. I fear that he might be responsible for an unfortunate financial state of affairs in Spain. Ask him for whatever he owes you.

The Book, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart

I wish to thank you for engaging yourself with it. What the Master of the Sacred Palace thinks of it up to now pleases me. See him as often as you can, provide him with those explanations which he might be looking for and make the corrections which he thinks are needed. His approval would be very helpful to us as well as the letter which Bishop Mermillod might like to write. Nothing would be better if the work were to be printed in Rome under your care, you yourself correcting the proofs. As I have the original copy with me, if you could let me have a second proof copy I shall be very much obliged to you. I shall return it immediately to you. It would be an advantage if you reshaped certain sentences and anything which in your opinion needs attention, for example the style, etc. Make the work interesting to read. As for the format (shape), a small quarto size would, perhaps, be appropriate. Arrange things such-wise that the publication comes out attracting attention; this is particularly important for a book's success. The work with you will come to 500 pages, possibly. At 1,500 copies, how many would the printer be looking for? You should let him know. The second part, which will be the historical section, could make up a second volume of 200 to 300 pages. I could have it printed by St. Paul, Paris (printing firm) and have it bound with the volume being printed in Rome. The St. Paul printing firm could bind the whole work, print the cover also and have rights to the work.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

In reply to your letter:

1. Yes, it is our representation of the Sacred Heart, the large picture, which will comprise the third example. If your editor can let us have them at 2 francs, 50, (about 7.75 euros) a hundred, with printed text, we shall accept.
2. Fr. Lanctin wrote to me but he didn't let me know everything in his mind. In any case I am sending on the letter to you with the reply which I request you to read.
3. I am delighted to hear that your sick are improving. You can hand over Brother Peeters to Mother Mélanie's care.
4. You may certainly have your theologians tonsured if you are satisfied with them.
5. As for Messrs. Perriot, uncle and nephew, do whatever you think best. I leave it to you to be the judge.
6. As the printing costs are less dear, have your work printed as it will be very useful to the Society, 200 copies or 300.
7. I am sending you 100 francs (about 312 euros, 50) to pay for the printing of your work on the vows.

Cheerio, my friend.

Dear Father,

I thank you for your good wishes, those of Fr. Couppé, all our good scholastics, the boys of the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) and our dear, kind, lay brothers. I read their letters with keen interest as well as the report on the scholastics. Thanks, a thousand times, to everybody. Chevalier is responding to the good wishes of all on the occasion of his feast day, St. Jules.

Yes, give the Master of the Sacred Palace (at that moment Agostino Bausa, OP) time to correct the work, after which you can immediately set about printing it. I hope that everything will quickly go ahead. If for the second part of the work you could have the Italian letters of thanksgiving copied and translated, it would be very helpful.

It was carried out; see the 1884 publication, p.450; 453, 456-468; 477.

Dear Father,

1. I sent on to Fr. Piperon the three authorizations which he was looking for.
2. Yes, indeed, you may put forward for holy orders all those whose names you send to me.
3. I am pleased that dear little Brother Fora is getting a little better; let us hope so!
4. You do well to clarify the Bétharam issue. (This refers to that Society's use of the name 'Missionaries of the Sacred Heart'; see above Chevalier's concerned letter to Jouët, February 18, 1883, for the immediate context to this April 22 letter.) The Toulouse missionaries also give themselves the title of Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. The Bétharams give themselves, I believe, the name 'Priests of the Sacred Heart'. As for the rest, when having recourse to the archives of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, you will certainly find there all the information you need.
5. Father Marie has gone to rest at Arenys in Brother Fora's countryside, staying with Sister Théodore. This good sister wrote to me today telling me that Fr. Marie had once more coughed up blood, that his time is limited, and she doesn't think he can return to Barcelona... What is to be done?
6. I am forwarding you a copy of Fr. Navarre's last letter.

Dear Father,

I am sending you, confidentially, a letter from dear little Brother Védère. You will see for yourself that his complaint may not be without foundation, and whether there might not be reason to provide a satisfactory answer. If he carries out (performs) twice, or as good as, his religious exercises, you might, perhaps, exempt him from some of them; see what you can do. According to him, our young men haven't enough time to prepare their lectures, giving rise to an emphasis on work which can damage their health.

Védère went on to be ordained in December 1883 and died in Rome on August 28, 1924.

Do not have them taking up time in activities which have nothing to do with their studies by way of keeping them occupied. Do it in such a way that they will not know that I sent this letter to you; destroy it after you have read it.(!) You will take note of what I wrote to him and then have it destroyed.

How unfortunate the death of dear Fr. Marie. The unfortunate Barcelona house – what is to become of it? I am sending Brother Derichemont there, asked for by the people (priests) there, rather than Brother Verjus whom they didn't want at all. What are your views about this house?

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, May 8, 1883

Dear Father,

I read with pleasure your kind letter. Yes, Fr. Marie's death creates a problem for us. Fr. Guyot's view is to replace him (Marie) with Fr. Ramot and to put Fr. Durin in Ramot's place. It's not my view. Fr. Piperon would like to see us leaving Arles, and Fr. Bontemps could, once he has made final vows, go to Barcelona, that is to say within some months, and we could continue as things are in the meantime. But what is the Archbishop of Aix going to say and who, most importantly, will take over the editing of our Annals? This last query is of the utmost importance.

The document for the possession of Mother Felicity's house has at last been signed. It was Fr. Tréand whom I sent to carry out the acquisition. This property, with furniture, was sold for 70,000 francs (about 218,750 euros), registration expenses included. There remains for us to find another 8,000 francs (roughly 25,000 euros) on the sale. How can we benefit from it? May the good Lord take pity on us! If you could now send good vocations to these dear sisters, you would greatly help them. I am greatly engaged with this. The Oceania missions are already looking for some!... They are only 8 (sisters) at present.

The reports you gave me on many of our scholastics annoy me. I can see that there is among them a lack of formation in the religious life. What can be done with subjects like that? They are an embarrassment rather than being of use. Klotz, Carrière, Barral, Bizeuil, Thomas, etc., haven't a shadow of the religious spirit about them. One doesn't know what to do with subjects like these; being neither pious, mortified, devout, and, or, especially, obedient. This is calamitous. At Issoudun I have nobody to back me up, absolutely no-one. Besides I cannot do much more, and I feel that my strength is exhausted. I am doing the work of ten... I cannot keep going much longer. If only our scholastics were truly religious! The knowledge they come by in Rome inflates them, makes them self-sufficient, pretentious, dries up their spirits and takes from them whatever little piety they had... The environment in which they live is very harmful to them. Give some thought to all this. It is a serious issue. What worthwhile gain have we had from all the sacrifices? Chevalier is no doubt thinking in particular of financial costs!

And the book on Our Lady, has it been finally given approval? Hurry up with this issue. The first assistant to Fr. de Beer at Tilburg has written a long memorandum against the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the devotion, the older statues and pictures, even against our indulgences. Fr. Piperon is due to forward it to you. Once again, problems.

Issoudun, May 15, 1883

Dear Father,

Your work is so continuously demanding, then, that you cannot reply to letters sent to you! Being prompt with correspondence is a thing of absolute priority in a good administration. I am sending you on a letter from Mr. de Bourbon and from the Barcelona Consul's wife about our house and the incoming Superior! How are we going to deal with this challenging issue. I am also sending you on a letter from Fr. Ramot who has been given 25,000 francs (about 78,120 euros). If you could only get a like legacy! I wish it so, my friend.

Good Fr. Ramot has shared his views with me about our Rome scholastics and those who return with the degree of doctor, and his concern about the future of our Society faced with such like. These anxieties are shared by all the influential members of the Congregation who are aware of the situation. It's time to consider the issue and take a decision. When can you come here without its being too inconvenient for your house? It is absolutely imperative that you meet us and hear what we have to say. These are my thoughts about the issue, and it's with yourself alone I share them so that you can reflect on them and share with me your views for the general good. I would be persuaded to send to Rome only those priests about whom we would be quite assured and who offered all the necessary guarantees of being solid religious, sound in judgment and highly intelligent. To achieve this, we need to have a Scholasticate either at Tilburg or Barcelona. At Tilburg, there would have to be a teaching staff; in Barcelona the young men could, perhaps, attend the Major Seminary. In Rome there would be the Procurator's office, the Association's Directorate, a Petite Oeuvre for Italian youngsters, an Italian Brothers' Novitiate, as well as, by way of exception, some Society priests who would study to take degrees so that they could become professors.

Issoudun, May 27, 1883

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. What you have to tell me about Queensland does not surprise me. Following Father Lannuzel's letters I was expecting it. This good missionary had the same view as our confrères who stayed in Cooktown. They wrote me about these lands which they explored, saying "...that a house of our Society should be set up in these parts and would be very helpful for our Melanesian missions, either by supplying provisions or for communications, etc., etc.,"

I also, Fr., share completely the wise observations of His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni about the vicariate of Queensland being made over to our little Society. In principle this is what I consider best even in the interests of New Guinea, but for the time being it is necessary that we be given more time so that we can have sufficient numbers to take on this posting also. Since the Vicariates of Melanesia and Micronesia are provisionally one under the sole direction of Fr. Navarre, why could not the Apostolic Vicariate of Queensland also be provisionally added under the same direction while awaiting until we are in a position to fulfil the expectations which His Eminence has placed in our worthy mission? We have presently several Irish candidates, and we are hoping for more from our house in England and our house in America; with Irish missionaries of the Sacred Heart at Cooktown, where the colony is an Irish one, the solution would be found. Fr. Durin, whose health gets better by the day, is asking to return to the missions. He would gladly return to Cooktown with another of our confrères, Fr. Vatan, who would very much like to go, if His Eminence favourably considered it.

2. A Novitiate for New Guinea

I completely share your views. A special novitiate seems a prerequisite to me for those who are going to the missions. All the priests and brothers who truly shared this calling would go there. It would be the best way to attract recruits to meet our needs and train them well. If His Eminence the Cardinal Vicar, or Cardinal Simeoni, were to give a talk to this effect and looked upon this novitiate's beginning as incorporating the special features which you have in your house, then its success would be assured. Our Annals and yours, those of Holland, Fr. Deidier, Fr. Ramot and Barcelona, would publish this lecture, and the impact would be marvellous. If at the same time His Eminence referred to the commitment of women for these missions in the Society of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, that would be marvellous because Fr. Navarre in all his letters wants the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart as indispensable helpers.

3. Fr. Caër. I share completely your view and that of Monsignors Mazotti and Boccafogli about this worthy priest. In reply he must be refused.

Born March 10, 1835, Fr. Caër became a Benedictine of Our Lady of Lerins and entered the MSCs in 1884; he went to Quito on May 10, 1887, but left the Society that same year.

4. The Congregation of Indulgences

Try to sort out this sad affair concerning Fr. Geene from Tilburg. Many bishops, priests and pious members of the laity lead themselves to believe that we haven't the right to use for public worship the older statues of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, which were in use before Cardinal Patrizi's celebrated letter, and nor were they to be used, like the statues of the earlier model, for private worship. This current of thought, to be found in Belgium, Holland, England, Spain, etc., is very derogatory to us and makes us virtually appear as being opposed to the Holy See. Could you not make available a little memorandum setting out the facts, establishing our privileges and stating that the Issoudun statue was beyond reproach. If the Cardinal Vicar were to approve this, it would be published in our Annals and in the new book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, etc. And in this way we could release the Associates from the great burden which weighs on them.

5. The Book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart

I am very appreciative of the Master of the Sacred Palace's kindness. Yes, I freely agree, very much so, that this work can be printed in Rome, in pages or in sections. I agree with number 7 format. The book carrying the number 7 format is entitled: Homilies by Father Vincenzo Stocchi. This format appeals to me more than that used for St. Joseph's life. It is the same as that for St. Vincent-de-Paul, edited by the Saint Paul Bookshop, Paris, which we have chosen.

I believe that for this first edition, it is enough to publish 1,000 copies only, that is to say at 75 francs for each section of 16 pages in a thousand copies. I do not think the completed work, in two parts, with indexes, will come to more than 7 or 800 pages, and 50 sheets at 75 francs would come to 3,700 francs, that is to say 3 francs 75 a copy. One should easily sell them at 5 or 6 francs for each one. The paper and the print seem quite acceptable to me.

I would not be in favour of publishing this work by instalment. The best thing would be to have it printed in its entirety straightforwardly, either by successive pages or chapters. When one section is printed, and the proofs looked at and carefully corrected, 1,000 copies can be made straightaway, and so things will go on to the end as there are not enough characters to print it all at once. When the complete work is printed, you will forward 1,000 copies of it to the Catholic bookshop, St. Paul, rue Casette 6 (Paris) who will bind it after printing out a de luxe cover and, effectively, become the publishers. This bookshop will take upon itself all the promotion and will give us, I should think, 0.50 centimes profit on each copy. Then we shall see about a second edition since this first edition will be soon sold out. You could see to it that there would be a foreword letter of approval from the Master of the Sacred Palace and a letter from a consultant Bishop of the Holy Office. The publishers would give publicity to this approval and we ourselves also. In this way we would have guaranteed success. The rewards from these first, second and third editions would accrue to your Rome work. You might also, indeed, bring out an Italian edition. Hurry up the printing of the work. Improve sloppy sentences, add, take out, give it style and shape; the decision rests with yourself. Make sure that the proofs are carefully corrected. Take responsibility for a detailed, analytical, general index. You could have it done by some one whom I shall pay. I shall send you on the money needed to pay the printer. The moment you send a proof to the Master of the Sacred Palace you will send one to me also so that I can be aware of the changes and corrections. You will then let me know what gift I might present to the Master of the Sacred Palace who has been so kind.

6. Tilburg.

It is likely that I shall go to Tilburg on Monday for a week. That is to say towards the 4th of June. If you have any messages let me have them. I shall be returning on the following Saturday.

7. The Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart are doing well. Vocations are beginning to come. Send us someone. The house is ours. Mother Felicity is entering the Poitiers Visitation Sisters.

8. Are you coming to France, and when will it be?

9. I am sending on to you a letter from Fr. Miniot; you will understand the situation at our Barcelona house. We shall maintain the status quo while waiting on there, as at Arles.

10. Scholastics

I believe that you would do well to clean out your house so that it can be associated with a very good religious spirit. Make a list of all those priests or otherwise who have the wrong attitude and are neither pious or observant. We shall place them elsewhere, in Tilburg or some other place. This approach will serve as a lesson. You will only keep those who in all respects you would find fully satisfactory. We shall carry out the changes as soon as the holidays begin. We shall pick scholastics who have the requisite piety and religious spirit to replace those who are an embarrassment to your house. It is imperative.

Cheerio, Father; warmly thank on my behalf our good scholastics for their kind letters.

Cheerio, then. Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, May 31, 1883

Dear Father,

1. The work on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart should be already at the printers... Hurry up with the printing.
2. Fr. Bontemps, as you can see for yourself from his letter, says that he cannot take on the second part of the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Would you be so kind as to be responsible for it yourself and go through with it, getting from Fr. Bontemps all the materials and information which you need, and, as well, Brother Alexander? Time is running out. Bring up to date this second section and provide it with the wide scope and interest which it deserves...
3. Think about the idea raised by Fr. Bontemps; to me it seems a very good one. By his presence in Paris he would offer a hundred times more of a contribution to the Society and our undertakings. Besides, he would arrange for the setting up of a house for our Congregation in Paris, something that is needed.

We are giving consideration to the printing of our Annals in Paris at the Saint-Paul printers as we find Mr. Gagnault is taking advantage of us. We are going there to consider the conditions which are being offered to us. If, then, Fr. Bontemps was in residence in Paris, it would be very helpful. What do you think of all this? What advantage is there for us in keeping Arles? We shall never do a great deal of good there. The situation is never more favourable than at present to withdraw in a dignified way. We can make a valid case for the pointlessness of our presence there for one reason or another, the prolonged closure of the church paralysing all our efforts. The Bishop will appreciate this at the present moment whereas we might not have such plausible excuses...

4. Read Fr. Barral's letter and let me know what you think.
5. I leave on Monday for Tilburg. I shall stop over in Paris for a little while and have myself informed.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Dear Father,

1. I have arrived back from Tilburg. Things are not doing too badly. The Bishop has been very kind. This house has a future. Fr. Piperon is not able to cope with such diversity of works. It's too much for him. Meanwhile, we cannot do any better! We must accept it.
2. Fr. Miniot in Barcelona is upset about everything. He has discovered that the house has far, far too many debts and no revenues. The Bishop, who was due to take on a missionary, hasn't kept his promise, and so far he has heard nothing from him. The good man (Miniot) is very demoralised. He thinks this house is badly situated, costs too much, and that we should leave the place... This is absurd. What's to be done?
3. Why haven't you yet replied to my last letter? I beg you to answer my letters.
4. The St. Paul book shop which I visited when I passed through Paris (to Tilburg) has agreed to publish the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart book printed in Rome, and will share the expenses of publication and the profits. It would prefer if the first printing came to 2,000 copies, and this would put the price at 2 francs a copy, and they are certain that it will sell. Notify the printer. 2,000 copies at 120 francs for a 16-page section will come to 6,000 francs for us. The copy, which I saw, will be 3 francs and not 2 francs. I consider, therefore, that 1,500 copies will be enough. A copy from at outlay of 1,500 volumes would cost 3 francs 30, and the total expenditure would come to 5,000 francs. What is your view? The same publishers would take responsibility, if we so wished, for the printing and mailing, and, as well, the mailing of our Issoudun Annals, the acceptance of contributions, together with all the other work involved, and would allow us one franc on each copy (of the Annals). Instead of a 24-page magazine, each copy would have 32 pages, while the format would be in 8 instead of 12. The price would remain at 2 francs. These arrangements seem very advantageous to me. What do you think about it? Let me have a reply immediately, and answer, also, without delay, the previous letter.

2. Everything His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni has to say about New Guinea, our missions, and the Cooktown Vicariate, has my complete approval.
3. Your idea about Fr. Deidier having a Novitiate is excellent. Send me on the formula on which I can make a request to Rome. I shall send it back to you straightaway. This Novitiate is needed and will succeed.
4. The sacrifice of this good sister is as wonderful as it is morale-boosting for us.
5. The Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart are already ten in number and well disposed; they are doing their Novitiate which finishes at Christmas for several of them. I would prefer it a hundred times over if Propaganda were to take responsibility for this undertaking rather than our Archbishop. On Friday copies of the Constitutions are due out. I shall send them on to you, and they mention expressly, designedly, the foreign missions, even among the pagans.
6. The reduction in price of 5% for Australia is advantageous... (sic! stamps, travel).
7. Yes, indeed, come to see me. I need to have a chat with you. Come before you go to Marseilles, or afterwards; it doesn't matter; do what you think best. To His Grace Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, July 5, 1883

Your Grace,

Were it not that today is the eve of the first Friday of the month when I have a great many confessions, I would have gone to Bourges to see Your Grace. Here is the reason: The municipal Council has held back, faced with our observations, from placing on the church the following inscription: Liberty, Equality, Fraternity... Council Property. Its scrupulosity has vanished. Workers are already preparing the necessary scaffolding. The Municipal Council goes beyond its rights where a church is concerned. The law, so it seems to me, is definite about this issue. Besides, these words, Municipal Property, beg a debated question... This inscription could create a big problem for the future. Moreover, more than half our church is about to be renovated with expenses paid by the Church Fabric, the Council having refused to contribute anything.

We do not wish to do anything without your advice, Your Grace. What do you recommend? Some weeks ago I was privileged to meet the Prefect of the Indre. I drew to his notice our expulsion from the Sacred Heart and the closure of our chapel. I pointed out to him that our Institution was in its beginnings wholly diocesan, that the diocesan Ordo (year book) has always looked upon us as diocesan missionaries, that the March 29 decrees leave to communities a certain amount of time to elapse before breaking up, and that we are attached to the Archdiocese of Bourges for greater assurance; I furnished him with proof, proof which cannot be gainsaid. I also said to him, as well, that the Police Commissioner on November 5, 1880, did not want to consider anything and expelled us without listening to us. The Prefect in his reply said that he thought the decrees did not envisage us and advised me to make a report on all these matters to the Minister for Cult, and that he would support me... What does Your Grace think about this? Would he advise me to make this approach? Does he think it will be successful?

Please accept, Your Grace, my respectful good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, July 8, 1883

Your Grace,

I sincerely thank Your Grace for your kind reply to my letter. I shall remain relaxed about the re-opening of our chapel. The letter which I had the honour to write to Your Grace had scarcely left when an Issoudun painter set about writing the inscriptions on the façade of our church without informing me. On my way to confession of the children taught by the sisters, around 11pm I noticed that French Republic had already been written. I thought for a moment. The painter, so I said to myself, needs to have the written permission of the Mayor. I shall see about making certain of this, create concern for him, and go immediately to see an excellent bailiff and bring him with me for the encounter. I beckoned the painter to get down from his ladder. He did so. The presence of the civic officer (the bailiff) disturbed him. Who gave you permission, I said to him, to put these inscriptions on this church? The town architect! I do not accept that the architect has any right to do so. Have you written authority from the Mayor? No, Father. Well then, you have placed yourself in a situation where you are about to receive a summons. The bailiff made a move to initiate proceedings. The painter begged pardon; it was quickly granted to him; then he immediately rubbed out the inscription! I then went along to the Vice-Prefect and let him know about the foregoing. I brought to him a copy of the Council of Fabric's magazine (September, 1878) in which there is a letter from Mr. Tirman, Prefect of Bouches-du-Rhone, sent to all the mayors in his Department, forbidding them to place on their churches any republican notices, and stating that Article 73 of the 1809 December 30 decree forbids this and that both the Ministers of the Interior and of Cult, whom he had consulted, were likewise opposed.

Besides, I also informed the Vice-Prefect that in May 1991 the Issoudun Council had already tried to put up these inscriptions, to which I took exception, putting forward the same reasons (as immediately above) and the matter was not taken further. The Vice-Prefect, in his reply, said that he shared my views and would give orders to the Mayor about suspending this work. The same afternoon I received the following letter from the Vice-Prefect:

"Rev. Archpriest, I have found the ministerial instructions, the same as those you shared with me, and which were sent to the Mayor of Issoudun on May 25, 1881. Faced with this explicit text I asked the Mayor to withdraw the instruction he had given, and if he persisted in his aim it would lead to a new ministerial decision (against him). July 5, 1883.

Viguet, Vice-Prefect."

If the Minister allows it, we shall go along with it. I deemed it worthwhile to bring these matters to the attention of Your Grace: they cannot but interest you.

I have the honour to be, most respectfully, Your Grace's most humble, obedient servant and son in C.J.

Dear Father,

I am sending to you in confidence a letter from dear Fr. Maillard! What's to be done? Who can be given to you as his replacement? You cannot be left on your own. You need a bursar and a socius (assistant). Fr. Barral, might he not become bursar under your guidance? Or Fr. Lanctin, socius, and Fr. Carrière at the Petite Oeuvre, either supervised by you or by Fr. Lanctin? I don't know what I should settle for, or what to do. Maybe the retreat which Fr. Jouët is about to preach to you will bring some enlightenment. Fr. Morisseau is very willing to be your socius, but who would I have with me? For the confessions and our administration? Let us pray and hope.

Cheerio, my friend.

You will be getting the lovely picture of the Sacred Heart. It is more than two metres high. It's in your chapel above the main altar you should install it. Your new chapel doesn't need a window at the bottom, or a niche because the picture will fill the whole space. It is splendid.

Issoudun, July 22, 1883

Dear Father,

1. I am so sad about all the trials you are experiencing. I am wholeheartedly and feelingly with you. Convey to your dear, kind, sisters, my concerned sharing in their suffering. We pray a lot for them.

Your thoughts are worthwhile in relation to our young Rome scholastics. I share them most wholeheartedly.

2. The Bishop of Aix has written a very nice letter to me in which he mentions your visit and proposal which he agrees with. He asked me when he should replace Fr. Bontemps at the Carmelites, and I replied August 1, if it is convenient for him, so that Fr. Bontemps could return to Issoudun at the end of that month. Your young man from Rome will not be staying very long with him (Bontemps). The Bishop of Aix didn't mention compensation to me. Might you not ask him for something in exchange for the Arles library? You might place it with the sisters as a guarantee since, otherwise, I do well believe that we shall end up with nothing. What do you think about this? Yes, you could suggest to the Postulants that they came to Issoudun to make a short retreat to consider their vocation; it's the best solution. The Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart are already twelve in number; six choir sisters and six lay sisters. For the time being there are enough of the latter. The little article by Fr. Bontemps drew a lot of vocations. And there are 6 or 8 more asking to join. I believe this work is progressing well. We need some fervent postulants who have a teaching certificate so that a school can be set up to help them (the sisters) to make a living.

3. Yes, Brother Suchet would be suited to Tilburg.

4. I was obliged to call back to Issoudun from England Brother Michael Tierney; Fr. Deidier didn't want him there any longer under any considerations whatsoever. I can well understand this because Brother Michael sees things all too obviously there. The unfortunate Fr. Deidier is, again, likely to bring about the loss of this English house for us. Brother Michael is here at Issoudun, and has told me unbelievable things... (relating to Deidier). I shall let you know all this when you call to see us on your way to Tilburg. When are you thinking of coming?

5. Fr. Vatan has gone to learn English in England in order to help him on the missions. He has arrived safe and sound and I have had a letter from him.

6. I received a letter from Fr. Joly in Lyons, the Marist Procurator in Sydney, who says that he will come to Issoudun before he returns. He is due to go back to Australia in November. He could take some of ours with him if they were going...

Cheerio, my friend.

For Michael Tierney, born September 29, 1859 in Churchtown, Ireland, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, passim. Within a week of his ordination to the priesthood in Bourges Cathedral, March 29, 1884, he left on April 2 for Watertown, whence, shortly, he returned to Europe and spent some time in Barcelona teaching and supervising, and it was from there he went to Ireland on a short family visit before leaving for Australia in 1885. The USA and Barcelona postings do not appear to have made any lasting impression on him, two places from which as soon as possible he, hopefully, would be going somewhere else, and more permanently.

Dear Father,

I am sending you in confidence a letter written to me by Fr. Lanctin. I hadn't thought that things had gone to such an extreme. Fr. Morisseau is given to think that he should be given his freedom. Fr. Jouët is of the opposite view and as for yourself, what do you think? In any event, we have until the month of October. In that case you cannot depend on him for Tilburg. Who would you put in his place? Choose from those with you. Fr. Tréand is needed at Issoudun. He deals enthusiastically and brightly with correspondence.

I asked Fr. Morisseau to send on what you were looking for. This is the second time. It is likely that you will have to ask again. I am sending on to you a very confidential letter from Jules Vandel about the Rome house. Fr. Jouët, given his keenness to take on too much, jeopardizes the house. What is to be done with men like this?

Bourges, August 29, 1883

Dear Countess,

It was at Bourges I had the pleasure of receiving your letter. I am on a full church retreat and I shall not be going back to Issoudun until Saturday in the course of the day. I do not have to hand the documents which Mr. de Reinach wishes to get hold of, and it is quite impossible for me to send them to you.

At our last meeting I gathered that it was your wish that this issue should not become an administrative one in order to avoid any formalities which could give rise to serious problems, and, therefore, you would prefer if Mr. de Reinach, who had seen the statements, and was satisfactorily conversant with the issue, met directly with the Minister of the Interior or of Cult, and straightaway arranged for the re-opening of our Church of the Sacred Heart and our own return to the house from which we were ejected greatly to our surprise. This way of proceeding, for all material purposes, seems less complicated and more effective in my view. It suffices that the Prefect of the Indre is written to and asked to undo the seals of the church door and allow us, as well, to return to our house. In this way perhaps it becomes possible for us to celebrate on September 8, the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, in her rightful sanctuary.

Please accept, Countess, our respectful good wishes in the Lord.

Issoudun, September 5, 1883

Dear Father,

A letter from kind Fr. Couppé which is to hand just now makes me aware of the seriousness to be attached to the Holy Office decree. I have written a letter to His Eminence the Cardinal Vicar which you will do well to read yourself before passing it on to him, and providing him with every possible explanation.

Everything must be done to see to it:

1. that the decree should not get into the public domain or be made known by the press;
2. that the retraction of all the "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" prayers, found presently among the laity, should not be required, nor that those we have should be destroyed, but that we should rather be allowed to keep them;
3. that the changes insisted on should only be applicable to the Italian "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart", with the French one left as it is.
4. Make a case for the French phrase "without limits" as being applicable to the Blessed Virgin in the sense that it implies that there are no graces which she cannot obtain through her intercession.
5. That the words "Sovereign Mistress" mean sovereignty of love; mistress meaning her privileged relationship. The French Bishops and theologians understand this so well that they never raised any objections.
6. If you are not received by them, take yourself into the Holy Father's presence and make him the arbiter of your explanations. It is unthinkable that Leo XIII should not give ear to your request. Otherwise, our Association becomes destroyed and our resources dried up. What are we going to do having paid 100,000 francs (about 314,190 euros) to the Holy See and having met our other responsibilities?

7. Do bring forward the fact that it is quite incomprehensible that a prayer said in Rome, even in the presence of Cardinals over the past 8 years, without any objections made against it, should be publicly disapproved of at the present time when it pays tribute to the Holy See. Write to me as soon as possible.

Issoudun, September 5, 1883

Your Eminence,

I come to you with a broken heart. A telegram which came yesterday from Fr. Couppé called for Fr. Jouët's immediate return to Rome to deal with an issue of the utmost importance. Our beloved Fr. Procurator had not yet reached Issoudun, arriving some hours later worn out after two nights in the train. I handed him the telegram and, despite his weakened condition, and the danger to his health, he left straight away.

Jouët, away from Rome since June, arrived back at 7pm on September 7 and went immediately to see the Cardinal Vicar. Next day, September 8, he wrote to Chevalier letting him know about his early Rome overtures.

A letter which I had this morning from Fr. Couppé informs me that there is an issue arising from the Italian "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" (prayer) of which several expressions have been condemned by the Holy Office, with the injunction that it be withdrawn from the faithful who already have it. We are prepared to make all the sacrifices and required changes, but please keep in mind the disturbing impact which this requirement will have on so many associate members and the discredit which will overtake our Rome Archconfraternity, without reference to the financial consequences which will follow from it.

Your Eminence, as our protector, allow me to address you as a father. I beseech you to make every effort to see to it that this Holy Office decree is not made public since it will mean a death-blow for the Association as happened with the changing of the statue. Fr. Jouët will look after all the changes brought to his notice. Our dear confrère assures us that the Italian "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" is an accurate translation of the French version which the Holy Father, Pius IX, it has to be said, approved of on two separate occasions.

In any event, Your Eminence, try to ensure that the French "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart", approved of twice by the Infallible Vicar of Jesus Christ, is not forbidden. This would be the onset of disaster and ruinous for our undertakings, since this prayer has been said over the past 15 years by more than twelve million associates, and our Holy Father Pope Pius IX granted it 100 days indulgence as you can ascertain for yourself. Reading the French "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" one can gather, in context, that the power of Mary over the Heart of her Son is no other than a permitted power, an intercessory power, since it goes on to say, "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of the illimited powers which your divine Son has granted to you"... etc.

Once again, Your Eminence, as children blindly submissive to the Holy Church and Holy See (sic!), we are quite prepared to carry out all the deletions and changes called for. We humbly, on our knees, appeal to His Holiness Leo XIII not to go public with this decree and not to insist on taking away from the pious faithfuls' hands the "Remember Our Lady" presently in use. As for the future, we shall carry out, with respect to this prayer, all the required changes.

Together with my grateful appreciation, please accept my respectful good wishes in C.J.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Dear Reverend Father,

You have asked my permission to publish a German edition of our Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart entitled: Monatshefte der Erzbruderschaft Unsere Liebe Frau vom heiligsten Herzen. I cannot but wholeheartedly approve your taking on this work which has no other aim than that of honouring Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. In this respect, Father, you will be carrying out the worthy and noble undertaking which has been entrusted to us by the Supreme Pastor of the people of God, "that of drawing souls to the merciful Heart of Jesus through the intermediary of Our Lady". Ad Jesum per Marian.

Yes, indeed! If at the present time "the Church and Society have no other hope than the Heart of Jesus," (in the words which the immortal Pius IX spoke to me at the time I let him know about my plans), it is comforting to know that our little Society has as its providential mission that of making loved everywhere the divine Heart of Jesus, in keeping with our motto, and making him loved through Mary, our Immaculate Mother. The world, so full of plagues which eat away at it, experiences nowadays appalling corruption, and it requires a powerful remedy to rescue it from death. This remedy is made available to us by Jesus when he gives us His Sacred Heart. But how else could this remedy be made available to us other than through the hands of Mary our Mother?

Publish, then, our beloved "Annals" in the German language. You will be filling, thereby, a gap, and satisfying the holy urgency of our good German associates, so devoted to the Archconfraternity in keeping with the faith of their ancestors, a faith they stand up for with a fearless courage which draws the respect of the whole world.

I bless the ways of divine Providence for the painful present trials, since in being forced into exile the members of our little Congregation have the opportunity to make Our Lady of the Sacred Heart known and loved in greater numbers. Yes, Father, I approve your initiative; I bless it most wholeheartedly, and I approve of your new publication as the official medium of our dear Association whose cradle and influential thrust is to be associated always with Issoudun, but whose centre, thanks to the graciousness of His Holiness Leo XIII, is in Rome at our church in Piazza Navona.

Work indefatigably to publicize the kindness and the glory of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. She herself will lead souls to the Heart of Jesus.

1. I have just now received your letter and the two Apostolic Blessings.
2. I also have had the letter from Propaganda (the Roman Congregation) enclosing 3,000 francs (about 9,430 euros) for our dear confrères (in New Britain, whose hut had been burned).
3. The departure from Marseilles for Sydney will be on Wednesday, December 19, at mid-day. The (shipping) company is offering a reduction of 30%, but it's not enough. We are hoping that His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni will get free travel for us.

Jouët would see off in Marseilles Frs. Fernand Hartzler, Louis Vatan, Benjamin and Brother Guiseppe de Sanctis.

4. Like yourself, I am annoyed by the feelings of discontent and opposition on the part of the good Fathers G and M (Guyot and Morisseau). If one is to listen to them, nothing is being done properly, everything is about to collapse, all is gloom, etc. This way of thinking and acting is not kept to themselves... they share it with those below them, and this is what creates unease, challenge, and a critical attitude which is to be deplored. These two worthy Fathers are more a threat to the Society than outright enemies. Let us pray that they will come to see things in their right perspective. This Oceania mission is providential for us. If it wasn't there we would have to ask for it. Accordingly it must be kept going with all our endeavours. I share your view: let us wait another year for Fathers Couppé and Verjus.

5. The letter from Monsignor Boccali on behalf of the Pope (at the time of the New Guinea fire) is excellent, as is that of Cardinal Simeoni (see Annales, 1883, p.286). Unfortunately our Annals were already half-printed when these letters, and your article, arrived. The next issue will deal with the matter.

6. My jurisdiction as Superior General, has it expired, yes or no? Let me know and be advised accordingly.

The previous rescript, December 22, 1882, confirmed Chevalier in office for one year... The next rescript is dated February 12, 1884.

7. Please be good enough to expedite the printing of the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

8. What is the situation in regard to Fr. Captier?

This former MSC, see above, later a member of the priests of the Sacred Heart, Saint Quentin, was at this time waiting on a Holy Office decision, eventually handed down on September 3, 1883, as a result of which he left St. Quentin, January 11, 1884.

Surely, indeed, we shall make the changes you are looking for and follow the procedures you set out (with regard to the "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" prayer). Not for the world would we wish to set ourselves up against the Sacred Congregation. But, be that as it may, the present way of acting with respect to the "Remember Our Lady", which was approved twice by the Pope, is odd, inexplicable and very mystifying... To criticize this prayer is to criticize Pius IX. Is this likely?

Captier's problems are not irrelevant here since as an MSC he had much to do with the beginning of "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart", November-December, 1863, and would have brought his unbalanced views with him to the Saint Quentin Sacred Heart Fathers. The fall-out would have also repercussions for the MSCs.

Vichy, Villa des Lilas, September 12, 1883

Dear Father,

I saw, happily, Fr. Lanctin; he said nothing to me. (The context is Lanctin's expressed wish, communicated to Piperon, to leave Tilburg and return to his beloved Issoudun.) Everything happens all at once. I was far from expecting such a storm as that stirred up by the "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart", approved by Pius IX and twice indulgenced. What approval can be higher? And meanwhile... there would appear to be something baffling about all this. Silence has to be enforced on reason to permit faith to become active. It is necessary, while awaiting this frightful storm to calm down, that we introduce in our houses straightaway the following changes: In place of "illimited power" one must say "infallible power"; instead of "Sovereign Mistress" one must say "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of Jesus". Instead of "at your wish" one should say "at your plea" (request).

Meanwhile, another problem: Fr. Jouët who always goes ahead, for ever taking on and doing things without considering whether or not he has the money to meet his expenses, and, yet, still goes ahead and, having no more credit, is on the verge of bankruptcy for the sum of 75,000 francs (about 235,640 euros!), debts crying out to be paid immediately. What is to be done? There's the empty bottom of the bag. I borrowed 21,000 francs (about 65,970 euros) which I sent on to him before I left. It's either loss of face or dying of shame. I have never had even one account from Fr. Jouët since he went to Rome. I am very angry about this. I drew his attention to the Constitutions; nothing came of it. I now understand his ignoring me. What confidence can one have in this unfortunate Father... I have appointed Fr. Couppé as bursar, laying it down that no funds should be left to the handling of Fr. Jouët. It's a sad outcome. As everything is going to rack and ruin down there (in Rome), it is likely that you will get some more scholastics such as Brothers Hartzler (Léopold) and Meyer who are light-headed and not nearly pious enough. (Meyer went on to be third General of the Society!) I do not hear any further mention of Fr. Caillol; I believe that it will not be long before he arrives with you. For the last two years there has been a Fr. Sabard in Barcelona, a priest originally from the Blois diocese; he was a teacher who often visited our priests and stayed six months as a lodger with them. Frs. Marie and Miniot liked him very much. He is thinking about becoming a religious. Fr. Jouët, following his trip to Barcelona, spoke very highly of him. He came to see me in Issoudun on September 8, and has decided to join us. He seems to be pious and intelligent, is aged 39, Sabard by name. He should arrive (at Tilburg) either next Saturday or Monday. If he can fit in, he would be an ideal candidate for Barcelona. Write to Fr. Bontemps; I don't know where he is. If he agrees with your request (to replace Lanctin), you have my approval. Cheerio, my friend. Let us pray continuously.

Cheerio, wholly yours in C.J.

Vichy, Villa des Lilas, September 14, 1883

Dear Father,

If you are being questioned, say under oath that in everything we have printed since 1875, as in our sermons or talks, we most carefully committed ourselves not to call Mary sovereign mistress, queen of the heart of Jesus. If in our Annals a word of this nature had come through, you can state that it was through inadvertence: we have then most carefully adhered to Rome's stipulations. In our canticles instead of "Lady" or "Sovereign" over the Sacred Heart, we have "Virgin of the Sacred Heart". This is undoubted fact.

Otherwise, in relation to the "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart", you can say that we never thought of changing it because it carried the approval of Pius IX who indulgenced it such wise that it would show a lack of respect towards this great and holy Pope if we carried out changes ourselves. We would never have dared to do so, and besides, since this prayer was indulgenced, we could not hope to change it in any way without losing this indulgence. But once the judicious authority of the Congregation seeks the changes we shall carry them out most willingly since we only want what Rome wishes, and nothing otherwise. But, thankfully, we are not being looked upon as rebels, and we haven't become victims of our blind obedience to the prescriptions of Pius IX.

Dear Father,

I am returning on Saturday to Issoudun. I received your comments. All you have put forward for vows I also approve. (Seven in all were professed on October 17, the 8th on December 8 for health reasons.) Yes we need a serious Scholasticate to counteract the inadequacies of the Novitiate and the lack of discipline in Rome. The religious spirit has to be renewed in our young men. Fr. Deidier has written to me saying that Brother O'Mahony sent by Fr. Jouët to him, together with Brother Merg, needs to spend a good year at Tilburg in order to prepare for the priesthood; and he says the same applies to Brother Merg. These boys have lost out on the meaning of the religious life. Obviously you alone cannot meet this challenge. I think that Fr. Morisseau is someone you need if we are to undertake anything serious. If you agree with this arrangement, you must send me Fr. Roger since I would need him in the parish at present for catechizing and confessions of the religious, replacing Fr. Morisseau. I hope Fr. Lanctin will return to you; I shall be seeing him on my return to Issoudun.

The house in Spain gives me concern; it needs someone in charge, and the only one I can think of is Fr. Bontemps. If so, who would then take charge of our Association's office in the absence of Fr. Morisseau? Fr. Bizeuil does very little there, and that reluctantly; correspondence, which is so important, is greatly neglected. If you could get a bursar and let me have Fr. Maillard I would appoint him to the office where he would be very good. Let me have your views on all this. I am about to write to Brother O'Mahony asking him to go to you. Be strict and watchful with all those you have there.

Cheerio, Father.

Fr. Sabard was harshly judged, a Blois priest whom I met in Vichy told me. Write to the Bishop and from him you will get the facts, and then we shall see.

For O'Mahony see also Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, passim. Morisseau left Issoudun for Tilburg in October 1883 to take charge of the students, returning to the Issoudun presbytery two years later in October 1885. Just before Morisseau left Issoudun, a priest, presumably from the Blois diocese, E. Papin, wrote to him about Fr. Sabard, mentioned approvingly in Chevalier's letter to Pipheron: "If Fr. Sabard left V, or more correctly Thoury, it was because he had reason to fear he would be arrested. Don't take him."

Dear Father,

1. I am about to leave for Issoudun. I shall send you Fr. Lanctin on Monday, I hope. I am forwarding you a letter for Brother Dutheil. Read it before you give it to him. Yes, he has to wait before he makes his vows. In the event he left at the end of his temporary vows.
2. And your own work on the vows; at what stage is it? It should have been printed long since. I am waiting for it with some impatience because I need it for our Issoudun talks. All our confrères, even Fr. Morisseau, are incredibly illusory (deluded) about the vows. If your work, then, is not yet printed, have it done straightaway as I am waiting for it. In the event Pipheron's 'Manuel du Religieux du Sacré-Coeur' came out next year, 1884, printed by Gagnault, Issoudun, with an introduction by Chevalier.
3. Send a reply to me about Fr. Morisseau whom I am making available to you as Socius (assistant). In your letter (reply) ask for him in a positive manner without letting it be understood that this (appointment of Morisseau) was inspired by me. In any event, you had already asked for him yourself as someone who would be very helpful to you, and so I believe. Morisseau went to Tilburg with some alacrity, remaining, like Pipheron himself, Assistant General, while taking charge of the scholastics.

Issoudun, September 26, 1883

Dear Father,

1. Fr. Lanctin leaves, then, tomorrow and will arrive on Friday morning (to continue in charge of the Tilburg Petite Oeuvre, Little Work, but laying down his conditions). He wants his correspondence to be respected, particularly in relation to his mother and sister, and that no teachers should be made available to him without his being consulted, and that consideration should be given to his suggestions when he is looking for changes in staff or sending youngsters away. You will do your utmost to be accommodating to him.

2. Fr. Morisseau is willing to lecture and take charge of the Scholasticate, and at the same time he will be your socius (assistant). I don't see anyone else who would best suit your purposes for the time being. What do you think about it, yourself?

3. Together with Fr. Morisseau I had thought that Fr. Bizeuil would be a very good bursar for you. He would, assuredly, follow the instructions you laid down for him, and be completely under your guidance. You might, perhaps, name an assistant bursar for each section. Bizeuil did not leave Issoudun, remaining on for many years as one of Chevalier's assistants in the St. Cyr parish.

Fr. Maillard could then come to Issoudun where I would give him responsibility for the Office (Bureau) which is a very important post. In the event Maillard remained bursar in Tilburg for two more years until July 1885. If we do not meet his wishes, he will express his displeasure and be lacking in good will. Give consideration to this and let me know what you think. Meanwhile, teachers are needed at our Petite Oeuvre and the Ecole Libre. Fr. Tréand was in charge of the former; E. Thomas of the latter. Outsiders cannot teach, and run the danger of being expelled. It would help if you could let us have Brother Jullien who has only done one part of his degree course and is preparing to complete the other. We could make Offermans available to you. André Jullien left the Tilburg scholasticate for that of Rome in October 1884. Offermans, having been Novice Master and Provincial, 1897-1902, left the Society in 1903.

It is likely that the Archbishop will call back Rollin to his major seminary. I shall try to see to it that he stays with you until he ends his Novitiate, and then I shall ask the Archbishop if I can have him for the Petite Oeuvre while still enrolled in the major seminary's register. Fr. Thomas very much wants Brother Ilge to teach design; apart from being a Prussian, I do not think he is sufficiently well trained. Ilge was ordained on December 20, 1884, at Bois-le-Duc.

Meanwhile, when Fr. Morisseau leaves for Tilburg, I shall no longer have an Assistant with me, and is this really necessary? Fr. Morisseau is prepared to depart and names Fr. Batard as his replacement, but is he suitable? All Chevalier's Assistants were now working away from Issoudun: Jouët in Rome, Guyot at Vichy, Piperon and Morisseau at Tilburg. Morisseau's suggestion of Batard was no more than that.

Issoudun, September 27, 1883

Dear Father,

I received all your letters dealing with the "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" issue. I haven't received yet the official document from the Holy Office indicating the appropriate changes to be made.

1. Is it in fact "ineffable" which should replace "without limits"? The word "powerful" remains; the Holy Office would not change it for that of "power" since it comes to the same thing. The change would be much easier if one simply added "ineffable" as you do.

2. It is very definitively "heavenly treasury" which must replace "sovereign mistress". I am amazed that they created difficulties for you with regard to "treasury of the Sacred Heart" since a massive number of saints use this word:

"Thesauraria	Jesu Christi	(St. Albert the Great. Sermo 2 in Nat. BMV)
	Dei	(Jacobus de Voragine)
	Patris Aetemi	(id)
	Spiritus Sancti	(St. Bernard of Siena Sermo 52)
	Dei	(id. De Purif. Serm.)
	Altissimi	(Ber. De Busto. Serm. 2)

For the "Sub tuum of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart," one can very easily replace "mistress" with the words "dispensatrix of graces", etc., and leave in the word "sovereign" which then becomes very unobjectionable. Reply immediately so that I can make the corrections asked for.

The parish priest of La-Châtre is very keen to get the title of apostolic missionary. The Congregation of Propaganda grants it readily, but the bishop of the diocese must sign the request. I brought this to his (the priest's) attention when he asked me to get you to present his request. Since he does not get on with our Archbishop, he left out this essential part of the form. Would you be good enough, then, to return the petition and state at the same time that it is essential to have the petition signed by the Archbishop of Bourges.

Cheerio, dear Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Write directly to the Archbishop of Bourges to let him know the result of your endeavours concerning the "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart", and, also, the latest difficulties which have arisen for us about pictures and statues for private worship and, concerning which, you might ask him to come to our aid on these issues.

Issoudun, October 5, 1883

Dear Father,

I received your letters. Many thanks.

1. Freely Fr. Morisseau and I give our assent to the good brothers you are putting forward for perpetual vows.
2. This issue concerning pictures, statues, remains a mystery, and I can foresee here the onset of fresh problems. Cardinal Patrizi in his letter to Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne stated that the Issoudun statue was most proper, and the Holy Office had no intention of taking action against it, and here we are now faced with a situation where the pictures are being proscribed for private devotion. Well then let that of Gubbio be also proscribed! (The Bianchi Madonna, publicly venerated since August 14, 1330, crowned July 12, 1882. A canon named Luigi Biaschelli had written about this Madonna to Jouët in 1876, May 7: "The Blessed Virgin is upright, arms spread out in a prayerful attitude, life-sized. The child Jesus would appear to be two years old and is on his feet before Mary. With one hand he gestures towards the Virgin, His Mother, and with the other he holds a bunch of flowers and displays his sacred chest. A little silver heart has recently been added.")

Why has the same Congregation stated in a decree which we have kept that the earlier statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the very one you have in your Rome church, can be honoured in public worship so long as it is not called Our Lady of the Sacred Heart? If this representation was objectionable, it would have been forbidden as a matter of course. I do not understand all this any more. Get directly in touch with Archbishop Marchal about this. I shall send on to him all your observations.

3. I have had no news from our Oceania confrères. I am worried.
4. Archbishop Marchal has had the Constitutions of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for the past six months. Newly adapted since December 8, 1882, when Madame Hartzler took over. Write directly to him asking what he thinks about them. I have done so several times and he is putting it off all the time. Mention to him that his Eminence Cardinal Simeoni recalls the observations His Grace put forward about this issue concerning the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Religious Congregation during his last visit to Rome, and about which he (Cardinal Simeoni) spoke to you, saying that he would like to have their Constitutions as approved by the Archbishop of Bourges, so that they could be presented to the Holy Father for the decree of approval. Archbishop Marchal will act immediately. These sisters are doing well; there are 12 of them; in a little while they will be 14.
5. Father Couppé has informed me that he is in need of 4,000 francs (about 12,560 euros). I wrote to him 8 days ago to write a cheque on my account for this sum; I haven't had anything yet.
6. When exactly must we come forward with the 23,000 francs (about 72,260 euros) owed to the Pope? Money owed to the Vatican, inclusive of interest and borrowings for the purchase of the Piazza Navona church.

Cheerio, my friend.

NB: Fr. Piperon wants Fr. Morisseau for the Tilburg Scholasticate.

Chevalier doesn't wish it to be understood by Jouët that Morisseau was in particular suggested by himself! But from August Piperon would be looking for either Tréand or Morisseau, the latter to become involved with the scholastics. Piperon letter, August 24, 1883.

There you have all I know about things. What is happening in relation to the Captier issue? Issoudun, October 11, 1883

Dear Father,

I have thought about sending you Fr. Morisseau; he would willingly make himself available to your request. But Fr. Guyot's arrival in Issoudun has set things back. Given his attitude, which you are aware of, he has bemoaned this appointment, absolutely insisting that Fr. Morisseau remains with me as an adviser. But he (Morisseau) never gives me advice; as an assistant he has nothing to offer, and I have to do everything myself; his departure would leave no void to be filled. Fr. Guyot thinks otherwise, and without any concern for the Tilburg Scholasticate. Sad, pathetic confrère!... He maintains that Fr. Durin, instead of Fr. Morisseau, should go to Tilburg. Where before he was putting down Fr. Durin, he is acclaiming him at the present time.

Guyot was strongly opposed to Durin's appointment as head of the mission to Oceania, 1881, being very forceful on this issue. Both Durin and himself came, originally, from the same diocese: Moulins.

I can well go along with it. It is Fr. Durin, then, who would, under your leadership, take over the scholasticate and act in keeping with your wishes. In sum I think you will be satisfied. The happenings you are aware of (the South Seas debacle) have made him flexible. He is pious, dedicated, intelligent and a good theologian. For the rest, keep me informed. A registered letter will be sent to you.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Two days later, presumably on receiving Chevalier's October 11 letter, Piperon wrote to Jouët threatening to resign at Tilburg if the idea was persisted in of sending Durin to him. As it turned out it was, indeed, Morisseau who went to Tilburg.

Dear Father,

1. I saw the Archbishop of Bourges and he is willing to argue the case for the older statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Make out for him a position paper of the issue to be treated. He would like to have in the dossier you will be sending on to him a picture of the Gubbio statue, with a historical summary of this Madonna, the pilgrimages, the special characteristics, etc., in a word all the documentation which will be helpful in advising him on this issue.

2. Ask straightaway Monsignor Folchi (Vatican official involved in the loan from the Holy See towards the purchase of the Piazza Navona church) to write a cheque against my account by the 15th of this month. I shall be able to pay him and he can expect it to be in his account by the 15th. The amount comes to 23,000 lire and not 23,000 francs, which is the equivalent of 21,000 francs, or close to it, in our currency. He will, or his banker, make up the difference, in keeping with the current rate. He should send the draft to Mr. Piquet, the Issoudun banker.

3. Fr. Guyot is here at Issoudun. It has been decided that Fr. Morisseau should go to Tilburg to take charge of the Scholasticate and help Fr. Piperon. Fr. Guyot does not agree with this proposal, stubbornly insisting that Fr. Morisseau should stay in Issoudun to keep an eye without doubt on our activities (Chevalier's in particular) and would like to see Fr. Durin going to Tilburg in his (Morisseau's) place. Durin, in the event, would return to the USA. As it happens, I go along with this (the original) decision (Morisseau appointed to Tilburg). I excuse myself of responsibility. What kind of reaction would Fr. Piperon experience if he saw Fr. Durin arriving?

Dear Father,

1. I had thought about sending Fr. Hartzler to Oceania with Fr. Vatan, but Fr. Ramot has written to me to say that Fr. Hartzler is not reliable, lacks judgment and piety, and doesn't think he is yet mature enough for the missions; on the other hand Mother (the nun, Hartzler's mother) has sent me the enclosed letter. What am I to do? What Brothers should be sent? Would Fr. Piperon release the Italian brother? If Fr. Verjus was ordained by All Saints (November 1) or during the month of November, he could hopefully, leave with Fr. Vatan since Fr. Joby, the Marist procurator in Sydney, is agreeable to take them with him at the end of November; it would be an ideal situation.
2. I am returning the proofs to Father Couppé. I was quite happy to correct them. If sufficient work on them hasn't been carried out, add whatever the Master of the Sacred Palace will suggest to you. Nevertheless I have to tell you that Mary is called 16 times by the Holy Fathers (of the Church) the redemption of mankind, the redemption of mortal life, the redemption of souls, etc., as well as redemptrix, seven times, and réparatrix 38 times. Consult the Summa Aurea Polyanthea Mariana under the words listed.
3. Fr. Morisseau has to go to Tilburg; his presence here is, obviously, of no great help to me. But Fr. Guyot's arrival in Issoudun turned things upside down. He would choose Fr. Durin for Tilburg. For all that Father Durin might be good for nothing, so much the more would Fr. Guyot promote him at the present time, and believe him to be wanted more by Fr. Piperon than Fr. Morisseau, whom he believes to be irreplaceable at Issoudun. I am sorry he has to go to the scholasticate. I give way for the sake of peace.
4. Yes, call to orders all those whom you mention.
5. I am forwarding for your consideration the notification we intend to place in our forthcoming Annals on the subject of "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart". Return it with your comments.
6. With regard to "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart", if you try to get 2 or 300 days' indulgence for everyone who recites it toties quoties (continuously), it would be a marvellous outcome because, thereby, the promulgation of this new favour would highlight the prestige to be attached to the change, and have a marvellous impact; this changed prayer would not appear to have undergone any setback (disapproval). Do everything possible to bring this about. It would be minor compensation.
7. I have the means of paying on the 15th of this month the 23,000 lire owed to the Pope. I am awaiting the draft.

1. I am returning some of the proof pages to you (for the work on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, due eventually to appear in 1884). It is depressing to be faced with such slow progress. I beg you to speed up the printing and not give up on it.

2. Have you any brother in Rome who could leave from Tilburg (for Oceania) with Brother Joseph and the priests?

Joseph Morees left on October 20, 1890, for Oceania; he had to be sent away in 1896 due to his conduct; dismissed from vows, June 1897.

3. Fr. Hartzer arrived from America yesterday, very happy to be leaving for Oceania. I shall send him with Fr. Joly. If you think that Brother Verjus is sufficiently serious and pious, we could send him also to Fr. Navarre. Since they will all be living together and under the leadership of Fr. Navarre, who is very prudent, I don't believe there will be any serious problem involved.

4. Fr. Hartzer tells that he met a Marine Commissioner in Paris who assured him that the Messageries of Marseilles (a sailing company) would take gratuitously to Sydney the missionaries approved by the Holy See for the Oceania missions. This would mean a great saving of financial resources. We shall have 5 therefore, three priests and two brothers if you can provide one of the latter who is serious and very reliable.

In the event there were three priests and one brother, the Italian Guiseppe de Sanctis who came from Tilburg not Rome.

5. I don't hear a mention of Fr. Joly any more. Where is he? When is he leaving? Try and find out.

6. Fr. Couppé would like very much to go on the missions. If he could be replaced where he is with you, I shall be very much in favour (of his going on the missions). But who is there to replace him?

7. Thank the dear little brothers, Barral and Buisson, for their kind letters. I pray earnestly for them.

8. It is out of order that you should again borrow in order to pay your debts; it would be ruinous to fall once more into the same kind of financial embarrassment. Write to some people who are benefactors and outline your situation. To help you I should like you to make out a financial draft in my name through Mr. Piquet, the banker, for the sum of 5,000 francs payable in the early days of November!

9. If the Sovereign Pontiff had taken so much to heart the completion of our Rome church, he would overlook what is owed to him, instead of our paying the interest, interest arising from delays in the payment. It is unbelievable!

2. Fr. Piperon tells me that a priest in the Novitiate, Fr. Gaillard from the Nantes diocese, aged 45, is ready and available to go to Oceania.

Benjamin Gaillard, aged 51 contrary to Chevalier's 45, still a novice, went to Marseilles and sailed with the others, making his profession on December 18, 1883, the day before the boat sailed. He had been a priest since 1859, dying at Kiribati, Gilbert and Ellis Islands, on June 15, 1897, fourteen years after he left Marseilles and Tilburg.

2. I believe that when appointing confrères who are staying on the missions, or when making changes, the agreement of the assistants is not required; have a look at the Constitutions: General Council – issues reserved to it.

The Constitutions were those of 1877, and before any acceptance of foreign mission undertakings, but the emphasis on the qualities needed for those undertaking foreign mission work would suggest a consensus from the assistants about the suitability of those departing.

3. I doubt if Fr. Verjus would be as helpful to you as Fr. Couppé. I would be faulted if I made this change. The well-being of the Rome house is much too important. On it depends in large part the future of our Society. (The Jouët file does not have this letter with his suggestion that Verjus might replace Couppé.) I give my support for your brother.

Dear Father,

Fr. Piperon has informed me of Fr. Calliol's departure. He tells me that this kind confrère has left the Novitiate. I am very sad about this... He should have been dissuaded from the start and, likewise, Fr. Sabard who has also left. Good Fr. Piperon is sometimes harsh to the point of discouragement, especially with those priests who come in from the ministry. When, then, there is a great need for tact and considerateness to help them settle in, he treats them harshly and does not want to allow for any concessions right from the beginning. This is a mistake. With such an approach he alienates those with serious vocations, proven candidates who in a short time would have provided us with tremendous support in the scarcity where we find ourselves. I wrote an important letter to him about this matter, and my hope is that he will draw lessons from it for the future. I doubt very much if Fr. Morisseau shares these views (with Piperon). We are having strong opposition from Fathers Guyot and Morisseau about the latest dispatching of members to the Oceania mission. What brings me to mention this is a letter I have just received from Fr. Piperon in which he informs me that "Fr. Morisseau is not of the viewpoint that we should send during the month of December a stream (of members), and this serious matter should have been put before the Council, etc." It is outrageous to be faced with this systematic opposition. What can be done?

I received your telegram today about the marriage of Miss David. Send on to me immediately the documents for the Massenot marriage since I must forward it to them in the remote depths of the Allier. There is just about enough time.

Dear Father,

I received just now a long letter from Fr. Navarre (76 pages) providing me with all the details about the fire. It is most interesting. I shall forward it to you within a few days. It was a Mr. Farrell, a businessman, originally Irish, and an unbeliever (it is to be understood that he had renounced his Catholicism, see below) who, unhappy that our confrères were setting themselves up there, arranged for a native, to whom he gave a gun, to set a fire going during the night. He hoped that they (the missionaries) would die in the flames. About 11pm they were woken up. Everything was blazing; they had only time to save themselves... Everything, absolutely everything, was burned: breviaries, documents, Roman authorization, provisions, furniture, chalices, nothing at all left...

Fr. Navarre seized the opportunity through a passing ship to go to Sydney with the ill Brother Fromm and the pathetic Fr. Lannuzel who prefers Australia to New Britain. Deo Gratias!

Only Fr. Cramaille stayed with the natives. What is going to become of him? Fr. Navarre tells me that he will wait in Sydney for the confrères (the new batch on the way out with the Marist - see above) and for the financial aid we must send on to him.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Thomas Farrell died three years later in 1886. He was, on his arrival in New Guinea, married to an Australian, but then took off with Emma Coe, 'Queen Emma', a mixed-race Samoan, educated both in San Francisco and Sydney by her American father. She was nineteen when she married the Scot James Forsyth in 1869, who brought her with him to New Guinea where, in 1878, they set themselves up as traders for the German company known as Deutsche Handels-und Plantagenesell-Schaft who, in turn, were represented by Hertscheim and Company as well as Thomas Farrell, but by 1881 the latter had struck off on his own. Hence his proximity to the newly-arrived missionaries on the night of the fire and, of course, hostility which lasted until his death three years later.

Dear Father,

1. I am sending on to you two letters given to me by Fr. Huguenot, a parish priest in the Issoudun area, one for the Pope the other for Cardinal Jacobini, and it's the Archbishop who wrote them (the letters) requesting a brief for the works of Fr. Huguenot. You are about to receive these works with the request to present them to the Cardinal who will deal with it himself thereafter.

2. Fr. Navarre tells me that all his documentation has been burned; you must, then, make a request for a replacement which our confrères who are about to leave can take with them. He also wants all the requisite faculties for scapulars and setting up Stations of the Cross – do not forget this.

3. Here are the names of the departing confrères: they are Fathers Louis Vatan, Fernand Hartzer and Gaillard. The latter, Gaillard, has still four months of his novitiate to complete; he is fifty years old, very pious, and is blessed with excellent health; he is very committed and doesn't feel the parting; he is very keen on the missions.

As for the others, you know them. Brother Joseph, an Italian, is going with them.

Brother Joseph, Guisepe de Sanctis from Castelnuovo, near Rome, born November 15, 1858, professed at Tilburg, October 17, 1883. By 1895 he was in Randwick, Sydney, New South Wales, leaving that year to enter the diocese of Grafton, New South Wales.

We are holding over the others for a forthcoming departure.

Dear Father,

Yes, very wholeheartedly I give you permission to call to the priesthood Brothers Vandel and Védère, Brother Merg to the diaconate, and Brothers Buisson and Barral to the subdiaconate.

Chevalier makes a mistake with Merg. It should read Meyer. Merg was at this time at Madeley, Shropshire, in Deidier's college and he would be ordained to major orders in England. See here, Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, Merg at Madeley. Meyer, the future General, an Alsatian like Merg, was ordained Deacon in St. John Lateran's Basilica, December 22, 1883.

I am awaiting the copy of the letter which I shall have to write to His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni.

2. Brother Fromm is to return to Rome. Fr. Navarre is very disappointed with him. He is lacking in judgment, piety and mortification, and he would ask you not to put him in the company of your scholastics and the Petite Oeuvre youngsters for whom he would be something of a nuisance with his blabbering against the mission for which he has no liking.

Yet Fromm would return to New Britain and spend many years there – see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, for a short résumé of his career.

3. Does the "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" with its changes keep the same indulgences? It is to be doubted inasmuch as Leo XIII said nothing. Try then to get 300 days' indulgence to accompany it. It would be some compensation.

The assurance was given that the prayer with its changes kept the same indulgences as before. Chevalier's hoped for 300 days was not to be granted until the May 11, 1940, rescript of the Apostolic Penitentiary, N.3943/40.

4. La Theodora wants you for a fortnight in Barcelona. It is, perhaps, necessary. Note then that I sanction your going there provided nothing goes amiss in Rome.

5. Look, it is 8 days now since I had the last fresh proofs of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart book. It is very disappointing.

6. Try to obtain for the Superior of our Congregation the authority to provide his confrères with the powers to grant indulgences, and this with respect to all scapulars in use, etc.

7. Have you sent on to the Archbishop of Bourges the memorandum he was looking for with reference to the earlier presentation (picture) of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart? These are the issues which need to be seen to; hurry up.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

I am forwarding to you straightaway the letter of Fr. Navarre which you were looking for. (Written on board ship while Navarre was on his way to Sydney after the fire.) There are words in this letter which are not at all flattering about Fr. Cramaille and Brother Fromm. Take notice of this.

Convey my appreciative respects and thanks to Monsignors de Fang... (illegible) and Morel.

I sent on to the President of the Propagation of the Faith, Paris, Fr. Navarre's report, as well as a lengthy letter addressed to him, which did not touch on the later events (the fire and the losses entailed).

November 23, 1883

To His Excellency Dominic Jacobini, Archbishop of Cyr,
Secretary of the Sacred Congregation of Propaganda Fide.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Your Grace,

The very generous gift of three thousand francs (about 9,420 euros) which Your Excellency kindly forwarded to me through Fr. Jouët in the name of His Excellency Cardinal Simeoni, Prefect of Propaganda, for our poor mission of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart at Beridni (New Britain – Oceania), and the very kind and supportive letter which Your Grace so graciously sent with this very welcome contribution, reached me at the very moment I received the very upsetting news from our confrères about the terrible fire which in June laid waste their work, left them totally bereft of everything, and only came to our notice in a telegram from Sydney in the first days of October (when Navarre arrived in Sydney from New Britain on the 3rd).

This calamitous disaster, according to well-founded reports provided by Fr. Navarre, the mission Superior, was due to premeditated malice on the part of a European whose name and nationality are known.

I sent on all the details to Fr. Jouët, asking him in my name, and that of our Society, to make a report to Propaganda so that the Sacred Congregation can consider the matter and let us know itself the procedure to follow in order to obtain, if that is possible, our rightful justice, and what measures should be taken to prevent similar misfortune.

Far from being discouraged by this latest setback, my good confrères feel that their aspiration to bring about the wishes of Leo XIII grows in them to put everything in place if God grants them the favour to plant the Cross and make the Sacred Heart reign triumphant right at the centre of New Guinea.

Please accept, Your Grace, my most respectful and sincere thanks, and convey to His Eminence, to whom I must write shortly, on the occasion of the departure of our new missionaries, my deepest gratitude.

I am pleased to be Your Grace's very humble and appreciative servant.

To His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni, Prefect of Propaganda.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Most Eminent Cardinal,

We have received, with the kind and so supportive letter from Archbishop Jacobini, Secretary of Propaganda, the generous gift of 3,000 francs (about 9,420 euros) which Your Eminence graciously asked for and received from the Sacred Congregation on behalf of our needy apostolic vicariate in Melanesia and Micronesia. In the name of our dear natives, our cherished confrères who live among them and in the name of our dear little Society we ask Your Eminence to accept our deepest gratitude.

As we were pleased to make known to His Grace, Archbishop Jacobini, we sent on to Fr. Jouët all the details concerning the fire so that he could pass on the same details to the Sacred Congregation of Propaganda about a fire which destroyed the beginnings of the work, and which, according to Fr. Navarre's letters, the Superior of the mission, was the work of an ill-disposed European whose name and nationality are known.

This refers to Thomas Farrell who was an Irish lapsed Catholic - see above, article 1027 - who was hostile to the newly-arrived missionaries because he didn't want them to have the land on which they were setting up the mission.

While awaiting further knowledge about such a dastardly action, we would petition Your Grace to grant the faculty of apostolic missionaries to three priests, B. Gaillard, Louis Vatan and Fernand Hartzler, all members of our Society who are preparing to leave on December 19 next, together with a lay-brother (de Sanctis, see above) in support of our Oceania Fathers. Fr. Jouët will provide you with all the information you may wish to have about them.

Please accept, Your Cardinal Eminence, my renewed respectful thanks as I have the honour to be Your Eminence's humble and obedient servant.

The foregoing letter was, in all probability, written by Jouët and it is not the first one at this time, see article 1031 above.

Benjamin Gaillard, from the Nantes area, eventually went to Kiribati, Gilbert and Ellis Islands, where he died in 1897 at the age of 65. Louis Vatan, from Verdigny in the Archdiocese of Bourges, died in 1887 at Vulavolo, Papua New Guinea in his 34th year. The Alsatian Fernand Hartzler, born in 1858, died in 1932 at the age of 74. He would spend some time in Glastonbury. On this, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, Glastonbury.

Dear Father,

1. I have received all the faculties.
2. If you can do so at the same time as when you are going to Spain, I wholeheartedly approve your stopping over at Perpignan and Figueras. I most approvingly endorse your visit to Marseilles on the 18th to oversee the departure of our confrères on the 19th, bidding them a final farewell in my name and everyone else's.
3. I have had another letter from Fr. Navarre which I am sending on to you. He is doing the right thing in refusing faculties to Fr. Lannuzel. (Chevalier had for some time wanted disengagement from the latter.)
4. If there could be a Procure in Australia (Chevalier is referring to an MSC-owned rest, support, house) where our exhausted priests could go and rest, this would be a very good thing since New Guinea must not be given up. Perhaps Brisbane or Cooktown would be suitable. Fr. Durin would be willing to go there, but this unfortunate priest doesn't know what he wants. I believe that he cannot be relied on for anything. He only wants to return to America or go to Australia. What can be done with him?

5. Fr. Miniot is asking for permission to set up a Novitiate in Spain, saying with good reason that the Spanish would never go to Tilburg. Would Rome agree to this? And, then, who would take charge of it? Fr. Miniot says that, to begin with, he will do what he can, and that later something better would follow.

6. And what about the statue of Our Lady?

In the expectation that you are still in Marseilles, I am forwarding you this latest letter from Fr. Caër. (An undated letter about the offer by Mr. de Villalongua, Barcelona, of a property at Figueras for a school or college.) Try to be at Figueras on the suggested day, and drop him a line to let him know when you are arriving. It is, perhaps, a fortuitous moment with which Divine Providence favours us. Let me know how everything went at Marseilles.

Cheerio, wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

There follows a letter from the Spanish priest J. Caër, written by him on December 11, intended for Jouët and sent on to him by Chevalier, but sent with a letter to Chevalier himself, at Issoudun.

Reverend Father (Jouët),

The venerable Superior General has given me the good news that the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars has granted me permission to go to your Novitiate in Holland and has told me to ask you to petition for the Indult which will grant me this favour. Be kind enough to send it on to me as quickly as possible at the Novitiate itself where I hope to go within eight days; or, if you think so, send it to the Issoudun house. I am about to ask the Novice Master the details of the journey, and on getting his reply I shall leave straightaway.

Another issue, quite important in my view, needs to be brought up. Providence has provided me with the opportunity to express my gratitude towards the Congregation. Mr. de Villalongua, a very rich Barcelona man, with myself as intermediary, is making you an offer of a new, completed, building in Figueras. I left a long letter for you with his manager, Mr. Mouragas, also his right-hand man at the Town Hall (Mayor's office), in order to bring you up to date on everything.

You will find for the convent of the Presentation Sisters an architect or entrepreneur so that you can do whatever is necessary in the way of improvements to the interior of this magnificent building which Mr. de Villalongua is in a hurry to finish. This estimable Christian will be your most distinguished Spanish benefactor, particularly so if you set yourselves up in Figueras which is very close to his heart.

I am writing in haste as I am set on getting the Indult which will allow me to begin the novitiate canonically, and I do not want to miss this morning's post.

I have the honour to be your respectful and obliged servant,

Dear Father,

Many thanks for your good wishes and those of your kind community. I send you mine in turn. May the Sacred Heart of Jesus grant them! I am delighted with the two new priests added to your number. May they be saintly religious! I am returning the proofs from chapter XIX. (Again the long drawn out preparation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart due to be published this coming year, 1884.) How calamitous! This delay is not only to be deplored, but it is also prejudicial. I promised this work to the Paris editor for the month of January, and he, in consequence, made his arrangements. This is a very serious matter, then, and I find myself forced to look for indemnities from your printer. Bring this matter up with him or I shall leave over the whole thing. You should have received more than 8 days ago number V which is the ending of chapter XIX. I beg you to hurry up.

You and Father Jouët both promised to ask me for no more money, stating that you could now pay what you owed and had enough with which to cope financially. Believing you, I made borrowings on your behalf to smooth living costs and help, as well, the Mother house whose costs are enormous, as it is in all (religious) societies. But here you come again, both of you, at this present moment looking for financial help. Your promises were not to be taken seriously then? It is not a question of always demanding more and more from us. You need to make a definite choice. Set out your budget for 1884, and lay out your likely expenses for the year. You should include within your expenses the paying off of your debts and the upkeep of your house and personnel. If your supposed expenses exceed your intake, it must necessarily mean that a balancing is called for so that your intake can cover your outlay. You will send the budget on to me as soon as possible. If your personnel need to be reduced, it will necessarily have to be so! I repeat to you: you must not have any more scholastics, Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) youngsters, or brothers, except insofar as you can feed them and clothe them yourselves from your own resources.

I am not going to hide it from you: the Council (administration) priests are particularly unhappy with the Rome house administration, a bottomless pit which swallows everything. This cannot continue any longer. You must, then, take action on this. Present this letter to Fr. Jouët on his return (from Spain). I am sending another 2,000 francs (about 6,280 euros) to help you out. Take note that it will be the last.(!)

What are your thoughts about Figueras? Would Mr. de Villalonga be inclined to let us have one of his Barcelona houses? What would happen to our modest little house and dear Fr. Miniot? What might be done with it? Would it be your view to have the Novitiate there? I think that it (the house) could still be useful, but what can be arranged? The Perpignan house seems to me to be a proposition which is very difficult to accept as it is too far away from the centre. What can one do with it? Have a Petite Oeuvre there? But we need students. Who would be in charge, etc.? Besides we haven't got the financial resources.

Issoudun, December 30, 1883

Dear Father,

Fr. Couppé expressed his concern when he saw your empty account and the debts due to be paid. You should have foreseen all this before you went away and done the best you could to find money or lower your bills. The previous occasion you went away, the same thing happened. There is enough here to shake one's vocation. Since you are in charge of the Rome house, it is on you it devolves to find the necessary funds if you want it to prosper. Try to get back to your charge as soon as possible and take control of things. I am sending 2,000 francs (about 6,280 euros) to Fr. Couppé to meet the more pressing problems. It is not possible to provide more. You are placing me in a situation which is not sustainable. It is imperative that I have to borrow on your behalf and that, consequently, I am in danger of bankrupting our Society. During the last holidays, in order to come by money from me which you needed, you wrote to me, emphasizing in every way that those would be the last borrowings, that your house would in future be self-sufficient, etc. These were but words, and it is necessary to face reality. Can you, or can you not, support your house with your normal resources? If the answer is in the negative, write, appeal, and set about looking for money. If, in spite of everything, you cannot meet this deficit of 12,000 francs (about 37,704 euros), everything will have to end. You will stay by yourself in the house with a brother and a cook. You will only have to deal with the Procure and your Association. One must necessarily take up a position. Experience has shown that this Rome house only compromises our (financial) situation. Get yourself quickly to Fr. Couppé; let both of you seriously consider the situation without disillusioning yourselves. Set out your budget, the bills you can expect for 1884, and the likely expenses, having in mind the money you owe. Then you will send on to me straightaway this budget, and if the income cannot cover the expenses and the debts you will dismiss the Petite Oeuvre youngsters, and I shall withdraw the scholastics in keeping with your resources. Your house on its own creates more worries and difficulties for me than all the others.

Mr. Benevot des Haussois,
General Manager to Marquis de Rays,
116 rue du Bac, Paris.

Issoudun, January 2, 1884

Dear Sir,

I am completely unaware of what happened in Marseilles involving the Gazette du Midi and the departure of my confrères. I am, moreover, sorry that I am not in a position to tell you about the problems brought up by the papers. The truth comes out with difficulty.

The context of the foregoing is to be explained by the following. At the time of writing, the Marquis de Rays and Mr. E. Sumier, former editor of 'La Nouvelle France' and 'La Gazette du Midi', had been in prison for several months awaiting trial. There had been a denial in the Gazette du Midi with respect to a news item in La Nouvelle France about the departure of three MSC priests and a brother to join Fr. Navarre.

I am completely unaware of what went on between the Holy See and the Marquis de Rays concerning the Vicariates of Melanesia and Micronesia.

What remains certain (Chevalier uses Benevot's phrase in reply).

1. is that the Pope himself offered us through Cardinal Simeoni this Oceania mission without any reference whatever to the Marquis de Rays or New France.

Once this twin vicariate was made over to our Society I wrote to Rome to ascertain what attitude we should take in relation to Port Breton and the colony set up there. I had a reply stating that we could go directly to Port Breton because there we would have support of a colonial kind to begin our evangelization work, but our mission was independent of the Marquis de Rays' undertakings, the future of which was uncertain, and it had to be made certain that our undertaking was not identified in any way with that of the colony, and that we were missionaries for all the islands of Melanesia and Micronesia and not just for New France which was only a tiny part of our vicariate, and no priest could exercise ministry in these countries without being formally authorized by the mission Superior.

2. That which is likewise certain: the Marquis de Rays paid the expenses of my confrères as far as Manila and met everything very generously, but once in Manila, after the seizure of the boat, they were left to their fate, and it was only after 5 or 6 months of further sea journeys at their own expense they disembarked at Sydney where the Chandennagor, I agree, took them to New Guinea without charge. There the captain left them some provisions, and Fr. Navarre considered it proper to write a letter thanking the Marquis de Rays. (Letter from Blanche Bay, October 3, 1882.)

3. As for the resources made available by the inhabitants of the colony, they were not very many so far as the mission is concerned.

4. The missionaries did not have or acknowledge any head other than the Sovereign Pontiff who sent them and from whom they received all their authorization.

5. No, certainly not, the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart (the scope of their work) do not wish "...to limit their promotion to the island of New Britain alone". If the good Lord blesses their undertakings, in time they will spread their zeal throughout New Guinea and the nearby islands, as well as the others in their double vicariate. If the colonizing work picks up and prospers, which I hope most wholeheartedly will happen, we shall do all we can to provide religious services and, especially, what Rome suggests to us.

Please, Sir, accept my respectful good wishes in Corde Jesu.

J. Chevalier.

L 18840104

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Spain.

Issoudun, January 4, 1884

Dear Father,

1. Thanks for your letter. If I have rightly understood it, here is a summing up of Mr. Villalonga's conditions: the use of the property in perpetuity through a fictitious sale on condition that:

1. the rent be paid;
2. the house is looked after;

3. a daily mass is offered in perpetuity;
4. the family tomb is cared for.
5. Or in the event of a lack of success on our part, on our departure from Figueras, there will be an obligatory sale of the house, and the proceeds made over to the Bishop of Gerona for distribution to the poor.

All this is equivalent to a renting on our side of this property whose real owner is the Bishop in the event that we leave the place. The charges we have to meet, whatever Mr. Villalonga says, are the equivalent of renting at 1,500 or 2,000 francs; you can put it at 1,200 if you like, that at the very least.

In the circumstances of the charges laid down in your letter, with the house handed back as new, Mr. Villalonga would be assured in perpetuity of a rent not less than 12,000 francs, or after staying 10 years at Figueras we would have to leave this property with no conditions attached. Try to discuss these conditions. In any event try to get as advantageous an agreement as is possible from Mr. Villalonga which you will submit to our Society's assistants since their agreement will be necessary. Then if this transaction is likely to succeed I shall go to Figueras.

2. What are we going to do with the unfortunate Barcelona house? Should we leave it and go to Figueras? Shall we be able to sell it? Next year we must find the 60,000 francs we still owe on this house. If we stay in Barcelona who shall we put there as Superior? Fr. Bontemps? But is he the right man? And then who would look after our French Annals. Let me have your thoughts on all of this.
3. If you think it would help your Rome house if you were to go and look for money in Paris, Marseilles, Lyons, Brussels, etc., set out on this undertaking if your health stands up to it; look after yourself my good friend. You will come to Issoudun before returning to Rome.
4. The Marquis de Rays has been sentenced to 4 years in prison and a fine of 3,000 francs. Mr. Sumier received a 2-year sentence. It's a disastrous outcome!

Fr. Ramière has died in Toulouse. He is a loss.

Dear Father,

Father Caër doesn't need a testimonial letter for three reasons:
The first is that this formality has already been met from the time he entered the Congregation he is leaving.
The second is that the supportive testimony of his Superior General takes its place.
The third is Rome's indult authorizing him to come to us.

See to it then that he takes the habit straightaway and then over the intervening months you will judge whether or not he is suitable. I hope you will be pleased with him. Uncertainty and scrupulous concerns are quite likely to turn away the most seriously intent vocations.

Dear Father,

Here's a letter for Fr. Barral. Have a word with him about what's to be done. If you were to come and spend Holy Week with us, you might preach the Women's Retreat, hear confessions and this would greatly please everyone. I believe that you can do this. Come, and your presence will do a lot of good.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

A Congregation has been established at Saint Quentin through the influence of Fr. Captier (formerly an MSC), called Oblates of the Sacred Heart. I am told that they have set up some kind of a Novitiate at Sittard and that they promote devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Find out about this and what truth there is in it. Take a close look at it. Fr. Captier has a high opinion of himself... He claims he has had revelations and that his community should absorb all the others. Write to Fr. Gilguin who knows all this and he will let you know the latest.

The Society to which Chevalier refers was already canonically established from July 1877, its founder, a Fr. Dehon, made his profession on June 28, 1878 in the Oblates of the Heart of Jesus. Captier left the MSCs in January 1879, and quite some time later, November 21, 1880, he entered Dehon's Oblates. Chevalier is incorrect, then, where he attributes a founder's impact to Captier, but he did influence Dehon in an unbalanced manner to the point that the Oblates of the Sacred Heart were suppressed on December 3, 1883, beginning under a new name, Priests of the Sacred Heart, in 1884. Captier left Saint Quentin in 1884, after the condemnation. He died in 1900. As an ex-MS-Captier brought with him devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, especially the prayers, hence Chevalier's references to the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart devotion at the Sittard Novitiate of Dehon's new Society.

Issoudun, January 11, 1884

Dear Father,

1. I received your kind letter from Perpignan with the map of the property. It does not tell me (a) how many storeys and rooms the house has. What do you think can be done with it? (b) What distance is the house from the town (cathedral), or (c) if it is in the middle of a developed area, and (d) if the archpriest would be satisfied with a priest and brother for the time being while we await better prospects.
2. I await then Mr. Villalonga's plans for Figueras. He must leave aside the stipulation about a perpetual mass which cannot become a burden for us; if he still wants us to go ahead with it, this foundation mass cannot be less than 2 francs (roughly 6.28 euros) since we have at this price as many mass stipends as we want. If he does not wish to have this arrangement on our part, and holds us to the celebration of this mass every day, it seems to me that we shall lay down a condition, especially if we were to leave the place for one reason or another, that he give us as much as one thousand francs (about 3,140 euros) in indemnity for the years we have spent at Figueras. I await, then, his plans for the contract, and we shall see.
3. As for the history of the picture and statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the early representation, what has become of it? Has the Archbishop of Bourges sent you a memorandum on this matter? Have you any expectations, or do you think that it's best to leave the whole thing to rest?
4. I am forwarding to you the proofs from Fr. Piperon's work which I have altered here and there, and which you should also touch up where you think it opportune. It seems to me to be a serious work and answers a pressing need in our Society. Most of our young and old confrères are ignorant about the principles of the religious life and its obligations. This work takes in the explanation of our three vows. I am only sending a section of it on to you because the printing machine hasn't enough characters to do everything at the one time. Try and have it read also by Fr. Couppé who will let you have his impressions which you can then forward to me together with your own.
5. If you think it would financially help your Rome undertaking if you preached for Lent in Barcelona or elsewhere, see what you can do. I give you full permission.
6. Ask your printer to hurry up with the printing of the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Cheerio, Fr.

Issoudun, January 15, 1884

Dear Father Jouët,

1. Fr. Piperon doesn't seem to be pleased about Fr. Caër being sent to him, and is creating difficulties about his testimonial letters. Fr. Caër presents a reasonable case which seems fair to me: "I produced these documents," he says, "when I entered the community which I left. My Superior General vouches for me very favourably. Moreover, Rome gave me permission to enter the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. Accordingly, there is no necessity for me to come up with new testimonial letters from the same bishops who have already provided them." For greater ease of mind, refer the matter to the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars and send on the reply to Fr. Piperon.

2. Fr. Píperon would like you to ask for permission to convert into a dormitory the loft over the chapel. There would be no beds above the sanctuary. The dormitory would only be above the nave.

Issoudun, January 27, 1884

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. Do whatever the Master of the Sacred Palace requests and hurry on with the printing of the book which is so urgently required.

2. I wrote to Fr. Navarre passing on to him the wishes of the Propaganda Congregation with regard to New Guinea and Thursday Island. I sent on Bishop Cani's letter asking him (Navarre) to do everything possible to please him... Who can we place in this island? I can only think of Fr. Cramaille or Fr. Gaillard, or maybe Fr. Cramaille and Fr. Vatan. Eventually Fr. Navarre will see to it.

3. I shall write to Mr. Pascal in Marseilles.

4. Figueras: Mr. Villalonga has forwarded his conditions to me. Besides what you already know, he has laid down a rent of 600 francs (roughly 1,880 euros) for the upkeep of the chapel. In addition, he wants a daily mass and a mass every Sunday and feast day in the hospital when it will be opened, and all this without payment. I replied, with much diplomacy, equanimity and tact, that these obligations were much too demanding for us, and that if he could excuse us, as I hope he will, we would make him share each day, himself, his parents, his children, in the daily Mass of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which we offer on behalf of our Associates, together with that on Thursday and the first Friday of each month. I shall let you have his reply.

5. Perpignan: I haven't had a reply yet; I am amazed.

6. Barcelona: I can only send Fr. Bontemps, but he will not be free until Easter because he is on a mission with Fr. Guyot who imposes his will threateningly like an autocrat. Mr. de Sans has written calling for a new Superior. He must, he says, be appointed by Lent so that he can preach to the French colony. It is very difficult for me to meet his wishes.

7. The book, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart: I am sending on to you, together with the chapter XXIV proofs, the prayers replacing the former ones, and they should be at the end of chapter 25 as confirmation of the efficaciousness of devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Ask Fr. Couppé to select those (the prayers) which appear to him most suitable to correct and put them in order. How many pages has the work, up to chapter XXV exclusively? I need to know in order to consider material which I have yet to add. I should think that 6 or 700 pages in all would be enough. What do you think? I could add or take out.

Cheerio, Father.

L 18840210

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, February 10, 1884

Dear Father,

I have got back from Perpignan, Figueras and Barcelona.

1. Perpignan could be taken on as the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) and novitiate for the south of France. The parish priest offers without reservation this property, save for the requirement that (a) it be handed back to the diocese if we were to leave, and the diocese would then reimburse us for the expenses we incurred; (b) that each year, gratuitously, we give two or three missions in the parishes named by the Bishop; (c) that the parish priest should have lodgings for himself and his housekeeper made available to him on the property if he were to decide on retiring from the ministry.

2. Figueras is a good prospect. This house would be suitable for youngsters in a Spanish apostolic school as well as for a Spanish novitiate.

(a) Mr. Villalonga, whom I met, seemed to be very well disposed, leaving out of consideration altogether the daily mass foundation. He is putting aside for this purpose 20,000 (francs; about 62,830 euros) with the Bishop of Gerona. These masses will come to 2 francs, 20 centimes (roughly 6.85 euros).

(b) He puts us under no obligation to say mass for the Little Sisters of the Poor when they will be established.

(c) For the time being he wants a priest at Figueras to provide mass in the chapel. Then, later on, we can undertake whatever work we want to. He will be responsible for repairs and purchases as we wish, and also for the furnishings.

3. Barcelona would be very suitable as a scholasticate and apostolic school because of the courses our young people could follow at the minor and major seminaries nearby. Later on, when circumstances are appropriate, we can set ourselves up in the city centre. I went with Father Sans to meet the Bishop and he was very kind. But he does not want me to be involved with the French colony without having a church of our own in the centre of the city or in our church at Calle de Rosellon. His reason for this is that in churches or chapels leased we would always be at the mercy of the parish priests or chaplains, and an undertaking would have no stability.

Meanwhile what are we going to do about Perpignan and Figueras? Should we in principle take on both houses, or to which one should we give preference? Would it be better to leave both aside and concentrate on Barcelona? How are the assistants going to take these proposals?

Cheerio, Fr.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Fr. Guyot, who only focuses on his own personal activities wants to hold on to Fr. Bontemps for the Lenten missions, giving it to be understood that he cannot be left on his own! Fr. Bontemps' arrival in Barcelona would then have to be postponed until Easter. What is your view on this? I stopped over at Arenys.

We are scrupulously following the procedures Your Grace set up for us concerning the hospice chaplaincy. I should like to think that the fresh appeals you made to de Portieux will bring about a welcome result. Yes, Your Grace, it is with pleasure that I confirm the proposal I was pleased to put to Your Grace. I am pleased to be of some help to you and offer you some little expression of my appreciation by placing at your disposal one of our senior men in the Institution, Fr. Thomas. He is the most competent, informed, judicious, intelligent, energetic and prudent. His zeal, perhaps, needs to be a little constrained. In your hands, Your Grace, and under your very wise leadership, he could become a valuable addition to your new Châteauroux undertaking. Fr. Marchal (the Bishop's brother and Vicar General) has expressed the wish to come one Sunday to our children's mass (9.45) and to the accompanying catechism. If the Vicar General remains agreeable it will give us great pleasure (to have him). I should like to know what Sunday would be most convenient for him.

Issoudun, February 19, 1884

Dear Father,

1. Don't worry. I got your note book.
2. The parish priest of Valencay, Fr. Lelong, wants to have Fr. Lanctin for the last two weeks of Lent. I had brought this to Fr. Lanctin's notice before your letter arrived. If you need him for Passion Week, you can mention it to him, and he can write to Fr. Lelong that he will be with him only during Holy Week.

Valencay is a small town on the Mahon River, forty kilometres from Châteauroux, its pretty church made distinctive by the tombs of Princess Maria Poniatowska, the last King of Poland's niece, and that of Talleyrand. Frédéric Lelong is also of more than passing interest, becoming Vicar General of Bourges in 1896, October 25, and from 1905 to 1928 he was in charge of the seminary; while on October 24, 1907 it was he, as Dean of the Bourges Chapter and Archdeacon of Issoudun, who gave the homily at Chevalier's funeral.

3. I am still expecting you for Holy Week. Your presence here will not only be a pleasure, but also helpful. Fathers Morisseau and Maillard will replace you for ten days or so.
4. I am delighted to see that your house is getting on very well. Welcome all the worthy vocations which come forward; the good Lord will look after them. Messis multa.
5. I have just arrived from Barcelona. (This, Chevalier's third visit to the north of Spain, lasted from the 1st to the 10th of February.) Fr. Miniot cannot stay on in charge of that house. At Easter he will need to be replaced. You, Fathers Morisseau and Guyot, are very good at pointing out problems, but no-one comes up with the answer. Of two evils, one must choose the lesser. There are only a few months left before Fr. Bontemps takes his final vows. (May 31, 1884, after which he did succeed Miniot in Barcelona, but only for a short time, returning to spend some time at the new house in Paris, rue de Calais. In the summer of 1886 he went to Antwerp as Superior of the new house, but by October of that year, the 20th, he was on his way to the Oceania mission.)

Rome will freely grant an indult if we appoint him to the Barcelona house. Spain will offer as much in the way of resources and recruits as Holland if we look after our Barcelona house. My trip confirms me in this view. A novitiate is absolutely necessary. Spanish vocations, and those from the south of France, even from central France, could never get used to the Dutch climate and life-style. The evidence is there. A novitiate in a warmer and healthier country is absolutely necessary, something we cannot have in France for the time being.

6. The house being made available to us in Figueras is quite suitable, fifty metres of frontage, 22 metres high, two storeyed, and there's a completely new chapel. The house could take 100 or 150 people. The benefactor (Villalonga), very wealthy and whom I met, offers furnishing with all the specifications we suggest and without conditions attached. He has offered in perpetuity a mass foundation at 2 francs a stipend (about 6.10 euros), setting aside 20,000 francs (about 62,830 euros) for the Bishop of Gerona.

Figueras is a town of 13,000 inhabitants, barely one hour away from the frontier by train (55 kilometres from Perpignan). There is a delightful community of French sisters, the Presentation of Tours, in Figueras. The people are very good Christians, and they would greatly like to have a male community. Mr. Villalonga, the benefactor, wants to wait, perhaps, another year for the setting up. A novitiate and a preparatory school for the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) would be very advantageously placed there.

Our Barcelona house would be very advantageous as a scholasticate and apostolic school due to the nearby proximity of the major and minor seminaries, only five minutes away. Our young men could very easily attend the courses in each place, obviating on our side the need for teachers/professors. Fr. Verjus has lived in Barcelona, and knows Spanish, while Fr. Jouët would be very willing to hand over to him. During the forthcoming holidays, two or three young priests in Rome would be free. Our sick or delicate scholastics could go there, and to Figueras, as well as priests suffering from exhaustion.

7. I saw the house and property being offered to us at Perpignan, and it's excellent. It's given without conditions. The Bishop, whom I met, would be very pleased to have us, telling me that we would have many vocations for our Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) in his diocese. The two houses could hold 40 or 50 people. There is a lovely new chapel. The ground, four and a half hectares, is very fertile. The vineyard produces 100 hectolitres of wine and the vegetable garden is leased out at 500 francs (about 1,565 euros). If we could guarantee that we could take up residence next year, it would be held over for us.

Only one or two priests, in expectation of better times, are being asked for. I am sending on the plans to you. Tomorrow I shall send you that of the Figueras property.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Will you soon have some lay brothers available for us? We would need several. Barcelona really needs them.

2. I replied to the Perpignan parish priest quite favourably. I hope his reply will be accepting. Father Miniot or Casas could perhaps go there at Easter during the long holidays. We cannot begin there with a Petite Oeuvre (Little Work); we would need then to open a secondary school and introduce a baccalaureate with its stages, something we do not have.
3. I have heard nothing yet from Mr. Villalonga about Figueras.

2. Did Mr. Vaillant send you 4,000 francs (about 12,560 euros) which, I gather, comes from the General Union?
3. The Perpignan archpriest, becoming aware of our hesitancy about accepting his property, has written to say that the offer no longer holds.
4. The owner of the Figueras property wrote to me today from Barcelona where he lives with an assurance of 3,200 francs (roughly 10,000 euros) a year for the upkeep of the two priests who would be living in the house on condition that each of them says mass for his intentions. He commits himself to carry out all the repairs and changes which we would need to make, and to furnish the house and chapel. I repeat that Figueras is scarcely three quarters of an hour by train from the French frontier. A lovely climate, a Christian countryside, plenty of vocations for the Petite Oeuvre. I endorse the sending away and admissions which you, with your Council, consider appropriate.

L 18840226

To Fathers Charles Piperon and François Morisseau, MSC, Tilburg.

Issoudun, February 26, 1884

My Dear Fathers,

Like you I understood the difficulties arising from the foundation of new houses and the prudence entailed in holding off for the time being. In this we are wholly in agreement.

1. The Figueras offer, properly speaking, is not an immediate foundation, being only a 'taking possession' with a view to the future. Saying that, I mean that sooner or later, and preferably as soon as we can, a Novitiate will be needed in Spain, and I am putting forward nothing if not what is very reasonable, short of giving up on our mission.

Where, then, are we going to place the novices? Barcelona? The house is without doubt large enough, but in my opinion it would not be the appropriate place if we can find something better. An area which is quieter, more Catholic and fertile in vocations would be a better choice. Figueras, which is being offered to us gratuitously, and with exceptional conditions attached, would appear to meet the requisite conditions. This house, held in reserve, would be of great value to us at the opportune moment; that's my contention.

2. On the supposition that we shall have one day novices who, not having done philosophy or theology, nor their literature studies, would, I believe, find the Barcelona house convenient as a Scholasticate and Juniorate because of its proximity to the major and minor seminary where all the young men are accepted for the different courses on offer there, just like the Appoline in Rome. Am I in saying this putting it forward that I want to move the Tilburg Scholasticate to Barcelona as Fr. Morisseau seems to think? Certainly not. I do not speak about today or what is going to happen in a year, but rather about that moment when a Novitiate and Petite Oeuvre are functioning in Spain. It is with a view to the future I bring myself to speak, as this future, of which I have a presentment, is, assuredly, not very far off. I believe it is wise on the part of Superiors and good administration to look to the future and prepare for it without, let it be well understood, compromising the present, particularly so where Providence would appear to be mapping out the way. I continue to accept that there are those like Rollin, Caussé, Darbon, Derichemont, etc., etc., whose health is uncertain, and anything can happen from one moment to the next, and where are we going to place them? It cannot be Tilburg, Rome or Issoudun where we are over-staffed, and, anyway, the possibility of being expelled would be an added issue here. What, then, one may ask? Send them to their families for some time! A very serious undertaking. Or send them away? This would compromise their vocations. What are we going to do? I put forward my convictions. If your views remain the same within eight days, I shall reject them.

Cheerio, dear Fathers.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I mentioned to you that the Barcelona house needed a Superior, Fr. Miniot quite unable to run the place. I put forward to you Fr. Bontemps, seeing no-one else available. Your silence is not the answer.

Dear Father,

1. I do not know at all this Mr. Hinard. You arrange his entry (to the Novitiate) as you think fit.

Hinard, Adolphe Seraphin, was a Parisian, born in 1831; a late vocation he did enter in June of this year, 1884, and for more than twenty years he was Secretary of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Archconfraternity; he died in Thuin, Belgium, November 29, 1914.

2. With regard to your dormitory above the church, I have requested Fr. Jouët to ask (in Rome) for permission. Since nothing has come from him, you could write to him. He is in Marseilles at the moment preaching for Lent at 24, rue Barberousse. Deal directly with him. You are fully in your rights having this permission.

3. Rome (the climate) does not suit in any way Brother Neenan; he will die there like his brother (William). Issoudun has already too many laid up. Do what you think best for this poor lad. The country air would do him good.

Daniel Neenan left in December 1885 when his temporary vows expired; see here, also, Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, where all three Neenans receive extended mention.

Issoudun, March 3, 1884

Dear Father,

I gather from Fr. Couppé that you are in Marseilles. I am forwarding the letter from Fathers Piperon and Morisseau who withhold their approval for the Figueras house, despite all the advantages on offer to us from Mr. Villalonga. This kind man wrote to me eight days ago saying that he would do his best to be kind to us, get the house ready and furnish it the way we would like, and, together with the two daily mass stipends and other resources on offer from him, the Figueras house would have 2,938 francs (roughly 9,225 euros) in revenue, etc. I shared all this with these gentlemen (Piperon and Morisseau). I went on to say that Fr. Casas, who is ill, needed a change of air and could go to Figueras to take over the house, and that within a number of years it would be, because of its size, its proximity to the frontier, its siting in a place where vocations are plentiful, all the more welcome because the French Government talks about expelling religious Congregations and taking over their assets, while our indisposed members in France, Rome, Holland would find a favourable climate at Figueras, etc., etc. Nothing in all this could shake their resolve. I am about to write to Fr. Guyot to find out what he thinks about all this. It is very likely that he will think the same as the other two. If that is the case, since we are not in the majority, I shall write to Mr. Villalonga turning down his generous offer.

Fr. Miniot is very much in favour of Figueras, and tells me that himself and Fr. Casas would be enough for the time being at Figueras, that Fr. Bontemps would be in Barcelona with Frs. Fora and Verjus, the latter having spent a year already in Barcelona. Could you let us have him for Easter? As he knows Spanish, he could be very helpful.

The Archbishop of Bourges has not been helpful towards the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of whom there are now 16. Despite the fact that most of them have made a two-year novitiate, he is not allowing them to take vows. He pays no attention to the Mistress of Novices, and would himself like to take over control of these young girls, for whom we have made so many sacrifices, in order to supervise and direct them. Mademoiselle Sabauron (name unclear) supports these views of his, writing privately to him. What can be done about this? I think it would be a better option to send 10 or 12 to Rome where, under your supervision and in dependence on Cardinal Simeoni, they would take vows when the Cardinal thought fit. Afterwards, on returning to Issoudun, the others would go to Rome replacing them. In this way they would escape from the whims of the Archbishop of Bourges and remain continuously committed and attached to our Society. Give some thought to this initiative which I believe should be engaged upon as soon as possible. What do you think?

I received a nice letter from a lady in Rome, Mademoiselle B.L. Leconto, who writes to me about an undertaking focusing on the conversion of pagan women, idolators and modern pagan women (in First World countries!). She tells me that you also would be writing to me about this, but I have had nothing from you. I do not know what to say in reply to her.

1. Our Tilburg confrères are determined not to have any mention made of Figueras. I am sending on to you their reply to Fr. Laviaille who wrote to them without saying anything to me. What is to be done? Fr. Miniot has written to me to say that Mr. Villalonga wants an answer and if not forthcoming he will offer the house to others.
2. Yes, a Novitiate is needed in Spain for southern European vocations. It's an absolute requirement. One cannot expose those of the Midi (southern France, Spain, Italy) who go to Tilburg to uncertain homecomings, regrettable disappointment and disillusionment. But what can we do about those confrères of ours who hinder everything? I am greatly put off by them. Try and do something if you can. Their way of seeing and doing things compromises the interests of our Society while professing at the same time that they wish to safeguard them. Your idea of a Barcelona Novitiate at the present time is in perfect accord with my view; try to bring it about.
3. Don't you think the base of the statue of the Sacred Heart is a bit large? With the changes you mention, the statue seems very good to me. Try and have it placed on the roof of your church.
4. Our confrères would never give their approval to fresh departures for New Guinea. I can only see one way of bringing this about, that the Pope himself names officially Father Couppé and another, such as Fr. Verjus for example, and a brother, to take over New Guinea. Faced with the choice of Leo XIII and before his sovereign authority, there would be a giving way. Without such support there would be outrageous opposition just as there was the first time.
5. Yes, have a French printing of your Week for the souls in Purgatory, with my approval of the copy you gave me. I shall willingly sign it.
6. The Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart must be wholly placed under Propaganda's jurisdiction so that they may remain close to us and that there be no friction between us.
7. Write to the Belgian Premonstratensians in the sense understood when you discussed the issue with me. It's necessary to do so.
8. During the first fortnight in May could you preach an 8-day retreat in Nantes to the Claretians in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart? Our undertakings will profit from it.

Cheerio, my friend.

My regards to your kind sisters and the gentlemen.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Father,

1. I am sending you on Fr. Guyot's letter. It's both affirmative and negative. I cannot make out the basic thrust of his thinking. Write to him. He doesn't appear to approve of Fr. Bontemps' move to Barcelona. I believe that it's needed, however, for the well-being of that house. Make clear to Fr. Guyot the need of a Novitiate besides Tilburg for southern European vocations. This Novitiate calls for a sense of urgency if we do not wish to lose good candidates. If we hold over Figueras, the Novitiate could be set up in Barcelona where Frs. Bontemps, Miniot, Casas, Fora, perhaps Verjus while awaiting his departure for the missions, are living. Fathers Bontemps and Miniot could look after the novices. The young brother Darbon,

Fr. Genocchi, perhaps Fr. Caillol, etc. could go there (for Genocchi, see elsewhere). If Fr. Guyot agrees with this you might ask in Rome for permission to open a Spanish Novitiate.

2. I am also sending on to you a letter from Fr. Miniot. I am not at all in favour of selling our Barcelona house. This house, situated close to the major and minor seminaries, could be of great use to us in the future. I shall try to send the promised 30,000 francs (about 94,250 euros) promised for April 15. There will then be no more than 30,000 francs to pay and we shall be clear of debt.

3. I wholeheartedly approve of young Darbon's visit to Barcelona at Easter; it will not cost anything because his brother has agreed to give 600 francs a year until the end of his novitiate (about 1,880 euros).

4. Yes, during the holidays, one can give thought to Brother Jullien and withdraw him from Tilburg; it's no longer the place for him.

5. It will be worthwhile as well to give thought during the forthcoming holidays to those of our young confrères who could become bachelors in literature and science, and licentiates. It is necessary for us that they acquire these degrees if we are to continue with our Apostolic Schools and have educational establishments as well. Nobody among us is engaging with this and it is a mistake. This issue is more urgent than one thinks. We shall have to consider where we can place these young men so that they can successfully succeed in this undertaking.

6. I have had a letter from Fr. Navarre letting me know that our confrères have arrived. It's a very interesting letter. I am sending it to Fr. Bontemps asking him to take it to you in Marseilles.

Dear Father,

1. It's on May 4 the novena at Nantes in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is due to begin and it finishes on the 12th. I doubt if one can change the dates, but I shall speak to the Reverend Mother. Make your preparations with a view to finding yourself at Nantes on the evening of May 3. On your return you can stop at Issoudun or go on; whatever best suits you.

2. I am forwarding a letter from Fr. Genocchi.

3. The Archbishop of Bourges, not having found anyone to prepare the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for vows, has left it to ourselves whether to send them to Rome if they wish or to associate them with Propaganda while remaining in Issoudun. To send them straight to Rome just now would cost too much. I have been thinking that you might get Cardinal Simeoni to accept these young women, presently 15, by Easter 18 or perhaps 20, by associating them with us for our missions. This would be excellent. In addition it would be desirable if he could choose a worthy French sister from one of the Rome communities who would come to Issoudun and spend three months or six months there looking after their training. We would pay the cost of the journey, and a contribution of 600 monthly, for instance 500 francs (sic! The earlier sum would amount to 1,880 euros or so). Perhaps one of the sisters of Mother de Me (illegible in original) or from the Reparation Sisters, or elsewhere, could take on this role. If the immediate foregoing becomes impossible we shall try again with some French communities. Perhaps we might find a room in the Moulins diocese for the Chartal Benedictines whom the Bishop of Moulins wants us to look after. In Marseilles, if it were to become necessary, might you not find somebody? Go and see the Bishop of Marseilles and take this matter up. It is now almost two years since I began to go three times a week to give talks to the Daughters of Our Lady. It's time to have done with this. Then our missions will be calling on them.

Dear Father,

1. I forwarded your letter to the Rev. Mother of the Nantes Claretians. It is my wish that she meets your request. I foresee for you there a bout of exhaustion which, I am afraid, could be a threat to your health. Take care of yourself and do nothing rashly.

2. You have, no doubt, sent on to Rome the La-Châtre parish priest's request.

3. I have heard nothing from Sister Guichard. I am disappointed that we cannot get for at least 3 months a serious and committed religious who would prepare our own for their vows.

4. The worthy Fathers Piperon and Morisseau seem to be only concerned with their Tilburg house; everything else means nothing to them.

5. Fr. Bontemps is coming back to Issoudun next Saturday. Should he be sent to Barcelona or this house left in its present state? There is neither discipline, leadership or religious life in the place; all our confrères, given their opposition, would appear to be totally disinterested as in the case of Figueras. What is to be done? Nevertheless a decision is required.

I shall be delighted to see you.

Write to Fr. Jouët about Brother Darbon; he (Jouët) is staying at 24 rue Barberousse, Marseilles. He will give you an answer which will help you to decide together.

Jules Darbon, a clerical student of the Marseilles diocese, arrived in Tilburg on September 28, 1882, left for health reasons the following June, the 11th, returned a year later in July 1884, hence his mention in Chevalier's letter, but was not accepted for profession.

Write to Fr. Tréand about Brother Audouy; he knows him better than I do, and will bring you up to date about him. I approve of whatever you will agree on.

*Audouy was ordained at Bourges on April 20, 1889, whence he proceeded to Antwerp as a lecturer in the Scholasticate. The following year he taught at Chezal-Benoît before going to Glastonbury in 1891. He returned to Paris in 1897 and in November of the following year he requested, and was granted, dispensation from vows in order to leave the Society; see here also, *Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, Tréand and Glastonbury.

If you think it would be more helpful if you stayed in Tilburg for Holy Week and the week after, we shall say no more about a Retreat (here). We shall do as best we can (without you). Fr. Jouët writes to tell me that his sister, Liberate (his fifth sister), died yesterday (the 22nd), and his sister Victorine is very ill.

Ask Fr. Morisseau to give thought to getting my breviary, 4 volumes in 12°, and a Totum in 12°, with all the new liturgical offices. There is an offer as a gift of a bedside Totum in 4°, two volumes with the new offices which can be had also in Tournai. Will he ask the editor to leave out the rubrics and everything which could unnecessarily add to the size of the volumes. The binding should be strong with a red stripe.

I do not recall whether or not you gave your vote of approval for Fr. Bontemps as Superior of the Barcelona house. If it is not he, I don't know who can be sent there. He will continue to edit the French Annals. He is about to take perpetual vows at the end of May. Have a word about this with Fr. Morisseau.

Dear Father,

1. I hope the Bishop will be pleased when he visits you.

2 What you say about Fr. Barral's zeal pleases me.

3. You are aware that Fr. Guyot's father died a few days ago. Our good confrère presents himself in the best dispositions, placing himself entirely at my disposal. Following Mary's month (May) during which he will be preaching at Clermont-Ferrand, he will be coming to stay at Issoudun. He wants to make a fourth vow of absolute obedience and total deprivation. I shall recommend that he go to Tilburg for a month's retreat. This might be the moment to propose to those who at least three years ago made perpetual vows, and as called for in our Constitutions. It is a recommendation which is intended for those in the requisite circumstances, this invitation to the fourth vow. It would be a significant advance in the Society since nobody up to now has taken a fourth vow. We should begin; this is my view. Speak to Fr. Morisseau about this.

4. I am not very up to date about the state of your Association in Hungary. Is the Confraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart canonically set up there, with a membership form associating it to our Rome Archconfraternity? If the answer is in the affirmative, is it only for one parish, a particular diocese, or for the whole of Hungary? In both instances, it is for the Bishop or the Primate to appoint the director of this Archconfraternity. If on the other hand our Association is set up in Hungary purely and simply as an enrolling centre with its male and female activists, it belongs to the Director General of our Archconfraternity, that is to say myself, to put forward the name of this centre's Director General, with the obligation resting on him to forward either to Rome or Issoudun the list of all the associates he himself or the activists enrolled. In virtue of the new, 1880, decree allowing for the enrolment of absentees, he must understand carefully the significance and implications of all this, and no less so the restrictions.

a. The Universal Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has the right to enrol in either its Issoudun or Rome registers since both Rome and Issoudun are morally one, enrolling as of right the names of those spread throughout the world, as well as drawing together the confraternities by certificates of aggregation.

b. If in a particular country Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Confraternity is canonically established for the whole country, a diocese, or only a parish or a town, it has the right to enrol not only those living there but, as well, those living elsewhere in the country, the diocese, a town, or parish. But it cannot enrol those living elsewhere who are outside the area for which it is responsible. If it were to do so, it would be acting ultra vires, and the enrolment, as well as the indulgences, is invalid. This Confraternity should forward the names of those living elsewhere, and outside its jurisdiction, either to Issoudun or to Rome if it wants this group of absentees to share the Archconfraternity's privileges. I very much doubt if in Sittard, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Spain, etc., this demanding regulation is being observed.

5. It is too late to provide your young men with an exemption. Try and do what you can.

6. I am going to ask Fr. Jouët to travel to Hungary to deal with this Association matter which, as things are, is important.

Issoudun, April 7, 1884

Dear Father,

Fr. Lanctin has come to me and positively tells me that he cannot stay in Tilburg (he was in charge of the Petite Oeuvre, Little Work) for two reasons: he hasn't got what it takes to be in charge and has no impact on the teachers. The second is that he is too far away from his family, too broken-hearted, and his mother needs him to comfort her. He wants, then, to stay in Issoudun. I said to him that from my side I would place no obstacles in his way provided that he could replace Fr. Tréand not only as Director of the Petite Oeuvre, but also taking charge of the Association's office and correspondence with and from promoters. "Fr. Tréand," so I informed him, "actively engages in this work, spiritedly, zealously, intelligently; because of the impact he has made, and which continues, the resources of the Petite Oeuvre and the Archconfraternity have grown and we now have 6 or 8,000 more subscribers to our Annals."

He replied that it would be a lot of work for him, that he would do what he could, but he did not completely expect to replace Fr. Tréand. I went on to say that it was quite impossible for me to replace the certain with the uncertain and strike a body-blow against the Petite Oeuvre and the Association. He replied that Fr. Tréand could stay at Issoudun with him because Fr. Maillard would do very well as Director of the Tilburg Petite Oeuvre and Brother Roussel (later Father, May 30, 1885) as bursar; as for himself he intended to stay in Issoudun. What is to be done? If the fact is that you could, after the long holidays, get rid of Fr. Lanctin and replace him with someone else at this time, I would be of a mind to tell him straightaway that we are bidding him good-bye and he could join the secular clergy, asking the Archbishop of Bourges for a posting in which he could have his mother and sister with him. But since this could only come about during the long holidays, he would have to return to Tilburg to await such time. I believe that he will find himself caught up in his own ensnaring and, very likely, he will no longer ask to leave Tilburg since his mother is more sensible than he is. Look into the matter... Discuss it with Fr. Morisseau and decide.

Cheerio, Father.

Good wishes to you all in C.J.

Enclosed letter from Monsignor L. Leroy to Chevalier.

Reverend Father,

Thank you for your letter last summer. Shortly I shall send you another 25 francs. Today I wish to bring up with you again an earlier plan which I discussed with you in a letter. My brother is more convinced than ever about becoming a religious, and in the event had made a formal promise to do so some years ago. My mother, to whom he was a great joy, and her 14th child, kept him with her until her death. Now, however, he is free and wants to enter the religious life. He always lived, and still does so, the life of a religious in the world, going to mass each day, communicating every month and on all feasts of the Virgin (St. Pius the Tenth's decree on Communion was almost twenty years away) reciting each night over several years the rosary of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and that of St. Bridget, living modestly and fasting on fast days, given to reading your Annals and those of the Propagation of the Faith as well as religious works to occupy himself in his spare time. He is in his fortieth year, but he is strong, healthy, never laid up. He likes to work, loves to be occupied, doing manual labour, and would offer you devoted service as a brother over 25 years. He knows about caring for and rearing cattle, and gardens very well since it is his preference and pleasure. As for the kitchen, when there's a dinner, he, with my sister, gets the house ready, polishes, sweeps, puts out the wine, and the following day cleans up with her and puts everything back in its place. When she is away he comes and cooks for me, looks after my bedroom and the farmyard.

He knows arithmetic quite well, solves the most difficult problems, knows about money and can look after a money account, a money ledger or a business office since he is very good at looking after things.

See if you could make use of him as a brother in one of your houses or Novitiates. He would be very happy in your Rome house with Fr. Jouët who reviewed my history of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart published at a length of one hundred pages in 8 within my "History of Pilgrimages to the Blessed Virgin in France."

I would like to have a reply shortly since if you are agreed on accepting him he would like to enter immediately within fifteen days one of your appointed houses to make his retreat. I officiated eight days ago at the marriage of Eugénie Ballanger to a splendid young man, very Christian, well educated and wealthy. Their honeymoon travel has both Our Lady of Lourdes and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, as its objective. Eugénie said to me as she was going away that she would be so pleased to visit you and get your blessing.

Yours very humbly in N.S.

Issoudun, April 24, 1884

Dear Father,

Fr. Couppé wrote to me today to say that the doctor insisted that he should take Brother Barral with him because he did not want him to be left alone, which suggests that he is very exhausted. He tells me that he has written a number of times to you about cheques which were due to be paid and which you had promised to pay, and you had not even answered him about the issue. He says that he hasn't a penny with which to pay, and this is making him feel ill. I can well believe it. He tells me that you borrowed 1,000 francs in Marseilles to forward to him. Always borrowings! He says that he needs 6,000 francs by the end of the month to meet his debts, and without which the cheques will be worthless. This is a desperate situation for this unfortunate young priest to find himself in with all that is annoying in those circumstances. Why do you leave him trying to cope in a situation like that? I am going to borrow 6,000 francs and ask him to write a cheque in my name. How do you not think that we are heading for ruin? I beg you to avoid getting into debt. Check your expenses and stay within your limits.

Fr. Navarre in a letter today tells me that he has spent all the money he had from Propaganda and everything I gave to the latest confrères (those who left in December) and he has borrowed 5,000 francs in Sydney. He says that he will write a cheque on my account to reimburse the borrowed sum.

The truth is that it's all too easy. Confrères and other people seem to think that I have a treasury to draw on. I am disillusioned by all of this (including Jouët's own financial chaos).

I have had a letter just now which upsets me. When you are not in Rome one might say that the devil rules over your house, or there must be a good reason why people's health is affected. This must be fully looked into. Who just now will take care of Fr. Couppé and take charge of this house? I am worried and upset. What is to be done? Your very prolonged absence has obviously overburdened poor Fr. Couppé and he is in broken health; look at what happens when you are 500 leagues from Rome (current French expression meaning "being far from Rome"); when are you going to be there? The truth is that your absences are having disastrous consequences.

Issoudun, April 24, 1884

Dear Father,

1. Father Lanctin will arrive on Sunday morning and stay with you until the long holidays when he will return to Issoudun. From now until then set about getting ready his successor (as Director of the Petite Oeuvre since Lanctin had made it clear to Chevalier that he wanted to come back to France, Issoudun).

2. Since you are offered more youngsters than you can take at your new Petite Oeuvre, and since you could well send us those available whom you cannot accept, not those you already have, I may tell you that at the moment we could accept 20 or 30. When they know French and have been sorted out we shall send them back to you in Tilburg when they are in the fourth or fifth classes. You haven't replied to this question.

3. You take umbrage very quickly, Father, with regard to the novices who have been put forward. Be aware, then, that their arrival in Tilburg is not at all their entry to the Novitiate. You must make them undergo a month or 6 weeks of postulancy before they are accepted (for the Novitiate). During this time you will consider them, test them, become informed about them. If they are acceptable, you will keep them; if not you will request them to leave as either not being suitable or lacking in a vocation. I find that in this respect you act much too quickly in situations. You put yourself in the way of rejecting vocations (the good Lord draws on all); then you displease your confrères who believed themselves to be doing their best and working in the best interests of our Congregation. When you receive these postulants, be fatherly to them, and not gruff. Oh, what a lovely virtue sweetness is!

4. The third level is indeed the fourth vow which our Constitutions permit us to take. There shouldn't be the slightest doubt about this. Look again at the Latin text, page 35, where it is left to be understood: ex voto ad hoc emisso – without which this fourth level would not only be pointless but ridiculous.

5. Brother Huet has already passed the first part of his examinations for the baccalaureate, so I understand, and he wished to have his preparation completed with the hope of success by this coming November; not only do I agree, but I want to encourage him wholeheartedly. It is a requirement on us to support the baccalaureate. Take note of this and find the necessary time for him.

In October 1885 Huet went to Paris for the second part of his baccalaureate, but he left at the end of temporary vows in 1886.

I believe that Brother Jullien could also do the same as he has already a first diploma. These are my expectations, then; see if they can be put into effect.

Dear Father,

1. I have here a letter from Fr. Couppé telling me that he is much better and hopes to return to Rome on Saturday, the 26th, which is today. I believe he is in too great a hurry because the doctor forbade him to say his breviary which obviously proves that he is experiencing great tiredness. Besides, letting it be known that I am putting 6,000 francs (about 18,850 euros) at his disposal will help him get better. If he really is improving, and you can be left the time to preach your Nantes retreat, this would be the better solution. Write about this to him.

2. I am forwarding to you in Liege at the same time as I am sending this letter the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You know it (the contents) as well as I do; write your letter to Bishop Mermillod as you think fit. I approve in advance since you do marvellously well in this kind of work.

3. Passing through Paris go and see the director of St. Paul. Publishers, 6 rue Cassette. Present the book to him; it will have 700 pages with a detailed analytical index. Each copy will have four lovely photo-engravings of the Sacred Heart, two of Our Lady, the old and the new representation, and one of St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart. Explain to him that this work deals in depth with devotion to the Sacred Heart not only from the theological point of view, but also that of modern science.

The same holds for devotion to the Blessed Virgin since there are in this work new perspectives which make it, so to say, a special book. In particular, do not fail to mention that this book, examined closely in Rome by the Master of the Sacred Palace, is commended with his distinctive approval and is destined for great success. 15,000 copies have been printed, and it (the work) will be sent to him in sheets. And the St. Paul bookshop will bind and edit it. Mr. Philipona should already have begun to work on the cover which should be very beautiful and de luxe. Decide on the quality of the cover paper with Mr. Philipona. The St. Paul publishing house should take over, as from today, the promotion of this book and the accompanying prospectus. Your letter to Bishop Mermillod could, perhaps, be used for this purpose.

You will bring to his notice our conditions, which are: we share the expenses for the printing of the cover and binding. In keeping with an author's rights, Mr. Philippine will favour me with 100 copies of the work, and if I need some more to give as gifts he will let me have them at cost price. We shall share the profits. The St. Paul publishing house will undertake all the expenses of promotion. You are aware that the financial benefits accruing from this work will go to your Rome house, so be at your most helpful when dealing with Mr. Philippine.

Issoudun, May 1, 1884

Dear Father,

Mention to Fr. Morisseau:

Also the Totum in 12, Tournai.

1. Yes, willingly, I agree to the acceptance of the Dutch brother you mention.
2. Send Brother Frings away; his departure for the Capuchin Fathers, the state of his health, etc., are sufficient grounds. He is released from his temporary vows by these facts.
3. You are better placed than I am to judge the qualities of your students.
4. Bishop Leroy's brother cannot go to one of our houses when he has not done his novitiate. Consequently, you must begin by accepting him in order to assess his vocation and then go on to train him.

Casimir Leroy, born November 11, 1831, was fifty-three when he arrived at Tilburg on May 26, 1884; he died in the Society six years later, July 17, 1890.

Send on here Brother Delmas if you think it opportune.

Delmas taught at the Issoudun school from May 1884 to September 1886.

5. For the long holidays, that is to say in the month of October, we absolutely need someone to replace Fr. Joseph Balzer who cannot at the moment work any longer.

An Alsatian, Balzer's future was to be associated with the founding of the Salzburg house and the German Province. He was already sixty-four years of age.

Fr. Morisseau mentions that Brother Perriot, a former teacher, would be suitable.

From the Nantes diocese where he had been tonsured Perriot would be ordained to the priesthood in June 1888, dying at Issoudun a little over ten years later, August 26, 1898.

Prepare him for this (posting), ordaining him if he has some patrimony. If this last is not so, send him on to us as he is and we shall ordain him once he has made perpetual vows.

6. If you do not accept the fourth vow, or if you only accept it as a private vow, what is the purpose, then, of including it in our Constitutions where on page 36, number 2, the qualities which the subject should possess are spelt out, the requisite age and the expressed consent of the Superior General and his Council? If this were only a devotional matter, the Constitutions would not have made so much of it... It remains that nothing would be easier than to put the issue to the Sacred Congregation and we shall abide by its decision. This fourth vow has been introduced to provide the opportunity for greater merit to those members who feel drawn to it, giving themselves over continuously to heroic obedience. It is manifestly true that our Constitutions, page 9, number 2: apud infidele, "taking inspiration from the Society's aim, it is required of us that we are always ready, in such measure as is possible, to carry out any kind of mission in whatsoever part of the world which is in keeping with the wishes of the Sovereign Pontiff and the Superior General". By virtue of our Constitutions, then, the religious of the Sacred Heart, whose requisite qualities are acknowledged either by the Sovereign Pontiff or the Superior General, are not at liberty to refuse departure for distant mission lands, aside from serious reasons which the Superiors will take into consideration. All Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, no matter who they are, by virtue of their vow of obedience, and the number (of the Constitutions) cited above, place themselves at the disposal of the Superior General and the Supreme Pontiff to go abroad, even among the pagans, if it is considered appropriate. You have here something which must be well understood by your postulants and novices. But you may well say then, what purpose does the third degree serve? By this fourth vow one places oneself in a state of greater generosity by stretching oneself out on the altar of sacrifice.

Sixteen years later the fourth vow issue will be raised again at the 1900 General Chapter.

7. As for Mr. Hinard, if you do not find him suitable you can send him away even before he enters the Novitiate; you will come to a decision about this with Fr. Morisseau. I do not know this good man at all myself, likewise Fr. Lavalie since he has never laid eyes on him.

Issoudun, May 3, 1884

Dear Father,

1. The devil is unchained against the Rome house: good Fr. Couppé has been forced to return to the seaside. He must be seriously ill... His letters, themselves, make this sufficiently obvious. I fear that his health may be lastingly ruined and that very soon he will go and increase the heavenly community. Clearly you have overtaxed him by leaving him so long on his own, weighed down by serious concerns, and overwhelming demands.

2. Jules Vandel and Brother Barral have arrived in Marseilles; I have had two telegrams from them informing me that there is an uprising in Catalonia and the insurgents have cut communications between Perpignan and Barcelona, and nothing is left except travel by sea; they, then, want to know from me what they should do. I sent a telegram to Fr. Vandel asking him to return to Rome where he could help out in the sad circumstances prevailing in this house, and Brother Barral should come to Issoudun. Everything is breaking up all at once! Fr. Metge, the Perpignan Archpriest, again makes us the offer of his house. What should we do? Mr. Villalonga now wants to keep in his own name the Figueras property, giving us the interest. Then he doesn't know any longer if the tunnel under the road will ever be completed, etc. In these conditions we cannot accept. What is going to be done about Perpignan? Will you come by way of Issoudun on your journey to Nantes?

Dear Father,

I am very surprised to have had nothing from you: no letter for quite some time. I very much hope that when leaving Nantes you will come to Issoudun before returning to Rome where your presence is sorely needed. Fr. Couppé is forced to stay in Anzio until the 30th of this month, leaving the house (Rome) in the hands of virtual youngsters such as Verjus, etc. What expenses they will create for you! Something like this will not lessen your debts. Come to Issoudun as soon as possible, then; we need to talk seriously about many issues.

Poor Brother Barral is struck down by typhoid fever and, as well, the doctor finds his chest very weak.

Convey, dear friend, my regards and good wishes to dear Mother Clarissa. Some youngsters for the Petite Oeuvre (Little Work) are to be presented to you; be sure to ascertain if they meet the required conditions.

Issoudun, May 30, 1884

Dear Father,

1. I should like to think that you had a good journey. Let me have your news and also all about your house.
2. It is disappointing to become aware of the delay in the printing of the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Try to get things moving quickly and supervise the printing of what remains to be done. So many errors have turned up! Try to point them out in an errata section.
3. What did Bishop Mermillod have to say to you?
4. Concern yourself about asking Rome for a number of things:
  - a. the renewal of the Indult which allows us to put forward our Scholastics for ordination without needing dismissorial letters from the bishops of their native dioceses or from the local bishop. It (the Indult) is out of date since February and Fr. Piperon needs it for June 7;
  - b. the renewal of the Indult which permits us to have a three-month novitiate for those priests whom we consider satisfactory;
  - c. the renewal of the Indult which allows us to present our young men for orders outside the 4 statutory times. This was granted to us on November 20 for 20 cases. I like to think that it hasn't run out;
  - d. the renewal of the Indult which allows us to give the Apostolic Blessing at the end of retreats (missions) given by us. This Indult expires on July 5 this year, 1884.
5. To put our consciences at ease, I would ask you to set about straight away and get an Indult which would allow us to give an excess of our mass offerings to known and worthy priests who themselves are agreeable about accepting them either gratuitously or at a lower rate than what we receive for the advantage of our apostolic school, our expelled religious and our Oceania missions. The surplus of mass offerings freely and very spontaneously offered us would be used for such a variety of good works. We receive a great number of mass offerings at 1 franc, 1 franc 50, and 2 francs; very little above this. (In 1884 one franc would approximate to 3.10 euros today.) Taking into consideration deduction of expenses, the costs of correspondence and administration, we have come to the conclusion that all our masses, added up, come to 1 franc 25 centimes for each offering, not more, perhaps less. I believe that the Lourdes priests have had this Indult. Try your best that we get this as quickly as possible. Do not forget the setting up of a Novitiate in Barcelona and other undertakings which you have taken note of: the missions, etc.
6. The Archbishop of Bourges was here at Issoudun last Sunday. He wasn't very favourable to the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. He doesn't want them to make their vows any longer during the month of September as was customary. He is demanding even from the older ones as well as those who have been in the convent three years yet another year of formation. This capriciousness is baffling. As the whim took him he said to me: Since Rome wishes indeed to approve of them, get in touch with Rome. I intend to write to him again requesting him to withdraw his decision... And if he persists in it, what is to be done?...

Fr. Guyot was only a whisper away from death. I telegraphed Fr. Piperon to go and see him. Fr. Guyot was quite touched by this attentiveness. A letter today from Fr. Piperon informs me that the dear confrère passed a good night and appears to be much better. Fr. Piperon will be in Issoudun tomorrow and then leaves for Holland. Brother Barral is much better and the Dr. thinks he is out of danger.

Dear Fr. Piperon,

1. I do not know enough about the disadvantages which could arise from your legacy to provide you with advice. Have a word with Fr. de Beer; his advice will be of help to you.

De Beer was the Superior General of the Brothers of Our Lady of Mercy, Tilburg, his home town. He was both a confidante and friend of Piperon, advising him, most fortuitously as it turned out, to buy the Bressers building at Velhoven in Tilburg which became the first MSC house in the town.

2. Yes, indeed, you do well to get other youngsters ready for our Issoudun Petite Oeuvre.

3. I think the same as you: Fr. Lanctin should teach (which is what he also did when he came to Issoudun to take charge of the Petite Oeuvre). You should arrange this with him before he leaves, and afterwards you can perhaps be given Brother Derichemont (at this time still a scholastic, but working at the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre).

4. We have been given an Indult which allows us to ordain our members outside the Quatre Temps (specific ordination time and day). I shall forward it to you and you can make an official copy and return it to me together with the last communication I sent you for the ordination. It would then be best if you were to ordain Brother Hartzler at Bois-le-Duc. Get in touch with the Bishop. If you have other young scholastics you could put them forward with him (Hartzler).

5. I gave Gagnault the section which deals with the vow of chastity; it will without doubt be kept by him for the end. I shall have this confirmed myself.

The reference is to Piperon's Manual of Religious of the Sacred Heart being printed at Issoudun by the company A. Gagnault.

6. Altogether, how much (money) have you received from the General Union? Is there some more to be received?

Dear Father,

1. Yes, add to the chapter on obedience the articles you mention. If these articles cannot immediately follow the chapter on obedience you can place them at the end of the work as an appendix. And for a later edition they can be put in their appropriate place in the book.

2. You can make your retreat before the 15th of August or after September 8, opening ours on Sunday evening, August 17, ending it Monday morning, August 25. We shall not have a great deal of time left to prepare for the 8th of September feast.

3. I do not think it would be right to bring your older young men to Issoudun with Fr. Lanctin and have them returning to you again the following year. The expenses of the journey seem too much and too superfluous in my view. Look into it... Decide.

4. You say to me on the one hand that there is a tendency among our young priests to ask to go home to their families, and that it should not be allowed as when Fr. Maillard and others were refused; meanwhile there's the contract when you appear to be making a case in favour of Fathers Carrière, Klotz, etc. One must be logical and impartial. Fr. Merg, in England, also asked me if he could go home to his family. At first I said yes, ad duritiam cordis, but then on reading your letter about

Fr. Maillard and your views, I immediately wrote again to Fr. Merg telling him to stay in England while awaiting to be called on to go elsewhere. One must not allow these journeys unless there is a real need. It is for you to exercise responsibility.

5. We shall let you have Brother Derichemont for your senior class if you need him. Then, for the following year, you would do well to take him into the Scholasticate to finish his theology course and complete his philosophy. This boy is very intelligent, and should do very well in his theological studies, etc., and later he could offer us invaluable service.
6. Meanwhile if during their holidays Fathers Klotz and Carrière, together with the more intelligent scholastics, could prepare themselves for the first part of their baccalaureate, it would be marvellous, since before long we shall be embarrassed for numbers. This undertaking can only be good for them.
7. Make sure to tell Fr. Lanctin that he must take a class each day.
8. I told you that we received an indult permitting us to ordain our young men outside the stated Quatre Temps (four seasons) and it should be available in the case of Brother Hartzler who will then be ordained at Bois-le-Duc and not Bourges. You do not appear to have read this sentence.
9. Yes, Brothers Jullien and Benedetti should be sent to Rome.

The Rome-born Benedetti, 1867, had a varied career as an MSC, and then in the pontificate of Pope Benedict XV he became Bishop of Ozieri, Italy, January 22, 1915. He was later an Archbishop Apostolic Nuncio in Cuba, Porto Rico, Haiti. He died at Falvaterra, Italy, September 6, 1930.

10. We need Brother Pierre Perriot to replace good Father Balzer at the secondary school (in Issoudun) unless you have someone else suitable for this post.

Dear Father,

Thank you for your kind letter and the documents enclosed.

1. You may forward to dear Fr. Durin the relics he is looking for. He is in Detroit through his own volition. He was placed with another Detroit parish priest with a view to succeed him, but he had a row with him, and at the moment he is at St. Anne's where the parish priest is away and that's all the better. But we await his return...

2. The Pirinoli Affair. The houses were originally purchased by us for 80,000 francs, and the registration fees were, I believe, valued at 6,000 francs, making a total of 86,000 francs paid out by us. We sold on this property to Madame (Mother) Pirinoli for 80,000 francs. She put down 35,000 which meant that she owed (us) 45,000 francs. During the 5 or 6 years she held ownership she neglected basic repairs, the roof for example, etc. When she wanted to leave Issoudun and get rid of her property which, due to neglect of repairs, and particularly because of the closure of our Basilica, had lost a third of its value, she asked Archbishop Marchal to offer the property to us for 65,000 francs. It was she herself who laid down this price. We accepted it as such to cut short any problems. From the 65,000 francs we recouped the 45,00 francs she owed us. There remained 20,000 for us to give her. In addition we paid the 5,000 francs for the registration fee, all of which brought the total expenditure to 70,000 francs. I cannot understand why this good woman is complaining since it is she herself who fixed the price for the sale of her house, and one can ask the Archbishop of Bourges and Mr. Farcey, a Chateauroux solicitor, who drew up the carriage of sale in Fr. Tréand's name. Yes, I do believe she wasted a lot of money; without consulting anyone she did and did not do things just as she liked. She accepted whomsoever she wanted (as candidate) without a dowry; one has to look after one's personnel, and pay the debts which she contracted, etc. This dear Felicity is neither just or charitable and she would do much better to keep quiet.

3. Yes, my dear friend, there needs to be a great deal of unity and understanding focused on our undertakings. Like yourself I love justice, truth and blind, absolute obedience to the Holy See. The problems never arise, then, from my side. Again this morning I gave strict orders to the office that they carry out to the letter what you said and I shall keep my eyes on holding them to it.

I cannot be held responsible for the Annals' articles since for the past 2 years I am no longer the official director or manager. My name does not appear any longer. Send on to me, then, the correct translation of your Association's leaflets with the correct listing of indulgences, and we shall set things right; it would appear that there has also been a mistake in regard to the little crown of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which we promote. The leaflet of the French Association mentions 300 days' indulgences whereas it should be the Italian one, whose presentation I am not familiar with. It is not a problem to correct the diploma printed in the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart book. You can do it in the errata pages. Will you remember?

4. Dear little Fr. Vandel and F. Meyer must take their doctorate degrees unless their health creates an obstacle. When can they be accepted?

Issoudun, July 23 1884

Dear Reverend Father Barral,

Having given mature consideration to the project you have in mind to carry out a French language propaganda initiative in Belgium, Holland, Alsace, and the neighbouring regions where this language is spoken, we believe that it is not to be undertaken. The advantages which could accrue to you from it would not compensate for the problems created for Issoudun. It would not help devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart if the eyes of these people were turned away from Issoudun, where they have come so often in pilgrimage, and focused on Tilburg which does not have a public chapel and can never be other than a centre regulated by Rome. In any event, it is best to promote propaganda within the frontiers shaped by languages: Issoudun is, and must always be, the centre for those countries which speak the French language, Tilburg for the Flemish countries, Holland and Germany while waiting until Providence sets us up in the German region, and then this country will make up another centre. As for Belgium, there is no reason to doubt the development of Averbode, given that this centre will always be required to acknowledge the Rome Archconfraternity. Fr. Jouët is working in Rome to draw Sittard towards the abdication of its independence, for which time and patience are needed.

You are not forbidden to have tickets printed in French, but only on condition that they are considered as coming from Issoudun and carry at the end the following notice:

Address correspondence to the Director of the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun Pilgrimage, Issoudun (Indre), France. You will be obliged, then, to send us the corrected printed material in keeping with that of Rome so that we can examine it; following that we shall return it to you to get it printed because it will cost less and be better put together.

*No address; undated:

In the book the letter is pre-dated, June 20*

Most Holy Father,

It is with feelings of the deepest humility, the greatest regard and the most complete obedience that I place myself at the feet of Your Holiness, as a fresh testimony of our filial love for your sacred person and of our unshakeable attachment to the Holy See, to present the work entitled: The Sacred Heart of Jesus in its relationship with Mary or Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

In this book we have attempted to reflect on some of the splendid and wondrous qualities of the adorable Heart of the Incarnate Word. This study makes us penetrate with greater depth this marvellous world. It demonstrates the Sacred Heart as the sanctuary of the Divinity, the source of charity, the origin of the Sacraments, the life of the Church, the centre of Creation and the source of all graces. Enlightened by Tradition and the saintly Doctors we have noted that all graces have been placed in Mary's hands for distribution to the children of Adam. But there is a blessed name under which this divine Mother is pleased to be called in order to emphasize her co-operation in spreading the gifts of the Heart of her Son; this name, you know and love, most Holy Father, that of Our lady of the Sacred Heart. It is to be found today on the lips of all Christians; with its invocation heaven becomes favourable and spreads over mankind its most precious favours. Moreover, Your Holiness, moved by so many marvellous events, has decreed that a magnificent temple should be built to the glory of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in the centre of Rome itself to become the universal centre of the archconfraternity whose Patron is the refuge of difficult and despairing cases. This undertaking, Holy Father, which is dear to your heart, will draw upon the Church and world, we are pleased to hope, the most cherishable blessings of the Heart of Jesus.

Please accept, Most Holy Father, this expression of our lively appreciation, and extend to the book, with which we are pleased to honour you, its author, the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, their Petite Oeuvre, their distant mission in Oceania, all the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart members and all our benefactors, your most paternal blessing. It is this signal favour, Most Holy Father, which your most humble and obedient servant in the Heart of Jesus asks from you at this moment.

Dear Father,

1. I am returning the proofs to you. At last, it's over. Do not forget to put the imprimatur from the Master of the Sacred Palace either at the beginning or at the end of the book.
2. Present straightaway the work to the Pope to obtain his brief.
3. And have you got Bishop Mermillod's preface?
4. Have a copy immediately made ready for the Archbishop of Bourges – and have some pictures included. For the Pope's copy, leave out the old model (representation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart).
5. You went to Naples. What did the Archbishop of Sydney say to you? Fr. Couppé wrote saying that he wouldn't mention it because he presumed that you had already fully informed me. What do you think of the New Guinea initiative? Who are the people who could well go there? Could the Pope name them himself? It would be much better.
6. And how is everyone's health?

Dear Father,

1. I got your letter and that from Cardinal Simeoni. Like yourself, I am in favour of the New Guinea mission. Fr. Guyot, who is here at Issoudun, does not share this view. He says that Fr. Couppé's health does not make his departure acceptable and, in addition, we have nobody to replace him in Rome where the presence of a reliable assistant (to Jouët) is a necessity. With whom would you replace him (Couppé)? Fr. Piperon will be here at Issoudun on Sunday when he will be preaching our retreat and we shall speak again about it.
2. Yes, write a cheque to my account for the 12,000 francs (about 36,600 euros) owed to the Pope.
3. Dear Fr. Chappel died 15 days ago. Pray for him.
4. Have you had the indult allowing for priests to spend no longer than 3 months in the Novitiate? Then that for the masses? This matter is serious and urgent. I sent you a copy of the letter you wrote about this to Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne.
5. And what is the situation with regard to the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart book? Have you had Bishop Mermillod's preface?
6. Most willingly I give you powers to bless all sacred objects and furnishings, and to sub-delegate whomsoever.
7. And how is your health? Here we are all quite well.
8. I have as yet no news from Fr. Navarre...

Cheerio, Father.

Letter introducing Fr. Piperon's book: 'Manual of the Sacred Heart Religious'.

L 18840815

Issoudun, Feast of the Assumption,
August 15, 1884

Dearly loved Fathers and very dear Brothers,

May the grace of the Sacred Heart be with you always! Soon we shall have been living separated from each other for four years. The persecution in removing us from our peaceful dwellings and closing our sacred sanctuaries has forced us to take the exile's route and put up with a form of slavery with a view to the well-being of our Congregation. Aware that this sad situation which has overtaken us is likely to continue and last for quite sometime, we considered that it was our responsibility to strengthen more and more the bonds which unite us and to engage ourselves in practising more faithfully than ever the virtues of our holy state.

Satan, motivating the expulsion of religious, thought that their dispersal would weaken the spirit of discipline in them by making them less faithful to their regulations and thereby deviating from the wonderful path on which they should always walk; in this way he would like to see their ministry made pointless and draw them to disaster. To help you, dearly loved priests and brothers of the Sacred Heart, withstand these infernal machinations, allow me to draw on these words from the Apostle (Paul): Obsecro itaque vos vinctus in Domino, ut digne ambulantis vocatione, qua vocati estis ... solliciti servare unitatem spiritus in vinculo pacis. Unum corpus, et unus spiritus, sicut vocati estis in una spe vocationis vestare ... donec occuramus omnes ... in VIRUM PERFECTUM, in mensuram aetatis plenitudinis Christi. (Eph. IV. 1, 2, 3, 4, 13.) "I, the prisoner in the Lord, implore you therefore to lead a life worthy of your vocation. Bear with one another charitably, in complete selflessness, gentleness and patience. Do all you can for the unity of the Spirit by the peace that binds you together. There is one Body, one Spirit, just as you were all called into one and the same hope when you were called... In this way we are all to come to unity in our faith and in our knowledge of the Son of God until we become the perfect Man, fully mature with the fullness of Christ himself." (Jerusalem Bible) We shall assuredly achieve this aim if we are faithful not only to our vows, but more especially if we practise wholeheartedly the virtues which are the purpose of the vows.

To help you, dearly loved confrères, in the pursuit of this challenging task, we present you with a trustworthy presentation of the sacred obligations laid upon us by our religious profession. This work on our holy vows, I am certain, will be a help to everybody. It will affirm us in appreciation and love of our holy vocation, helping us to understand better what sublime perfection the true religious can achieve! It will positively help to dissipate doubts and eliminate certain illusions which can all too easily present a threat to many.

Take hold of this book, dear confrères, and read it attentively: study the principles which underline it and are based on authoritative sources; meditate on it before the Lord while recollected in prayer, and we are confidently assured that you will find in it a powerful aid towards fulfilling the duties of our holy state.

We humbly ask the merciful Heart of Jesus to bless this work and produce through it in your hearts the results we are hoping for.

Let us appeal to Our Lady to make perfect religious of us all, and then our humble Congregation will bear all the fruits of salvation expected of it.

To Archbishop Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, August 20, 1884

Your Grace,

You were favoured in coming to take over the See of Bourges, made famous by so many splendid archbishops, to find at the very centre of the diocese confided to your solicitous care the hearth of two great devotions presently known throughout the world. Having received from Rome the official commission to spread devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, we set everything in place to achieve this aim. Despite our efforts we painfully observe that this salutary devotion, given by Our Lord himself to modern societies (orders) as a plank of salvation, does not spread itself according to our wishes. Aware that all things are accomplished through Mary we thought of associating her with spreading awareness of her Son's Heart (in the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for which this letter to the Archbishop was intended to prompt a preface from him).

But a new title was needed to emphasize her (Mary's) involvement in this work of regeneration! It was at that moment the thought occurred to us of calling her Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Our expectations were not mistaken. Fifteen million souls hastened to place themselves under her protection and, fired by her, became zealous promoters of devotion to the Heart of Jesus. Our many members, witnesses to the wonders which happen every day in the new Association, were continuously asking us for a book which could help to make them know and love yet more advantageously this divine Heart, source of every blessing, and as well Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. This work is coming out today, Your Grace. Since the issues which it deals with are highly significant and have a bearing not only on the most important dogmas of our faith but also on the most delicate issues of modern science, I submitted the work on Your Holiness's recommendation to the Master of the Sacred Palace in Rome who judged it to be worthwhile for appearance in print. I feel bound to inform Your Grace that the many quotations presented in the course of this work in support of positions developed therein have been carefully considered and verified as to their sources. I am pleased to present to you the first copy of this work, sadly all too imperfect since the many involvements of my demanding ministry did not make it possible for me to take as much care over it as I should have liked.

If despite its drawbacks, Your Grace deems it worthy of his prestigious approval, the faithful will accept it with all the more convincing confidence because your piety, which is so evident, and your teaching, which is so solid, will have judged the work as worthy and appropriate enough to be placed in their hands.

Be kind enough, Your Grace, to favour me with your blessing while accepting this new expression of my deepest regards and appreciative acknowledgement in Corde Jesu.

Dear Father,

I am sending you on the reply to His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni. The worthy Council Fathers are unhappy, accepting this development only "ad duritiam cordis" (with a heavy, foreboding heart). They say, and with reason, that we do not have enough members to begin this new foundation because most of our works are suffering from lack of sufficient personnel. They consider, then, this new mission (mooted) in New Guinea to be premature at this stage and fear that we might not be able to keep it going. Nevertheless, the Holy See speaks; we close our eyes and obey. May God bless us!

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

To Cardinal Giovanni Simeoni, Prefect of Propaganda.

Issoudun, August 24, 1884

Immaculate Heart of Mary

Most Eminent Cardinal,

We are so moved and honoured by the great interest and special regard being shown by the Holy See to our humble Congregation with respect to the Melanesia and Micronesia missions which are its responsibility. Like yourself, Eminence, we are well aware of the importance to be attached to this significant undertaking, and the need to send new missionaries to unfurl the Sacred Heart in New Guinea, where there are so many millions of pagans (?!), before those ministers of error (the unorthodox Christians), so long set up in the coastal areas, can spread yet further their pernicious influence. You are looking, Your Eminence, in the letter you so kindly wrote to me, for two of my confrères and some lay brothers, whose aptitude would be particularly well suited for this type of apostolate in these far off countries.

Since you are the voice of the Holy Father, to whom we have promised absolute obedience, we commit ourselves with the most total submissiveness to his wishes, despite the great problems we can foresee and the serious obstacles which we should have to face if we laid store by human reason alone. Accordingly, we say with Mary in the office of her holy and Immaculate Heart which we celebrate today: Paratum cor meum, Deus, paratum cor neum ut faciam omnes voluntates tuas.

Let Your Eminence pray that God will spread his blessings on these new apostles and keep them in good health, because if their physical powers fail I don't know how we can replace them. We hope that the heroic sacrifices we are being called upon to make in these circumstances will draw many vocations to us, and that from those few religious we are sending out the Sacred Heart of Jesus will stir up a legion of missionaries full of zeal for the salvation of souls.

I do not think, Your Eminence, that the departure can take place before the end of September or the beginning of October. And if between now and then we get favourable reports from Fr. Navarre and his companions we could send out to them at the same time a little group of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart religious sisters, the need for whom is being felt more and more among these unfortunate pagans. This double departure would be very costly as the resources provided by the Propagation of Faith are already exhausted – and beyond that. At the time of the mission-burning in New Britain, the Propagation of Faith provided us with 10,000 francs. But from the 20,400 francs allocated to us this year by the Congregation, it has held back 10,000 francs, which means that it only provided us with 10,400 francs.

If, accordingly, Your Eminence, on the occasion of the foundation of this mission in New Guinea and the departure of the sisters, could recommend to the committee of the work for the Propagation of the Faith and the Holy Child to let us have new funds, which are so needed, I shall be very much obliged to you, since without such help I do not know how we can meet all the expenses involved in the travel of ten people and a double foundation (sisters as well as priests).

Most Eminent Cardinal, I prostrate myself at the feet of the Holy Father petitioning through your good offices his special blessing on all our undertakings, while asking yourself to accept this expression of our deepest regard while being favoured as Your Eminence's most humble and obedient servant in C.J.

Issoudun, August 26, 1884

CONFIDENTIAL

Dear Father,

The letter I forwarded to you yesterday for His Eminence, Cardinal Simeoni, followed from a meeting I had with Fr. Piperon who is familiar with the viewpoint of Frs. Guyot and Morisseau. The following day Fathers Piperon and Guyot, the latter having just arrived in Issoudun, having discussed the issue together, changed their minds and compelled me to send you a telegram asking you to await further instructions before handing my reply to His Eminence.

I am passing on to you these instructions: the new mission is not to be accepted unless the Pope, better informed about our Congregation's present situation, still says: I want them to take it on. They have convinced themselves that you are hiding the true state of affairs in leaving it to be understood by the Holy See that our Institute is more flourishing than it is.

It seems to me that they concentrate perhaps too much on problems which will go away from year to year and do not sufficiently appreciate the great advantages of the new posting being offered to us, linking, so to say, New Britain and Australia and, moreover, making easier communication possible for us, as well as the assured protectiveness of the Archbishop of Sydney who could be so helpful to us.

Fr. Piperon seems to want Fr. Couppé in Tilburg, whereas I think that the Dutch climate would be just as threatening to his health as that of Rome. There remains Fr. Verjus. One can only make him teach the lower classes – or a scholastic could replace him. The expulsion decrees do not allow me to bring together too many religious in Issoudun where there are, perhaps, too many already. See then, Fr., what's there for you to do!

I wrote a new letter to His Eminence in keeping with the memorandum here enclosed which sums it up. As you can see for yourself, the wording is very much toned down. I do not think it to be of the kind that would hold back the plans of the Holy See for New Guinea in favour of our Congregation. If, nevertheless, you think that this letter needs to be changed, write something to send on to me and I shall send it back to you.

I am all but persuaded that the Cardinal Prefect will pass over this and say to me in reply: "Yes, accept, it is the Pope's wish." Then all objections would give way. In which case we could ask Fr. Navarre to link up one of his priests with Fathers Couppé and Verjus, so that there would be three priests in Moresby, and you could provide two or three lay brothers, since you told me that you had some who wanted to go to this mission.

Meanwhile, if His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni, on receiving my letter, still has reservations about appointing Fathers Couppé and Verjus to New Guinea, you might ask him to make Archbishop Marchal, our respected Bishop, the one to pass judgment in this matter. As the Archbishop of Bourges is very supportive of our missions, I am sure that he will give a favourable verdict and all will go well. For the rest, if the Sacred Heart of Jesus wants this new mission for his missionaries, all obstacles will be removed. Be confident!

Cheerio, Father, confidence.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Your Grace,

I have the honour to present Your Grace with an official letter which His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni has written to me. Given our small numbers and the undertakings we are responsible for in Europe which must be maintained, we remain still hesitant about replying to a new request from the Holy See. Despite the many advantages which are there to be taken note of by us, we have fears about weakening ourselves and not being able to look after this mission creditably.

Be once more for us, Your Grace, an angel of good advice: one word from Your Grace would end our indecisiveness. The enclosed letters from Fr. Jouët will enlighten Your Grace fully enough about the issue. The two priests named are in Rome and very focused on going to New Guinea. Fr. Jouët has written to inform me that he has two or three lay brothers of our Society, Italians, who would join them.

At Your Grace's feet, I humbly ask your blessing and please accept my respectful good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, September 10, 1884

Dear Father,

1. I have received Fr. Couppé's authorization for the New Guinea mission. Fr. Guyot seemed to be very unhappy (worked up). I am awaiting a storm. Yes, it is right that Fr. Couppé, favoured with a letter from His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni, should go and present his case to the Committee of the Propagation of the Faith, and arrange the date of departure with the Paquebots Sailing Company. I think they could leave at the end of this month or in the next.
2. Archbishop Marchal, here in Issoudun yesterday, is very pleased about the new mission. He gave the habit to 12 Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and received 5 for profession. It's a beginning. They are in all 16 at the moment. The little community is getting along well.
3. Send no more than 500 or 600 copies of the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart at first to the St. Paul bookshop, taking things a little slowly. You have nothing to worry about. It's the parcels going from France to Rome which are ripped open, whereas those coming from Rome to France are left intact. Hurry.
4. Obviously, the former Papal Brief would not be appropriate for the new book. Meanwhile, if there is no desire to give us a new one (Brief), which generally speaking is not refused, or, more especially, if one doesn't want to be bothered asking for one, then let it rest at that; I would like the whole matter to be completed as soon as possible.
5. I sent 21,500 francs (about 4,710 euros) to the book's printers to meet their charges. The remainder will reach them very soon.
6. Let me know what we should offer the Master of the Sacred Palace for all the work he undertook in correcting the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I believe that he well merits the contribution which will rightly be awarded to him.
7. I can see for myself that a prefacing letter by Bishop Mermillod should be left out.
8. Thank you for the mass list. If later on you can succeed in reducing them to 1 franc as the Lourdes' priests have succeeded in doing, that would be very advantageous.

Here all are in good health.

1. I have just received a nice letter from dear Fr. Navarre and another from Frs. Cramaille and Hartzler. I passed on Fr. Navarre's letter to Fr. Bontemps for insertion in the Annals, asking him to send it on immediately to you. The journey was a good one, their health is good, the natives well disposed and hopes are high for the future.

2. Try and get immediately the commendatory letter from Cardinal Simeoni for the President of the Committee for the Propagation of the Faith. This matter is urgent.

3. A September departure is impossible. It is towards the 20th, normally, departures take place. I have written to the head of Messageries (the shipping company) in Marseilles booking for five passengers at a reduced rate, and requesting the exact date of departure in October. I shall let you know beforehand.

4. Send immediately to the Catholic bookshop 500 copies in sheets of the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Do what you can to get a Papal Brief straightaway, or a bringing up to date of the previous one for the book; this last would probably be easier. In the event that we cannot get anything, it would be best to send on the recent letter I wrote to Leo XIII requesting a Brief. – Reply. – Should we count any longer on Bishop Mermillod?

5. Fr. Verjus when he comes to Marseilles could bring with him the remainder of the books on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Vichy, September 19 1884
At Villa des Lilas until the 27th

Dear Father,

1. I am forwarding you a letter from Brother Bougras.

Bougras, a widower, born in Paris, August 4, 1839; he cooked, looked after the house and garden in Tilburg. In June 1889 from Issoudun, where he had spent four years, he left the Society. He wanted to get back special possessions and important papers he left in his trunk at Gerra. The trunk reached him on August 10 1889, but certain valuable contents were missing. His last letter about this to Chevalier on October 10, 1889, was forwarded to Piperon.

If you think he (Bougras) can be sent to New Guinea, departure from Marseilles will be on the 22nd of October. Please let me know and deal with him about this matter. I shall send you an Italian brother in his place if you need him.

2. You are aware that I had news from Fr. Navarre and his companions; very good reports.

3. Fr. Carrière takes the view that all the Tilburg scholastic theologians should be sent to our own Petite Oeuvres as teachers, and then bring together in the Tilburg Scholasticate all the scattered philosophy students, either at Issoudun or elsewhere, so that they can undertake a serious philosophy course over two or three years, and afterwards sent to Louvain where they would follow the courses in theology and Canon Law, etc. under the direction of a priest from the Society. In this way we would have young men, serious, well taught, who would later on offer real, worthwhile, contributions. Fr. Morisseau would be available for this, and Fr. Klotz who will help at the Little Work and the philosophy scholasticate with Fr. Carrière. This philosophy course would be more important and engaging to undertake.

You will keep on as teachers at the Petite Oeuvre all the young (student) theologians from Germany, Holland, Belgium, England (sic!) because they will not be allowed into France as teachers, and you can send on to us those who are French.

These young men, while preparing themselves for the priesthood under the supervision of a priest, would give their classes and could, therefore, stay quite a while as teachers, something very much to be desired since we do not have a professional body of teachers, and this is calamitous for the success of these youngsters; besides their courses are deplorably weak in quality, and, also, there is neither method nor follow-up or discipline. After two years we shall send these young philosophers to study theology at Louvain. Then we shall send with them to Louvain your novices of this year and the next who will be ready to begin their philosophy, following the Louvain philosophy courses at the same time as the others are following their theology courses.

1. We forego, thereby, having quality professors which we do not yet have.
2. We avoid too much accumulation at Tilbury since the Petite Oeuvre and the Novitiate are more than enough.
3. Meanwhile, we shall make preparations for a house in Belgium, which will be needed.

This arrangement quite appeals to me, and also to Fr. Guyot. I believe that it will make you smile. Speak to Fr. Morisseau about it and let him know what you think. If you share our views, we shall straightaway set about changing the teachers needed. Fr. Morisseau could, perhaps, return to Issoudun to become head of the office (bureau) and help us with his advice. I would then have two assistants with me, something which is more proper.

4. I am forwarding a letter from Fr. Robinet. I replied saying that Rome has not renewed the Indult and priests must spend a full Novitiate year.

Robinet, formerly an Oblate, OMI, then a diocesan priest, did make his profession three years later, June 29, 1887, but left the following year.

Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: As regards the supplement or the supplement plan, it seems very complicated to me. Whoever tries to hold too much, badly holds. Why not, to begin with, be satisfied with the supplementary letter which I drew up and which you took away with you? What do you think? Is it enough? Should it be sent around in the November number (of the Annals)? Return it to me with your comments. As for the League, I am not at all in favour of detaching Belgium from Issoudun to join it to Tilburg. Issoudun should always remain as it is, the centre of all our undertakings. Carry out your work with this in mind and let me have it.

Dear Father,

I am sending you in confidence a letter from dear Fr. Maillard who seems to be down-hearted. I believe that if you had carried out what we agreed on, that is to say, in dependence on you, the control of the Petite Oeuvre, leaving him as Bursar with a helper, and making Fr. Hartzler no more than sub-director, you would have avoided the serious problems which have arisen. Moreover, you would not have given authority to a young, inexperienced man, something which is always risky both for himself, the teachers and pupils, when one could have acted otherwise.

All these issues draw me to go to Tilburg towards the 6th or 7th of October to consider, with yourself and Fr. Maillard, what is the best course of action to undertake. (Chevalier was in Tilburg between October 7 and 10.)

Dear Father,

1. I am sending you on the Latin text of the Brief and its translation. Check to see if it's accurate.
2. The Manager of Messageries Maritimes (the shipping company) has five second class places available for the five Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart on the 22nd (of October). The Archbishop of Bourges supports the departure, but Fr. Guyot is set against it and threatens once more to write (complainingly) to Propaganda. My God! How this opposition and threats get me down! Fr. Navarre isn't ready yet to receive the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Their immediate arrival would be premature. My thinking would be that Fr. Couppé should escort them to Sydney and then give them over for 6 months or a year to the Archbishop of Sydney who would, under the care of a worthy priest, make use of them in the city, where, during this time, they would learn the language and become acclimatized. There are 2 choir sisters and 3 lay sisters; one of the choir sisters is Irish, from Archbishop Moran's native land, and the other is from Alsace, German-speaking.

In this way we would set ourselves up in Sydney and have a mission centre (procure). It would be a very good thing if His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni provided a letter for the Archbishop of Sydney recommending these young sisters. If there is no obstacle in your way you could, perhaps, go to Marseilles to be present at this dual departure in the name of the Holy See and make a little occasion of it which can be described in our Annals.

3. Like you I would like a Novitiate in Barcelona, but where are we going to find two more priests? Fr. Piperon wants to make use of Fr. Caër. (Spanish-born priest, see above.) I am going to Tilburg on Monday where I shall be dealing with all that. I shall be coming back on Sunday, October 11. Fr. Ramot is crying out for a priest to help him. Fr. Michael Tierney is ill and the doctor says that the American climate does not suit him.

4. Yes, I willingly accept Brother Joseph Vitale for the Novitiate; tell him so. But before sending him there, let us wait and see if there can be a Spanish Novitiate. As for the Passionist priest, we cannot accept him because of the delicate circumstances.

5. You may take it for granted about Brother Jullien. Should he wait for you on the 22nd at Marseilles or should he go directly to Rome? Write to him at Tilburg stating your preference.

6. I am sending you another thousand francs (about 3,140 euros) towards the printing of the book on Our Lady (of the Sacred Heart). It is impossible to provide more. If the Propagation of the Faith Congregation does not provide plentiful financial help for the 10 about to leave, it will be necessary to borrow. Just for the journey alone it is as much as 12,000 francs (about 37,700 euros) and that is only as far as Sydney: it is frightening. I think we are getting beyond our resources. The Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart have absolutely nothing; it falls to us to see to everything.

Dear Fr.,

It is quite impossible for us to become involved in your being released from your vows. It is altogether your own concern or that of your lawful superiors. Besides, once you have left your Society you would need a Roman Indult to enter our Society if our Council, having been made aware of the circumstances, agreed to accept you. I pray to the Sacred Heart of Jesus that he bless and guide you.

Dear Father,

1. You speak to me about making a gift to the Master of the Sacred Palace. I have an 18th century inkpot in bronze, valued at 500 francs (about 1,070 euros), a monumental work. Should it be presented to the Reverend Dominican Father? If you are going to Marseilles and cannot come as far as Issoudun, Fr. Couppé will take it to you. If you come to visit us, you can take it yourself.

2. The St. Paul bookshop, 6 rue Cassette (Paris) has still not received any copy from Rome (the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.) Bring it yourself, or have the 1,000 which remain brought to Marseilles by your brothers who are travelling there to embark (for Australia and New Guinea).

3. Dear Fr. G. (Guyot) is very much out of sorts because of our confrères' departure, and also the sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. He came to tell me yesterday that, because everything is being done (arranged) between yourself and myself, he is withdrawing from the Council because it's no longer necessary (to have one). I tried to calm him down. He has convinced himself that it's you who again encouraged this latest mission departure to New Guinea, and I made available the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. He continues to talk about writing to Propaganda to point out our inability to carry out these undertakings. I hope that he will not go as far as this. You can see for yourself that I have good reason to be annoyed.

Issoudun, October 12, 1884

Dear Father,

1. Oceania. The Propagation of the Faith only provides 9,000 francs (about 28,270 euros). It's far too little. There will be ten travelling; five priests and five Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. For each one the journey from Marseilles to Sydney will cost 1,100 francs (about 3,450 euros), and money is needed to set up in Moresby, and for the journey. Besides, some funds must be laid aside for the Sisters while they are in Sydney. Try to get something from Propaganda.

2. Marseilles. I am very pleased that you are going to Marseilles to oversee the departure ceremony. You write an account of it for the Annals. I give you full authority to receive the vows of those leaving. I give you as well the same power with respect to the two Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Religious, a choir sister and a lay sister yet to complete some months. I am sorry that you cannot come to Issoudun for a few days.

3. Barcelona. Fr. Caër has still some months to complete before he ends his Novitiate; we cannot then take him away before he has finished. He will then go to Barcelona, also Jules Vandel, and the Novitiate will begin. I understand that it will be January or February before Fr. Caër will be free to leave. The matter has been arranged with Fathers Piperon and Morisseau since I have come back from Tilburg where I spent two days.

4. The Master of the Sacred Palace. You do not comment on whether I should send him, through you, the bronze inkpot. It's on the 17th, that evening, that our confrères will be leaving Issoudun for Marseilles. Send me a telegram saying yes or no.

5. The Book on Our Lady. Bring with you to Marseilles the thousand copies of the book which remain over. Mr. Philipona has informed me that 500 have arrived. Do you know how much the customs wanted from him? 200 francs (about 625 euros). It's disgraceful. Bring the books with you, then. Then, once you have arrived in Marseilles, send them, second class, to the St. Paul bookshop, 6 rue Cassette, Paris. I have had the Brief translated myself also. I have had it gone over by several people. The literal translation is considered to be very true to the text. I shall forward it to you.

6. The Printer. I am sending you yet another thousand francs for the printer. There remains 780 francs, but I am sending back to you through Fr. Couppé the Italian copy samples he sent on another time and which I have no need of. This will mean a deduction.

7. Ordinations. I approve of all your recommendations concerning the ordination of your candidates. I sent the letter to Fr. Guyot.

8. Your statue is very good. You can have the work carried out.

9. Tilburg Scholastics. Brothers Jullien and Benedetti will leave Tilburg to meet you at Marseilles in the evening, October 17. One might, perhaps, send with them Brothers Mathieu and Hastier if you think it worthwhile. The two latter have already done one year of philosophy. If you like, you could send a telegram to Fr. Piperon.

Due to the cholera outbreak, might it not be better if they all travelled via Turin-Florence? Make a decision about it.

Dear Father,

Fr. Couppé (Jouët's assistant in Rome) tells me that it would be hazardous to send to Rome this year Brothers Mathieu and Hastier, and that it would be better to build up their religious life and leave over their departure until next year, accompanied by those you have named.

Mathieu, born 1865, was the son of a widow who became a Daughter of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Sister Marie-Hélène. It would be December 1887 before he arrived in Rome where he was ordained to the priesthood on May 19, 1889. Hastier never got to Rome.

It would appear that Fathers Vandel and Meyer have a deplorable critical spirit etc., and since these two are due to leave Rome next year, there will be a better attitude about. Only send to Rome, then, Brothers Jullien and Benedetti.

Meyer went on to become the formidable future General, 1905-1920. Vandel, after some postings in Europe – Barcelona, Tilburg, etc. – spent thereafter his whole ministry life in Australia. See here also Twohig, Late But Not Too Late for both Meyer and Vandel.

Fathers Piperon and Morisseau want to keep Brothers Mathieu and Verjus for another year because, so they say, their philosophy course would be incomplete. Undated; likely October 1884

Project for Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart.

The following document relates to a letter Chevalier wrote to Fr. Barral on October 22, 1884: "I am sending you a little piece of work."

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

The Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart

This undertaking does not date from today; it was Pius IX, that great Pope, so inspired by God, who gave me the idea.

In 1860, casting a critical eye about the world, he (the Pope) was taken aback by the prevalent critical spirit, and with characteristic perspicacity he foresaw that a massive onslaught, being prepared for quite sometime by the secret societies, would soon overwhelm Europe, but, especially, the Church. Taking soundings of the abyss being stirred up by freemasonry, in dread he looked about him. A man of heart and fired up, on hearing his (Papal) plea, placed his bright sword at the service of the Papacy. Pius IX accepted this sword and, in order to make it invincible, wished to place it under the protection of the Sacred Heart of Jesus which he tenderly loved. Basing himself on the promises made to Blessed (now Saint) Margaret Mary, he was strongly convinced that this divine Heart was the sovereign remedy offered for modern society's healing and salvation, and that every attempt at renewal which did not have this as a point of departure could never succeed. Pius IX invited the General to form an élite body of willing, devoted Christian men who would be known as Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart. He himself drew up the main features of this institution and named a commission to draw up its statutes. Events (political) in the Peninsula (Italian unity and independence) came to a head and put paid to the development of this (Papal) project.

Towards the end of this new year (sic), virtually on the eve of the battle of Castelfidardo (a town of 150,000 population, near Ancona on the Adriatic coast), where the Papal zouaves, despite their heroism, succumbed to the weight of numbers, the founder of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart placed himself at the feet of the great Pope asking him to bestow upon his developing undertaking a blessing which would bring continuous fruitfulness with it. Pius IX thereupon delivered these remarkable words: "Yes, yes, I give my blessing most wholeheartedly; crescite et multiplicamini. Work towards building a Congregation wholly devoted to the Sacred Heart, and I shall be happy to approve of it before I die. The Church and Society have no other hope than in the Heart of Jesus. It is he who will cure all our ills."

Then, calling to mind his former project and referring by name to him whom he saw on his knees before him, he said with a smile: "Oh! How needed then are the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart today to combat evil, take in hand so many undertakings which are threatened, and defend energetically the rights of the Church, the family and society which are ignored and trampled underfoot."

These words were a ray of light. He had scarcely come away from the audience, and still taken up with the feelings of the Vicar of Jesus Christ, the Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart began to set out a programme for this new Chevalerie which seemed to meet the needs of the time. In the thinking of Pius IX the members of this Institute, though coming from all classes of society, should be, before all else, serious and practising Christians, living in the world, married or not, and of irreproachable repute. His wish was to form within this 'Chevalerie', insofar as possible, all militant undertakings, grouping together all those of good will, but alas so divided, to concernedly face up to the common enemy, whatever shape it takes, and set up everywhere the kingdom of the Sacred Heart. Ametur ubique terrarum Cor Jesu Sacratissimum. (100 Days' Indulgence – Pius IX – 1860.)

It is under this glorious standard, given by Jesus Christ himself to meet the present time, that battle must begin and continue. "The Sacred Heart of Jesus is the whole of Jesus." (Cardinal Pie, Bishop of Poitiers, volume 6, p.611.) "It is the living summing up of Christ and the centre of everything." (Bishop Baudry: The Heart of Jesus, p.193, 196.) "It is from Him the Church comes with all its Sacraments, the Redemption with all its mysteries." Unde sacramenta Ecclesiae manoverunt sine quibus ad vitam, quae vera vita est, non intratur. (St. Augustine in Joan Evang. C.19 tract.120, N.2, Tome 3, p.1953.) "It is from him that grace comes, without which one can do nothing, and from whom all the works and practices of piety, without exception draw their efficacy. As well it is through the Sacred Heart that salvation and regeneration must come to us." (St. Margaret Mary) "The worship of this divine Heart is the very essence of Christianity, the synopsis and substantial summary of all religion." (Cardinal Pie, Bishop of Poitiers.) It is in him, by him, with him, we shall gain the victory. And if up to now our efforts have remained sterile, so to say, it is because the Sacred Heart of Jesus has not been, as he should be, our rallying force, our support, our guide and our only hope. The Chevalerie here engaging our attention is not a religious order, and to become part of it one does not take vows, leave home or give over one's livelihood, its being enough to provide support through one's zeal, commitment, faith.

The main features of this Institution were traced in the shadow of the Issoudun Basilica of the Sacred Heart, and under the eyes of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, to whom this work was presented, very much wanted to give it his support. May the Sacred Heart of Jesus deign to bestow on it his most cherishable blessings!

This Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart must be a counter-thrust to Freemasonry. Freemasonry, fulminated against by the Sovereign Pontiffs, and in particular by Leo XIII, as the greatest threat to souls, the Church and Society, is spread everywhere. One finds it in all the world's countries, even the remotest islands. It knows how to take different forms and different directions in order to achieve its aims. Today it has encroached everywhere: thrones, governments, the Civil Service, the army, public schools, works of charity, the working classes, their leaders, journalism, the press, etc. Nothing escapes its pernicious influence. It accommodates all errors, favours all vices. It is in millions it already numbers its followers.

What does this diabolical sect want? Is it to overthrow the reign of God and His Church, destroy religion and morality in order to achieve some such as the following? Free thought, freedom of spirit; the confusing, or perhaps, abolition of all rights, duties, the destruction of worthy principles which under-pin the family and society, the unchaining of wild passion, the most shameful depreciation of virtue, and the most unbridled sensualism: in other words, Satan's empire in all its extension.

And what, then, does the Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart, this army of Christ and His Church, set itself on undertaking? The overcoming of Freemasonry, and the renewal of the Reign of God in souls and institutions. Its duty as well as its right is to spread itself everywhere its avowed enemy is to be found. The challenge is without doubt difficult! But it is not impossible. It is incumbent on all Christians, on every man of heart and faith. If we keep our arms crossed in face of this imposing coalition of secret societies which are continually increasing, soon we shall be weeping above still more deplorable ruins than those we are contemplating today. The time for reasoning has passed; it's now action which is called for. Let us call up our forces... Dispersed we are weak, but united we become invincible. Who have we to fear? If God is with us, who can be against us? Since Jesus has given us His Heart as a plank of salvation, as a sovereign remedy, a supreme resource for the bad times we are passing through, let us learn to profit from all of this.

The Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart makes itself available to us as one of the most efficacious means to achieve success. If we so want it, victory will be ours.

Dear Fr. Barral,

I am sending you on a little piece of work which I would ask you to print straightaway, only a 100 copies. You will correct the proofs yourself and send on to me forthwith the 100 copies which I have need of. This Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart is being sought after by high-ranking people; we shall see what the results are like. I do not want this work to be printed in France.

I find the design of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the new style presentation, quite good. Instead of stars between the two ogival lines, I would much prefer to have in Latin "Nostra Domina a Sacratissimo Corde Jesu, spes desperantium, ora pro" nobis." I am returning the design to you. I find the price still rather high. Have whatever number you want printed, but it is Tilburg which will have to pay the costs as we have too many expenses to meet (in Issoudun). There should also be made available some presentations of the framed picture, 5 or 600, then.

Dear Father,

1. I am delighted, Father, to gather that your retreat has produced results. May the Lord be praised!
2. I think that 18 months' novitiate for our young men is not too much. If you have Novices who are older and have not been at the Petite Oeuvre, you could be satisfied with one year (for them).
3. The Holy Hour and the Stations of the Cross are very special exercises for missionaries. I am of the view that they should continue in the Scholasticate in the circumstances about which you write to me. Fr. Verjus is not getting any better in Marseilles. Fr. Jouët is staying with him. Let us pray for him! The others, together with the 5 Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, sailed on Wednesday.

October 22, 1884, led by Fr. Louis Couppé; three lay brothers, all Italian, Travaglini, Gasbarra, Marconi, still novices. Verjus was well enough to leave a month later, November 19.

I have received another letter from Fr. Navarre; all goes very well, grace is at work and the natives give every reason to hope. I am sending on to you a letter he sent to me dealing with lay brothers, so important in the missions. I share his views. Read it carefully, also Fr. Morisseau, and send it to Fr. Jouët, or, better, send it back to me with your observations. Little Brother Merg and the other scholastic who wanted to leave, whose name I cannot recall, but who doesn't draw from me a lot of confidence... should be given careful consideration... You will look into this matter...

The Merg under consideration here is Louis, younger brother of Émile, then at Madeley – see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late passim – and Jules yet to come. Louis, ordained to the priesthood in 1889, left the Society a little over two years later and became incardinated in his native diocese of Strasbourg.

Dear Father,

Thank you for your kind letter which you wrote to me about our good Fr. Verjus. May the Lord be praised. May this harsh trial redound to the glory of the Sacred Heart and the well-being of the mission.

Spare yourself, take care of yourself and try to get back to Rome as soon as possible; your presence is required there if I am to go by a letter I have had from Fr. Védère which I am sending on to you; this child finds himself without money and everything is becoming very difficult for him.

He is looking for 1,000 francs from me. He is not aware that I am financially exhausted because of the eleven thousand francs which I had to pay in borrowings for our confrères and sisters who have just left. The Propagation of Faith could only provide them with 9,000 francs and I provided what was needed to reach 20,000 francs. I am disappointed that the Rome house is not becoming self-sufficient; it must, nevertheless, get to this stage. There has to be great oversight, a lot of care to avoid waste, and great economizing. I would indeed like to send just this once the 1,000 francs asked for (by Védère), but please set up things within your financial limits while paying the remainder of your debts.

I quite believe that if you send an article to the Universe or the Monde about our Oceania missions requested of us by the Holy See, and especially that of New Guinea, you will greatly please people and attract a lot of interest. You might also mention the Religious of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, etc. If you do not want to sign this article, have it done by the journalists of the Universe or Monde. I saw Mr. Eugène Veuillot and he is well disposed to insert whatever you write. It would appear that the young priests, Meyer and Vandel, are lacking in piety and, besides, have a deplorably critical outlook as well as liberal ideas. This critical attitude, left behind them by Fathers Klotz and Carrière, etc., has spread in general over the younger people, and the malaise continues, this freedom and indiscipline which is so damaging to your scholastics. I am also informed that the Roman seminary, the Apollinaire, which our young men attend, continues to present and favour this unwholesome approach and those shortcomings in piety which sadden us. I am told that Propaganda or the Roman College (the Gregorian University) attended by the French Seminary would be better suited to our students. Look into this serious issue: it deserves to be given consideration.

Dear Father,

Here's a letter which shatters me. What is to be done? I never expected anything like this determined attitude. Who could in these circumstances bring about a change? I am lost in conjectures. I replied to him (Fr. Védère; see next letter) saying: "remain with the others and do nothing until you (Jouët) return, and I give you full authority to look into, and decide, the matter". Do you think that it would be appropriate to let him leave with Fr. Verjus? It may well be premature...

I am forwarding to you the plan for the 'Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart'. I presented it in confidence to certain high personages and they would like to see it put into effect. But before that it is necessary to submit it to the Pope and have it approved by him. For this reason it needs the approval of the bishops. I forwarded it to Bishop Mermillod, the Bishop of Rheims and the Bishop of Grenoble. I count on their support. Mention it to the Bishop of Marseilles in order to find out if he approves of it. It would be a worthwhile undertaking destined to achieve a lot of good.

I cannot believe it since, however well you feel, you would be acting injudiciously. Your Grace,

It is with total filial confidence that I am honoured to present for Your Grace's consideration and approval a very important project. The enclosed copy is only a basic sample. Consequently, I make bold to ask Your Grace to take out and change everything which you consider appropriate. This undertaking, well organized, well led, can achieve a lot of good. Before all else it needs our Pope's approval. Very opportune circumstances have arisen in favour of this 'Chevalerie'. Very distinguished people in civil society are willingly disposed to help actively. The General in question here (de Cathelineau - from a Vendée family), and whom I saw quite recently, offered to go to Rome and speak to Leo XIII.

Before I discussed and submitted this plan to you, Your Grace, I decided to put things in order by seeking out, and assuring myself of, the support of influential people so that Your Grace can better judge its opportunities and the good it can achieve if put into effect with discretion, wisdom, prudence and restraint. It was only after lengthy prayer and mature reflection, Your Grace, that I felt myself inexorably drawn to engage myself at the present time with the Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart, from the deep conviction that it meets a need in our time and can render very great service to souls and society. Its success is in your hands, Your Grace. If Your Grace favoured it with your approval, having made the changes considered to be helpful, and going on to commend it to the attention and good-will of the Sovereign Pope, success is assured. It will be a fresh, glorious title to add to all those others of your pious episcopacy. I would spontaneously go to Rome if Your Grace would allow me to ask, in your name, Leo XIII's approval.

Trusting in your good-will, Your Grace, I place myself at Your Grace's feet to offer you my lively appreciation, my most respectful regards, while petitioning your blessing.

In order to avoid any suspicion I have considered it to be the more prudent course to have the enclosed project printed abroad.

Issoudun, November 12, 1884

My Dear Child,

I am very pleased to hear that you are better. You haven't replied to the questions in my last letter: where is Fr. Jouët, etc? I am financially exhausted in providing the expenses of the journey for you, in looking after your personal expenses, and also the cost of setting yourself up. Fr. Couppé couldn't claim back the price of your ticket and we couldn't give it to him. This money was for you, and your place (in the boat) should be reserved on your behalf when you are setting off again. Otherwise, it would be both dishonest and unjust in relation to Fr. Couppé. It is impossible for me at the present moment to give you further money. You cannot, then, go to Sydney for quite some time. Moreover, Fr. Couppé should have left with you your portion of the money which I left with him for you all, and which is understandable. In addition, Fr. Jouët in one of his letters informed me that the Messageries of Marseilles (the shipping company) will either provide the money to go with your berth, or will accept you for another (ship's) sailing without looking for anything (money). This is only fair. As for the supposition you make that Fr. Couppé might have taken at Port-Said the money allotted for your place, this is unacceptable. The ship's captain had no such authority.

My view is that your health is not sufficiently improved to undertake such a long trip this coming week. I feel that you would be acting imprudently. If the doctor and Fr. Jouët take a different view I agree to your departure without taking any responsibility for it. Let those who would like to leave with you pay their own way! I haven't a centime to offer for anything like that. I am sending you 100 francs in case you need something (roughly 310 euros).

Cheerio, my dear son. I bless you in C.J. and embrace you wholeheartedly.
J. Chevalier, MSC.

I am sending you on different things either for New Guinea or for Fr. Navarre. Let me know if you are definitely leaving this coming week.

Issoudun, December 13, 1884

Dear Father,

1. I am forwarding 300 mass offerings to Fr. Verjus. Enclosed 600 francs (about 1,890 euros). We have been financially exhausted for quite some time, as you are aware. It is impossible to make any more sacrifices. I made a borrowing for the departure of Fr. Couppé. I am depending on the money promised by Propaganda for next January to pay part of the costs.
2. If the young Italian has not made his vows, in no way do I consent to his departure since he doesn't belong to the Society. If Fr. Verjus is tired he will have staff on the vessel who will provide him with the necessary care.
3. My friend, your presence in Rome is absolutely necessary. Go neither to Lyons or Issoudun, but take off for Rome as quickly as you can on the day itself Fr. Verjus leaves, indeed sooner if it is possible. If you think the presence of a confrère is absolutely necessary to be with Fr. Verjus, you could, yourself, write to me saying that you cannot be absent from Rome for so long and could someone be sent to Marseilles. I would then ask Fr. Tréand to go there.
4. Obviously, or most probably, had you been in Rome for the arrival of Brother Jullien you would have averted the storm. Perhaps it's too late. If he wanted to go on the mission I wouldn't have hesitated about giving him to Fr. Verjus as a companion. I am not at all in favour of prolonging his stay in Tilburg, or drawn to the money his mother wished to give fully of her own accord to Fr. Pipéron. I don't think she would ever dare to claim it back.
5. I have asked Mr. Philipino not to put the former picture of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in the books which remain to be printed. I believe you are exacerbating the problem since it was you, yourself, after all who said to me on your return from Rome with Monsignor Druon that we were authorized to use this older presentation for private worship only, and as a particular representation. As for the change sought in the Child's posture, this is with a view to public worship given that the statue is not called Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. I have the decree here in front of me. What does all this mean? Absolutely speaking, nothing can be made out of it. Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne had published it in the Religious Weekly and in our Annals that the statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and the pictures representing her, was only forbidden for public worship in the future, not for private worship. And here we are at the moment with a picture, before which one gains 100 days' indulgence when praying for the Holy Father, which cannot even be placed in a book. Once again, what is being forbidden? By this reckoning should we not take it off the cover of our Annals and no longer make use of it for promotion purposes?
6. Archbishop Marchal wholeheartedly approves, in a letter he has written, the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart project, considering it to be very timely and likely to bring about a great deal of good. This enterprise has nothing to do with the Master of the Sacred Palace. If the Holy See is willing to encourage this project and approve of it, what is wrong in associating with it its approval by a number of bishops? The truth is that the Master of the Sacred Palace is abusing his role and his authority. Cheerio, my friend. I feel for you caught up in all your problems.

Warm greetings and I embrace you wholeheartedly in C.J.
J. Chevalier, MSC.

Your Grace,

I sincerely thank you for the favourable welcome you so kindly extended to the project I had the honour of addressing to you. I venture to hope that the Sacred Heart will bless it. I shall keep Your Grace informed about all the developments arising from it.

The child of the principal of Issoudun College will be ten years in January. Your Grace may allow me to accept her for first year catechism, but since the little girl has not attended the classes in catechism for little ones, I would venture to ask Your Grace to accept her on condition that she comes to the catechism for little ones I take charge of every Tuesday at 11am for children 8 and 9 years old.

Please accept, Your Grace, my most respectful good wishes and favour me with your blessing in C.J.

Issoudun, November 16, 1884

Dear Father,

1. Fr. Bontemps writes to tell me that he has received nothing from you (that is to say, an article), about the departure of our confrères and sisters (from Marseilles). I had nonetheless asked you to send an account of this to the Annals. You must have a secret reason for staying silent like this! What is it? It's not because you are short of time. I am at a loss in giving myself over to conjectures.

2. Fr. Barral has written to me again to say that the Bois-le-Duc censor (diocesan) will not allow "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, pray for us" 100 days' indulgence to be printed if he does not have to hand a confirmatory proof. It appears that this document has been sought from you for a long time; during our problems you took to Rome the petition for this indulgence granted by Pius IX and you have never sent it back. The Bishop of Bois-le-Duc, who is aware that at Tilburg they asked you on a number of occasions, but always without success, has written asking me to get in touch myself with you. You can see how embarrassing it is! Why do you not answer when it is a question of serious issues and affairs of the Society? If you have any reason to stay silent, let me know.

Cheerio, Father. Again, I wish dear Fr. Verjus a good journey.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Have you met Fr. Dorboy and the lay brother he was recommending to you? Twice now I have faced you with this question.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, November, 1884

Dear Father,

1. I also would be delighted to see you, but in the interests of the Rome house I feel I must make this difficult sacrifice.

2. I am pleased to hear that our dear Fr. Verjus left in good spirits. May the Sacred Heart help him and protect him!

3. I had a nice letter from Fr. Couppé and the sisters when they were in Aden. All are getting along well with the exception of poor Fr. Couppé who has a fever. Let us hope he will be quickly restored to health.

4. It was an oversight, pure oversight, on the part of Madame Hartzler if she hasn't written to you since your devotedness to these good Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and to your own confrères and Fr. Verjus has been without limits and beyond all praise. For my part, I thank you from the bottom of my heart.

5. It was not to oppose you, my friend, that I did not agree to the departure of the young Italian, a pupil of Petite Oeuvre in Rome. Certainly not! Since this young man did not belong to our Society, I could not conscientiously approve of his departure. At this age, who can foresee the future? The young man could have fallen ill, perhaps died or experienced a bad sequence of events; who knows? We do not take on needlessly such-like responsibilities. We have enough of our own.

6. Dear Fathers Couppé and Verjus have done well to pass over what might have been said in the presbytery. Even though Fathers Hériault, Bizeuil and Burnet did not feel themselves called to the missions, and there are only the three of them, they have never, to my knowledge, said anything against the missions or against those who are devoting themselves to it. I would never allow anything like this to happen. You may then be at ease about this.

Dear Fr. Cramaille has written to two or three people in Issoudun about his boredom, his dislike of the natives and his wish to return. Is it a surprise if the news of this reaches the presbytery? What I find amazing is the wholly gratuitous assumption of being quite particularly at fault which I find in your letter.

Fr. Couppé has gossiped too much, both with myself and when I had to absent myself... Besides the lewd stories which he engages in too readily and, perhaps, too complacently, I have found him to be less than judicious, and conceited as a conversationalist. I am not without being uneasy about him, left to himself as he will be, and taking the initiative in regard to everything. I hope and pray that he will turn out otherwise.

7. I am amazed that so many difficulties are being made in Rome against any favouring of our undertakings, for example, our Association, our priestly work, our Little Work, our Third Order, etc. Look at the way the Congregation for Indulgences has been generous to the promoters, men and women, of the Apostolate of Prayer. There are all those priests who are engaged with it handing out scapulars, rosaries, privileged altars, etc., and this at the present time as well as in the future. The same holds for the work under the aegis of St. Francis-de-Salas, etc. Why cannot we have the same favours granted us? There should not be two weights and two measures.

I am amazed, my friend, that you charge me with being ultramontane in word and liberal in action. Have you rightly considered the thrust of that observation? You sometimes write of the profuse pictures of the early representation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. These pictures, yes or no, are they not authorized in a smaller representation with a view to the piety of the faithful and private worship? They are always found on the covers of our Annals, and they are to be found on the prayer leaflets of a certain percentage of those used by the Association. They are an exact reproduction of the Issoudun statue which Rome has declared to be above reproach and not to be forbidden. They are in total conformity with that which was presented to Pius IX and which this great Pope granted a 100 days' indulgence for every prayer the faithful would make before it, in keeping with the intentions of the Sovereign Pontiff. If this picture is, thereby, approved, why lay blame on us for spreading it with prudence and moderation? If it should not be any longer promoted, then say so!

I am happy, dear Father, to gather that Brother Jullien is free of his jerkiness. I wrote a nice letter to him in the sense you suggested to me.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Likely date November 1884

Ametur ubique terrarum Cor Jesu Sacratissimum

Pious Union
Of the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart
Canonically established at Issoudun by His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges.

This undertaking doesn't date from the present; it was Pius IX of blessed memory who gave the idea to Fr. Chevalier in 1860 when the latter was at his feet petitioning him to pray for and bless his nascent work. The Sovereign Pontiff spoke so tellingly in his presence about the efficaciousness of devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, and the need to gather together under its banner all women and men of faith and courage that he (Chevalier) set about drawing up a programme for these new Chevaliers. Every century has witnessed the advent of institutions corresponding to its needs; at the present time, however, do not all expectations focus confidently on the Sacred Heart as that alone which can save us from the dangers threatening us?

"The Church and Society," Pius IX remarked, "have no hope other than the Heart of Jesus. It is he who will heal all our maladies." A September 1860 audience.

It is under this glorious banner, given by Jesus Christ himself for the present time, that the contest must begin and be carried on. And if up to now our attempts have, so to say, proved fruitless, it is because the Sacred Heart of Jesus has not been as he should be, our rallying call, our point of concentration, our guiding force and our very special centre of hope. The Chevaliers here in question are in respect a Religious Order. To enter there are no vows to be taken, family to forsake or post to disengage from; it merely suffices to make available combined zeal, devotedness and faith. Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, to whom this plan of work was submitted, acknowledged its opportuneness and very much wanted to give it his support, and so also his worthy successor, Archbishop Marchal of Bourges. (Archbishop Forcade of Aix and Archbishop Ordonez of Quito, Ecuador, have been supportive of this new Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart.)

The Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart quite obviously meets a need in the present time; its hour has arrived. It has to be a counter-force against Freemasonry. Freemasonry, denounced by the Popes, particularly so by His Holiness Leo XIII, as being of the utmost danger for souls, the Church and Society, is spread everywhere; one finds it in every country of the world intent on achieving its aims. Today it has penetrated everywhere, royal houses, governments, all the great machinery of the state, the army, the official schools, industry, corporations, the magistracy, public and local administration, helpful undertakings, the working classes or their leaders, journalism, the press of every kind, etc. Nothing is free of its deleterious influence, not even infancy. It is supportive of all wilful mistakes, favours all the vices. It is in millions that its adherents are already counted.

What does this diabolical sect seek? To overturn the kingdom of God and his Church, destroy Religion and Morality! To what purpose? To facilitate free thinking, emancipation of spirit, the confounding or, perhaps, the abolition of all rights and duties, the destruction of those worthy principles which constitute the family and society, the unloosing of wild passions, the most despicable disrespect for virtue, and quite unchecked sensualism, that is to say Satan's empire in all its ramifications.

And then! What does the Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart, that daughter of the Church, propose to do? The overthrow of Freemasonry and the renewal of the reign of God in souls and institutions. Its need, like its duty, is to spread itself everywhere its declared enemy is to be found.

The undertaking is, without a doubt, difficult, but it is not impossible, and it is incumbent on all Christians and every man of faith and good will. If we remain with crossed arms before this imposing number of secret societies, constantly increasing, soon we shall be weeping over ruins yet more lamentable than those we see about us today.

The time for reasoning has passed; it's now action which is called for. Let us unite our forces; dispersed we are weak, but united we shall be invincible. What have we to fear? If God is on our side who can be against us? Since Jesus has given us his Heart as a plank of salvation, a sovereign remedy, a special resource for the evil times we are passing through, let us know how to gain from this. The Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart presents itself to us, then, as one of the most efficacious means of attaining success, and if we want it so, victory will be ours.

I. The aim of the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart as an institution. It is:

1. To defend energetically and perseveringly the rights of the Church and the Holy See, of religion, the family and society in placing at the service of the great undertakings its zeal, devotedness, influence and gifts.
2. To unmask and challenge Freemasonry, and the revolutionary spirit by every acceptable means.
3. To challenge with zeal, and head on, impious doctrine, anti-Christian teaching, an aggressive press, etc. A new emphasis will be given to such religious manifestations as processions, pilgrimages, etc.
4. To support and found, insofar as that is possible, according to the needs of the times, Catholic undertakings.
5. The support of the weak and their encouragement to walk in the right way.
6. To provide in oneself an example of the Christian virtues.

II. The Organization

This Institute will be made up of active and honorary members recruited from practising Catholics of all nations, without anything owed to public opinion. It will have the title of Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart and in dependence on the President General, or Grand Master in the terminology of the Chevalerie.

The Grand Master will have six Councillors forming his Council to whom the important questions are addressed. He will choose from among them two Assistants. He is elected for six years by the Councillors whose assembly is called and presided over by the first Assistant. An absolute majority of votes is needed for election. If it hasn't been obtained, one begins the voting once again, twice if necessary, and if this last elective process so carried out does not yet yield a result, recourse is had to a final round, offering a relative majority.

The election of the Grand Master is to be approved by the Archbishop of Bourges. He can be re-elected indefinitely.

To enter the Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart one needs to be presented by two of the six members. The petitioners must be well known to those who present them and having in themselves all the qualities envisaged in the regulations. Following the recommendations, as gathered by the President, the committee delivers its judgment on admission. But one will not be made an active Chevalier or an honorary member of the Sacred Heart without a year's probation and having received the approval of the Council, whose role it is, in the last resort, to pronounce a verdict. It's only at this stage that the Diploma of Admission will be granted, signed by the Grand Master and with a cross featuring the Sacred Heart in the centre.

Every Chevalier of the Sacred Heart whose conduct has become scandalous, dishonourable or insubordinate, will be in the first place warned by the Council, and then thrown out if he hasn't mended his ways. Each year the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart, under the presidency of the Grand Master, will come together in a specified location to consider their undertakings, and the measures to be taken with regard to their support and development.

In order to avoid any confusion, the undertakings associated with this Institute are divided by sections. Accordingly, there will be: the section dealing with workers' undertakings and schools, the section dealing with the defence of religious and social principles, the section dealing with the Christian apostolate, and the Catholic press, etc., etc. There you see how this order of the Sacred Heart Chevaliers is open to all levels of Society. Each of them enforces through its own sphere of action the promotion of Christian values through example and faith in God.

The Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart as such are in dependence on the Pope and must give good example by submitting to their lawful Pastors and through devotedness without qualification to holy Church in the person of the Sovereign Pontiff whose teachings will be for them the true measure of behaviour from which they will never diverge.

The Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart will oversee the observation of the regulations both as to spirit and letter, and especially so in that which relates to full submissiveness before the teaching and the Constitutions of the Popes.

Every three years, the Grand Master will present a detailed report on the general state of the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart from the perspective of persons and undertakings, and the Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart will forward it to the Archbishop of Bourges and to our Holy Father, the Pope.

III. Conditions of Entry

1. Only those who are intelligent, judicious, practising Catholics of good repute can become active members.
2. Made Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart, they will promise to conform to the Statutes.
3. An entry diploma will be granted after a year's probation.
4. Nobody can be accepted as a Chevalier of the Sacred Heart unless he has completed his 18th year.
5. The following is the admission formula publicly recited by the candidate kneeling before an improvised altar, over which hangs a picture of the Sacred Heart, and on the altar the book of the Gospels lies open:

"J.N., devoted son of the Catholic Apostolic, Roman Church, swear fidelity to Jesus Christ and to his Vicar Our Most Holy Father, the Pope... all whose rights and prerogatives I shall defend to the shedding of my blood if that be necessary.

Keenly wishing to enter, despite my unworthiness, the Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart, whose purpose I am aware of, I promise to act in conformity with the Statutes which I undertake to observe faithfully to my dying breath. May the divine Heart of Jesus and Mary Immaculate help me. So be it."

The President, standing, replies in these words:

"My dear Brother, the Council takes into consideration your wishes, expectantly hoping that you will render honour to our splendid company by the nobility of your ideals and your generous self-denial. Through the divine Heart of Jesus and Our Lady, I receive you as a CHEVALIER OF THE SACRED HEART." +

Then he will have him kiss the Holy Gospels and the Chevalier Cross which he will place over his chest, and then give him the entry Diploma.

6. All the Chevaliers, no matter who they are, will wear at all times on the left side of their uniforms the Sacred Heart insignia, and will wear externally the Order's Cross in those situations which they will be advised about by their leaders, such as when on pilgrimages as a body, etc. This cross will be in keeping with each member's dignity.

IV The Obligations of the Members

1. They must give good example at all times and in all places, observe faithfully, without human respect, the commandments of God and the Church, and the requirements of their state, as well as accepting the teachings of the Holy See and all the encyclical letters.
2. Each day, morning and evening, they will recite the following invocations: Sacred Heart of Jesus, have pity on us. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart pray for us. St. Joseph Friend of the Sacred Heart, pray for us (100 days' indulgence each time for each invocation during the day).
3. There is an invitation to recite the Rosary each day, or at least part of it.

V. Privileges of the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart

1. Union of prayers and merits among all.
2. The promised protection of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.
3. A sharing in all the good works and prayers of the religious order to which they are linked by the bonds of a true fraternity.

4. The privileges which Our Holy Father the Pope will deign to grant.
5. The principal patrons of the Order will be:
The Sacred Heart of Jesus, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, and the Archangel Michael

Issoudun, December 8, 1884

Dear Father,

I sent a telegram to you following the sad news I just received by telegram that Fr. Couppé is seriously ill at Bourbon Island (the original name of the present day Réunion Island). He has been taken to hospital. The latter part of the telegram which I am sending on to you with this letter is baffling. Have our confrères and sisters continued on to Sydney or have they stayed at Bourbon Island? I don't really know. Since it is Sister Marie-Paul, the Superior of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, who signed the telegram, I am led to believe that all have stayed on Bourbon Island. On the other hand, at Bourbon Island there are the priests and brothers of the Sacred Heart of Mary, and the Sisters of Mary. Does the telegram mean that Fr. Couppé is being cared for by these good religious and sisters while the others are continuing on their way? Perhaps. Cheerio. I am upset. We must pray. We need a miracle. May it please Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to so favour us!

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Fr. Couppé wrote to me from Aden to tell me he had a fever, and the doctor was trying to limit it. The latter part of the telegram very likely wishes it to be understood that our brothers are with the priests of the Sacred Heart of Mary, and our sisters with the Bourbon sisters or daughters of Mary.

Dear Father,

You know as well as I the Novitiate regulations about absence. Only Rome can authorize anything of this nature. If you think it necessary, ask for permission yourself. I sent the Brief to Fr. Jouët to have it approved since he has the original. He will return it to you.

The approval of the Archbishop of Bourges in the December issue of the Annals for this Brief is, so it seems to me, sufficient validation for your bishop. As for the purchase of your house, I leave it entirely up to you if you think that you are not tempting Divine Providence, and consider this house to be necessary; you can judge for yourself what you have to do. In any event, your neighbour cannot build before the spring, and you still have time to think about it. I can well believe that this worthy man has a keen desire to sell to you at the highest possible price, and, accordingly, tries to frighten you. You are on the spot; see what can be done.

Dear Father,

Following on the telegram I sent you, I have had no further news from Bourbon Island. You might, perhaps, send a telegram to one of the brothers whom you know or to the hospital chaplain, or to the sisters, stating that Fr. Verjus, Missionary of the Sacred Heart, is about to arrive at Bourbon Island on the ship which left Marseilles on the 19th of November, bringing to his attention the illness of Fr. Couppé and the presence of our brothers and sisters on the island.

I believe you will be doing well to mention to Jules Vandel that he should go and spend 15 days with his family when he has completed his examinations and before he goes to Barcelona. You will please him greatly. Vitale could join him at a specified place so that they could travel together to Barcelona, or he could go there on his own. As regards the opening of the Novitiate, you should send immediately to Fr. Bontemps the rescript of authorization.

Fr. Piperon has appointed Fr. Caër professor of church history and mathematics, and wants to keep him, if it is possible, until the end of the year.

Dear Father,

I am sending you on a letter from Fr. Leray (the future Bishop of the Gilbert Islands, Kiribati nowadays), about a confrère of the first Vicar General of Sudan, who is likely to join us. The Superior of the Nantes Major Seminary has given me very good reports about him, so much so that I told him (Leray) to go to Tilburg. You for your part could write to him if you so wish. I believe that we have three good vocations there. Ask Brother Ilge to prepare material to decorate the book on the Sacred Heart and the relationship to Mary.

Ilge, born in Germany, 1860, was ordained to the priesthood a week later, December 20, 1884. Chevalier wanted him, as an excellent decorative painter, to work on the book's illustrations.

Mr. Philipona (the Director of the St. Paul publishing firm) believes that a lovely illustrated edition would go very well. Brother Ilge has sent me his plans for the illustrations. Provide him with some ideas. I believe that every chapter, or perhaps each article, should have its accompanying illustrated subjects. This would come to a hundred in all, perhaps.

Cheerio, Father.

I give you full authority to accept or receive in the Third Order of the Sacred Heart all those you consider suitable. Besides you may delegate or subdelegate priests you think are suitable to receive people in the Third Order. While Fathers Couppé and Verjus are making their way to New Guinea, what advice should be given to Fr. Navarre? Should he be told to go and take over the Gilbert Islands? Write a word to him, then.

And as for Fr. Couppé, what is going to become of him at Bourbon Island? Have you written to him? Have you had any news?

late December, 1884*

Dear Father,

I share confidentially with you Jules Vandel's letter. Since this is how things are, do not immediately prevail upon him to take his doctorate examination. Let him take things easy until the month of July.

Fr. Michael (Tierney) has fallen ill in Watertown. The doctor advised him to return and he is in Ireland. I shall then send him to Barcelona with Fr. Caër and the Novitiate can begin. Then we shall see what happens in the month of July. Fr. Caër has asked me if he could go to New Guinea. Perhaps we might send him if Jules Vandel went and replaced him.

2. Fr. Ramot has nobody with him except Fr. Grom, and that's not enough. Brother O'Mahony will be ordained priest mid-way through Lent, and I shall send him to Watertown. I would send Fr. Merg, who is at Madeley, with him, but for that to happen Brother Buisson would have to be ordained to the priesthood and go and take his place at Madeley. Is this possible? A curate from the Nantes area, Fr. Guiet, is going to the Novitiate in Tilburg; he was here at Issoudun yesterday and is 28 years old. He intends to go to the missions, and he will be followed within a few weeks by another curate from the diocese of Nantes, working in Dourdon, who also wants to go to the missions. The Rector of the Nantes Major Seminary speaks very highly of these two young men.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I am very pleased for the success of your young men. Give them my congratulations.

Dear Father,

I have just had a letter from Fr. Merg. I am opening your letter to send it (Merg's letter) to you. There now you have a divisive spirit at work in the English house! A kingdom divided within itself will break up.

Merg went to Madeley in June 1883; he was ordained to the priesthood while there. He left in September 1885. For further detail see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late: Madeley; Merg, passim. Chevalier's remarks to Jouët here, sadly, encapsulates already what characterized Merg's life. Yet he was never wholly in Chevalier's disfavour.

What is to be done? What side should one take? What do you think of all this? Let us pray, my friend. I am very upset.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier.

Chevalier's letter incorporates, and provides a reply to, a letter from the Tilburg scholastic Jean Dutheil, which he returns to Piperon.

Reverend Father, (Chevalier)

As you advised me, Very Reverend Father, on the occasion of my profession due to take place on October 17, I consulted Fr. Piperon and my director, and they told me that I could take my vows without any worry. I followed their advice. I would like to ask you, Reverend Father, if in the situation whereby I am continuing with my services in the office, I might not have another philosophy text shorter and easier than Fr. Liberatore (the author of the work being used on the course) more adapted to the time I have and my intellectual abilities. This author (Liberatore) who Fr. Carrière, our philosophy professor, makes use of, is very subtle and quite difficult to understand. However it may be, Reverend Father, I accept in advance your wise decision which, I have no doubt, will be for the great glory of the Sacred Heart and my own greater good...

Dear Father, (Piperon)

I do not quite know what Brother Dutheil wants. I am returning his letter to you. Discuss it with him. I approve of what you will decide.

In the event, Dutheil left at the end of his temporary vows.

Brother Caussé is not improving. Sister Boulet and his parish priest seem to want his being imposed on us. What can we do with this youngster who is lacking in intelligence and health? My suggestion would be to release him from his temporary vows and send him home to his family who are not too anxious to have him back. During the 10 years we have had him, his benefactors seem to think that we haven't done enough for him. Why should we be encumbered with candidates like him when we know that he is defaulting on intelligence? What is to be done?

The following is a Michael Tierney letter written on Chevalier's behalf.

Very Reverend Father,

The Very Reverend Fr. Superior General, very busy just now, has asked me to write and let you know that it is his intention to send Brothers Kütter, Toublanc and myself to Sydney. Reverend Fr. Superior would like to know what you think. Brother Kütter particularly would very much like to go. He asked us.

Please accept this expression of deep regard in Corde Jesu.

Your unworthy child,
Michael Tierney

Chevalier adds:

He (Kütter) will finish his studies with Toublanc and will greatly help because he knows German.

Ordained at Yule Island, Papua, New Guinea, August 10, 1886, Toublanc returned from Oceania in 1893; he died at Assérac, February 14, 1917.

Issoudun, January 3, 1885

Dear Father,

1. Brother O'Mahony must pass an examination for the whole of his theology course; he cannot prepare texts he hasn't yet studied for his examination (with a view to orders) in Lent. His ordination must be postponed to the feast of the Trinity. While working, he can prepare himself. I would even say that he must do so because poor Ramot needs him. The Archbishop of Bourges is prepared to ordain in Lent if needed.
2. The trip to Rome with Fr. Delaporte has been put off because of certain difficulties created for him by some elderly assistants, too attached to their ease. Send on, then, to Fr. Jouët a serious account about Averbode and a general regulatory plan for other confraternities of this kind. Fr. Jouët will consult with the Congregation.
3. As for the lay brothers, it is appropriate that you take the decision that those you consider competent should study, but on your own judgment alone, and you will refuse unbendingly the appeals some make as from themselves following their assessment as lay brothers.
4. You cannot put off indefinitely Fr. Maillard's concerns, given his problems. You will have to deal with him such as he is. If he were to be as you would like him to be, that would be ideal, but since he is not like that, it is for us to make better use of him elsewhere. Let him go on until the long holidays. From now until then, prepare Brother Roussel, test him well in order to find out if he has the required qualities. I think that Fr. Roger would be a good bursar, but he would need someone with him who knows Dutch. But who would replace him at Issoudun? I can only see Fr. Morisseau.

From January 1886 to April 1887 Roger was bursar in Barcelona, and again from the end of 1887 until 1891. He died at Issoudun, September 8, 1898.

5. I thank you for the comments you have given me on your novices. When Fr. Hinard will have finished his novitiate send him to me and we shall examine him before admitting him to vows. You complain about some novices who are lacking intelligence and of indifferent health. Why have you kept them so long? These youngsters become the source of great embarrassment later on; we don't know what to do with them while we have spent a great deal of money on them. We cannot afford to be too easy-going. We need people of good intelligence and excellent health. Be strict. Do not admit to vows those easy-going and sensual characters who do not like to discipline themselves. The spirit of piety and inferiority (sic) does not co-exist in such-like characters. There has to be genuine piety, blind obedience, magnanimity, a spirit of mortification. Surprisingly, no underlining of this last!

Pauca sed bona.

Convey my thanks to Fr. Barral for his letter; I shall be awaiting his advice. I hope that by Easter we can get some youngsters for the Petite Oeuvre.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

1. I wholeheartedly thank you for your New Year good wishes and those from your good scholastics. Please convey to them my thanks. I send my own good wishes to you all most wholeheartedly. You know, my friend, how far my good wishes go. If the good Lord paid ear to them, your Roman undertakings would begin to prosper more and more, your house would be populated by pious scholastics, Petite Oeuvre boys, and your good lay brothers. Continue to pray for me. Every day I pray for all of you.
2. Yes, I am of the same opinion as yourself about Fr. Navarre. The time has come to have an apostolic vicariate. Such a consecration would boost and give a favourable thrust to this great mission. Discuss this with His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni.
3. I have had no word from either Fr. Couppé or Fr. Verjus.
4. You didn't answer one of my letters which referred to Brother Buisson; I asked you when he would be ordained to the priesthood so that he could be sent to England replacing Fr. Merg who will be going to America. I also asked you for your yearly accounts, the complete list of your debts so that I could consider if I would be in a position to help you.

1. I wrote to Fr. Vandel telling him to be at Marseilles on the 15th of this month. Tell your young novice to be there also.
2. Have you sent on to Fr. Bontemps the rescript for the opening of the Novitiate?
3. Would you be kind enough to forward this letter to Sister Léontine. I don't know her address.
4. Fr. Navarre, without getting in touch with me beforehand to find out if I had the money or not, wrote a cheque to my account for 20,000 francs (about 64,000 euros!!). This way of acting is more than ridiculous: 20,000 francs are not found just like that! In any event, I don't have that money! I am then very put out by this way of acting. Such a style of behaviour becomes ruinous for a community.
5. Are you, shortly, expecting to have the 5,000 francs (about 16,000 euros) promised by Propaganda?

I would ask you not to bury the questions I am putting to you.(!!)

Issoudun, January 9, 1885

Dear Father,

I am forwarding you a questionnaire project for the examination of postulants which we have drawn up with the Very Reverend Superior (Chevalier). See if it can be helpful. It is perhaps a little overwhelming, but I think it is complete. Otherwise the questions are brought together according to the order of subjects. It is more compact than the old questionnaire. I think it can be printed out over 4 pages in 4°.

I have written to the Bishop of Limoges on behalf of Brother Boudeau. Let us hope we shall have a positive reply. The Archbishop of Chambéry has refused to accept his diocesans, Pillet and Cochat. The Archbishop of Bourges is creating some problems about admitting them. Perhaps they may have to spend some time in the Major Seminary?

Mr. Deséglise Léger, to whom I forwarded your card, thanks you, and gave me in return his card for you. I am putting it into this envelope; if there is a surcharge it will be met and you will take it as received.

The kind people of Issoudun always retain happy memories of you. Everyone I meet enquires of you. I believe that we should be grateful to Providence for the delay in the Antwerp business. It seems to me that we are not presently set up well enough to undertake a foundation of such significance.

All good wishes to you in Ssmo Cordis.

J.F. Morisseau, MSC.

Dear Father,

I asked Cardinal Simeoni to give me a letter of recommendation for the Archbishop of Malines. I have just received it; it is very supportive; the Archbishop cannot refuse us. As soon as the weather is less severe I shall leave for Brussels. I shall let you know beforehand so that I can meet you and Fr. Barral there.

I am forwarding Fr. Jouët's letter to you. You will see that the Averbode issue is about to have a positive result. I have the copy of the memorandum sent to the Secretary of State. I shall send it on to you. This memorandum is signed by Cardinals Parocchi and Monaco. The nuncio in Belgium has been advised.

All good wishes, then. In the meantime, be getting ready the Antwerp project.

I am praying earnestly for your dear brother.

Dear Father,

1. I am sending you on a letter from Fr. Piperon conveying the expectations of Fr. Caër. Tell me what you think of it. F. Caër has also written to me requesting this favour.
2. I am sending you in great confidentiality a letter from Fr. Delaporte, Superior General of the Fathers of Mercy, long-time French missionaries. Let me know what you think of this proposal. For my part, if the Holy See approves, I would like it to go ahead. When we shall be in a position to discuss the matter, all the Assistants of our Society should come together in Council since the issue is so significant. You will come, then, to Issoudun for this. While waiting, keep this to yourself. Send this letter back to me by registered post.
3. Fr. Bontemps has written to me saying that he hasn't received anything from you yet about the rescript for the Novitiate. The issue is urgent.
4. I have no news of Fr. Couppé.
5. Why, my friend, do you never say anything about what goes on either in your house or your church, or your Rome Association which might interest or edify us? We have to gather all that from the papers! One might say, given your reserve and your manner, that there is schism between Rome and Issoudun, between you and us. Your prolonged silence and forgetfulness pain me. I should like to have more communication, more confidence and more expansiveness.

Cheerio, dear Father.
Wholly yours and to you all in C.J.

NB: The book of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has been very well received by the bishops and sells at a fast rate. One must already have a 2nd edition in mind. I would ask you to let me have all the corrections, changes, additions, and what is to be taken out, which you deem necessary.

Issoudun, January 19, 1885

Dear Father,

My thanks for your kind letter. You did well to open your heart to me; I for my part share myself with you in the same openness. If I understand the circumstances in which you are placed, you must also appreciate my situation. I am as much in control of the Society's affairs as you think I am. You are as aware as myself of the attitudes among some of our confrères. Being at a distance from Issoudun, it's not you who is always taken to task when discontent is voiced about the Rome undertakings, the expenses run up, the large deficits which become public, the embellishments wished for by the Holy Father, and your appeals in the French Annals. Everything is laid at my door. Wishing to support you and cope with the others at the same time, I am often in very awkward situations, faced with unsettling issues. Accordingly, at the present time, presented with demands from one side and the other, I am faced with problems I am unable to cope with. I am amazed that I am still in this world. What surprises me and makes me sad, my friend, is to note that you haven't, perhaps, as yet fully understood the terrible situation in which I find myself. If things don't go according to your wishes, you make me responsible. If for their part our confrères have some cause, with greater or lesser reason, to complain about Rome (Jouët's house), it's on me they lay the blame. If, like you, I did not have a great love for our dear Society I would not be facing up to it. At any rate, dear Father, remain with me since I am with you.

2. As regards the offerings sent to Issoudun for Rome, generally speaking they have been forwarded to you. What you mention was due to misunderstanding, with debts totted up twice. Following this I sent you, in one way or another, two or three times more than you were asking for.

3. Then, Fr., if we do not always understand the actions of Superiors who have serious reasons for so acting, and which they cannot always make known, let the portioning of blame be avoided, and if we consider what he has done is the best decision in the circumstances, given his concern for the overall well-being of issues, nothing will ever trouble your equilibrium and peace of mind.

Accordingly, let us take the case of Fr. Vandel. I refer to him in the same way as I would refer to all the other issues brought up. I mentioned to you that he should be made ready for his doctorate. The day arrives and the young priest takes fright before the examination, going on to write me a serious letter stating that he is not prepared and will write to the Cardinal explaining his reasons, etc. Was it not prudent, indeed necessary I would say, to ask you to wait in order to avoid serious consequences? So it is in this case as in all the others. You only see your side of the matter, and I have to deal with everybody. Most of our young men who have been to Rome tell me that you do not much like it if they write to me about their depressions or problems, and that you prevent them from doing so. This, however, does not stop me from supporting you always because I am aware of your good-will and your steadfast devotedness. As for the missions, I am aware of the amount of money sent to us. You are wrong, therefore, to think the opposite. I repeat that I do not approve the writing of a cheque to my account, especially as much as 20,000 francs (about 64,000 euros) without letting me know beforehand, and enquiring whether I can pay or not. And if ever a like procedure was introduced, it would damage discipline and compromise the material interests of the Society.

4. I gave strict orders at Issoudun that no prayer or book should be sent out without the required corrections. Perhaps some mistakes got through! If it was through carelessness or forgetfulness on the part of the employees, it would be unfair (morally) to presume that they did not take into account the presumptions of Rome.

5. With regard to the Holy Father's wish, my friend, to have your Piazza Navona church fully finished and decorated, I wholly share the sentiment. But we cannot achieve the impossible in order to bring this about. We have debts to take care of, houses to maintain, our works to support, our Society to look after, initiatives to set going and develop, etc. Write personal letters or send circular letters to whomsoever you wish... Place articles in the religious papers; nobody is opposed to this. I sincerely wish you success on this task which greatly appeals to me.

6. In addition to the 70,000 francs due to the Holy See, you still have another debt of 15,500 francs which you borrowed. To save you embarrassment and to release you from all your pressing debts, I should very much like to send you on these 15,000 francs. Keep for yourself the 5,000 francs from Propaganda and write a cheque to my account for 10,500 francs. I have come from Paris. I met Fr. Delaporte and several of his confrères. This seems a very serious issue. I gave him our Constitutions and Rules. He accepted them and he is fairly certain that he can get them accepted by his confrères. He is drawing up a memorandum putting forward the coming together, authorizing me to discuss it with you and our confrères on the Council.

Prepare proposals, if you think it opportune, for the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. Their Paris mother house is very fine, completely new and very spacious; its worth a million. They have also in Paris a separate house valued at 500,000 francs, one in Bordeaux at 100,000 francs, in Arras another at 100,000 francs. In Brooklyn, New York, they have a property valued at 240,000 francs, and, in addition, they have investments which bring in 30,000 francs in rent every year. All told, religious, novices, postulants, there are thirty of them. On their Paris mother house they have taken out an insurance of 150,000 francs. There you have their total debt. Let us pray!

Fr. Delaporte is for the time being the editor in chief of the Rosier de Marie; given the bankruptcy of Piloy de Thury, this magazine is about to be sold; he assures me that we can have it for 5,000 francs, and that's for nothing. If they joined us, he would hold on to the editorship if we so wished. And this weekly paper, which has a lot of subscribers, would be the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart paper. This would not come in the way of stopping our Annals from being printed every month. What do you think? The good Father maintains that a great deal of good could be brought about by this publication, and our undertakings and association would greatly benefit.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Again I appeal to you for your comments with respect to the second edition of the new book on the Sacred Heart.

L 18850119 A

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, January 19, 1885

Dear Father,

The letter you sent on to me pleases me greatly because it seeks to regularize a situation which is not in agreement with the regulations which govern our archconfraternity. If we wish through our dear archconfraternity to work effectively for the glory of the Sacred Heart and Our Lady, as well as for the well-being of souls, it is imperative that there should be unity of action between the confraternities and the general centre, just as there must be unity of direction when obeying Rome's decisions. There you have, Fr., the foundation on which this unity should be based. I doubt if the Averbode Fathers are ready to accept these regulations.

I. Among the issues to be clarified, in reply to observations put to us by our Belgium promoters, one of the main issues is the following: what is to be thought of what the Averbode priests say in their presentation? In paragraph VI "they state that their confraternity is independent and, meanwhile, on almost every page, they refer to the close links which bind them to Issoudun, something which makes a lot of people doubt their unity with the central headquarters".

Here are the principles which are regulatory in this issue.

Chevalier's own wording - see note at the end of this letter.

No Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Confraternity may declare its independence from the Archconfraternity whose direction has been entrusted by the Holy See to our Congregation. What would happen in effect if each of the Confraternities in Belgium, in Brussels for example, or Antwerp, Louvain, Tournai, etc., sought to make itself a special independent association, delegating to itself the authority to enrol members throughout the kingdom, appointing everywhere male and female promoters, independently of the central direction, changing as they saw fit the propaganda material chosen by the general direction, and breaking, thereby, the directions laid down for it by the overall direction of the undertaking?

Instead of an association giving itself over to the well-being of its devotees, we would have an undertaking which would tend to their loss by the very fact that it would be a source of divisiveness. Recently a distinguished Belgian priest expressed his disappointment when seeing the Averbode propagandists trying to recruit new members while he had in his parish a canonically erected confraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart working normally under his supervision with its female and male helpers. Doesn't it follow from the foregoing that it is an absolute necessity for our Archconfraternity to have but one centre of direction alone and have all Confraternities acting in dependence on it and observing its directives? It was precisely these problems which the Holy See wished to forestall when confiding the universal Archconfraternity to the overall control of the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. What follows about the enrolment of associates, the propaganda projects, and the appointment of its promoters, female and male, is but the practical consequence of this principle.

1. All the Archconfraternity's propaganda material of whatever nature – entry forms, pictures, prints, prayers, etc. – must be issued by our Society. His Grace, Archbishop Salua, secretary of the Congregation of the Inquisition, has formally made known his wishes in this respect. He made it our responsibility to be most carefully attentive on this issue and make him aware of any abuses we were powerless in eliminating. I noticed, Fr., that most of the material published, without my permission, by the Averbode priests, was faulty. I could not, in any way whatsoever, authorize that promotion. It is enough to mention the different presentation of "Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" in both languages, French and Flemish, both different from the two texts approved by the Sacred Congregation.

Moreover, the new model of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart representation, as belonging to us, was presented in Paris on November 12, 1875, number 2 049, as being not alone for France but also for Belgium. If there is, therefore, in relation to normal marketing, an issue of justice and a point of honour and conscience not to replicate this model in whatever way, what are we to say, therefore, about those priests and religious who allow themselves so to act without any authority? I am about to write to the Averbode priests to bring to their notice my astonishment in face of the different copies they have made of this picture and, besides, I have read with so much amazement and regret the word ownership written at the bottom. In all this I am no more than acting in conformity with Rome's requirements. I absolutely insist that all the material relative to the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, which they edit, should be withdrawn from promotion. In practice I would ask you Father to take over on our behalf all these materials and replace them with a corresponding number of those which we propagate in both languages. As for the medals, the rings and the pictures, I commission you to purchase in my name the pieces of stainless steel which are used to print the medals, and those different matrices which make it possible for these priests to propagate what they are presently achieving, if you can consider it compatible with the unity of the overall undertaking.

It is not for us to undertake such a considerable expense because these objects have been put together without our authorization, but having in mind the unity of the work and anxious at all costs to come to a definite arrangement, I freely accept our making this financial sacrifice. Since it is, nevertheless, quite justifiable that we should not be completely victimized by factors for which we are not responsible. I shall point out later a practical means of lessening a little such considerable expense.

2. I fully insist that for the future in Belgium all issues with regard to the Confraternity should be published in both languages, French and Flemish, by our Society, which will make them available to the Averbode Fathers. If the Reverend Fathers point out that they have received from the Holy See special indulgences for certain days of the year, we shall take responsibility on ourselves to make this known through the Annals to the associates. We shall lay down a uniform price for the whole of Belgium with regard to propaganda materials. You will decide for yourself under what conditions it is appropriate to provide the Reverend Fathers with these objects.

II. Enrolling of Associates

An affiliated Confraternity, as such, has the right to enrol only those individuals of the area, and those who come to present themselves personally at the centre of the Confraternity. His Holiness, Leo XIII, clearly set out this principle for our Archconfraternity in the latest brief laying down the conditions to gain indulgences. If a particular director of a Confraternity can enrol directly or through an intermediary those not present, it is by virtue of a special privilege conferred on him, granted to him, by the director of the Archconfraternity or by one of our Institute's houses. A number of people in Belgium have likewise complained that for the enrolment of members, the promoters ask for a franc from some members, 50 centimes from others, when joining the Archconfraternity so that they can have the entry ticket, some medals, printed prayers or a ringlet. I have to say, as regards this, that the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart never authorized this procedure, requiring only the name and forename of associates, and leaving it to each one whether to make a contribution in keeping with his means, and, as well, for whatever objects appealed to them. I appeal to you to permit nobody to disengage from this procedure, the only one in conformity with the spirit of the Archconfraternity.

See to it also that the directors of the local Confraternities send to us regularly, and as often as possible, the names of new members on a date agreed on by the associates, for example the 20th or 30th of each month, so that they can come to know on what day they begin to share in the indulgences and spiritual favours of the Archconfraternity.

As regards the contribution sent to Averbode by the male and female promoters with reference to the enrolment of associates, like that carried out in general for the Archconfraternity, without any particular specificity, it seems to me normal in the first instance to look for expenses, that of forwarding and of correspondence, and then to set out in two equal portions that which is for the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and what is for the Reverend Fathers (at Averbode). It would be for us, dear Father, a way of recouping little by little the considerable expenses which the settlement of this matter will occasion for us.

III. Promoters, Male and Female

In virtue of the principle made clear above, no confraternity director can nominate promoters, male and female, outside his area unless he is specifically commissioned to do so by the General centre. For a more imposing reason he is not allowed to draw up in his own name these diplomas and present them to whomsoever he thinks worthy of them. And these diplomas have no value if they are not presented as from one of our houses. This regulation is in keeping with the express wishes of Bishop Salua, Secretary of the Inquisition. That is why in the Italian Annals of 1884 the directive Generalate in Rome put out this statement with reference to Italy: The certificates for male and female helpers must be directly sought from this centre; all those which are made available from elsewhere have no validity.

Here then is the procedure to be followed with regard to the two kinds of supporters which have been set up by the Averbode priests in Belgium.

Half the annual subscription for the honorary promoters will be placed in your hands at the end of the year for the promotion of the Annals which will be sent free of charge to each honorary promoter for himself, and for poor families there will be as many as the contribution can meet, that is to say a subscription for each 5 franc offering. In order to facilitate correspondence you will ask the Fathers to send us on at the end of each month a list of new promoters, whether honorary or active, who asked for enrolment.

All the diplomas of the honorary and active promoters will be delivered and signed by the Director General and counter-signed by the Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart house who will forward them, following their inscription, with complete addresses, in a special register. This last phrase is in Chevalier's own hand.

To all promoters such as they are, whether honorary or active, already enrolled or about to be, we shall forward the Flemish or French Annals each month in keeping with the language spoken in the area. It is absolutely necessary, in effect, that the promoters be kept informed about what is happening at the Archconfraternity if one wants them to carry out their functions prudently and with discretion. Otherwise, the Annals will be one of the most potent ways of promoting their zeal and guiding them according to the spirit of the task on hand. As regards the honorary promoters, their subscription will take effect in such manner that half their annual contribution which, according to the Averbode statutes, cannot be less than 5 francs, will be forwarded to you by the (Averbode) priests. (The active promoters would like, under our leadership, to advertise the Petite Oeuvre in their areas, or nearby if not yet known about, or if other promoters of the Petite Oeuvre, already active, provide a field free to work on.)

By these means we shall offset the inconveniences presently being encountered to the great detriment of our work and of which the following are the principal impediments:

- a. Much too large a number of promoters in the same area.
- b. The impeding of each other by promoters because they have been appointed by different centres; arising from this are rivalries which are to be regretted, leading to jealousies which are consistent with persons of different sex.
- c. The involvement of associate members in parishes or in the same confraternity is to be regulated by clerical supervision and the chosen associates.

These considerations, Father, are of their very nature, demonstrative of the need to point out to these Reverend Fathers (at Averbode) that unity of action is absolutely necessary for the well-being of the Archconfraternity under the specifically unique direction of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

IV. The Annals

Since our Annals are the link which unites the associates of the Archconfraternity, and is a powerful means of spreading devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, we appeal to the Reverend Fathers to be good enough to promote them as much as possible. We shall grant them 20% discount on subscriptions which they will come by for either the French or Flemish editions. For our part, so long as the circumstances permit it, we shall find a place in our Annals for expressions of thanksgiving, descriptions of feast days judged appropriate for forwarding by the priests, provided that these different articles contain nothing which is contrary to the unity of the Archconfraternity, in which case the articles will be subjected to the changes deemed necessary. By the very fact of this insertion, any circular sent directly by the priests to their male and female promoters on issues involving the Archconfraternity become pointless because the same promoters would know about this through the Annals. If the honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart dictates that we support pilgrimages to special sanctuaries which she has favoured, this same honouring imposes on us the obligation to maintain in their integrity the rights granted by the Holy See, and to fulfil to the letter the duties these rights impose on us.

I do not doubt, Father, that the Averbode clergy would agree to accept fully these rules of behaviour intended to regularize what has gone before and provide assurances for an acceptable functioning of the Archconfraternity in the future.

Please accept, Father, my sincere good wishes in Corde Jesu.

Issoudun, January 20, 1885

Dear Father,

1. I looked at, and changed, Fr. Barral's memorandum (see immediately above).
2. This good man is much too given to stirring things up, and putting himself forward; you must challenge him. I believe he involves himself too much in publications and causes you a lot of uncalled for print expense, etc., etc. Your expenses must be quite considerable. He sent Fr. Jouët in Rome off on a disastrous course; take care that he doesn't bring about something similar with you. I fear that you do not keep him sufficiently in control.
3. Besides this good man has, whatever he says to the contrary, an all too obvious tendency to focus everything on Tilburg just as he was doing the same when he was in Rome.

Those people who stir things up and are not very balanced are dangerous. He wishes at all costs to draw Belgium to Tilburg, something to which I am totally opposed. All French-speaking Belgium should be associated with Issoudun, the cradle of our work, and it should only get its orders from Issoudun. As for the Flemish part (of Belgium) where French is not spoken, you may try to draw it to you. For the French-speaking section it has to be Issoudun and its activities. With regard to your apostolic school, take yourselves elsewhere. Consequently, I erase from this supplement everything which concerns your Petite Oeuvre. In this respect, Fr. Barral informs me that this year you have been given 40,000 francs (about 128,000.50 euros) for your Petite Oeuvre and that if you refuse to accept these youngsters, the promoters will cool down in their enthusiasm. He also thinks that it should be possible for you, with some arrangements, to take in twenty more pupils without increasing your teaching staff. That remains to be seen. I would very much like, Father, if you could enter into an agreement with the Averbode priests.

Cheerio; wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I am sending Brother Bouvier, now much better, to you so that he can finish his novitiate. Fr. Lanctin is also entrusting to Fr. Barral's care a Tilburg youngster who continuously wets his bed. When he is better, he will be taken back.

To Father Charles Piperon, MSC, Tilburg.

Issoudun, January 29, 1885

Has Fr. Barral seen Do... (illegible in original) about the new contract and the other editors?

Dear Father,

1. The Averbode business is very complicated and deliberately so. I don't believe that these worthy priests have had my letters or the replies they speak of. Ask to see them. In any event, one cannot grant rights to them which we don't have. The last decree is backward looking. I am quite certain that their Confraternity is not as extensive as they are presuming to make it. The issue, then, has to be sorted out. You have done well to send Fr. Jouët all the documents.
2. We can put forward Brother Cornelius O'Mahony for ordination in Bourges during Lent. Get him ready for it even if the Bishop of Bois-le-Duc refuses to ordain him. As for the others, do the best you can.
3. Yes, you may arrange that Brother Bouvier takes his vows with Fr. Caër. Fr. Guyot gives his approval.
4. I do not see how there is any need or anything greatly helpful to be had by permitting Brother Huet to go home. He is willing enough to make this sacrifice; the support he offers could as easily be expressed in a letter since the distance from the novitiate to his home is quite considerable.

Huet, perhaps not surprisingly, left the Society next year before he took perpetual vows. Understandably also the distance from Tilburg to certain parts of France, Montrevault in this instance, was indeed quite lengthy – and expensive.

5. Fr. Delaporte left this morning. The matter is not as advanced as he says it is. Don't think that the majority of his confrères are as keen on merging with a more strict congregation. Eventually, we shall see what happens. He has suggested that I should go to Rome in order to arrange this joining up (of both Societies) with the Holy See. Fr. Guyot is of this view also. I would, then, leave Issoudun this coming Sunday at 8pm, Sexagesima Sunday. If you have matters to be dealt with, either with regard to Sittard or Averbode, etc., I could, perhaps, deal with them.
6. As regards the lay brothers' novitiate and their wish to be priests, this is what Fr. Guyot and I think:
  - a. During the postulancy you must examine and seriously assess the brothers. If you then find some who are intelligent and have the required capability to become priests, you may place them in the scholastics' novitiate to be looked at again later.
  - b. If during the lay brothers' novitiate you find among them candidates of ability who are intelligent and sufficiently capable to study for the priesthood, on your own initiative you may place them in the scholastics' novitiate.
  - c. If at some time you notice any with some exceptional qualities, you may rightly consider if it is appropriate to promote them, but never by way of their own personal request. Summing up, the postulant, novice, lay brother who on his own initiative asks to study to become a priest must be unflinchingly refused. Only the Novice Master and his Council can take such initiative when he considers it to be appropriate for the glory of God, the good of the Institute and the salvation of souls.
  - d. As for those lay brothers who will be sent to the foreign missions, as of themselves it is not theirs to ask about studying for the priesthood. Our rules forbid it. This would be a reason to refuse. But if the Superior of the mission thought that he should encourage some to become priests, we consider that he should be given latitude in this respect. I believe that in this way the principles are safeguarded and the Superiors remain competent to judge. What is your view? Fr. Maillard is still beside himself. He wants Brother Roussel as his helper and greatly wishes that you have him ordained priest this coming Lent so that later on he can replace himself. If it's possible, do so.

Cheerio, Father. Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, January 30, 1885

Dear Father,

I paid your cheque. I haven't yet received the business letter which you mentioned as coming from Propaganda; perhaps tomorrow. What is it about? I would like to think that our confrères, together with the sisters, have by now arrived in Sydney.

1. I forwarded a letter to you from Fr. Delaporte giving me the details on his Congregation which I requested of him. The financial situation seems satisfactory to me. Yesterday he (Delaporte) was here at Issoudun, also Fr. Guyot. Frs. Guyot, Píperon and Morisseau are for uniting. Fr. Delaporte wants to leave for Rome on Sexagesima Tuesday, and would like it if I went with him. Fr. Guyot is of the same persuasion so that this matter could be arranged with the Holy See. Dear Fr. (Delaporte) would appear to be looking for two unacceptable conditions:
  - a. have no novitiate;
  - b. take on the title of Missionaries of the Sacred Heart's Mercy, both for themselves and for us.

It has to be said that none of them have ever made a novitiate and have no vow of poverty. In their community there is neither a religious spirit, a spirit of obedience or a serious common life-style. A novitiate more or less lengthy would appear to me to be a necessity. Moreover, our title of Missionaries of the Sacred Heart contains within itself that of priests of Mercy. It is proper and necessary; it is that by which we are who we are.

Taking into account my remarks, he replied that he would accept, with his colleagues, whatever the Holy See decided. You can, then, already prepare the way and consult officially the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars in order to find out what they think about it. I believe that a novitiate of three months' duration would be a necessity for all under the guise of a long retreat for Fr. Delaporte himself and his former Novice Master who seems to be of very serious intent.

I shall leave from Paris, if I have to make this journey, on Sexagesima Sunday evening at 8.40, and on Tuesday at midday or 1pm I shall be in Rome. You must look for an audience with the Holy Fathers straightaway since I cannot stay very long with you. What are your views on this?

Fr. Delaporte tells me that his elderly assistants, who have a very bad (critical) attitude, have sent a memorandum against him to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars. Try and find out if this is true, and request that Fr. Delaporte's arrival be waited on before taking any action. He will stay in our Rome house.

My Lord,

I am honoured to pay my respects to Your Lordship through this important book which I have had recently published, "The Sacred Heart in relationship with Mary". This work deals with issues which are quite sensitive. It has been examined and approved in Rome by the Master of the Sacred Palace. Our Holy Father the Pope has been kind enough to honour it with a Brief.

If, having read it, Your Lordship, you would be so kind as to let me have your views, I shall be most appreciative, and in the next edition I shall take it upon myself to note the changes which you might care to point out to me.

Issoudun, February 3, 1885

Dear Father,

1. I have written a letter thanking His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni. Be kind enough to give it to him.
2. Divine Providence has, obviously, manifested itself in this instance with the setting-up of a Procure in Sydney, something which is absolutely necessary. May the Lord be praised! Fr. Couppé is, I believe, the right person for this important undertaking. I believe him to be devout, intelligent, quite well experienced in business matters, shrewd and prudent. It is a good thing also that the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Religious are acclimatizing themselves and getting some experience before they go to work among the natives. Then it may well be the beginning of a foundation for themselves in Sydney which could be very advantageous.
3. Write a nice letter to the Archbishop of Sydney thanking him in the name of Propaganda. Write, as well, a nice letter to Fr. Couppé to let him know about this (the letter to the Archbishop).
4. The German Father who would be suitable for New Britain is Fr. Hartzler who is on Thursday Island with Fr. Navarre. He is from Strasbourg, knows and speaks German well. I don't see any others at present who could go to New Britain. And Fr. Hartzler is still a big child, youthful in spirit, eager, not very judicious, and not sufficiently prudent. (See here, also, Twohig, Late But Not Too Late: Hartzler, passim.) He would need in New Guinea a good and firm Superior like Fr. Navarre. He would dominate in no time Fathers Vatan and Gaillard. If you think that Fr. Cramaille could deal with him by giving him (Cramaille) the title of Superior for the New Britain mission, you could, perhaps, ask (Fr.) Navarre to execute a swap either with Fr. Vatan or Frs. Gaillard or Verjus, and then Fr. Gaillard could become Superior with Fr. Couppé. See what you can do; do the best you can.
5. Fr. Durin is still in Detroit, the United States, without a posting. He has written to me excusing his blunders in the past, and would gladly go to Sydney to live in the Procure. Do you think this would be a wise move? Would he get on with Fr. Couppé who without a doubt will be the Superior? His (Durin's) head-strong qualities are so difficult to check.
6. Will Buisson be a priest and available this coming August? I have been thinking of sending him to Fr. Deidier (Madeley) who cannot get on any longer with Fr. Merg who knows English and German and could be posted either to Watertown or to Sydney. You have never answered me when I put this question to you.
7. I have sent you several new copies of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. With regard to this, the first edition will soon be out of print. Please send on to me all your corrections and changes for the second edition which is being prepared.
8. The former assistants to Fr. Delaporte are causing him no end of trouble. He is forced, so he tells me, to postpone his trip to Rome dealing with the important issue of the amalgamation (of the two orders). I shall go with him and let you know in advance. It will not, perhaps, be until after Lent.

It refreshes the memory in the way you outlined, and in the first weeks of Lent we shall take it to Rome. Praised be the Sacred Heart and Our Lady!

3. Yes, Fr. Merg, who knows English and German, would be very suited to our Oceania missions, but he must be replaced... (again a gap)...there is what is still better, at least insofar as he would like to stay there, for he is so unstable.

5. The Superior General of the Presentation Sisters at Tours informs me that she wrote an important letter to you on the 21st of December last and you left her without a reply. If you received the letter, be good enough to repair this omission as soon as possible.

1. You may send Brother Bouvier back to us when he has taken his vows.

2. If Brother Cornelius (O'Mahony) cannot be ready for mid-Lent (with reference to his ordination), it will have to be put back until Trinity. By continuing to work he will be ready. In any event he should be ready. You must, then, push him and make sure that he works as a result of your motivating him.

3. Our best expectations are anchored in apostolic undertakings. We must, then, work on and develop them in keeping with the designs of Providence. I leave you free, then, to profit from the offer made to you towards buying the neighbouring house so that you can expand. In this way you will need no new personnel and you will satisfactorily meet the many demands made on you. Duc in altum. "Go for it" in modern English terminology.

4. Fr. Jouët in reply to me says that Brother Meyer will not have completed his studies until 18 months from now, and that he is too young, too childish, to be a philosophy professor, and is too light-hearted in spirit.

*Either Meyer changed very much or he wasn't adequately assessed by Jouët, since his whole life after his student days projects a formidable, intellectually able, well-integrated figure. Further on this in *Twohig, Late But Not Too Late: Meyer, passim; vols. 1 and 2.

Since you are keeping Fr. Caër until the long vacation, I think that together with his history class he could also teach philosophy while waiting for Fr. Carriere's health to be restored. (Carriere was the philosophy professor.) Nothing else to report from here.

Fr. Navarre is in Sydney to meet Fathers Couppé and Verjus on their arrival, etc. They were due to arrive some days ago. He wrote me a very good letter, about which I shall speak to you later.

I am sending you a letter about Brother Fleischer. I am in reply saying that, since the youngster has not made final vows, we cannot call him to the sub-diaconate. I said to him that it would be much better if he went to Tilburg and made a retreat after which he could take his vows if you judged it appropriate, and afterwards he could be ordained to the sub-diaconate.

Dear Father,

1. I am back here since Saturday. It was a good journey. The Pope is very much in favour of the union, but he wants it to be peaceful. He wants each member of the Mercy (Society) to be interviewed in order to ascertain if he wishes to enter our Society. This will take time. Fr. Delaporte has stayed on in Rome to pursue the matter. Our Rome house is getting along well and our dear Fr. Jouët is held in high regard.

2. Brother Auguste, your cook, demands a change for health reasons. I believe that it is necessary. What do you think?

Brother Auguste, a Parisian, was a cook and factotum at Tilburg first and then, following this letter, at Issoudun. He left the Society in June 1889.

3. Fr. Caër says he is very tired and wants to spend some weeks with his family to relax, this being the most efficacious means of making himself useful to the Society. I am completely in favour of granting him permission because, as the doctor says, he needs the rest. It is right to safeguard one's health while there is still time.

4. I am sharing confidentially with you a letter from Fr. Hartzler about the Petite Oeuvre; he wants to keep the older students. Send on to us, then, fifteen of the new ones. We shall do our best.

Issoudun, March 26, 1885

Dear Father,

Fr. Delaporte has written to me and he very much hopes that the union will come about! But since the efforts required will take time, this is what he has to say to me through the intermediary of one of his colleagues, Fr. Bailleul, who has come to Issoudun expressly about this.

The Mercy Fathers are responsible for a little school in Paris, where Fr. Bailleul, a baccalaureate, is the director. This college has the likelihood of being a success. The parents of the pupils would like to know if the college is going to continue next year. New pupils are expected. But an answer has to be provided. Fr. Delaporte, before replying (to the queries about the school), said to me: "If against my expectations the amalgamation does not take place, I shall go over to you with Fr. Bailleul and two other young priests. Four most certainly, perhaps others might come. In this supposition, it would be very advantageous for your Congregation if we had a school in Paris. Your most intelligent pupils in the Petite Oeuvre could come there and your young scholastics could quite easily prepare themselves there for university degrees."

Fr. Delaporte says that there are quality lay teachers who come there to take courses, neither eating or living in the college. To rent the building costs 8,000 francs, for furnishing and repairs 20,000 francs would need to be laid out the first year. But

Fr. Delaporte is persuaded that the college in the future will be a worthwhile asset for the Congregation. Fr. Delaporte is here making a heroic act. Fr. Guyot, on being consulted, supported this proposal. What do you think? Fr. Delaporte is coming to Issoudun to preach for the whole of Holy Week.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: Have your accounts been definitively sorted out with your quibbler of an entrepreneur? What is the result? The pedestal of the Sacred Heart statue is quite obviously too high. Its size is half that of the statue and disproportionate. It should not be higher than that of St. Joseph in order to be used commercially. Dormil wasn't give more than 1,500 francs in taxes annually, everything included, instead of the 3,000 he used to give us. This sum seems much too low to me.

1. You may send on to us Brother Auguste Bougras with the youngsters who are coming here; we shall make use of them as best we can.
2. You say that you are sending us your first class in the Petite Oeuvre. I can well believe that it's the first class from down there to be influenced by Fr. Hartzler's views. We can take fifteen. If this class does not reach this figure, send us some additional ones in order to reach this figure.
3. Fr. Jouët is taking on the Averbode issue, but it will take time.
4. Fr. Delaporte has sent here one of his confrères, Fr. Bailleul, a 33 year old, the head of their little college in Paris, to let me know that he, Fr. Delaporte, Fr. Bailleul himself and two young confrères (priests) have taken the decision to join us if the union (of the Societies) does not take place. He, however, hopes it will. He would like to know, then, if, in keeping with one or the other hypothesis, we would want to keep the little college for which they are responsible. He is convinced that this college has a future, and, moreover, it would be very useful for our more intelligent pupils from the Petite Oeuvre who could come there to follow the courses under our direction, and it would also be very useful for our young scholastics or priests who wanted to take university degrees. The majority of the teachers, he tells me, are splendid lay people, well trained, who do their teaching without eating or sleeping in the house. The parents who have children at the school, or who would like to send them there, are already asking if the school is going to continue. It is for this reason that this good priest would like to have an answer from us.

On the supposition that the union will not take place, we can expect 4 Fathers to come over. We would have to pay a rent of 8,000 francs (about 25,600 euros) and, besides, provide furniture and make some purchases. This would come to a figure of 20,000 francs or so which we would have to find for this first year. Frs. Delaporte and Bailleul are persuaded that this college has a future and it will fully compensate the Congregation for the sacrifices entailed. Fr. Guyot, on being consulted, was in favour of acceptance, given it's being assured that four of these priests were coming over to us. If the union comes about, there will no longer be a problem. But, at the present moment, these families are needing an answer. Fr. Delaporte is coming to preach at Issoudun during Holy Week. Discuss the matter with Fr. Morisseau and let me have your views.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

1. I received your kind letter dealing with Fr. Delaporte's problems. I think that Cardinal Simeoni will bring matters to a successful conclusion.
2. I am sending on to you a letter I received just now from Fr. Bontemps. It's not very reassuring... What can be done? A novitiate, nevertheless, in the Midi is an absolute requirement for us since without it we are losing out on very much needed vocations at the present time. In Barcelona we have everything we need to hand. Try to find out the reason for this investigation, these demands. Could you not get, purely and simply, authorization since we have 6 priests there and the Bishop's approval?

Take note of the fact that this procedure is dangerous, making each individual in Barcelona competent to judge the opportuneness of opening a novitiate. This destroys the authority of the Superior General and his Council by making it subordinate to any member (of the Society). This is contrary to our Constitutions since the (General) Council alone can decide. This must be challenged. It introduces within us what ferments break-up. A house is ungovernable where there is such-like behaviour. I believe that the Sacred Congregation will understand this without any difficulty and come down on it. I feel that the Capuchin delegated (to look into the matter) by the Bishop of Barcelona exceeds his rights. He should go no further.

Vichy, April 14, 1885

Dear Father,

Thank you for your kind letter and good wishes for the feast (Easter). Convey my thanks to the kind scholastics and your little Petite Oeuvre boys; their letters pleased me greatly. The liver attacks I had in Rome were added to by the demands of Holy Week, compelling me to come to Vichy and spend 6 days here. I am much better. I am returning to Issoudun tomorrow.

I am inclined to think that the Fr. Delaporte issue will not go ahead all that quickly. The good man and two of his confrères remain of the same view. Fr. Guyot was due to write to you yesterday to present a proposal for a take-over. The biggest problem would be that of finding funds. I shall go to Paris within 8 days to deal with all of this.

Hurry up with the business of the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart. One waits impatiently on this important undertaking. Try to get it carried through. Have you sent on the expanded snapshots, and that which has our future habit depicted? I am waiting for all these.

Cheerio, my friend.

I am sending on to you a letter from Fr. Michael Tierney which will make clear to you the situation as regards our Barcelona house. All the priests have written in the same vein to me. I can only see one thing which needs to be done, and that is to recall Fr. Bontemps and send Fr. Tréand in his place, who, despite his youth, will do very well there, at least so I believe. What do you think?

Vichy, April 14, 1885

Dear Father,

I wish to thank you for your feast day good wishes which make me happy after the tiring demands of Lent. I experienced liver problems and came here to Vichy for six days which did me good. I feel much better and, accordingly, I am going back to Issoudun tomorrow.

1. Yes, you may present for orders all those you consider suitable. Fr. Guyot is of the same view.
2. I have already brought it up and written about it on a number of occasions: as regards your expansion plans, I leave you free. Go along with the views of your Bishop if you agree with him. Before it's finished get in contact with me and I shall go and see it.
3. Thank on my behalf the kind fathers, scholastics, novices, lay brothers, Petite Oeuvre youngsters for their good wishes for the feast (Easter). I am too busy; I haven't time to answer everybody.
4. I am forwarding to you in confidence a letter from Fr. J. Vandel about our Barcelona house. All the priests (MSCs) in Spain have written to me in the same manner. Discuss all this with Fr. Morisseau.

Here is what Fr. Guyot and myself think: Fr. Bontemps should be recalled to Issoudun where he will look after our Annals and the direction of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart who are beginning to increase. We shall then send Fr. Tréand as his replacement, who, despite his youth (33 years), will do very well there. He is very judicious, cautious, pious, and very much attached to the Society. Fr. Miniot will be bursar.

5. Fr. Guyot was due to write to you about the Fr. Delaporte business and purchasing (the college). It would be something worthwhile, but where are we going to find the money?

Issoudun, April 20, 1885

Dear Father,

1. It is pointless for you to be sending on news at the present time. Wait for the long holiday. Things are only beginning to occur just now.

2. Would it be possible for you to facilitate Fr. Caër's departure for Spain as a replacement for Fr. Michael (Tierney) who, so it seems, is critical of everything, and also wants to change everything.(!) I shall send him to you in Tilburg. Having to stay in the Novitiate will do him good.

If you are still in debt by 50 or 60,000 francs (roughly 180,000-192,000 euros), I think it is the more prudent course to postpone your purchasing plans, and try to renovate your house, making it more pleasant to live in. I believe that it's possible to do this, and later on we shall see if we can buy nearby or in some other place.

If you think you should buy away from your (present) house, something which would call for new personnel, and if we could, I venture to say, find the personnel, I believe that it would be more advantageous to us to set ourselves up on the Prussian Rhineland, the Belgian frontier or another part of Catholic Holland rather than within 8 or 10 kilometres from Tilburg. Study, given these considerations, the Scholasticate proposal, and consider what would be the most advantageous: if we could set it (the Scholasticate) up in Louvain we would have no need to find professors. Look into this matter with your confrères or the Council.

Lay brother missionaries are very much needed. Take in as many as you can. Our aim is to find brothers for material up-keep, schools and teaching catechism to the natives (on the missions).

I do not see anybody, and I have nobody, to replace Fr. Maillard. You have Brother Roussel and you can find a lay brother or two. Moreover, at the end of June or in July I shall send Fr. Meyer, who is in Rome, to you. He will teach the second year on rhetoric, history or science. He needs to be trained in discipline and piety. He is not such a bad fellow, and you will lead him forward without too much difficulty.

Father Fora in Barcelona needs to spend a year in the Novitiate; he is lacking in piety and the religious spirit. Fr. Maillard could possibly replace him. If we set up a Novitiate in Barcelona (and it's necessary) it has to be in the best possible conditions. What do you think of these arrangements? With the departure of Frs. Michael and Fora, the latter having the wrong attitude and both unable to get along with Fr. Bontemps, Fora could be left there. These changes must take place as soon as the novitiate (Piperon) agrees.

My health is fine.

If you have to go to Paris to deal with it, you will do so having consulted with Fr. Piperon. Mr. Daniel takes it upon himself to be the one who decides on the medals. It is clearly to our advantage that we get on with him without his taking advantage of his position. You will keep me informed about this matter.

2. As for the illustration of your Annals, do not worry about it for the time being. Do not undertake too much at one time; try to take it easy. We shall see about this later.

Barcelona, April 26, 1885

Dear Father,

I got your letter just now and I am about to give Fr. Michael (Tierney) his one. Allow me to make just two observations. You do not refer to the arrival of Fr. Caër. Yet his presence here is greatly needed by me for two reasons. In the first place we should be six priests and the repair work will be completed in a few days. Besides, I need him for a variety of reasons, seeing that he knows Spanish, and in particular for his help with the young Englishman who is doing some study while waiting to go to the Novitiate (he is too young to be admitted as he is only 15 and a half years old), and, meanwhile, Fr. Michael (Tierney) has been looking after him. This young man can study in Spanish as well as English. He is very good in every respect.

2. Given the content of your letter, you seem to think that I was complaining about Fr. Vandel. It's nothing like that, thanks be to God. I was not aware of anything such so far as he is concerned, and I hope he will continue with the good attitude he adopted towards me. Indeed, I would very much like it if Fr. Fora's attitude was like his. I would have no reason for complaint.

I shall not leave aside the Canet business, and I shall try to bring it up again. Fr. Michael, in keeping with your instructions, will leave as soon as possible, but I am awaiting his replacement, Fr. Caër. It is imperative that the Bishop's delegate sees him here when he comes to finish his investigation.

Please accept, Fr., the respectful good wishes of your humble and devoted son in SSCJ.

E. Bontemps, MSC.

Try, Fr., to send on Fr. Caër to me as soon as possible, directing him towards Barcelona with the requisite instructions.

Accompanying letter from Chevalier to Piperon:

I saw the coadjutor Bishop of Paris yesterday who is not at all given to approval of Fr. Delaporte's college, advising me to give him no support before Rome lays something down about the coming together. I wrote to Fr. Delaporte about this (episcopal) decision and he was appalled. You might say to Fr. Barral that Mr. Daniel has decided to come to Issoudun with him to discuss the issue of the contract. But I shall be away in Vichy and I am not returning until the Sunday after the Ascension.

2. I am sending you on a letter from Fr. Bontemps. You can judge for yourself. Let us wait on the results of his efforts. The Congregation of Bishops and Regulars must be very displeased with us considering the way they have acted in regard to us with the Bishop of Barcelona. Who could have set out to harm us so badly? The kind words addressed to us by Bishop Schaffino, and from Propaganda and very likely elsewhere, is no more than holy water out in the yard. While giving the impression of favouring union with the Mercy Fathers, I fully believe that they are not very concerned about it. The future will tell us. I have recalled Fr. Michael Tierney who must leave for Australia in order to work with Fr. Couppé in the Sydney parish. In his place I am sending Fr. Caër to Barcelona. Vichy, May 18, 1885

Dear Father,

I am returning to Issoudun tomorrow. I am very well – praise the Lord. I read with interest your memorandum. In principle you are right, and I share your views. You look for perfection in the organization of our houses and undertakings. But, as things are, that is impractical, as you well know. A society in its initial stages cannot have such a complete set up like those which have been there for centuries. One must, therefore, do whatever is possible and aim for what is best in the circumstances by making every effort to improve year by year. Quite obviously we are better organized today than we were at Montluçon or at St. Bernard's. However, within ten years we shall be still better. Time and patience are required, and, as well, not asking for the impossible both from the side of teachers we do not have and from a directive group which we are missing. What are we looking for, my friend? We can only do our utmost. Our group will wobble along incompletely for some years to come – that's all. A teacher will take two classes at a time if he cannot do anything else about it. This is still the case both in minor seminaries and colleges, even in universities where the professors take two or three courses at the same time.

Your memorandum lets me know about the omissions, but doesn't say one word about what should be done to remedy them. It's very easy just to outline the situation!

Keep Fr. Maillard as Novice Master since you need one. You may say that he is not suitable. Try then to get someone else, and likewise for everything else. When one points out a problem, I should like to have the remedy pointed out to me at the same time. You go and prepare Fr. Maillard to be Novice Master, and next year he will be yet more suitable. One must set about trying it out. Fr. Morisseau will be your socius (assistant); if not, let me know who might be suitable. Fr. Klotz will take charge of the Scholasticate... try to find... (someone else)... original illegible here.

Fr. Guyot is at Vichy.

I have given Fr. Michael (Tierney) permission to spend some time in Ireland, a week or two, and also Fr. Cornelius (O'Mahony) who is going to America. Let them know this on my behalf. (Both were at Tilburg.)

Dear Father,

1. Fr. Moye, aged 50, has asked to join us. He is leaving the Immaculate Conception priests in Rennes. He has excellent references and is a talented priest. This group resembles somewhat those of the Mercy and takes perpetual vows. At Easter week he sent his request to Rome for release from his vows, and, meanwhile, will stay at Issoudun. Could you do something about hurrying on his request and, besides, petition for an indult so that he can join our Society.

2. Fr. Delaporte has definitely decided to come to us together with two of his young confrères, whatever the findings of their general meeting, due to be held on July 13, may be. He expects nothing to come out of this meeting in favour of a joining together. Their priests in America have rejected the idea. Rome must be involved in this instance as all the priests are meeting in Paris on July 13. Archbishop Richard may be the apostolic delegate. One does not know, then, what to expect.

3. For those priests who want to come to us, and have already lived as religious, petition for the renewal of the indult authorizing us to have these worthy and aged priests no more than three months in the Novitiate house. This is most appropriate.

Dear Father,

Clearly the issue over the Sydney parish is very disturbing. The Archbishop, in default of giving something better to our confrères, compromises their presence. He alone can make available a parish to make use of two priests and five sisters who have cost him nothing. But how are they going to live? It's an impossible situation, and what's to become of them? What will happen to the unfortunate sisters? Fr. Couppé mentions sending them back to France, but money is needed for that. But what discrediting is being heaped upon our Society? It cannot be likely that the Archbishop is going back on his decision, given the information provided by our confrères, since otherwise this would be deception, and the situation would be intolerable. Try to insist with Propaganda that the Archbishop should be held to what he first offered. Fr. Michael Tierney has been appointed to Sydney together with one or two scholastics. What now? Should he be sent elsewhere? The Propagation of Faith hasn't sent me anything yet, nor the Holy Child, despite my request. It will be impossible to keep this important mission going if we are not given appropriate financial aid.

Fr. Moye has received the release of his vows from Rome. There only remains the indult authorizing him to come to us. See about this straightaway. Since the Spanish Novitiate is taking so much time to be set up, I am sending Fr. Moye to Tilburg. It seems to me to be the wise thing to do. Set about also getting the indult renewed for keeping serious and mature priests no more than three months in the Novitiate. I haven't had all the information about Fr. Navarre, but I shall send it on to you in a few days.

Issoudun, May 26, 21885

Dear Sir,

Fr. Barral has informed me about his dealings with you with regard to the use of different statues relative to our undertakings and of which we are owners. As you know, Mr. Daniel was, over the last ten years, involved with the following statues:

1. That of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the early presentation which remains approved for private devotion and even for public use with a slight change.
2. The new model, the only one acknowledged by the Universal Archconfraternity for all our members.
3. St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart. To these statues we add three more produced by one of the great Rome sculptors, and which also belong to us, namely, a statue of the Sacred Heart of Jesus approved for our Rome church, a Mater Dolorosa of the Sacred Heart, and an Ecce Homo of the Sacred Heart, the splendid casts of which, by the sculptor himself, are in my possession.

Hoping to be favoured with more advantageous conditions, I thought of your well-recommended business, and which is much more extensive than Mr. Daniel's. I should like to draw your attention to a worthwhile advantage which we can offer to a new client and which for him alone is worth more than the annual return I am looking for. That is to say, the monthly publicizing of your enterprise and all its products in our Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Annals, which has a sale of 18,000 issues at the present time and more than 40,000 readers. This publicity will make you known somewhat everywhere since our French Annals are available everywhere, and will commend to the good-will of our many associates (fourteen million) your workshops and all they are responsible for. I presume, then, to hope that, given this worthwhile advantage, you might care to honour the enclosed contract, which differs very little from the proposals you made to Fr. Barral. Be good enough to consider them yourself and let me have your decision as soon as possible.

Please receive, Sir, my respectful good wishes.

Fr. Barral has informed me about his dealings with you. In the hope of reaching an agreement with you, I have pleasure in forwarding a contract to you, having in mind the promotion of different statues associated with our undertakings and of which we are the owners.

Up to now Mr. Daniel was, over nine years, the executant of our statues:

1. that of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the early model, which remains authorized for private worship, and, with a slight change, even for public worship;
2. that of the new reproduction, the only one acknowledged by the Universal Archconfraternity for all the members; that of St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart.

We add to these statues three others executed by one of the great Rome artists, and which, likewise, belong to us: the statue of the Sacred Heart of Jesus approved for our Rome church, a Sorrowful Mother of the Sacred Heart and an Ecce Homo of the Sacred Heart, the splendid casts of which by the sculptor himself are in my possession...

Dear Father,

After Brother O'Mahony's ordination to the priesthood you may let him go to Ireland for fifteen days accompanied by Fr. Michael (Tierney). Brother O'Mahony should leave from Ireland for Watertown; notify him about this. Fr. Michael will return to Issoudun.

Fr. Hartzler has returned to Sydney in order to look after the Procure with Fr. Couppé. The Archbishop, who had promised them a good parish, gives them an unprepossessing one. That's what annoys them. I would hope that it will only be for the time-being. A Rennes priest (48 years old) from the Immaculate Conception Congregation wanted to enter the Trappists. The Archbishop and his Superiors were opposed because he is a worthy individual. Bishop Place, displeased, doesn't want him back (in the diocese). His Superior, Fr. Cartier, whom I know, sent him on to me with the best recommendations. Fr. Guyot wants him to go to the Novitiate. I shall direct him to you next week and you can decide for yourself. Fr. Barral, always in a muddle, will, so I believe, also return to you next week. Because of my hesitations about the Fr. Delaporte issues, the good man has arrived in Issoudun with Fr. Pervilhac to encourage us to take over the college. Fr. Pervilhac is, he says, sure that it will be a success, and he tells me that it will be a good undertaking for us. I again sent off to Paris Fathers Batard, Thomas and Laviolle who, on their return, were advising that the school should be taken on. Our hesitancy again brought Fr. Delaporte to Issoudun, appealing to me not to give up on the school, telling me that he was in an ambiguous position in relation to his confrères, and that his position would be intolerable if we withdrew, etc., etc. I discussed it with Fr. Guyot and his advice was that we cannot in effect abandon the unfortunate man (Delaporte). There you have the problem, then. I answered by saying that we would pay Fr. Pervilhac the interest and Fr. Laviolle would look after the remainder, that is to say find the 20,000 francs (about 70,400 euros) needed for the provision of 40,000 francs the priest(s) needed.

It is in his own name that Fr. Delaporte will open and run the school. We shall oversee the management. As far as the Archbishop and the public are concerned we shall be invisible. Fr. Thomas will join Fr. Delaporte uniquely as a teacher, and we shall make an effort to send some scholastics to the school in order to take a degree if necessary. We shall see. Postpone your purchasing.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours and greetings to all in C.J.

To give an editor the publicizing and exclusive sale of 4 statues owned by the Sacred Heart Missionaries of Issoudun. This publicizing will be laid down in contracts of 3, 6 or 9 years. These statues are those of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the earlier model always in demand and preferred for private worship. The second is the new model of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, approved for public cult by the Pope. The third is that of St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, much sought after. The fourth, that of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, is the work of a Roman artist. The Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association is spread throughout the world, numbering 15 million associates. Leo XIII, by brief, confirmed us as the sole directors (of the Association).

We can, in our French Annals, of which 20,000 copies are printed each month, recommend the sculptor. In our Dutch, Italian, German, English, Spanish, American Annals this publicity is very advantageous for the publisher who in this way can profit from all his undertakings. We, ourselves, would look for a return of 10,000 francs each year.

Dear Father,

1. I received the dispensation for Fr. Moye. Many thanks.
2. I am about to leave for Barcelona, returning towards the end of next week. Continually more and more is mounting up against Fr. Bontemps. The lack of success is wholly associated with him. If it becomes impossible to set up a Novitiate in Barcelona, could it be bought to your house in Rome with Fr. Maillard in charge under your direction? It is, perhaps, what is more simple and practical! Reply to me as quickly as possible.
3. Yes, I am greatly confident about our Oceania missions. We shall survive these problems... The Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart must, it is to be understood, remain there. Have you received the 5,000 francs promised to our missions by Propaganda? The Propagation of Faith inform me that its Committee has approved of 35,000 francs for our missions. From this sum of 35,000 francs, 13,000 was given last year in instalments towards the departure of Fr. Couppé, etc. There remains to be collected, then, 22,000 francs. I shall make a fresh input of funds for Fr. Couppé at the earliest opportunity since I appreciate their need.
4. If Brother Buisson cannot get on with Fr. Deidier, who can be made available to him since he doesn't want Fr. Merg any longer? If the Barcelona Novitiate is moved to Rome might there not be another arrangement?

Issoudun, June 21, 1885

Dear Father,

I have come back from Barcelona, and your confrères, due to their indiscretion, have compromised the opening of the Novitiate. The episcopal visitor's report was very critical of Fr. Bontemps who, characterwise, has little support from his confrères. Another Superior is absolutely needed, so I am told, if the house is to go ahead. It's true, but how, and by whom, can I replace him? The Lord has permitted this trial with a view to our greater well-being, wanting it (the novitiate) elsewhere, such is my conviction.

A priest, as holy as he is learned, enjoying a reputation in the dioceses of Barcelona and Gerona for undisputed knowledge and holiness, and which I can vouch for, has always dreamed about an undertaking such as ours. Having come to know of us through the Spanish Annals, he went to our house in order to discuss matters with Fr. Bontemps. He then brought him along with him to Canet-de-Mar, about an hour by rail from Barcelona, and beside the sea, but in the Gerona diocese. The enclosed letter from Fr. Bontemps will make clear to you what is involved. While in Barcelona I went to meet this good priest and the property he wishes to place at our disposal. Fr. Bontemps is still not seeing things clearly. The situation provides a splendid opportunity. The priest has no debts; the college flourishes wonderfully; there is a famous shrine and a huge enclosure; offering us all the necessary resources for our Novitiate and Petite Oeuvre. It is, quite clearly, divine Providence which has, in the midst of our tribulations, gifted us with this surprise. It is my conviction that the finger of God is in this.

I visited the whole place. The establishment is at least as big as Chezal-Benoît. Its situation, and it could not be more healthy, is magical (dream-like). The Novitiate and the Spanish Petite Oeuvre can be set up there without any encroaching of one on the other, and without disturbing the school in any way. This is a very Christian area and flourishing in vocations. Dom Ferdinando assures me that the college, which caters for all the curriculum courses, will provide us with excellent candidates. We do not have to spend anything on setting ourselves up there, on beds or on anything else. This good priest will look after everything. Our Barcelona house can be used as a scholasticate. Our young men can be sent to the Catholic University which Dom Ferdinando has been in charge of, while the chapel could be used as the centre for the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in Spain.

In this scenario I would need Fr. Maillard for the Novitiate, Fr. Miniot with Fr. Fora or someone else to take charge of the Petite Oeuvre, whose pupils would follow the college courses where there is an excellent spirit as well as being wonderfully well run. Before long this Spanish house will be rivalling that of Tilburg. Ah! How good Providence is to us such that the Sacred Heart spoils us.(!)... The Bishop of Gerona is very eager to have us. We are being sympathetically received.

Fr. J. Vandel will go to Tilburg where he will spend two or three months taking courses in the Novitiate. This young man is very gifted, but he is young and very much needs to revitalize himself in the religious virtues. Shortly I shall send you Fr. Fora for the same purpose. Fr. Vandel will arrive on Tuesday morning accompanied by two novices, Brother Vitale from Rome and a Spanish major seminarian. As for Fr. Barral, I want you to see to it that he undertakes nothing without your authorizing it. I give no permission apart from you. It has to be like that, otherwise it would be disorder. As for illustrating your Annals, I am not interested in it since I believe it would be an unnecessary expense. He will not do anything, then, except what you decide. He says that you forget about the permissions you granted him, something which gives rise to problems. I advised him to ask you in writing and then you will be able to read your answer(s) to him. He has a tendency to grasp at, and become involved in, everything. Check his impetuosity which might lead you much too far. I am recalling Fr. Bontemps to Issoudun where he will look after the Annals, the sisters' confession and preach. This will be enough to keep him busy.

Cheerio, Father.

1. Yes, send Fr. Carrière to Vichy. He will take the little sick Savoyard as far as Saint-Germain-des-Fossés, or he might take him from Paris by way of Maçon, Culoz, Chambéry; this child would be in the way at Issoudun where all the sick are pouring in. Brother Rollin, part of whose lung has been removed, cannot last very long. (He died a little short of three years later, May 22, 1888.) Fr. Lanctin has liver problems. It was foreseen. He cannot be looked after except by himself. He is demanding and difficult to care for.
2. Tell Fr. Maillard that I want him to come to Issoudun, but beforehand I give him permission to spend 8 days at home. He might indeed take responsibility for Brother Gaidion and take him home also.
3. Fr. Vandel needs rest and care; do not exhaust him as we have nothing to gain.
4. Brother Vitale knows French well enough to begin his novitiate; don't hold him back. As for the young Spaniard, see what you can do with him. He, like so many others, indicates the need to have a Spanish Novitiate, and as soon as possible. One does what one can when it is impossible to do what one would like and God gives it his blessing once one has in mind his glory and the good of souls.

Dear Father,

1. I am sending you on a new novice from the Nantes diocese, Fr. Leray, a curate at Soudan. Those who know him speak highly of him. I hope you will be more satisfied with him than you were with Fr. Guet who is returning to his diocese.
2. Yes, I know about Fr. Moye's letter and if he meets the expectations I have of him through others, I have promised him that he can keep his mass stipends until the debt is paid off. Everything will depend on his novitiate.
3. I do not understand, my friend, your ill humour. My isolated situation, and being constantly bothered, is already demanding enough, sometimes intolerably so, without its being still further aggravated by rows which I do not understand. It is two years since the decision was taken about the Spanish Novitiate. When Figueras was under consideration all the Council priests, or, at least, the majority, gave it their approval. Rome authorized the opening of a Novitiate in Barcelona under certain conditions. The Bishop of Barcelona stalled, the good Lord so permitting it since in his plans he was reserving for us an equally favourable site at Canet-de-Mar, where we are being offered, free of conditions, a splendid house with resources, materials, vocations. To be quite frank with you, I am altogether baffled by this opposition, and it's a mystery to me since the issue was decided by the Council. Otherwise, despite my heroic efforts to take forward successfully the interests of our Congregation, I am, sadly, accustomed to being challenged. The chalice is sour, but I shall drink it to the brim.

Frs. Guyot and Jouët have, as you know well, supported the decision taken about Fr. Delaporte. The laying out of funds, if needed, will not be in any way the responsibility of our Congregation. This undertaking, if there is a sequel to it, will be undertaken with extreme caution having in mind all the interests of our Society. I more than myself am very taken up with all of this. Why then in my agonizing do people want to interpret matters as if I was acting on my own initiative and interests? What of the support of the Assistants (such as Piperon)? Does Satan continue wishing to spread division among us?

4. I haven't really made my mind up yet where to send Fr. Maillard. It's not my fault if he doesn't wish to remain in Tilburg. Should he be allowed to leave the Society? Oh! My friend, how I pity the poor Superior of a Congregation which at every slip encounters contradictions, when day and night he is swallowed up in pursuit of what is best. I would like it if someone else did better than myself; wait and see. The situation which you are experiencing at Tilburg concerns me more than it does you. I never stop thinking about it. Let us not anticipate anything, however, and learn to await on the Heart of Jesus' light and help; neither one or the other have every been lacking to us.

Cheerio, my friend. Pray and sympathize with me.

1. I would very much like it if the Archbishop of Sydney were shortly to arrive in Rome so that you could meet him and sort out the Procure issue. Randwick parish would seem to be an absolute necessity; without it Botany Bay would be an imposition.
2. As soon as Brother Buisson is ordained and Fr. Meyer has taken his doctorate come with them to Issoudun. We need to discuss and take decisions about placing our men and the success of our undertakings.
4. It will be imperative that you also go to Spain to meet the Bishop of Canet-de-Mar, the sooner the better.
5. I am having the lovely letter of Fr. Verjus printed and I am going to send Bishop Morel a copy.
5. The Propagation of the Faith Society has set by 35,000 francs for our missions. (One franc would be roughly 3 euros at the present day.) This includes what was offered last year, 13,000 francs or so, and I was granted 22,000 francs despite all the other contributions made to us to pay, for example, Fr. Navarre's cheques, 20,000 francs last February 4. I straight away telegraphed Fr. Couppé to write a cheque on me for 20,000 francs. I thought of doing them a great favour by so proceeding since they must greatly need money.

The Holy Infancy (Society) has made over to us 8,000 francs which I have just received. I shall give it to Fr. Michael (Tierney) when he is ready to leave, which, I hope, will be towards the end of this month. I shall have him accompanied by a strong, robust, scholastic, Brother Toubanc.

It may well be that good Fr. Morisseau would be better suited as Superior of the Novitiate in Barcelona. I believe that you could spare him to us. I am aware that the youngsters poke fun at him when they sum him up, in nicknaming him the Father "who has no drawbacks". Besides it would seem that he takes his classes in a rather pathetic manner. Could you not appoint Fr. Klotz in his place? Then if we could place Fr. Maillard elsewhere, I would send Fr. Caër to you; he would willingly be a professor in the scholasticate or indeed he would do whatever you wanted. One could then let you have another teacher or two for our young men.

2. You will no doubt have seen Archbishop Moran. You could pass on his recommendations about our Procure in Sydney to Fr. Michael who is Irish. It is to please Archbishop Moran, who had requested someone Irish for Randwick parish, that I am sending him on this worthy priest. I hope that you will succeed in getting this promised parish for our confrères. It is a necessity for us. The Franciscans who have it have not the serious concerns as we have, given our missions in Oceania. In order to favour our missions, the Holy See should not place obstacles in the way of our getting this parish which will make it possible for the Procure to be set up there.
3. The Bishop of Gerona has agreed to have us in his diocese. Your presence there will be required as soon as possible to set up matters in a secure way at Canet-de-Mar and Figueras. Dom Ferdinando continues to be very accepting.
4. A Bavarian parish priest has bought a magnificent property near Ratisbon (Regensburg) in order to establish a seminary for the evangelization of New Guinea. I gather that he wants to be associated with a religious congregation. May there not be here a good opportunity for us? Should not we write to this worthy priest to ascertain his views, letting him know that Rome has officially entrusted us with this mission? Get in touch with Cardinal Simeoni. Get his views, reply immediately to me, and I shall write straight away. It is Bishop Richard who has been named as Vicar Apostolic to the Mercy Fathers. What is going to come out of all this? L 18850712 A

Dear Father,

1. Our Spanish house needs a new Superior; it's absolutely necessary. If I had made this appointment when I consulted with you some months ago, we would have avoided serious problems. You replied to me saying that it was your view and that of Fr. Morisseau, that Fr. Bontemps should finish his three years (in charge). I went along with you and at this moment we have a disaster on our hands which must be faced. Who can be appointed Superior of the house? If it isn't Fr. Maillard, whom I do not favour, I am trying to clarify my mind. Who would be the more suitable as between Fr. Morisseau and Fr. Miniot, or Fr. Maillard and someone else? As for a Spanish Novice Master, either Fr. Casas or Fr. Caër could give the conferences and provide the recommendations which the Superior suggested. After some months on the spot Fr. Morisseau, or some other French priest, would by now have begun to know enough Spanish to avoid any embarrassment and run the house. Because the language is not difficult. Fathers Jouët and Guyot have authorized me to act as I see fit and they agree in advance with whatever I decide. But, once again, before I act, I want to clarify matters.
2. This business of the Bavarian priest seems a serious issue in my view. Clearly an apostolic undertaking on behalf of our missions, set up in a Christian country, would lead to excellent results. Let me have this good parish priest's provisional address, and the necessary details about his work and its aim, and I shall write to him letting him know that New Guinea and New Britain have been made our responsibility by the Holy See and that an arrangement is possible.
3. As you say, Father, there is something Providential in all this. My view is to profit from all the opportunities divine Providence places in our way since it is not we who act as of ourselves, but rather God acting (in us) and we become assured of success. Up to now I have believed that all we have undertaken was of this nature, and there you can see what has kept me going in the midst of trials – since it must be the work of God. Our Rome house, the American one, our mission to the pagans, our Spanish undertaking, our Dutch house, were all initiated by circumstances of such a providential nature that I never hesitated to undertake them, and subsequent events proved I was right. It is true that there are problems entailed in successfully going ahead with these undertakings, but since, so to say, they have been allotted to us by Providence we can, and must, count on Providential support. St. Dominic, St. Francis, and so many other founders sent out their religious two by two, and sometimes one alone, to establish houses and undertakings wherever Heaven seemed to be calling them. A young Sulpician priest, 33 or 34 years of age, Fr. Caillard, professor of dogmatic theology at the Nantes major seminary, and presently at Rodez, has at last decided to join us. Fr. Leray knows him; you can speak to him about him and see what he has to say. He is a worthwhile candidate, and will be an excellent scholasticate director for us. He will be going to Tilburg at the end of this month. Ask Fr. Leray not to say anything for the time being.

Dear Father,

1. The departure of Brother Kütter for Sydney has been decided on; send him on his way, Thursday; that's enough time, but not later, however.

2. Since Fr. Maillard was already in Switzerland I asked him to go to Ratisbon to find out what the parish priest, who is thinking of founding a seminary for the New Guinea and New Britain missions, has to say for himself. We shall know better as to what we are being led to think about here.

3. I hope to go to Tilburg shortly to discuss all our undertakings with you, and your own plans. When on the spot we shall see things more clearly. In any event, I feel that Fr. Klotz would be better placed as Director of the Scholasticate, and if nothing better can be arranged, Fr. Morisseau will be your Socius; we shall see.

4. Your economic proposals appear quite satisfactory to me.

5. I do not think, given the small number of scholastics, that you need as many professors as you have subjects. For example, the same individual could quite easily lecture on history as well as sacred scripture. Those courses do not last all day long, and the same holds for the sacraments. Do not, therefore, worry too much about this. Everything will turn out for the best.

6. You will be welcoming Fr. Meyer next week. This young man has worked very hard to take his degree; he is of a very good disposition and will be an excellent addition to the house. Spending some time in the Novitiate with Fathers Vandel and Fora will do all of them a lot of good. You can see for yourself that I favour the religious life before everything else, being my intention not to build on sand if I can help it. What are you doing with all those other young priests and about whom you say nothing to me? You have three or four with you.

7. You list the good points and the defects of Fathers Morisseau and Maillard, but arrive at no conclusion, which is characteristic of you. In the same way your Tilburg confrères generally complain about your hesitancy. When the issue arises of coming up with an answer, you remain uncertain and decide on nothing. It is advantageous to reflect, but it is equally an advantage to avoid being indecisive and leaving others so afflicted. I asked you which of the two, Fr. Morisseau or Fr. Maillard, would be best suited as Superior of the Barcelona house, and/or if neither was suitable; which one of them do you favour? Discuss this with Fr. Morisseau.

Dear Father,

1. I thought it was more appropriate to send Fr. Michael (Tierney) to Rome in order to discuss the issue of the Procure with Archbishop Moran and also especially Randwick parish which we so much need to have; all the more so when it was promised to us. It was for that reason Fr. Hartzler went to Sydney and Fr. Michael was recalled from America and now goes to Sydney. Make every effort to succeed.

2. If the Randwick parish cannot as yet be made available to us and Archbishop Moran succeeds in getting a place for us from the Archbishop of Dublin in his city, or in Cashel, it would, perhaps, then be more appropriate if Fr. Michael did not leave for Sydney but returned to Ireland in order to set up a foundation there.

For a more extensive treatment of the foregoing, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late apropos of Tierney's attempt(s) to set up an Irish foundation at this time.

Wishing to help us in setting up a Procure in Sydney to aid our missions, you have graciously promised us the Randwick parish, presently in the care of the Franciscan Fathers. But Your Eminence expressed the wish that we might place there a priest from our Congregation, English or Irish, who knows perfectly well the language. That is what I have arranged. I have recalled from our American house Fr. Michael Tierney of Cork (Ireland); he is a serious-minded man of proven piety. He is due to embark for Sydney from Marseilles on the 29th of this month. I am sending him to Rome before he leaves in order to meet Your Grace and receive your latest instructions.

Having in mind the welfare of our missions in New Guinea and the neighbouring archipelagos, we would like to set up a house, with an apostolic school, preferably in Dublin, or in Cashel. A favourable word from Your Eminence with Archbishop Walshe, newly appointed in Dublin, could lead him to accept us in his Archiepiscopal city and make him partial to our plans. In such an outcome we would be favoured with many vocations.

I am pleased, Your Grace, to place myself at your feet thanking you for all your kindness, offering you my respectful good wishes as I ask your blessing.

Issoudun, July 21, 1885

Dear Father,

You have Fr. Michael (Tierney) with you. If Cardinal Moran, the Archbishop of Sydney, and Cardinal Simeoni think that it would be better if Fr. Michael returned to Ireland to found an apostolic school in Dublin, it would be more prudent, so it seems to me, to postpone the departure of the two young scholastics and wait for another sailing when one of our priests could accompany them. If this is your view also, you should telegraph me so that I can arrange for them not to go to Marseilles on the 29th, and, accordingly, you should write immediately to the Manager of Messageries Maritimes asking that we be excused and not to expect our three confrères because Rome has decided otherwise. You will inform him that this sailing will take place a little later. You yourself will be passing through Marseilles on the 28th or 29th and you will seek him out to give him in person the appropriate explanation. In any event, I am expecting you here at Issoudun on the 1st of August when we are holding a General Council Meeting about Society matters. Fr. Guyot will be here. I am asking Fathers Piperon and Morisseau to be there. Try, if possible, to get the indult for the three months' Novitiate, before you leave.

Cheerio, Father,

Issoudun, July 25, 1885

Dear Father,

You are aware that out of consideration for dear Father Delaporte, on breaking away from his Society and coming with some others to us, we considered that we should meet the costs of his upkeep for one year (1885-1886) so that he could continue with his school, and with the possibility also that we might carry out our plan to prepare some of our young men for degrees. To offer a better likelihood of success, I suggested to Father Pervilhac, who is highly thought of in Paris, and by the Archbishop, to take over the school from Fr. Delaporte and present himself to the public and the Archbishop as being in charge. He asked me to give him some days to think it over. He came to Issoudun and to my great surprise he offered himself and his splendid undertaking of St. Charles to us. "But you are a member of the Lyons Chartreuse," I said to him. "For some years," he went on to say to me, "I have been given my freedom. This is how it is: the Chartreuse couldn't recruit any longer. The Cardinal of Lyons closed their Novitiate and didn't want them to recruit any longer, dying their good death. The Superior of the Society anticipated things telling me that I had my freedom to undertake what actions and work I wanted. Accordingly, having looked closely at you, I have come to make myself available to you and make over to you a fine undertaking in Paris if you would care to have it."

Fr. Guyot was present at this meeting together with Fathers Batard and Lavielle. We studied the contract proposals and we are agreed on what I am presenting to you today. I have had it looked at by a very competent man, whom you know, Mr. Vaillant. He, not alone, finds it free of problems for us, but, rather, very advantageous. We are running no risks; all precautions have been taken, everything, as you will see, has been foreseen so far as our interests are concerned. Read it carefully, together with Fr. Morisseau. I said to Fr. Pervilhac that I didn't want to do anything without the full agreement of the Archbishop of Paris. The enclosed telegram which he (the Archbishop) sent me this morning will make clear to you the Archbishop's approval. I am, then, going to Paris next Monday at 4.30pm. It is imperative that you be there. I am expecting you; do not fail me.

Fr. Jouët will be in Marseilles next Wednesday to look after the embarkation of our confrères for Sydney. From there he will go to Issoudun and be there with Fr. Guyot on Friday, August 1. You and Fr. Morisseau must also be in Issoudun so that we can all together examine the situation at Tilburg and the Society as a whole. One cannot put off any longer this meeting because of Fr. Guyot who is due to leave on the 4th (of August) for Aix-les-Bains, Savoy. You could come (from Paris) to Issoudun with me where Fr. Morisseau will join up with us.

Bring with you on Monday the contract proposals and Fr. Pervilhac's telegram. As you will very likely reach Paris before me you could go and meet Fr. Pervilhac at 16 rue de Passy, and come to meet me at Gare d'Orléans (present day Orléans-Austerlitz).

Cheerio, Fr. Until very soon.

To His Grace Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, August 2, 1885

To be kept. Archbishop's request. I replied, August 4:

Your Grace,

The new Issoudun Vice-Prefect, in agreement with the Municipal Council, wishes to commandeer the assembly hall, the presbytery right of way, the kitchen, the wood-shed, the domestics' rooms, etc. It is no longer by virtue of proprietorial rights that the Council wishes to carry out this annexation, since it acknowledges the title deeds of the property, but rather by way of appropriation. The Vice-Prefect has had a meeting with Mr. de Bonneval and suggested that this issue should be amicably settled. The Council could, for example, so he says, pay the annual rent of 200 francs (about 630 euros). The President of our Fabric informed me about this initiative. I find it very threatening. Moreover, these buildings are absolutely needed by us and I don't see how we can replace them. If the Municipal Council wants to enlarge the assembly hall, it can do so from the other side. After this need has been met, something else will follow. I am of the opinion, Your Grace, if it may not be yours also, to wait for this take over which may not, perhaps, be as easy to carry through as the Vice-Prefect thinks. First of all, there has to be an enquiry... In addition, the title-holders of the building will make their case and assert their rights. In any event to give way, so I think, far from improving our situation, would only make it worse. We shall follow out in all this the procedures which Your Grace will be pleased to set out for us. The Vice-Prefect wants the issue brought to a head in eight days. I shall be very pleased, Your Grace, to know when Your Grace will be in Bourges as I would like to discuss such a serious issue as this confronting us.

I have the honour to be, most respectfully, Your Grace's humble, obedient servant and son in C.J.

Issoudun, August 9, 1885

Dear Father,

May you be a blessed son of the Sacred Heart. His poor missionaries receive you with open arms. When you come to Issoudun after your holidays we shall arrange everything ad majorem SSCJ gloriam.

Fr. Jouët is preaching the retreat to us at the present moment; he will be delighted to see you and take you with him if it is possible. I have informed Fr. Delaporte about Fr. Pervilhac's plan which has been accepted by the Archbishop. He (Delaporte) does not at all agree with it; indeed he is most unhappy about it. In any event, I am confidentially passing on his letter to you. Please, on returning it, let me have your views. I am very embarrassed myself because I thought, contrary to the way things have turned out, that Fr. Delaporte would be very happy with this arrangement. If you could meet him or write to him about accepting the outcome it would guarantee great success for the college. I gather that Fr. Delaporte will be coming to Issoudun on the Monday after the Assumption. Like yourself I too hope that Father Pervilhac will finish up entering our Society. Let us pray for this.

Mr. Retaux no longer wants the arrangement you agreed with him, suggesting to me that this edition be cut by half. In principle I accept this, but I asked him for some explanation. We shall discuss this at our forthcoming meeting. Yes, most wholeheartedly, I leave to Fr. Delaporte the direction of our Annals if he would like to take it on. We have, as well, our priestly work and our Third Order with which to occupy him.

Dear Father,

We must do the well-nigh impossible in order to accommodate those people who are devoted to us. If you cannot give the Brussels retreat I shall have it undertaken either by Fathers Bontemps, Tréand or someone else. As you know, it has been decided that Brother François Barral will come to Issoudun where his presence is needed. Try to get Fr. Roussel ready to take over the bursarship. Helped by a brother he could, perhaps, succeed.

Fr. Jules Vandel is French; as soon as he has taken his degrees he can be very useful to us. The circumstances are to be availed of for continuing with his studies. Afterwards we shall see. I do not need Fr. Klotz at the moment, the scholastics not being due in Paris until the first days in October. It is likely that Fr. Guyot will be the Superior of the Paris house, 16 rue de Passy, 16. And Fr. Klotz will be his assistant looking after the students. I need to meet Fr. Guyot who, it appears, is much better.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

As for Mr. Leray, the situation is delicate. Isn't the testimony made on his behalf by Fr. Juquet somewhat exaggerated? Write to his parents' parish priest to find out more about him. What does Mr. Leray say himself about all this? He knows his parents better than anybody else. Look into the matter. Consider it group-wise. As for Mr. Moye, if you come to the conclusion that here is a candidate neither credible or free of possible embarrassment, you should ask him to leave.

The preacher for the Triduum of the Sacred Heart, and for the 7th of September, engaged quite some time ago, has written to say that he cannot come. Two other priests, whom I contacted, have written to the same effect. I am, then, counting on you. Fr. Tréand will preach on Saturday, if you cannot arrive in Issoudun for the opening, but then you will have Sunday, Monday, Tuesday evenings, and the feast day itself. Archbishop Marchal will be here, but he says that he will not be preaching. Send a telegram to me if it is possible for you to be here at 7.30 on Saturday evening. Fr. Tréand will then go and spend some days at Madeley because Fr. Deidier maintains it would be very helpful if he went to Ireland and met Archbishops Moran and Walshe in order to discuss with them the founding of a house in Dublin. But he (Deidier) continues to insist that Fr. Merg can no longer stay in Madeley. As soon as I have your reply I shall write to Fr. Merg telling him to go immediately to Tilburg, while Fr. Tréand will leave immediately to spend fifteen days in Madeley. Fr. Caër has written to me to say that the cholera is no longer on the coast between Barcelona and Perpignan and that you can go to Canet-de-Mar without any worries. You can go there after September 8.

I submit for your consideration and critique the first chapter of the Sacred Heart book (Volume II). I deal with the subject matter from the philosophic point of view only. Dear Father,

1. Yes, you may admit to vows your 8 lay brothers. Brother Leray will be very useful in the presbytery; Fr. Pradon is no longer active. (It puzzles that the individual so-named is not mentioned in the file of the dead, the Necrologium, or in that of those who left the Society.) Each of our houses needs good brothers, for example, Barcelona, Rue de Passy, Paris, Madeley, Watertown. You will keep those you need, and on my return from Vichy about the 25th of this month, since I am going to spend 10 or 12 days there, I shall be in touch.
2. Yes, you should have the novices taking vows on October 17.
3. Facilitate Fr. Vandel in taking his degrees and afterwards he will be available to you. It was intended that Fr. Merg should go to Watertown. You can keep him on as a replacement for Fr. Vandel.
4. It is convenient that the scholastics be in Paris for the first of October, and this gives you sufficient time for them to make their Retreat before they leave.
5. It is Fr. Batard, who complains so much about Tilburg, who is always sending his charges without anything to Issoudun. You must, therefore, provide each of the priests and scholastics who are going to Paris with an appropriate trousseau.
6. Fr. Jouët is dealing with the (Brother) Vitale issue, but how slowly things work out! Let him take the habit since the request made on his behalf can be taken as granted.
7. The contribution by Fr. Ilge on Germany is very interesting. Get in touch with your German priest friends to ascertain if anything can be undertaken during the course of this year about a foundation either in Berlin or elsewhere.
8. Yes, send Fr. Barral to the Seminary; it's necessary.

Vichy, September 18, 1885

Dear Father,

I am sending you the signed document.

I am going back to Issoudun on the 26th of this month; Fr. Lanctin suggested that three or four of the brightest youngsters should be sent to rue de Passy, Paris, to prepare for degrees. He informs me that among those who have finished their rhetoric course and are now about to leave the Novitiate, there are three or four with the ability to do degree courses. As for the remainder who are staying with you, and haven't done rhetoric, he suggests to you that they be sent to Issoudun to follow the rhetoric course with the others, and this would forego the need for you to provide a teacher for this class. As for the scholastics who are not capable of taking degrees, we could take a number of them as teachers in Issoudun, either in the College (the 'externat') or the Petite Oeuvre. I shall lay matters out for you on my return. It would seem that Brother Rosenkranz can get himself ready to take his degrees. What is your view on all this? Don't send any furnishings to Paris other than what is necessary. Fr. Batard will let you know what he wants. I myself bring to your attention the little embroidered carpet, hand-made, which was in the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart treasury. It appears that it is wasted at Tilburg and is in use quite often. Would you be good enough not to make use of it anymore. Parcel it and send it to Issoudun with whomsoever is next coming here.

Fr. Guyot has come back from Aix-les-Bains (the spa) in the best of health, his aches and pains having completely disappeared. Yet despite this he looks after himself so attentively, eats most heartily, drinks as much as ever and eats meat even on the Fridays of Lent (!). This scandalizes me. He only thinks about his health... Everything with a view to his health. It is deplorable, and if he lives like this in Paris, our young men will be scandalized. I shall end up telling him so. I am in apprehension about his presence in rue de Passy.

To Father Charles Piperon, MSC, Tilburg.

Vichy, September 23, 1885

Dear Father,

1. In forwarding to Paris three or four youngsters from the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre to take degrees, our thinking was not to have them mixing with the scholastics, no more than three or four who haven't done rhetoric, and who you might send there from among the novices who haven't done their rhetoric. My thinking is to place them in the charge of Jules Vandel. In this way we would set up places in Issoudun for others who are waiting. It could be advantageous for these students and, as well, an experience. In these circumstances you would send the remainder of your rhetoricians, who are not able to take degrees, to Issoudun. There you have the thrust of my proposal as shared by my confrères. See if you agree with it. You may prolong Brother G. Tierney's novitiate. It would be by way of good example to the extent that you do not acknowledge him as having a vocation.

Jeremiah Tierney, not G. Tierney as Chevalier writes, was in fact professed on December 25, 1885. He left the Society during the Summer of 1888, entered the Thurles major seminary in Tipperary and became a priest of the Maitland, NSW diocese, Australia. In 1904 he entered the Australian Novitiate and made his vows once more in September 15, 1904. In 1912 he returned to the British Isles, to St. Albans first then Cobh, Cork, Ireland. He died in Cork, July 7, 1944. For more detail see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late: M. and J. Tierney, passim.

As for Brother Jamin, if you accept that he has a vocation, wait until he has finished his novitiate before sending him to be cared for in his family, that is to say if he hasn't lost his health. In the case of Brother Daniel Neenan, quite obviously his final profession will have to be postponed. Could he not be sent to Fr. Ramot in America? He would be helpful in his Petite Oeuvre and could improve in health; then we would later consider the situation. This suggestion appears the wiser course to me. I think that Dutheil should teach in the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre and, most likely, Gauterauo also.

Gauterauo was ordained by Bishop Navarre on June 10, 1888, leaving for Navarre's mission seventeen days later, June 27; he died at Vunapope, New Britain, on August 26, 1907.

I am returning to Issoudun on Saturday. I shall let you know those needed as teachers, either at the Petite Oeuvre or at the other educational establishments (the maîtrise, the externat). I hope to go to Holland in October and we shall discuss things.

The agreement is signed at last. You can, then, send to Paris, rue de Passy, 16, Fathers Klotz, Vandell, Meyer, Suchet, Rozenkranz, Louis Merg, Moncorget, Neenan, Hastier, Mathieu, Helfer (died in Papua, New Guinea, December 19, 1894), Peyrot (died Quito, May 22, 1890), Huet, Dezpresse. Besides, there are Crochet (he died in Tarawa, the then Gilbert Islands, May 22, 1918), and Pillet (expelled from the Society, December, 1889), the Brothers Casimir, Leroy and Bosma. Meanwhile you will send on to Issoudun Fr. François Barral and the scholastics Donzé, Meynier, Gouthéraud and Jamin.

Meynier was ordained at Bourges, September 21, 1889; after various postings he left for his native diocese five years later.

Besides you will send a lay brother to help Fr. Batard in the bursary and laundry because Brother Boulot is going elsewhere.

Boulet went to Madeley; Bishop Knight ordained him to the priesthood, April 6, 1887, at the end of his time in Madeley, November 1885 to March 1887. He then went to Glastonbury. Boulot died at Issoudun, December 3, 1932. For Boulot, passim, at Glastonbury, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late.

You would do well by me if you can let me have a good brother to act as porter and look after the presbytery. Also try and find a brother to do the cooking at our Madeley house in England. It's a great need. As regards Madeley, I had no option but to change the unfortunate Fr. Deidier who over-imbibes like a porter (colloquial English, 'like a fish') and continuously. His presence over there was a scandal; all this arises as a result of the report made to me by Fr. Tréand who spent three weeks there with him in order to bring me up to date about the situation (all this in confidence). I am strongly thinking that I shall replace Fr. Deidier with Fr. Tréand, and keep Fr. Deidier at the Sacred Heart if, that is, he would like to go there.

For Deidier and Madeley, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late: Madeley; also Tierney's devastating critique written from Australia in response to a critical, unsigned, Annals article on Madeley.

As soon as your retreat is over you will send Fr. Morisseau on to me. Fr. Guyot has written to say that you must send to Paris in civilian attire all those (students) not yet in holy orders. There people regard this as an appropriate measure of prudence. Quickly get going about this economizing at Tilburg; it will cost you less than in Paris. I don't know how costly it will be to have all these personnel in Paris, but the Tilburg house must take on responsibility for all the expenses of upkeep, etc. for those being sent from there to Paris. With all the heavy financial burdens which press in on me from all sides, I could never undertake the students' expenses (in Paris). You will keep Jeremy Tierney in Tilburg, extending his novitiate, and Dutheil who will continue his studies in theology.

Dear Fr.,

Yes, send on to Paris Brothers Leroy and Bosma; you mentioned another who would make a three-some. One is also needed for Fr. Batard, or you might send on to Issoudun Brother Leroy, and replace him with someone else; it doesn't matter who it is; you yourself decide. Fr. Jouët is back in Rome for quite some time. Fr. Guyot has written to me that all your young men are agreed on it that Brother Pillet hasn't the ability to take his degrees. You will send him on to Issoudun, then, with the other one.

It doesn't matter greatly about the civilian clothes; it is best that the shape and the colours shouldn't be the same.

Fr. Guyot has written to me saying that he will pay out at least 2,000 francs a month, and 4,000 francs for the first month. We are forced to borrow 1,800 (francs) for all the necessary installations, which is enormous. You contribute about 1,000 francs each month; I shall try to add the rest.

You do not say anything to me about the unfortunate Father Deidier.

Dear Father,

1. I am pleased to hear that you were quite happy with your retreat. Praise the Lord!
2. I leave this morning to spend a day in Paris to see the house and our young men. I shall very likely return accompanied by our dear Fr. Morisseau.
3. I have received a second report from Fr. Ilge about Germany, and he comes to the conclusion that one or two of us should immediately go and take up residence in Berlin in order to take advantage of the circumstances. This report seems very good and reasonable to me. If you think you can send Fr. Ilge, I shall make available to you Fr. Joseph to accompany him since we can spare him. There would be the two of them while awaiting others; at least there would be a taking possession (of some place).
4. I find that it is too much to bring out the Belgian Annals twice a month; once seems enough to me; it's cutting back to meet a basic requirement. In any event, you are the one who decides.
5. Yes, set up your council with Fathers Hartzer, Reyn and Barral.
6. With regard to your theological conferences, once a month, to begin with, is enough. Afterwards, you can decide.
7. If next Friday was not the first Friday of the month, I would travel directly from Paris to Tilburg since, afterwards, I see no possibility of making the journey before Easter.
8. I can well believe that Fr. Merg is not of any great use to you because Fr. Chatelat can easily replace him. Fr. Ramot could do with him because he knows English. Could you disengage yourself from him?

Dear Father,

What you tell me about Brother Jullien greatly astonishes me. He is tormented by scruples and nothing more. At present he is experiencing an unhappy time. I hope the Sacred Heart will help him and that he will happily emerge from all this. Let him know then for my part that I take upon myself all his anxieties, that I answer for him before the good Lord and that he is absolved of all responsibility. Let him, then, be at ease taking his perpetual vows! Afterwards I am persuaded that all his concerns will disappear. Meanwhile, if he absolutely resolves not to take vows at the usual time, let it be put back until later, and while waiting he should continue with his studies and prepare himself for the priesthood. Then we shall consider what he can do. Tell him, if he so wishes, to consult the Cardinal Vicar or His Eminence Cardinal Monaco. But, please, let him not have a rush of blood to the head which he might regret all his life. I repeat: as for myself I believe he has a sound vocation. He has, as it were, reached the goal of his wishes. The missions are opening out before him and in next to no time he can display his zeal among the New Guinea natives.

I am forwarding you a letter from Mother Theodora. Here's another headache. Who are we going to send to Spain? The only one I see is Fr. Tréand, and then Fr. Deidier would have to stay on in England. Would Fr. Tréand do well in Spain? He doesn't want to go there; he rejects a posting as Superior. God, how embarrassing all this is! Just as I finished the last sentence, a letter from Fr. Maillard gives me more to worry about. What is to be done? It is the sad state of your (Jouët's) financial affairs which is frightening and discouraging.

Dear Father,

Fr. Joseph will arrive next Saturday to go to Berlin with Fr. Ilge and a brother, if you can spare one. Let us hope that God's blessing will be with them! Fr. Balzer will be the Superior. Beg them to be careful, to move cautiously and not to take on anything without consulting us. You will have authority over this house, of which you will be the Provincial. I have every hope of God's blessing for it. If it is possible for you, accompany them to Berlin...

2. If Fr. Merg is so much needed by you, you may have him until the spring.
3. I find that Fr. Barral is moving far too rapidly so far as the Belgian Annals are concerned. In the first place, why all these pictures? Why make the issues so bulky? Why does it have to come out twice a month? It's a surfeit of zeal which cannot be sustained. He must, therefore, restrain himself and move delicately, sensitively. I forbade our young men in Paris to become involved with these Annals. They cannot be running after two hares at the same time. If Fr. Barral were to fall ill, who would look after this work?

Besides, in no way whatsoever do I want our Belgian subscribers and associates to be turned away from Issoudun which must always remain the centre for what is French-spoken. It is, therefore, to Issoudun and not to Tilburg that these Annals, and all the Belgian interests, should be directed. This has to be emphasized in every respect, and let it be so understood by Fr. Barral; I hold you to this. He must also be given to understand that all the initial contributions are for the Issoudun Annals and not for the Belgian. The Belgian Annals only follow on since, otherwise, our Issoudun Annals would no longer be greatly regarded in the country (Belgium).

Issoudun, November 14, 1885

Dear Father,

Your confidential letter is a complete revelation. I can now see for myself that I was wholly mistaken about Fr. M. (Maillard). I appreciate that he cannot stay any longer with you. Experiencing too long a delay in your reply, last night I wrote to Fr. M. in support of him, informing him that I wanted to provide him with the 8,000 francs (about 25,000 euros) he needed to meet all the debts and the daily expenses, requesting him not to borrow, and carefully watch out that expenditure did not exceed intake. In order to bring this about, he should hold back and make economies, since in my view nothing is more calamitous than debts, because of which discipline and the religious spirit suffer. I then asked him to write out a cheque in my name for 8,000 francs, payable immediately. Act on this, then, for I have the money to hand.

Read this enclosed letter for Fr. M.; I am recalling him to Issoudun. What are we going to do? Would you like to have Fr. Roger as bursar? He would be a help to you. It is clear that Fr. Védère, responsible for the Petite Oeuvre, the brothers, the church, and the finances, cannot do everything. Someone to take charge in running the house is, therefore, needed by you. Besides, Fr. Roger could hear confessions; he is pious and dedicated to the Society, and you could trust him. Nevertheless, I shall only do what you wish. The responsibilities exercised by Fr. M. only dealt with material issues, the economic running of the house which you, in your position, could not undertake; but, yet again, should he have undertaken anything without listening to your advice and reaching an understanding with you? That's the reality! His behaviour, his intemperate language, his indiscretions, provide proof that he is totally lacking in judgment.

Having carefully considered Fr. Couppé's letter I do not think the Fr. Verjus issue is all that serious. Perhaps there is nothing much involved. Fr. Navarre would have brought it to my attention.

3. I wrote the cheque for 8,000 francs (about 25,600 euros). I do hope now that you will not incur any more debts and that you will pay what you owe with these 8,000 francs. Take it as applying to yourself and Fr. Védère what I wrote to Fr. Maillard about the bursary. Follow the procedures which I laid down for the economic administration of your house. It is of the utmost importance. No more borrowings for anything whatsoever, and no going into debt. Cut down on your expenses and personnel if necessary. Set about economizing. Material administration is not your strong point; do not push yourself towards expenditure; on the contrary, place a restraint on yourself. You need someone who is naturally economizing and a good administrator. What economies can be achieved by being attentive to everything, especially in the kitchen, purchasing, supplies, etc., clothes, etc.?
4. Do you think that Fr. Védère would make a good bursar and take it seriously? I am sending on to you little Fr. François Barral, who knows Italian, to replace Fr. Roger. He will be involved with the Petite Oeuvre. Let me have a reply.

Dear Father,

You are about to be visited by Mr. de Mendoza, a young American of a Spanish family from New York, 34 years old. He is very intelligent, experienced in business affairs, very well educated, and very well connected. In his very long-established family there are several cardinals and bishops. For some years he has been living in Paris without ceasing, thereby, to be American. His parents are very wealthy and accustomed to a considerably high standard of living.

This young man, a good Christian, bored with all this luxury, wants to forsake the world and become a priest, indeed a religious, in our Society. He has done no Latin study. He would be quite happy to study in our Rome house and make his novitiate there. Given the good background of Mr. de Mendoza and his commendations, I believe it would be easy for you to obtain from the Holy See this permission which you would not be refused. And in this way we would come by a splendid acquisition for our Institute. I commend him, then, to your good will and I would ask you to give him lodging. It should be easy for you to make available to him the appropriate lecturers to make it possible for him as early as it can be arranged, given his age, to have the happiness of being a priest. He knows most European languages and since he is very intelligent and serious he would make rapid progress.

You will make every endeavour to make his transition nothing too difficult. He has the best of good will, and is drawn by the most kindly attitude. He would be pleased to provide you with some help in the house.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Rome.

L 18851205

Issoudun, December 5, 1885

Dear Father,

1. You will be meeting a young American from what was originally a Spanish family, Mr. Gustave Jayme de Mendoza. His parents are big business people in New York, and exceptionally rich. This young man is 33 or 34 years old, and has had an excellent education, speaking all the European languages, even that of medicine; he knows all of them except Latin. He has been living in the fashionable world of Paris over the past 7 or 8 years. Becoming tired of this existence he would like to become a priest and religious, and has looked over our Congregation. I have met him and chatted with him; he is solemn and serious, like an Englishman.(!) He is said to be very intelligent and very competent in business.

He is going to Florence where his rich aunt lives with whom he will travel to Rome. His wish would be to make his novitiate and do his studies in Rome. Could you get such permission for him and Mr. Gardiner, which would mean that the last named would not have to go to Tilburg during the winter, so arranging it that one and the other could spend 2 or 3 months in Tilburg during the fine weather when about to take their vows. It's the commencement of the novitiate in Rome which would be desired... Mr. de Mendoza informs me that since the 16th century there has been several cardinals and bishops in his family and he has good contacts in Rome to commend him to the Pope.

2. I am sending you on a long letter from Fr. Navarre about matters concerning Fr. Verjus and Yule Island. You will see that he complains about the two Italian brothers who are with Fr. Verjus whom he finds soft, lacking in generosity and not very keen on committing themselves. What they lack is religious formation.

3. In this respect, my friend, how can you get by on your own except for Fr. Védère, and deal with all the issues which fall upon you? It is quite impossible. The 'procure' alone is enough to be a full-time occupation when you are dealing promptly and seriously with the business of the Society which has been made your responsibility. Besides this important and main responsibility, you are responsible for the archconfraternity, the Annals, correspondence, looking after and taking care of your church, the liturgy, confessions, preaching. Add to all that the running of the novitiate, the care of the lay brothers who need the presence of a special type of experienced individual, the leadership of your Petite Oeuvre and its overseeing which calls for at least two serious-minded men. And I do not speak of the attention which our scholastics demand, the religious impact to be made on them, the conferences which have to be delivered to them, and the appropriate discipline to be maintained among them. Moreover you would need a spiritual father as confessor for your numerous personnel.

Now, dear Father, do I speak to you about a bursar? This is what you essentially lack. Don't say that Fr. Védère deals with it or that you deal with it yourself. It is quite impossible... You are both stretched to your limits. To what does this lead? It effectively gives rise – and saying this I lay the blame on no-one since you cannot do anything else – to more or less total disorder, a wastage which you cannot control. Consequently money is swallowed up, debts accumulate, creditors send you bills which you cannot pay and borrowings multiply. There then follows Roblot's hour (a celebrated undertaker). Fr. Maillard wrote to me saying that I should send on to him 8 or 10,000 francs to pay pressing and other debts, and then the house could go forward orderly and economically. I sent him on 8,000 francs immediately under the impression that this would be enough. But not so; Fr. Maillard on his return informed me that your total debt was as much as 20,000 francs (about 64,000 euros) and that it could be as much as up to twelve thousand francs which you still owed. What is to be done, my friend, to extricate you from this? Try to lower your costs; this is a necessity; scrutinize advantageously your expenses. I pray God to put you in the way of some good fortune. Perhaps the young American will provide a providential opportunity for you. I would wish something happened for you with all my heart since, knowing how sensitive you are, such precarious and difficult circumstances must make you suffer. I shall try as much as I can to be helpful to you. Be trustful!

4. I read carefully the Universe and, ever since the Pope's letter to the Cardinal of Paris with reference to Dom Pitra, the paper's behaviour, so it seems to me, is irreproachable. It has scrupulously carried all letters in approval of their Lordships the Bishops without comment although some (bishops) saw it as being both spiteful and unjust. Where else in France would we find a paper which has defended the Church more courageously, the Papacy, the rights of bishops and the Catholic interests... so convincingly? We do not have one. It is the only one which is always into the breach for a good cause and never allows itself to be gagged either by money, promises, or threats. Its teaching is genuine, theological, strong like the truth. Its principles are those of the Holy See, its faith that of the Roman Church, and its light the word of the Popes which it accepts with as much respect as submission. Has anything provided as much of a contribution for the Catholic press as it has? You will recall the battles in favour of freedom to each, the temporal power, St. Peter's pence, the Roman liturgy. Which, more than it, has contributed to the attachment of the episcopacy to the Holy See and towards drawing the faithful towards Peter's chair? There is not an injustice which can be named against which it hasn't protested, or a just issue on behalf of which it hasn't made its eloquent voice heard.

The French Church under the Empire was but two fingers away from schism (and this seems to be forgotten). Very well! I don't know any paper which contributed so much as the Universe to avoid this happening. Indeed! I quite understand the hate which hell and the irreligious harbour against the paper. If vanquished, it would be sectarian triumph and a real body-blow for the Catholic cause in France. In this respect here's something which is not sufficiently grasped. No, the Universe does not merit the harshness to which it is subjected. Its bitter enemies nowadays are those provided at the Vatican Council as opposition as absurd as it was scandalous. It greatly piques the liberal section which is bent on its destruction and would be happy to see it disappear... May God save us from this calamity. Its wonderful summary of the excellent encyclical "Immortale Dei" was a masterpiece. No Catholic paper carried an article comparable with it. Whether it was by Auguste Rousselle or Mr. Eugène Veuillot doesn't matter in the least: it's from the Universe. Has not the Universe praised all the immortal writings of Leo XIII, beyond all mention...? What should one have expected from it? That it take action against Dom Pitra, condemned him, made him a rebel, a semi-heretic as some liberal papers did; this would be to ask the impossible. There are standards of friendship and acknowledgement which one cannot overlook.

The Universe disapproved of the letter when it was disapproved of by the Holy See and then it carried all the disavowals, and it is shot down... What is there to complain about against it today? What is being asked of it? I know the feelings which motivate Eugène Veuillot and his staff to be able to say that they are ready to do everything the Holy Father asks of them.

What becomes certain is that the Holy See has not at the present time a more brave and convincing supporter. Its way of dealing with Mr. Des-Houx was irreproachable; it condemned in turn his Le Matin articles. Can one reproach it for being friendly with him? Not so! Use your influence, Fr., to prevent any severe measures being taken against the Universe! Support it and defend it, if necessary; it deserves this.

To Father Albert Delaporte, of the Mercy, Paris.Likely Issoudun, December 13, 1885

Dear Father,

Our Very Reverend Father Superior has asked me (Fr. Morisseau) to inform you that he is not totally against starting up a monthly bulletin of associated priests (a publication called Review of the Sacred Heart), but nonetheless he is not willing to take on responsibility for it. It is an onerous undertaking on top of what we have already, and you are left alone to undertake it. If you happen to be absent, who will keep it going? Should we not fear that we are acting like that unfortunate man qui coepit turrim aedificare et non potuit consummare? Would it not be preferable to begin with a bi-monthly publication? Our wings expanding, we could later fly at a greater height without too much presumptuousness... You suggest to have the publication printed by way of finances from Bar-le-Duc, or gratuitously in exchange for advertisements. This last proposal, however more economically advantageous, does not appeal in any way to the Very Reverend Father. He sees in it much that is greatly inconvenient. What would be the purpose of these advertisements in our publication? Perhaps all too often they would have no connection with our works. In any event our freedom would be more or less diminished if not pushed aside by the understandings we would be trying to reach with an editor. This is what the Very Reverend Father does not wish to have for the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Annals. This is what he does not wish for in the projected publication.

We could get here, or from Tilburg, many intentions from those priests who would like to pay for their subscriptions with mass offerings: there is no problem there. If you begin your publication in the month of January, it is pointless to send a tri-monthly bulletin with the Annals. You could have, as you suggest, for your first article, what you have made ready for the bulletin, and your manuscript will be sent back to you.

The names and addresses of all the subscribers will be sent on to you, but since this undertaking takes some days you will be kind enough to wait patiently for a little while.

The Very Reverend Father wishes to thank you for all you have for our dear brother, Suchet. You will let us know what it would be proper to offer Saint Joseph's Hospital.

Please accept, Father, my respectful, devoted, good wishes in S.S. Corde.

J.F. Morisseau, MSC.

Chevalier now adds his own letter to that above.

Dear Father Delaporte,

1. Thanks a thousand for your comments about the chapter on the Sacred Heart and philosophy. They are very pertinent and I shall change the chapter in the suggested manner.
2. Our liberals are authoritarian and cannot be checked. The story about the Rouen Archbishop taking from your lecture the name of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is delightful. The Lord is beginning to punish his demands. Bishop Trappel has delivered a bludgeon blow on him. Do you think that I should write a letter to Bishop Thomas correcting his error about Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and forwarding to him my book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart?
3. The Rome Moniteur (newspaper) writes to let me know that Fr. Jouët is greatly favoured in the Vatican at the present moment. It (the Moniteur) has been commenting on Leo XIII's Lent encyclical, and the Pope has put together all the Moniteur's articles in a very lovely book, together with the encyclical's text in Latin and French. Fr. Jouët has sent me a copy which I am going to read very attentively. It appears that these articles represent the Pope's thinking. Fr. Jouët also sent me a volume which contains all the letters which the bishops sent to the Pope at the time of his letter to the Archbishop of Paris. There are a good twenty of their Lordships the Bishops of France who sent nothing, and they have very, very much been taken notice of in Rome.

The Universe is always held in suspicion, and very threatened, so Fr. Jouët writes to me. I wrote him a strong letter in support (of the Universe) and sent a copy to Mr. Eugène Veuillot (the editor) who thanked me. I very much fear for it. What a wretched time! What intrigues! Yes indeed! Our liberals! Is Fr. Guyot in Paris? What does he think of the sermon by Fr. Moreau, the former Vicar General of Langres who was due to preach on the 8th (of December) in our Parish chapel? What do you think of it, yourself?

Issoudun, December 19, 1885

Dear Father,

1. A young Lyons sub-deacon will arrive at Tilburg on Monday morning. The recommendations are good. You can look them over and begin afresh. (He left the novitiate on September 19, 1886.)
2. Brother Casmir Leroy has a hernia which prevents him from working. Have you spoken to him about it? If it's negative, it is a reason for sending him away. In any event, he could not be admitted to perpetual vows.
3. Fr. Jouët wishes to benefit from what you publish for Belgium in the French Annals and from your search for helpers, even in France, for example Marseilles, on behalf of your work. He wishes, so he says, to take warranty from this example and set up, also for his own purposes, his own French Annals to promote a confraternity of the Souls in Purgatory whose centre is in his church, and enjoying a great Gregorian indulgence. He wishes that only himself alone should be taken up with this work and be in contact with his associates. It is neither more nor less than the ruin of our Issoudun undertaking, the drying-up of our resources, etc. He says he has the Pope's approval and he is looking for nothing other than my own (approval). To begin with, since it has all to do with the Souls in Purgatory, and its centre would be in his church, effectively Issoudun would be sidelined by Rome, or effectively so, and then who would meet our expenses, support our undertakings, our houses, etc.? Do not mention this to him: he asked me to keep it secret.
4. I made it clear to Fr. Barral that I would wholeheartedly endorse, if you thought it acceptable, a French edition of the Annals for Belgium, on condition that all was done in Issoudun's name with correspondence from Belgium for Issoudun not to be turned away from it and attracted to Tilburg. There is another arrangement to be carried out since I must make it clear to Fr. Jouët that everything in Belgium is done in the name of, and for, Issoudun. Let me know how you see all this.

Issoudun, December 22, 1885

Dear Father,

Yes, indeed, Father, I am aware of your devotedness without limits, unshakeable before every challenge both for our dear Society and its unworthy Superior. Nobody appreciates, or ever will, this as much as I do. In the history of the past which you recount when your heart suffered so much, there were misunderstandings, differences of opinion, delusions, maybe, involuntary mistakes, too unbalanced an emphasis on principles, etc. I accept all that. But what holds most certainly for you, as for myself, is an unshakeable fidelity to the Church, blind obedience to the Sovereign Pontiff, a growing love for our Institute, a veritable passion for the advancement and success of its undertakings which not all our confrères have, perhaps, not always fully understood, but which I acknowledge and assert most emphatically.

I do not believe I have ever voluntarily done anything contrary to the decrees and wishes of the Pope or Congregations while I was moved to act. I ordered that everything should be punctiliously observed, either with respect to the word Queen of the Sacred Heart, which was erroneously understood, or in relation to statues and pictures dealing with public worship, or with regard to different indulgences, etc.

If my orders have not in every respect been faithfully carried out, I sensitively regret this, and if you have noticed this yourself, let me know those who fall short, or communicate with them directly in writing, but positively pointing out what is to be corrected, changed or taken away altogether. Everybody has good will; occasional overlooking either from tiredness or a great deal of work on hand could alone sufficiently explain the shortcomings to which you refer.

As for the medals and pictures of the former statue-model, they always remain approved of for private worship. Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne told us so, also Monsignor Druon on his return from Rome; you have written it to us yourself on a number of occasions, and said it also in conversation – I do not believe we are going against the wishes of the Holy See. We always endorse the new model for public worship. I was unaware of what you say to me about Fr. Michel's statue. It may well be that one of the older ones made use of before was given to him before the brief, and he has been permitted to leave it where it is.

I do not think, my friend, that the slightest reproach should be levelled at me about the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart. I was convinced that this work could do good in the present circumstances. I had the approval of the Archbishop of Bourges, the Bishop of Aix, the Archbishop of Grenoble, etc. I submitted it (the text) to the Holy Father who placed it in the hands of the Cardinal Vicar to be looked at. It was the normal thing to do when I asked you to find out what was happening about it... You were told to stay calm! Fine. The matter will lie dormant as long as the good Lord so wishes it. I don't see what crime has been committed.

You say that Fr. de Mun has returned with his accusations under another heading and has been requested to keep quiet... He was well-intentioned, his teaching orthodox, his becoming involved was, he believed, wholly for the well-being of religion, the Church and Society. Rome imposed silence on him. He withdrew his initiatives, gave over everything: what could be more heroic?

The issues involving the Archconfraternity and indulgences were muddled up, unclearly defined, the enrolling of absentee members very confusing. My comments helped to clarify things for you, which was very good! No more problems!

I asked you to look for certain privileges on behalf of the priests associated with us in order to attract them and make them interested in our work, as Fr. Lebeurier did. What has been achieved on their behalf? Nothing. The Indulgences mentioned on page 641 of the book on the Sacred Heart have always been granted by the Pope. Go and look at it; have them renewed and augmented. If you cannot succeed in getting anything, let me know and we shall leave it out. (The sentence on page 641.)

You say that I am too assertive in my views against Liberalism. I am only repeating what Pius IX said in his briefs and encyclicals and the Provincial Councils approved by Rome. I give you full authority to eliminate whatever is not in keeping with the letter of Leo XIII. Carry out also on the Sacred Heart book the required alterations since I am preparing a new edition. Make haste on this. It seems to me that you are greatly in error when you say that... "I put things which the Congregations do not like into the book". You forget that the book was examined and approved point by point. Point out the errors to me and they will be quickly taken out, and then let me know what I should replace them with. I impose this as an obligation on you since all these complaints, continuously being aired without justification, give rise to a negative, and bad, impact. In what way? It's ourselves once more who are wrong about the indulgence: "May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!" I have the original in my hands with Pio Nono's signature which I had inscribed such as it was in Rome, while lo and behold a copyist through the simple misplacing of a word, placing Pie Nono in error, compromises the indulgence. And now after 25 years, during which time this invocation is known and said everywhere, everything has to be changed. This is hard to accept! But if we have to, say so! I am not sure if we can continue circulating canticles or printed matter which are not corrected. I must have myself advised about this.

You return again to the issue of appeals (financial) on behalf of your Rome church. Frankly, I cannot understand your insistence on this, nor your complaints. You forget two important issues:

In the first instance it was you yourself who made the appeal in our Annals which brought you 20 to 25,000 francs (between 64,000 and 80,000 euros). That is far from nothing... and you make bold to say that there was no response to your appeal or to that of the Pope. To keep on appealing in our Annals would have been pointless; moreover it would have bored our subscribers and damaged our work since the public complains that we are always asking for money. We have, then, for the most part, greatly provided our share by way of the Annals. I said to you, and I repeat it: you may place an appeal in the religious weeklies, the Catholic papers, emphasizing the Pope's good will towards our Rome church. You have my full permission. You may write specific letters and write as much as you like to France, Spain, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Austria, America and, specially, Italy. Nobody is against your doing so. What more do you want?

The second fact which you forget, and which you should have mentioned to the Sovereign Pontiff, is that the mother-house provided you with 300,000 francs (960,425 euros), if not more, for the Rome house and church. This is quite a large, significant, amount, because of which I cannot be taxed about giving you nothing or failing to facilitate you in bringing this undertaking to a conclusion. First of all, your church has been renovated and opened for worship; it is no longer lacking anything except what is decorative, this is to say, what are accessories. Try once more to get these accessories by getting in touch with, through visits or specific letters, generous people in the Catholic world. You have full permission, and if the Holy Father wishes to seal your letters it would be perfect and guarantee success.

Fr. Piperon assures me that he has never sent a prospectus or a written appeal to France asking support for his Tilburg undertaking. It is Madame Jullien alone who wishes to make herself a promoter in Marseilles for the Tilburg novitiate, and for the past two years there has been no more about it. You are not, then, correct when you say to the Pope that there has been no appeal in France for the Rome undertaking when our Annals appealed to the good will of people in favour of this undertaking, while you yourself appealed in several towns. My friend, much the best thing to do is to place a veil over all the past, without a return to it. I shall always do what I can for the Rome house; it is my duty and, I would also say, my pleasure. Certainly you have nothing with which to reproach me on this issue.

You say that you never ordered Fr. Couppé and Fr. Maillard to ask me for money! Pitiful friend! If not yourself, it was the desperate state of your finances which impelled Fr. Couppé to send me in the first place the cheques he could not pay, and make known to me your financier's demands which would be costly for you and place you in debt. Accordingly, therefore, in order to forestall a disaster, the loss of your reputation, and the closure of your house, I immediately sent on funds, which I had to borrow... And you did not even appear to be aware of the (financial) abyss into which you were about to fall. You left Rome without taking measures to meet the requirements of your signed cheques; you left Fr. Couppé without money to pay your signed cheques: it was not I who asked him to get money from you! It was the same story, practically speaking, with Fathers Védère and Maillard.

I thought that I had put your position on a financially even keel last year save for 10 or 15,000 francs owed to the mason, and here again this year you have increased your debt by 10 or 15,000 francs. All of this proves that financial administration is lacking in your house. You go ahead without taking into account the exact resources available and without asking yourself if you can pay what is owed. The suppliers' bills come in, and since there is no longer any money in the cash-box, one borrows from Peter, Paul... It's a disastrous scheme of things. I repeat what I have said many times up to now: you must make expenses tally with your intake and not get into debt. If you haven't the wherewithal to pay, you must rein in on the expenses with respect to your church and your personnel, etc. You must no longer accept lay brothers, or youngsters for the Petite Oeuvre, if you do not have sufficient funds to support them. What remains essential is that debts should not be incurred.

I am very happy, Father, about the success of your little book on the Souls in Purgatory. Bring out an attractive French edition; we shall actively promote it in our Annals and the profits will be all yours. But as for permitting the French Annals to support now and again your work, starting from Rome where everything would be centralized, this is unacceptable. The reasons for this refusal are the same as I have already given you. There are already several monthly publications here in France, and several confraternities, dealing with the dead. Your undertaking does not meet a need in France. Italy is extensive enough to respond to your zeal. It should be enough for you. There you go again with a new enterprise which you add to so many others. Who will deal with this? Does it not occur to you that more overwhelming work is being brought upon you by all of this? I have already proved to you that you have presently in your house activities going on which could engage at least six priests, and you have only two with you. Now you want to add another undertaking which, confined alone to the borders of Italy, would become demanding, without asking yourself if you are of sufficient numbers to meet such a demand. Call to mind the proverb: he who takes too much in his grasp, badly holds. Wisdom lies in not wishing to take hold of all the good which is on offer, but rather that which one can (comfortably) manage. I am well aware, my friend, that you have a dynamism which is exceptional... But you take on too much and endanger your health, of which the Society is so greatly in need. Your work is over-loaded. You continue long into the night; you haven't a moment for yourself. You cannot keep on going like this for any length of time! And the material, spiritual and religious direction of your house will suffer greatly because of this. Check your zeal in place of giving it too much rein. Before Fr. Vaudon takes his vows, which I wholeheartedly approve of, you need, I believe, to ask the bishop of his native diocese and the one where he last lived (worked) for testimonial letters as required by Canon Law, unless the Holy See dispenses you from doing this. Fr. Vaudon, before entering the Mercy (order) was a member of the Paris Oratory community. Would he not need a dispensation to join us?

Here now is an issue which is quite serious, and about which I am being given details. It concerns Fr. Couppé, who has compromised himself in Sydney, and Fr. Hartzler, who appears to have lost his religious attitude (thrust). Here is something which is most disturbing and pressing at the present time. I wrote a kind but serious letter to Fr. Couppé asking him to stay away from the Sisters' house, to set up a proper enclosure and only go there when it is necessary, and always with a socius (companion). I informed Fr. Navarre about all this. I sent him a letter written to me by Sister Xavier, and another from Fr. Hartzler dealing with all this. There you see what happens when a true religious spirit is lacking.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Sister Xavier, Marie Ryan, was Michael Tierney's cousin, and it was he who introduced her to the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. A teacher, she was the only English-speaking member of the first group of missionaries to arrive in Sydney this year, 1885. She was in charge of the Botany Bay school and, after other postings, she became Superior at Thursday Island and went on to write a memoir. She died aged seventy-seven at Kensington, NSW, on December 21, 1933.

Issoudun, December 27, 1885

Dear Father,

I am grateful to you for the information you have made available to me. Try and find out about this Mr. Moreau so that we may know what is motivating him. As he is positively requesting to join us, I would like to be well informed.

Fr. Vaudon would like me to put on the cover of the new book:

OUR LADY OF THE SACRED HEART
Library of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart

.....

In preparation:
Imitating the Sacred Heart
By the Reverend Father Delaporte, Miss. of the Sacred Heart.

Do you intend to bring out this book? It would be helpful and very much appreciated. There is indeed an Imitation of the Sacred Heart by Father Cirot-de-Laville which I find insipid and doctrinally lacking. I believe that a Jesuit has brought out a work of the same nature, but it doesn't matter; yours, from a Missionary of the Sacred Heart, will be very much appreciated. It must be seen to that all the books we shall be publishing in the future should, insofar as it is possible, have the format of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart Library Collection; likewise the directory of the Sacred Heart Third Order, and everything which will be thereafter sold. This is a suggestion.

When Brother Suchet returns, you will send on to me all the 'thank you' letters which will have to be written to the doctors, sisters, etc. I shall sign them. You will also make known to me what the house will have to contribute (pay).

Our warm greetings to dear Fr. Guyot. Tell him that we continually pray for him.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

1. Fr. Delaporte has written to tell me that he has not held on to your testimonial letters. Ask Fr. Jouët if it is necessary that they should be sent on.
2. I have received the Orleans religious weekly. Fr. Jouët sent nothing on to me.
3. Willingly, I give you permission to preach the sermons you have been asked to give.
4. I wrote to Mr. Retaux about the cover of the book in keeping with the views you expressed to me.
5. What has happened to the postulant with the degree, a former teacher, who enquired about entering our Society? I gave Fr. Jouët full authority to accept him and send him to Tilburg. I have heard no more about it.

Here nothing new. The priests in Oceania are getting on well. I wish you and everyone else a happy and holy New Year.

Issoudun, January 2, 1886

Dear Father,

Thanks a million for your good wishes! I very much appreciate them, and they bring me pleasure. I quickly forward mine to you and if the divine Heart of Jesus hears them, as I hope he will, all your expectations will be fulfilled since I know they are for the glory of God and the salvation of souls. Your coming among us, Fr., is a blessing; that's how I look upon it.

On reflection, I think it would be better if Fr. Guyot himself, Superior of the Paris house, wrote to the doctors at the Catholic hospital, and to the Sister, and sends the contribution which you consider appropriate. It is not my concern.

Yes, we can, together with you, bring about good things with our Annals, our helpers, our affiliated priests and tertiaries through writing books, the Annals, reunions and diplomas. Have all this organized with Fr. Bontemps and Fr. Guyot and submit your plans to me; the Sacred Heart will bless these endeavours.

Everyone in Rome is pleased with Fr. Vaudon. He is due to take his vows on the 10th of this month. Send me a special little letter in which you will confirm that you asked for and received the testimonial letters for Father Vaudon but which you mislaid. That will be enough.

Ask Fr. Jouët if he can arrange for you to take your perpetual vows straightaway on completion of the four months required by Rome. I believe that he will easily be granted this favour by the Pope by making known to him that you were the Superior General of the Fathers of Mercy. I would like very much if this were to happen.

Give my good wishes to Frs. Guyot, Maillard, whose – the latter – letter came this pm, and to our worthy scholastics who wrote such a nice letter to me. I thank them most gratefully.

Oremus pro invicem. Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

1. I am sending you the letter I had from Fr. Couppé. Fr. Durin has arrived in Sydney; he wrote me a long letter in which he says that he had a very good journey. He appears to be in the best of form.

2. As regards Antwerp, if you agree, it can go ahead. Ask Cardinal Simeoni for a commendatory letter for the Archbishop of Malines, under whom Antwerp is dependent, to authorize this foundation. You will make it plain to the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda that Antwerp is the most favourable site for the development of our undertakings in the countries of the north. There are many vocations for the missions either in Holland or the Rhineland provinces, or Catholic Germany. The Germans do not like coming to our apostolic schools in Holland or France, or, more rightly, the Dutch and the French do not like them. At Antwerp things will be so much better, since the whole world likes Belgium, the neutral country. Moreover, Antwerp is becoming a port very much frequented by the Germans who take ship there when going to their colonies. You must go and see Cardinal Simeoni straightaway so that I shall have by Sunday his letter of recommendation for the Archbishop of Malines, since I shall leave next Monday to finalize this matter.

3. Fr. Verjus has sent me a very good report about his work in Yule Island and New Guinea.

Issoudun, January 10, 1886

Dear Father Jouët,

This evening I received your registered letter and the letter containing Cardinal Simeoni's letter for the Archbishop of Malines. I hope that the matter will be a success. I cannot leave at the present moment as we have 0.30 centimetres of snow and the weather is very bad. In no way can I make the journey to Brussels until next week.

The Averbode memorandum is very good; I hope it will bring results. Fr. Roger is leaving for Barcelona tomorrow morning where he will live with Fathers Casas and Fora. Fr. Miniot will go to Canet-de-Mar. Could you drop him a line, signed by Cardinal Simeoni, stating that the Caroline Islands are part of our Micronesian Vicariate? This would be helpful, so it would seem, in order to get government resources and exemption from military law on behalf of those Spaniards who would be joining us.

The Caroline Islands are just north of the equator in the western Pacific and east of the Marshall Islands.

Brother Melchiade (Juste) wants to make a serious novitiate at Tilburg in preparation for going on the missions. I grant him permission if you approve and I would ask him to discuss this with you.

Juste did go to Antwerp and left on May 10, 1887, for the equator; he left both the equator and the Society in November 1888.

NB: When Fr. Vaudon has taken his vows, and you do not need him, you might send him to the Paris house, 16 rue de Passy.

Issoudun, January 13, 1886

Dear Father,

I read with keen interest the first issue of your publication; it is very good. I presumed to make some slight changes which I considered necessary. See pages 7,8,9,12. If you could turn advantageously towards the Sacred Heart your monthly retreat meditations, it would be perfect. This alteration should be easy for you as the subject-matter greatly lends itself to this. You do well to use a capital letter always for the word Heart when there's reference to the Heart of Jesus. There are, in fact, many mistakes, some significantly affecting the meaning of the sentences. I didn't engage myself at all with them. Look out for them.

I think that it would do no harm to send a copy, 1 to all the bishops asking them to have this work mentioned in their religious weeklies; and 2 to all the rectors of major seminaries requesting them to mention the book to their deacons and young priests. There should be a circular letter sent, then, to the bishops and superiors asking them to take this work under their wing.

It should be easy for you to get a letter of approval for this work from the Cardinal Vicar since, very likely, it will bring about so much good. Have it also approved and commended by the Cardinal in Paris. Through his mediating role you could obtain many privileges from the Pope for affiliated priests; this would be wonderfully encouraging. Fr. Jouët is well experienced dealing with the Congregation of Indulgences.

Meanwhile, if Fr. Roussel wishes to become part of this worthwhile undertaking by printing a sample copy at a very low price, you could send one to all the priests of France and Belgium. There would have to be 40,000 copies then. He should print the 40,000 copies for you at a cost of 800 francs (about 2,555 euros), which would make each copy cost two centimes (0.05 or 0.06 euros). It is something to be risked if there is to be any success.

One must also launch the Third Order as a priestly undertaking. Publicity is a prerequisite in order to achieve something. You are right in thinking that you must obtain the Archbishop of Paris' imprimatur for each issue as we do for Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Annals. It's a prerequisite. If the Archbishop does not want to do so (for all that he cannot really refuse), the Archbishop of Bourges will be available to do so, but the proofs of each issue must be sent to him beforehand.

I hope to be at Brussels next Monday or Tuesday, not much later than mid-day. I shall let you know by telegram. It is, therefore, pointless for you to go and see the Archbishop of Malines before I arrive; we shall go together and present to him Cardinal Simeoni's letter. If, contrary to my expectations, there are obstacles preventing me from going to Brussels next week, I shall send on to you the Cardinal's letter, that of the Prefect of Propaganda, which you yourself will take to Malines.

Abbreviate the questionnaire if you think it is too long. I looked over your accounts. I find that you have scarcely lowered your debts which have gone up again to 45,000 francs or so. (Roughly 144,000 euros.)

Tilburg
January 27, 1886

Very Reverend Father,

It is with a heart full of sadness and with tears in my eyes that I come before you for the last time outlining a state of affairs which I can no longer tolerate. This is a final attempt on my part to get you to change me. Having had no answer from Fr. Piperon to the request I put to him (perhaps he did not consider it appropriate to answer my rightful request). I am so dissatisfied with him that I cannot remain any longer in this unhappy situation.

It is for this reason, Very Reverend Father, that I come to ask you the favour of recalling me either to Issoudun or Paris, etc., as I declare that it is absolutely impossible for me to continue in my present situation any longer. For this reason, Very Reverend Father, in the event of your not meeting my just demand, I am requesting you to grant me a dispensation from the ten months of temporary vows which I have to complete. It's with a sorrowful broken heart I make this request, but Very Rev. Father I believe it to be my duty to do so since my present circumstances are likely to plunge me into discouragement and lead me to excesses I might regret as well as giving me a depressing idea of the religious life.

Pardon, Reverend Father, this freedom of language which I resort to, and please accept my assurance that I shall never forget the benefits of which I was the recipient in your worthy Congregation. I shall, Reverend Father, do my best to acknowledge this by working in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and for the well being of the dear Petite Oeuvre in which I was pleased to stay over five and a half years. Since I am not allowed to concern myself with this dear Petite Oeuvre from inside, I hope that at least this request will not be refused once I am out of this house.

This, Reverend Father, is the request I feel I must make to you given the circumstances in which I find myself. I would ask you then to be considerate and kind enough to accept the promises I made to you, and which I renew as I send this letter.

In expectation of your reply, Reverend Father, I would like to request your blessing for the last time, believing me to be always your grateful and devoted son.

J. Dutheil, Mis.SC.

L 18860128

To Father Albert Delaporte, MSC, Paris.

Issoudun, January 28, 1886

Dear Father,

From your sketch I am perfectly aware of the siting of the house right at the end of rue de la Tour (in Paris, 16<sup>ème</sup> arrondissement). If in place of being at the far end of rue du Trocadero it was at the beginning, that would be perfect, with no need to hesitate... Here we are thrown in at the end of Passy, hemmed in by the Muette and the Bois de Boulogne. Our young men will, I accept, be alright there, but within 18 months we shall, I hope, have none of them in Paris. Those of ours who have taken the baccalaureate will go on to teach others; otherwise the costs (in Paris) would be exorbitant, beyond our means and disproportionate to the results. A college would, perhaps, be quite advantageously well-placed there, but presently we are in no position to open it... Besides as an educational establishment it would not be properly central, so it seems to me, and would not be very successful.

2. As a residence pure and simple, with a chapel, as the centre of our undertakings, this house is too far from Paris. It could not act as a Procure for our other houses since the general organization of our undertakings is allocated in the confines of Saint Sulpice...

Then what ministry could we exercise in this out-of-the-way area? There are scarcely any dwelling houses in a group surrounding this town. Those who walk in the Bois de Boulogne normally do not stop to visit the chapels on their route. Our Sacred Heart priests, our Tertiaries of the Sacred Heart, as well as our helpers, would never come to this far-out part of Paris. This house would be a suitable place for one or two years while waiting to see more clearly the work of Fr. Pervilhac, and while giving ourselves the opportunity to consider if it would not be preferable to consider establishing ourselves near Saint Sulpice, or beside the Oratorians, or the area of Saint Philippe le Roule, or beside the Barnabites, or in the Champs Elysées area, etc., etc.

3. I do not believe that Mr. Tolomon will sell his property at rue de Passy, 16, that quickly; he would rent it to us very likely for another year or two if we so wished.

4. Fr. Pervilhac has written saying that Count Armand came to him and said that he would lower the price of his ground for us and would lease it to us at 250 and, perhaps, 200 francs a metre. If he wished to give us the 2,000 metres we hope at 200 francs a metre (about 640 euros), this would be preferable to the Villa Trocadero, which is so far out. Discuss all this with Fathers Guyot and Bontemps.

5. If we cannot get the Tolomon house, the house on rue de le Tour and rue David would be very suitable as a centre. There we could consider the situation.

6. Dear Father take no account of what Fr. Tréand tells you unless it is conveyed to you in my name. It is appropriate that the Belgian Annals should be self-sufficient and draw on issues happening in that small kingdom and in no way infringe upon the French Annals which has already lost a lot of subscribers either from Belgium, 'French' Holland and Germany. We must be attentive that our Annals do not lose out because of failing to be interesting. All our resources are drawn, for the most part, from the Annals. They (the French Annals) should have things for the first time; then the other, foreign, Annals could draw on whatever (in the French Annals) could be of interest for the following months.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

L 18860130

Issoudun, January 30, 1886

Dear Father,

1. Thank you for your letter which you have just written and which I eagerly awaited. I am not in the least surprised by the permission given to us by the Archbishop of Malines to set up a foundation in Antwerp. Archbishop Goossens is too kind, and too concerned about being acceptable in Rome, to refuse a favour which Propaganda and our Holy Father the Pope ask for in the interest of our missions.
2. The Antwerp parish priests have no right to oppose the authority of the diocese, the wishes of the Holy See, choking off our work in its infancy by limiting it to conditions where it would not be viable. Our aim is not to compete with them, to raise altar against altar, and give ourselves over to parochial ministry. The direction of our apostolic undertakings, the promotion of our Annals and the devotions of the Sacred Heart and Our Lady are enough for us.
3. It is impossible for us to promise in writing never to have a church open to the public. Everything depends on the circumstances. We could indeed say that our concern is not to offer public services in our church and draw parishioners there, but rather to concern ourselves with our young men and form them in virtue.
4. I think the same as yourself: one must deal with Mr. Herman straightaway and avoid drawing out this matter at length. (Herman was the commissioner for public funding in Antwerp.) Take advantage of the Archbishop's permission and go and see straightaway the good owner with the Provincial of the Capuchins. The advice being given to you by the Rev. Father is very good. Come to an agreement with Mr. Herman, putting down the terms of a mutual agreement before going to meet Monsignor Sacré. You will present him with a 'fait accompli' in letting him know that, aware of his goodness and concern for what is good, you presupposed his approval. All the more so since the proprietor offered you most advantageous conditions and you believed that it was an urgent matter to sign the agreement, and (consequently) the worthy Dean could have no longer any reason to oppose it.
5. As for the price of the ground, I find it excessive at 20 francs a metre. I mentioned 12 or 15 francs to Mr. Herman, and he left me to understand that he would accept these conditions once the Bishop's authorization had been obtained, since, he added, I have no children and I am not going to make it a money issue.

You could offer for the 8,000 metres making up the 1st lot, 15 francs a metre, which would come to 120,000 francs. We would pay half, with the rest, as you say, coming in four annuities and by quarter interest at 4%. The buildings, it goes without saying, would be included in this price. The 20,000 metres making up lots 2, 3, 4, would be made available to us at 10 or 12 francs a metre. We would have an option on the ground up to 1889 with interest at 2%. Make the Reverend Fr. Provincial part of your plans; engage him to favour these proposals and draw Mr. Herman to accept them. He will succeed, I hope, all the more so since it is for a good cause and the good priest has a lot of influence on the proprietor. Meanwhile, if the latter thinks the price is not enough and refuses to accept it, which I do not believe he will, you will do your utmost to reach a ready conclusion.

As regards the names to pick from for the legal process you have Fathers Barral, Reyn, Hartzler, Bontemps.

Théophile Reyn, a Belgian, was born on March 8, 1860, at Beverey-Waes. He was ordained on May 30, 1885, at Bois-le-Duc. He became Superior of the Antwerp house under discussion here in November 1889. Four years later, in 1893, he became Assistant General and Superior of the Issoudun community. On February 8, next year, 1894, he left the Society and became a curate at Seraing in his native Belgium. He went on to found his own society, the Aumoniers du Travail, of which he became Superior General in 1896. See also here, Twohig, Late But Not Too Late: specifically Crowley, Hannigan, Jules Vandel.

6. When you have acquired the property we shall discuss the work to be undertaken and the personnel. Your suggestion to put there the three final classes of our different Petites Oeuvres is a very good one. We can proceed to put it into effect.

Dear Father,

I am sending you a copy of the letter I have sent to the Archbishop of Malines to prevent him from going back on his promises and to put him on his guard against the opposition of the parish priests. Monsignor Sacra's letter, which Fr. Barral has forwarded to me, is splendid. There isn't any more to fear about from this quarter.

Meanwhile, try to get more generous concessions from Mr. Herman.

D 18860131 A

To His Eminence Cardinal Carlo Cristofori, Prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences.

Undated; from Vatican private archives; likely end of January, 1886

Your Eminence,

The under-signed Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart humbly requests permission from Your Eminence to present what follows:

By decree of the Congregation of Indulgences, August 26, 1879, the Universal Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was confided to the sole charge of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, Archdiocese of Bourges, France. In this same decree our Congregation was declared to be strictly and indissolubly linked to this archconfraternity. Moreover, in virtue of this decree and a brief from Pius IX, dated August 5, 1873, confirmed by his venerable successor Leo XIII, the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart were granted permission to affiliate the confraternities of like name from the whole world, with the approval of the local ordinaries (bishops): "quascumque sodalitates, sive uniones ejusdem Instituti ac nominis, ubique gentium de Ordinariorum licentia".

Since that time the unity of the archconfraternity, which was the purpose of the 1879 decree, became an accomplished fact, as can be seen in the memorandum presented by Fr. Jouët, the Procurator General of our Congregation, on January 6, 1886, to His Eminence Cardinal Jacobini, Secretary of State. Due to this unifying process, the Archconfraternity made rapid progress, particularly so in Catholic Belgium where the members can be counted in millions, and where several particular associations were set up which were characterized by nothing more urgent than to affiliate themselves to the Universal Archconfraternity.

Unfortunately, this happy unity was disturbed when a particular association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, established in Averbode, Malines Diocese, asked for and was granted permission to set itself up with archconfraternity status for the whole of Belgium. The setting up of this new archconfraternity created confusion among the faithful. This became greater still when our Congregation, at the request of Cardinal Moran and under the active support of Cardinal Simeoni, founded at Antwerp in the archdiocese of Malines a seminary for the foreign missions which presently numbers one hundred and sixty members, trained, completely gratuitously, for the Melanesia and Micronesia missions, two apostolic vicariates confided by the Holy See to the care of our Congregation.

There has then been something of a dispute existing for many years in Belgium, and a certain rivalry between the long-term members and promoters of the Universal Archconfraternity and the members and promoters of the new Archconfraternity. A dispute and rivalry which naturally comes about and can only be to the detriment of devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and all too often to the disedification of the faithful.

The confusion to which all this gave rise was added to when our Congregation, having begun to publish a special edition of the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for Belgium (being the publication of the archconfraternity), as we do in all the other countries where we are established – Italy, France, Germany, Austria, Spain, England, North and South America, Oceania – found the Premonstratensian Fathers introducing from their side three months ago a publication called the Messenger of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart as something specific to their archconfraternity. Since then our Congregation, to whom the Sovereign Pontiff has given the responsibility and direction of the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, felt that it should raise its voice in protest. It did so through the intermediary of its Procurator General in Rome, Fr. Jouët, who, in January 1886 on the feast of the Epiphany, delivered a memorandum to His Eminence Cardinal Jacobini, a copy of which I am honoured to send Your Eminence. In this memorandum the confusion and inconveniences which would of necessity result from setting up this new archconfraternity were pointed out, and it was requested, in order to avoid such confusion and disagreement, that unity be restored under the guidance of the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

This request, considered fair and discreet by His Eminence Cardinal Monaco, warmly recommended by His Eminence Cardinal Parocchi, and supported by His Eminence Cardinal Jacobini, has not up to now been satisfactorily met. That is why, at the present moment, when all the disadvantages foreseen in the memorandum have become sad reality, we come humbly to beseech Your Eminence to be kind enough to intercede on our behalf with His Holiness so that this confusion and these unpleasant consequences come to an end and can no longer come about in the future.

We are all the more urgently moved to ask His Holiness for these favours, already implicitly contained in the 1879 decree and the 1873 brief, since we are encountering the same problems in Holland. There also the Universal Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart has developed rapidly. Following the foundation by our Congregation of a missions' house in the Bois-le-Duc Diocese, where, over two years, the Universal Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was promoted in a very satisfying manner, a particular association has been set up as an archconfraternity having its centre in the Church of the Ursuline Sisters at Sittard, Roermond Diocese. There also we have a repetition of the confusion and inappropriateness pointed out by our Procurator General. As well, there are two different editions of the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for the two archconfraternities and, between the older members and promoters of the Universal Archconfraternity and those of the new archconfraternity, there's disagreement and rivalry.

The aim, then, of His Holiness Leo XIII, when declaring personally and formally that there should be only one centre for the archconfraternity, was that it should be in the Roman Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Piazza Navona, so determining things in this way that even Issoudun (Indre - France), cradle of the devotion and the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association, should cease to be the archconfraternity centre. The aim of bringing about perfect unity and the archconfraternity's direction has been completely lost sight of (in Averbode and Sittard).

We should add here, with grateful acknowledgement, that this privilege of an archconfraternity granted by His Holiness Leo XIII to our Congregation has been a very great support in the advancement of our different undertakings, particularly so for the growth of the two mission seminaries at Antwerp (Belgium) and Tilburg (Holland), the first of which numbers presently more than one hundred and fifty members, the second more than a hundred, all educated gratuitously and mainly with a view to the missions. Moreover, it is mainly among the archconfraternity associates that we find the greatest (financial) support for the upkeep of these two seminaries. But the opportunity is well diminished when other archconfraternities have been set up in these countries (Belgium, Holland) where, following our expulsion from France, we have concentrated our efforts. It continues to be disadvantageous for us since these two new centres have begun, through their associates, to promote themselves in such an active manner that, as is only to be expected, it becomes most detrimental to our archconfraternity and our other undertakings.

The immediate foregoing was, assuredly, the main concerns which led Cardinal Monaco, Protector of our Congregation, and His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges, to bring this issue in a special way to the attention of His Holiness, Leo XIII. It was, likewise, for these same motives that His Eminence Cardinal Parocchi, who by virtue of being Cardinal Vicar, and by an 1879 decree, has responsibility for the General Archconfraternity, has vigorously defended the rights and privileges of this archconfraternity.

I end with most respectful good wishes, making bold, Your Eminence, to declare myself your most respectful and submissive son.

Dear Father,

1. I received the "Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" as well as your letter with the rescript for Fr. Delaporte. Thank you.
2. I am pleased to hear that the Fr. Ramot issue is, happily, ended.
3. We shall see what the Sacred Heart of Jesus will decide in regard to Mr. de Mendoza. Let us hope that he will become a good vocation for us.
4. As for the Austrian candidate, it is pointless to send him to Tilburg if you think he will not stay there.
5. Fr. Miniot could very well ask this permission through the Bishop of Gerona. You could deal in this way for small issues with the Congregations. Reserve, then, to yourself the more important issues.
6. I have had a letter from Fr. Couppé in which he justifies himself against Fr. Navarre with regard to the accusations casually brought against him by you know whom. He will no doubt have given occasion to some little imprudent activities, but I believe him to be quite innocent. I wrote a nice letter to him in order to calm and boost him. He tells me that Fr. Navarre has asked Fr. Durin and 3 sisters to come to Sydney: Sisters Marie-Paule, Magdalen, Claire. Only the Irish sister remains at Botany Bay together with a lay sister and lay helper. They have 120 pupils. It seems that Archbishop Moran has decided to give them Randwick parish. All the better as they will have more resources there than in Botany. Nevertheless, they will still remain in this last parish.
7. The Archbishop of Malines has replied giving permission to establish ourselves in Antwerp. The letter from Cardinal Simeoni, which I sent on to him, had a good impact. Without such support we would have been refused. This regard for our undertakings coming out of Rome won over, sympathetically, the Archbishop and deflated the parish priests who, following on this, would appear to show us great deference.
8. I visited the property under discussion; it is excellent and would be very convenient for our work. The only problem is that I find it somewhat expensive. There are four hectares. We need only take one, two or three as we wish. We would need two at least. The owner, while being a fervent Catholic and Tertiary of St. Francis, is asking for 20 francs a metre (about 64 euros). Negotiations are going on. I hope he will lower his price. I shall keep you informed. Fr. Guyot has once again not quite succeeded in dying because of his rheumatism, but he is improving. How expensive it is in Paris! That house swallows up money!

Dear Father,

I cannot see why you should bring yourself to worry so much. All you have to do at the present time is to negotiate the purchase of the house in the most favourable conditions possible. Then when we become the owners we shall look after the rest. My plan would be to leave you and your novitiate in Tilburg, as I said to you already. In any event, we shall discuss all this again when we become certain that we shall have the Antwerp house.

If Fr. Rochard is not suitable, send him away. The recommendations we have had about Fr. Vellez are good in fact. Fr. Morisseau should be sending them on to you. Fr. Delaporte has had a Papal rescript giving him permission to make his perpetual vows on the 19th of this month.

Dear Father,

Yes, I approve your purchasing plans. You can sign them. You mentioned an insurance society offering more guarantees. It should be availed of. I have set down for you those of ours who could be part of this (arrangement). It should be set out that the property of those who have died should resort by right and without compensation to the last survivor. Then, by way of forestalling the element of surprise, each member agrees to make available his quota to the other members of the Society. This undertaking, or more correctly undertakings, should be placed in our archives. And if one of those who made this arrangement happens to leave the Society all that needs to be done is to register the fact and no compensation is made. That's what happened in the case of the noted Fr. Albert in regard to the Saint Gérard property. You might also come to an agreement about Baron Van Avere's property, number 8, in keeping with the conditions set down in Fr. Barral's letter, with options. We must now try to find supporters in order to pay half the sum required before the agreement is signed.

NB: If I am not mistaken, this will not be until January 19, 1889. We have time.

1. Yesterday I authorized the renting at 1,200 francs (about 3,840 euros) of the Baron's property, if you deem it opportune, in this matter you are effectively the one who assesses the situation.
2. If you think it opportune, enrol Fr. Peeters in this insurance society, but with this precaution which I advise you to arrange straightaway with every one: each one selling privately his quota, the inheritors having no more to do with it, so long as this kind of purchase is not considered illegal in Belgium, something which would amaze me.
3. I am inclined to the view that the novitiate of the priests and brothers should remain in Tilburg with Father Reyn and yourself. We would set the Petite Oeuvre and the administration of the Annals in Antwerp. Fr. Bontemps will be Superior of the house; Fr. Barral would, under his direction, or, more correctly, under you, look after the Annals, and Fr. Hartzler would be in charge of the Petite Oeuvre. And yourself, besides being Superior at Tilburg, you will be Provincial to our houses in the north, that is to say you will have overall responsibility for all these undertakings. You will decide who among those in Tilburg you will send to Antwerp either as teachers or as office workers. Fr. Bontemps could at the same time be bursar, but he would need someone to help him. Have you a brother or a priest who would be suitable for him? Let Fr. Rochard go (or Rochart, unclear).

I wish to thank you appreciatively for your comments; they are very worthwhile for me. I shall try to remedy the situation which you report to me from the Rome house. If Mr. de Mendoza goes there, I hope that all will go well in keeping with his wishes. Fr. Jouët was very pleased with him; he made a good impression on him. He could be allowed, if things were not getting any better, to do his own cooking in keeping with his own tastes, or rather what his stomach preferred. I myself in the event of having to stay in Rome for sometime could not, despite the best will in the world, take to their cooking. I look forward with pleasure to seeing Mr. de Mendoza. To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Procurator, Rome.

Issoudun, February 9, 1886

Dear Father,

Mr. de Mendoza has returned to Paris and expresses the wish to join us. He is very pleased with Rome and the house, but there were two things which upset him: disgusting cooking and quite evident dirty grubbiness in the house. He would like to see better prepared cooking and the house better looked after. He finds the untidiness more or less everywhere, but particularly so in the kitchen where nobody is in charge, or, more correctly, where everyone is in charge. Could you not get a proper cook who would prepare things well, placing meals on the table in such a way that they could be eaten with relish? The French, like Mr. de Mendoza, could never become accustomed to your fare. I have experienced it for myself as has Fr. Vaudon. There wouldn't be much more money needed to spend on making the food better. Set about, my friend, on presenting a better impression of the house through attention to tidiness and good appearance. You have no idea how visitors quickly spot these things and go away badly impressed.

Again Mr. de Mendoza observed that the brothers, the helpers and the scholastics were very dirty, badly dressed, dishevelled. It seems that most of them have only one change of clothes and that if there is a pressing need for it to be mended or cleaned it is a requirement that the wearer either stays in bed or shuts himself up in his room. This is not acceptable: there has to be a change of clothes. Fr. Vaudon agrees with all these observations (on the part of de Mendoza). Remedy all this, Father. Economies are only made by properly doing things... See to it then that all these observed, pointed out, drawbacks are made to disappear promptly. We are the first most concerned party. Your priestly personnel is inadequate for all your undertakings; that's undeniable. Let me know, then, those men who could be helpful to you, and I shall do my best to give them to you since things cannot go on like this any longer.

Mr. de Mendoza is sure to come to Issoudun to meet me. He would like to make his novitiate in Rome. Can I assure him that you will obtain this permission for him from the Holy See? I appreciate that he would not stay in Tilburg; I wouldn't, myself, advise him to go there.

Brother Jullien asks me for different permissions in regard to his property and his mother. Read the letter I have written to him.

L 18860210

Issoudun, February 10, 1886

Dear Father,

1. I appreciate that for the time being the name of province cannot, in the strict terms of the word, be applicable to our northern houses while the persecution still goes on in France. But nothing, while awaiting more favourable times, comes in the way of granting you the rights and authority of a Provincial or, perhaps better, Visitor, so long as the Superiors of these different houses are aware that there is an authority above them.

2. I do not see a need for us to come together in Paris, wasting more time and money on the journey. You mention, my friend, that the purpose of this meeting would be to discuss the work to be set up in Antwerp and the placing of personnel there. But the work has already been agreed on in the memorandum you presented to me which I forwarded to Fr. Jouët and was read by Cardinal Simeoni. It is a seminary for the works of our Society. It was with this understanding that the Cardinal wrote to the Archbishop of Malines and which we discussed ourselves when pointing out all the advantages of an Antwerp foundation. We cannot, then, go back on this agreement which appears to be quite adequately brought out in the memorandum. The memorandum adds that the administration of the Annals would be moved to Antwerp because of the positive advantages which would result from this for Belgium. This is still the case.

3. There only remains the novitiate. Its natural location has to be Tilburg since in going to Antwerp we continue, nevertheless, with the intention to keep on this dear Dutch house which has already, and will continue to do so, provided great service to us. You have spoken of leaving in Tilburg a preparatory undertaking for the Sacred Heart Petite Oeuvre to sort out the youngsters, observe them and be satisfied about their vocation. This is very good; everybody would agree with this. But this cannot be undertaken until next year with new youngsters other than those you have presently with you who will all be going to Antwerp except, perhaps, some of them.

4. Personnel. You complain that you are up to your eyes in work, that it is quite impossible for you to deal from the front with all the undertakings which have been built up in Tilburg, that it is imperative that they be shared, that the direction of the Antwerp house is beyond your resources because of the responsibilities and the close involvement which one must have with the place, and that being in charge of the novitiate, a role of special importance, is enough on its own for you. Well then, Father, stay always in charge of the novitiate, which is the life-blood of our Society, since the Lord has granted you the qualities to run it, and at the same time you will have the title of Visitor to the Antwerp house with all the authority associated with this responsibility, or better those of a Provincial without having the name. Fr. Reyn will stay with you as socius and, under your authority, be responsible for the lay brothers – unless you consider that there might be real advantages in setting up their (the lay brothers) novitiate at Antwerp because of the ground to be nurtured and the work there. You will have another priest with you and the lay brothers needed for the running of the house. As for personnel at Antwerp, I shall put forward Fr. Bontemps as Superior. If he has his faults, and who hasn't?, he has also splendid qualities. He is pious, well educated, intelligent, prudent, judicious, a good administrator who loves the Society and its undertakings. For the rest you would be on hand, overseeing his administration and giving him your advice. (Would you have someone else in mind?)

Fr. Hartzler would remain, as at Tilburg, in charge of the Petite Oeuvre, with his teachers. Fr. Barral would be in charge of the Belgian, Dutch and German Annals under your supervision and that of Fr. Bontemps since he cannot be allowed to do what he would like. You will leave in the Annals' office all who are already there. You will make some lay brothers available for the maintenance of the house. You will have Fathers Merg, Peeters, and Rousel helping out Fr. Bontemps if you do not need them. You will let us know the one who should be the Superior's First Assistant.

Every month there will be a Council meeting which you will preside over and of which you will be in charge. I think that things could be so arranged. Fr. Guyot, when I saw him in Paris, was so persuaded, and Fr. Morisseau also. Meanwhile, my friend, let me have your views, give me your suggestions and we shall adopt them if there is a place for them.

Once again, I do not see how a meeting in Paris would lead to anything more than this (the foregoing).

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Look after the activists (helpers) and do your best. I am sending you, confidentially, a letter from a Utrecht lady. It could, perhaps, be helpful to you. Go and see her.

Issoudun, February 12, 1886

Dear Father,

1. You did very well to discuss the Antwerp project with the Bishop of Bois-le-Duc.
2. Your description of Fr. Barral is realistic.

3. I put forward, it is true, Fr. Bontemps as Superior of the Antwerp house. But if you can find someone else who is more suitable, I am quite willing to accept him. What then would be your suggestions concerning personnel, and who would make for less problems, and by that very fact more assurance?

4. If you kept Fr. Barral at Tilburg, together with the office for the Dutch and German Annals, and gave only the office of the Belgian Annals to Antwerp under the direction of Fr. Bontemps, the latter would get on just as well, with your advice and support, as Fr. Barral, and be more prudent. What do you think? With this arrangement you might, perhaps, move the novitiate of the lay brothers to Antwerp, with Fr. Reyn as director and socius to Fr. Bontemps? If this is also your view, it may well be that permission should be sought from Rome for the novitiate to the extent that you will not continue to be considered, in effect, the effective Director.

5. I do not see the point in its being required that those who will be responsible for the Belgium subscriptions should proceed straightaway to Antwerp before work and personnel are organized. Fr. Barral is here presenting the thin end of the wedge. My advice would be that the Antwerp house should first be set up and made to function, and that afterwards subscriptions should be attended to since we have the whole year for that.

6. Nothing will be rushed and we shall act in an effective manner. During this time we shall get, so I hope, a word of approval from the Holy Father and, perhaps, a subscription. I shall deal with Fr. Jouët about this. Moving too quickly we could compromise everything.

7. I don't really believe that a meeting in Paris would be very helpful and lead on to something important. It will not add those we haven't got, and will not provide to those we have, the qualities which they lack. Furthermore, all our priests and young men would be overwhelmed with gossip, sifting, divulging it, and causing problems and indecisiveness in our decisions. Moreover, Fr. Guyot doesn't any longer think of anything except his health, and who keeps a good table, who lives a good, comfortable, life, which (of course) scandalizes our young confrères. Since it is only yourself who can come to this meeting, which Fr. Barral must stay away from if you think he is indispensable to your requirements, come then straightaway to Issoudun.

The reference is to an illustrated book on the Sacred Heart, the Issoudun photographer, E. Guillon, due to take the snapshots, the basilica having been closed to worship since November 1880.

3. You have made reference to a chapter which would be added to the book on the Sacred Heart, the second volume in the series: The Sacred Heart in arts and letters... (in the series entitled: Library of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart). I have come across a book which could be very helpful to you both for this chapter and for the illustrations, entitled: "The images of the Sacred Heart from the perspectives of History and Art" by Count de Glimouard de Saint-Laure, one volume in 8°, price 5 francs (about 16 euros).

Vaudon was responsible for the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and MSC publications, he and Fr. Delaporte concerned with this since their MSC professions, January, February 1886.

The office is that of the national body, 6 rue de Furstenberg, Paris. There is already available the Sacred Heart in Literature by Fr. Desjardins, SJ, and Fr. Dufau, SJ.

The latter's Treasury of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, Brussels, 1870, ran to eight volumes, each about 300 pages.

Issoudun, February 13, 1886

Dear Father,

The very Rev. Fr. Superior fully approves of the ordination of Brothers Linckens and Offermans and the taking of the habit by Mr. Courtil.

I am about to leave for Meunet (a few kilometres outside Issoudun) where perpetual adoration is due to take place tomorrow. It is for this reason that I cannot write a more lengthy letter.

Wholly yours in SS Corde Jesu,

Jean-François Morisseau, MSC.

Herbert Linckens, born January 29 1861, Wijné, Holland, was ordained the next month, March 20, 1886, at Bois-le-Duc. He taught at Tilburg and Antwerp, saw to the preparation of the Hilltrup house in Holland from 1896 to 1897; on the first of September, 1887, he became Provincial of the German (Northern) Province. He travelled widely as official Visitor for the General Administration, that of Meyer, between 1904 and 1910. In 1911 he became one of Meyer's Assistants in Rome and travelled extensively before taking over the running of the Australian Province, effective immediately before and during the First World War. He died at Hilltrup, October 5, 1922. For Linckens in Australia see, in extenso, Twohig, Late But Not Too Late. Offermans left the Society in 1903, dying eight years later while parish priest of Roux, Belgium.

Chevalier's accompanying letter to Piperon on the same date as that from Morisseau above, now follows.

Dear Father,

1. Yes, the Antwerp Petite Oeuvre relates to all the undertakings of our Society, but it will prepare in particular for the Missions those who have the vocation.
2. You propose to split up immediately the Tilburg Petite Oeuvre by placing the top classes at Antwerp with those from Issoudun. I do not see this as being very practical, at least for the time being. We are sending our six most intelligent youngsters from Issoudun to Paris. Those who remain have advanced very little, and before the month of October I cannot see ourselves as being able to send you any more! Besides, for health reasons, do you think that it would be prudent to send you, over several years, to Antwerp and then Holland, where the climate is much the same, that is to say cold and wet, young men accustomed to a softer, more constant climate? Would we not have good reason to fear serious consequences from this undertaking? Having spent two or three years in Antwerp, they would be required to go to Tilburg for their novitiate where the climate is much the same. Would it not be wiser to set up in Issoudun, or another house in France, the two or three upper classes of our different Petites Oeuvres? This issue needs to be considered before any precipitate decision is taken which we might, perhaps, have regrets about and might be necessary to reconsider. That's why I thought that, within a year or two, the whole Tilburg Petite Oeuvre would be at Antwerp only. The great majority of these youngsters are from these countries (Belgium, Holland) and accustomed to the food and climate. For them there are the advantages without the inconveniences. During this time we could consider the situation and advise. To avoid any additional development of your Petite Oeuvre, I see nothing inopportune having your preparatory school likewise at Antwerp. If you were to keep it on in Tilburg you would again need a chapel, a refectory, and separate administration for these youngsters, all of which would add problems rather than diminish them. I find it, then, more reasonable, advantageous and economical that the whole of your Petite Oeuvre should be at Antwerp for the time being.
3. If you were to keep on the lay brothers' novitiate at Tilburg I think that would be best. First of all we need Rome's permission. Moreover, in Tilburg they would be, like the others, in your charge. They would have your counselling, lectures, or, at the very least, your general direction. Fr. Merg or Brother Offermans would replace Fr. Reyn who would be in Antwerp as Fr. Bontemps' socius. You will say: "But at Tilburg there is a lack of ground to keep them occupied!" What is stopping you from renting a field nearby if you think it necessary? In any event, having neither a Petite Oeuvre or a scholasticate you will be much more free. Moreover, my friend, the lay brothers are not meant to be farmers. What you must make them aware of before anything else are the roles they will carry out one day in our houses, such as cooks, cobblers, tailors, painters, iron-workers, masons, etc., etc. In general these young men don't know how to do anything if one is to go by those you have sent to Issoudun and Paris. They don't even know how to hang a coat, do laundry, look after the infirmary, make a bed, etc. As for cooking, it is woeful. They leave (from their training) with an ignorance and awkwardness which is unacceptable. Besides, they are depressingly slow in what they do, lacking orderliness and tidiness. In a word they lack training for this kind of work. Fr. Reyn, left to himself, lacks experience and he is too young. It is imperative, then, that they are aware you are supervising them. You might send to Antwerp those who have made vows, and they will have something to keep them occupied, and Fr. Reyn will continue to look after them. The other advantage which I would find in this is that at Tilburg, as in Antwerp, there is only one chapel, one refectory, one leadership. In any event if, within one or two years, we can see that there are inconveniences in what I propose, we can return to your plan. Moreover, for the time being, leaving at Tilburg the two novitiates and only keeping at Antwerp the Petite Oeuvre, we avoid much bigger buildings, the exercise of control becomes easier, and decisions don't have to be split.

4. Meanwhile, if there are candidates, and you consider it opportune to open a little college replacing the Petite Oeuvre for the youngsters of Tilburg, you will judge for yourself. As for any purchasing and building to be carried out, you should get involved immediately. You will consider a site for the priests and brothers and what is needed for the upkeep of the house and have in mind a dormitory, study hall, recreation hall, etc., for the Petite Oeuvre, a chapel, refectory for everyone, a kitchen, etc. You will accommodate to these different uses the existing buildings as much as possible, and, afterwards you will see about building what is required. You will draw up a plan with the cost of all these undertakings which you will submit to me as soon as possible. I don't believe we can set ourselves up in Antwerp before Easter. Let me know what you think of all this (the foregoing).

Dear Father,

Tell Fr. Guyot that I shall do my best to arrive in Paris on Thursday at 4.30pm to preside at the ceremony for our dearly loved Fr. Delaporte. If I cannot be in Paris on the Friday, contrary to my expectations, Fr. Bontemps, in the absence of Fr. Guyot, will accept our venerated confrère's vows. On Thursday evening or Friday I shall be seeing Mr. de Mendonza. Fr. Guyot might well invite him to dine with us Friday, mid-day, together with his friend Fr. Pourtier. I shall chat with him then. Thanks for the good news you share with me about Fr. Moreau.

I am forwarding a letter to you from a nice young man. We are of the view that you should accept him in the novitiate. I shall be in Paris at 4.30 on Thursday afternoon to preside over Fr. Delaporte's ceremony of vows on Friday morning. If it is possible for you, and consider it worthwhile, try and be there and we can discuss matters. I am returning on Friday evening at 7.40.

Issoudun, February 21, 1886

Dear Father,

I got your letter. Thank you. I appreciate all the advantages that would accrue in having a foundation in Marino, setting up there either a novitiate or apostolic school, as well as its being a pleasant location in holiday time for those living (studying) in Rome. If the municipality would rent the whole college to us yearly, for 700 francs (about 2,240 euros), this would not be dear, and one could do with it as one wished. But there has to be a lease for 3 or 6 years with the option of purchase if we so wished, the price agreed in advance. Assess the situation and see what can be done.

Marino, like all the towns of Latium, shared Rome's civic rights, remaining, however, distinct municipal towns.

I share your views, dear Father, but where can we find a priest who knows Italian whom we can put in charge at Marino during the holidays, and thereafter leave him there while awaiting for one or two others to join him? A novitiate for Italy would, so it seems to me, be well situated at Marino, and a preparatory school for the Petite Oeuvre. Look into it, and do your best.

I have just come from dear Fr. Delaporte's profession in Paris. He is delighted and wishes to thank you most warmly for the happiness you have brought to him. Your charges would do well to send him a little congratulatory letter.

I met Mr. de Mendonza also on this visit. He is completely disillusioned. His hesitations draw against him his friend and adviser Fr. Pourtier. What disturbed him, while in Rome (this is confidential), was his consulting the Bishop of Autun who advised him to stay in the world, telling him that he was too old to aspire to the priesthood and go through. "The problem with the cooking, clothes, etc.," so he informed me, "is not a serious issue for me. The real reason is what Bishop Perraud said to me; I didn't dare say it to you." Then he feared he might be a burden on the Society if he were not to go through successfully... I comforted him. He has decided to go back to Rome. Meanwhile he seemed scrupulous to me, dream-like, tired in spirit. I believe him to be a lovely character, naturally upright, of delicate feeling. I spoke to Fr. Piperon about the Antwerp operation. I understand that the Archbishop of Malines gave only a verbal answer.

Dear Father Barral,

I read your memorandum and that of the architect. Perhaps in the future the entrance to the house and the buildings will both be on the side of the tram. But as of now the concern is about reinforcing the existing buildings in the best possible manner so that the youngsters from the Tilburg Petite Oeuvre can be sent there, at least in some numbers, together with the fathers and brothers who are going there; then we shall have time to re-assess. Do not any longer send so many issues of your Annals to Issoudun; this is pointless expense. Two copies of each issue would be enough for everybody.

Dear Father,

1. I am sending you the first copies of the cheaper edition of "Our Lady of the Sacred Heart". The second volume on the Sacred Heart is being printed at the present moment. Revise the parts which occur to you as needing modification. Put the section on Liberalism in relationship with your views and those of the Encyclical Immortale (Dei) if you do note any divergence and hurry up sending your changes on to me.
2. The Antwerp house has been purchased. We must pay 70,000 francs for it this coming January, and straightaway we must take over old buildings and build anew whatever is considered necessary. For this reason our Dutch confrères want to organize a subscription list in Belgium, Holland, and only in Germany, among the grand, well-to-do families of these countries. Given the support shown to them, they are in expectation of appreciable success. But they would like, in order to bring this about, the Holy Father to do more or less what is said in this letter of Fr. Barral's. The contribution of the Holy Father would obviously be purely nominal; he would contribute nothing; it's ourselves who would (financially) meet his involvement. See if it is possible to obtain this important document within a short time.

Issoudun, February 26, 1886

Dear Father,

1. I read with great interest your memorandum. I wrote to Fr. Jouët immediately requesting him to get the letters of approval for the subscriptions from the Pope and Cardinal Simeoni as soon as possible, a contribution from Leo XIII, and the transfer to Antwerp of the lay brothers' novitiate.
2. I am not at all in favour of your wooden buildings; it is inconveniently provisional and too dear. Take over immediately the existing buildings. Make the left of the main building into a dormitory. If you deem it appropriate you put up there as many brothers and youngsters as you can manage, and then you can carry on with your new buildings according to an agreed estimate. And once these buildings are habitable you will bring your work to an end. Despite the activity being put into it, don't delude yourself: you will not be able to go in there for 18 months, on the supposition that you are starting work straightaway.

3. I very much favour your placing of the new buildings beside the tramway.

4. I also really favour that you go, one or other from among you, and set yourselves up immediately in Antwerp to arrange the subscriptions and supervise the take-over activities, but not with Fr. Tréand as Superior, not even provisionally so. I have given you my reasons; there is no point in saying it again. You are well aware that I put him forward with Fr. Guyot to be your second (counsellor) for the Antwerp foundation. I do not see any other likely combination.

5. In general, my friend, there are complaints that you are too harsh on your novices, that you are not sufficiently tactful, discourage them too quickly, right from the beginning, that you make them focus only on the difficulties of the religious life, the sacrifices it demands, etc., and that for those who come from the world, and are of a certain age, or who have lived in a more middle class environment, more agreeable and comfortable, you do not make for, or contribute towards, a smooth, pleasant, transition which would prepare them little by little for a detachment and sacrifice. The Novice Master is a doctor; he must study character and temperament and should offer strong, heavy, medicine only to those he has delicately prepared to receive it readily and digest it. Without this (the immediate foregoing) there will be an ill-at-ease situation, boredom and departure. There are certain types who need to be treated with delicacy, careful handling and care. One must be on the alert from the beginning, close one's eyes to certain things which of themselves will be self-correcting, make certain concessions, and offer some softer approaches which the individuals would not want, as of themselves, to avail of very long. Have consideration for priests, especially those of a certain age; there are exercises from which you should exempt them such as the recitation of verses from Sacred Scripture and such-like things.

Do not forget, my friend, that we are Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, and that our spirit should be one of sweetness, charity (kindness), piety, feeling, and being greatly merciful. We shall form souls better and draw them more to us by goodness rather than by inflexible severity. Discite a me qui mitis sum et humilis corde. (Come to me for I am meek and humble of heart.)

Dear Father,

1. I am not at all surprised by what has happened to you with regard to your Antwerp house. You have acted, one and all, like children, in making the whole world aware of your building plans and making it publicly known where exactly you wanted to put your new chapel later. You can well appreciate that the secret was not kept; there were too many who knew about it; the parish priests of the town were bound to be told, and from them complaints went to the Bishop. Try then to be prudent and discreet; never say anything of a serious nature, or about the General Administration, to your young men. The young are not discreet, no more than Fr. Barral who is totally lacking in judgment.

2. It is not for Fr. Maillard to replace himself. None of the three you name is suitable to replace you in Antwerp. Fr. Bontemps will be available to you when you need him. I shall replace him at Saint Charles with Fr. Vaudon. I see him (Bontemps) as the only one who would do well at Antwerp, or at least cause less harm than the others.(!)

3. When is the retreat taking place in Brussels, and for how many days? Fr. Bontemps, perhaps, could give it; he would be more suitable than Fr. Chatelat.

4. I haven't had a reply yet from Fr. Jouët about the Antwerp issues and the novitiate.

The proposal by the Bishop of Bourbon Island is unacceptable. What are we going to do with Fr. Martin? He is half a fool, full of himself. He wouldn't stay in the novitiate. Do not take care or responsibility for someone like that. Let him get involved with his Bishop. The Bishop, in fact, has believed it his duty to place an interdict on him. Issoudun, March 7, 1886

Dear Father,

1. I am sending back to you the letter you sent to me (a letter written by Jouët on March 3, 1886, who requested its return). I thank you most wholeheartedly. I believe that the Devil does his best to create trouble where the deepest peace should be expected. One way or the other there is the wish to do good, a sincere love of the truth and blind obedience to the Holy See's wishes and the requirements of the Sacred Congregations. Assuredly, I believe that we have provided unequivocal proof; it was our duty. The issue of your preoccupations and your painful concern cannot be anything other than the circumstance of a misunderstanding which must necessarily be cleared up since, otherwise, the problem would continue.
2. I would ask you, then, my friend, to clarify on a separate sheet of paper, everything you think is incorrect. Set out very clearly that which is permitted and that which is forbidden as regards indulgences. On this issue one must follow the instructions (guidelines). Once your work is done, I shall let you have our comments, if required, in order to clarify matters. Once agreement has been satisfactorily reached about the truth of the matter, and this is all we want, everything will go ahead in unison. I do not recall any longer your comments on Indulgences or the rest; I didn't keep your letter because you asked that it be returned. It seems to me, however, that in the matter of indulgences, as in everything else, I took account of what you said to me.
3. The volume on the Sacred Heart is being printed at this moment. Do not forget to send me as soon as possible your corrections, as regards Liberalism and other issues, because things would be printed such as they are and it would be regrettable if changes were not made (where needed). When you write to me, I leave everything in order to answer you immediately. Why don't you do the same no matter how occupied you are, and you are certainly not as busy as I am?
4. Volume One of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, which has just come out, certainly does not have anything opposed to your ideas. (Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, introduction by Fr. Delaporte, Paris, Retaux-Bray, 1886. In 18°, pages VI-451.) You can, then, have it translated into Italian if you think it opportune, and get it circulated. You could make it more complete by adding on the history of the Association and of Indulgences which is a drawback in it. It really is a big omission.
5. The Little Month of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is being printed at the Chartreuse of Notre Dame des Piés, Montreuil-sur-Mer (Pas de Calais). Write to Rev. Fr. Duquat, in charge of the printing office, asking him to send you a proof. It looks as if time is running out if we want to have it for the month of Mary since he is very held up. All your corrections will be taken into consideration. It is stated expressly on the cover that you are the author. I never had any intention of taking this credit from you. I have been told that you are creating difficulties about its being printed in France by us because you want to hold on to your rights as with your Month of Purgatory which you did not want us to publish in France. I cannot go along with this pretentiousness on your part which is contrary to all religious procedures. I know you very well and am aware that the religious spirit is deeply rooted in you. Moreover, I never found you susceptible to vainglory or vanity, since for quite some time you have made it your motto: Ama nescire et pro nihilo reputari. (Love to be unknown and to count for nothing.)

6. Our good confrères in Spain and Holland think, in effect, that Rome has nothing else to do except concern itself with their affairs, and should act as quickly as they think it should. I fully agree with you: when trying to walk too quickly in Rome one easily gets a fall. If you would like more copies of the new book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, they can be sent on to you.

Issoudun, March 9, 1886

Dear Father,

1. Who then is "this intelligent and serious confrère" whom you are looking for in the Tilburg house and who appears "indispensable" in your view? I cannot give you what I haven't got. You have Fr. Merg with you, with whom you are very pleased. As well you have Fr. Reyn, whom you praise most fulsomely and whom you would like to have for still quite some time, if I am to judge from a letter which Fr. Jouët wrote to me.

This is what he wrote to me: "I am returning the memorandum to you; I wholly share your view. What is being sought provisionally is pointless expense. I shall do my best about what is being looked for in the letters, but to be frank we are abusing (the system) a little, and especially so when we are too demanding when trying to get what we want, and this makes a bad impression here. It is the circumstances which must be weighed up. Already in the case of Cardinal Simeoni's letter to the Archbishop of Malines, it was so urgent, so urgent, that it was more forced out than obtained (in the proper, smooth, procedures). When one has recourse to Rome, especially in matters of such import, one must learn to wait, and even then one is not certain of success."

The conclusion to be drawn from all this, dear friend, is that of leaving the novitiate at Tilburg, most likely for quite some time to come. Consequently, you will keep Fr. Reyn and you will no longer be in an awkward situation. You can see how inevitably there has to be a return to my proposal, that purely and simply of having the Tilburg Petite Oeuvre moved to Antwerp, something which will not stop you from taking in some new youngsters at Tilburg who would need to be looked at and whose vocation would need to be assessed. All your efforts, then, should be focused on the novitiate which needs to be developed and well directed with gentle smoothness and wisdom according to the spirit of our Constitutions.

You will pick some solid and pious brothers for Antwerp who have made their vows, know Flemish and Dutch, or at least one or the other, to help interpret for Fr. Bontemps who should soon come to know the language. Do not exaggerate the problems.

At Antwerp, then, we can only have the Petite Oeuvre and the Annals' office for the time being under your charge and supervision; and this situation could last a long time. It was always my way of thinking since I foresaw the hold up in Rome, knowing what happened with regard to the novitiate in Spain. One must necessarily experience all this and things will not get any worse (after that!). The less of a variety of undertakings in a house, the better things go ahead; such is my conviction.

2. As for your fund-raising, you have to undertake it without letters from Rome or Papal support. The Sacred Heart will bless your undertaking just the same. Your subscription plan seems good to me. Nevertheless, if you put your shares at 500 francs instead of a thousand (roughly 1,600 euros as against 3,200 euro), they would be more affordable; this would not hold back people who would like to have some from taking a certain number; one should double the figure, therefore, having 400 in place of 200, but reimbursing in 20 years seems too drawn out to me. I would favour 10 years. Meanwhile, do what you think best.

3. Fr. Bontemps – let me know as soon as possible when you want Fr. Bontemps to be in residence at Antwerp. I need to know this in order to replace him – he will be available straightaway if you wish, or at Easter or later if you prefer.

4. Yes, one must necessarily put off any work on the cloister. Your reasons for this now have always been my own. By waiting nothing is placed at risk. My thinking, then, would be to make use at first of all the buildings which are there and take them over. I am always persuaded that the first floor of the large house can be made into a dormitory. And by breaking down some partitions in several first-storey rooms, it should again be fairly easy to make one or two dormitories. And you do not have to accommodate the Petite Oeuvre youngsters because the brothers' novitiate stays on at Tilburg. Meanwhile if, with all the takeovers, you haven't enough room you could begin to build in keeping with what you have suggested, and which you will complete with respect to your needs. Nevertheless, I am drawn to think that all the existing buildings, put to use intelligently, will suffice for the time being. All the buildings beside Rue Terloo are big and spacious. They provide space for your boys' classes and studies since you do not have to concern yourself with needed space for the lay brothers (who are not coming there). Draw up plans and an estimate of all I have mentioned to you and you will see for yourself that there's no need to build anything new straightaway.

2. Yes, act on the supposition that the Petite Oeuvre will only be at Antwerp (later we shall see), together with the office for the Belgium Annals. This is enough for the time being. Since you haven't a building large enough for the Petite Oeuvre, commence a building on the right which you mention and which you will complete in keeping with your needs.

Issoudun, March 19, 1886

Dear Father,

1. I am forwarding you the letter for the Bishop of Bois-le-Duc.
2. I don't understand very much with regard to your new building plans. Where are they (the buildings) to be sited? Is it beside the tramlines opposite the present entrance? There is nothing to inform me about this. In any event, this plan is pointless since it is not on this side that you should be building. Why on the ground-floor plan, number B, are the kitchen area and passage to the kitchen jutting out over the rest of the building? This is a disgrace. It's a plan relating to the ground and in keeping with it which is to be desired. Consequently, it is impossible for me to take responsibility for it, its placement and everything else.
3. It occurs to me that you have too many basements under your planned house. What are you going to do about it?
4. Whatever the architect has to say for himself, I find that your storeys are much too high. I believe that in studying more attentively this plan, there are economies to be made either in the basements or with the height-scale of the storeys. The style of the building greatly pleases me.
5. The price at 16 hundred francs (about 5,120 euros) for the acquisition of the old house, or rather the old houses, does not seem to be excessive. I even find it rather minimal.

6. Issoudun, March 20, 1886

Dear Fr. Barral,

1. In principle the designs and colours of the coloured depictions are satisfactory, but the figures leave a lot to be desired. Those of St. Joseph and Our Lady are frightful, St. Joseph especially.
2. I would like the Child Jesus in the old model presentation to be raised above the clouds and brought near to the left hand or left side of the Holy Virgin. The Congregation of the Holy Office wants it to be like this; with this change, this presentation can be accepted for public worship.
3. The crowns for the Virgin and Child Jesus in the new model are heavy and graceless. Moreover, and this is a basic shortcoming, the Infant Jesus' left hand, in place of opening the apparel covering his chest, in order to make available his heart, so that it can be taken hold of by his mother, himself presents his heart; this is ridiculous! Tell the artist then to copy for the presentation... you know who is ... (gaps here in Chevalier's text). Be good enough to give me another proof.

Dear Father,

1. You do not inform me if you actually want to build a wing linking the present occupied house with the houses overlooking rue Terloo! You always give half an answer to requests; because of this the letters are never ending. If you think it is more a need to build straightaway on the side of the enclosure, do so; but let me clearly know what you want to do. I give you full permission to carry out what you judge to be the right thing, having had the advice of competent people in Antwerp. If, therefore, the Archbishop of Malines pays heed to the request which some wish to present to him, see what you can do for the best.
2. It would be a good thing if the Averbode priests kept quiet.
3. I take delight in the ordination of our dear confrères. It is pointless for Fr. Bontemps to go to Tilburg. Arrange to meet him at Antwerp at the end of the retreat since he needs to return to Paris.

Dear Father,

I thank you for all the documents you have sent on to me.

1. I am sending back to you the section about the information needed for Fr. Navarre's vicariate. You know this as well as I do; reply in my name and expedite this issue.

2. Engage yourself with the approval of the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and let it be hurried up.

3. I received the document and decree about the setting-up of the St. Joseph, Friend of the Sacred Heart Association. This is very good and we shall make reference to it in our May Annals because it is too late for inclusion in that of April. It is likely that we shall be sent on names. Is this Association formula a requirement or facultative like that of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart?

4. I received Leo XIII's encyclical together with the Moniteur articles. I haven't the time to look in depth at the article on Liberalism. Take responsibility yourself for these adjustments as you did for those dealing with Our Lady of the Sacred Heart indulgences and send them on to me. The printing will not take place before 15 days or three weeks.

5. I would be of the same mind as you in setting out the history of the changes with respect to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart since this issue is very much intertwined with the feelings of the faithful. Again look into this matter and you will let me know about it. What is said about indulgences is excellent, being more clear and precise than what I put in my book.

6. Fr. Robinet is still waiting for the indult authorizing him to enter the novitiate, and as you know he was elsewhere 20 years ago. In any event, I sent all his details on to you. Get going on this straightaway.

7. I enclose a letter from Fr. Navarre which includes interesting details which will help you in answering questions from Propaganda. Fr. Verjus and Brother Joseph (De Santis) have left for Yule Island.

2. Let Fr. Barral know quite clearly that the German Annals' office will stay in Tilburg. It would, perhaps, be better if he also stayed with you and didn't go near Antwerp. Fr. Bontemps could easily look after the Belgian Annals and things would go on from there not at all badly.

3. As for the scholasticate, it has to be considered if it would not be still better to have it at Tilburg rather than Antwerp. Think about this. As for professional personnel, we must wait until our young men in Paris have passed their examinations and this will be in July.

To Father Charles Piperon, MSC, Tilburg.

Issoudun, April 16, 1886

Dear Father Piperon,

Having given it thought and prayed, here is my advice in association with Fr. Morisseau. From the disciplinary point of view, external relations and prestige, it occurs to me as being unthinkable that the Antwerp house should not have its own proper Superior. You could well spend weeks away because of your work, or being laid-up, without visiting the Antwerp house. What would happen, then, to the exercise of authority? It's either questioned or it's not taken into consideration any longer. Bad feelings, problems, divisions will not take long to make an appearance.

Let Fr. Bontemps become purely and simply local Superior to oversee observance of the Rule and the ordinary day-to-day life, but let it be made clear to him: 1, that you have the complete authority of a provincial over the house and its activities, even though you do not have as yet the official title (Provincial); 2, that he cannot change anything nor introduce or undertake anything, outside normal day-to-day issues, without your approval; 3, that, with respect to him, you will be his major Superior invested with all my rights; 4, that the Petite Oeuvre will have its own appropriate autonomy and special direction in which he cannot self-regulate things or change anything without your special permission. As local Superior he will give Fr. Hartzler and the teachers normal permission to go into the city, go to the parlour, be exempted from a religious exercise, arrange for goods to be brought in and such like. No pupil can be accepted or sent away without your being consulted. He will be part of the Petite Oeuvre's Council (discussion) meetings which you will take charge of whenever you judge it opportune to have one.

5. You will preside also over the house Council meeting which you will be responsible for even though you will be moving to Antwerp. As for the administration of the Dutch and German Annals, leave it where it is in Tilburg under Fr. Barral's control, who will be living with you under your direction and supervision; in this way we shall be avoiding much which could be inconvenient. Fr. Barral will go and visit the Antwerp house when you think it opportune; he will be completely subject to you. The Belgian Annals, their forwarding and the correspondence entailed will be looked after from Antwerp under Fr. Bontemps' direction. You will make someone available to help him. The Annals could be sent out from Tilburg wrapped and ready to be posted either from the place itself or where you presently post them. In this way I think things will go ahead quite well. I am putting forward this plan to you before presenting it to Fr. Bontemps so that you can look at it. I shall not be sending it on to Fr. Bontemps until after your approval, and whatever changes and improvements will be added to it.

Issoudun, April 24, 1886

Dear Father,

I sent on to Fr. Bontemps the conditions laid down for the exercise of his Superiorship at Antwerp, of which you have a copy. It is virtually nominal rather than effective since he cannot undertake anything of any importance, either changing or introducing anything without your approval. You remain the real authority in the situation, and that's how it should be. The leadership of the Petite Oeuvre, its personnel, etc., passes him by completely; he must be in dependence on you. You will only have him as a member of the Petite Oeuvre's Council, his role limited to that of overseeing general discipline in your absence, seeing to it that the Rules are kept and giving the usual permission to go into town, visit the parlour, receive and send letters, etc. He will be accountable to you for everything. Write to him forthwith to let him know when you want him to go to Antwerp. As for good Fr. Barral tell him on my behalf that he will remain on in Tilburg under your authority, and will go to Antwerp only when you think it opportune following discussions with Fr. Bontemps. Let him (Barral) well understand also that the Belgian undertakings, the Petite Oeuvre, the Association, the Annals, etc. are in the Control of Fr. Bontemps who himself is in fact subject to your authority.

I have noted that several of the young Passy priests have visiting cards with their names printed at the bottom; this is contrary to our spirit of simplicity and vow of poverty. I categorically forbid it; authorizing it only for the Superiors of each house, never for anybody else. If cards are needed, the local Superior can give permission for a white card on which they will write their names by hand; nothing more. I also categorically forbid gloves. Paris will be damaging for us with respect to the religious spirit.

Dear Father,

1. Fr. Bontemps should be with you by now. I told him, meanwhile, that the community would not be set up until the house was ready to be inhabited, which will take some time yet.
2. I am quite amazed, my friend, that you authorized visiting cards with names printed, and this for simple religious. It is opposed to the spirit of poverty and simplicity which should always be paramount among us. In this way particularism is given head-way, the I preening itself as being quite someone in society; in this manner the virtue of humility, submissiveness, subordination, is directly impugned. The personality is placed to the forefront, and one takes on the airs not of a religious who lives a hidden life and in poverty, but rather as someone special whose amour propre is inflated.

Yes, there are customs in the secular, and indeed religious, world which are deplorable and should be rooted out among us or, ideally, prevented from entering. What has happened? In Paris all our young men have asked for visiting cards, basing their case on Tilburg and Fr. Guyot, without my being informed, or their being approved. I only became aware of all this last week; I formally, then, forbid all our members to have cards except those who are Superiors of houses. If, sometimes, the Superior thinks it necessary that cards be authorized for some who have in his name official relations with the world, these must be white cards without a printed name; the individual will write his name by hand. There you have the sum total of what (I) am allowing. There is a question of principle involved in this before which every other consideration must give way. It is not pointless to tell you that gloves are never allowed among us for whatever reason, and whatever the uses and requirements of the world.

...when I am reproached by Rev. Father Navarre. It has been a great solace for my soul because when there is a problem with a Superior one must always be apprehensive about taking the wrong path. Otherwise, here is the rest of this very paternal letter:

Dear Fr. Couppé,

I received your long letter in which you inform me of all your problems and your concerns for the fate of the sisters in Botany Bay. I sympathize with you about all this. Let us pray for the best and not be discouraged. Let us be patient; the Good Lord will bring good out of evil. Try to do the best you can. Good Fr. Navarre, better informed, will very likely take another course of action with regard to yourself and your undertakings in Sydney. Everything must be done so that the situation is in no way compromised and try, indeed, to safeguard and improve it. Continue to be kind, that is being paternal and prudent. Bring to the fore all the rights to which you can lay claim. It is impossible for the Lord not to come to our aid. You sow through trials and tears, but a day will soon come when you will reap joyously.

Cheerio, Father; my good wishes to all.

Couppé was, as noted above, the first Superior of the Botany Bay, Randwick, community and experienced problems with Fernand Hartzler, asking Fr. Navarre to relieve him as Superior. Navarre sent him to Thursday Island where he spent some time with Fr. Verjus, and then he was sent to New Guinea. On the boat from Sydney taking him to Thursday Island, Couppé wrote his long confidential letter to Piperon at Tilburg, an extract from which is given above.

The following is a further extract from Couppé's letter to Piperon.

At this time Fr. Navarre had not yet sent me away, nor had the departure of Sister Martha for Thursday (Island) taken place: the problems became aggravated after that for the Botany sisters, the brothers, or with reference to Fr. Navarre.

Some days after he (Chevalier) had written to me, he then received more disturbing news but, either because he could not write to me while in Vichy or because he wanted in the first place to send his instructions to Fr. Navarre, I received no letters from him (Chevalier) over three weeks. Be that as it may, Rev. Fr. Navarre was forced to take a decision with respect to me; not wishing me to stay any longer at Sydney in the situation he created for me, he accordingly called me to New Guinea with the intention of sending me shortly to New Britain. In this way my problems would come to an end. If he had acted only to make me suffer morally and physically, I would not have...

May 18, 1886

Dear Father,

1. Yes, indeed, I find that you are too overwhelmed with work to be in a position to send three of your confrères straight away to Antwerp. I would prefer if this did not take place until the month of September when all the buildings would be ready for the setting-up of the Petite Oeuvre since, it goes without saying, it is because of the latter that we are setting ourselves up in Antwerp, and it is that which comes last. And then it's over. I would not have referred to this were it not for the arrival of your last memorandum which was so urgent.

With regard to the latter I should very much like you not to give so much importance to your young men in Tilburg, and that you do not involve them in this way with the general administration of the Society's affairs. I can understand that the Assistants in the Congregation draw up similar memoranda to clarify matters for the Superior General, but not with reference to young priests. You involve them too much in the Society's administration, and you give them a sense of importance which you could well come to regret. This issue should only be considered by yourself alone. Try to make a distinction between specific issues which refer only to the local house and those which relate to matters of overall administrative direction.

2. Do not be weak with Fr. Bontemps; it's you who are responsible for the Antwerp house; it's you who must arrange matters as you think fit having consulted with me, and Fr. Bontemps as local Superior should only concern himself with minor issues. You have always the whip-hand over Antwerp; don't ever give up on this. I have always spoken to Fr. Bontemps with this understanding. Given how little he deals with Fr. Barral, you would quickly be pushed aside by him. It must not happen at any price. Present yourself as in charge right from the beginning and speak with authority. I have written again to Fr. Bontemps asking him to do nothing without your approval and not to act without your approval, having always consulted you.

I beg your pardon for being twice forgetful.

1. Yes, put Mr. de Mendonza beside Fr. Pervilhac. If this can be arranged, it will be perfect. It's a vocation to be taken care of; likewise you will be on hand to look after things. Convey to this good gentleman (de Mendonza) my warmest good wishes.
2. Fr. Guyot would appear to want you to be with him during this noted mission. He would like you to preach at Sainte Marguerite during Lent, 1888.
3. As you say, I believe that a visit to Vichy would do you good.
4. If we can find no editor who would like to take responsibility for at least half the pictures for the large volume on the Sacred Heart, we shall simply do what you say. I am sorry that the Kesler ladies cannot make it to Vichy; the plan to give talks seems impractical to Fr. Guyot.

Dear Father,

1. I discussed with Fr. Guyot the Marino project which would entail having the church with some rooms accompanying it; this is the only practical solution for the moment. He quite wholeheartedly approves. You may, then, deal with the matter straightaway if it's urgent. During the holidays you could use it as a country house, and following the holidays we would make one or two confrères available to you to begin the novitiate.
2. As for the proposal with regard to the Porta Pia, this is unacceptable.
3. I think the same as yourself and Fr. Guyot, likewise; I believe that Fr. Jullien is not yet ready for the missions.
4. As regards Antwerp, it only entails the lay brothers' novitiate; that for the priests and scholastics stays at Tilburg.
5. You did well to correct the proofs for the Messenger of the Sacred Heart with reference to St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, and also as regards our efforts to look for the consecration of the faithful to the Sacred Heart of Jesus.
6. Father Morisseau is a little less ill; there is concern about a softening of the brain. Let us pray.
7. I return to Issoudun tomorrow. I am much improved.

Dear Father,

I asked Fr. Guyot to release you from the Lent (mission) in Moulins, 1889, and allow you to go to Rome for what Bishop Pujol wanted you to do. Wait for his reply. I would like to think that it will be in keeping with your wishes. I am asking good Fathers Guyot and Delaporte, yourself and all our priests in France not to commit themselves to any preaching of missions in Lent, Advent, the Month of Mary, without consulting me beforehand and getting my approval. Aware of the situation as regards our own undertakings, which must be supported before everything else, and taking into consideration the very small number of preachers we have, and the health of each, I shall myself look after the preaching. Otherwise, each one would allow himself to be carried away by his enthusiasm or by his good-heartedness, and from this serious problems could arise both for the administration and the Society.

I do not want you to accept preaching invitations outside Paris... except in the case of a retreat lasting a few days, and the same holds for Fr. Delaporte. Otherwise, being informed in advance about requests, I shall arrange everything myself. Turn down the request from Honfleur. I am pleased with what you say yourself about the illustrated edition.

Issoudun, June 7, 1886

Dear Father,

Our dear Fr. Guyot, who allows himself to become too involved in things by being over-zealous, understands nevertheless that it is impossible to become advantageously involved in a matter which could become harmful to the Society and its works. It has been agreed then that neither himself or others should arrange preaching on their own initiative, and it is I myself who alone will deal with this important matter. He has, however, asked me to let things stand in your case as he arranged them. You will preach at Sainte Marguerite, Paris, I believe, for Lent in 1888, in 1889 at Moulins, and in 1890 in Rome. Or at an Advent ceremony nearer in time; this is an arrangement made with Monsignor Pujol (name uncertain). Could you let me have the list of all the sermons to which you have committed yourself, the place, time, number. Fr. Delaporte will do the same. We have very important undertakings to maintain and we must not dissipate our resources. The supervision of our Annals would be sufficient on its own for you to take on since it is the life-blood of our Society.

2. Are you giving thought to bringing out a prospectus on the book Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and the Sacred Heart; you have there the latest outcome?

3. I am expecting you to preach the retreat to our youngsters in the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre before or after September 8. Fr. Mathevon, Honorary Canon of St. Denis, an ex-Dominican, has asked me to preach, without recompense, the preparatory triduum for the September 8 feast. What is your view about this? I shall await your answer before I write to him. As regards June 21, could Fr. Delaporte be in Issoudun some days beforehand in order to prepare this feast? Speak to him about this.

Issoudun, June 11, 1886

Your Grace,

The Minister, having taken into account our dossier in which most likely he acknowledged our rights, wrote to the Issoudun Municipal Council last week asking if there might not be another way of enlarging the courtyard of the reception room without encroaching on the presbytery annex. The Municipal Council met last Sunday to discuss the matter. Fearing that they might be balked, these gentlemen proved to be more hostile than ever. All of them, with the exception of Mr. de Bonneval who allowed himself to protest and go no further, laid it down "that it was a prerequisite to demolish since without doing so the waiting room would be impractical". This is absurd language. It is, therefore, with this understanding they have set off on their deliberations. I thought it worthwhile that the Minister should be advised about this issue. That is why, Your Grace, I took it upon myself to write the enclosed letter which I present to Your Grace requesting that it be forwarded to His Excellency if he thinks it worthwhile, having made the changes which he will have considered necessary, and having sealed it if he considers it opportune. The outlook of the Minister does not appear to be one of ill-will judging by his intervention with the Municipal Council. There was no mention in the dossier of this second way of extending the courtyard.

I have the honour to be with deep respect Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant and son in C.J.

I have taken note of your preaching schedule. Do not commit yourself in the future to anything without letting me know. I wrote to Fr. Guyot informing him that you will preach in Rome during Lent 1889, and that Fr. Delaporte will replace you at Moulins if necessary. Fr. Guyot will no longer inflict any preaching on you. I have reserved to myself all arrangements on this matter. We shall always arrange these matters between us. Yes, I am counting on you for the Petite Oeuvre retreat since I am insisting that it should be a priest of our Society. Fr. Lanctin, who issued this invitation without letting me know, saw it fail to be met. The less we have to do with Fr. M. the better for us.

I would very much like it if you entered into negotiations with Mr. Didot about the Sacred Heart book. It will be an interesting work. The new book on the Sacred Heart being printed by Desclée will contain fresh chapters which will greatly lend themselves to illustration. Write about this book, the preceding one as well, a serious article for our Annals and the papers. There remains a third section to be undertaken, and which would be the subject-matter of a third volume: The Sacred Heart of Jesus studied in His undertakings, and in which all the works of the Society would receive mention. These three volumes brought together would make up the illustrated new book.

No, the approach of the Messenger is neither candid or correct. Poor human nature!

1. I should like to have replied sooner, but it was impossible. Following my return from Vichy I don't know how I survived. Concerns came at me from all sides. The Month of Mary, the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Catechism, First Communions, Confirmations, parish administration, visitation of the sick, proofs to be corrected, heavy correspondence, etc., etc.
2. Many thanks for your articles. I think the same as you about Fr. Jullien, and I am replying to him in the understanding agreed on.
3. The Brother Benedetti issue is embarrassing. Do the best you can. I approve in advance of whatever you decide about him. Draw inspiration from the circumstances and from a concern for the well-being of this youngster.
4. I am sorry that the answer to the Fr. Navarre question is all the while being adjourned. Thank you for the Antwerp rescript. Then there's the death of the Bishop of Roermond. What is going to happen about the Sittard Association? This would, perhaps, be the moment to act. Like yourself, I do not regret the Paray-le-Monial pilgrimage. Our centenary feast at Issoudun was splendid. I don't know, my friend, what it was that led you to suspect that I had something against you. Quite the contrary. I always intended to go and see you next week. On Tuesday morning I shall very likely be in Antwerp and go from there to Tilburg. I shall let you know beforehand by telegram.

The issue of the two elderly novice priests is one of propriety and tact. Quite obviously you must not treat them as if they were young people. Their age calls for considerateness. 1. If the purchase you suggest is necessary, go ahead, since we need a speedy resolution of the matter. Fr. Bontemps suggests something else entirely. Yours makes me laugh. Come to an understanding and get on with it.
2. Fr. Barral is a consummate liar if he said to you that I spoke to him about moving the novitiate to Antwerp. I spoke about the possibility of wooden cells in the second dormitory if they ever became necessary. That's all. Not a word about the novitiate being either nearby or at a distance. In any event, Fr. Bontemps was with me all the time and can confirm everything (immediately above) to you. I don't like individuals who are over-excitabile, unbalanced, and plead for what is incorrect on their way to achieve what is only right and true for them. You may, then, consider Fr. Dear Father,

I have already replied to you. You are aware of my thoughts about the suggested changes. What you will do following your discussion with Fr. Bontemps will be for the best because I know that you will so act in the interests of our Antwerp work. It will be good if you can close the streets as approved of by the King. We shall stay as we believed we would. Mr. Herman can take up his place if he so wishes. Or better, if you can arrange that these streets which form a triangle should be changed and replaced by a street criss-crossing from the railway line to rue Amsterdam, one must try and see to it that this street is not allowed at the top of the corner and, or, also beside your water line. If the street impinges on Mr. Herman's boundaries that's for the best since the edge of his property is too close to ours, and then he would give over to us the limits of his property cut off by the street. Try and succeed with this plan which would be to our advantage. When refusing this new street, crossing at number 7 of the square, we would gain about three hectares or so. This is all we would need. And the other ground on which we had an option and which we could have purchased, over and above this new street, could, as you say, be sold on beneficially by us. Deal urgently with this matter.

Cheerio, wholly yours in C.J.

I don't know if they have done so. The added chapters have been greatly relished by the Archbishop of Bourges. I don't know if it will be the same with Rome.
2. If you want the Archconfraternity of St. Joseph to take root in families, you must straightaway arrange that each of our houses becomes an enrolment centre since otherwise if each association deals with Rome you will get scarcely anybody. If you do not quickly take this issue in hand, what has already come to pass at Sittard or Averbode, etc., will happen again.
3. As regards Sittard, the Bishop of Roermund is dead, and Mother Antoine is very ill, unlikely to recover and altogether incapable of involvement in this undertaking. Hasn't the moment arrived to grab hold of this work? Take it in hand.
4. When Rome considers the opportune moment has arrived for Fr. Navarre, it will act; I do not wish to discuss it further. This coming August it is very likely that there will be a departure of priests and sisters.
5. I am very pleased with the activities taking place in our Piazza Navona church.
6. I am still waiting for your accounts covering the term which has ended.
7. Could you pay the annuity promised to the Pope and the interest on the amount still to be paid? Reply immediately.

Issoudun, August, 1886

Dear Father,

1. Fr. Chatelat has written to his brother to say that if we do not want to take him as a religious or allow his brother to live with his him (Chatelat), he will return to the lay state to take his brother with him. Very well then! Since this is how it is, give back his freedom to Fr. Chatelat straightaway since his brother is quite incapable of becoming a religious and we cannot allow them to be placed in the same house.
2. No-one has the right to tell you that the youngsters of the Paris Petite Oeuvre are entering the novitiate. I informed you already that they will go and take their holidays in Tilburg and then we shall decide whether to admit them to the novitiate or have them continue studying for their degrees. They will not be with you before August 15; ask Fr. Klotz to keep them with him until that time.

3. If the work in Antwerp is not further advanced, it is the architect's fault since he should have ensured that the materials arrived in time. This man is responsible; one does not take on work to be carried out in these conditions, and one does not engage oneself to deliver at a specified time without being responsible. This strongly runs counter to, and plays havoc with, all our plans. From all this there arises great inconveniences for us to which you yourself do not seem to advert. You should have been more demanding and vigilant.
4. So long as the street question is not settled to our advantage, we can have no more than a provisional building. What has been suggested to you is neither suitable or sufficient, and would have disappointed the novices. Take over the chapel as I indicated to you and do not carry out so many changes. It's because we have made so many that we have achieved nothing while spending so much money.
5. Your accounts confirm for me that you have spent more than 100,000 francs (about 320,140 euros) on your printed matter, etc. This is incredible. There must have been wastefulness and a lack of supervision. Why did you not keep a tight rein on Fr. Barral and take charge of directions yourself? I expressly forbid you, my friend, to leave matters to his personal initiative. It is you yourself who demands what you consider necessary, and leave it at that. Fr. Barral always goes ahead, adding to expenses in an uncalled for manner. The time has come, I maintain, to rein him in in this matter, and be severe. Indeed! I understand how Fr. Barral insists on dealing with you because he knows how to go about things in such a way that you will do what he wants. I beg you to be firm with him and restrain him. Fr. Barral is muddle-headed and quite capable of leading us on to ruin and the compromising of everything. Add to this his lack of judgment, and his being full of pride.
6. Your Belgian Annals refer to all sorts of things except our own undertakings. It is an approach I cannot approve of. I asked Fr. Bontemps to take over the editorship; why does it continue being left to Fr. Barral?

I made you aware of my concerns, and whatever you decide on now will be well carried out. I feel bound to put to you what follows.
2. If Father Bontemps cannot stay in Antwerp as Superior without its being seriously inconvenient, he must be allowed to leave for the missions by September or October since he has so requested me. Your presence then will be needed in Antwerp at this time; the novitiate must be totally moved there since I see no other possibilities; one must return then to your proposal about having a wooden chapel, etc. Let me know quite seriously what you think of Fr. Bontemps, and if it is for the well-being of the undertaking that he should be moved from Antwerp.(?)
3. Fr. Leray should also be on his way to the missions towards the end of September. But he will need to stay in the novitiate in the meantime. You will involve him as best you can, either giving classes to the slow learners, or in studies, or walking with the scholastics.
4. Poor Fr. Chatelat, I weep for him. I am sorry for him. Do you think he would be suitable for the missions either in America or England? His brother wants to go with him as a catechist among the natives. What is your view on this?

Dear Father,

1. I have at last been able to put together the 11,500 francs we owe to the Pope, interest included. I am sending this amount on to you in two registered letters, one containing 6,000 francs, the other 5,500 francs. I am amazed that with your work going so well and the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart prospering, you are unable, each year, to do any economizing and reduce a little your debt. Over the last two years the Barcelona house – which, certainly, is very far from being as successful as yours – has already been able to pay off 4,000 francs on its debt...
2. I haven't received your accounts yet for the 1st term. What is the explanation for this carelessness? I see it as my duty to make myself aware of your house's financial circumstances.
3. I repeat, my friend, what I have already said to you: have whatever you like printed in Italian, but as regards publications in French these are exclusively reserved to Issoudun. Each kingdom should stay within its boundaries since otherwise it would be divided against itself and ruin itself. Write specific letters to whomsoever you wish seeking support, and I shall not come in your way; you have the wide world beckoning you.
4. Ask Fr. Piperon to make it known to Fr. Barral that he should have nothing to do with Italy, forbidding him to do any promotion in this country which is your domain. I don't know what you might like to say about the person of Lemerrier; he didn't return any stone to me; he has them all and we are paying him 50 francs a year for keeping them. Fr. Barral is a schemer and a muddler. I don't know what he could have done; Fr. Piperon will let you know.
5. I am pleased to hear that Leo XIII, by way of its being a souvenir of his jubilee, would very much like to decorate our Piazza Navona church. May the Lord be praised! Thereby you have so much concern and embarrassment lifted from you.
6. From next January, our Annals will have a new format in 8°, and come to 48 pages, that is to say it will have twice the content it has at present. We are changing it in this way so that we can mention all our undertakings, with reference to the Sacred Heart, whose missionaries we are, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and her Association, the Archconfraternity of Saint Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, and the accompanying devotion, etc. So far as France is concerned, we alone shall concern ourselves with it. The Rome house will (alone) deal with Italy, the Barcelona house with Spain, Madeley with England, and so it goes. If there is anything to be done in France for your Souls in Purgatory project, the Issoudun house will alone be concerned with this if you would like to send us the necessary documentation dealing with this work.
7. Do not forget, my friend, that you are but two Missionaries of the Sacred Heart in Rome. Why wish to take on everything? It follows from this that nothing is seriously undertaken, that everything suffers in your house; the training of the lay brothers amounts to little or nothing, and how is the religious life lived?... There is in Rome a flashy quality, a being given to appearances, but is it all really solid? Whoever tries to gather too much, badly holds. (Qui trop embrasse, mal étreint.)
8. You have been led into error about the Daniel document. I have made provision for all the rights with regard to our houses abroad. Mr. Daniel, while having the right to sell our statues throughout the world, must, as article 9 has it, come to an understanding with our houses abroad. Arising from article 8 the Annals published abroad are not compelled to state this. There will be, therefore, an understanding between him and yourself. Obviously you have the right to have a statue made in stone to be placed on the pinnacle of your church without consulting Daniel since to have it otherwise would be ridiculous. As for the diploma, I don't understand at all the difficulties you are making about it.
9. With regard to Marino, we are not rightly in a position to take it on immediately as we are lacking in numbers. Besides we would be faced in these old buildings with large and expensive repairs. And then if another municipal council less well disposed than the present one took over, it could create problems for us.

Cheerio, Father. Oremus pro invicem.

Dear Father,

1. Accept your postulant if you think it's opportune; his age provides a guarantee of perseverance.
2. You will in the near future be welcoming as a lay brother postulant a Mr. Velpoux from Vierzon, who has for the past year been a teacher at the Issoudun day school. He is too old and not well enough advanced to be aimed at anything else. You will take note of this good young man.
3. Our confrères are of the view that our 4 young boys from the Paris Petite Oeuvre can begin their novitiate this year. They will go to you after the Assumption; you will look after them. Fr Lanctin is putting forward four more: 3 rhetoricians (those of the final year in the French secondary education system) and another likely to be a lay brother who has never studied Latin.
4. As regards Fr. Chatelat, allow him to finish his novitiate completely. He is to be pitied.
5. Among your novices are there some Irish or English who are due to finish their novitiate shortly?
6. Take good care about preserving vocations. Here our sick are all doing quite well.

Issoudun, August 11, 1866

Dear Father,

1. Here is a very confidential letter from the Bishop of Angoulême about Fr. Grégoire. (Grégoire had arrived at Tilburg the previous April and taken the habit on May 31. Following the Bishop's letter he was asked to leave Tilburg.) I contrasted the letter with outrageous insinuations which he wrote under the pseudonym of Marie M. to a country woman with another from him to Bishop Sébaux; the hand-writing is the same. Here's the beginning of this letter:

"If you were not so despicable, a silly little slut, I would go after you and force you to speak of others while I put my foot on your backside; I would make you see that you would do better to pay attention to your behaviour than to wash the bottoms of those who have nothing to do with you. Confounded silly bitch, dirty-minded little swine, going about bare-footed, etc., etc."

It's all of this nature. I believe that for the good of our Society we cannot keep this character, and even if he were innocent, there would have to be considered the reputation he has given himself and the suspicion which clings to him. Follow the advice of the Bishop when sending him away.

2. I am also forwarding to you, my friend, in the greatest secrecy, the enclosed letter from Fr. Bontemps. It seems to me to be quite judicious on a number of issues, and also with regard to Fr. Morisseau; it deserves to be taken into consideration and reflected upon. You will read it carefully, then, and let me know what before God you think about it. Fr. Bontemps himself will know nothing of this! I fear that at Tilburg there is too much involvement in the business side of things. This house is at present caught up in feverish business concerns which, instead of ending, continually threatens to grow. In this agitated activity what is the outcome for the interior life and Fr. Barral's own religious life? He is only living running about, going on journeys, discussions... One plan follows on another. I fear that you may be overwhelmed by all this, if it isn't so already, and that very soon, swept along by an irresistible force, you can no longer rein things in. He who takes hold of too much badly grasps; we have never given up saying this to Fr. Jouët; we must take care that it doesn't also apply to ourselves.

As long as Fr. Bontemps stays in Antwerp, it seems to me that it is a problem when Fr. Barral is remaining on there. If you were to have him in Tilburg you would, so I believe, avoid a lot of problems. I gather from your explanation that the editing of the Annals and whatever else is involved, continues to be the responsibility of Fr. Barral, but under your overall control. But there is nothing to prevent, meanwhile, the Antwerp house being prepared as a novitiate. Fr. Barral may stay on in Tilburg if, for the rest, you consider it opportune. If you think that the production and editorship of the Belgian Annals is what fits in best with the temperament of people and priests, leave things as they are and don't change anything. The support of the Pope and Cardinal Simeoni is very assuring for the Antwerp house.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

1. I should like to think that you received the money I sent on to you: 11,500 francs (about 36,816 euros).
2. Yes, you may send your 3 novices to Tilburg.
3. A Bordeaux priest, Fr. Lamarque, aged 45, a former associate of Bishop de la Passardière at the Draguignan Oratory, wants to join us. He seems to me to be pious and has a certain quality; he is a former curate at St. Eulalia in Bordeaux and an ex-Saint Sulpice seminarist. He is lucky. Since he is accustomed to the Midi (southern France) sun, Holland would not agree with him; if you can so arrange things that he does his novitiate in Rome with yourselves, you will safeguard a vocation which, so it seems to me, is of excellent quality. Be good enough to deal straight away with this matter and let me have a reply as soon as possible. We already have 11 of our young students who have got baccalaureates in the first part of the course, with the exception of 2 who have been accepted for the sciences. There still remain 7 or 8 to qualify. Let's hope.

Agreement

Between the undersigned:

Mr. Jules Chevalier, archpriest residing at Issoudun on the one side and Mr. Létang-Marcot on the other, a builder likewise living in Issoudun. Agreement was reached about what follows. Mr. Létang commits himself to Fr. Chevalier in keeping with the following statements and conditions to carry out work at the Issoudun day school, work which will consist of raising up by one storey this building and providing access to it. The builder will wholly act in keeping with the plans, detailed estimates and conditions attached, as signed by both contracting parties, and which will be put into effect when the work is being carried out by Mr. E. Lesaye architect-engineer, Issoudun, who is responsible for the work being carried out. He commits himself to have the said work completely finished, and satisfactorily carried out, by September 15, 1886 under pain of a 25 francs indemnity for each day behind time to be paid to the owner, but the latter agrees to give the supervisor (Lesaye) 5 francs for each day which will have shortened the terms and length of time agreed in the contract. The work, according to article 1792 of the Code of Civil Law, has a ten-year guarantee with respect to any failure in the construction, the use of poor material, lack of foresight, etc. The businessman remains responsible for any defective workmanship which the proprietor can insist on being done again as long as the work has not been accepted on both sides as completed.

Hereby presented and agreed on by the two parties, with two copies made.

Issoudun, August 23, 1886

Dear Father,

1. You didn't reply to me about Fr. Lamarque, the Bordeaux priest who asked to join the Society and make his novitiate in Rome. Is this possible? Accustomed to the Midi sun (southern France), he would not easily get accustomed to the Dutch fogs: he is 45 years old.
2. The letter of appreciation sent to Fr. Navarre (from the Vatican) means nothing... It is already two years since information was gathered about Fr. Navarre with a view to making him Vicar or Vicar Apostolic. There was recourse to the same last year. In adjourning the matter the pretext could be that there was a New Guinea issue. Now one finds that it is quite another excuse: the relationship of the Caroline Islands with the Germans. The issue is decided upon. For the moment it's about defining (territorial limits), but tomorrow another reason will be brought forward. May the will of God be carried out! All this goes to show that we are not that well regarded in the court of Rome if this is anything to go by. When the Marists went first to Oceania one of them already had the title of Vicar Apostolic...

Cheerio, Father.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The goings on involving Mr. de Barbarin appear to me another Utopia of the kind espoused by the Marquis de Rays. The Germans and the English own all these islands, and how is it to be expected that they will sell them to the French? He may try if it appears a good prospect to him, and you may, if you consider it opportune, commend him to our confrères.

Dear Father,

Before leaving for the Bourges pastoral retreat which begins this evening I am writing a few lines to you to let you know that I am delighted that you are restored to health. Most willingly I give you permission to use the 300 francs (about 955 euros) as you suggest. Mr. Gaugnault (uncertain wording) will be completely at your disposition when you will be available. Yes, our young students were marvellously successful. If the first book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart hasn't been a great financial success up to the present, this is due to the fact that it was badly launched and Mr. Retaux carried out virtually no promotion. We must, therefore, be ready to promote in a serious manner the work on the Sacred Heart which is to follow. It is not enough to refer to it once; one has to mention it again and again.

I read the note attached to your letter; your comments seem very worthwhile in my view.

Dear Father,

The general retreat for our confrères will be given by Father Guyot, beginning on the 9th of September at 6pm. It is absolutely necessary that you come to Issoudun from September the 8th to the 12th so that we can discuss our business in Council. We have serious issues to consider, linked one with the other. There's Tilburg, Antwerp, Paris, Saint Charles, Issoudun, the scholasticate, our young students, etc. It is, then, a good thing that we should be all together insofar as this is possible. I am thinking about setting out for Vichy towards the 13th of September to spend half a session there. You did the right thing in sending away your ex-seminarists. Fr. Chatelat has left the Society together with his brother; they are both pathetic. Force the issue of the streets with regard to our Antwerp property. It is imperative that you have a speedy resolution of the issue since we have very serious issues at stake there. See the solicitor for the Borgerhout Council. But bring a sense of urgency to the matter in the sense I have indicated. I came close to calling Fathers Bontemps and Barral to the Issoudun retreat. What do you think? If this wooden chapel is thought to cost 1,600 francs (about 5,120 euros) and is very much needed; it is very imperative that you have it undertaken. 1,600 francs is not a great amount of money. I promised you a thousand francs and you only need to supplement it, therefore, with 600 francs.

You are doing the right thing to join the sanctuary of this chapel with the house called the château which is inhabited. This would be a requirement. One could place a door at the gable end of this house which would lead into the sanctuary, and this would be large enough for the people who live in this house. Perhaps you could have your sacristy near this door and inside the house? Look into it.

Cheerio, my friend,

Bourges, August 26, 1886

Very Reverend Father,

It's in Bourges I received the letter which you paid me the honour of writing to me; I am replying straightaway not wishing to hold it over until my return to Issoudun.

1. It is correct, Very Reverend Father, that in the dogmatic section of my work I do not mention the very good, pious and learned Fr. Ramière, but I quote in some chapters, almost on every page, the periodical Religious Studies on which he normally collaborated with as much knowledge as logical acumen. The dear, reverend, Father was so identified with Religious Studies that he was, so to say, such a living inspiration on issues touching the Sacred Heart that I considered myself to be giving him sufficient prominence when referring to that (his) learned publication. No reader of Religious Studies could be mistaken about this, this being so true that many people have remarked to me that it was easy to gather that I was a friend of the Jesuit Fathers and, especially, Fr. Ramière, something which greatly pleases me.

2. But, Rev. Father, it must be brought to your notice that my work is not yet completed; there remains part 3: The Sacred Heart of Jesus studied in his undertakings, as made known on the jacket of the work which you have received. It is in that work (the third volume) that I reserve a special place for Fr. Ramière with reference to the wonderful work inspired in him by the Sacred Heart and all that flowed from it. It's there I hope to bring out, if God spares me, the providential mission of the dear and venerated Father (whom we continually mourn) in developing the Sacred Heart devotion, making it popular and effective at the same time. No, Reverend Father, I am not forgetting anything, and I shall never forget what I owe to the recognition I had from the founder of the Messenger of the Sacred Heart, and when you will have read the last part of my work you will, perhaps, regret the reproaches you have levelled at me today. Patientiam habe in me et omnia tibi reddam, (Matt. 18,26). (Have patience in me and I shall recompense you in every way.)

3. In this book on the Sacred Heart I believed I would have pleased you when making clear everything your prestigious institution has done for devotion to the Sacred Heart. In this work no other religious order exercises a more important role than yours. I point out St. Ignatius (p.42) plunging into the mysterious waters which flow from the heart of Jesus, and giving rise to the cult of the Sacred Heart among you. I would consider him to be the leading apostle of this devotion in your Society, something which none of your fathers has yet brought out, at least as far as I know.

I quote the names of more than twenty of your members who worked with so much zeal and success to set up and defend worship of the Sacred Heart. I made venerable Fr. Claude de la Colombière (now Saint) and Fr. Croiset, the most powerful advocates of the Blessed (now Saint) Margaret Mary. I apply myself to the defence of such a beautiful, most theological supplication of Fr. Gallifet making the Heart of Jesus the centre and co-principle of His love (p.57). The aim of this volume is to prove that Fr. Gallifet was right, and that devotion to the Sacred Heart cannot be understood and complete until the Divine Heart of Jesus is truly the centre of His Charity (page 292 etc.). It is on this truth's official acceptance and proclamation that, in my humble opinion, the general triumph of the Church and the social reign of the Sacred Heart depend.

Fr. Joseph de Gallifet appealed to Rome for a mass and a proper office in honour of the Sacred Heart in 1729. Rome refused the request on the 12th and again on the 30th July 1729.

You can see for yourself, Father, that I am indeed one of yours. It makes me proud to be so and I hope to stay like this always. I am aware of all that I owe to your worthy Congregation, to your holy founder whose immortal Constitutions were used as an exemplar for ours, and to Father Ramière who was so very supportive at the beginning of our Society, and as well Fr. Bieuville who formed us so zealously in the spiritual exercises of St. Ignatius, and there was Fr. Leblanc whose wise advice was so useful to me, while finally there was Fr. Fessard who clarified my thoughts more than once and was lavish in his advice.

I do not forget what I owe to your company in the face of such good will.

Henry Ramière, 1821-1884, helped in drawing up the Rules both for the Third Order of the Sacred Heart and the diocesan priests of the Sacred Heart, giving the retreat and presiding over the first MSC General Chapter in 1869, see above. Stanislas Bieuville, 1824-1876, while stationed in Bourges introduced the early MSC priests to the spiritual exercises of St. Ignatius, particularly so Fr. Guyot who would be the first MSC Master of Novices in 1869. Henry Leblanc, 1807-1879, was the spiritual director of Jean-Marie Vandiel who on entering the MSC Society introduced Leblanc to Chevalier in 1864. Michel Fessard, 1812-1893, Provincial of the Paris Province, was in close contact with Issoudun from 1852-1865.

4. I do not forget what I owe to your company in the face of such good will. Before such manifest good will, which fills my heart with gratitude, I have never made complaints against you nor shall I ever do so.

1. Not even against Fr. Nilles (1828-1907) do I do so, who in his book on the Sacred Heart (De Rationibus festorum Sacratissimi Cordis Jesu et Purissime Cordis Mariae et fontibus..., 1875) took it upon himself to place the decree of the Sacred Congregation of the Inquisition in confrontation with the statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and this without taking into account the explanations given (to the Congregation) or the replies of the same Congregation in our favour, nor the official approval given (by the Congregation) to the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart devotion.

2. Nor, moreover, do I make any complaint against the Messenger of the Sacred Heart which was the first to bring before the public this celebrated decree, without either informing us or asking for explanation, without ascertaining if this decree concerned Issoudun and its Association alone, or if it referred to the statue in our basilica, crowned by Pius IX and enriched with indulgences, or if, indeed, this decree was directed at the Przemysl faithful (in Austrian Poland) who had disfigured our statue with grotesque and absurd copies. Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, who only came to know through the Messenger the story which the ill-informed wanted to visit upon Issoudun, wrote immediately to the Holy See. He was informed that there had been no intention to lay blame on the Issoudun statue which was irreproachable in every respect, and that it remained, as hitherto, exposed for public worship there, and it could always be spread for private worship, but as for the future, in order to avoid confusion and new misunderstandings, only the statue of the Virgin, as officially approved by the Holy Office carrying the infant Jesus in her arms, should be offered for the public veneration of the faithful.

The reply to the Archbishop of Bourges came from Cardinal Patrizi on April 14, 1875. See the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun 1895, p.7-8.

Our Annals have provided its readers with these replies and many more in order to clarify matters, whereas the Messenger of the Sacred Heart has never referred to the issue. Nevertheless, its article, so cold and seemingly hostile to our work, was immediately reproduced in all the religious weeklies, or as few as makes no difference, as well as in the devotional publications within France itself and outside. Besides, the Messenger which aims at making its readers become conversant with everything, no matter how insignificant, which happens in the Catholic world, was silent about the development of our Association, its elevation to a universal archconfraternity, its church in Rome consecrated to meet the wishes of His Holiness Leo XIII, etc.

I am well aware that it is not the organ of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, but, for all that, the devotion necessarily links itself to the cult of the Sacred Heart, being its spontaneous expression. I would be wrong to complain about this as would also be the case if I were to complain about that which the Messenger of the Sacred Heart asserts from time to time about St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart without ever making it known whence comes this name, its origin and cradling. It is not aware that it is the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart who have given St. Joseph this name, and it contains within itself a devotion which has its roots in the Heart of Jesus, and Leo XIII made this devotion to St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, into an archconfraternity to safeguard Christian families against the thrusts of incredulity through the maintenance of faith and morals, and the centre of this new archconfraternity is to be found in our Rome church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

Yet again I am not registering any complaint (!); we all work towards God's glory; it matters little if we know the course of a river because this river makes fecund the field of the father of the family which we must all of us cultivate. It matters little if we pass on to posterity the name of a man who is none other, after all, than a feeble instrument in the hands of the All Powerful One, whose praises we sing to the whole world, and to whom we grant the honour of having accomplished virtually everything: Quid ad aeternitatem?

Your motto, like ours, is it not Ad majorem Santissimi Cordis Jesu gloriam? Yes, Reverend Father, let us be at one for the good of souls and the triumphs of the truth! Permit some quite lowly religious, who like you are enfolded in the Sacred Heart of Jesus, to place their frail hand in yours which is so powerful, uniting their weakness to your strength. Given courage by your advice and upheld by your support, they could, perhaps, accomplish something worthwhile in the holy Church of Jesus Christ.

I commend myself, Father, to your good prayers, and please accept my respectful good wishes in C.J.

Dear Father,

1. I advised Fr. Lamarque about the splendid favour granted to him by the Holy See. He will write giving you the time of his arrival. Yes, indeed, a year's novitiate is not too much. I am revising our Constitutions which must be presented again to the Holy See for definitive approval. I am setting it down that we shall have a two-year novitiate and, later, a third probationary year. When this revision work is completed I shall submit it to you before presenting it to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

2. I am in no way whatsoever involved with the printing of your book on St. Joseph. It's Fathers Vaudon and Tréand who are dealing with it. Give your orders, and make your complaints, to Fr. Vaudon.

3. I posted 4 books on the Sacred Heart to you yesterday. If you think the translation (in Italian) of this work and that on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart would be likely to have some success, try and arrange it. These two volumes are highly regarded in France.

4. That life (biography) of Fr. Vandel (J.M. Vandel), when are you going to bring it out? It is already too late, whatever you say. If you cannot effectively see it through, send me all the material resources; one cannot, advantageously, delay it too long.

5. Let me know if really and truly our Holy Father Pope Leo XIII wants to decorate by next year our Piazza Navona church. It is already time to take it in hand if one wishes it to be ready for the Pope's priestly jubilee. I shall make every effort, then, to send you 10,000 francs (about 32,000 euros) to make you happy and as a contribution to this work which so greatly interests us.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Fr. Jullien is still here in Issoudun and in the best of spirits. He is getting on very well. We are hoping that there will be a departure of Missionaries and Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for Sydney in October. Could you go and look after their departure at that time? From Marseilles you might come then to bid us a little good-day if this is possible. As regards Brother Grippa, this youngster is not yet mature enough to go to the missions. He has asked to do his novitiate in Holland. What is your view?

Bourges, August 29, 1886

Very Reverend Father,

Here in Bourges where I am on a full and proper church (diocesan) retreat (Chevalier present more as parish priest than MSC) your letter reached me. Now back in Issoudun I hasten to reply to it.

It is true, Father, that in the dogmatic section of my work I do not mention by name the good, pious and very learned Fr. Ramière. But I quote over certain chapters, almost on every page, Religious Studies (Etudes Religieuses) in which he normally collaborated with as much erudition as logic. The kind and well-regarded priest was so identified with Religious Studies, of which he was, it must be said, the animating force in this question of the Sacred Heart, that I considered myself to be giving him sufficient attention when I referred to the learned publication. No reader of Etudes Religieuses could be mistaken in this, its being so obvious that several people said to me that it is quite clear that I was a friend of the Jesuit Fathers, and of Fr. Ramière in particular, something which greatly flattered me. However, Father, you should know that my work is not yet finished as there remains the 3rd part, as made known on the cover of the volume you received. It is there that I shall reserve for the respected Fr. Ramière the space to which he is entitled, and, moreover the significant work which he began and spread with so much zeal and success in stirring up devotion to the Sacred Heart, making it both popular and effective at one and the same time. No, Rev. Father, I forget nothing and in no way do I overlook what I owe by way of acknowledgement to the founder of the Messenger of the Heart of Jesus, and when you read the latter part of my work you will, perhaps, come to regret the reproaches which you level at me today: Patentiam habe in me et omnia tibi reddam.

In this volume on the Sacred Heart I like to think that I shall make you pleased when I emphasize all your distinguished confrère has done as regards devotion to the Heart of Jesus. In this work no order plays such an important role as yours. I point out (p.42) that St. Ignatius plunged himself into these mysterious waters, which were released from the Heart of Jesus, and began among you worship of the Sacred Heart. I made him out to be the first apostle of this devotion in your Society, something which none of your fathers, so far as I am aware, has brought out before now.

I provide the names of more than twenty of your number who have worked to set up and defend the cult of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. I remarked on the contributions of the Venerable (now Saint) de la Colombière, Fr. Croiset, the powerful association of Blessed (now Saint) Margaret Mary (Alacoque, p.55). I committed myself to the defence of the very beautiful, very theological, presentation of Fr. de Gallifet who makes the Heart of Jesus the centre and co-principle of his love (p.57). And I believe I proved him to be right. Devotion to the Heart of Jesus being neither understood or complete until the Heart of Jesus is truly acknowledged as the source and centre of his love (p.299 etc.). It is on this truth, accepted, officially proclaimed, that, in my humble opinion, the general triumph of the Church and the Social Kingdom of the Sacred Heart depend.

You can observe for yourself, Reverend Father, that I presented as attractively as possible your Company's contribution. I cannot forget what I owe to many of its sons, particularly so Fathers Ramière, de Bieuville, Leblanc, Fessard. Confronted by such compelling obligation, which fills my heart with gratitude, I have not given myself over to complaints, nor shall I present any, not even against Fr. Nilles who in his book on the Sacred Heart was moved to consider the decree of the Congregation of the Inquisition (Holy Office) as being condemnatory of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statue, not taking into consideration the explanations provided, or the replies of the same Congregation in our favour, or the official approval it gave to the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart devotion. Fr. Nilles' latest edition continues to cite this same decree, leaving it to be understood that there is a shadow over this devotion which has taken its place among the Church's great, worthy, devotions as an understandable complementing of devotion to the Sacred Heart. Again, there is no mention of Cardinal Patrizi's letter to the Archbishop of Bourges where it was explicitly mentioned that in the reply to the Bishop of Przemysl not a word was mentioned in relation to the statue's appearance, or about the Issoudun presentation, and, consequently, it is erroneous to draw the conclusion that it was proscribed and condemned. What Pius IX wanted, and as he said, was that, in future, statues or paintings intended for public worship should have a different shape. I don't know for the rest if this same letter of Cardinal Patrizi was printed in the Messenger of the Sacred Heart which, nevertheless, did not omit to give the Congregation of the Inquisition's decree. I never made a complaint to Fr. Ramière. No more so shall I address a complaint to you, Rev. Fr., about the Sacred Heart Messenger's mentioning from time to time of St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart without ever making it known where the name (phrase) comes from, where it originated and what was its cradle! It cannot be unaware that this name had its origin in Issoudun, that it was the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart who gave it to St. Joseph from the year 1855 onwards, that Pius IX at our request enriched the invocation to St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, with an indulgence of 100 days, and that Leo XIII came to approve of an archconfraternity under the title of St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, for the protection of Christian families against the onslaughts of impiety and for the preservation of faith and morals, the centre of this new archconfraternity being in our Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in Rome. Once again, I am making no complaint; we all work for the glory of God; it matters little if we know the source of a river because this river brings fruitfulness to the field of the father of the family which we all have to cultivate. It matters little if we pass on to posterity the name of a man who, when all is said and done, is no more than a feeble instrument in the hands of the Almighty, whose praises we sing of to the whole world and whose merits we acknowledge as having virtually accomplished everything: Quid ad aeternitatem? Our motto, like your own, is it not Ad majorem Santissimi Cordis Jesu gloriam? Yes, Father, let us unite for the good of souls and the triumph of the Heart of Jesus! Permit a quite small religious group who, like yourselves, are enveloped in the Heart of Jesus to place their frail hand in yours which is so powerful in order to combine their weakness with your strength. Uplifted by your advice and sustained by your support, they could, perhaps, do some good in Jesus Christ's holy Church. Excuse, Father, the delay in this letter which was held up by an unforeseen journey. I commend myself to your good prayers and please accept my respectful good wishes in C.J.

Dear Father,

1. I received your telegram about Fr. Genocchi whom the Pope has picked for a special mission and whom he authorizes to make his novitiate with us in Rome. I am delighted with this telegram if it is what I take it to be, but it needs explaining. What does it exactly mean?
2. I leave next Tuesday with Fr. Hériault for Vichy; I shall stay there for 15 days – Villa des Lilas.
3. Find out, then, from the Redemptorist Fathers what the privileges are which the Holy See granted to them and which they obtained for us. It seems that they are many and very worthwhile. The Superior General, so it seems, has received from the Pope the right to grant his confrères, as he judges fit, the powers for reserved cases, the granting of indulgences, the provision of all scapulars, the granting of apostolic blessings, saying mass in rooms in particular houses when, servatis servanis, there is a need. If one is travelling one can give a priest of one's choice the faculty to hear your confession if there isn't a diocese where you can find a priest. When one is without water, e.g. on a journey, etc., etc.
4. Try and get for our associated clergy and the Third Order of the Sacred Heart such privileges as would be opportune for the promoters and benefactors of our Petite Oeuvre and our missions. We have (at present) nothing worthwhile to offer them.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

1. I received your kind letter together with that from our dear Genocchi and your parcel with the little booklets on purgatory. With regard to the latter why do you not make known the many Gregorian indulgences and others which the Pope grants to you? The faithful will not be interested in this devotion until they become aware of all the spiritual advantages. Your book is incomplete and you were in too much of a hurry bringing it before the public.
2. I approve of your itinerary. On my return from Vichy, I shall engage myself with our confrères' departure for Oceania.
3. You reply only to one part of my letter!
4. You will take back with you for Roman studies Brothers Dezpresse, Giovanelli and Vitale.

*Giovanelli, one of the three students, was ordained to the priesthood on December 20, 1890. Three years later, for family reasons, he became exclaustated, and in 1895 he left the Society. In 1903 he became Secretary to the MSC Cardinal Protector. He went to San Marco as parish priest in 1906. He became a domestic prelate in 1940. Vichy, September 21, 1886

Dear Father,

1. There is time enough for our young men due for profession at Issoudun to leave Tilburg on the evening of the 30th and reach Issoudun on the first of October. They will not stop over in Paris, doing no more than crossing the city to Gare d'Orléans since at rue de Sablons (MSC house) they have no place to give them accommodation. This is what has to happen then.
2. Do not say anything about Council decisions. Make your subjects become accustomed to hearing nothing about what goes on in the Council. There is among them a regrettable spirit of curiosity, and a quite scandalous tendency to say what they like about the decisions and measures taken by their superiors. This failing must be absolutely stamped out.
3. I myself will inform Fr. Bontemps when the moment arrives. He will not leave Antwerp until you have carried out what is necessary in order to receive the novices. Let Fr. Barral and the others be in the dark about our plans.
4. Insofar as you can, you will look after the scholastics who are staying with you, without making them teach.
5. Brothers Dezpresse, Giovanelli and Vitale will go together to Rome towards the end of October accompanied by Fr. Jouët who is coming to look after the embarkation of our confrères for Oceania. I shall let you know in time; Brother Dezpresse could take classes while he is waiting.
6. You could make Brother Boudeau a supervisor if you haven't anything else for him to do.
7. We cannot chase two hares at the same time. Teachers for our apostolic schools are absolutely necessary; the scholasticate will come (to be addressed) later. Fr. Klotz will do at Tilburg what Fr. Morisseau will be doing at Issoudun; he will help complete the philosophy and theology of the scholastics who are there.

I am amazed that you are always coming back to the same issues; be confident; the Sacred Heart has never failed to protect us. We deal with what is most needed; He would fault us for doing otherwise. I say to you what I say to the others: obey purely and simply, and keep your eyes closed as regards the future. God will take care of us. Make yourself holy, make holy those who are with you, and everything will go well.

8. Berlin worries me. Fr. Ilge is not mature enough for this task. He is too young and not sufficiently well grounded in solid virtue. He needs a firm hand to take hold of him and lead him circumspectly. Given the praise you bestowed upon him I thought he was more prudent, judicious, and more drawn to the Rules and Constitutions. He could well compromise everything in Berlin if the situation is as Fr. Joseph (Baltzer) leaves it to be understood. This issue must be remedied straightaway. Read the letter I have written to him and send it on to him if you think it appropriate, or you could write to him yourself in the same manner, warning him that you would inform me. Or better still, go there to see for yourself; by visiting you would come across people who spoke French and would be your informants.

Dear Father Ilge,

It was at your original request and for the advancement of our Society that I agreed to send you to Berlin under the supervision of dear Fr. Joseph (Baltzer) in order to prepare the way for a solid foundation. After two years I cannot see in any way how this important enterprise has taken a step forward. What is the reason for this? It reaches me from several quarters, my dear son, that the house where you live is not suitable as a residence for religious. The time has come to find a house where the regular life can be lived in its complete normality, and where you can have some youngsters prepared for the Petite Oeuvre. Meanwhile, dear son, be prudent and very discreet; do not be part of the sisters' recreation in the house where you live, nor with that of the women who live there. Be very regular, drawn to your Constitutions, having the piety of an angel, very submissive to Fr. Joseph (Baltzer) since he is your Superior, and living together the common life, faithful to all your religious exercises, humble, mortified, making the Society become well-regarded even by the very Protestants themselves, not seeking anything other than the glory of God and the salvation of souls.

Dear Father,

I return to Issoudun tomorrow. Yes, you may make arrangements to have the three most frail young men sleeping at rue des Sablons, Paris. But you must so arrange matters for them to leave before the others so that all of them are at the Orléans railway station (meaning the Paris railway station, Gare d'Orléans) on Monday morning at 9.5. They will arrive at Issoudun at 3.30pm. This way they will not be too pushed. If your three ailing students could reach Issoudun a day or two beforehand it would be even better, for the return to school takes place next Monday.

How many brothers have you who are due to leave for the missions? I need to know in order to book their places on the boat as soon as possible. What is Fr. Leray's baptismal name? Reply immediately. I am about to write to Fr. Bontemps to let him know in advance.

Dear Venerable Father,

I am in haste before the departure of the mailboat to share my happy sentiments with you. Within a few days, if I have the time, I could write more fully to you.

Fr. Navarre is much better, and my departure from Sydney for New Guinea will be next Monday! How delighted I am with this double occurrence, the news of which reached me yesterday morning! Fr. Navarre himself wrote to me with the news, releasing me from the burden of authority which so long weighed upon me. He will send me first of all from Thursday Island to Yule for some months; afterwards he will send me to New Guinea. The Lord be thanked for this decision for which I longed so passionately. I hope that I shall be able to outline for you by the time of the next mailboat the outcome of all these precipitated events.

Next Monday, the 26th, I shall leave Sydney for Thursday on the Guthrie, the boat which carried Fr. Durin and the 3 sisters last January. Everything has been seen to with the Cardinal (Moran), to whom Fr. Navarre had written in any case. The two brothers will become deacons on Monday, the 26th, and priests on Sunday, August 1.

On the 17th at 9pm they will all leave with Fr. Bontemps and the sisters for Lyons, Marseilles, where they will arrive on the evening of the 18th. I believe that they can all set out in the religious habit. Each one should be given, perhaps, from 150 to 160 francs (roughly 480 to 510 euros). You will have gathered that you were to send me six lay brothers, of whom four would be for Sydney and the other two either for Issoudun, replacing those from there I am sending to Watertown, or to be sent directly to Watertown. Let me know the four most dependable ones which you would suggest for the missions.

Fr. Issoudun, October 17, 1886

Dear Father Delaporte,

1. I mentioned to you that I would raise the interest rate for this year. As for the ensuing years we shall have to see if some good people might not come to our aid. I very much wanted to send you this by the 15th, but Fr. Lanctin decided to spend the feast of the Basilica here. He leaves tomorrow and he will give you 5,000 francs. I don't know at the present moment what is the interest rate charge for the year; is it 4,500 or 5,500 francs? In any event, make it your business to give a quite detailed receipt of the 4,580 francs being asked of you. 420 further francs will be for the needs of the house and the expenses you have to settle. In saying this to you, dear Father, you must engage yourself with Fr. Vaudon to make do financially in your house through your mass offerings, preaching and the two salaries of Fr. Batard and Fr. Lavialle. I am not demanding the impossible because it was agreed with Fr. Pervilhac that, as our youngsters are no longer being looked after by him at Saint Charles, he would give 1,500 francs to each of our confrères while waiting for our take-over of the undertaking. Consequently, you have, then, to arrange:

1. The engagement of our two confrères at 1,500 - 3,000 francs.
2. Mass for 3 priests at 2 francs each 2,160
4. Your stipend for preaching, etc.

4. Meanwhile Fr. Vaudon and yourself will be away quite often. The expenses will not then be very much. As well, take note that if you cannot provide for yourself, Issoudun will look after you. You are aware that a good mother loves her children because the children greatly love her also.

Meanwhile if both of you are ever away at the same time, Fr. Vaudon, Fr. Lanctin and the young scholastics could perhaps eat at mid-day, and in the evening at St. Charles with reimbursement. This is a situation to be considered.

If your absences become more regular, Fr., preventing you from carrying out the priestly work and that of the Third Order, it might, perhaps, be better to set up the centre in Issoudun, but you would always remain responsible for the editing and moral guidance. We would deal with correspondence, costs, and subscriptions. Look into the best solution, but we must see to it that these two important undertakings are dealt with in an orderly and punctual manner.

Look after your health... Relax and preach only when it's necessary... Fr. Lanctin is effectively the Bursar; Fr. Vaudon could take this on. There is so little involved. Fr. Batard could do your purchasing. As well, attention should be paid to our Paris promoters and the promotion of our Sacred Heart Third Order Association in the capital. Only yourself and Fr. Vaudon can do this.

This evening we had the departure ceremony; it was quite moving. Cheerio, dear Fr. Delaporte.

Dear Father,

1. I asked Fr. Jouët to request the decree for the transferring of the novitiate to Antwerp. Ask him for it.

2. Experience has shown us that the less members there are in a Council the better things go forward, tot capita quot sensus (there are as many viewpoints as people). In other communities similar to ours there are at most 3 counsellors for a community of six to a dozen members. And beyond that the Father Superior's secretary is chosen for his roles, that is to say his first assistant is also the secretary.

If you consider it worthwhile, admit to the Antwerp Council – until the Petite Oeuvre comes there – Frs. Barral, Merg and Reyn, and we shall then see what happens. One must carefully make a distinction between the overall administrative council of a house and the council involved in a specific undertaking. Fathers Hartzler, Peeters, Roussel, are part of the disciplinary, scientific, etc. committees of the Petite Oeuvre, but not the administrative council. In any event we shall return to this issue at Easter.

3. In Tilburg the Council is presently made up of yourself as quasi-Provincial and Fathers Klotz, Hartzler and de Peeters if you so wish it. That's it for the Tilburg administrative set-up. In principle you will meet each month. This should suffice – for the rest you are the one who decides. As for the Tilburg Petite Oeuvre Council, it should consist of the director and the priest teachers. They will meet each week to compare notes, etc.

4. When you have professions, you will send on the brothers to be trained for different activities. Our Barcelona house is badly in need of a cook; could you not then let go the Marseilles brother?

Navarre, he got together with Sister Xavier (Ryan), the English woman (Chevalier has forgotten that she is Irish and M. Tierney's cousin), to arrange for the building of a convent in Botany (Bay) for the Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. He maintains that the parish will meet the costs and the Cardinal is in approval on condition, however, that the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart religious will remain in Botany (Bay), etc. Here is someone with his head in the air, and lacking in judgment who could indeed cause some more problems for us.

3. I am sending on to you some volumes of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart publication. We haven't bound them; you can have that work done in Rome.

4. I am pleased to hear that the retreat you preached to the French Seminary (Rome) went very well. The Lord be praised!

5. Fr. Lamarque could easily bring along the young man in question.

6. Do try, my friend, to send me on your accounts for the Rome house which I haven't had for a long time. It is imperative that we know how you are really situated with regard to your outlay and intake. It is a requirement laid down by our regulations.

Issoudun, November 15, 1886

Dear Father,

1. I am aware of the note you sent to Fr. Bautrais and I have reimbursed him.

2. Dear Fr. Delaporte has mixed up everything as between the 1st, 2nd and 3rd arrangement of things. I have tried to bring some order to these three categories. The first, which is our own, involves two categories: religious who take vows, and diocesan priests of the Sacred Heart. The second is that of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart religious, who will be referred to in the next issue, and then there is the Sacred Heart Third Order. Let us not move outside this. The scope is vast and encloses everything.

3. Yes, it is absolutely imperative that the concentration on the work of the priests of the Sacred Heart and the Third Order should be associated with Issoudun as, otherwise, there would be problems. Prepare the good Father (Delaporte) for this eventuality. He will continue to be involved in editing the Bulletin, etc. I told Fr. Thomas to send on to Fr. Lanctin the linen he needs and the books which he requires. I also sent on to him (Thomas) your requirements for Brother Hastier.

Eugène Thomas, born October 7, 1854, was professed on January 27, 1876, and ordained priest in Paris, September 20, 1879. Chevalier criticised him as being "independent, insubordinate and not very observant" of the Rules and Regulations. He left for Oceania in June 1888, the 27th, but left the Society a little over a year and a half later on January 9, 1890, at the instigation of Chevalier and his Council.

Your comments are apt, Father, with reference to the ordering and economizing needed in the management of our affairs. These poor children (members of the Society) have never known the problems involved with getting money; they have never done anything other than asking, taking, spending unwisely and to no purpose. It is deplorable! Try to remedy this state of affairs facing up as much as possible to this very real problem. Fr. Delaporte says that he will shortly have no money in the till. I am sending you on 1,000 francs (about 3,200 euros). I wish you a pleasant journey. Cheerio, Fr.

I bless you in C.J.

Issoudun, November 17, 1886

Dear Father,

1. If Brother Hastier spits up blood, he should be sent to Issoudun straightaway. (He died at Issoudun just over two years later, aged 22.) I hope to send Fr. Caer, who returns on Monday from giving a mission, to Paris on Tuesday next. He will stay at rue des Sablons while you are away. I do not see anyone else whom I can send to you. Besides Fr. Fora, there are three scholastics who are in the infirmary at the moment. It's very sad... and two or three others are likely to be affected. What can one do? One must try to create virtue out of need.

2. I am so heartbroken about dear Fr. Delaporte. Let him not torment himself any further! We shall pray a lot for him. The situation at rue des Sablons which can be prolonged yet further makes it imperative for us to bring the administration of the diocesan priests' association and that of the Third Order to Issoudun, that is to say correspondence and the subscribers' register (of the Third Order). Fr. Delaporte will continue writing his articles and directing the Priests' Review, for which we shall send him all the necessary material. This Review will be printed in Paris and mailed, as hitherto, by Mr. Piedar.

3. If the article is written in the sense which you say it is, I can understand that it would be best if it didn't appear.
4. I sent you 1,000 francs (about 3,200 euros) four days ago and your letter says nothing about it! You should have begun with that since the matter so deserved it. Send a reply to me straightaway.

I am thankful to you for your kind letter and for that from His Eminence Cardinal Monaco. It's perfect; there is every reason to be happy with it. I again ordered that more of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart books in the new edition should be sent on to you.

Fr. Delaporte continues to suffer a great deal in Paris. In Issoudun Fr. Fora is very poorly, as well as two or three scholastics. I hope the Bordeaux postulant will arrive soon (in Rome).

Write to Fr. Morisseau asking him if he may not have some books on the Sacred Heart which he could send on to you, the Messenger of the Sacred Heart, for example, and some others. I am returning to Issoudun next Wednesday; when is Fr. Vaudon coming back?

If we could go through Belgium engaged in promotion we would find there great opportunities for the Association and all our undertakings. Let us hope that soon we shall have confrères available and suitable for this kind of ministry. While awaiting this, do all you can in Belgium and Paris... what a source to be exploited in Paris! I passed on your messages to Brother Alexander. He acted on his own initiative without speaking to me through Fr. Bontemps. We shall receive a storm of complaints and protests directed against the new cover (for the Annals). They want to keep the previous presentation. One must, then, return to it. I had imagined a new cover with which all expectations would be satisfied. I shall present it to you when I have the design.

I received all your letters. I sent the one for dear Fr. Genocchi on to him. I am very happy to have made the acquaintance of this Father. He is a jewel. He made his perpetual vows, which I received, in the Basilica on the 8th of December. What memories! He left last evening for Paray-le-Monial, and he will be in Marseilles on Monday night or Tuesday morning. He greatly edified all of us.

Here there is nothing new, otherwise, apart from a renewed attempt to close our apostolic school. Pray and ask for prayers.

I am still awaiting news of your audience with the Pope. I give you full permission for Brothers Vitale, Giovanelli and Leander, as well as Fathers Guyot and Morisseau.

I am not in the least surprised by what you tell me about the Blessed Sacrament Fathers. It is already quite sometime since they began to experience a severe crisis.

Owens was in Antwerp, 1888, 1889; he left, very likely, before final vows.*)

2. Try to bring forward as soon as possible the legislation dealing with the roads on our property.

3. We are threatened once again with the likelihood of having our apostolic school closed and the students dispersed (this applies to France). If that unfortunate state of affairs comes about, we shall send you a certain number of boys. Hurry up with your building. Pray and ask for prayers.

4. I shall forward to you a power of attorney's copy to extend a nominal obligation which you have as a shareholder.

5. I am going to buy from Mr. Bonneval, who is ill in Paris, the vineyard which I sold to him. Since you are already owner of the ground which adjoins this vineyard, this acquisition will be in your name, also Fr. Bazin's piece of ground which he has decided to sell at last. Before you see the Archbishop of Malines about your church, it would be wise to let the mayor and his council officially know about the request (to the Archbishop) since, otherwise, you might face the prospect of being turned down.

2. We have three newcomers at the Sacred Heart who cannot teach and whose presence creates a problem for our school. We are sending Fr. Merg to Fr. Delaporte at rue des Sablons in Paris. We are sending Brother Helfer to you in exchange for Brother Cochat who will come to Issoudun to take his place. Besides, we have a layman aged 45 as teacher of science, English, German. He is a very distinguished savant from the University of Christina (Norway). Following the advice of Bishop Bernard, this gentleman made his abjuration, following which the universities were very angry and he was dismissed despite all his degrees and considerable gifts. He knows all the northern languages, speaks French quite well and he is very good and pious. We are very happy with him, but his identification as an outsider compels us to disengage from him. We provide him with board and lodging and 800 francs yearly (about 2,560 euros). I am thinking of sending him to you. He will be helpful to you either at Tilburg as a teacher or in the new school which you are looking for at Antwerp. Reply immediately.

Get moving with all this.

Dear Father Delaporte,

What excuses can I make to you and dear Fr. Vaudon for leaving it so long without replying to you? I am immersed more than ever in undertakings. Less lucky than yourselves, I am my own secretary. Judge for yourselves. I don't know how I get by! It's a continuous miracle.

Little Brother Merg is very kind and very intelligent. You would be doing a favour to get in touch with Fr. de Pervilhac to try to get him (Merg) a teacher's qualification in France; there are formalities to be addressed. Do something about it. Besides, this boy needs to prepare for the subdiaconate; look after him. I also maintain that he could prepare himself for the licentiate. I shall look with pleasure at the proofs for the Tertiary of the Sacred Heart manual.

Brother Alexander (Delimoges) should have reported to you about the issue of the little office in Latin. It should be easy for you, given all the Latin offices of the Sacred Heart with Fr. Nilles, to translate ours into Latin.

Hurry up and get better. We have very much prayed that you might be able to say your mass today (December 25) and that you become strong like a Chevalier of the Sacred Heart. What in fact is happening about this undertaking (that of the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart)? When you are fully recovered, could you not have a word with Fr. de Mun and someone else? I think the time for this has arrived. The undertaking, once diplomatically launched and begun, will be approved of by Rome. The important thing is to begin.

I believe that a letter to bishops and superiors of major seminaries should also be considered; if they give their patronage to this priestly work its success is assured. They must become absolutely involved with our concerns. Your article in the Universe made an excellent impact.

Fr. Blot, who is very attached to us, has brought out an excellent article on my Sacred Heart book. He has sent it to me; it is very good, leaving aside certain monotonous passages and one or two paragraphs which I would ask to take out. He should send it on to you for inclusion in the daily Universe. Ask Mr. Eugène Veuillot to be kind enough to accept it and put it in a prominent place; we are by the mercy of God quite committed to his paper which in any event quite deserves it, and, accordingly, he has reason to be favourable to us.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I have recently finished the revision of our Constitutions. What work was involved... Let the Sacred Heart be praised! He helped me in a providential way. I shall let you know about this as soon as everything is in proof. Greetings to everybody.

It will, then, be no more than a temporary separation; you will find him in a better world where you will together enter eternity. I pray each day for him. Dear Friend,

Your telegram disturbed me and made me sad. You must at all costs try and prevent the placing of the work on the index; it would be a mortal blow to our work and our impact. If there are inaccuracies, confusion, errors in the work, let them be pointed out. I shall get rid of them. I shall, if necessary rewrite the work and withdraw it from sale immediately if this is required. I am ready for every sacrifice in order to escape the blow with which we are being threatened.

Is it the first volume: The Sacred Heart of Jesus in his relationship with Mary or Our Lady of the Sacred Heart? What is involved: is it the whole work or some sections? Yet this book was carefully considered and approved by the Master of the Sacred Palace and received quite a large number of episcopal commendations. Is it the latest volume to come out: The Sacred Heart? But this volume largely consists of that which was the purpose and subject of the first, and which the Master of the Sacred Palace approved of. I only added:

1. the chapter entitled: The Sacred Heart and philosophy, with an appendix;
2. the chapter: The Sacred Heart of Jesus and heaven;
3. The Sacred Heart of Jesus and angels, with an appendix on children who die unbaptized.

All these additional sections have been looked at attentively by the Archbishop of Bourges who wrote me a letter of approval, stating that he attentively had read the work. This letter appeared in the Bourges religious weekly, as well as the Monde and Universe only a few days ago. That of His Eminence Cardinal Monaco will shortly appear. I have, then, taken every precaution to be respectful of the truth. I consulted my doctrinal advisers; they approved the work and I had it published. If it is the last volume which is being criticized, at what are the accusations levelled? What sections of the work are being queried? I appeal to you, then, to calm down the tempest at any cost since otherwise it will be ruinous for us. As soon as you hear anything new, let me know. I am no longer rightly living.

REQUEST FOR SEPARATION BETWEEN THE ARCHCONFRATERNITY CONFIDED TO THE MSCs

AND OTHERS

Most Holy Father,

On the 8th of December 1854, the very day of the proclamation of the dogma of the Immaculate Conception, the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart was founded at Issoudun in the Archdiocese of Bourges, France.

In order to place themselves under the powerful protection of Mary, whom they regarded as their founder and intercessory in their apostolate, the new missionaries asked themselves by what name they could call upon her to express their gratitude to her as well as highlighting at the same time her role in spreading devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus of which they would be the promoters. It was then that they became inspired to call her Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. This title, unknown for Our Lady up to this time, was submitted to the diocesan authority who approved without reservation. The missionaries made it known to the pious faithful who, when praying with confidence under this title, received wonderful graces. Then the thought came to us at this time to set up a prayer association under the patronage of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to petition for success in difficult and despairing issues both in the spiritual and temporal domains. On January 29, 1864, the first association in honour of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was set up with the approval of His Grace the Archbishop of Bourges in the church of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. The Holy See deigned to grant this confraternity the most extensive indulgences, erected it into an archconfraternity and associated it strictly and indissolubly with the Institute of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart who were named in a decree on March 8, 1869, by the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars as Missionaries of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. On July 17, 1869, Pius IX, of blessed memory, endowed their Issoudun church with the title and privileges of a minor basilica. On December 8, 1872, a Confraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was established in Rome, becoming, in a brief of July 8 1873, erected into a universal archconfraternity, becoming associated with the Church of St. Andrew. Thereafter, the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, having in accordance with your wishes, Holy Father, bought in Rome the Church of St. James of the Spanish, its founder and Superior General received from Your Holiness on November 16, 1878, permission to consecrate it to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. In addition he asked, and obtained, from Your Holiness, the favour of transferring the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, up to now associated with St. Andrea-della-Valle, and which, like all the other associations of the same name, took its origin from the Issoudun Archconfraternity, to the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and handed over entirely to the care of this Institute. Since then, there has only been one specific Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, having as its specific director the Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. Because of this central control and direction the universal archconfraternity made rapid advances, especially in Belgium and Holland where soon its members would be counted in thousands, and where particular confraternities were set up whose most immediate aim was nothing less than to align themselves as soon as possible with the universal archconfraternity. However, in these last years this unity was severed in Belgium and Holland. Particular associations were formed without being required to affiliate with the general direction of the archconfraternity, and two associations in particular, one at Averbode, diocese of Malines, the other at Sittard, diocese of Roermond, have been erected into partial archconfraternities, the first for the whole of Belgium, the second for the whole of Holland. In effect there are in each of these countries two distinct archconfraternities, the first for all of Belgium, the second for the whole of Holland. In effect the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart who have set up at Antwerp in the Malines Diocese, Belgium, their apostolic seminary for the foreign missions, have the direction of the universal archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart by virtue of our 1873 brief and our 1869 decree, while the Premonstatian Fathers of Averbode, within the same diocese of Malines, take responsibility on their side for the archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in the whole of Belgium.

In Holland the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart have established a foreign mission seminary at Tilburg in the diocese of Bois-le-Duc and look after the universal Archconfraternity of the Sacred Heart in Holland, while the Ursuline Sisters of Sittard in the diocese of Roermond, have responsibility for the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for the whole of Holland. Experience, however, has shown that this lack of unity greatly impairs progress in devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, leading, effectively, to a lack of unity in leadership and in the means which greatly help in the promotion of the devotion, and the spiritual benefit of the members and, moreover, in the avoidance of the regrettable misunderstandings which have already arisen, and which deface true devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart as it has been approved of by the Holy See. It is, moreover, all too obvious that two archconfraternities of the same name under two different leaderships, and each projecting themselves to the faithful of the same country, should give rise to confusion, that kind of confusion which gives rise at times to scandal. It is for this reason that the under-signed Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and Director General of the universal Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, humbly prostrate at the feet of Your Holiness, taking his stand on the 1873 brief stating that the universal archconfraternity was confided to the Congregation, and basing himself on the 26th of April decree of the Congregation of Indulgences in 1879, stating specifically that the archconfraternity is specifically and indissolubly linked to the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, and moreover basing itself on the fact that it is his Congregation which gave Mary the title of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, until then unknown, and that it was this Congregation which established, with the approval of His Grace, the Archbishop of Bourges, the first Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to safeguard the unity of the work, avoid problems and the type of confusion referred to above, humbly begs Your Holiness to set it down in an apostolic brief that those particular confraternities which have been, or are about to be, created canonically in the future by bishops, cannot in anyway whatsoever partake of the indulgences granted to the universal Roman Archconfraternity without first obtaining letters of membership from the Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

Furthermore, Your Holiness is most humbly appealed to set down that in those countries where the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart are at work the future direction of the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, even if it already is the responsibility of others, should be totally and exclusively granted to the Congregation, as has been the case in Rome in virtue of the April 26 decree, 1879.

Kissing your hand and with the most profound feelings of veneration, I make bold to declare myself, most Holy Father, Your Holiness' respectful and obedient son.

Dear Father Vaudon,

1. Mr. de Mendoza has written me a letter which remains very vague about his vocation. I replied immediately making clear to him that I would be very happy to see him at Issoudun. Try to get him to make up his mind and come with him.
2. Our dear and highly regarded Fr. Delaporte is not very well. I fear for him. Let us hope and pray. How happy I am to have him here at Issoudun! He is so good, pious, accepting; besides, I have such a great regard for him. We shall spare ourselves nothing in getting him quickly back on his feet. He is living at the Sacred Heart, in the Bishop's room. He is much more uninvolved there than he would be at the presbytery.
3. Let me have your accounts, Father, and let me know if you need money. I shall send it on to you.
4. I sent Brother Merg to Paris replacing Brother Comte who was with Fr. Delaporte. As the good Father is in Issoudun, I can understand that our good little Brother must have something to do. In the first place:
  1. the necessary measures must be taken to make him become naturalized French or get permission for him to teach in France. See Fr. Pervilhac about that, he will let you know what procedures to follow;
  2. he should get himself ready to take his licentiate in the sciences; he has the ability. Fr. Parayre will advise him. If Fr. Pervilhac needs someone to oversee or teach, this dear little Brother would be ideally suitable. He has the temperament and discipline and knows how to get work from his students.

Yes, all the administrative work involved with the review of the priests of the Sacred Heart should be in Issoudun, including the printing of the magazine. Send me on all the letters you have come across dealing with this work, at least those which could be of help to you in editing this magazine, since I see nobody in Issoudun who could seriously take this work in hand; you could, therefore, get yourself help from little Brother Merg. But you will be quite seriously over-worked. Consider it, and let me know what you can do. Fr. Guyot will send you some articles. You will be the director in reality, Fr. Delaporte only in name. The circulars to bishops and rectors of major seminaries will be in my name. This Sacred Heart Review, well organized, could, with our Annals of Our Lady, be a powerful lever.

We must also pay attention to the Sacred Heart Third Order. Dear Fr. Delaporte was unable to do so. But who can take this over? Again, what a wonderful undertaking. You have in addition, if it's possible for you, to deal with the promoters and our associates in Paris. I am going to see Mr. Gaignault and make my complaints to him.

Yes, pay what is owed as regards the Sacred Heart Review. I shall recompense you, sending on through Fr. Lanctin a St. Bernard. The analogy relates to the St. Bernard dogs whose role it is to help in aiding those lost in the mountains, and human-wise meaning anybody ready to help in need.

Cheerio, my friend. I warmly greet you, together with your dear companion, and I wish you a good and happy New Year in C.J.

Dear Fr. Piperon,

I thank you for your good wishes, and those of the good Fathers, Brothers, Scholastics, Novices. I send my own to all of you, and if the Sacred Heart responds to them you will all be saintly religious. This is my wish for you all, and there's no more to say.

Cheerio, I bless you all in C.J.

I am amazed that the Belgian Annals has not yet mentioned the Book of the Sacred Heart and the commendatory letters by the Bishop of Bourges and Cardinal Monaco. We are before everything else Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. I hear from Barcelona that you have bought a printing machine. Is this true?

Dear Father,

I got your letters; a thousand thanks.

Not being able to reply at the moment to each one individually since I am snowed under by work, convey to Fr. Védère, Fr. Lamarque and our dear scholastics as well as the boys of the Petite Oeuvre my most sincere good wishes. The doctrinal exposition which the Bishop in question finds unacceptable has been considered and approved by the Master of the Sacred Palace; this doctrine is to be found in the Church's liturgy. One may read it in the prayers of the different masses of the Sacred Heart, that of the Blessed (Saint) Margaret Mary (Alacoque), in the antiphons, etc. One can very much come across it there in its entirety, as well as in the Bull of Beatification, etc., etc. I shall be very much obliged to you, while making the foregoing arguments prevail, if you can lay to rest this issue as soon as possible. Furthermore, this teaching has never been other than that of the Sacred Heart Messenger, etc., of Fr. Nilles, SJ, etc.

Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Try and send on your accounts as soon as possible. Fr. Delaporte is at Issoudun. He is wholly exhausted; he is getting a little better. It is to be feared that he has either a spinal chord condition or a softening of the brain.

Issoudun, January 7, 1887

Dear Father,

1. I am sending you 1,125 francs for the forthcoming three months, that is to say the period which does not begin until April 1 and finishes on June 1. We are paying, then, three months before we need to for this term which does not begin until April. I am amazed that dear Fr. Delaporte committed himself to such-like conditions. I have the document in my hands. (The French word 'sous seing' refers to an act accepted between parties but not validated by or through a solicitor.) Don't worry about this. The full price to be paid is 4,500 francs a year. We have already paid for one year. The 1,125 francs are for the second year which begins on the 1st of April next, with which I enclose 200 francs for your own purposes.

2. If you could also deal with the Sacred Heart Review, it would be very helpful as Fr. Delaporte cannot do it. I can only see you as his replacement in an advantageous way, and capable of making this Review interesting. You will, as you wish, leave aside other things!

3. Every year we shall be free so far as Gagnault is concerned. Brother Alexander will let Mr. Piedar know about this. Fr. Delaporte is in agreement.

4. The cover of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Annals, which you mention, cannot match that of the Sacred Heart Review because of the three pictures which are on it. If only we could put just one presentation of the Sacred Heart there at the right moment! See if this is possible since otherwise we shall make use of the one there already.

5. Fr. Blot has written to me to say that he will reduce by half his work on my book so that he can come up with an interesting article for the daily Universe. He himself took this article to Fr. Delaporte who promised him that he would send it to Mr. Eugène Veuillot. But at that very moment Fr. Delaporte informed me that he left Blot's article on his mantelpiece, and asked you to send it to the Universe office. Have you done so? It would be good if this article came out as soon as possible.

6. Fr. Delaporte has finished work on his manual. There are only prayers to add. Send Bishop Fava's manual on to him as he doesn't have it.

7. Yes, Sunday February 13 is fine with me for the sermon, but on condition that you bring with you Mr. de Mendoza and that you are not tired of having him.

Dear Fr.,

The pain which this procedure seems to cause dear Fr. Delaporte makes me hold back. From the moment his nephew got a place, as you informed me, I believed that he did not want to run the Sacred Heart Review, and Fr. Delaporte equally so. We are stymied. See Mr. Piedar, and if you can draw him to ask that he (the nephew) be relieved of this work because of his new responsibilities, dear Fr. Delaporte will have nothing more about which to object. While waiting we shall continue to leave Mr. Piedar in charge of the Review, but would you be so good as to tell him to send us a copy of his addresses and dispatchings so that we can begin to set-up a register which will be to our advantage later. For this year you may have the Review printed by whomsoever you wish and under your control. Yes, Fr. Delaporte will deal with meditative thoughts and queries, and yourself with everything else, making use of his material as well as your own. You will return to us the articles which you have sent on to this Review. I am sending you 500 francs (about 1,600 euros) to top up your account.

Dear Father,

1. I am sending you a further 500 francs to pay your debts.

2. Fr. Delaporte has been advised about your input as you will gather from this letter. With the new printers you are about to choose you will be in control of the production, the printing and the proofs. You will take the initiative, correct, change as you think fit, given that the worthy Father (Delaporte) will, otherwise, appear to outsiders to have responsibility for this Review; he will look for no more than that.

3. It seems that there are months when the Review of the Sacred Heart is sold out, and one cannot send it to priests who want to keep completing the full series. The year 1886 must, then, be reprinted. Perhaps in allocating this re-printing to Fr. Barral we would find ourselves, thereby, with better conditions than in Paris. Look into this.

4. For its second year, 1885, it would, perhaps, be best to print 2,000 copies either to meet the wishes of new subscribers or for promotion purposes.

Take all this up. Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in CJ.

Next Sunday I am going to Bourges, preaching a sermon. I shall not be in Issoudun that day. Let Mr. de Mendoza know about this. If you think your presence would be helpful to him, come along... We shall wholeheartedly grant him the 500 francs (about 1,600 euros), which he may need each year. Thank you for your keen interest and devotedness. Try to get us some more good recruits. Fr. Guyot's article is too personal; it needs to be rewritten.

I may tell you, confidentially, that the Ecuador Government, through the intermediary of the Archbishop of Quito, currently in Rome, offers us the responsibility of the great Sacred Heart undertaking and the building of the basilica, which it formally approved of. This is marvellous! The Government commits itself to board and lodging, prepared to look after 5 or 6 priests, together with brothers, etc. The Archbishop is also offering us, if we are willing, the direction of his junior and major seminary, as well as an apostolic school. Issoudun, January 29, 1887

Dear Father,

I received your significant letter and that of the Archbishop of Quito, together with the other items. His Grace seems to be motivated by the best dispositions. I considered that I should have a word with the Archbishop of Bourges about this Ecuador issue. His Grace's reply was very shrewd and I am sending it on to you. Before the Archbishop of Quito, then, arrives in Issoudun, you must establish the following with him:

1. What is the situation agreed on and laid down as being offered to us?
2. What will be the means of support promised?
3. What amount of money will be allocated annually, and for what number of people?
4. What will be our guarantee for the future, following the Archbishop's death?
5. Will the direction of the national work of the Sacred Heart be official and guaranteed in writing by the Government?
6. In reality what is involved? Apart from the construction of the basilica, will direction of an archconfraternity in honour of the Sacred Heart, like that which is happening in Paris, also engage us?
7. Why haven't the Jesuits, who are so strong in Quito, been given the direction of this national Sacred Heart undertaking? Having promoted it, it seems to me that they should be taken into consideration. Knowing that its direction has been confided to us, will they not look upon us with a baleful eye? Would they not be inimical to us? And given their considerable influence, we would not remain very long in this situation.

Here then, my friend are so many serious issues which need to be addressed and solved before the Archbishop begins his journey to Issoudun. His Grace cannot come without having everything well set out clearly, precisely and positively, so as to avoid any problems in the future, any misunderstandings or regrets. Get in touch straightaway with Archbishop Ordonez. Put to him all these queries whose resolution is as much in his interest as it is in ours. Then draw up with His Grace an agreed formula which you will submit to me. And once the issues are agreed, we shall sign the project with him, and the Holy See will ratify it either through the signature of the Pope or one of his delegates. It is a requirement as well for us to be assured in writing that the President of the Ecuador Republic gives his approval.

You may discuss all this with the Cardinal Vicar, His Eminence Monaco le Valetta, who is our protector, and Cardinal Simeoni of Propaganda. This undertaking at Quito, in view of our Oceania missions, could be very advantageous to us; Cardinal Simeoni will not fail to appreciate it.

I am sending you on a supplication to the Holy Father, endorsed by the Archbishop of Bourges. It would be very much to our advantage if the appeal was well received! I would ask the Archbishop of Quito to present it (mention it) to the Pope himself; with his support it has the likelihood of success. Get him to do so. Read my letter to the Archbishop of Quito before passing it on to him, and also the supplication to the Pope.

Dear Father Piperon,

I received, indeed, your notes and latest letter. Thanks!

1. I read with interest your comments on your novices. You would do well to put down the address of their parents and their native country. This is a lack. Look after their health, especially during Lent. We have here five known tuberculosis sufferers. It's only a question of time. Those whose health causes excessive concern should be dismissed. Later they become a great burden.
2. Try to have places available for some novices for they can arrive at any moment. It would be regrettable if they were not accepted, or otherwise they would have to go to Rome.
3. Fr. Tréand is looking for a professed brother. Try to send him one as soon as you can.
4. I am sorry that your paths problem has not yet been solved.

1. Yes, accompany the Archbishop of Quito to Issoudun. Your presence will be helpful. Our confrères continue to be favourable towards Quito. If you could draw up with His Grace a contract guaranteeing what you wrote to me in your letter this morning, that would meet what is required. The Holy See will not, I hope, refuse approval since it would be a great boon for us and for the success of our undertakings in the Equator. The Government of Ecuador must approve. I do not think it will be opposed to it. In this way all will go well. I do not foresee the slightest problem.

The arrangement taking shape could be advantageous. Presumably you will be indemnified for leaving your lodgings... Fr. D 18870215

Issoudun, the 18
*Undated. Possibly February 19,20;

February 21, 1887*

Contract agreed between His Grace Archbishop Ordonez of Quito and Reverend Father Chevalier, Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, with the authority and approval of the Holy See and the Government of Ecuador.

Article 1

The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart are authorised, as of this day, to establish themselves in Quito, capital of the Ecuador Republic, and to found in other towns in the country, with the agreement of the Bishops, work of the Society.

Article 2

The journey of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart from France to Quito, and the expenses of setting themselves up in their new residences, will be met by the Archbishop and the Government of Ecuador.

Article 3

As soon as the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart arrive in Quito the Archbishop will make available to them a church which they will be in charge of and maintain with an allocation of revenue to meet the needs of 4 or 5 priests and 2 lay brothers. The church will serve as the provisional Church of the Sacred Heart and as a place of pilgrimage while waiting on the building of the national basilica.

Article 4

The Archbishop will give the Sacred Heart Fathers full freedom to exercise the mission ministry in the whole of his diocese and to set up all the undertakings which can help the sanctification and salvation of souls. The Fathers will make themselves available as much as is possible to the Archbishop with regard to those same apostolates.

Article 5

The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart have the right, in perpetuity, to provide spiritual guidance in the national basilica dedicated to the Sacred Heart and in the parish to which it will be joined in the future, and also with regard to the pilgrimages which will take place there, and any other undertakings which might arise there for the glory of the Sacred Heart and the well-being of souls. When this moment in time arrives they will be free to leave, if they so wish, the first church which was given to them.

Article 6

With respect to the construction of the national basilica of the Sacred Heart at Quito, a control committee drawn from pious members of the laity will be convened under the direction of the Archbishop and the Government, of which the Archbishop will be the President; the committee cannot convene without the Archbishop's permission.

Article 7

It is the gentlemen who belong to this committee who will be responsible for everything pertaining to the material side of the undertaking, as, for example, the choice of an architect, choosing a plan, the work itself, its surveillance, trying to find financial resources, the manner of subscribing, promotion through the press, administration of accounts, payment of workmen, of administration, the setting up of local committees in all the towns of Ecuador and other countries of Latin America, etc.

Article 8

The Sacred Heart Missionaries in Quito, whose Superior will be by right a member of the committee, will engage themselves with the spiritual side of affairs, that is to say with any correspondence relating to Sacred Heart devotion, the propagation and publication of what is newsworthy in relation to the Sacred Heart devotion.

Article 9

All the offerings which the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart receive towards the construction and decoration of the basilica will be registered and forwarded to the Archbishop who will put them in the hands of the committee's treasurer.

Article 10

A reasonably spacious house will be built close to the Basilica of the Sacred Heart to lodge the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, as well as a foundation for a building, in keeping with the wishes of His Grace, Archbishop Ordonez, to house an Academy of Higher Studies which, if they so wished, would be under the direction of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

Article 11

The annual salary for each religious will not be lower than 250 pesos. One peso is the equivalent of roughly 4 francs. (In today's euro currency, 250 pesos would be, roughly, the equivalent of 3,200 euros.)

If whatever major factor destroyed or made impossible the national Sacred Heart undertaking, or if the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart found it impossible to continue, the contract will be disengaged from with full rights and without indemnity on one side or the other. Nonetheless in the event of the first proviso (the impossibility of continuing), the Archbishop and Government of Ecuador will repatriate at their expense the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart if they wish to return to France; in the second eventuality, the costs of repatriation will be met by the missionaries.

If a disagreement or serious problems were ever to arise between the Archbishop of Quito, the Government and the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, which God forbid, the issue will be submitted to the Sovereign Pontiff whose decision will be accepted without complaint by both interested parties.

L 18870221

To Archbishop Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, February 21, 1887

Your Grace,

In 1874 the Sovereign Pontiff, Pius IX, of blessed memory, granted us, by way of honouring the Sacred Heart, in a special audience, a particular habit consisting of:

1. a white wool soutane wrapped round the body by a red sash with the Sacred Heart depicted on the chest;
2. a cloak in black wool worn over the white soutane when going outside if circumstances so required it;
3. a little red wool cloak to be worn over the white soutane in choir or when preaching or if replacing the surplice. His Holiness Pius IX left it to the Archbishop of Bourges to choose the appropriate moment when we might choose this dress. Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, aware that France was in turmoil, advised us to wait for a more favourable time; that is what we did. Accordingly, so long as our country hasn't been restored to order (in Church-State relations), we wouldn't dream of wearing this new habit. Nevertheless, Your Grace, insofar as other countries throughout the world are concerned, where we have houses and where freedom is a right, as in Quito for instance, I make bold to ask Your Grace to give us permission to wear the habit described above. The Archbishop of Quito would be pleased to have us entering Ecuador with the livery of the Sacred Heart.

I have the honour to be, most respectfully, Your Grace's humble and obedient servant in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I accept and approve the habit you describe, both for entry to Quito and for continuous wear.

Issoudun, February 21, 1887
+ Joseph Ignatius
Archbishop of Quito

So far as France and the other countries of Europe are concerned, the reservations expressed by Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne would appear to be very appropriate. But it is not quite the same with respect to Ecuador. I believe then, that it would meet better the wishes of His Grace the Archbishop of Quito if the priests presented themselves in the diocese wearing the habit approved of by His Holiness Pius IX, and thereby calling to the mind of the Christian population that they are under the Sacred Heart's protection and that they, the missionaries, are committing themselves to the propagation of this devotion.

Dear Father Vaudon,

I sent Fr. Batarde the 500 francs (about 1,600 euros) which Fr. Delaporte requested of me. Ask him for it. Little Brother Fora is dead. He will be buried tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. Those who are going to Rome would do well to wait until Fr. Jouët returns, which will not be until after Easter because he is preaching in Marseilles during Lent.

Dear Father,

1. I am still waiting for your article about the pontifical jubilee which I want to read myself. The articles are being made ready for the April Annals; time is short. Send it on to me immediately.
2. By going to Tours you have pleased the Presentation Sisters, but I would ask you not to get so involved in other people's affairs. You have already more than enough of your own... And Father Vandel's biography! When?
3. The Archbishop of Quito is in Paris, exhausted. The yellow fever is, so it would appear, in the port of Guayaquil. The Archbishop, for this latter reason, intends to leave only on April 10, and our confrères on May 10. I am sorry that this is so. Do not wear yourself out. Look after your health. I am sure that Fr. Jullien has long since returned to Rome.

Dear Father,

I read with interest your letter. The proofs I forwarded to you contain in sum the Constitutions, the Rules and the Directory. As I told you, I would share them with you when I received all the corrections. Send me on the copy of the proofs I sent to you with all the corrections, changes, which you consider pertinent.

I shall then, on comparing them with the others, make my own summing up. We have many shortcomings in our Constitutions and Rules. The time has come to fill the gaps and engage in a serious and well-disciplined work. Experience will clarify and enlighten us on a great number of issues. While I am alive I should like very much, by God's favour and the enlightenment of our more serious-minded confrères, to lay the final hand on our Constitutions and to make our beloved Society, which answers real needs, one of the most serious there is about. It is only in this way that attention will be focused on us, and the Holy Spirit will prompt vocations. My contention is that our Society is destined in the design of Divine Providence for great things and has a great future, on condition that it will not be just half religious but wholly so and without reserve. With the additions I have added I thought of the future... and this future is not far off. By force of circumstances we are about to create one or two Provinces: we must then give thought to this. With regard to two novitiate years, the scholasticate, a third probationary year, these new considerations may have no retroactive significance. Only those who come along in the future for acceptance will undergo these changes. It is better to begin this life in a serious way while we are still alive than to await our death. The shock would be much more violent and dangerous.

Send me your corrections as soon as possible. I am waiting for them. You know that the Archbishop of Quito wants our confrères to wear the habit which the Pope granted us in honour of the Sacred Heart. The Archbishop of Bourges has warmly approved. I am taking responsibility for this to be done. It will be very attractive and have an excellent impact, or at least so I think.

Cheerio, my friend.

Issoudun, March 7, 1887

Dear Father,

I am sorry that the departure of the priest-chaplain at Avranches has been postponed indefinitely. I understand and respect the reasons which cause this to be so. As for Fr. Beauville, I am not opposed to his going to Rome at this moment, but since Fr. Jouët is away I see nobody there who could look after him; he would be out of place and wasting his time. Weigh up the circumstances, and I leave you to judge for yourself. If you answer in the affirmative, let me know what amount of money I should send you for the journey. Yes, yes, with pleasure you may go and preach for Fr. Quesnel at the first communion in May. I am very happy that you preach wearing the habit. I do not find anything further inconvenient preventing our confrères from wearing it in the pulpit; it is worthwhile, and the Sacred Heart will reward us. Ah! If you were to make an appearance in the pulpit with the habit Pius IX approved for us, how marvellous you would look! Quito (the Archbishop) wants our confrères to wear it when leaving and in his diocese of the Sacred Heart. I have had a sample model made. It's magnificent; you will see for yourself. In place of a soutane, it's a white tunic pressed to the body by a red sash. This tunic in white wool has a little red border and red buttons. A splendid Sacred Heart is embroidered on the front. A little threading of white wool bordered by a red sash with red buttons, and a Sacred Heart complete with a white hood bordered by red buttons, completes the habit. The impact is splendid. For choir and preaching the cappa magna is replaced by a red cloak with a Sacred Heart in the centre and a red biretta; it is both cardinalatial and papal at the same time. (!). When will it be possible for us to wear this habit in France? In the event it was decided that we would wear it everywhere we can without its being inappropriate to do so (as in France hitherto).

Fr. Jouët assures me that the Cardinal Vicar will allow us to wear it in Rome, at least in the house and church. Out of doors it will be covered with a black coat. At Saint-Louis-des Français (the French church) you might, then, wear it while you are preaching.

Cheerio, Father; every success.

Dear Father,

1. I got your article just now; thank you. It will have a good impact.
2. I am very pleased to have such good wishes from the Bishop of Marseilles extended to our little Society. They could be very helpful to us at the appropriate moment.
3. The good Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart do not grow in number in keeping with our wishes and our needs; the only one who had her teaching certificate has left for Sydney. One must wait therefore before taking on and running a boarding school in Marseilles. The opportunity offered by your dear sister could not have been, it is true, more favourable, but: ad impossibile nemo tenetur (nobody is expected to do the impossible).
4. See to it, my friend, that you put in writing your comments on the Constitutions and send them to me with your annotated proofs. I shall return everything to you, corrected as I see it, and you will again go over it.
5. It is very much to be desired that the Messageries Maritimes (shipping company) should provide us with free passage since otherwise it is (financially) ruinous for us with so little in the way of resources from the Propagation of Faith.
6. I wrote a nice letter to Bishop Morel making every excuse possible and informing him that in future we shall act in keeping with his wishes.
7. I am sorry that the Sisters haven't thanked sooner, and more appreciatively, the Sisters of the Holy Name of Jesus. I cannot do everything; you would have done well yourself, since you were on the spot, to do so, or write to Mother Hartzler.

Issoudun, March 22, 1887

Dear Father,

1. As you know, the Archbishop of Quito has postponed his departure until May 16. We have, therefore, more time to prepare.
2. The thought has come to me to make an appeal signed by the Archbishop of Quito in his name, and also with the signature of the Archbishop of Bourges, asking the Pope to make available for public worship, but only in Ecuador, the statue of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart (earlier model). If as I hope we are granted this favour, it would in fact be a great step forward. You might make this known also to the Bishop of Marseilles and some other bishops if you think it is worthwhile. As soon as you return to Rome have this put to the Pope either by Cardinal Monaco or Parocchi, etc. And our confrères could take the permission with them on departure.
3. You will also have to ask the Holy See about an indult for two lay brothers whom our confrères will be taking with them, and who will be losing out on two or three months of novitiate which they can complete down there. And the same for Fr. Robinet; an indult for 2 or 3 months. I shall call him back to Issoudun. Let me know if the names should be sent to you.

Robinet, born in Langres, December 15, 1829, was indeed professed on June 29, 1887, having been an Oblate (OMI) for twenty years. He left in July 1888 to become a diocesan missionary.

4. Father Morisseau, on his return from Paris and Antwerp, created a rumpus with me about the habit, asserting that we hadn't the right to use it, and Rome had not approved it, and that were I to insist that it be worn in Quito he would write to Rome about it. I can see that he manipulated all this supported by some hot heads. I for my part remonstrated with him in a serious and forceful manner. Otherwise, I am forwarding you a copy of the letter I wrote to Fr. Píperon.

Today Fr. Morisseau is not saying anything further. He seems to be flexible and prepared to accept the habit if I insist. I have decided not to give way. Perhaps he will no longer go to Ecuador. As soon as you arrive in Rome try to have a word with the Cardinal Vicar who will give permission to use the habit within the house and in Quito because the Archbishop is in favour of it. If needs be I can send on to you the Archbishop's letter. I am sending you on also a ready-made example of the habit for yourself. I find it (the habit) very symbolic in fact: it expresses innocence and love, the two great virtues associated with the Heart of Jesus and which, alone, can save the world. By the same token, Our Lord at the time of His passion, while redeeming the world, was he not dressed in a white robe and a red cloak? Let me have all you would wish to say about this.

Cheerio, Father.

When the Superior of the Mercy died I wrote to Archbishop Richard informing him that if the house in rue de l'Assumption were to be up for sale, we would willingly be in favour of acquiring it. Issoudun, March 30, 1887

Dear Father,

1. You should not be taken aback by our religious drawbacks. An oak tree takes years to reach completion. It is already quite something that we are sensitive before what is lacking in us. In time we shall get there. I regard it as a great blessing that our path forward is traced out for us, and that we are well aware of the path we must follow. Let us not complain about setting up Rules and Constitutions without putting them into practice; it is much better that we see our way forward clearly than to grope along. We have less to be afraid of.

2. It's in May our confrères leave for Quito.

3. Here Brother Rosenkranz is totally unavailable for any work in the future. (Born in Guéret, despite his name, he died at the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, a little less than a year later, March 1, 1888.) Brother Moncorget is not taking any classes for sometime. His chest is affecting him. Fr. Dericemont will be leaving for Ecuador, also Fr. Barral. Here you have 4 teachers who must be replaced after the Easter holidays. Think about it and send whoever you can; it's absolutely necessary. Brother Dezpresse would perhaps be right for Barcelona, the scholastic Delimoges for Issoudun, but who is there after that? Maybe Brother Perriot, but who else? Our young men are really too youthful to be teachers; they attribute too much importance to themselves, and act like priests, demeaning themselves. They are not really mature enough, nor satisfyingly religious either.

Please do not keep in the novitiate those whose health is broken, like 5 or 6 we have here in Issoudun; these youngsters create problems later and end up by dying. We need those who are straightforwardly healthy. Brother Xavierius (Maier) states that there is no reason for him to be exempted, and that he is forsaking his country.

Born at Altemmunster, Germany, June 30, 1866, Maier went first from Tilburg to Paris and from there to the Issoudun presbytery whence he left for Quito with Fr. Roussel on July 10, 1888. He left the Society a little over a year later, September 12, 1889.

You are in error when turning away good lay brothers, who want to expatriate themselves, under the pretext that they are not fulfilling the law.

Have you forwarded to Fr. Jouët the names of those who haven't finished their novitiate and whom you propose for Ecuador, and that of Fr. Robinet for Issoudun? It must also be stated how many months are needed in the case of each one to complete his novitiate.

*From Father Jean-Pierre Védère, MSC, Rome
to Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Marseilles.*

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Rome, April 5, 1887

Reverend Father,

Not unexpectedly, following his return from Rome, Fr. Marchal, the Vicar General of the Bourges Archdiocese (the Archbishop's brother), had a lot of news for Fr. Chevalier from whom I then received a letter which was anything but flattering. I present it to you virtually in its entirety, word for word. I shall not offer any comment on this letter which seems to me written for a specific purpose.

Dear Father,

From now on you will not receive in your Rome house anyone, absolutely no-one, either for some days or some months, without a letter signed from me granting permission. Otherwise our Rome house would quickly have a reputation like that of the Holy Cross Fathers at St. Bridget's (Santa Birgitta). Certainly the Marist Brothers could very appropriately take themselves to the Marist Fathers with whom they have more in common than they have with us or other communities of the same kind. Try to get rid of them (the Marist Brothers) as quickly as possible. Give them 15 days, or a month at the most, to make arrangements for themselves; no more than that. I am adamant that our house should not be lived in by anybody other than ourselves. I make an exception for Professor Poletto and the Cardinal Vicar's secretary, as is to be understood, but not for anybody else; and I expect that this proscription will be strictly adhered to. You will pass this on to Father Jouët on his return (from Marseilles).

Fr. Lamarque is at Montpellier. He is asking for exemptions in order to be a religious of the Sacred Heart which I cannot grant him; he will meet the requirements of the common rule or he will not return to Rome...

Good wishes to Fr. Jullien and all your scholastics and brothers...

J. Chevalier

I am not going to wait until your return (Védère writes to Jouët) to pass on to you Reverend Father General's instructions as clearly made known following the Vicar General's visit to him. I cannot explain to myself how, otherwise, he would not have spoken (written) sooner. For the time being I am not saying anything to the Marist Brothers who are getting on my nerves continually with their sick member who has a form of bronchitis which has been neglected and which requires several days' special care. Have you received the letter sent 24 hours before this one in which you should have come across the 'cambiale' (an official bank letter of entitlement to withdraw currency) to be signed by you in order to take out money? If you haven't sent it on to me already, I would like you to send it on to me straightaway. If before returning to Rome you go to Issoudun, put everything in order with Fr. Chevalier so far as his concern with the Rome house is an issue. Do you intend to return immediately after your Lenten mission? Bless all of us, myself especially.

Issoudun, April 7, 1887

Dear Father Vaudon,

There is at the present time a house for sale in Paris with a public chapel facing on rue de Calais, and very near Place Ventimille. This property is within the Holy Trinity parish. In this chapel the parish carries out its services while its church is being built. Fr. Petetot has set himself up there to begin the Oratorian work. This house is presently occupied by the Marie-Réparatrice Sisters. The church, which can hold 400 people, is very much frequented because of the Sisters' daily adoration. There are 18 or 20 habitable rooms, four floors, a ground floor, basement, and a little garden. A considerable amount of money has been given to the good religious in order to live more graciously elsewhere. The Archbishop of Paris wants the chapel to be kept on for worship. It is Mr. Ferdinand Riant who is carrying on the negotiations in this business. He is greatly encouraging me to purchase it in order to make our work known in Paris, and have a centre for our meetings. He tells me that the church's 'clientele' is well disposed and generous, and it's a place where there would be a lot of resources for our undertakings. We would be given preference.

I replied asking him to make every effort to reduce the price to 200,000 francs, and after Easter I would take myself to Paris to discuss this offer with the Archbishop and the good sisters. Do you know this house? Is it in a good situation for us? Should we take it up immediately even if we have to pay 250,000 francs? Is it a good area? Have we a good opportunity to succeed there?

We could, perhaps, if we were to buy it, continue with the exposition of the Blessed Sacrament from 9am to 4pm. This would be a way of having a congregation all the time and providing a little talk each evening for them if we think it pertinent, or have it, at least sometimes, during the week. Our different associations could have their centre there. We would be officially, and definitively, set up in Paris.

Reply immediately and let me know what you think.

Cheerio, Father.

1. Apart from Fr. Roussel who is French, I cannot see who you are going to send to Issoudun. If you have anyone better, he will be well received. As for Brother Dezpresse, who have you as a replacement for him in Barcelona? I no more look to him than I do to anyone. Someone who is pious and serious is needed for that house where there will only be Fathers Miniot and Casas because Fr. Roger is returning to Issoudun.
2. As regards Fr. Robinet, by keeping him in the novitiate until the end of the year, he must make his retreat like the others.
3. Fr. Ilge is causing me concern, in effect. Fr. Joseph (Balzer) writes to me saying that, having been 5 months away, Ilge has returned to Berlin half disorientated. Get him to come to Antwerp immediately to spend some months with you at the novitiate. There you will assess him and try to reintroduce him to the religious life; then we shall see what can be done with him. Between ourselves, Fr. Ilge has lost his vocation and it is already compromised. Do not allow him any longer to take himself off to Germany or elsewhere under the pretext of fund-raising for you; this is no great help at all to him.

Dear Fr. Joseph can stay on longer in Berlin with the kind Grey Sisters while waiting on us to set up a house of our Society either in Berlin or elsewhere, something which would be very advantageous. Perhaps we might have a better opportunity in Münster or in Munich. An attempt must be made.

If you can find nobody better than Fr. Roussel, he should be sent on immediately if convenient for you. As for Barcelona, you may wait 8 more days.

2. If your good Brother François goes to Quito I shall give him permission to spend eight days with your Savoyard family and then proceed to Issoudun in sufficient time for both of you to arrange your affairs with each other.
3. I have to tell you that they want to take away from us our Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart. I have just received from Paris a plan, author's name not given, which is the same as ours which, obviously, is the model used. The author says that the setting-up is urgent and that Rome shall be its centre...

I forwarded all this to Fr. Jouët asking him to bring these intrigues to the attention of the Cardinal Vicar. The Archbishop of Quito wants to set up this Chevalerie in his diocese and throughout the whole of South America, which is so attached to the Sacred Heart.

I have made some helpful changes to my first plan, I am sending this sheet on to you; have a proof made of it straightaway since there isn't much time. Then, on correcting it yourself, send it to me with two or three copies straightaway. Then I shall send it back to you to reap something positive from it. Make no delay! It is a service I am asking from you. You will make sure to pay close attention to what is added and to changes, taking note of where they should be placed. You will know, I hope, where they are required.

Issoudun, April 9, 1887

Dear Father,

Our project, Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart, has been grabbed from us and an attempt is being made to exploit it. Here's what has come to me from this address in Paris: The Director of the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

The writing has no signature, and it is written by a practised hand. It is either by a Jesuit or an Assumptionist priest for there is mention of Our Lady of Salvation and pilgrimages... In any event, I am forwarding the original to you. It is time to get the Cardinal Vicar involved, all the more so when the Archbishop of Quito wants to set up officially this Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart in his diocese and have it spread in the whole of South America.

I am sending you on our plan which I have shortened and completed. Have a copy made of it immediately in Rome which you will pass on to the Cardinal Vicar, taking note of his remarks and all the changes which he will consider appropriate. You could begin, perhaps, by setting it up officially in Rome without commotion. At the very least have it approved or encouraged through a word from the Cardinal Vicar. This is necessary if we want to succeed. Bishop de la Celle could perhaps be in some way helpful to you through finding some people well disposed towards accepting this Chevalerie.

If we do not achieve something positive, we shall be forestalled and be without the advantages which this project could ensure for our Society, which thought about it in the first place. Do not lose the sheets I sent to you; I haven't got copies – in particular the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart and the changes introduced. You will let me have the proof which you will have had done in Rome. You may, yourself, also make changes which you think might be helpful.

Since Sunday I am laid low by a head neuralgia in the head (toothache) from which I have no respite day or night.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

NB: I sent Fr. Barral in Antwerp the page on the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart to be put into proofs by him; I shall send one on to you. Dear Father Vaudon,

For the past three days I am suffering night and day from a dental neuralgia. It becomes impossible, then, to go to Paris to deal with the rue de Calais business as I had promised Mr. Riant. Try, then, to go and see this kind gentleman, with Fr. Delaporte, as soon as possible. He lives at 36 rue de Berlin. If I could get to Paris by the end of the week, I shall try to do so. But there is an issue which preoccupies me about this matter. I ask myself if we are not putting ourselves in danger of a second expulsion. Until such time as the Archbishop of Paris guarantees us the contrary, we cannot give thought to this acquisition. Go and see, then, Archbishop Richard about this issue, together with Fr. Delaporte. I already mentioned this problem to Mr. Riant; he made me no reply on the matter. Speak to him again about it to avoid being taken by surprise. Moreover, Fr. Delaporte leaves it to be understood that we could, perhaps, get the house of the Mercy Fathers, rue de l'Assumption, one day, and that at the rue de Calais would then be pointless. Besides, he adds that if we keep Saint Charles we shall not have enough competent personnel for placement in both houses. All this calls for reflection. Poor St. Charles is not getting by at all well over some time. Fr. Pervilhac has very much compromised himself and us. Speak to dear Fr. Batard and he will have enough to say about this. Could you preach a preparatory novena for the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to the Nantes Claretian Sisters? It will begin on the 1st or 2nd of May and finish on the 9th or 10th of the same month.

Cheerio, Father.

My most warm good wishes to dear Fr. Delaporte.

Issoudun, April 14, 1887

Dear Fr. Piperon,

1. I want especially to thank you for your good wishes for the feast, also from the kind fathers, novices, brothers. For my part I pray very much for you all.
2. I replied to Fr. Barral; I don't know if he got my letter or if he is getting in readiness for me a proof of the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart. I am waiting on it.
3. I note with pleasure that your two houses at Antwerp and Tilburg are well set up; but you do not greatly give the impression if you are concerned whether or not our other houses are like them. You are aware that the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre is losing Fr. Derichemont who is going to Quito; Fr. Rosenkranz is for quite some time unable to work, as well as Fr. Hastier and Brother Moncorget. The departure of Messrs. Clamadier, Mons, L. Merg, d'Habert has greatly increased the workload of our young confrères. Fr. Batard has returned to Issoudun. Fr. Thomas is returning in his place (at the St. Charles School, Paris) where he will take some hours' classes each day. Brothers Bouvier and Peyrot fly only on one wing. All this, however, doesn't worry you so long as your little schemes are not thrown into disarray. Now there's the Barcelona house which is about to lose two of its members: Frs. Roger and Barral. They will need to be replaced not by deaf or nondescript (characters) but by some responsible people.

Why are you not making use of those 5 young men who are staying with you in advantageous availability? If they need to be kept there and supervised, it seems to me that they couldn't be better placed than being under your guidance and that of Fr. Klotz; everywhere else they would be less reliably looked after than with you.

Why isn't Brother Suchet in Brother Dezpresse's class? He would be there under your supervision and you could, better than anyone else, lead him along. What are you looking for? One must do one's best with what one has to hand. Brother Dezpresse will go to Barcelona. Meanwhile, you must find some way of replacing Fr. Roussel when he comes to Issoudun as a replacement for Fr. Derichemont. This is necessary. It is said that you have the young Wagemakers in the novitiate who will be available at the end of May and could very competently teach for you; if it isn't possible, see if it is possible to make use of Brother Gouthéraud or someone like that...

Gouthéraud was ordained to the priesthood at Issoudun next year, June 10, 1888, by Bishop Navarre, and left for New Guinea 17 days later, June 27, 1888, with Navarre. He died at Vunapope, New Britain, August 26, 1907.

It seems to me that Brother Delmas is not over-burdened. In any event you can easily send to Tilburg the German and Belgian beginners. That's their place, and Brother Delmas will be available to you. And as for Fr. Klotz, what responsibilities will he have in Tilburg? You do not mention anything whatsoever about him except his being purely and simply Superior. It seems to me that he will not have enough to engage his zeal and energy. Father Offermans, as Bursar, could be doing something else as well as this. You may, then, recall to Antwerp as teachers either Brother Perriot or Brother Helfer if you need them.

4. As for Father Robinet, when will he have finished his novitiate?

5. Please, I beg you, Father, do not call to vows those whose health is shattered and who become like pillars in the infirmary, greatly embarrass the Society and whose inevitable outcome is death. Do not even keep in the novitiate those whose health is quite weak. The result is simply inconvenience with nothing to be gained. Moreover, it's neither in the novitiate, scholasticate, or in teaching that health becomes restored; it becomes more and more an issue of compromise in their regard; there's the reality. After 4 or 5 years it becomes downright calamitous... It appears that Brother Dezpresse's health is beginning to cause concern. The Barcelona climate would be much better for him than that of Antwerp.

2. Brother Benedetti wants to have his perpetual vows on October 17. I leave this to your judgement; I am sending you his letter. Nothing new here. Have you hopes of getting an indult for the earlier model of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart statue? Have you been successful as regards the habit?

Article 1411To Father Jean Vaudon, MSC, Paris.*

L 18870420

Issoudun, April 20, 1887

Dear Father,

1. The thoughts in my last letter with regard to the new purchase were inspired in me by more serious considerations. I shared them with you as being a consultor in order to have you disengaged from such heavy responsibility. I shall, however, follow the thinking of the majority.
2. It was decided, independently of your departure for Paris, that we would disengage from Saint Charles unless the Archbishop of Paris advised us otherwise. Since His Grace, however, seems to share our views, we must say directly to Fathers Pervilhac and Parayre that they should no longer count on us, and at the end of the school year we shall in fact disengage from this undertaking.
3. As for the lodging at number 7, it was Fr. Thomas who on his trips to Paris with Father Batard agreed with Fathers Pervilhac and Parayre that we would continue to lodge there, staying in their place but only as lodgers. Get in touch then with Fr. Thomas and these Saint Charles priests to find out if they need this house, at number 7, as a lodging for their pupils and teachers, and we shall leave there in the month of July. I am requesting no more than this. And, accordingly, Fathers Vaudon and Delaporte will look out for a new house to rent either in Passy, if they wish, or nearer to the centre of Paris, which would be still better. In any event, this change as regards number 7 only concerns Fathers Pervilhac and Parayre: it is their concern more than ours since it is they who will be replacing the former lodgers.
4. Besides the 4,000 francs which I made available to Father Batard for Saint Charles, there is 1,000 francs of our money which Fr. Batard provided. As regards the 6 months' lodging which I paid in advance for rue des Sablons, the new owner deducted 1,500 or 2,000 francs. Fr. Batard used 1,000 francs of this money to pay Saint Charles' debts. 5,000 francs, then, are owed to us and I want to be reimbursed immediately. Fr. Batard tells me that he wrote down this amount on the St. Charles' accounts as being due to us; otherwise, I have had from him the receipt for the 4,000 francs I sent to you. You will pass this on to Fr. Thomas against reimbursement as well as the 1,000 francs which I have just mentioned to you.
5. My presence does not seem to be needed in Paris at the moment. We very much need to look after our funds. It seems – so Fr. Caër tells me – that Fr. Morisseau did not spare anything in the acquisition of things which do not look, so it seems, as if they are needed; this is a pity. To provide an example, here's a note listing books bought by Fr. Morisseau which he could have done without for the most part, and yet he brings along to Issoudun bill after bill. It's unfortunate to be experiencing so little of the spirit of poverty and obedience!

Cheerio, Father.

L 18870421

Issoudun, April 21, 1887

Dear Father,

1. Our First Communion is on the 8th Sunday, May 1; it is, then, impossible to absent myself, something I greatly regret.
2. I am going to write to Fr. Thomas that the 7th does not suit us, that we do not have it except for this first term, and he should no longer depend on us. It is no longer possible for us, in effect, to stay any further length of time in this house when there isn't full freedom and which is dependent on Saint Charles, from which we shall be breaking away in 3 months. In the very words of the Archbishop of Paris, we cannot advantageously continue to take it on. How unfortunate we were the day we made arrangements and trusted in Fr. Pervilhac... What a mess!
3. As for the Germain property, here is what we have decided on with Fr. Guyot if, in addition, you approve of it, together with Fr. Vaudon:
  - a) offer 50 francs a metre for the whole in four lots – 8,020 metres, or 401,000 francs; it's a little less than the stated price, and I do not know if such is possible, but I believe so – ask about it.
  - b) if the third section doesn't have a higher bid, and the matter is left over to adjudication, offer 50 francs a metre – 5,656 – that is to say 282,800 francs; and if, for example, there was a bid of 500 francs on the sale price of 300,000 francs, add 500 francs which would make the third lot arrive at 301,000 francs. I believe he will, in so doing, be well paid.
  - c) if those two proposals do not prevail, offer 51 or 52,000 francs for the fourth lot. Fr. Guyot thinks that this fourth lot on rue Nicolas would better suit as a temporary residence than that of the second lot, and while searching for a good opportunity to install ourselves elsewhere in more appealing conditions, we could rent this house. This would not be a questionable disposing of funds, because this house in the fourth lot is being rented at 4.88 francs. Buying it at 50 or 52,000 francs we would be more comfortably set up, so it would seem, than at number 7, and in better conditions.

Be good enough, then, Father, to visit this building and take note of what is available. Could an oratory be installed? A parlour (sitting room)? How many bedrooms? Is there a garden where we can take to the open air and walk in the shade?

Let me know, dear Father, what you think about all this, and what you would do in my place, I commit myself to make you happy and to setting ourselves up conveniently in Paris, at least for the time being.

Cheerio, dear Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Since dear Fr. Vaudon is not going to Brussels, could he go and preach the novena for Our Lady of the Sacred Heart at Nantes in the Claretian (Sisters) chapel, commencing the first week in May?

NB: A complaint must be lodged against the so-called community which exists as between number 7 and Saint Charles. Put your foot down on the floor of your library. You should rid yourself of the Lumets because this family is not very agreeable. Ask Fr. Thomas to take them back to Saint Charles.

Issoudun, April 21, 1887

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. I haven't had any news of you since you left Marseilles and that, as you said to me, should have been on Easter Monday. Is it that you have taken some detours like the schoolboys who take the longest route to school? Our concerns, however, demand your immediate presence in Rome. I would beg you to leave aside other people's concerns and concentrate on ours!

2. I am forwarding to you our proposals for the Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart, and there are some changes which bring out more advantageously its purpose and will make it more practical. You are aware that the Archbishop of Quito would like to establish it in Ecuador; try to ensure the support of the Cardinal Vicar for this work, as well as the blessing of the Pope. That should be adequate for the moment. If we do not begin this we shall, without doubt, be bypassed. The Dominicans are about to recreate the Chevaliers of Christ's Militia; begun, so they say, by St. Dominic. They make a great thing about reviving it. They are not going to succeed. This kind of set up is out of date; it doesn't belong to our time, and in no way meets present-day needs. All the more reason, then, for us to hurry up.

I am sending you this book which you will receive with my letter. You will take note that Papal approval was not lacking. What I am presenting to you is no more than a proposal. I shall be very pleased if the Cardinal Vicar would like to look at it, change it, and make all the suggestions which he would consider appropriate. Our concern is to be at the service of Holy Church and the Christian Community by basing ourselves on the Sacred Heart who wishes to save the world. It's a powerful lever which Divine Providence has placed in our hands and of which we should avail ourselves to bring about good. There you have our special vocation.

I am depending on you; cheerio, dear Father.

Yes, Father (sic!),

1. We welcomed Fr. Roussel and Brother Dezpresse; the latter has already left for Barcelona.
2. Fr. Ilge seems to me to be taking a wrong direction. All the more reason for insisting that he return to Antwerp immediately, and if he is not already there insist on his coming there straightaway in the name of holy obedience, and if he refuses forbid him the exercise of ministry (interdictis a sacris). I believe that this young man was treated too considerately, shown too much kindness, and allowed excessive latitude in going his own way... I regret very much that you did not judge it appropriate to forward to him the sharp letter I wrote to him.

Dear Father,

1. Father Th. (Thomas) is not very reasonable with regard to the Lumets, and the third storey of number 7. I hope that following my letter yesterday he will hesitate no longer in fully meeting your request. If it's otherwise you must protest most strongly, and as you must be away from Paris for the month of May, you will ask Fr. Vaudon to go away also at the same time, either coming to Issoudun or going to Vichy. And our cook Alexander will be sent by you to Fr. Piperon in Antwerp. It has to be the case then that either the Lumets leave or take charge of Saint Charles.
2. I leave it to you and Fr. Vaudon to judge for yourselves what is best for us, either the section of the Germain property, the house in the rue de Calais or an old hotel, not very expensive, in the centre of Paris, that is if you can find one large enough and which we could, in time, improve.

Your proposal for the purchase in rue de Calais is not unattractive; in this way we would avoid registration fees. We would not have to lay out more than 100,000 francs (roughly 320,000 euros), because the evaluation assessor has associated a sum of 100,000 francs with this house. We would take responsibility for that evaluation as offered to me by Mr. Priant. After our First Communion celebration, which is taking place next Sunday, May 1, and having discussed matters with you on your way to Issoudun, I shall go to Paris and visit this house. Nevertheless it is necessary that it can be lived in without endangering health; it may be necessary to enlarge the rooms. Is this possible? How many people would lodge in this house? Quite obviously, this house can only be provisional.

Thank you for your letter which I have just now received.

1. The Habit: Very willingly I shall remove the red buttons and red borders. Everything will be in white except the cincture and heart. You can yourself change in this manner the habit which you have. As for the cloak, I shall change the collar; nothing is easier. Do the same with the cloak you have. It is quite easy to open the habit right down because it makes it more comfortable. Carry out the same change on your own.
2. The former model of the Statue: Since the issue creates so many difficulties at present, let us keep quiet, say nothing and stay with the status quo. Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will provide for the future. In any event, keep the petition until later.
3. Chevalier of the Sacred Heart: Let the Cardinal Vicar see the new plan and since we have already had the approval to go ahead from Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne, Bishop Torcade of Aix, Archbishop Marchal of Bourges and the Archbishop of Quito, try to ensure, if not Papal approval, at least support, blessing and the Cardinal Vicar's approval, having changed and added everything he deemed pertinent. The hour would appear to have come.
4. Marseilles: I am pleased to note all the good-will the Bishop of Marseilles and his clergy have for our work and for our Society. I would also be very pleased if one of us could be procurator for our missions at Marseilles, while waiting on a definite foundation. But who have we to put there? Would Fr. Deidier be suitable? Left to myself, I do not think so. Anyway Our Lord will look after this when the moment comes.

If you think you can pay and meet your transactions, buy this new ground which in fact seems most suitable in your view, or at least the side nearest to your house. As for the ground which is beside the tramway, is this included in the 7,000 metres to which you refer? If not, one should come to an agreement about the price so that you can buy later if you need it, and also in order to avoid being taken by surprise. Try to get some reductions on the price at 11 francs, 50 (about 36.8 euros), a metre.

Dear Father,

1. Tomorrow you will be receiving Alexandre (Delimoges) at the novitiate, the cook at number 7 rue Franklin. He is a mature man with whom our Paris confrères are very happy in every respect. He is an excellent cook; my intention would be to leave him with you for two months and then have him back in Paris with our confrères, and I would seek an indult for this. You can make use of him to train brothers to cook; he is a true treasure; make the most of him. As I write Fr. Delaporte is preaching in Toulouse and Fr Vaudon is leaving for Vichy. Fr. Ricard has asked to join us. I met this priest (aged 45); he has good presence and seems to be well educated and intelligent. He was at the Mercy (Fr. Delaporte's former community) which no longer exists, its members focusing on America, and this explains the disengagement of Fr. Picard. Fr. Vaudon spoke highly of him, he being the one who introduced him. Fr. Morisseau agreed to accept him; I added my support. You will judge for yourself.
3. On my return from Paris I met the two brothers who are going to Quito; they seem alright to me.
4. I received just now your second letter. I am pleased that Fr. Ilge has returned to the Society. Make a good religious out of him and he will make his services available to us (see below, passim!).
5. Mr. Hermann is a crafty one and you have done well to be careful with him. The letter you wrote to him is very good and you will see what his reply is like. Do not forget that he has given you first preference in purchasing at a price which is not fictitious, but assured and realistic and in agreement with an adjudicator. I leave you to judge this matter since you best know your resources and your commitments and the reasons which compel you to acquire the ground. But in any event do your utmost to ensure that there is an opening on to Amsterdam Street.

Dear Father,

1. I am back from Saint Nazaire; I saw to the embarkation of our confrères on Tuesday evening. Keep them in your prayers.
2. I asked you to get permission for Fr. Caër to make perpetual vows before his departure, but no doubt you forgot about it.
3. I am pleased about the appointment of dear Fr. Navarre (as Bishop). I await impatiently the consistory in which his name is mentioned. I am sorry that he is not being ordained either in Rome or Bourges. His trip to Europe would have made a greater impact. He would have provided Rome with all the necessary information about our missions. His visit to the Propagation of the Faith and the Holy Child authorities would have led them to double and triple the allocation (of resources) which is too little for such a mission. I have already given 12,000 francs (about 38,410 euros) and now they continue to say they are in miserable circumstances. It is impossible for me to do everything. The other houses, Antwerp, Rome, do nothing for the missions; everything falls back on Issoudun. Fr. Navarre, if in France, would have made his case, drawn support and encouraged vocations.

If Rome does not want Fr. Navarre (to be consecrated in Bourges or Rome), the Propaganda Cardinal will send him his letters of nomination either to our procure or to Cardinal Moran. I do not see the need for one of us to take them (the letters) to him. One can, and one must, avoid this expense.

4. Rome does well not to grant full power to the Sydney Cardinal over the English missions in Oceania. Zeal would soon be paralyzed and these countries given over to the rapacity of the Irish. (!)
5. Frs. Navarre and Bontemps write to me about the need, or at least the opportunity which is there for us, to take over immediately, through some missionaries of our Society, the Gilbert and Solomon Islands. In my reply I am asking them to do so if this initiative seems a possibility to them. It's then that we shall have to increase resources.

Dear Father,

1. Yes, the indult was renewed on June 4, 1884.
2. I hope that Fr. Picard will come through (the novitiate). He should be encouraged and supported, while at the same time being firm and watchful with him: be kind like a father.

3. You say nothing about Fr. Ilge. Where is he? Have you at last got him under your control? Are you giving him serious training in the religious life?

4. It is absolutely imperative that we give thought to founding a house in Germany. The well-being and development of the Society call for it, not only for undertakings but also in the interest of our missions. It should not be that concern about a diminishing influence and the resources of the Antwerp and Tilburg houses impede this plan (for Germany). We must raise our thinking onto a higher plane, since otherwise the Issoudun house would never have made the foundations to which it has given rise. One must equally have in mind that one day we shall found – and the sooner the better – a specifically Dutch house at Tilburg or elsewhere. Begin already to have this in mind.

5. Your plan for an association not alone seems useless in my opinion, but quite dangerous. I do not understand how you let yourself be led into such-like issues given the good judgment which characterizes you. It has to be that Fr. Barral has a pernicious influence on you. You should, then, challenge the more or less seductive utopias which emerge from that badly balanced head, for otherwise he will lead you very far. With him projects succeed each other like the months. You can, yourself alone, set yourself up as being in charge of your activities and your house, and as the head of the house pass on a request to whomsoever you consider to be capable of acting in your name at home and abroad. Do you not see then that these 6 or 7 associates which you are selecting might, sooner or later, because of serious issues, be sent away from the Society or withdraw from it themselves, or come like former priest Albert to claim from you their share (of the finances)?

Moreover this association has the full whiff of that kind of business proscribed by the Sacred Canons. And in fact I very much fear that you are launching yourself a little too much into business. To have my approval for your association plan, Fr. Barral did say that there was a need to be prudent, because if one of our houses in Germany, Holland, or Belgium were later to separate itself from the Society, it could disengage itself from the Association and the direction of the Annals independently of yourselves. This is child-like reasoning. For a house to separate itself from the mother house and give rise to schism, there must be approval from Rome and the Superior General, something which is not easily obtained. It is an issue which is virtually fanciful, whereas the bad faith of a Society member, even religious, can be seen every day.

6. You may, then, send on Fr. Robinet to make his vows at Issoudun as soon as the twelve months are up, beginning from the day you admitted him to the postulancy, which in reality is the beginning of the novitiate.

7. If you are certain about the illegitimate birth of Alexandre (Delimoges) ask for the dispensation yourself in Rome through Fr. Jouët.

8. I hope to go to Antwerp in June; we shall see as regards your council.

9. I would greatly like to send you the priests Hériault and Bizeuil for a month's retreat.

Issoudun, May 20, 1887

Dear Father,

We had our confirmation yesterday and here I am with a little more time on hand. I am taking advantage of it to write to you.

1. The Archbishop of Paris has requested more time before giving his answer as regards the house in rue de Calais. These delays do not appear to me to augur well.

2. When you are back in Paris do what you think is right about offering St. Michel of the Sacred Heart to the Pope. How much for each picture?

3. Yes, it would be appreciated if there was a pilgrimage to Issoudun. You can give it consideration.

4. I am sending you the latest edition of the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart. You can put down on one of the sheets of paper the additions which you mentioned to me, and return it to me. I spoke to Mr. Mun about the Chevaliers of the Sacred Heart.

Mun was a contemporary French Catholic politician strongly biased towards social Catholicism. At first a Monarchist, he latterly became a Republican Deputy, being particularly identified with legislation affecting workers, such as that with regard to women in 1892.

He informed me that since the Holy Father forbade him to create a political and Christian party, he did not wish to become involved, at least directly, with our project, and he would let me know exactly what he thought about it. That is what I am about to do. Does he live at 38 rue François Premier, Paris? Fr. Jouët has written to say that the Cardinal Vicar, quite supportive of the Chevaliers' project, has again spoken to the Pope who replied that the time was not right at present. I only see one choice open: attempting to get as much episcopal approval as possible as well as that of the most distinguished members of political parties. The Pope will then be led to consider that the time is ripe for this project and, with the jubilee in mind, things could work out as you say. It would be marvellous. Let us continue to hope. Could you not go and see Cardinal Desprez in Toulouse and get his support? We have already had that of Archbishop de la Tour d'Auvergne and our present Archbishop, the Archbishop of Aix, Torcade, and the Archbishop of Quito. You might also get in touch with bishops whom you know, the Bishop of Angers, for example, and so many more. But you would have to meet them in person... The time has come, and otherwise we shall be forestalled. Try and see Mr. de Belcastel; he will be on our side and draw good lay people to us.

Issoudun, May 27, 1887

Dear Father,

Just this minute I had a letter from Mr. Riant informing me that the Archbishop of Paris "is giving us permission to go to rue de Calais, but before anything is agreed His Grace wishes to come to an agreement with me about the requirements with regard to ministry in the church". What does this last sentence mean? The Archbishop says that he can meet me on Saturday, the eve of Pentecost, from 10 to 11 in the morning, or next Monday from 10 thirty to 11 thirty a.m. And if I cannot keep the appointment, I can be replaced by one of my Paris confrères. Other than yourself or Fr. Delaporte I can see nobody to whom I can entrust this task. I replied that it was impossible for me to go to Paris on the days mentioned, but I could get to Paris Holy Trinity Sunday in the afternoon, and would be available to meet His Grace on the Monday.

When you come back to Paris, you might go and see Mr. Riant, and if Archbishop Richard could see you on one of the days this coming week you might let me know what ensued as a result of the meeting; it cannot be that our hands are left tied such-wise that we can neither preach or have our meetings in the church. We would not be achieving the aim we are setting ourselves. It would be better, then, to decide on having a convenient pied-à-terre, in the faubourg Saint Germain, as you said yourself. Let Fr. Guyot know about all this if he has returned.

2. Yes, Mr. de Mendoza could stay with the rest of you in the rue de Calais, or elsewhere, while waiting to return to Rome. I leave it to himself what to decide.

3. We have been offered for sale a large amount of ground, 8,200 metres, at the rear of the Invalides near the Church of St. Francis Xavier; this ground is enclosed by rue d'Eblé, rue Duroc, la rue Bertrand, and la rue Masseran (all in the 7th arrondissement). There is no house on this ground. The proprietor, who is a Christian, on becoming aware that it was to be taken over by religious, would sell this ground at 120 francs a metre (about 382 euros). What do you think about this area and the price of the ground? I am told that it is a very good area and this land is at the very least worth 200 francs a metre (640 euros), almost double the price at which it is now being offered!

4. Take good care of yourself. Yes, you can spend the time you mention with your family before finally returning (to Paris).

Dear Father,

I thank you for all the news you have sent about our dear and well-regarded Fr. Navarre, and also for your lovely article on Quito. You will kindly take charge of the enclosed letter which I have written to Cardinal Simeoni and deliver it to His Eminence. You would do well yourself to support the case I am making: the more I think about it the more I am convinced that Fr. Navarre should come to France for his (episcopal) ordination. This is also the view of the Archbishop of Bourges. His Grace gives us reason to hope that for such an event (the ordination) he might, perhaps, arrange for the re-opening of our basilica... What a celebratory day! If the Cardinal grants your request, you might, perhaps, telegraph such news to Father Hartzler in Sydney who will then pass it on to Fr. Navarre. Time would be gained this way.

2. Our June Annals were already printed when you notified me of Fr. Navarre's nomination. Write an article immediately on such an important event for us, and our mission's success; it will be published in July (which it was in the July Annals, 339-346; Jouët's "Letter from Rome"). You might send a copy (of your article) to Bishop Morel for Catholic Missions.

Written by Jouët following Chevalier's letter of May 28, above, and also accompanied by the supporting letter of the Archbishop of Bourges, Joseph Marchal. The Chevalier name is, presumably, given at the end in order to carry greater weight, although the letter was written by Jouët.

Your Eminence,

I wish to express in everybody's name our deep appreciation for the signal favour which His Holiness Leo XIII has deemed fit to grant our humble Society when naming Fr. Navarre, whose devotedness is known to you, Apostolic Vicar of Melanesia with episcopal status.

Be good enough, Your Eminence, to place at the feet of our Sovereign Pontiff our gratitude and the expression of our deepest respect.

I shall not forget, Your Eminence, that it is to your regard for us and the lively interest which you have for our remote missions that we owe this favour from the Holy See, the effect of which will have a great impact on the conversion of our poor natives.

Your Eminence, be kind enough to round off your graciousness by sanctioning the ordination in France of Fr. Navarre. Many good reasons would appear to favour this request. The presence of the Reverend Father among us will excite interest in his work from the leadership of the Propagation of the Faith and the holy Child, whose contributions are well known for not being adequate; in addition he will stimulate the zeal and charitableness of our supportive associates in favour of this important mission which so badly needs resources. Moreover, it is the first Apostolic Vicariate of our Congregation; the detailed information which he would provide us with on the attitude and disposition of the natives would greatly interest our young clerics and have a helpful impact on vocations.

In the hope that Your Eminence may kindly accede to our fervent hope, please accept my most respectful good wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier.

Accompanying letter from the Archbishop of Bourges.

The Archbishop of Bourges asks His Eminence to accept his deep regard and kindly allow him to associate himself with the gratitude of Rev. Fr. Chevalier, conveying with him his own sincere thanks for the appointment of Rev. Fr. Navarre to the episcopacy with the title of Vicar Apostolic of Melanesia. This is an honour and reward for the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart which began in the diocese of Bourges, and also for the diocese itself. The joy of all would be complete if Fr. Navarre could return and have his episcopal consecration among his own in France, and it could well lead to great benefits for the Melanesia mission. It is by being so persuaded that the Archbishop of Bourges would like to draw Your Eminence's kind attention to Fr. Chevalier's request.

Dear Father,

I couldn't get to Paris; it had to be Fr. Batard. He saw Archbishop Richard who was exceptionally welcoming. He has given us full permission to preach our devotions, set them up and hear Confessions in the rue de Calais chapel as well as arrange all the meetings which we might consider helpful. He asked us to be circumspect; that was it. He will accept as being part of the diocese those priests who will be at rue de Calais. Given the circumstances, he does not want us to buy for the present but just rent, if Mr. Riant agrees. And if we do not stay in rue de Calais, he will accept any establishment by us in Paris wherever we want to be. He mentions that in the St. Vincent de Paul parish there is a vacancy to be filled and good work to be carried out. The parish priest of Holy Trinity, according to the Archbishop, is not alone in favour of our being set up there, but appears to be very pleased and gives us all the freedom we want; there are no religious in his parish. The Archbishop accepts that we have matins each morning and benediction every evening if we so wish, and even adoration.

2. Fathers Hériault and Bizeuil are going to Antwerp for a month's retreat. They will arrive in Paris tomorrow, Wednesday, at 4.30pm and will leave the same evening at 10.30 without fail; try to be at the station for they would be ill at ease, or send either Fr. Thomas or Fr. Lancin to the station. They will go to number 7, rue Franklin, by boat. I am waiting for Fr. Delaporte who is coming tomorrow. On Sunday evening at 4.30 I hope to arrive in Paris and meet Mr. Riant to conclude this matter. Come to meet me if you are still in Paris. We shall have a chat.

Dear Father,

Fathers Hériault and Bizeuil will leave Paris on Wednesday evening at 10.30 and will arrive at Antwerp on Thursday morning at 7.19. Both should make a very serious retreat of a month's duration. They need to revitalize themselves in the religious life. Fr. Bizeuil, in particular, having no more than the appearance of a religious. For all that, he is not such a bad fellow, even if he only knows by name the vows of obedience and poverty. He is very partial to an easy life, abhors mortification, particularly at table, avoids carefully whatever bores him, tires him, disturbs him, etc. He is neither fervent or regular, absenting himself as much as possible from the religious exercises. Fr. Hériault is as stubborn as a Breton and only does what he wants to do. Nevertheless, he is much better than Fr. Bizeuil. Do not accommodate them. We need true religious today, people unlike these.

His Grace informed me that he hopes to go to Paris on Monday evening to meet the minister on Tuesday about the reopening of our chapel. You have a better opportunity of being successful in getting this request than the Archbishop. I would appeal to you to try and anticipate him by going (to the minister) on Monday afternoon or Tuesday morning with the deputy from the Indre, Mr. Spuller, and the Senators for this area.

All the more so do I want you to go beforehand because your intervention will have, if you succeed, a deep impact on the population there which is in a desperate plight. You must, then, in the interest of your own good-standing, have the honour of being instrumental in this reopening which I consider to be certain.

Please accept, Count, my respectful regards in C.J.

Issoudun, June 21, 1887

Dear Father,

1. I duly received the bulls for the appointment of Fr. Navarre and your nice, interesting, article about his appointment and our missions. Many thanks.
2. A Paris painter, Mr. Matou, who has painted in the St. Sulpice Church a work representing St. Louis burying at Damiette the plague victims, has offered to do on a normal scale St. Michael of the Sacred Heart. But he wants 4,000 francs (about 12,800 euros) without framing. He advises that this last be done in Rome; is this a possibility? Up to now our Annals have only collected 942 francs (about 3,010 euros). Have yours brought a much greater sum? I have heard nothing, neither from Belgium or our other centres. If there's no effort made to collect the necessary funds, quite clearly I am not going to commission the picture. The issue is, then, serious and urgent.

3. I sent a telegram to Sydney so that Fr. Navarre might be contacted and informed to come as soon as possible to Issoudun for his ordination. I believe it could take place on the 8th of September. I would need you to be in Issoudun one month beforehand to help me get everything well prepared. Come sooner if it's possible, especially if the basilica is reopened. The Archbishop of Bourges, who initially appeared to be likely to get everything, now begins to have doubts about the success of his efforts. Nevertheless, let's hope and pray. I believe that two months would not be too much to create a stir among our associates and prepare a lovely ceremony. Make every effort to be here with us at the beginning of July. Arrange beforehand all the business of your house. I have nobody around here capable of providing me with active and intelligent support.

4. I return to the subject of the Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart. It is the only way to group together Catholic militants and create a forceful group presence which could provide the Church and Society with a most significant forceful impact. The Freemason army makes frightening progress every day, being invasive everywhere and very soon everything will be shaken to its foundations both in Church and Society... Our lazy Catholics would appear to be oblivious of the danger.

Since modern society enters on a new phase, it is equally necessary that we have new ways of fighting and combating which requisitely meet needs. One can very well hesitate, discuss, put off, but there are no other means of combating evil than those Our Lord himself has provided for us... his divine Heart. Undoubtedly, the Church has a thousand ways at our disposal to assault the heavens and be favourably received. This I know and accept, submitting most wholeheartedly, but Jesus Christ, who knows the situation, has not hesitated in proposing to us devotion to His Sacred Heart most specifically. This devotion is of the essence of Christianity and contains within itself all other devotions. If we believe in Our Lord's revelations, we have only one efficacious remedy for the present evils, His divine Heart. If the triumphant cry of St. Michael in the first combat was "Quis ut Deus" (who but God), in the second it will be "Quis ut Cor Jesu" (who but the Heart of Jesus). Who is God or the kindness of God Incarnate? "Deus charitas est" (God is love). It is not any longer by the Holy Rosary or the Third Order of St. Francis (these means having been given for an era which is no longer ours), but by the Sacred Heart of Jesus. Sooner or later one must come to this last!

Oh! Pray to our Lord to inspire his Vicar (the Pope) to offer us officially the only means which can actually withdraw us from the abyss: we are not, perhaps, yet worthy of such a favour. That's why the head of our holy Church does not consider putting forward the Sacred Heart as a sovereign remedy.

Bishop de Mun, with whom I discussed confidentially our Chevalerie, told me: I obey the Papal orders. Let the Holy Father speak... He thought that he should mention this Chevalerie to the Father Alet, a Jesuit. This good man wrote me an absurd letter in which he said that an encircling undertaking is enough, and that the apostolate of prayer was the true Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart. I regret very much Bishop de Mun's indiscretion in this instance.

Following an observation made to me, I explained what the relationship of the Chevalerie would be with Church authority. This, and several other things added on, is to be found in the latest edition of the project included here.

A commendation, a word of encouragement from Rome, is not then to be considered likely? To prove to you that the wind is favourable to the Chevalerie of the Sacred Heart, I am sending you on two copies of an outrageous publication from Nevers which the Bishop has banned. Despite that, the unfortunate Fr. Baudry, who is involved with the magazine, continues to present his views.

5. Have you received the four copies of our new Constitutions? Fr. Deidier has drawn my attention to quite a number of errors and gaps. I shall correct all this for the printers and shortly send you some copies. If you also have some corrections to be made, send them on to me so that everything can be carried out at the same time.

Cheerio, Father.

Issoudun, June 22, 1887

Dear Father,

I read your two letters with keen interest. The advice of the Dominican priest seems very wise and reasonable to me. I share your views about Salzburg; it's there we should set ourselves up; a little undertaking there would be marvellous. We could make it the centre of a very important undertaking with regard to Germany. Go and see the Archbishop; speak to him about our Society, our Rome house, our missions, etc. Try to make him favourable and get his approval. If for the latter the Nuncio in Vienna needs to intervene, Bishop Galimberti, you will contact him, and in case of refusal you can telegraph Fr. Jouët who will immediately get a commendatory letter from Cardinal Simeoni in the Pope's name, as was done in Antwerp, and, thereafter, not alone will the opposition cease, but the Archbishop will become well disposed to us. Keep me informed day by day of the progress of your negotiations.

We want to offer Leo XIII on the occasion of his jubilee a lovely painting representing St. Michael of the Sacred Heart. This offer will be made in the name of all our associates worldwide. It is necessary, in order to bring this about, that all the Annals look for a contribution. You have said nothing about it so far in your Belgian, Dutch, German Annals. You had better hurry up. The painter is looking for 4,000 francs (about 12,800 euros) without the frame; that is to say a matter of 5,000 francs. We have only collected 983 francs; accordingly all the centres should get to work in order to arrive at the amount envisaged. Can we count on your Annals? If not, I shall withdraw from this undertaking which would be regrettable since it has already been publicized. If Fr. Ilge is with you convey to him my good wishes.

Issoudun, July 1, 1887

Dear Father Barral,

While admiring your commitment and energy I think you are moving a little more rapidly than is needed. Your role was to get permission as of right to establish ourselves here or there in Germany or Austria when the moment arrived, and, thereafter, to see if there might not be a house which would be suitable for us, and what the conditions would be. In consequence, following your report, the Council members would consider carefully the situation, and conclude as to whether or not one should act immediately or wait until later. Do not go outside these boundaries. You must be aware that I alone cannot make a decision about a new foundation. It has to be considered in Council. Besides the resources required, there is the problem of personnel. Where at the moment is there somebody available who would be needed for the new house? This is a big question mark. As well, what would Fr. Píperon say given all those debts which have been incurred by the Antwerp house? This (new) foundation would draw from Antwerp financial resources coming from Germany, or at least a large share of them. I can understand that once authorization has been granted to establish ourselves in Austria, we would begin in the modern fashion with a small rented house offering accommodation for two or three priests who, while making themselves available for ministry in the city (town), would try to prepare some youngsters for our Petite Oeuvre, while waiting for the moment when we can succeed with something better.

It is, then, pointless for you to prolong any further your visit to Austria, once permission has been given to set ourselves up there. Return immediately to Antwerp with Fr. Ilge. Then you shall provide us with a report on everything and we shall examine the situation in Council to consider whether we are able to undertake this foundation, or if it might not be wiser to wait until later.

This matter will come in its own time for the greater glory of the Sacred Heart and such an hour will not be long in coming. Opinion will take shape, a movement will be set going, hopes will rise, I know not how or through whom. But it is certain... and significant. Let us await patiently. It is a good thing that the Holy See has been forewarned and will gather that is not something utopian, but rather a real need and an efficacious way of bringing about success.
3. My dear friend, I carefully read your letter in confidence, and I am grateful to you for it. But, frankly, I do not see that there was anything such as to cause you so much upset. All those letters written to Marseilles either to Mr. Salomé or to your sister or others were written without my knowledge. My name was used and sometimes my signature was falsified. This was an outrageous thing which could have serious consequences. I shall try and put a stop to it. Fr. Maillard wrote word for word the letter mentioned. I regret, as much as you do, all that has gone on; it can only be a misunderstanding which will not, assuredly, have serious consequences.

As for the Tilburg appeal (promotional), Fr. Píperon has assured me on several occasions that he never launched this appeal in France. He says that it was Madame Jullien who, visiting Tilburg, wished to take away several copies of their appeal, but this promotion, very restricted, was not carried out elsewhere.

Dear Fr. Jouët, always so well regarded and favoured by me, allow me to say to you with a smile that when you grow old you will end up, without being aware of it, saying the same thing ten times. All the complaints which you spell out in your letter have already been mentioned to me by you three or four times. What purpose does it serve to return continually to the same issue which causes you annoyance? Since you acknowledge that the poor Superior General of our little Society has the right to regulate the general concerns of the Society for the common good in keeping with the Rules and Constitutions, even at the risk of causing pain to such and such without having to explain superior considerations which compel him so to act, stay, in consequence, calm, then, fully convincing yourself that I have not acted under whim but rather in the general interests (of the Society) as required of me. Each one focuses on his own little area of interest, and often not beyond that. The Superior General, however, takes in the whole picture and always acts for the best. Given these principles, there is no longer any need to torment oneself, but to engage willingly and wholeheartedly with what authority decides, trying to find it commendable despite any natural antipathy. If our Rome house is not rich enough to meet the cost of the journeys which you sometimes undertake for the general good of the Society, claim the money if sufficient hasn't been given to you but, in the last resort, if money is not available in your account at the end of the year, who is going to supplement your deficit? The mother house! Who paid for all the expenses in buying your house, and for its reconstruction? Issoudun, always Issoudun! And who reimburses each year the Pope, providing the amount owed to him? Is it not Issoudun also, despite the fact that the Rome house should take on this responsibility?

4. I am waiting on the corrections for my work on the Sacred Heart to be taken into consideration with respect to the next edition shortly to come out.

5. Apart from some essential issues, it is easy to take out from the Constitutions as a whole all I added and place it within the general or particular Rules.
6. I haven't had any news of Father Navarre. It is likely that the ordination cannot take place on September 8. It will be soon enough for you to be at Issoudun during the course of the month of August.
7. I was most wholeheartedly at one with you for the 25th anniversary of your priesthood. I prayed especially for you.
8. I am getting ready the painting of St. Michael and the Sacred Heart for Leo XIII.
9. Fr. Barral made a trip to Germany and Austria, accompanied by Fr. Ilge, for the good of the Association and the Congregation, he says. He would like it very much if we set ourselves up in Salzburg; he writes to me saying that it is a pivotal centre and from there we could branch out everywhere. He has already seen and haggled over a property. He should be in Vienna at the present time to see the Nuncio and get his approval. The good Father is moving a little too quickly in his enthusiastic concern. I do not believe we are in a position to set up this new foundation straightaway. Later we shall consider this matter in Council while you are in Issoudun.
10. Do you think you can pay the Pope the 1,000 francs (about 32,000 euros), with interest, which we shall have to come up with on August 15, and, if not, I shall again try to achieve the impossible by coming up with that sum? On the 15th of this month (July) I shall have to pay out 50,000 francs (about 160,000 euros) for our new house in Paris, and 50,000 also on October 1. It is the house of the Marie Réparatrice Sisters, 21 rue de Calais; these ladies want to live elsewhere. There is a public chapel facing the street which can hold 300 or 400 people. The house is being sold to us, furnished, for 225,000 francs (about 720,300 euros). There are about twenty cells and a little garden. The Archbishop of Paris has shown himself as being very kind to us. We are leaving St. Charles and the Passy district on August 15. This will coincide with our take-over of rue de Calais in the parish of Holy Trinity.

Issoudun, July 2, 1887

Dear Father,

Our good Fr. Barral moves quickly in his haste; he understands after his own fashion the instructions given to him. My idea was to make ourselves sure of the Archbishop of Salzburg's approval, and to have a house in mind when the moment arrives to set ourselves up in Germany. But straightaway he sends on the contracts with their assurance of purchasing, etc. It is a fact, though, that he makes everything consequent on my approval. Yesterday I wrote to him saying that he was moving too rapidly. The founding of a house needed to be examined and approved in Council. For the time being I did not think this house was a possibility in the way he imagined, and all we could presently envisage having, in Salzburg or elsewhere, was no more than a small house with two priests and a brother, who would take stock of the situation while engaging themselves in getting some youngsters ready for the Tilburg Petite Oeuvre; later on we shall see. I also requested him, on his return from Vienna, to return to Antwerp with Fr. Ilge.

2. I do not believe that the letter which I put in the July Annals asking for a 0.50 centimes (about 1.60 euros) subscription can disadvantageously affect our undertakings. You will, accordingly, have it (the letter) placed in your trilingual Annals.

I am sending an official appeal on to you asking that we be released from all those masses which we cannot celebrate at a one franc (about 3.10 euros) stipend, as is common at Lourdes and other shrines. With all our commitments, the sum of 1.25 francs is too high. Strive for the impossible by trying to get this concession. The indulgent granted in 1884 ends on the tenth of August next.

Dear Father Vaudon,

I leave Issoudun tomorrow, Wednesday, at 7.26pm, and I shall be in Paris at 11.45pm, and go immediately to number 7 rue Franklin. And I got in touch with Mr. Dufors, the solicitor, to let him know that we shall be seeing him at 9 or 10am on Thursday. I do not find the portrait of Fr. Navarre as splendid as you think it is; the arms do not come out far enough from the body. This is an appalling mix up which will need to be remedied. We shall decide straight away what's brought out.

All good wishes to Fr. Delaporte and everyone else. We are having a meeting tomorrow morning of all the parish priests of the district. If it were not for that, I would arrive at 4.30pm instead of 11.45pm.

Dear Father,

Father Píperon was supposed to ask you on behalf of Brother Alexander (Delimoges) for:

1. an indult because of illegitimacy;
2. an indult because he has already taken the habit in another community;
3. an indult permitting him to stay no more than 3 months in the novitiate. He will go and continue in our Paris house. These 3 months will end on August 1.

Hurry, Father, and get these 3 indults if you haven't done so already.

I haven't had any news yet of Fr. Navarre. In the expectation that his ordination can take place on September 8 at Issoudun, Archbishop Marchal requests you to seek, for precaution's sake, Papal permission, since September 8 is not a date normally acceptable for a bishop's ordination; there has to be approval from Rome.

L 18870709

Issoudun, July 9, 1887

Dear Father Barral,

I read very carefully your latest letters. I again repeat what I already told you: as soon as you have received official approval to set ourselves up in Austria, and at Salzburg in particular, you and Father Ilge will return immediately to Antwerp. You will notify Fr. Píperon about everything and then, having persuaded him of the advantages to be gained from setting ourselves up in Salzburg, without its being to the detriment of Antwerp (since everything is there), you will come to Issoudun with him where I shall bring together the other Council Fathers and we shall as a group consider the matter.

Clearly, as you have gathered, the biggest objection will come from Fr. Píperon. Be circumspect, calm, polite, very accommodating and respectful in your approach to him and all will turn out well. For myself I am anxious to have this foundation if at all possible. I can see that there are great advantages there for our Society, but it remains to be ratified by the Council and carried through unanimously. In any event you will be there to make a case for it. Besides, you have done very well to come to no agreement, and rightly set out the acceptance of your Superiors as conditioning the purchase. If you wished to have your proposal accepted straightaway, you would come up against immovable obstacles. One must proceed from this premiss: it is the initial phase of our Berlin house which is being moved to Salzburg, and which we shall improve to the best of our ability..., and the essential for us is to take up residence in the present circumstances with the future determining for us what we should do, though without prejudice to the work in Antwerp, etc. Do not move outside this presentation of things if we want to succeed. I hope that your approach to the Austrian Government, thanks to the support of Bishop Galimberti, the Nuncio, can speedily reach a result. You will keep me informed.

I have come back from Paris; the negotiations about the house in rue de Calais have ended. We shall take over there on August 15.

Issoudun, July 14, 1887

Dear Father,

1. Thank you for your kind letters. The reports on your novices do not, taken as a whole, appear to be that bad.
2. I have some observations to make about your priest novices:
  - A. I find that your young novices do not sufficiently respect them; they are too familiar and a little disrespectful. Stamp out this practice; it's unacceptable; stress the priestly character. In principle do not have them mixing with these youngsters, but separately, at least for serious issues; do not make them submit to the criticism of the youngsters at the chapter of faults because of the inappropriateness. Deal with each one specifically.
  - B. Exempt them, especially if they are of a certain age, from learning by rote the Holy Scriptures and the Constitutions, and from attending Christian Doctrine classes, but as against this, have them polish their shoes and brush their soutanes. Have them learn well devotion to the Sacred Heart and Our Lady which they will need to preach as soon as possible on their departure from the novitiate. Do not have them spending all their study time in the common room.
  - C. Do not have them reading before the youngsters those parts of the Constitutions which refer to the administration and leadership of the Society, the Regulations for Superiors, priests, missionaries, etc., etc. Teach separately those to whom these Regulations apply. Our young men do not need to know as yet the Regulations which concern our relations with women, nor the indiscretions which can arise with them.
  - D. Only give your priests such manual work as can be done comfortably by them, and in keeping with their age and health. Avoid enforced running.
3. We are praying for Brother Alexander (Delimoges). I sincerely hope he can recover. I don't know how our confrères in Paris can get on without him. The taking over of the rue de Calais house has been completed; we shall be taking possession on August 15; I went to Paris last week to finalize this matter.
4. I give you full authority with regard to your new postulants or novices.
5. I read with interest, my friend, your observations on the German undertaking. Do not let it worry you; I share your viewpoints.(!) Everything will be settled at the Council in complete agreement and you will be present at it. I shall let you know when the time comes. Since our confrères cannot remain in Berlin I asked Fr. Barral to go and look at this property which was offered to you in Bavaria. Instead of going there directly he went to Berlin, and there spoke to the Dominican Provincial who told him that there was nothing to undertake in Germany, and that he should take on something elsewhere. He took Fr. Ilge with him, and on his own initiative he went to Bavaria, saw this property and found it quite unsuitable. He was advised to go to Austria and took himself off to Salzburg, which he found most attractive. He wrote, sharing his impressions with me, and I replied: "Right, let it be so. Pick on a house with ground accompanying it in order to undertake a serious undertaking later; get the Archbishop's permission; and if he proves awkward, try to get Bishop Galimberti or Propaganda to intervene in order to make him agreeable." Immediately, without contacting me, he undertook the signing of carriages of sale, and then when informed that he needed Imperial approval he went to Berlin (more correctly Vienna) to enter into negotiations with the Nuncio. He wrote to me about his proposed acquisitions and I replied that he was exceeding the limits of his remit and, consequently, he should be aware that a new foundation should be submitted for approval to the Council, and I cannot answer for what will be its decision; he is going ahead much too quickly and he cannot bypass the Council. I requested him to hurry and get the Emperor's approval because it would be needed to get a house when we considered purchasing and, meanwhile, he should return to Antwerp with Fr. Ilge. Accordingly, there has been nothing compromising other than the precipitateness of Fr. Barral. Let him return and we shall see. As for Fr. Ilge, have him do a month's retreat and after that we shall reconsider.

Dear Count,

I thank you most appreciatively for the approaches you so kindly made to Mr. Saint-Martin at the Ministry. Undoubtedly we would have wished for more, but the outcome achieved is already a first step which has its own significance. You cannot believe how virtually the whole population is keen on the reopening (of the basilica) and are expecting it on September 8, the date of the special feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

I do not think Fr. Navarre will have returned by that date (September 8). He hasn't yet informed me that he received my telegram letting him know of his appointment. Could you not succeed in getting it (the church) opened for September 8 to please the people of this town and the 20,000 visitors who will flock there from all quarters (for this reopening). We shall close the outer door of the chapel tomorrow and we shall open it again on the day of the ordination if it cannot take place on September 8. The municipality wouldn't dare to move and everything gives us to understand that the basilica will remain open afterwards. Together with your colleagues try this fresh approach, if you deem it worthwhile.

Please accept, Count, my respectful good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, July 17, 1887

Dear Father,

1. Fr. Barral has sent me a double appeal or, rather, the same appeal, to be signed, in Italian and German. Since there has to be the Congregation's seal in Latin, which you have and I don't, he has asked me to forward it to you requesting the seal to be impressed on it. Have it signed by Cardinal Simeoni or Monaco and returned to him at the Benedictine house, Salzburg, Austria.

I have always impressed upon Fr. Barral that his efforts to establish us in Germany or Austria were subject to the approval of our Society's Council, and that he was no more than conditionally committing himself: he replied saying that he was only acting on such an understanding. Quite timely, since like myself you know what Fathers Piperon and Guyot are like. I am also hoping that you will be in Issoudun for the first fortnight in August. On the first of August Bishop Blanchet is being ordained at Bourges; I shall be present, and that evening I go on the pastoral retreat (diocesan) and will return to Issoudun the following Saturday.

2. Write out a cheque in my name for 10,500 francs (about 33,600 euros) for the Pope.

3. If Fr. Jullien is free you might send him to Issoudun immediately in order to prepare himself for the second part of his baccalaureate; I am rightly pondering over your idea about sending him to Glastonbury to spend some time there.

4. I haven't had any word from Fr. Navarre so far; I would like to think that he received my telegram and is on his way to Issoudun. I very much doubt if he can be ordained on September 8.

5. The Archbishop of Bourges went last Tuesday to see the Minister for Worship in Paris with reference to the reopening of our basilica. Mr. Spuller would only authorize the opening for the ordination day, and wants the outside door to be closed again next day. And if this opening for one day is not ill received, he leaves us with the expectation that he will allow it to be open a little later; otherwise, he will allow the public to enter by the inside door. This first breakthrough is already something worthwhile. We can then, with your indispensable and very much appreciated co-operation, prepare for a beautiful occasion and organize a lovely pilgrimage.

6. I received the book, my thanks to the Rector of the French Seminary and to kind Fr. Flour (this last name unclear). Convey to them my warmest thanks. I haven't had time so far to consider their corrections, which should be very pertinent.

7. Do not forget to get the indulgences for the masses. See if you can get some privileges for the opening of the basilica on the occasion of Bishop Navarre's ordination.

8. With regard to Brother Benedetti you are, yourself, the one to decide.

2. I write to dear Fr. Delaporte in Antwerp where he is on retreat requesting him to preach our Issoudun retreat, but I haven't had a reply. The retreat begins in the evening of the 16th of this month at our Sacred Heart house. Make sure to tell him that I am depending on him. And yourself, when are you making your retreat? Are you going to do it with us or before you take over in rue de Calais? Convey from me to Fathers Thomas and Lanctin that I am expecting them to be at this retreat. I congratulate Fr. Lanctin on his success.
3. It will not be until August 16 that we take over rue de Calais. If due to our retreat the Sisters would like to stay there over 8 additional days, and ask permission for this from Fr. Pervilhac, I would have no objection. Speak to Fr. Delaporte about this. If it is his view also, notify the Sisters about this. A traveller from the house of Poussielgne (name uncertain) called here to Issoudun about fifteen days ago. He told me that he is quite certain that his firm could deal with this illustration, and would do it all the better because it doesn't have an illustrated book of gifts scheduled for 1888, and this project would be marvellously suitable for them to

The Need for a Scholasticate

1. The urgent need to set up a scholasticate for philosophical and theological studies to meet the needs of our young men was given consideration. Everybody accepted the need for such a scholasticate, but given the present unlikelihood of effectively organizing it, it was decided that those young religious who had not finished their studies should be sent to Rome if they are not presently engaged in teaching, or have other current responsibilities.

Director of the Rome Scholasticate.

He should be chosen from the professed priests, and given responsibility for the direction and formation of the scholastics. The Superior General will appoint this director and choose the subjects who will be given to him.

Those Called to Perpetual Vows.

2. The following were put forward for perpetual vows: Brothers Rollin, Mégret, Maynier, Gouthéreau, Reynot, Van Grinsven and Benedetti. The latter was held back to consider yet further his attitude which left something to be desired. (He later went on to become a bishop while remaining an MSC.) The rest were admitted to perpetual vows.

Admission to Temporary (three year) Vows.

The following novices who had completed their novitiate were accepted for temporary vows: Brothers Herman, Zwagemakers, Angelo Annibali, Felix Michel, Jean Mathieu, Hubert Neyens, Assunto Constantini, Vincent Ceresi, John Field, Pierre Louis Martin, Hyppolyte Bernard, Edouard Guglimetti, Jean Baptiste Guillamin and Henri van der Aa.

Personnel in the Various Houses.

3. There followed a discussion about the personnel in different houses and the requirements of each house. Following prolonged discussion it was agreed that:

- a) Fr. Lanctin would again take charge of the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre, and Fr. General would work with him to organize the teaching staff.
- c) Fr. Vandel would become Socius (assistant) to the Novice Master.
- c) It would be latterly seen to that Fathers E. Merg and E. Meyer would, by choice of the Superior General, take charge of the Rome scholasticate and the direction of the Antwerp Petite Oeuvre. (It is not clear from the wording who was going where!)
- d) Fr. Léopold Hartzler is to be transferred from Antwerp to Tilburg as Superior, while Fr Klotz is appointed to Salzburg.
- e) Brother Dezpresse becomes literature teacher at Antwerp.
- f) The choice of teachers for the Tilburg and Antwerp houses has been left in abeyance, left over to the decision of the Antwerp Superior.
- g) Other issues involving personnel were left undecided, placed in the care of the Superior General.
- h) Finally the decision was taken to send Fr. Chétail to Paris where he would look after the sacristy and the chapels in this house.

The Salzburg Foundation.

4. There next followed a discussion about the founding of a new house in Salzburg, Austria. This foundation, which to some of the Council members seemed inopportune given the dearth of members and the heavy financial burden undertaken with the opening of the Antwerp house still quite recently, and its being overlaid with debts, was nevertheless approved by the majority under the following conditions:

The Salzburg foundation approved in principle under the express condition that the approval of the Austrian Government has been granted for this foundation. The purchase of the proposed properties cannot be brought into effect until the above-mentioned approval has been duly received.

The Personnel of this House.

- b) The members who will be part of this house are: Fr. Klotz as Superior and Frs. J. Baltzer and J. Ilge, together with some lay brothers. Salzburg must not be a burden for Antwerp.
- c) The Salzburg foundation should take place such that it does not inconvenience in any way the Antwerp house and its undertakings. All the work going on in this house must continue as it is; there can be no change favouring the Salzburg house except through a decision of the Superior General's Council who will listen in the first instance to the views of the Antwerp Superior.

Fr. Barral appointed to the Antwerp Office.

The German office of Our Lady's Association and the direction of the German Annals remain Fr. Barral's responsibility who will continue to be affiliated to the Antwerp house and must, for all other undertakings, take his orders from the Superior of that house. He will be responsible for looking after the accounts of both the houses of Salzburg and Antwerp.

Ownership of the German Annals.

d) The Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart which is published in Düsseldorf under the title Tilburger Monatshefte, remains in the ownership of the Antwerp house until such time as it will be otherwise decided by the Rev. Fr. Superior General, the Antwerp Superior having been consulted.

The income from the Annals, etc., at Antwerp.

e) The income from promotion activities, from the Annals and voluntary contributions, etc., etc., as well as the fees from the Petite Oeuvre of the Sacred Heart, will continue as before: 1, to pay the occasional expenses to meet this promotion; 2, the upkeep of the many personnel in the Antwerp house, and help to meet the debts of this house in the manner laid down by the Superior General's Council in respect to the payment of different debts.

Salzburg must not be a burden on Antwerp.

f) The Salzburg house must meet its needs from the resources available to it in Austria and Hungary. The Antwerp house will make available propaganda materials in the German language which will be the same as those in use up to now... The Petite Oeuvre prospectus and the German language association should have the Salzburg house address for Austria and be in receipt of the necessary charges with regard to that house. Insofar as it can do so, this house will reimburse the Antwerp house for the cost of all these contributions. To avoid any problems and the element of surprise, the Superior of the Salzburg house will forward to the Antwerp Superior each month a statement of the office accounts. He will, likewise, make known each month to the Antwerp Superior contributions received from Düsseldorf and for which he is to be held to account, such as subscriptions, pictures, prayers, medals, etc. No new form of propaganda can be set up, nor any out of the ordinary undertaking of expense, without the approval of the Antwerp Superior so long as this house (Salzburg) hasn't paid off its debts.

L 18870818

Issoudun, August 18, 1887

Dear Father Vaudon,

1. If you only knew how sorry I am, and continue to be, for you, your heavy responsibilities should be lightened. Try and see to it that your church becomes open as soon as possible, at least, without fail, by Sunday. It is imperative that each evening at 5pm there is Benediction in order to continue the Sisters' practice. Archbishop Richard told me that he was insisting on it. He gave me, myself, all the permission needed. Why is good Fr. Delaporte setting about complicating the issue in wishing to deal with something already agreed on? Provide, therefore, Benediction each evening without any concern. I am about to write to Archbishop Richard myself to advise him and call to mind his permissions.

2. There has to be three altars in the chapel. The main altar, another by the statue of Blessed (St.) Margaret Mary (Alacoque) and the third at the Lourdes grotto. I shall do my utmost to be in Paris on Sunday.

3. I am sending you a list of all the items which the good religious were due to give us. See to it that they meet the costs of repairing the damage caused in taking things away.

4. We shall discuss the chaplaincy for the Holy Family of Mary Sisters. If your house can undertake it without any great difficulty, it would, perhaps be a good thing. Fr. Miniot, who is very enthusiastic about the perpetual worship of the Sacred Heart, would very much like to be at rue de Calais to organize and set it going. Perhaps he might take over this chaplaincy (that of the Sisters), or Fr. Roger. We shall discuss this again.

5. Lay down your orders for dear Fr. Robinet since he needs to be firmly dealt with for otherwise he will do nothing, or virtually nothing.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

1. There is little or nothing to say to Mr. Pannemaker about the cover. It was returned to him with the prints of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.

2. We are praying a great deal for you. Take care of yourself and get better.

3. Mr. Motout will be getting the information he wanted. You do well to change what in his case would be a shock.

4. Ask Fr. Batard to hurry up with the negotiations with reference to what I planned with the architect. Most urgent is the ground floor and the chapel with its three altars. As for the rest, the architect is due to send me an expense estimate which I await.

5. If you could come across some generous souls who would pay for the angels holding blazing torches, it would be marvellous. See what you can do.

6. Ask Fr. Batard to come back here as soon as possible as his presence would be a great help. He might bring Fr. Robinet with him.

7. Ask the good Fathers to take things gently as regards the chapel and not to draw too much attention to themselves. Quite a lot of prudence and caution! Tell Fr. Chétail that I am appointing him to be in charge and bursar in your absence. Let him make a point of having all the exercises carried out at the appointed times. It is imperative that the religious life be faithfully observed at rue de Calais. While awaiting a special reader in the refectory, all the priests will in their turn read during the meals. Apart from recreation, silence must be observed in the house as well as good order and propriety. Fr. Piperon is due to send on immediately to you from Antwerp Brother Alexander (Delimoges).

Dear Father,

The Issoudun annual pilgrimage, as a remembrance of the solemn coronation of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in the name of the Sovereign Pontiff, will take place on September 8 and be graced by the presence of the Archbishop of Bourges.

We appeal to you most cordially, Father, to invite your parishioners to come in as large a number as possible for this feast of the most Blessed Virgin. We shall be delighted to see you there yourself, and offer you our warmest hospitality at the presbytery.

Please accept, Father, my most sincere regards in C.J.

Be kind to him; he will not be ungracious. Rid him of the prejudices which the unfortunate Fr. Robinet tried to share with him about the novitiate.

2. Fr. Tréand is continually looking for a lay brother and wants to mention Brother Owens to you. In any event I am forwarding his (Tréand's) letter. Reply to him. I would like to think that you had a good journey. I have heard nothing yet from Fr. Barral.

Paris, September 15, 1887

Dear Father,

I am here organizing the Paris house for the past few days; I leave for Issoudun tomorrow. I am returning your proofs to you which I didn't have time to correct. I haven't as yet received a letter from Fr. Barral. The Emperor, no doubt, hasn't yet signed. The issue will need more time. I shall not be returning the contract to you until the Imperial signature has been added. Be relaxed: I shall let Fr. Barral know that he must not do anything without referring it to you, and whatever he forwards to me I shall pass on to you for your views.

Here in Paris there is a very great need for a lay brother who would look after the kitchen under the supervision of Brother Alexander (Delimoges) who cannot himself do this work. Try to find someone, then, as soon as possible.

Issoudun, September 18, 1887

Dear Father Vaudon,

1. Brother Benedetti is ready to go to Paris; this youngster is very willing but timid temperamentally; he tells me that he will willingly play the organ, but cannot sing or teach others to do so.

Have you seen Mr. Guillemont? He will find someone of good quality to play the organ and sing. If Mr. Guillemont is not able to do so, have a word about it with Mr. Minard and, perhaps, he will find this kind of aide in reasonable financial conditions. Otherwise, let me know immediately and I shall send dear little Brother Benedetti (later to be Bishop) to you straightaway.

2. I have thought that in place of a little (statue) Christ on a foot stool placed on the small altars, one could, perhaps, screw the statue without feet onto the plinth of Our Lady and St. Joseph, something which would eliminate any bringing forward of the altars. See to that with Fr. Deidier.

3. I understandably rebuked Fr. Robinet for smoking; something which is contrary to all our customs, and which I shall never tolerate unless the doctor prescribes it as a remedy(!), and then it has to be out of sight and in his room with the door closed, for the individual concerned. But this must not be other than very rarely. But the good man was told that he was permitted to accept a cigar from Mr. de Mendoza, and by that very fact he was drawn to think that he was allowed to smoke. Let something like this not happen again!

Try to get Mr. de Mendoza to stop smoking; it is imperative. And if he needs to continue smoking for some time let him do so, but rarely, and never in front of others; giving it up completely as soon as possible. Make a point also of getting Mr. Lazorne to become aware of the regulation about getting up in the morning like everyone else. They will not hesitate to accept what is required of them, for both have good will.

4. Everyone, except Fr. Delaporte, should make his own bed and look after his room, polish his shelves, empty his chamber pot. This is the rule. Our Lord rewards humility.

5. Fr. Jouët, whom you will see tomorrow afternoon at 4.30, will bring with him Fr. Couppé's report on the missions, a book on the Sacred Heart by one of our qualified priests, and the life of Garcia Moreno.

6. Let me know how the work on the chapel is going ahead and what point they are exactly at! Has the young confrère taken to his work in the kitchen and Brother Auguste (Bougras) at the door (as porter)? Is Mr. Lazorne studying his theology and good Mr. de Mendoza his Latin?

Dear Fr. Piperon,

Issoudun, September 19, 1887

1. I haven't received anything so far from Fr. Barral. So long as the Salzburg undertaking is not resolved, our personnel arrangements as regards Antwerp and Tilburg remain for the most part held over. We must, then, await yet further.

2. You may send on Fr. Suchet straightaway to Issoudun where he will more committedly prepare himself, together with his class mates, for the second part of the baccalaureate since he does not have to return to Antwerp.

3. Fathers Vandel, Meyer and Dezpresse are being made available to you and, by way of exchange, we get from you Brother Delmas and Bernard. (Bernard would become French Provincial, 1929-1935.) You could make use of these latter as a replacement for Field and others for whom France is a foreign country. (For Field, in extenso, see Twohig: Late But Not Too Late, passim.)
4. To help you in your undertakings, besides Fr. Reyn one might perhaps also make available to you either Fr. Roussel, Fr. Chétail, or Fr. Miniot. These are the possibilities suggested. Kindly inform good Fr. Reyn that I also give a lot of thought to relieving the strain on him. And I myself, also, have the same need!
5. I am sending (Fr.) Roger to Barcelona with 7 of our Petite Oeuvre youngsters to help Fr. Roussel and thus to set up a serious apostolic undertaking there. Fr. Robinet will replace him in Issoudun. Fr. Robinet is a sad example of the religious life. I am well set up at the presbytery! Fr. Miniot is for the time being at the Paris house with Fathers Deidier and Chétail, a bad combination.
6. Fr. Jouët says that although he is away from Rome you could still send your Italian novices there when they have made their vows. Fr. Védère has been advised.
7. I expressly forbid smoking unless the doctor specifically orders it as a necessity for one's health(!) which should be very seldom, and then this permission should only hold in private and never 'coram aliis' (in the presence of others). Make sure also that little glasses of wine are not taken, nor likewise coffee, with parish priests and other strangers, leaving aside that one cannot, realistically, do anything else (than take the drink) sometimes. Sobriety and being discreet will always edify. Fr. Robinet tells me that Fr. Merg accepts cigars without hesitation, smokes when out walking with parish priests and on several occasions persuaded him to do the same. This is an abuse which you must stamp out in forceful fashion.
8. When Fr. Suchet and others are coming to Issoudun send me all the vestments, banners, crowns, carpets which you have belonging to us.
9. In Paris they need Alexander (Delimoges) to train as a cook.
10. Brother Xavier (Maier) will remain at the presbytery. His mother has written to say that all his affairs have been put in order. But a lay brother needs to be with him; he has too much to do. Then his mother Marguerite is getting older. Accordingly, send on a brother who can be trained by Xavier either for the kitchen or the upkeep of the house. Their religious life will only be more complete. (Maier went to Quito on July 10, 1888. He left the Society on September 12, 1889.)

Dear Father Vaudon,

1. I am forwarding the card we have been discussing. Have it printed if you think it's worthwhile. I am also forwarding a manuscript from Father Lazare Arnaud; the card will be inside it. You will assess this work just like the others. Fr. Arnaud is letting us have it, like the rest we have received, to do whatever we want with it. You will understand this.
2. The Mendoza gentleman seems a very odd character to me; maybe weak in the head. He seems to me someone who holds back, lacking in resolve, energy and, perhaps, steadiness. The future will tell us a lot.
3. When I go to Paris I shall see to everything which is being held over (for me).
4. The state of affairs in which our Paris confrères find themselves is baffling. They should at least bring with them whatever is needed. Have Fathers Deidier and Miniot given you the money which should have been left over following their journey? Our Constitutions and the vow of poverty forbid any withholding of whatever kind. If they haven't given up anything, ask them for it in my name; the rule has to be observed by everybody; it's that which will make for our strength.
5. A young Breton, brother to an Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Sister, wants to enter the novitiate as a lay brother; he is only 16 years, somewhat too youthful. I am about to write asking him to come to us. You will look after him together with Brother Alexander (Delimoges). This young man is very pious and gentle; you will put him in the kitchen under the supervision of Brother Alexander. You will be pleased with him.
6. Through force of circumstances I am about to let you have Fr. Carrière. He will do more for you in Paris than Fr. Jullien whom I am recalling to replace Fr. Carrière at Issoudun. I am sending Fr. Chétail to England with Fr. Tréand. Do not say anything to Fr. Chétail about what is happening. Give him this little greeting from me. I am also sending on (to you) Brother Benedetti with Fr. Carrière. This good little brother will study theology with Mr. Lasorne (name uncertain) under the supervision of Fathers Carrière and Deidier. Brother Benedetti will be useful to you in looking after the chapel, etc.

7. As I have to go to Paris during the early part of October to deliver 50,000 francs (about 160,060 euros), I am foregoing a Paris trip next Sunday if my presence is not needed there.

8. Let Brother Alexander go into the rooms to empty the basins (pots) if you consider it to be otherwise so inconvenient; the other alternative would just the same be more religious(!). Nonetheless it should not be that propriety is offended. You might perhaps place a bucket on each floor into which each one would empty his water and the brother would then take it away from there. Do what you think best. I leave it to you.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I haven't time to write to Fr Chétail. Fr. Robinet replaced Fr. Roger at Issoudun; the latter has left for Barcelona, with 7 youngsters from the Petite Oeuvre. But this same Fr. Robinet tells me that he is not cut out for a sedentary ministry. I shall leave him in this posting until All Saints (November 1). I shall be compelled to take Fr. Miniot away from you at this time (November 1) to stay at Issoudun (replacing Robinet). I think that you are not at a great loss(!). Fr. Carrière will arrive tomorrow or Saturday with Brother Benedetti. You will be informed beforehand. Fr. Carrière will at the same time be chaplain to the Sacred Heart Sisters at Coutances.

Issoudun, October 5, 1887

Dear Father,

1. Your brothers have safely arrived. I would ask when sending anybody on to Issoudun or elsewhere to arrange matters in such a way that there is no stopping over in Paris at rue de Calais; map out their journey in such a way that they only need to cross Paris for their departure station. See to it that they travel third class as much as possible since, otherwise, the expenses are too steep; in any event it is against holy poverty. You cannot imagine how these encounters of our young men with Paris can have unpleasant consequences.

2. I approve the vows and perpetual profession of those you consider worthy. Wait for some more weeks before sending your scholastics to Rome. Here at the day school they want you to let them have Brother Vilpoux who did very well before and was liked and appreciated by the youngsters. (In August 1889, less than two years later, Vilpoux left the Society.)

3. Let me have the exact number of scholastics you have chosen to go to Rome, together with their names.

4. Be firm on discipline and do not allow bad habits to begin or continue. Keep a sharp eye out for particular friendships; it's a failing from which the novitiate and your teachers are not free. Confront Brother Dezpresse; he is greatly given to exaggeration; he is irresponsible, gossips too much here, there and everywhere.

5. Prevent the teachers and novices from writing frequently to their schoolmates and friends; monitor the letters they send, or are sent to them, to Issoudun or elsewhere; they are lengthy, pointless, full of tittle-tattle and deserve to be put in the fire for the most part.

Cheerio, my friend.

Issoudun, October 10, 1887

Dear Father Védère,

Thank you for your kind letters.

1. Fr. Jouët maintains that his three Annals should continue to appear as in the past; we shall see in a year. He is convinced that the Rome undertaking would be lost if changes were to be made. We shall see.
2. Have your three copies printed by the printer who is the least expensive. The printer of the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will charge you much more than the other one. Have only one printer!
3. Since the (financial) resources of your Petite Oeuvre cannot support all your youngsters, send away those who offer you no likelihood of getting anything financially. It is much better to have only 12 than a larger number who cannot be fed. Make every effort to increase the financial resources of your Petite Oeuvre and balance your budget.
4. Keep all your Italian scholastics and only send two to Antwerp, Guillaume and Michel. Do whatever you can with d'Annibali. If he doesn't succeed (in his studies) you might make him a lay brother; if not send him home to his family.

Jean-Baptiste Guillaume, born at La Gimond, January 9, 1867, died at West Warwick in the USA, September 21, 1923; Felix Michel, born at Hardancourt, June 30, 1868, worked in many parishes before his death in Issoudun, June 28, 1950. Angelo Annibali from Oliveto, Italy, was born on June 4, 1866. Because of illness he left the Rome scholasticate and returned to his family in 1889. He went on to be a priest in his native diocese.

Fr. Giraux, whom you know, is presently in Issoudun; he would willingly go to Rome; would you like to have him as assistant bursar, office help and sacristan?

Cheerio, my friend; my blessing.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Fr. Gressin could also be of some help to you while waiting for Fr. Vaudon.

Dear Father,

Thanks for all your letters and everything you mention about Gap. Fr. Navarre is arriving in Marseilles next Saturday. I have heard the sad news of dear Fr. Vatan's death on May 31, the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. He is the first mission death, dying from dysentery, that is to say from fatigue and exhaustion. Fr. Navarre will arrive accompanied by Fr. Hartzer and a sister, more correctly a novice, from Sydney.

Dear Father,

1. I have just heard the sad news of dear Fr. Vatan's death on May 31 in New Britain, dying from dysentery, that is to say fatigue and exhaustion. He is the first mission victim; may God pity us!
2. I have heard nothing with regard to Salzburg.
3. Fr. Navarre will arrive at Marseilles next Saturday accompanied by Fr. Hartzler.
4. I sent Brother Benedetti on to you to have him in the novitiate for at least three months. He has agreed he needs to do this. There, at any rate, you can come to know him and form an opinion of him. The boy is not difficult; he needs to be well understood and gently treated. He was much too young when sent to the novitiate. He needs another good year's formation and will not refuse to undertake it if you think it right for him.
5. You did very well to send all your scholastics to Tilburg who are ready to go there while awaiting to be sent to Rome or elsewhere.
6. I do not know what is the explanation for it, but among our scholastics and young priests there is neither a spirit of orderliness or of propriety, of economizing or poverty. I appeal to you that they be seriously trained in these virtues. It's imperative. They blabber and are lacking in discretion. Fr. Robinet, on arriving at the presbytery, gave the impression that he didn't have to clean his shoes or brush his clothes. When I reminded him that our Rules left these responsibilities to each one, he was very taken aback, informing me that it was not like that in the novitiate, and that it was the brothers who polished shoes and cleaned (brushed) clothes. If this is so, it is an abuse, and an unacceptable state of affairs which must come to an end.

Cheerio, Father.

The unfortunate Fr. Morisseau has had a showdown with the Archbishop of Quito by writing a letter of absurd complaints. Our worthy confrères have lost their heads and want to leave Quito to come back to Europe. This would be truly scandalous after staying no more than two months. Pathetic religious who do not even have the spirit of sacrifice!

Reverend Father,

1. I am forwarding you a little parcel of paper by letter while awaiting your arrival here. Have your envelopes addressed to Maison Bazin, 174 rue Saint Jacques. It's from there we were provided with 40,000 leaflets which are beginning to be sold out.
2. I got your letter and card. The 150 copies of the Annals will be going out this evening. On the cover of the proof sent to me you mention that the bibliography is missing, but you didn't send it to me. Fr. General didn't provide me with it either. I have only Joan of Arc for inclusion. I would strongly favour (complete) inclusion for November because of that good and dedicated Fr. Ayroles. When you arrive I shall give you the book and two others which I have. It's Father General who has Madame Giry's book, a very lovely volume. I sent you the letter because it points out the parts to be taken out and promises a sum of money. However, I think that we haven't publicized this quite enough, and responded poorly to her invitation.
3. All the ex-votos in the basilica are the work of Morillon, rue Doudeauville, 79 or 81, Paris.
4. There are pictures of all kinds with the two boxes I sent on Saturday.
5. It's not I who keep the collection of letters; it's the printer. I shall see about that.
6. Your new miniature lettering seems poorly produced in my opinion, especially letter F. Not being well plated they will not stand up to much use and will quickly fade.
7. Then there's M. Caro. I find, mistakenly no doubt, that the subject is a little too lengthy.

8. Your article: 'The Sacred Heart, centre of hearts', should do well... It's not very lengthy. If our Annals came to 64 pages, one could, in consequence, little by little, introduce dogma (dogmatic theology), which would be no bad thing, and place our Annals in a category above all other current publications. This was the original plan. Patience. Providence will provide us with more success.

9. Thank you for the new subscribers. Promotion will have an impact in Paris, and elsewhere as well. If we had time, there are so many things to do!

Try and visit so that we can chat a little.

In expectation, I am, be assured, your devoted and affectionate friend in Corde Jesu.

F. Alexandre.

How is it to be remedied? Help me.

Fr. Navarre has telegraphed me from Port Said to say that he will arrive next Saturday morning in Marseilles with Fr. Hartzler. I had sad news at the same time of Fr. You do not mention Brothers Gressin, Meynier, Martin, all French. Where are they? What are you doing with them? Brother Gressin would have been chosen for Rome unless he was needed elsewhere. It's out of the question to send incapable people to Rome as they would be wasting their time. What are we going to do with them? Where shall we send them? Fr. Issoudun, October 12, 1887

Dear Father Vaudon,

1. I sent you Mr. Lemercier's letter in which he informed me that the time is not propitious, and the Sacred Heart book would take too much time to circulate if one is to judge from the illustrated life of St. Vincent, and, accordingly, he was disengaging from his promise. Look for it, you must have received this letter which you should have had about 8 days ago.

This disengagement, this failure on Mr. Lemerrier's part to keep his word, seems odd to me. Consequently, I didn't reply to him; go and see him and you will let me know what I must do.

2. Mr. Reige (name uncertain) seems to me to be a spinner of tales if not to say a joker. I do not intend to have any contact with him.

3. It's impossible for us to dream of a coloured reproduction for our St. Michael. It's too dear. A snapshot or an engraving is all that we need. Don't entertain the thought of anything else. We have already spent too much money on this reproduction. We stand to lose on it more than 2,000-2,500 francs (6,400-8,000 euros).

4. You may, if you consider it appropriate, have it displayed in the Archbishop's salon. Get in touch about that with whoever is in charge.

5. I don't know the gardener's address; the architect will give it to you. Postpone until next year the covered courtyard; you would do better to think about replacing it meanwhile. Maybe your winter garden could be of some service to you? The gardener could then clear up your garden, plant some trees there, about which we would have come to an agreement, in specified places.

6. As for having a little rockery set up at the mouth of the tunnel, a mason would suffice for that. Get in touch with the man who works in the house and agree on a price, which you will let me know about. This stone must not be raised too high since the head of the statue must not be above the height of the tunnel; it should be more like a pedestal in the shape of a little rock. One day's work by a mason would be, so it seems to me, enough.

7. Finally, my friend, look after yourself, I beg you; do not overlook anything in restoring your health; I hold you to that. If a little trip to Issoudun will be what you need, come as soon as possible and you will be received with open arms.

Dear Father,

Read the two enclosed letters and let me know what you think. I find, generally speaking, that the scholastics have an overweening desire for the priesthood: a bad trait. The saints thought otherwise! As I told you, the less intelligent scholastics cannot go to Rome for their studies; yet it remains that they must be educated. Is there any possibility of setting-up a little scholasticate at Antwerp or Tilburg for these second-rate ones? Who would take charge of the lectures? Would Fr. Chopin be able to do so? (Having been in Chezal-Benoît, Paris, Chopin left the Society in 1898.) Or his confrère Ricard? It is time to consider all this. Do you think that all your young Italians have the ability to follow the courses in Rome? If not, you could hold on to the weaker ones.

Up to the present, Fr. Meyer is of no use to you because nothing has changed as regards personnel in your Antwerp Petite Oeuvre. And if the Salzburg enterprise does not succeed, you will have reinforcements, and my intention then would be to send Fr. Meyer to Paris to work for his licentiate. One must consider the Society's future. Fr. Meyer would be very successful. (Prescient words about the very able future General!)

With new arrangements you could well make the Antwerp house much more comfortable. You have rooms which are too large and several others which serve no purpose and are at a loss. My belief is that you could accommodate 20 or 30 more people there.

L 18871015

Barcelona, October 10, 1887

Reverend Father,

It's fifteen days since I wrote to you, advised to do so by the Very Rev. Fr. Superior General, bringing to your notice the needs of our Barcelona house, asking you to be good enough to send us two lay brothers so that the initiative which the Reverend Father is undertaking for the Petite Oeuvre be given a new footing and have a better chance of success.

Since I have had no reply, I am being led to believe that you have not, perhaps, received the letter, and that is why I hasten to forward this new request, since the need is becoming more and more urgent.

The responsibility laid upon us, although held back by the student numbers, calls for a number of personnel which we do not have due to the difference in ages and teaching levels of these children. The material upkeep of the house calls for two new hands, willing and, need I say, purposeful, in their contribution. The teaching personnel is not adequate and also needs someone to help out; it would be good to have a lay brother who is trained, intelligent and able to provide an elementary course in French for our little Spaniards, and who would work for an hour or two in the day with Fr. Casas, replacing him or Brother Hastier at supervising; the latter's strength does not match his courage.

In my letter I enclosed a letter for our dear novice Camillus to whose prayers I commend myself, as also with the novice Genaro. Let these two good brothers know how I am happy to gather that they are very good-willing in the novitiate, and tell Genaro that we are awaiting impatiently his return to help us. Have you met one of ours, Juan, who has left us, and to whom we gave money to go to the novitiate? He is Genaro's companion.

I would like to think and hope that my second request will have a better response from you than the previous one.

Please accept, Father, my most devoted feelings in cordibus J. et M.

Roger, MSC.

Chevalier adds:

Given the critical situation in which our Barcelona house finds itself, it greatly needs the good prayers of the brothers and fathers at Antwerp.

I note with regret that the Salzburg business continues to be long drawn out. You, however, cannot prolong indefinitely your time in Austria with Fr. Ilge. If you think, at least for the time being, that nothing is about to happen, it is best to leave and, accepting the will of God, return, both of you, to Antwerp. L 18871029

Issoudun, October 29, 1887

Dear Father Piperon,

Yes, have Brothers Benedetti and Gressin make their vows at All Saints. You will send all the Italian brothers whom you mentioned to me, on to Rome together with Brothers Gressin, Michel and Guillaume. Brothers Suchet and Mathieu will join them in Rome when they have passed their examination. You will send on immediately to Issoudun Brother Gouthéraud to be a teacher in the school. Send on to Issoudun at the same time, as early as possible after All Saints, Fr. Merg; they will both travel here directly without stopping over at our Paris house. You might arrange to have Brother Benedetti accompanying them, whom I shall send to Spain, to Barcelona. Fr. Jouët shows no enthusiasm to have him in Rome this year.

Following the death of Fr. Vatan, Fr. Gaillard returned to Sydney; Fr. Cramaille is alone in New Britain. It is absolutely imperative that this mission be restructured. Fr. Navarre thinks that Fr. Hartzler should be sent there together with Fr. Kütter and he would like to add a reliable priest. Fr. Chopin has been mentioned to him and he would be very happy to join Fr. Hartzler when he has taken his vows; do you think that he would be willing to go to New Britain? This is something greatly to be desired.

Meanwhile, as a replacement for Fr. Hartzler at the Procure in Sydney and for the running of the house, Fr. Navarre would like Fr. Merg because he knows English and has a certain 'savoir-faire' quality(!). (See Twohig: Late But Not Too Late, passim, for Merg's regrettable absence of savoir-faire!) The Cardinal (Moran), unhappy that Fr. Hartzler is being changed, threatens to take Randwick from us if Fr. Hartzler is not replaced by a priest who knows English. Fr. Hartzler is young, not experienced enough for the Procure or for the supervision of the Randwick house which is important. Moreover, this good father gives himself over far too much to activities of one kind or another and is lacking in piety and seriousness of character. He cannot then be considered suitable as Superior in Sydney. Fr. Merg would be better, do you not think? Sydney has a good climate and it is a civilized city like London; one must have there, then, someone who is prudent and serious-minded.

Fr. Hartzler will go to Antwerp on Monday or Tuesday to do a good retreat lasting 8 full days as required by our Constitutions. He badly needs to do so. Return him to the way of true piety and a love of regularity. See to it that he does not discuss things with Fr. Merg as he could give him the wrong ideas about our undertakings in Sydney. After his retreat Fr. Hartzler will go to Alsace appealing on behalf of the mission.

Meanwhile, in Rome Fr. Jouët will hand over the scholastics to Fr. Védère who will be their director. He says that he will put Brother Vitale in charge of the Petite Oeuvre. Fr. Merg will leave with the next steamship on November 15; very likely I shall send with him Fr. Buisson who knows English and whom Fr. Tréand doesn't want to keep with him. The ordination (of the Bishop) will take place on November 30. I hope you will be able to come to it.

Cheerio, Father.

Would you be kind enough to send on with Fr. Merg our furnishings and banners and all that you have belonging to us.

Dear Father,

Brother Gressin should accompany the others to Rome. You will, then, send all of them directly to Rome by the shortest rail journey and the least expensive, departing straight after the feast of All Saints. When there is a third class carriage they must take it.

And when you send someone to Issoudun, see to it that he takes third class from Antwerp to Issoudun if there is one. And on arrival at Paris in the morning, instead of taking the train which leaves at 7.45am, which doesn't have a third class, he can well wait until 9.10am and he will arrive at Issoudun at 3.38pm; this is much more economical.

You can send Fr. Ricard to preach in your place.

Issoudun, November 5, 1887

Dear Father,

I am so sorry to hear that you are suffering. Take care of yourself and get better.

1. Let all of you come to an understanding with dear Fr. Delaporte about the positioning of the angels. I accept, antipatedly, whatever you will decide in Council.
  2. The gardener could very easily plant his trees at 3 metres or 3 metres 50 from the wall facing the winter garden, as we had agreed. You are so few that the winter garden could very well serve you as a covered inner courtyard. In this way your garden already small would be less encumbered, and if later the need was felt to have a covered courtyard nothing would stop you from having one between the wall and the trees; it would still (the courtyard) be big enough and the trees will always be useful to you.
- Have some bits of stone about the pedestal for the statue which you want to put at the end of the bower. You will clear away also your new wing. The house mason can do this work which should scarcely take more than a day. Take away from the middle of your courtyard the dead tree and the border around it. You will have more space for walking.
3. If our good confrères do not think it right to leave the door open until 7 o'clock, say so more in order to keep the peace.
  4. Good Fr. Delaporte wrote me a letter some days ago which was expressive of so much bad spirit that I wouldn't dare to intervene any further by way of challenging him.
  5. I, moreover, arranged everything before I left Paris, both as regards the chapel and the Association of Our Lady exercises, but I now see with some disappointment that no notice was taken of my suggestions about the devotional exercises to be carried out in the chapel. When the Association is set up there, I would like things to be done exactly as in Issoudun, on Thursday at the last mass, intercessions following the Gospel, the reciting of Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and a little talk. It appears that this talk on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is not being given. Then after the mass there is the recital of the sub tuum to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, with the three invocations: Our Lady of the Sacred Heart pray for us.

Then on Sunday night let there be petition prayers, the Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart (prayer), thanksgiving prayers and a little talk. As well, on the first Friday of each month there will be exposition of the Blessed Sacrament and, if it's not for the whole day as at Issoudun, at least during the principal mass, and in the evening on coming together. Then there is the penitential act before the Tantum Ergo and the blessing, after which Cor Jesu Sacratissimum, misere nobis, will be sung three times. It seems that on Friday last there was nothing like that, so a Parisian lady wrote to me. This is regrettable since we are Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and must spread this wonderful devotion.

Ask Fr. Maillard to send the ex-votos on to you which you can display straightaway. They should be in marble. It is regrettable that there isn't that kind of 'know-how' (tact) to draw in the faithful and hold on to them. Fr. Jouët wants Mr. de Lazorne to be ready to go to Rome to prepare for his ordination. He must have permission from the Archbishop of Paris who is his bishop. I asked a lady to bring you a lovely white vestment. You will receive it shortly. Fr. Jouët is working on the brochure which is at an advanced stage.

Issoudun, November 9, 1887

Dear Father,

I am saddened by everything which has gone on. The Devil is absolutely intent on sewing a divisive spirit in our dear Paris house. I cannot allow this to happen. I shall take stern measures, if necessary, to see to it that order is restored. It seems to me that if the rules were simply, humbly and dedicatedly followed by each one, everything would have worked out very well. If things continue being as they are in the church, the faithful will leave and be contemptuous of the priests who serve in the church. It should be, for all that, quite easy to look after everything, bring about orderliness in the chapel and have the offices performed with regularity. As for the angels, I told Father Delaporte only three days ago where they should be placed: at the two ends of the communion table, attached to the wall, where I made a cross, on a little plinth.

I told everybody to carry out in Paris what we do at Issoudun as regards the Association's activities and preaching, with exposition on the first Friday of the month. I wrote to the good Father (Delaporte) and I have heard nothing from him. Things, however, cannot go on like this. It is absolutely imperative to do as I said. I am forwarding to you a Parisian lady's comments. Show them to Fr Delaporte. I asked Fr. Jouët to write and request Mr. Lazorne to come to Issoudun and wait there before leaving (for Rome) with Fr. Jouët. It's better than being in Paris. What do you think of Silvain, the cook? Do not allow yourself to be put down or discouraged by everybody's bad humour (feelings).

Issoudun, November 12, 1887

My Lord,

Aware of all the kindness which Your Royal Highness deigns to extend to us, I make bold once more to come to you with a request.

Six years ago the Holy See kindly confided a vast mission in Oceania to us. In this mission there are many islands under the sovereignty of Germany. To meet the needs of these poor natives who would like to be converted, we thought about founding a house of our Society in Salzburg (Austria), to recruit vocations from Germany. The Archbishop and the authorities in Salzburg are very well disposed to our project. The Nuncio in Vienna, Secretary of State Cardinal Rampolla, and Cardinal Simeoni, Prefect of Propaganda, have, in the Holy Father's name, commended it to the Austrian Minister for Worship. For the past three months this proposal, with all the details which go with it, has been with the Minister. Despite all the efforts made by my confrères who are in Vienna since this matter began, nothing has happened, and everything leads us to believe that it will so continue for quite some time yet.

If your Royal Highness could commend to O... (name illegible) this initiative, I am convinced that there would straightaway arise that outcome which we seek.

Please accept my respectful good wishes, as I have the honour to be Your Royal Highness' humble and grateful servant.

Why didn't we think of this earlier? Have my letter sent on to him straightaway; it doesn't matter where he is, send it to him. Euge, serve bone et fidelis.

Issoudun, November 16, 1887

Dear Father,

Fathers Merg and Buisson embarked at Marseilles for Sydney at noon today.

1. Yes, you may put forward for tonsure and the other orders those you decide on. With regard to the tonsurate I see nothing objectionable in Brother Dezpresse being presented. I fear that this young man will have an epileptic attack, or is on the way to it. He needs to be kept under supervision. Bishop Navarre cannot go to visit you until he returns from Rome, that is to say February at the earliest, so I think.
2. If you consider it in order, you may have those novices tonsured whom you find satisfactory.
3. I don't see the need for Fr. Hartzler to come to Issoudun for the ordination. He has nothing to do with that ceremony. He saw his mother not so long ago; he has met his brother whom he will see again before his departure. I think that we need to economize. As for you, Father, I believe that it would be appropriate if you were present. I do not oblige you, however, to be there. At present you have Fr. Vandel with you, and he could replace you; he takes his examinations on the 21st of this month.
4. Try to get the best out of your young men, your much too young Italian novices. What can you do, they are there in Antwerp? They cannot be sent back to Italy. If that were to be the case, they would be repeating their novitiate next year.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

We have only one copy in Issoudun of the Golden Summa. I cannot let you have it. One finds one at auctions. Look for it and you will find one. I have two copies of Vegas' Theologia Mariana, 2 volumes in 8°. I am sending you one of them. I am also sending you the details of Bishop Verjus' ordination. Make any corrections in the letter and change it where you think it's needed. Fr. Guyot has less need than yourselves of Cornelius a Lapide. Hold on to it (Lapide's book). I repeat what I already said to Fr. Delaporte, that the Paris house buys each year for the sum of 100 or 150 francs (about 320 to 480 euros) serious books and thereby will build up little by little its library.

Yes, write a word expressing your surprise to Fr. Declin. My health remains the same.

Be kind and considerate to Monsignor Druon; he has in the past been very helpful to us, and remains very close to us. I gather he is a private tutor.

Dear Father,

Praised be the Sacred Heart, praised be trials! You had scarcely left (Rome) when I received the following shocking news:

"Rome, December 3, 8.30am.

Thieves entered during the night, church stripped, statue, altar of Our Lady. We are shocked.

Védère."

Stay as briefly as possible in Marseilles. Rome requires your presence. This is the other side of the medal. After joy comes sadness. When you get back to Rome send the Universe (Catholic paper) a description of this sacrilege so that the pious faithful might express their concern (financially). The Sacred Heart and Our Lady will draw good out of evil.

Dear Father Vaudon,

1. I am forwarding to you a remarkable study of the Sacred Heart book (Chevalier's own book) by Fr. Blot, a Jesuit who is the Carmelites' chaplain at Messine Avenue. This kind priest is very sympathetic. Have this article, at least some of it, published in our Annals, beginning with the next issue in February.

2. Mr. Gagnault, to whom I made known your justifiable comments, has taken the decision to print, frank and post Fr. Delaporte's Sacred Heart Review at 1 franc 50 (about 4.80 euros) for each printing. We shall be free of all responsibility. He will himself keep the register of names and addresses, etc. See if this arrangement is all right for you. If the answer is in the affirmative, he must be sent on immediately the contents of the next issue, the present cover or the new one which you mentioned. If your reply is in the affirmative, I shall get in touch with Fr. Delaporte. The addresses of all the priest subscribers will be needed also.

If, on the contrary, you would prefer if this publication remained as it is, or that it should be printed in Paris at another printers, I leave you to make the choice. If the printing were to take place in Issoudun, it would be preferable if the Review were posted from Issoudun also; it would be easier for us to oversee it and take charge. Decide for yourself, you are a free agent.

3. Take your time as regards the accounts; there is no hurry. If you need money, let me know and I shall send it on to you.

4. Try to visit us with Mr. de Mendoza. I shall not be bored seeing you and having a chat with you.

5. Could you preach a sermon in support of our free schools (half an hour only)(!) on one of the latter Sundays in the month of January? You would greatly please us. You can arrange your visit here on the Sunday of your choice. If a Sunday during the first fortnight of February would suit you better, that is fine by us. If this is a burden which would be tiresome for you, do not worry as I can get in touch with a Bourges canon.

6. Your Annals are very well produced and greatly interest people. The new subscriptions are coming along quite nicely.

7. Dear Fr. Delaporte is a little better.

Issoudun, December 8, 1887

Dear Father Vaudon,

1. I sent a telegram on Tuesday to our dearly loved Fr. Delaporte to notify him that Bishop Navarre would arrive in Paris tomorrow, Friday, at 4.30pm with Fr. Hartzler. I am amazed that you didn't know about this.

2. You ask me for money, which is understandable since you haven't any left, but I would like to know what was done with what you had in your bank account. Let me have, then, the details of your house's revenue. If I am not mistaken it should entail:

- A. Contributions for preaching.
- B. Payment for the Sisters' chaplaincy.
- C. Contributions from your masses - what comes from your seats. (The reference is to the 'chairperson' who went around the church at each Eucharist seeking a contribution for the use of the church's seating.)
- D. Contributions towards candles, lamps, etc.
- E. Offerings made during the office and masses in your chapel.
- F. Offerings of the faithful.

All these revenues should be used first of all for your keep, clothing, and meeting the necessary expenses of your house. And if these revenues, long established, are not enough to meet your needs, I can appreciate that in a discreet manner you would make one or more aware of your plight, that is some supportive people of your acquaintance. It is not forbidden to ask for help when in need, thereby unburdening the motherhouse which has so much financial responsibility on its shoulders. But if these pleas for financial help do not succeed, then I shall attempt the impossible in coming to your help. In any event, faced with such penury, I expressly forbid each and everyone to make use of the income, such as it is, from the chapel or elsewhere, to furnish the chapel or the house, carry out improvements or buy something new, no matter what, without my permission. Our poverty requires us to live economically and avoid expenses, even minimal, which are not necessary.

While Bishop Navarre is staying with you, at the mid-day and evening meals you will not place on the table more than one extra plate of vegetables. That is how it is at the presbytery (Issoudun). The Bishop does not have coffee at mid-day and, accordingly, we do not serve him with it. He doesn't take liquors or tea. He lives and wishes to live like a simple missionary. As for Tuesday's dinner, only invite those people who should be there. The Superiors of the Oblates and the Marists in Paris, or, more so, the Provincials, if about, may be invited. The Marists have been really helpful to us in Sydney. The Archbishop's aide, Fr. Bureau, who knows us, may also be invited as well as Fr. Riant if it is thought fit to have the latter. One must not ignore the Holy Infancy Director who has a keen interest in our missions and could be very helpful to us. Fr. Pervilhac would also like it if he were not omitted.

Do not undertake anything excessive for this dinner; we would be criticized. It should be simple and pleasant, like that which we put on at rue de Passy for Bishop Morel of Lyons.

I believe that Sylvain (the cook) could, if he wished, cook such a dinner; suggest it to him. If not you can buy the main dishes and hire the necessary crockery etc. Again, I repeat, let everything be simple; it is known that we are religious; to do otherwise would discredit us. I shall try to get to Paris Sunday or Monday at 4.30pm.

And how is it with Father Deidier? Give him my good wishes; I pray a lot for him.

My regards to all.

It is now six months since you were given grounds for hoping. I fear that all will end with non-acceptance. Each time success seems imminent, and each time disappointment follows... Matters must be brought to an end, nevertheless, since life in the hotel and being isolated there must not go on any longer. How do you both live in Vienna? Where do you get the money to meet your expenses? Have you borrowed? How much and from whom? Your vow of obedience and poverty requires you to provide your Superiors with an account of your situation. Fr. Piperon has written to me to say that he knows absolutely nothing. What do you expect, my friend? If things go on and on you cannot remain in Vienna. You must, both of you, return to Antwerp, and from there you will pursue the Salzburg undertaking. If, therefore, following Fr. Jouët's reply, you are still only the recipient of smooth words in place of an answer, you will return to your community.

I pray earnestly for a favourable answer.

Dear Father,

I have written to dear Fr. Delaporte providing him with all the details. I am sorry that he hasn't shown you our correspondence. Ask him for the last one, the day before yesterday. It is all arranged that the little Breton will leave Paris tomorrow, Monday morning, by the 'omnibus' train (that which stops at all stations) at 9.30. If the dear Father has forgotten this, then it will be Tuesday at the same time. I haven't the time to be repeating the same thing three times. Tomorrow at 7am I shall be sending you the brother cook, as arranged already. He will arrive in Paris at 2.48pm. Send Brother Alexander, whom he knows, to meet him. If you can find a rhetoric teacher for the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre, your expectations for Fr. Jullien will be realised. Our contract with Gaignault does not finish for two years. Our dear Fr. Delaporte demonstrates more and more his lack of order. Fr. Carrière sent him a bill to be paid and against which Fr. Vandel sent him 100 francs (over 300 euros). And dear Fr. Delaporte says that he doesn't know if he received the bill or what has become of it. This is very regrettable. A supporter of the Petite Oeuvre writes from Toulouse that she sent on 50 francs to Fr. Delaporte for our Petite Oeuvre by registered letter and was astonished not to have a reply. What has become of this letter? He again asks me for the addresses of subscribers in Paris, and the fact is that our confrères have sent them to him three times. This is getting to be too much! Our good Father writes to me (complaining) that I run the Paris house down to the smallest details by dealing with you, and he is only a Superior in name. This is very annoying! I reply stating that my involvement in taking it (the house) over and setting it up having now come to an end, I shall not any longer involve myself with the house. I now leave the running of the house to him as local Superior. Just the same, I told him not to undertake unnecessary expenses, or even acceptable purchases, which he could not pay without recourse to Issoudun's accounts. He must, then, have my approval (for any transaction).

Mr. Daniel is charging me 90 francs for the two placings of the angels, the chandeliers, the visits, the iron candlesticks. I am disillusioned with these expenses which could have been avoided if my recommendations were carried out. Ask the painters, the interior decorators, the carpenters, etc. for their bills.

As soon as the covers are being printed, one can add on below "2nd edition, greatly added to", 5 or 6 francs (roughly 16 or 19 euros). The price has to be considered; it cannot be too expensive if we want to sell it. What's essential is that we meet our expenses. Give consideration to this with Mr. Dumoulin.
4. Fr. Hartzler was due to send him his work.
5. Saint Michael seems fine by me; two or three thousand copies must be printed and set aside for subscriptions and purchase. The subscriptions do not go beyond 500. Meanwhile you will engage yourself with the margins (of the pages) in such wise that everything can go into the envelope here enclosed; that will suffice.
6. Yes, this lovely St. Michael must also be printed in our Annals with a little explanatory note. What heading would you print at the bottom of this picture to have it made use of commercially? That which follows here could, perhaps, accompany it: St. Michael standard-bearer of the Sacred Heart. Property of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, is it not through this sign that he will triumph over the Church's enemies and Freemasonry in the decisive confrontation?
7. Try to get permission for perpetual adoration. It is, obviously, something which has been overlooked.

Dear Father Vaudon,

Do not be discouraged. I appeal to you to hold your head up against the storm and you will be triumphant. Protest continuously against what is being wasted, unnecessary expense, the lack of order and economizing which you witness. When the accounts reach me I shall make some serious observations. I said it before and repeat it once more, emphasizing it to Fr. Delaporte and the others, that in every respect the Paris house should limit itself to those expenses which are absolutely necessary to avoid getting into debt. When it can be economically self-sufficient, paying all its expenses and even its rent, that is to say 5,000 francs (about 20,480 euros), this being the interest which we have to pay into the hands of Mr. Riant every year, only then, following this outlay, can the Paris house use the remainder of its intake to provide useful objects for the chapel.

But for the time being it is right and proper for a careful administration to concentrate on what are the necessary requirements. As for the choir youngsters, I am about to send you on two costumes; this will help you to avoid expenses which can for the moment be postponed.

I would willingly discharge you from your post in order to be kind to you, but I tell you in confidence, since as yet I have spoken to nobody, that I have thought about sending Fr. Carrière to Quito as Superior. Dear Fr. Morisseau is unable to hold down this post. The Archbishop has asked that he be changed – all this is for yourself alone. You can see how very embarrassed I am. Fr. Caërs kept everything in the dark: due to the insistence of the Archbishop I had to recall him. He is on his way back. What are we going to do about all this?

Pray for me, Father, and accept my best wishes in Corde Jesu.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Mr. Lazorne has gone and knocked at the door of the Mercy. You are aware of that. I wrote to Fr. Delaporte that I was appointing you a member of the Council, together with Fr. Carrière, and with a deliberative role. This is your New Year's gift.

3. Whatever we owe to the painter, carpenter, curtain man and mason, etc. for work at rue de Calais. Make clear to the workmen and the architect that unless they present immediately their invoices, approved by the architect, I shall hold back from paying them. The more delays increase, the more likely liquidation becomes a bottle of ink; it's we who are the victims; we must finish with all this. When paying Mr. Chertier ask him the whereabouts of the Quito relic. Ask him to take snapshots of it. You will be able to describe it in the forthcoming Annals. I wish to thank you for your confidential letter dealing with the visit you paid to Fr. Zaecheri. I published nothing, or had anything published, about the book in question with respect to the observations you have sent on to me. I ask for nothing better than to carry out whatever will be said to me. I should think that the storm will have calmed down after that, since in the second edition all the corrections will be inserted. It is an atrocious punishment to think that the sword of Damocles is continuously hanging over one's head when one has the best intentions in the world and the greatest possible good-will. Can you imagine the scandal and uproar which would ensue from this placing on the Index, the delight among our enemies, and the incalculable harm arising from it for our undertakings and the Society itself? There are perhaps 5 or 600 copies of this book to be sold. This edition has been shared with Mr. Retoux of the Paris bookshop and myself.

I intend to withdraw immediately from sale availability all the copies which remain (unsold). The material arrangements will affect us, but it doesn't matter greatly. I shall immediately bring out a new edition which shall take seriously into account the comments you have passed on to me and which you may still send on to me for Fr. Zaecheri, withdrawing, changing, clarifying, as requested. This work will be printed in Rome if so wished and submitted for approval to the Master of the Sacred Palace. I cannot say, or do, more than this. Present immediately this proposal to Father Zaecheri and, if he approves, no book from the present edition will be sold. This is the only instance of a sermon where the syntax is not logically, or lucidly, linked.

Some jottings.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

"Behold this Heart which has loved men so much." (Our Lord to Margaret Mary.) Margaret Mary did everything she could to meet the Lord's wishes and spread this devotion. Obstacles were not wanting – Before she died she had the satisfaction of seeing the devotion accepted. She is the last thrust of Jesus Christ's love, the plant of salvation. St. Gertrude asked St. John why he, who had leaned on the Heart of Christ, left nothing with us, said nothing to us about the riches of this heart. He replied that this was to be left for later times. We have arrived at these cooled-off times, the time foretold by Our Lord. It's the impact of the 16th century turmoil. If everything is in revolutionary uproar, societies, the family, individuals, devotion to the Sacred Heart has been given as a remedy. We cannot then be saved except by the Sacred Heart. When the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart presented themselves to Pius IX, he said to them that "...the Church and Society have no other hope than the Heart of Jesus, and it is he who will rid them of all their evils".

Let us not go and look elsewhere for a remedy, in families or societies... we are not yet worthy of it... that the remedy should be officially applied (sic), but we are not far away from that moment. We must, all of us, be Missionaries of the Sacred Heart to the best of our ability since it is the surest way to get to heaven.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

When it was being said that this slogan was that of those poor priests who came together to consecrate themselves to the Sacred Heart and honour Mary, something being laughed at, with the result that this divine sowing was treated contemptuously over a number of years. The Holy Virgin was honoured with a glorious title: Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. These adherents wished to place all their confidence in her. She knew the way to the Heart of Jesus, and had the key to all his treasures – millions of associates – patroness of difficult issues. Nobody is more powerful than her who holds the key to the treasury. Crowds gathered, the streets heard the triumphal hymns... The Basilica... 500 thousand acts of thanksgiving officially acknowledged. While all the other centres of pilgrimage were left intact, this alone was struck down – Our Lady of the Sacred Heart – Issoudun, the victim, the object of Satan's fury, because this sanctuary contained the two devotions which would save the world. But the power of God was not taken into account. It was at this moment that the Holy Father laid his eyes on the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart and said to them: "I know that the world is assailing you, I know that France no longer wants you – I have a task for you to undertake: 20 million pagans who are not evangelized, 1,500 islands or so to conquer for our faith, and which call for Our Lady's blessing." They accepted, set out... They eventually arrive, on their own, on their own, thrown among those pagans, who were armed, believing that they (the missionaries) were warriors, and they were but five poor missionaries who had no more than the Heart of Jesus on their chests. It wasn't unhelpful and these unfortunate pagans softened and received the Missionaries as brothers. The Holy Father appointed a bishop, choosing the head of this pioneer mission. Satan is still there. At the present moment this bishop, Navarre, whom you have seen here, is ill in Rome; he is so ill that he asked for the Last Rites. I commend him to your prayers. We hope that the concern will be eased (with his return to health). Those poor natives put up their hands to appeal. They come from 20 or 30 different areas to be catechized and instructed – New Guinea – new villages are being discovered in this country. The latest information reaching us is that our missionaries have gone as far as the source of the river which they have called St. Joseph's. They found new tribes of natives who said to them: Father, stay with us and teach us; we wish to be baptized. Answer for your part to this prayer, this zeal and devotedness; be apostles in your families, in your homes. You see the devotedness of these apostles, these poor natives.

Here are some ways by which you can help them: the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association; the Petite Oeuvre of the Sacred Heart. When we began to look for a 'sou' (penny), it was the occasion for laughter. One began to ask for a 'sou' from everyone with good-will. And it was asked: what can you do with a 'sou' then? This 'sou' is never refused. What's lacking are promoters to spread the faith. This undertaking is today producing its results. 300 youngsters are being brought up in the different centres where the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart are to be found. When they grow up they will choose their vocation; almost always they will remain in the Sacred Heart family – Helpers – The 'sou' has worked marvels, led to priests, apostles who will be sent to the poor natives who lift up their hands appealingly. All who wish to remain Christian must devote themselves to the Sacred Heart. Our Lord has made wonderful promises to the priests and faithful who promote this devotion. There is also an Association for the little children; the Third Order for those choice souls who want to be permeated with the Spirit of the Sacred Heart. There are presently millions of tertiaries animated by apostolic zeal who are committed right at the heart of their families. The Heart of Jesus ends triumphantly. There are the priests of the Sacred Heart, a priestly enterprise, which produces saintly and apostolic people in parishes. All of us must work as actively as possible to spread devotion to the Sacred Heart, having in mind those words of Pius IX: "The Church and Society have no other hope than the Heart of Jesus."

The Issoudun sanctuary is closed, but the Holy Father has passed on all the privileges to the parish church where the patroness of difficult problems has her chapel. There the miracles are registered, more than ever, perhaps... This year different pilgrimages arrived on the 31st of May, the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. If a group from Paris were to make this pilgrimage I am certain that it would bring you treasures of graces.

Missions – their advancement is important – all the undertakings are in Paris. Why not develop among our supporters a serious-minded group devoted to the interests of the missions? Like something for those setting out! When the Missionaries arrive they find the unfortunate natives without clothes. This is a woman's undertaking – what is no longer of use to you, put it aside for this mission – dresses.

Each missionary should leave with virtually 2 million francs (roughly 6,250 euros); for 10 missionaries, then, it will be 20 thousand francs, and then it isn't only the journey. In Sydney they must be provided with the means for agricultural work and what helps towards civilizing the place... For those who can contribute, it is a wonderful undertaking helping to bring the light of Jesus Christ by supporting a missionary. What a blessing for the family which can say: that will be my contribution. I leave this thought with you. Be faithful children in relation to this Divine Heart and we shall receive graces and blessings!

I am sorry to gather that you are exhausted. It is absolutely imperative to build yourself up. See an experienced Dr. and follow whatever he will prescribe for you. There is no point in postponing this. Look after yourself.

As for the Lenten (preaching) at Orléans, I have nobody available to replace you. I can only think of dear Fr. Delaporte. See what you can do, discuss this matter with him, unless you know someone who would be better suited. Bishop Navarre left for Rome this morning with Fr. Hartzler.

To His Grace Jean-Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

Issoudun, February 5, 1888

Your Grace,

In 1877 the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars kindly deigned to approve our Constitutions for ten years, per modum experimenti.

These ten years have gone by. I now put forward again these same Constitutions, requesting definitive approval for them. Experience has shown us that we must add three main adaptations to them, which I present in the enclosed appeal, together with the reasons in favour. I send Your Grace at the same time a copy of our new Constitutions with the request to take note of them and to support my appeal to the Sovereign Pontiff with a special letter, whose secret is special to Your Grace, petitioning for a successful outcome.

I committed myself to make these Constitutions as complete as possible, providing a thorough, complete, legal document which, after my death, will assure the normal and effective functioning of our dear Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. I associate, then, the greatest importance to the involvement of Your Grace. It will obtain for us in this Jubilee year, as a prized gift from Leo XIII, that definitive approval which will be for us, and for myself in particular, the greatest prize. If this signal favour is, as I hope, granted to us, I shall die most happily, no longer fearing any changes which might take our institute on a divergent path, that which I have tried to map out for it with the grace of God.

I hasten to send Your Grace several copies of the latest edition of Fr. Jouët's work on our missions. This volume is much more complete than the previous one. I enclose with it some propaganda brochures on the same subject by Fr. Hartzler, who is travelling with Bishop Navarre who left on Wednesday for Lyons and from there will go to Rome.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant and son in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: Three Franciscans are due to come during Lent to give a mission in Issoudun. I ask Your Grace to grant them all the necessary faculties.

Dear Father,

I have received a notification from Fr. Védère. I am sending it to you so that you can know what they are thinking in Rome. You will see to it as much as possible while training your young men to be truly pious and disciplined, what is very much a prerequisite, and insofar as it is possible for you, that they will also be very much given to interior and exterior mortification, to humility and a spirit of poverty, making them religious who have a spirit of sacrifice and "ad omne opus bonum magis parati" (being very much in readiness to undertake any kind of good work), as our Constitutions state, page 18.

As for myself, I find the 'Manual for Religious of the Sacred Heart' very good and would have it translated into Latin; revise it.

When I write to Fr. Védère I shall ask him to be precise about the harshness which he complains about (in the manual). The teaching of this manual should be followed in all our houses, since otherwise we shall have two viewpoints and two approaches.

I don't know how things are in Salzburg. I think they are at their wits' end to find money.

1. At this moment you should have Bishop Navarre with you.
2. The issue as regards the Work of the Eucharistic Heart seems to be quite complicated. I share your view; it's best left alone. We are already involved with so many undertakings. It would be more advantageous to strengthen our Third Order and our priestly work, obtaining a number of privileges. Become engaged with this.
3. As for the Countryside Work, one can do as you say and be one on this.
4. Like you I am sorry that our St. Michael is no longer in mind.
5. Mr. Chertier has printed the Quito reliquary. You will have it towards the end of this month.
6. The Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart have no money to set themselves up in Rome. Besides, what would they do with themselves? What would they live on?
7. Bishop Navarre will let you know what his coat of arms will be.
8. The Archbishop of Bourges has enrolled on the register of his Major Seminary Brother Guillaume.
9. I shall forward to Fr. Morisseau the Quito postulant's letter.

Salzburg, February 8, 1888

Very Reverend Fr. Superior General,

On returning to Salzburg I found awaiting me the following lines from Fr. Piperon: "You asked me to allow the mortgage for the Antwerp house to be used for the Mr. Schwann borrowing. I believe that it was explained sufficiently clearly to me at Issoudun, above and beyond recalling this statement of yours: Mr. Schwann will be happy to undertake a mortgage for Salzburg. I must not add to the situation when a house has already enough charges weighing on it and which I would not want to pass on, burdened with debt, to his successor. I, accordingly, wrote to the Very Reverend Superior General about this matter. If he gives me an explicit order, then I shall act according to your wishes, Father; if, on the contrary, he allows me freedom, to my great regret, I think, I cannot meet your request. It's not the first time that I see myself the victim of the Reverend Father's unwelcome attitude. Here, in fact, is how things have progressed... (Barral recalls the Council meeting to which he was invited. He ends his letter in the following way.) "I repeat that we cannot go back on the word given to Schwann; I didn't give it in my name but rather in your name and in that of the Council."

1. Do not be unwise about your Lent (preaching) at Orléans and take care of yourself.
2. I am pleased that your Bruges retreat went very well.
3. Yes, you are right; there should be a 4-page notification about the Sacred Heart Third Order.
4. Send your complaints to Fr. Jouët; he well deserves them. His nonchalance is often very hard to put up with.
5. No, I am not in the mind to accept a permanent mass foundation; these are over-burdensome conditions.
6. Accept everything which will be offered to you. I am not making any more complaints to dear Fr. Delaporte. I sent a note to him about the length of his Sunday sermon at the 10 o'clock mass. He hit back saying that he couldn't understand why Issoudun, at such a distance away, wanted to regulate every detail in the Paris house and chapel, and while this was the case he wouldn't preach any longer at the 10 o'clock mass. Accordingly, the devotees of short masses would be pleased. All this ill-humour is unpleasant, while on the other hand, by allowing him to do as he pleases he could compromise everything. The expense which you mention is beyond belief! I, just the same, had made it quite clear to him not to buy anything other than the essentials while the Paris house was unable to look after itself financially.
7. You are a member of the Council with deliberative voice. It is for you, my friend, as bursar, to talk with serious intent.
8. Try to describe for our Annals the Quito reliquary.
9. The Saint Michael piece is not noteworthy. One forgot to place a cross above the Sacred Heart on the standard, and this has an off-putting effect.
10. Would you like to, or more correctly can you, take responsibility for the priests' Work? And how is the Third Order getting on?
11. Yes, send on the statements from the mason, the carpenter, the painter, the carpet man, etc. Get these people to hurry up. Later on, it will be the ink bottle (a phrase used in the context of a confused, uncertain, situation).

Tilburg, January 27, 1888

Dear Reverend Father,

It is with a heart laden with sadness, and with tears in my eyes, that I come to point out to you for the last time a state of affairs I can no longer tolerate. It is the final attempt in addressing myself to you to get a change. Having had no reply from Fr. Piperon to the request I made to him (perhaps he didn't think it appropriate to give a satisfactory answer to my just demand), I am so annoyed with him that I cannot stay any longer in this harsh situation.

It is for this reason I come, Rev. Father, to beg of you the favour to recall me either to Paris or Issoudun, etc., as I absolutely contend that I am not capable of living my present way of life any longer. It is for this reason, Rev. Father, that, in the event of your not being able to meet my legitimate request, I ask you to dispense me from the ten months of temporary vows which I have yet to complete. It's with a sorrowing broken heart I make this submission, but, Rev. Father, I believe it is my duty to do so since my present situation is likely to overwhelm me in discouragement and draw me towards a state of excess I would regret, as well as presenting me with a sad insight into the religious life.

You will excuse, Reverend Father, this freedom of expression I am taking upon myself, and be kind enough to rest assured of my promise never to forget all the benefits of which I was the recipient in your good Congregation. I do my utmost, Very Rev. Father, to assure you of my gratitude in working for the glory of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, and for the good of our dear Petite Oeuvre in which I had the honour of living over five and a half years. Since I am not allowed to engage myself internally with this dear Petite Oeuvre, I think that at last this favour will not be refused me once outside the house. Such is the request, Rev. Father, which I believe I must make of you with regard to the circumstances in which I find myself. I, then, appeal to you to consider it, and be kind enough to accept the promises which I made to you, and which I renew as I send this letter.

Awaiting your reply, Reverend Father, I ask the favour of being kindly blessed for the last time, and to believe always that I am your grateful and devoted son.

Fr. Piperon does not seem in any way disposed to accept it, stating that it would be prejudicial to his undertaking on which there are already too many charges. If you have the document of the Council's discussion authorizing this eventuality, that would be ideal, since Fr. Piperon upholds the contrary opinion. As regards myself, I no longer recall anything about it. Fr. Jouët would, perhaps, remember it better, also Fathers Guyot and Delaporte. You might write to them. Issoudun, February 18, 1888

Dear little Father,

1. Tell Fr. Védère that he shouldn't get too worried; I received his short letter. I freely and fully pardon his impetuosity, but let him be more careful in the future, addressing his concerns, and those of the scholastics, to you, with regard to our regulations. I hold to this, that we do not bring down with one hand that which we are building up with the other in so much endeavour. The young men are too much given to emancipation from the rules and the widest possible interpretation not to react, on the contrary, against this dangerous tendency. If in the manual for Religious of the Sacred Heart there are some statements which are too harsh, exaggerated, or condemned by theology, let them be pointed out with supporting argument at the appropriate time. But to condemn as such a work based on the better theologians, is to show proof of a spirit wanting in good-will. If we have Constitutions and Rules, it's for the purpose of their being followed faithfully and with respect by whomsoever.

2. I am sorry about Bishop Navarre's illness. We are praying a great deal that he will soon be restored to health. Keep me informed. Yes, the appointment of a coadjutor who is a bishop would seem to be very much needed. I brought up this matter with Bishop Navarre. He thought Fr. Verjus was too young with many drawbacks, together with great qualities. He found Fr. Couppé more rounded, and thought his disinclination for power was more against the expression of it than for what it was in itself. Discuss all this among yourselves and do what is best. I support what you will come up with.

3. As for Fr. Hartzler, he is a pitiable individual without piety or a religious spirit, vain, full of himself, scatter-brained, lacking in judgment. Left to himself, he is likely to behave most imprudently and compromise the Society. He needs to be led and have a firm Superior to do so. Sydney was most damaging for him. He exudes a certain sweetness, and even projects an atmosphere of piety before his superiors, but with his acquaintances and strangers he quickly emancipates himself. He lost his reputation in Sydney when he lived free of regulations and as he wished. His confrères were given to thinking that he didn't say (pray) his Breviary; he doesn't accept challenge from his confrères; he gives himself over to violent attitudes and a surfeit of anger. He doesn't acknowledge that the Cardinal is aware of the indiscretions involving that 16-year-old girl called Cathy. Before his departure from Sydney, I wanted to make it known to him how he was thought of in Sydney, how his behaviour had scandalized the faithful and his confrères, and his presence in that city, even for some weeks, would not be possible either because of the sad history he left behind him there, or because of the Cardinal who knows it all. Since in Rome itself he is so light-hearted of word, so full of himself, let him know as coming from me, if you deem it appropriate, everything I have told you, and what you already know yourself. This will constitute a good lesson for him and make him more prudent.

4. Brother Fromm, so it seems, is a difficult character and Brother Vitale is too soft. He must become better trained, more assertive and much more pious to go on the missions, since, otherwise, one runs into dangers and becomes an obstacle to what is good. Challenge fully these young men before sending them off.

On Fromm see at some length Twohig: Late, But Not Too Late.

5. I am pleased with the interest Bishops Hamel and Morel have in our missions. May this interest become effective. You read the Archbishop of Quito's letter. Who can be given to him as Superior? I thought about Fr. Carrière, but Fr. Delaporte tells me that the man who could redeem the situation and set up our Society very advantageously would be Fr. Meyer. What do you think? But by whom would he be replaced in Antwerp? What is Fr. Píperon going to say? I would also like to send Fr. Roussel with Fr. Meyer to Quito. But who would fill in the gaps they leave? How problematic all this is for me!

6. As for Father Hartzler, I advised Bishop Navarre to take him (back) with him. That's what is best and most prudent in the circumstances. As for New Britain it's either Fr. Couppé or Fr. Verjus who should go there as Superior. New Britain is not developed enough or quite ready yet to have sisters. In a year or two we shall see. As for priests and brothers we shall send there those we can make available. It's not for Fr. Hartzler to arrange these matters.

I agreed with Bishop Navarre that he should make his report to Cardinal Simeoni and get His Eminence to name himself, on the suggestion of Bishop Navarre, Fr. Couppé or Fr. Verjus as Superior or Prefect of New Britain, Fr. Verjus or Fr. Couppé, coadjutor with the right of succession of Melanesia, with Fr. Hartzler residing in New Guinea with Bishop Navarre. These appointments made by the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda would hide the role of Bishop Navarre and Fr. Hartzler would more willingly accept.

Cheerio, Father. My regards to everybody in C.J.

Issoudun, February 18, 1888

Dear Father,

1. I have just received a letter from Fr. Jouët informing me that Bishop Navarre is gravely ill in Rome. Pray, and have prayers said, for him.
2. Your annual costs are enormous and your debts staggering. Why have you become so involved in this way? Your church could well have waited! If war was declared with Germany, what would happen to you? It's all very well to have a large property and a lovely house; being 540,000 francs in debt (about 1,728,770 euros), everybody could have as much. I beseech with all my heart Our Lord to free you as soon as possible from this embarrassment. Rid yourself, effectively, of Baron Van Hove's land. You are paying 3,000 francs (about 9,600 euros) to rent it well nigh unprofitably. Cut down on your expenses and limit yourself to the strictly necessary.
3. You should have Fr. Barral with you. Look after your affairs in tandem.
4. Who will in the end make up the Salzburg personnel? Fathers Balzer, Ilge, Barral would like very much to be among the personnel. And Fr. Klotz as Superior. I believe that it would be best to have Fr. Balzer made a naturalized Austrian, etc., and have Fr. Klotz in readiness (to be Superior). If you think it appropriate, at Easter we could name him (Klotz), at least provisionally, as effectively the community's Superior and Fr. Balzer would be the official Superior relative to the Government. Fr. Klotz would look after the house from the material and religious point of view since I believe he has all the requisite qualities in this respect. Then, when everything has been well set up and is in place, we shall try to replace him and I would, then, put him forward as Superior of the Issoudun house.

Fr. Batard hasn't got what it takes for something like this. He lets things take their course and almost everyone, then, does as he likes. Having Fr. Klotz to hand (in Issoudun) I shall observe him and then, if I find in him the qualities of a Superior General, as I take him to have, I shall introduce him to the supervision of affairs, asking the Council or the Chapter to let me have him as Vicar General with a view to succession in the future. I am beginning to look about, others also. It is wise, then, to think about the future since if I come to depart without anyone being named to replace me, I would fear serious repercussions. So long as my successor was named in advance and brought up to date on the Congregation's work, there would be no upheaval. What do you think of this proposal?

5. Meanwhile, my friend, I have another proposal to put to you. The Archbishop of Quito has requested, with good reason, the departure of Fr. Caër. His Grace informs me that Fr. Morisseau, saintly man though he is, is quite incapable of being a respected Superior. He has, therefore, asked me, in consideration of our house and our works, to send him one or two people, one of whom would be the Superior who, by his understanding and tact, would get rid of the bad impression made at the beginning and lift the fortunes of our Society. I thought about Fr. Carrière, but it has been said to me, and with reason, that Fr. Meyer would be much better suited to the place and that he, alone, could redeem the situation. With whom could we replace him (Meyer)? Your view.

6. Before sending Brother Allegre home to his family, get in touch with Fr. Jouët. I believe that sending him home would not give rise to an overly damaging effect in Marseilles. Fr. Jouët will help to clarify matters. As for the last two, you will take a close look at them.

Dear Father,

1. Do not get worked up more than is needed as regards Fr. Meyer. He was suggested to me for Quito by one of ours who said he knew him well. And another confrère wrote saying that it would be good to separate him from Fr. Vandel since he influences excessively Fr. Vandel, and these two confrères could harm each other's best interests.

But once more, my friend, I am not taking sides. It's your opinion I was looking for. Meanwhile I think that you attach too much significance to Fr. Meyer's presence in Antwerp, and see things all too darkly. I am sometimes more embarrassed than you might think. You only look at the problems where you are, whereas all those of the Society come to me and greatly concern me. They are at times inextricable and from different directions. If I were to throw in the towel on coming to know them and begin to feel discouraged, what would become of us? Take heart! The Sacred Heart will look after us so long as we seek only His Glory and the good of our Institute. You are blessed, Father, in presenting all the problems, the good which is likely, without any indication of the means to overcome them. It's a drawback. Try, then, to propose a remedy which is applicable to the problem, and you would greatly help me. You would be perfect.

2. Fr. Barral has not had anybody's permission to stay permanently in Salzburg. As for myself, I haven't had so much as a word from him. If you don't mind, we shall leave him there until Easter to oversee the work involved in taking over and then I shall tell him to return to Antwerp. Is this your view, also?

3. As for Fr. Klotz, my proposal, if the Council approves, is to leave him no more than a year at Salzburg, during which time he would provide a good thrust to discipline and the religious life, and then recall him to Issoudun as local Superior at first, and then Vicar General, having in mind a future take-over as Superior General. I do not know if, along with these plans, he should be advised to take out Austrian citizenship. It would, perhaps, be better if Fr. Balzer were to do that; what do you think?

4. It was agreed, so it appears to me, that Fr. Hartzler (a brother of the one accompanying Navarre) would be Superior in Tilburg. It remains that a director for the Antwerp Petite Oeuvre must be found. It is not impossible; there are combinations to be made. Think about it.

5. Since the Dr. advised you to send Brother Allègre home, and he himself wants it to be so, send him off to Marseilles. When he is better, he will return.

6. I wrote a very serious letter to Fr. Védère; here's his reply.

7. Bishop Navarre is getting a little better.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I think you would be doing yourself a favour by not waiting on Bishop Navarre for your ordinations.

Dear Father,

I received your two books. I shall read your work with pleasure. I am sure that your words will be well received and that the Lord will bless your efforts. I ask for good health for you. Take care and look after yourself. I went to Paris on Monday evening and returned on Tuesday evening. The meeting was well attended. And people seemed well disposed. But our dear Father (Delaporte) continues to annoy people more and more. It's catastrophic. He has for all that a great future there if he only knew how to deal with issues. Everything is dirty and disorderly in the house.

Dear Father.

1. I am delighted to know that Bishop Navarre is getting better.
2. Fr. Laviolle has finished an appeal for the mission (Navarre's). He has collected, he says, almost 10,000 francs (about 32,610 euros). May the Lord be praised!
3. Has Bishop Navarre sent his request to the committee of the Pontifical Jubilee for financial resources in particular; this is urgent?
4. Has the Pope, on the occasion of his Jubilee, given orders to finish and decorate your church? I was pleased to read that His Holiness was about to send you a nice present; it's something else altogether which he should offer.
5. Before the thought of taking Fr. Meyer away from him, Fr. Piperon is spitting fire and flames, having persuaded himself that Fr. Meyer is irreplaceable for him and that without him the house cannot go forward. It's always like this when it's necessary to take someone from him to place elsewhere. Fr. Piperon only sees his own house and work. As regards Antwerp, he finds himself in an embarrassing predicament. The dear man, without consulting anybody, has gone right ahead. Having bought a lot of ground at a costly price, he has built a large house with all possible conveniences and has just built a chapel... all of which is very good. But, then, fearing trouble or other unfortunate issues, I asked him for the accounts. He admitted a debt of 500,000 francs (about 1,600,700 euros). It was neither more nor less than I had anticipated. By this reckoning, one can be flattered in having a lovely property and huge buildings. I am, however, very ill at ease in this last respect.
6. I would very much like to know as well, my friend, how you are situated as regards your own accounts. Given all the money Rome has spent, your financial position causes me anxiety. For quite a long time I have asked you for your proper, exact, detailed accounts, without ever being able to get them. I appeal to you not to wait any longer; I want to know exactly what is the financial situation at the Rome house.
7. Fr. Caër has written to me from Lima. I am forwarding his letters to you. You will let me know what you think. I shall wait for your reply before I write to him.
8. I went to Paris to see the Quito reliquary. It's very beautiful. The Paris consulate will send it to Rome during the first fortnight of March. Good wishes to Bishop Navarre and our dear fathers and brothers.

Cheerio, my friend.

Dear Father,

I told you that I didn't wish to make you feel unhappy. Why are you tormenting yourself? Since you say that Fr. Meyer is indispensable to you for the time being, I shall leave him with you, then, but we shall see later on.

Since you don't want anything to do with Fr. Barral and would so much like to see him somewhere else besides Salzburg, where then would you like me to appoint him? Why don't you say something? Do you think that he would be best placed in Quito not as Superior but under the supervision of Fr. Morisseau? If this isn't your view, let me know by post what you think is best for him.

L 18880303

Undated, possibly March 3, 1888

A letter from the Very Reverend Superior General to the Superiors of the Society's houses on the occasion of Fr. A. Rosenkranz's death.

Together with the sad news brought to you with this letter, the Very Reverend Fr. Superior asked me to add the section of our new regulations which deals with succour to be granted to our dear dead. The esteemed Father asks you to be kind enough to proceed in keeping with the prescriptions which follow:

Article 96: Each priest of the house to which the dead member belonged will say five masses for him if he is a priest, and three if he is a scholastic, or professed lay brother. All the priests of the same province will say one mass only. Besides, all the Superiors of all our houses in whatever province will say one mass for the deceased if he died on the missions.

Article 97: Moreover, all the scholastics from the different houses of the province to which the dead member belonged must offer for the repose of his soul all the communions they make, with their confessor's approval, during the eight days following the notification of the death. During those eight days the lay brothers, besides their communions, must say the Rosary each day for the deceased, and this Rosary must be separate from that which they are required to say daily according to the general rules. Besides, during this time, in each house of the province all the devotional and pious exercises of the community must be exclusively focused on the dead member, and this intention must be made known to the whole community at night-time before prayer.

Article 98: If the deceased is a novice, in addition to the mass sung for him, if it can be conveniently arranged, all the priests residing in the house will say one mass for him. For the rest, all the spiritual impact of good works, communions and Rosaries of the house where the novice died will be made available to him according to what is customary, as has been regulated for the other dead.

NOTA: As long as the provinces of the Society have not been constitutionally formed, all the Congregation's houses must be considered as forming part of one and the same province with regard to the fulfilling of the regulations above.

Thank you for your kind letter and the news of Bishop Navarre. I am forwarding a letter from Fr. Bontemps to you to be passed on to Bishop Navarre. He left for the Gilbert Islands on February 22. I received a nice letter from dear Fr. Hartzler. I wrote a line to him.

Mr. Chertier has sent the lovely Quito reliquary to the Ecuador Consul. He is sending it to the Ecuador Ambassador so that it can be presented to the Pope. Write a word to the Consul then so that he will let us know beforehand and give us the address of his representative so that you can accompany the latter when he takes it to the Pope. This is the very least to be expected of us as the Archbishop made me responsible for this reliquary. The Consul's name is Mr. de Ballen, Ecuador Consul, 19 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris.

Issoudun, March 6, 1888

Dear Father Barral,

It's Fr. Joseph Balzer who will be the official Superior in Salzburg, advise him about this – I don't know where he is – so that he can make the necessary arrangements. Fr. Klotz will be de facto Superior of the house; he will not have to be a naturalized Austrian. It would be pointless in his case.

The diminishment of our financial intake, the expenses involved with the Paris house, the new building I am about to undertake for the Petite Oeuvre at Issoudun, the expenses involved with Bishop Navarre's ordination, make it impossible for me to send you the money you need. I cannot give you more than 6,000 francs (about 19,200 euros). You can, then, write a cheque against my account for this sum through the intermediary of Mr. Piquet, the Issoudun banker. This advance greatly displeases me, but in the end, in order to be kind to you, I give it my approval. Do not incur any more than the necessary expenses and live very economizingly, avoiding all excessive or superfluous expenses.

Fr. Klotz cannot arrive in Salzburg before Easter. As soon as he arrives, I shall give you another appointment since you are not meant to be part of the Salzburg personnel.

Cheerio, dear Fr. Barral. My regards to everyone.

Issoudun, March 8, 1888

Dear Father,

I am sending you 5 copies of our new Constitutions, shortened and corrected in the manner which we agreed on. The Archbishop of Bourges has in his hands the official letter I wrote to the Pope, in which I provided the reasons for the three main changes as compared with the former Constitutions:

1. Superior General for life.
2. A two-year novitiate.
3. A third probationary year.

For the rest, I am sending you a copy of this letter since I very much fear that the Archbishop of Bourges, seeing to his own affairs first before dealing with ours, might leave me waiting for the dispatch of the letter I gave him and his own supportive letter to the Holy Father. While waiting you might, perhaps, advise the Sacred Congregation of our application for definitive approval, or officially discuss with some consultor (expert) friends about these new Constitutions in order to have their views on expediting their approval. Try and see to it that the three changes are approved of. I also want the Superior General, in agreement with his Council, to have the power of releasing from perpetual vows, if there is reason for it, without being obliged to have recourse to Rome. Almost all Congregations, old and new, have this privilege. This seems to me very important and necessary. See page 50, number 125. Do not draw attention to this article. You will not bring it up unless comments are expressed to you about it; the same holds for the other changes.

I shall be very pleased, and yourself also, if this approval could be granted us by June 8, the feast of the Sacred Heart. It would be a lovely memento from Leo XIII, who likes our little Society, of his priestly Jubilee. I would go to Rome in these circumstances if it was necessary (and worthwhile) to do so. I am counting on you, our Cardinal Protector, the Cardinal Vicar and Cardinal Simeoni for a satisfactory result. In no way did I ask the French bishops, or those from elsewhere, for letters of recommendation, as this would be prolonging things too much. All those (letters) sent in 1876 by 56 bishops (55 plus) to petition with us for the definitive approval of our Constitutions could help since the request is the same. These letters are in the archives of the Sacred Congregation; I have only the copies. The list is here enclosed.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. Thanks for your kind letter and the greeting from Bishop Navarre. I am pleased about your nice audience with the Holy Father. The report of it in our Annals will greatly interest our readers. Do not delay in sending your article. The April issue is already printed.

2. Yes, rewrite the preface of the Sacred Heart book as you think fit, following the suggestions which will be given to you. You have complete responsibility. Revise once more the book itself, re-shape it. Take out everything which will be suggested to you; this is very much what I want. And if it is thought that I should withdraw immediately from publication the copies which are left, I am quite prepared to do so. I have already begun to make the corrections suggested; I have taken out, changed, added on everything which I consider necessary to make the work beyond reproach. I shall send it to you and you will pass it on to anyone who has the right to see it.

3. Fr. Píperon is absolutely set against the departure of Fr. Meyer whom he regards as being indispensable at Antwerp. I do not wish to go against him. But what is to be done? Should one leave Fr. Morisseau there as Superior and send him one or two young confrères? Should Fr. Carrière be sent there as Superior? I am in a predicament.

Dear Father,

If you think this journey is necessary, I fully approve of your making it, despite the expense to which it will give rise. Before you make a decision go and see Fr. Píperon, have a chat with him, and then let me know what decision was reached. And if, despite this, it is necessary that you should come, I shall send you a telegram. But it would be preferable if we could arrange matters through correspondence.

Your task for the time being will be to set up the Salzburg community, both as regards commitment and regularity of life, and then make Our Lady of the Sacred Heart known in Austria, also St. Joseph, the friend of the Sacred Heart. Make reference as well to the Petite Oeuvre, which you will set up from small beginnings when the time will seem ripe to you.

Then if things are getting well under way, you could have an Austrian-Hungarian Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You will see to it when the time comes that the debts taken on for the Salzburg house are paid. You will avoid anything which might add to them. The revenue from the farms should, I hope, be enough to pay the interest on the borrowed money. Your masses and your work will be sufficient for your nourishment and upkeep. Do not set things going straightaway in a big way as your confrères most likely would wish, but little by little and unspectacularly.

To Father François-Xavier Klotz, MSC, Salzburg.

Issoudun, March 18, 1888

Dear Father,

You can deal perfectly well by letter with those issues which are preoccupying you. Your journey to Issoudun would not expedite matters. The best thing for Salzburg would be to lease these properties and thereby come by revenue which would pay interest on the borrowed money. To have these properties valued as they are is to put ourselves in the way of being caught out financially and experience disappointment, and then find ourselves exposed to exploitation and trading, something which is out of the question since our way of life does not fit in with this. With regard to this house which will open with 4 to 8 people, the economy will not have a great impact at the moment. Fr. Joseph Balzer could help you in this respect. Later on we shall consider matters.

2. The priests you are looking for, either from Salzburg or Tilburg, are needed where they are. If Fr. Offermans has the requisite qualities to be bursar in Salzburg, he has these same qualities also for the post in Tilburg. You try to do your best, Father, and you will keep me informed about everything going on in Salzburg, and I shall try to help you with my advice.

You do not tell me if you wish to keep Fr. Barral. I hope that you can control his impetuosity better than what was achieved at Antwerp where he more or less did as he pleased. I hope it will work out otherwise with you. You will try to turn him and Fr. Ilge into good, fervent, regular, religious; that has priority before everything else.

Cheerio, Father.

3° Praeterea facilius est unum Superiorem idoneum quam plures ad hoc munus inveniri.

4° Major erit Praepositi Generalis ad vitam electi, auctoritas, veneratio, species magnitudinis, sive apud suos, sive apud extraneos.

5° Ratio est quod iste Superior, longos annos sibi promittere, utilius bono communi serviet, libentius Instituto impendit, illud tutius augebit, et in exitum feliciorum sua incepta ducet.

Dear Father,

Fr. Redon of the Tulle Diocese, who was Madame du Quesne's chaplain at Issoudun for two years, wants to enter our Society. He is an excellent priest whom we greatly like and respect; he is pious, well-educated and preaches quite well. He has had a little misunderstanding with his diocese which he will describe to you. Following his time in Issoudun (as chaplain) he wishes to come to us and he will then decide. I think that he will be a good acquisition; he is 35 years old and in good health. He is due to arrive shortly (at Antwerp); you will meet him and judge for yourself.

Dear Father,

1. I am forwarding you a copy of our new Constitutions, shortened and changed in keeping with the general observations forwarded to me. I am about to send them on to Rome, together with a supportive letter from the Archbishop of Bourges, requesting approval. Let us pray with this in mind.
2. I am forwarding to you at the same time the proofs of our common rule which you will carefully read; and let me have as soon as possible your comments and corrections if there are any.
3. You only consider, my friend, the requirements of your own house and the work you are in charge of; I don't blame you, as this is normal. But I have responsibility for the needs of all our other houses; besides, I have to tell you that I am appointing Fr. Chopin elsewhere. If needs be I can leave him with you for a month or two, something I gladly go along with, but no more than that.
4. I wholeheartedly approve of his taking vows.
5. You will have another novice arriving on Tuesday afternoon at 3pm, a seminarian from the Bourges Seminary about whom the rector speaks very highly. He is called, I gather, Robin, and comes from Pellevoisin (about 28 kilometres away, near Chateauroux; appearances of Our Lady were associated with the place).

1. I am forwarding the proofs of our common rule to you. Read them carefully and let me have your comments and corrections, if you have any, as soon as possible.
2. If you can, you would do well to have a snapshot taken of the Quito reliquary on its own, without its pedestal. This base overwhelms the little basilica. In this way we shall envisage the exact plan, without anything confusing, of the future basilica of the Sacred Heart, if it ever will be built. You will have the snapshot taken on the 4 sides, but only of the reliquary.

Convey my good wishes to Bishop Navarre.

Cheerio, my friend. Good wishes to all our confrères and, particularly, to Father Védère. I gratefully thank him for his kind letter and also the scholastics for the one they wrote to me.

Dear Father,

I am forwarding to you my official letter to the Holy Father, together with that of the Archbishop of Bourges, seeking the definitive approval of our Constitutions. Be good enough to engage with this matter, and become actively and ably involved in your accustomed fashion. I shall be very pleased, yourself also and all our confrères, if we can have this final approval by the feast of the Sacred Heart. That would make it a memorable occasion. Our Society and our Constitutions would have been approved on the very feast day of the Sacred Heart, itself a feast so precious to us.

Issoudun, April 4, 1888

Dear Canon,

We have duly received the ordination letter for Brother Pierre Périot and the certificate of studies for Brother Louis Dezpresse. Many thanks.

Today we are yet again making a claim on your kindness. As you will gather from the accompanying letter sent by our Superior at Watertown, Ogdensburg Diocese, New York, USA, we have a young scholastic, Brother George Donzé, who is shortly to receive minor orders from the Bishop of Ogdensburg. While this young man was still here in Issoudun, he received from Archbishop Foulon of Besançon approval for minor orders to be carried out by Archbishop Marchal of Bourges. At this moment, then, we should like His Grace to release in favour of the Bishop of Ogdensburg the jurisdiction granted him over Brother Donzé.

Here are, if needed, some information details about this young man.

Clovis Georges Donzé, legitimate son of Ferdinand Donzé and Eugénie Cuvier, was born and baptized at Montenais, Doubs on April 25, 1865. He received tonsure on June 29, 1884, from Archbishop Marchal of Bourges.

Please accept, Canon, my request, together with my deepest regards in C.J.

Issoudun, April 5, 1888

Dear Father,

1. What do you want me to say about Tilburg? When we took the decision about the Salzburg foundation we were in agreement that Fr. L. Hartzler would replace Fr. Klotz. If you can come up with better solutions, let me have them.
2. In many undertakings, even in universities, it is not unusual to find a teacher in control of two classes, especially so when the classes are not very large. This is a situation which has to be accepted, it will not always be so.
3. I shall do the best I can to help you, but I cannot promise you that I shall leave Fr. Chopin with you until the holidays.
4. I have had notification by telegram that the unfortunate Fr. Kütter arbitrarily left his posting on Thursday Island, without leave of absence, to go home to his family. Bishop Navarre is very upset. I must send someone to Quito. This foundation, agreed on by the Council, and approved by the Pope, cannot be abandoned or allowed to fall into discredit. It is all too easy to write: "this house should be abandoned or left to die in its own way".
5. Bishop Navarre has written to me informing me that he will leave Rome next week and go to Antwerp, by-passing Issoudun. He is much better.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

I am forwarding to you three legislative documents from the Issoudun Mayor. I think that what Issoudun provides should be enough. I do not think the document signed by me at Issoudun and given legal effect by the Mayor needs to be presented to the Austrian Consul in Paris. If, nevertheless, this formality becomes a necessity, you yourself can send the document directly to the Austrian Embassy in Paris, or to Fathers Delaporte or Vaudon.

I wrote to Father Balzer asking him to go immediately to Salzburg. I asked him to go by way of Besançon to get the document which he says he needs from the prefecture at Doubs and which he doesn't yet have.

Issoudun, April 15, 1888

Dear Fr. Barral,

I passed on your report to Fr. Píperon in order to have his firm views on the issue. You can in no way begin this appeal without advising him (Píperon) and without a letter from Fr. Klotz to him seeking his approval, making clear the advantages for Salzburg without any inconveniences for Antwerp. You validate Fr. Píperon's concerns. I know that he said: "Fr. Barral in attempting to have this foundation approved speaks only of the advantages, but when the acquisition has been made, he will be talking another language; he will not be slow about referring to unforeseen expenses, new problems, needs to be met, the requirement of immediate funds. The revenues which should suffice, and more, for the upkeep of personnel and, indeed, go each year towards paying in part the debt, will no longer be enough. He will refer to the need for subscriptions from Germany, and will go ahead creating serious problems for us."

Above (in your letter) you have claimed, stating that you were speaking out of awareness of the situation, that the revenue figures arising from the properties were lower rather than exaggerated, and that from the financial point of view, it would even be good business. Do not attribute the problem arising from the present situation to Fr. Píperon, but rather to yourself presenting a delusion when conjuring up a beautiful scenario of the issues. What is called for by way of good procedures is to draw Fr. Píperon to agree approvingly with the projected subscription. I am not against it, but it is necessary that everything be arranged amicably and with approval.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

You state in your letter, my friend, that if, in spite of everything, the Salzburg house cannot pay for itself, I, as Superior General, would be obliged to pay, because, having approved the foundation, my signature makes me responsible. You had it, therefore, in mind to compromise my good faith by having me sign contracts, written in German, which I do not understand, and which you say were no more than pure formality. I find it most outrageous, so it seems to me, that you involve me by your threats in such an objectionable way of acting.

Dear Father,

1. I thank you for your good wishes, those of our dear confrères, the scholastics, the novices, and our good brothers. Be good enough to convey to all, as well your Petite Oeuvre, my grateful acknowledgement.
2. I have just now received the enclosed report from Fr. Barral about the Salzburg situation. I am forwarding it to you. Fr. Klotz approves of it and is in favour of a subscription from Germany. Here is part of his letter: "I have nothing to add to Fr. Barral's observations, other than that Fr. Píperon will bring up serious difficulties against the subscription from Germany. It seems necessary to me, however." What do you think of all this? I begin to be annoyed since all the Congregation's problems fall back on me without fail. Fr. Thomas asks beseechingly for someone to help him. Might you not, then, have a scholastic who could either be sent to him immediately or in the near future?
3. Have you looked at the common rules which I sent to you? They are no more than proofs; let me have your views. I shall then send you a proof of the particular rules and regulations. In the latter, under the article i) Novitiate, the taking of the habit is mentioned. It would perhaps be appropriate to add on there the new ceremonial which you have had printed. It is stated that during the first year there will be no involvement with secular issues, which leaves the way free for the second year. The kind of activities and the hours of the different exercises are not set down. You will arrange all this as you decide.

Dear Father,

1. Thanks a thousand for your good wishes and those of your dear community. This makes me happy. Convey to all my grateful thanks. I am pleased about your success at St. Louis-des-Français. May the Lord be praised! Ask, however, the Universe's correspondent to desist from giving us the title of Missionaries of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. This is not our official name.

2. Bishop Navarre is unaware, as I can see from your letter, of the money available for the missions. He thinks he is richer than he actually is. Sydney has not stopped writing cheques to such an extent that the mission account has a deficit of 1,200 francs (about 3,840 euros). I am not counting, however, the mass offerings, nor the contributions which our Annals can bring in. The situation is that if the Holy Father or Propaganda in Rome do not make over to him a substantial offering, Bishop Navarre will scarcely have enough to pay for his return trip and that of two or three confrères. The Sisters, if lacking financial resources, must stay in Issoudun. Meanwhile, what are we going to do in order to meet the expenses called for by this mission? The Issoudun coffers are empty. We cannot any longer meet our normal expenses. All the other houses of the Society have bled us white. Paris up to now has swallowed up money. Salzburg has asked me for a 600-franc cheque (about 1,920 euros), and 20,000 francs (about 64,000 euros) is being requested. Quito wants personnel and requests that I provide the money for the journey. Quite impossible! By the same token, I forewarn you, my friend, that from now on you must take on responsibility yourself for the reduction of the Pontifical debt (money borrowed from the Holy See), not by borrowing money to pay it off, but by introducing economies.

3. The May Annals are already printed. Here there's nothing new otherwise. Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

I am forwarding 5,000 francs to you to meet the architect's bills.

In addition, to meet 6,400 francs, you have paid 5,804 (francs).

There remains in the cash register 596 francs to be added to the 5,000 francs which I am forwarding to you today and which will give you credit towards your account, rising to the figure of 5,596 (francs). There remains the amount of 2,207 francs to be met, which I shall send to you as soon as I can since at the moment I haven't a penny left – unless you yourself pay the amount outstanding, something which would greatly please me.

Mr. Coulomb, the architect, lives at rue de la Chaussée d'Antin 12. He is available every Monday, Tuesday, Friday, each week from 8am to 11am. I gather that he is also to be found at rue de Saint-Pétersburg, 4. I am also writing now to Fr. Delaporte informing him that Fr. Carrière will replace you as Bursar while you are away. Go and pay a visit tomorrow to the sewing room and boost those women who may finish up going off and leaving everything behind them. This would be regrettable in every respect.

Dear Fr. Klotz,

Here once more are further problems. Take note of everything the Austrian Embassy is looking for before putting down my signature. It's disheartening. Fathers Barral and Ilge were seriously in error when they presented us with this issue as something to be done quickly and on their own initiative. They were very badly advised to begin with. From week to week there was a continuous accumulation of difficulties and new issues. Finally, may these be the last of the problems! Fr. Piperon does not, it seems to me, appear to be prepared to allow you to make an appeal in Germany. It seems to me that he is too selective on this issue. When he was setting himself up in Tilburg I made over to him all these countries, and Belgium also, which were, as it happened, of great significance for us. This arrangement has been very prejudicial to the interests of the mother house; just the same I allowed it to be so for the good of the Society. Now the same should hold for the Salzburg house. Fr. Piperon asked me 8 days ago to allow him to look for subscriptions in Belgium to help his work. I gave him permission; he should be more flexible himself. If his reply is not favourable you may, despite it and without saying anything to him, launch an appeal in the German-speaking countries where up to now nothing has been sought. There must be many towns in Germany, in Bavaria, where his appeal hasn't reached.

Cheerio, Father.

Issoudun, April 24, 1888

Dear Father,

1. I am happy for Bishop Navarre to visit Belgium. Nevertheless, before he fund-raises for his mission, he would do well to find out if the Propagation of the Faith is established in Belgium, and if the Paris Council might not want to reclaim the money; this would be unfortunate.
2. Generally speaking, my friend, you never offer a clear and tidy decision whenever I consult you about general issues affecting the Society. You know as well as I do the situation at Watertown and the legitimate wishes of Fr. Ramot. If it's the same with regard to other issues, one is tempted to think that anything which doesn't have a bearing on Antwerp doesn't engage you.
3. You refer to your Antwerp interest (financial) and your financial problems. That is correct. But do not forget that you have the socius (aide) you wanted and in whom you trust. You must acquire the know-how to make use of him and prepare him to replace you one day. Going on what you say, one would be drawn to think that you have no-one to help you, and in fact your house is the best set-up of all. Fathers Reyn and Meyer must be of great support to you. You may make a choice from these two when the time comes as to which of them would appeal most to you as Superior of the house. As for your financial embarrassment, you have been somewhat precipitate in giving too much heed to Fr. Barral who always propelled you ahead. I, for my part, warned you well in advance. How much additional expense has not Antwerp and its administration given rise to, and which could have been avoided?(!)

I would hope that your Belgium appeal measures up to your wishes. Have we not here again expenses which you yourself are creating? The reason is that, as in Germany, you will have to reimburse the money taken and pay the interest. What if war comes! Holland like Belgium would be invaded and destroyed.

Finally, let us hope that the divine Heart of Jesus will have pity on us, and also on our Salzburg confrères since their situation is becoming very precarious.

4. Could you return Fr. Barral's memorandum to me? I shall look forward with pleasure to our common rules and your comments. I would like to have them as soon as possible. I shall forward to you the proofs of the particular regulations which are ready to be sent on to you.

Cheerio, Father. My regards to everybody.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Father,

I duly received all your letters; thank you. There is nothing to worry about in regard to the memorandum of Cte W (sic) against the Quito basilica project which is no more than a plan which can be changed and changed, or even abandoned. I do not commit myself to it in any way. It's an idea I tried to put forward... and with some changes it's essentials could perhaps become a reality. Let us leave this consideration to the Ecuadorians and more competent people than ourselves. The good gentleman (Cte W) was beating the air. I think it's best to leave his letter without a reply. Meanwhile, you do what you think best. I received the Catholic Hierarchy (document). Thank you.

Bishop Navarre is in Antwerp. Fr. Marchal wrote asking him to be assistant bishop at his (own) ordination (episcopal). But this is not likely to take place before July or August. Would Bishop Navarre want to wait as long as this? I doubt it.

Cheerio, Father.

Issoudun, May 3, 1888

Dear Father,

Thanks a thousand for the comments you have offered me on our Constitutions.

I. I warmly thank our three Cardinal Protectors and friends for their commending (of the Constitutions) to the Holy Father.

II. You have done well to change the word "probation" for that of "formation"; it doesn't greatly matter. All the new male Congregations in France have Superiors for life, at least the great majority of them. I don't know those whose Superiors are temporary. Those there for life are the Superiors of 1, the Marists, 2 the Oblates of Mary, 3 the Sulpicians, 4 the Mercy Fathers, 5 the religious of Fr. Grignon de Montfort, 6 the Eudists, 7 the Benedictines of la Pierre qui Vire, 8 Archbishop Lavigerie's priests, 9 the religious of St. Francis de Sales, 10 the La Salette Fathers, 11 the Lourdes priests, 12 the Ste. Croix du Mans group, 13 the Blessed Sacrament Fathers, 14, the Vincentians, 15 the Holy Ghost Fathers, 16 the Assumptionists, 17 the Fathers of the Foreign Missions, etc.

III. I am not referring to the Brothers' Institutes or the female Congregations such as the Dames of the Sacred Heart, the Picpus Fathers, the Le Puy Sisters, or those of St. André, Marie Réparatrice, etc. which offer further evidence. Clearly there are also in other countries male Congregations with Superiors for life.

IV. We would then be the only French religious who would have a temporary Superior (General) and this would be a drawback. No, it cannot be likely that we are refused what is granted to so many others. Ask, persuade, get it. There will be serious drawbacks if the contrary is the case. I would much prefer to sacrifice the third year, and the habit, than Superiorship for life which, so it seems to me, is an essential need for our Society.

V. As for disengaging from the jurisdiction of Bishops in order to put ourselves under that of Propaganda (the Roman Congregation), I am agreeable to accept whatever you think best and more advantageous to our Society. Look into it; make enquiries. Would the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars not find it odd if we proceed in this way? If it is your view that we should stay with the Bishops and Regulars, you must rearrange my letter, that of the Archbishop of Bourges and the three supporting Cardinalatial letters, and send these letters with a copy of the Constitutions to each bishop in whose diocese we have houses. A stamp must be enclosed in each letter for them to reply, and their replies should be addressed to you in Rome. You will not forget Moulins because of the connection with Vichy. Perhaps you could send one to Marseilles, and also Gap. As regards the latter, you know that Bishop Blanchet has suddenly lost his brother, the parish priest of Buzançais; it has been a great shock to him. All these formalities, if they are to be met, will postpone by more than a year the approval of our Constitutions. I may not, perhaps, be there any longer when it happens. By the grace of God!

Buzançais, a little town of 5,000 or so inhabitants, is about 22 kilometres from Châteauroux. Very much a commercial town in the 19th century.

VI. As soon as you have read our common rules, be good enough to return them to me with your observations. Do not hesitate to leave out, change, add. You have full permission. I await these regulations as soon as possible.

VII. Bishop Navarre is in Lyons, giving Confirmation there tomorrow. During the course of the coming week he will be in Issoudun.

Issoudun, May 5, 1888

Dear Father,

Thank you for your judicious observations on our common rules. I should have liked you to correct the text in keeping with your way of thinking and put it in Latin. I am now forwarding the particular rules to you. Adapt and change them as you deem them to be more practical and put your observations and changes in Latin.

In order to carry out this weighty work on our Constitutions, both the common and particular regulations, I arranged to get the Constitutions and particular regulations of most of the modern, more imposing, Congregations. We have here then a religious code of the highest quality. It incorporates the core, the essence, of all that is most vital in the other institutes. We cannot put everything into practice straightaway, and that goes without saying, but we shall attempt to do so to the best of our ability. We shall not live forever, my friend, but it is something worthwhile which we shall be leaving to those who follow us, a serious document safeguarded from human whims.

As for the substantial new additions now to be found in our Constitutions and rules, they do not have an impact on the past since the law does not have a retroactive effect. Those who made their vows with the former Constitutions will only be associated with those former ones. The new ones, if Rome approves, will only be obligatory for those who will come in from now on. In the new Constitutions, I have asked that the Superior, in association with his Council, has the power to dismiss a subject without recourse to Rome, as is the practice in many Congregations. That's the reason why the new rules do not mention recourse to Rome.

Cheerio Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, May 13, 1888

Dear Father,

1. I wish to thank you for sending on part of the proofs of our new rules, and your observations.
2. Send home to their families those whose health is creating concern for you. Advise Fr. Jouët about Brother Ruggeri.

Ruggeri was professed in Rome this year, October 4, 1888.

3. I am pleased to gather that Fr. Redon is settling down, and I think he will have a good novitiate and, thereafter, be helpful to us in ministry.
4. Fr. Klotz has written me a depressing letter about their situation in Salzburg; it appears that you have threatened them; "threats" he says "which we have experienced as being more than idle". What, then, are these threats? One must, rather, have some feeling for them in their situation which, it's true, they have created themselves, but where, nevertheless, is to be found the first thrust of our Society in Austria and the surrounding area. Consider then in a calm and composed fashion how we might help them and bring them back from the abyss into which they could collapse. There are shipwrecks, I can well see, to which one must offer a plank of rescue. We cannot in any way shirk from studying the issue, and attempt something on their behalf.
5. I sent a good letter in answer to Fr. Ramot who, as regards this issue, has a sick mind. I asked him, other than what is customary, to make clear all those issues at which he takes offence and make them known to us. Rome will arrange for one or two people to examine our Constitutions, and there is still time to introduce serious changes if required. He is confusing rules with Constitutions; he should understand that the rules sent to him in proof form for his observations are not definitive. He stops short at a point where discipline is involved once a week, without anything else being laid down, and it looks as if in his view the Society is endangered... He has to understand that this particular issue, as well as several others, can be changed, left out, or advised on. I only seek the good of the Society.

I also wrote to him stating that the changes being introduced to the Constitutions do not affect those of us who made vows in keeping with the former Constitutions, since the law does not have a retroactive effect; they will continue to be governed by the former Constitutions. The new Constitutions only envisage those who will arrive in the future, as approved of by Rome. I hope that these explanations will prove satisfactory.

Cheerio, Father.

Issoudun, May 13, 1888

Dear Fr. Klotz,

For the past two months I am affected by a bout of rheumatism which greatly fatigues me. The First Communion, which took place today, the Lenten Confessions, the catechisms, the preparation of the youngsters, all of this has finished me off. For the past three weeks I have only been able to go from my room to the church. I am, therefore, unable to go to Salzburg at this moment. I leave tomorrow for Vichy, villa des Lilas. I shall rest there for twelve days. I hope that I shall get better. Bishop Navarre will come there to see me; Fr. Guyot is there already; I shall discuss your problem with him.

This is what you have to do: explain your circumstances in a little memorandum which you will then send to the Assistants, that's to say, Fr. Guyot at Vichy, Fr. Jouët in Rome, Fr. Delaporte in Paris. They will be totally supportive. Present the best circumstance to be taken in order to draw Salzburg out of its embarrassment. Tell these individuals to send their observations immediately to Vichy where I shall be staying until the 25th of May. I hope things will improve with me, and then I shall ask Fr. Piperon to come to Salzburg with me and we shall advise you about what practical arrangements should be made. I might be available after the feast of the Sacred Heart. Leaving Issoudun on June 10, I could be with you on the 12th or 13th. I had the document you need legally approved by the Indre Prefect. I sent it to him eight days ago through Fr. Carrière to be legalized by the Interior Ministry, that of Foreign Affairs, and the Austrian Ambassador. You should have had it by now; if not, ask Fr. Carrière about it. I am still waiting for the return of our common rule proofs which I sent to you at Tilburg. You have had sufficient time to look them over; be so good as to return them immediately with your comments.

Cheerio, Father. Greetings to all in C.J.

Dear Father,

I am replying to both your letters.

1. Is Cardinal Monaco, our protector, of the view that we fall under the jurisdiction of Propaganda? If so, one must not displease him. Have you spoken to the Cardinal-Vicar about this issue; is he of the same opinion? If so, let us go ahead. It is, perhaps, more appropriate that I myself send directly to the bishops in whose dioceses we have houses the letter in question and a copy of the new Constitutions; I shall let you have their replies. Give consideration as to what is the best thing to do. Send me a sample copy of this letter. The less intermediaries there are, the quicker things will go ahead.
2. Fr. Maillard will send you the information you are looking for.
3. Bishop Navarre will not leave before the end of June. He wants to have a session at Vichy.
4. Having been laid low for two months by a severe attack of rheumatism, added to all the time by an increasing workload and the festering issues reaching me from all our houses, and our First Communion taking place today, I am leaving for Vichy tomorrow where I shall take twelve days off.
5. I am delighted with the new title given to Bishop Navarre.

6. I am forwarding the proofs of our particular rules to you which you will carefully go over as you have done with the rest; thank you.

7. I fully approve of the diaconate and priesthood for Brothers Suchet and Gressin.

Dear Father,

1. I shall take note of your comments on the rules.
2. You may bring into your Council Fathers Reyn, Vandel and Meyer, I do not see any others at this moment.
3. Yes, while Fr. Redon was at Issoudun, and speaking of his vocation as well as his mother's straitened financial circumstances, I mentioned to him that he could be given 400 francs, the financial equivalent of his mass offerings (about 1,280 euros). But this sum would not be given to him until he had taken his vows. I did not assign him to any particular place, either Paris or elsewhere. I shall appoint him, if he stays, wherever I think he will be most useful to the Society. Perhaps I said to him that while his mother was alive, he could not go abroad; that's all. If there are good reasons for him to go and see his mother, I shall decide on it. Get him to understand fully what religious life really means, and disillusion him of the idea that he is doing us a favour. It's quite the contrary. Ah! If he only grasped the great value of the religious vocation he would not be thinking like this. Let's hope he will come to think like this. If he does not try to become a true religious, it would be best not to keep him.

I gather that you are still in continuous pain. We continue to pray assiduously for you. I never cease commending you to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart whose intrepid apostle you are.

Fr. Vaudon has arrived in Issoudun for the ordination of his confrères; he is still here. I am sending him on to you so that he can help you out for sometime and be a support for Fr. Védère. I hope he will be with you on Friday morning. Do not worry about me; I am much better.

Cheerio, Father; I cherish and bless you in C.J.

I have received from the Archbishop of Benevento the dismissory letters for Brother Vitale. Everybody is well here. Bishop Navarre is preparing for his departure. Issoudun, June 15, 1888

Dear Father,

How delighted I am to hear you are getting better! My heart finds solace; I worried so much knowing that you were so seriously ill... I am not adverse, my friend, to Fr. Vaudon's accompanying you, but do not leave Rome until you are sufficiently improved health-wise to make the journey without being imprudent. Bishop Navarre can well leave without your being here. Do not let this concern you.

You tell me in your telegram, Father, that it would be disastrous if Fr. Vaudon had charge of the Rome house in your absence, but he would have to do nothing further than to carry out your instructions and follow the advice of Father Védère when replacing you at the procure for the time being. I fear that it would be yet more disastrous if Fr. Védère were to be left alone in Rome during a lengthy sequence of months, charged with full responsibility for the house and overseeing its undertakings. I know, and I have been forewarned, that Fr. Védère buckles under the load, cannot face up to things, that what he undertakes weighs on him, and that he is not up to the measure of the responsibility placed upon him. You do not give over to Fr. Védère your intelligence, your activism, your knowledge, tact, savoir-faire, etc. This dear child is good, excellent, pious, dedicated, but he has serious drawbacks. Besides, who is going to deal with financial matters, a capital issue in a house with a lot of people? Who would have overall leadership of the house? Who would take charge of the Annals, correspondence, day-to-day matters, the promotion of our archconfraternities, accountability? Who would be in charge of the Petite Oeuvre youngsters, the lay brothers' training and supervision of the scholastics, etc., etc.? Fr. Védère, and he alone, when in fact he should have with him at least three experienced priests... Do not mention Brothers Suchet, Gressin and Mathieu to me because they are light-headed characters who seriously need to be disciplined, supported and directed. One cannot put these in charge; it would be calamitous for them. Besides, consider holiday-time. They (the students) will go to the country. Who will supervise and look after them, direct them, during these perilous times? Who, moreover, would look after the Petite Oeuvre youngsters at this time? It cannot be Fr. Védère, who would have to stay in Rome, since otherwise it would be disastrous (if there was nobody there).

For too long you have been over-worked, but human nature has its limits. If Fr. Védère were to get sick, something which wouldn't in the least surprise me, who would replace him in your absence? Besides, have you thoroughly initiated him to your administration? Has he been well initiated in all your arrangements? I do not at all think so because, by his own reckoning, you are the one who does everything...

One begins to take notice of these drawbacks in Rome and our inadequacies. It is time, believe me, to find a remedy there for them. If Fr. Vaudon is not the one you want to replace you, let me know who you would like. I shall do my best to let you have him.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

Dear Fr. Jouët has written informing me that all is well taken care of, that Brothers Gressin and Suchet will soon become priests and they will suffice (to run the place) with Fr. Védère. Your presence then, he continued, would be pointless in Rome; he prefers to take you with him to Marseilles. I replied saying that I did not wish to gainsay him, and that he could have you with him during the journey but, nevertheless, I thought that Fr. Védère, likely to be very exhausted, needed to rest, and the two brothers were too young to share responsibility with Fr. Védère, either as his replacement in case of sickness or because I thought your presence there would be very helpful, or some other father of his choice. I do not know, then, what he is going to do. I leave him free to act for the best. As for yourself, my friend, you will do what he asks.

Issoudun, June 23, 1888

Dear Father Piperon,

1. The situation at Salzburg is critical, even disturbing; it is absolutely imperative that it be addressed. Fr. Klotz has asked me to go there with you. I cannot leave Issoudun until the evening of July 8. I shall be in Paris on Monday morning. Try to come and meet me there and we shall leave for Salzburg, Munich, etc. The ordination of Fr. Marchal (the Archbishop's brother) which will take place on July 30, does not allow me to wait any longer. If the retreat of your young men will not be ended, you will hand it over to someone else.

2. Our school (in Issoudun for non-boarders) is in disarray. Fr. Thomas has left for New Guinea with Bishop Navarre. Fr. Gouthéraud, who was also teaching in the school, is likewise leaving for the missions. Mr. Aufrère, a former lecturer who was employed as a teacher, has also left for Paris. Brother Rollin, who oversaw discipline, has died. It's a new group of personnel we need, then.

We are considering the appointment of Fr. F. Moncorget as head of the school, but he is not in good health and cannot take classes. Young Ernest Margueritot, a lay man, is the only one left. It is absolutely necessary, then, that you give us someone. I asked Fr. Hartzler for Brother Martin who is French, and he replied that he needed him. Send him a Dutch scholastic straightaway to replace Brother Martin whom he will send to us. Time is short. We cannot withdraw from the college. It has to be supported since it sustains our Petite Oeuvre. A month from now I shall be asking you for Fr. Chopin whom I shall be in need of. To be candid, and fair to you, we are sinking, especially myself, under the weight of work.

3. Fr. Ramot greatly complains about the people he has with him. He doesn't want Brother Donzé any longer, saying that the place for him is a house free of all distractions, like Antwerp or Tilburg, since otherwise he will be lost. He wants you, then, to send Brother Field as his replacement. He would also like to have one or two good lay brothers. I am sending his letter on to you.

4. Two brothers who were at the Sacred Heart with Fr. Batard wanted to become Trappists. Having prayed, on my recommendation, they asked to go on the missions, together with Brother Xavier from the presbytery. It's necessary, then, to replace them with other brothers. Think about it.

5. I am sending to you for the novitiate little Jean Carnet who was at rue de Calais (Paris) and has been with us for a long time. This youth is aged 17. He has the advantages and the defects of Bretons... His sister is with the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You will look him over.

Dear Father,

I want you to return to Rome immediately. Your presence is needed there. It goes against my conscience to leave poor Father Védère alone there. You will come to an understanding with him to share the burdens and supervision of the work. See to it that religious discipline is maintained, the rules and Constitutions well observed. You are wrongly seen as having liberal ideas and trying to share them with our young men, as well as drawing them towards the flippant literature of our age. I know that the contrary is the case. That's why I am asking you to return to Rome where you will continue to foster, in the serious-minded students, the uplifting of their imaginations by strictly forbidding any reading or studies not approved by our Constitutions and contrary to our spirit. You will endeavour then to make our young men model religious and very level-headed, energetically challenging everything you find in them of a light-headed and dubious nature.

As soon as you have arrived in Rome, let me have your observations.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I could not be more happy about the improvement in your health which you have experienced since your arrival in Marseilles. I hope you will go on to recover your health more completely than ever. I had a sad letter from Fr. Védère who is depressed to find himself on his own with so many needs and responsibilities and his health in jeopardy. All the reasons I put to you about coming to his help are more than ever valid. I am astonished that you continued to leave him crushed under the weight laid on him. All the confiding I had received, as well as basic good sense, made it a duty of conscience for me to come to his aid. Consequently, I ordered Fr. Vaudon to return immediately to Rome and arrange with Fr. Védère, in keeping with your instructions, to take charge of the house and its activities.

I know well enough the prudence, tact, discretion, piety, of Fr. Vaudon, not to have anything to worry about. On the contrary, his presence in Rome is a good omen during your absence. He will not step out of line by as much as an iota as regards the procedure laid down for him, and your impact will not be set back in any way.

Fr. Jullien is prepared to give 15,000 francs towards the enlargement of the house which Mr. Caseneuve is offering us. Find out what the house which adjoins his (Caseneuve's) would cost, and find out also if it is for sale and what it would be worth. You will let me know.

2. You may send on here Brother Meynier. We shall try to make use of him. I may say to you also, just as with Fr. Ramot, that you carefully set about letting us have whomsoever you do not at all want to keep. Please weed out your novitiate. Do not hold on to subjects lacking in ability, judgment, piety, health. This becomes calamitous.
3. It would be better to deal amicably with the State. An exchange of ground would be preferable, enlarging the property, putting off unfortunate neighbours. As for a cloister wall, nothing is urgent; you can wait over until you are free of financial embarrassments. You can set up a cloister with provisional boarding up and later we shall see. Lay down as a condition that the planned streets which would go through the property will have to be set aside completely as a likely prospect.
4. Your presence at Salzburg is imperative. If I take on this journey, it's neither for my pleasure or health. I count on Providence; you do the same. Kütter has not stepped out of line through being left unaware; Bishop Navarre has confirmed to me that he warned him about the censures he would incur if he left the posting where he was responsible for looking after people without any official authorization to take off. As on his behalf for the lifting of the censures which would follow from deserting his post, and for release at the same time from his vows if he refuses to obey and accept the new appointment which I can lay down for him. He would need to spend some months in the novitiate house in order to revitalize himself in the religious virtues. Rome, with the lifting of these censures, could lay on him this penance, and, if he refused, he could be released from his vows.
4. Extend my humble regards and all our gratitude to Canon Caseneuve and his family, and also to Mademoiselle Grandval. My most respectful good wishes to the Bishop of Marseilles for all his kindness. Moreover do not forget to extend my good wishes to your sister.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I am pleased to hear that you are back in Rome. Take care and look after your health. Your presence is needed in the house for more than one reason.

1. When the statements come in, I want Fr. Védère to send them on to Fr. Jouët and not to go looking for money from the bank unless Fr. Jouët places money in deposit there for this purpose ('ad hoc'). He must write straightaway to Fr. Jouët letting him know about the lack of cash and the arrival of the invoices. He must ask him if he has money set aside for payments, and where it is to be found. Let him also ask him about the number of cheques he has signed, when they were presented, and what course of action he must take in these circumstances. He might say to him that I have forbidden him to borrow without knowing whether or not he can reimburse, when, or in what way.

2. It is, effectively, against all regulations that the keys of the house, the sacristy, collection boxes, etc., should be at the disposal of subjects. This is not normal procedure. You do well to remedy it.

Come to an understanding with Fr. Védère; everything must immediately be restored to order since, otherwise, it is indiscipline and confusion.

I leave next Sunday for Salzburg. I shall not return until the end of this month.

Cheerio, Father. Congratulate on my behalf our dear new priests and convey my good wishes to everybody.

Dear Father Piperon,

Yes, come and meet me at Strasbourg; that will be less tiring and expensive for you. I shall be there on Monday evening at 8.30 and meet you at the station. Go and visit in Strasbourg Madame Hartzler's sister, Leopold's aunt, Mademoiselle Ant. Mestman. She lives at quai Saint-Nicolas, either number 2 or 3. You can get a return ticket. I think we shall have 15 days. Bring your soutane. We shall stay on the train. For the rest, as regards those who come and go (on the train), there is nothing to worry about. Brother Meynier has arrived in good health.

Issoudun, July 7, 1888

Dear Father,

Before I leave for Salzburg I would like to write a word or two in answer to your kind letter of this morning.

1. Calm yourself, my friend, as against the views of some youngsters getting above themselves in opposing your ideas and who Frs. Jouët and Guyot would feel threatened by. Your thinking is your own, your ideas are mine, your liberalism, which is that of Rome and the Pope, is mine. As for your reading and your appreciation of authors, we share fully our ideas. Any serious person will share your views. It is to call good that which is good, sublime what is sublime, and evil what is evil.

Fr. Guyot, who echoed our unyielding youth at Saint-Charles or those at rue de Passy, brought himself to believe at one stage in the exaggerations of these little half-savants who allowed themselves to judge others, and issues, in an assured and presumptuously absurd fashion. But he left all this behind him. What you have to say about the Annals and Fr. Vandel is something beyond being absurd; it was downright foolishness. I set myself to restore order.

Your editorship (of the Annals) is deserving of the highest praise; it is approved of by all, and our dear Annals, through your contribution (as Editor), is read with keen interest, and the subscriptions are increasing more and more. This is significant. What I wish for wholeheartedly, Father, is that you continue on the path on which you find yourself and there as well you will find me, together with the serious-minded priests of the Society. You are liked, appreciated by all, and by myself in particular and above everyone else...

2. The financial situation which has arisen in Rome is quite disastrous. How can it be remedied? It is absolutely imperative to return to faithful observance of the rules, with Fr. Jouët no longer having management of money or involved in day-to-day matters. Keep me well informed about what's happening.

3. The moral and disciplinary direction of the house is no more satisfactory. This must be remedied at whatever the cost.

4. I am forwarding some copies of our common rules to you which you will have observed as exactly as possible in the Rome house. You will have them explained in spiritual lectures or special talks. I would ask you to favour me with a good French translation of them, something for which you are well equipped. You will provide a great service to me, and try to do this little undertaking as soon as possible. You will give some of these copies to the priests; before long you will have some available for the scholastics.

Cheerio, Father.

Thank Fr. Védère for his memorandum; it is of some significance.

Wholly yours and regards to all in C.J.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I am here at Salzburg with Fr. Piperon since Tuesday evening. The problems have been smoothed out. Fr. Piperon is giving up Bavaria. The situation in Salzburg itself is good. The costs are staggering at present, but they will diminish in time. It's a Christian country where vocations will not be wanting. The Nuncio to Vienna, Archbishop Galimberti, whom you know, is on holiday in one of our properties about 6 kilometres from Salzburg. We went and dined with him Wednesday and yesterday, and he came and dined with us, together with the Archbishop of Salzburg and his coadjutor. The Nuncio was delightful, kind, expansive in manner no end. The Archbishop is the kindest of men, and would appear to show the keenest interest in us, likewise his auxiliary. I am thinking about returning to Issoudun next Thursday or Friday at the very latest.

And yourself, Father, how are you keeping? Are you beginning to get back your strength? My own health is not bad at the present time; that of Fr. Piperon is a little shaky.

Cheerio, Father; my best wishes to Mr. Caseneuve. How goes it with his proposal? It seems to me to be very difficult to set it going over this year and next year. Eventually, one can always accept it; it will be a taking possession of it.

Dear Father Vaudon,

I am here in Salzburg since Tuesday last with Fr. Piperon. The country is delightful and the population very Catholic. It's an advantageous position for us. The Nuncio to Vienna, Archbishop Galimberti, is on holiday in one of our properties about 6 kilometres from Salzburg. We went and dined with him on Wednesday and yesterday, and he came and dined with us together with the Archbishop of Salzburg and his coadjutor. He is simple, kind, affable, very expansive in manner. The Archbishop is elderly and particularly kind, as is his coadjutor also. How is your own health? And what about the situation in the house? How are things? I shall be in Issoudun next Thursday.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Marseilles.

Issoudun, July 19, 1888

Dear Father,

Calm down. Either I didn't understand Fr. Védère or he didn't understand me. He wrote after you left that he was aware that you had signed cheques and when they were presented by him he found himself very embarrassed because you had left him without a penny to meet them in payment. Accordingly, I replied to him that from the moment you had signed them (the cheques) you should have known where the money was to meet them, and he could do no more than let you know about them or send them to you.

I do not see, my friend, how in this way I strike you afar with unexpected blows in the shadows, all the more keenly felt because it is through the intermediary of an inferior subject. This was not my thinking or my aim. I like you too much to do that.

You did not, then, bring Fr. Védère up to date on your financial situation. Something much the same happened 4 or 5 years ago with Fathers Védère and Couppé. Cheques were bouncing every minute while you were away and there was nothing in the safe with which to meet them; the suppliers and the bankers threatened you with legal action, something which would have led to the collapse of our Rome house. I had to pay 70 or 72 thousand francs (upwards of 215,000 euros), as you well recall, to meet your most pressing debts. I put the blame on you, my friend, for having such a deficient way of doing business, and paying out more than your intake. I expressly forbade you, and more than once, to borrow from the banks who create financial havoc through their excessive interest rates.

Fr. Védère tells me it is true, that your cheques are payable but only with a massive increase in the interest rate, and that can only further add to the size of the (financial) abyss. I haven't up to now replied to your letter because I was away. But, my friend, it's not, as you say, nine thousand francs which the Rome house owes at this moment. A letter which I found awaiting me this morning on my return informs me that the debt has risen to more than thirty thousand francs. I am no longer at all amazed by your calculating system. By being responsible to no-one for your financial administration, wanting to do everything yourself, receiving and dispensing money as how best you thought, and without advice, never taking account either of expenses or receipts, never asking yourself if you weren't spending more than your intake, always taking yourself off to the banks when short of money, yes, calamity-wise, you were led to this. If you had abided by the rule which would have made it a necessary requirement to send your accounts to us every six months, you would have been forced to see clearly the reality of your financial situation and foresee the abyss which was each day taking shape. I would have been led to give you friendly advice and help you every 6 months against getting into difficulties... You state, my friend, that over ten years, or more, the Issoudun house did not want to acknowledge or pay the sum decided in Council for the scholastics. You are wrong... I find in my account book that I regularly paid you the promised sum until the end of 1882. For the last three months of that year, 1882, the amount rose to 2,000 francs and the preceding three months to 2,500 francs. If, then, you kept your accounts in good order, you would have seen that the allowance ended at the beginning of 1883 for a very simple reason, which is that you had no scholastics in Rome at this time. We recalled them all, and when it was a question of letting you have not 12 or 18 but a few, I brought it to your attention that the Issoudun house, financially exhausted by our foundations and lacking resources due to the closure of the basilica, could not pay any more, and Fr. Piperon took on his scholasticate without looking for financial support. You replied to me stating that you would take on financial responsibility yourself. You had with you Fr. Jullien who, so it seems to me, was not your financial responsibility. If the upkeep of 3 or 4 young men was beyond your financial resources, you should have told me so.

You return again and again to the issue of contributions which we put together for the Rome house. These were sent on to you regularly and if anyone states the contrary I would ask you to make him known to me and I shall prove to you that he is speaking without knowing the facts. Again I find written in my account book, dated September 6, 1882, "Money for the offerings received for the Rome house, 1,400 francs paid." And for August 2 of the same year, I read the following: "Remittance of 500 francs to Fr. Jouët to round off offerings." You are either tenaciously enclosed in your ideas, or have a short memory when you are always coming back to the same question. Your appeal in your Annals for the benefit of your house was, perhaps, worth 12 or 15,000 francs to you without taking into account all the money I made available to you from other sources.

Here is a list, my friend, of all the sums I sent to you, apart from the contributions collected through the Annals only from 1883. I do not include in these amounts the eleven or twelve thousand francs which I forwarded to you each year to reimburse the Papal borrowing.

1883	Sent in March	2,500 francs
	August 27 to Fr. Couppé	8,000 francs
	September 9 to Fr. Couppé	13,500 francs
	October	1,000 francs
	November 6 to Fr. Jouët	5,000 francs
	November 19 to Fr. Jouët	4,000 francs
	December 26 to Fr. Couppé	2,000 francs
1884	May 3 to Fr. Jouët	6,000 francs
	June 11 to Fr. Jouët	11,000 francs
	October 27 to Fr. Védère	1,000 francs
1885	January 27 to Fr. Jouët	10,500 francs
	January 29 to Fr. Jouët	5,000 francs
	August 11 to Fr. Jouët for travel expenses	500 francs
	November 27 to Fr. Jouët for travel expenses	8,000 francs
1887	September 18 to Fr. Jouët for travel expenses	250 francs
	Total	78,250 francs

And if to this sum of 78,250 francs you add nearly 60,000 francs which I have given over the last 5 years for the Pope, you will discover that it is as much as 138,250 francs that the Issoudun house has made available to that of Rome! And you believe, Father, that the sacrifice is not that great when it was agreed in Council, following on payment of the huge expenses involved in the reconstruction of the house, that the Rome house should look after itself financially.

Meanwhile, in addition to the sum of 78,250 francs paid out to cover your debts over 4 years, there is being added a fresh deficit of thirty thousand francs or so for the last two and a half years. This proves, my friend, that you are not fit to take responsibility for business matters and that it's absolutely imperative that the Rome house should have a responsible bursar who alone will look after all the money. He will be meticulous about noting every detail in his account book and will scrupulously see to it that the expenses do not go beyond the receipts. You must not undertake any expense without its being noted and written down immediately in the register. And every 6 months the bursar will present us with an exact account since, otherwise, the Congregation would assuredly head for collapse.

What can you say, my friend; the good Lord has blessed you with remarkable qualities, but he held over from giving you a grasp of material issues. Besides, Father, you are crushed by work. You always take things on, and you want to do everything by yourself. It is quite impossible that you should keep on like this; it is disastrous in every respect. You will have to commit yourself to the rules and obedience like everyone else, and things will no longer go badly.

What resources are at your disposal to offset this new deficit of 30,000 francs? None! Quite obviously the Issoudun house must once again take on responsibility. Poor Issoudun! All the other houses bring pressure on it and exhaust its resources when they should be coming to its aid. All the pleas, all the requests for money, all the pleas in distress are addressed to me, and to me alone. Both night and day I have to submit my spirit to torture to ward off a break-up in one place, failure somewhere else, help such a one reply to someone else. No, it's not a terrible existence; it is martyrdom at every moment.

You say to me, my friend, that you refuse to accept any responsibility for your deficit and the consequences which might result from it. Tell me this! Who contracted these debts which you can no longer pay for? Is it you or Fr. Védère? Is it not elementary in any serious administration to avoid paying out more than one receives? I kept on repeating this fact to you unceasingly. You took no notice of what I said and you now come and say to us that you disengage from all responsibility. In reality, this is all too easy! Could you tell me on whom this is incumbent in reality? If you had given me an account every six months of your stewardship, as was your duty, and if by my silence or words I had encouraged you to take this route, you could say to me: "It's your fault." But you know well that the contrary is the case. Despite my entreaties I could never get even one regular account from you.

You, moreover, tell me that during Bishop Navarre's illness, as well as your own, I didn't even think of offering some (financial) help to you! No, because you never mentioned that you were in need, and you have always shied away from making the financial situation in your house known to me. I thought that all was going along marvellously. It was not difficult for you to follow the Gospel counsel: "Petite et accipietis." (Seek and you shall find.)

I wrote to you that the expensive foundations at Paris, Salzburg, Quito, Vichy, etc. put me in the impossible position this year of being unable to find the 10- or 11,000 francs we are expected to pay to the Pope on August 15. I accordingly asked you to take responsibility for this sum. You did not even reply to me in answer to my query and I drew the conclusion that you could yourself take responsibility for this amount. I now see that I was greatly mistaken and that to your deficit of 30,000 francs there must be added the 11,000 francs for the Pope. Just the same, my friend, I do not wish to leave you drowning in embarrassment. I want, yet again, to save your honour and that of the Society. I shall then meet your debts; that's 41,000 francs which I must borrow. I shall do so, and I hope the Council will not blame me when I present my accounts to it. We shall take serious measures so that something similar will not happen in the future.

Fr. Vaudon went to Rome with 500 francs. You say: "Of what use is he to me in Rome? More often than not he has gone off walking." I can well believe it given the way you received him. He had scarcely arrived when you wanted him to leave. And you forbade him to get involved in any way with anything in the house... Fr. Védère was so taken aback that he could not prevent himself from writing to me. I can let you have his letters and you can see for yourself how your style of administration is thought of at Piazza Navona. My preceding letter in which I introduced Fr. Vaudon is a reply to your expressed view that Fr. Védère in your absence could on his own look after everything, and that Fr. Vaudon is no more than an imposition on him. What an illusion! Fr. Védère will refute you. Since Rome cannot gratuitously meet the costs of scholastics we shall consider either their placement elsewhere or pay you for their board and lodging. Nobody, my friend, more than myself has a greater regard for your piety, zeal, devotedness and unswerving loyalty to the Society, our undertakings and my feeble self. In all of this I do justice to you and thank you with all my heart.

Fr. Piperon has written to say that Fr. Kütter has arrived in Antwerp to do a retreat there and place himself at our disposal, identifying his departure from Thursday Island with a number of extenuating circumstances, and much else to excuse himself. He (Piperon) wants to know what form of suspension Fr. Kütter has incurred in taking off from his charge and position as parish priest without authorization from his Superiors. Fr. Kütter claims that he gave them adequate notice; Bishop Navarre denies that this is so and states that he made him aware of the consequences arising from taking off. What can be done? If Rome has to be petitioned to lift the suspension, have it done straightaway.

Cheerio, Father. I wish you a speedy restoration to good health. Convey my good wishes and thanks to the Caseneuve family. Everybody here sends you regards.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I am delighted that thought is being given in Rome to the canonization of blessed (no name given) and that consideration is being given to your nomination as Postulator of the Cause... fiat. May the Lord be praised!

Issoudun, July 21, 1888

Dear Fathers Vaudon and Védère,

I have arrived at Salzburg; thank you for your letters. Scarcely free of a serious problem at the cost of great sacrifices, I find myself faced with another, one equally disquieting, coming to me from Rome. The financial situation in your house is disastrous. Only 4 years ago, in order to save Fr. Jouët's face, and our Piazza Navona house from certain ruin, I paid 78,250 francs in debts, without taking into account the 59,800 francs which I took responsibility for since 1883 to meet the debt owed to the Pope (money borrowed from the Vatican for the Piazza Navona house) and which the Rome house itself should meet. If at this moment you add to these frightening sums the 30,000 deficit in francs which you have identified from 1886 only, that's to say over two years (since on November 25, 1885, I sent 8,000 francs to meet all the debts at that time), you will appreciate the depth of the bottomless financial pit that is your house.

Fr. Jouët wrote to me this morning disengaging himself from all responsibility for this disastrous state of affairs which is only a repetition of all the others attending his administration. I wrote him a serious letter bringing all the details of the situation to his notice. He will remember what I said. At whatever cost this situation must end. Once again, then, I am taking on responsibility for this latest crushing debt. You may straightaway write a cheque in my name for 4 or 5,000 francs to meet whatever is most urgent. Ask for the invoice of all the signed cheques, all borrowed money, or what is due to your suppliers, and I shall take the invoices for their reimbursement. I expressly forbade Fr. Jouët in 1885 to borrow from the banks and get into debt. My advice made no impact. I beg you: do not set out on the unhappy road taken by dear Fr. Jouët. Keep everything in order; set down your expenses, your receipts, and every 3 or six months send me your accounts.

Cheerio, dear Fathers.

Dear Father,

1. You are not letting me have the truth about your health. It seems that you are continually suffering from your stomach, and that you are not looking after yourself. I advised you to go to Vichy. You did nothing about it. I make a plea to you, and if needs be I order you to take care of yourself. Do what the doctor tells you, and for the sake of your health place yourself under the direction of Fr. Reyn. Read this part of my letter to him. I insist that you do so.

2. I am forwarding to you a letter from Fr. Ramot. Try to be kind to him.

3. I wrote to Fr. Jouët asking him to put forward once more Fr. Kütter's case, together with the attenuating circumstances; I hope he will draw a favourable response from Rome which I shall pass on to you. While waiting, be kind to this unfortunate child, and bring him back to an even keel in the religious life. Write about this to Fr. Jouët who is at 15 rue d'Anvers, Marseilles, with Canon Caseneuve.

4. Remember to send 5,000 francs to Fr. Klotz and ask Fr. Hartzer also to give him 6,000 francs, since we shall soon be in the month of August when Salzburg has to provide eleven thousand francs.

5. If it's all right with you, you may accept Brother Felip for the novitiate.

6. Dear Hubert (a subdeacon of the Bourges Archdiocese) will very likely arrive on Tuesday. I hope you can make a good novice out of him.

Ordained just over two years later, September 1898, Hubert left for Oceania November 3, 1890, dying at Yule Island, December 26, 1909.

7. Fr. Jouët points out to me that your promotion work in the French language (for Belgium I would like to think) is not quite fair. You never say a word about Issoudun. You give it to be understood that the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart association has its cradle in Antwerp and had its beginning, together with its activities, in that country (Belgium). Effectively, that is what clearly can be gathered from the enclosed printed card: The Little Crown of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Read it carefully and you will see for yourself. If Sittard or Averbode were so to act, it would be understandable, but you as well! Do not say that this little crown came out of your Antwerp house as well as all the other works and devotions you propagate. Read on page 4 your NB about our Archconfraternity and you will be so persuaded. This is not good. Since I am responsible for everything you print in French, I would appeal to you from now on to send me a proof before the final printing, and I will give you the right to print. This is regulatory as of now.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

To Father Jean Vaudon, MSC, Rome.

L 18880726

Issoudun, July 26, 1888

Dear Father Vaudon,

I received your kind letters together with those from Fr. Védère. Many thanks ! I await the translation of our rules.

How is it that you have not read the latest encyclical Libertas where several of your observations are challenged, and, otherwise, your confrères would be entitled to call you liberal. Your article is, obviously, incomplete. Without its being so, how could you write that: "Liberalism and naturalism is the same in the understanding of Leo XIII." If that were so, liberal Catholics would exist only in name; and the Popes, together with the distinguished individuals who made precise and defined the errors of Liberalism, did not at all understand the issue... Who would dare to think and speak like this? Pius IX was well acquainted with liberal Catholics and their doctrines which he condemned mercilessly in the Syllabus which Leo XIII officially acknowledged and approved in his Encyclical Immortale Dei and again in a large number of Briefs.

If this serious issue is in no way familiar to you, my friend, I would ask you to study it in those serious books which have given it consideration, such as the Summa of liberal errors by Fr. Morel, for example, or in Fr. Ramière or Bishops Ségur or Pie, or the little work on the Sacred Heart for diocesan priests, p13. So it is that according to your article the basic difference between the Ultramontanes and Liberal Catholics comes to this, that the first-named summarily reject modern freedoms, while their opponents make use of it to the advantage of Christian freedom. Consequently, one should draw the conclusion that the Encyclical Libertas flails the Ultramontanes, that's to say the authentic defenders of the Church's rights and the Papacy, and gives the advantage to liberal Catholics who alone had up to now an understanding of the truth, and the needs of the time. Happily the Pontifical document states the very opposite.

Liberal Catholics have always invoked not simply as tolerance but as right modern freedoms as expressed in the immoral principles of 1789, so dear to the Establishment, that is to say freedom of conscience, freedom of worship, freedom of the press, separation of Church and State, etc. There you have the freedoms which Leo XIII challenged without pity and which the Ultramontanes have always combated. Has not one of the ring-leaders of Catholic Liberalism spoken these ungodly words, that the Church should also have its own 89 (the French Revolution), and another, if it's not the same individual, has proclaimed "a free Church in a free State"? Yes, indeed, "Jesus Christ's Vicar has in his latest Encyclical presented teaching on tolerance" for these pretentious freedoms which he condemns. He clearly states that they have no right to exist, but one may tolerate them for a greater good just as God himself tolerates the evil he condemns. Have the supporters of the opposed school ever held the contrary view? To say so would be an injustice. Reading your article, my friend, one would think the opposite. It will soon be 40 years since I began to consider all these questions, and I was never other than persuaded that the Ultramontanes held and taught a doctrine other than that of (Popes) Gregory XVI, Pius IX and Leo XIII.

Besides, Father, when reading your article, I drew the conclusion that it had an unfortunate defect due to the absence (or loss) of several pages of the script. I, accordingly, completed your work by making it cohere with our principles which are those of the encyclical Libertas and of the truth. You will be grateful to me for so doing.

Chevalier changed the thinking and theological emphasis of Vaudon's article which appeared in the August Annals, 1888, p.339-348.

Cheerio, Father.

My regards to all; make the most of the villa holiday, build up your health and believe me as wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: I would like you to see to it that Fr. Védère no longer deals with business matters of which he knows absolutely nothing, nor should he have anything to do with the moral guidance of the house. I make you responsible for both.

He has sent me a preposterous telegram which I cannot make any sense of. All that needs to be done is to make a cheque out for 5,000 francs (about 16,000 euros) against my name through Mr. Piquet, our Issoudun banker, and everything is done. I fear that he is walking in Fr. Jouët's steps.(!)

J.C.

Thank you for your report on the Rome house.

An observance of the Rules. Chevalier's writing.
The remainder of the letter is Fr. Maillard's copy of the original.

Issoudun, July 27, 1888

Dear Fr. Delaporte,

1. It seems to me that you are making good progress in the habitual violation of the rules and the responsibility which one incurs in this respect. The breakdown of the religious spirit and communities always begins with them. We cannot, particularly so today, but hold fast to their exact observance and try to engender as much regard as we can for them. Scrupulosity in this respect is not normally to be expected; it is, rather, being free and easy. Qui sperunt modica paulatim decident. (Those who expect little will be so rewarded.)
2. I regret that you haven't up to now observed the rule about the declaration (vocal) of conscience and faults; something which is very important, and by means of which many abuses can be remedied. I would ask you to undertake this from now on. You know as well as I do that older religious have often a greater need to be called to order than younger religious.
3. These new regulations, Father, are nothing more than the older ones put in order, specified, explained; they do not contain any serious innovation. A good religious who aims at perfection, instead of complaining, should on the contrary be delighted with this new support offered to him. I beg you, my friend, to help me, to help us all, to carry out such a serious undertaking. Do not allow this seriously religious undertaking, which we wish to build up for our Society's future, to be demolished by unwise criticism and niceties of language. If anybody needs to be exempt in certain matters, I shall meet the request asked for if the exemption needs to hold for some time.

4. As these rules are no more than the translation of the former ones, they must be obligatory for everyone. They have been reviewed by all the Assistants and Superiors of our different houses. This is entirely adequate and if some aspects present serious problems, which I very much doubt, we shall consider these at our next Council meeting. If I were to listen to the pleas brought on by love of ease, or through lack of generosity and religious spirit, it would be never ending. We are looking towards a life-style which is essentially religious; those who do not want to have it will go, like Fr. Robinet, elsewhere in search of one more accommodating.

It's not numbers which create a community's impact, but the quality of its members who are strongly disciplined. We want, above all else, to have true religious with the spirit of prayer, denial, obedience and sacrifice. There you have what will be our strength and draw serious-minded members to us who will ensure the growth of our institute and heavenly blessings. Since by virtue of our holy vocation and our Constitutions, pages 5 and 6, we are officially declared victims and repairers of the outrages carried out against the Heart of Jesus, we would want to reject whatever is in conflict with this; it would make no sense otherwise!

5. Those who find our earlier rules perfect and appeal against the obligatory quality of these latter, which are no more than a transcription of the others, are only providing evidence that they haven't read them, or else that religious perfection is scarcely a concern of theirs. The critical spirit, which is the downfall of communities, blinds them. They need to understand that the founder of a religious society has the grace and mission to furnish the rules and perfect them following on 33 years of experience, particularly so when he is reaching the latter stages of his life.

It's not meetings which have brought about all this. Over a long period of time I have worked to place my final hand on the Constitutions, both the common and particular rules. I had all the documents to hand which could clarify matters, including the Constitutions and regulations of the most fervent and best disciplined institutes whose way of life was similar to ours. I took from them, as it were, the essentials. It is, then, a religious code of conduct as complete as human frailty permits which I wish to leave our dear and well-loved Society. Instead of making complaints and being recriminatory, one should be delighted and pleased about this three-fold undertaking. Since there are challenges to be met in the works of God, I hope at least, when I am no longer about, that this undertaking will be appreciated justly for what it is.

Would you be kind enough to read this letter to your Paris confrères?

Cheerio, Father.

Signed: J. Chevalier, MSC.

To Father Jean Vaudon, MSC, Rome.

L 18880731

Issoudun, July 31, 1888

Dear Father Vaudon,

1. Get in touch with Fr. Védère and send me the exact details of all that is owed by the Rome house, adding the accounts as in each bill signed by him, since Fr. Jouët takes umbrage and asserts that the debts are exaggerated. Thereafter, whenever I send you money, you will send on to me the receipts of those you have paid. It is absolutely imperative to see things in a clear-cut manner in this unfortunate situation and take precautions for the future; otherwise it will be to our ruin and disgrace.
2. Dear Fr. Védère is quite incapable of keeping accounts and looking after a house; it is necessary that you take over and have things in hand.
3. You will, likewise, let me know as soon as possible the exact number of receipts which have come to the house since it is absolutely imperative that the expenses should be controlled and that there be no longer any unexpected items.
4. Let me know what the exact amount is as regards the contribution which we must make this year to the Pope, and how much more there remains for us to pay.
5. Because of the September 8 feast day which you refer to in an engaging little article, the Annals (for September) will need to be brought forward.
6. The ordination (bishopric) of August Marchal (the Archbishop of Bourges' brother), which took place yesterday, must also be mentioned. I shall send you the Bourges Religious Weekly.
7. You would do no harm, perhaps, to complete your work on the Encyclical along these lines:
  1. Establish that the Catholic Church, founded both by Our Lord Jesus Christ and by God Himself, is the flame of truth which must shine everywhere, that no power has the right to dim its light, change it or, still less, to extinguish it.

In Catholic Kingdoms where she (sic) finds herself established, she has the right to demand that any other church, daughter of error, should not be allowed to establish itself by her side, share her influence and attempt to supplant her. If, despite these protestations of hers, she is forcefully imposed upon, she will submit to, and tolerate, the situation in order to avoid a greater evil. It is the reality of modern freedom against which she protests; it's her right and duty... but before which she tolerantly submits. Such is the Church's situation in France and in other Catholic countries.

2. In pagan lands, heretical, schismatic countries, etc., the Catholic Church alone has the right to demand tolerance for its worship (something which the other religions cannot demand) because she alone comes from God, and must lead all peoples to God by her divine doctrine.

She alone has also the right to instruct children according to her principles, etc., etc. This thesis as developed by you will not be without interest, and it will give the final blow to Liberalism.

8. I must tell you that I have bade good-bye to Fr. Robinet who was totally lacking in religious spirit and good judgment.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, July 31, 1888

Dear Father,

1. I am delighted to hear that Fr. Kütter is very well disposed. This child is not naughty. When we get together in Issoudun we shall give consideration as to what can be done with him, and where we might place him. During the retreat have the new rules and Constitutions well studied and reflected upon by him so that they may become well grasped by him. Then, following on the retreat, get him to study theology, etc. Urge Fr. Jouët to get a reply (from Rome) as soon as possible; his address is 17 rue d'Anvers, Marseilles.
2. Could you be in Issoudun for our General Council meeting about September 10.
3. Fr. Lanctin could send you his young men for the novitiate on Monday or Tuesday next. They will be at Antwerp about 10am. See if this is all right with you!
4. It occurs to me that Fr. Ramot, judging by his letters, has become peculiar, fanatical, given to exaggeration, lacking in judgment. I would like to think that I am mistaken about him. He lets me know of Fr. Giraux's arrival at the end of August, stating that he no longer wants him. Whose fault is it? What does he want us to do with him? I replied that he should keep him and, if he does not think he has a vocation, he should, then, send him away. I don't know what he will do. Meanwhile, he will empty his house. And who can be sent to him?
5. I don't know if you will have any novices for Rome; find out about this from Fr. Jouët.
6. For the sake of your health, go along with Father Reyn and look after yourself.
7. I have bidden Fr. Robinet good-bye; he is no longer one of us. This pathetic priest had no religious spirit whatsoever; his lack of judgment could only lead to compromising us.

Cheerio, Father. Greetings to all the Fathers and Brothers in C.J.

I am very pleased to get the news you sent to me. It is likely that I shall next lunch with you at the Archbishop's house when I go there to take part in the Schools' Council. We will leave from there at 1.47pm and arrive in Issoudun at 3.38pm. If an unforeseen circumstance should prevent me from meeting you at our rendezvous, you will take the same train. The Bonneval family is at Issoudun, and they will be very happy to meet you.

L 18880805

Issoudun, August 5, 1888

Dear Father Jouët,

I received your letter together with all the relevant plans. The situation seems promising and opportune given the wonderful good-will of the Bishop of Marseilles. But how can we make this a reality? We have only got debts. I was forced to borrow 12,200 francs from the Salzburg house to meet the most urgent claims. And now comes the Rome disaster: 30,000 francs in debt and 11,500 francs due to the Pope – and I haven't a penny! This is a calamity; we have lost our heads. If only you had been shrewd enough to balance your expenses against your receipts as I told you so many times, and taken your opportunities to pay the Papal debt at the appropriate time, you would not now be finding yourself looking into a new abyss with your honour and the Rome house in dark shadow if I do not help you out. And to do so entails more borrowing. Yesterday I sent 5,000 francs, but I am being asked for more money to meet the requirements of your signature. Fathers Védère and Vaudon complain about your total silence in the face of all their letters. Faced with a similar situation what do you think I can do about the Marseilles project? I haven't a centime, it's quite impossible for some time now to undertake new enterprises from here.

Fr. Jullien is suffering from exhaustion; I am sending him to Marseilles to recover. If he can, together with his mother and other good friends, find the necessary funding to pay for the new house and set ourselves up there, that would be ideal. I see no possibility other than this. I would like him (Jullien) to succeed in bringing this about. See if it's possible; I hope the answer is in the affirmative because I would be sorry to miss out on such a good opportunity.

I am pleased to hear that you are much better. Take care of yourself. We shall have our retreat on the 17th of this month, preached by Fr. Deidier. On September 10 we shall have our General Council meeting. Your presence will be required at it. I hope you can come.

Issoudun, August 5, 1888

Dear Father,

1. Fr. Jouët's silence does not in the least surprise me. He is caught up in his own calamitous financial mess... He reacted exactly in the same way at the time of the first financial disaster. It's most annoying. We shall take severe measures this time to avoid anything such as this happening again. Try and let me know the exact amount of the debts owed from the invoices and bills of the providers. I shall have to present all of this to the Council. Send me the outstanding balances and details of the money I sent to you, together with a statement about the disposal of your money. Fr. Jouët continues to claim that he did not leave 30,000 francs of debts to be paid. I shall borrow money for yourselves, or rather to pay the debts, but only insofar as I can know how the money being sent on is specifically used. I must have, then, an exact list of the sums owed to whomsoever, made out for me by you. You will keep a copy yourselves. Then you will let me know: with these 5,000 francs (about 16,000 euros) we have paid such an invoice, this other, etc. It is absolutely imperative that Fr. Jouët be presented with the evidence.

Take these matters in hand yourself, because dear Fr. Védère would confuse rather than clarify matters. He also, so it seems to me, lacks practicality. He has no idea of the value of money if one is to judge by the number and exaggerated length of his purposeless... telegrams.

2. I am forwarding the Bourges Religious Weekly, which describes August Marchal's episcopal ordination. You will read it and find something there for our Annals.

3. I have made a subscription to the Universe for you, covering two months.

4. I am in complete agreement with your view as regards the Liberalism issue. We must be as firm in our principles as we are charitable with regard to people. In the event, the Encyclical Libertas has definitively closed the issue: there are no longer either liberals or conservatives, only genuine Catholics battling under the Papal flag. May the Lord be praised!

5. We are having our retreat preached by Fr. Deidier on the 17th of this month. Pray for us.

You will return to me the banker's invoice to this effect. It will have to be the same with all the cheques paid for with money I shall be sending you according to your needs.
3. How much higher this year is our debt to the Pope?
4. You would have expected some mention of Fr. Suchet's Rome ordination, etc. in the Petite Oeuvre bulletin, but there's nothing.

To the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Novices, Issoudun.

Issoudun, August 17, 1888

Novitiate of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart religious.

1. Reverend Mother Superior will for the time being be in charge of the Novitiate.

2. She may replace herself by a sister director who will be Sister Marie-du-Sacré-Couer.
3. All the Novices, religious or lay, will sleep in the house attached to the Novitiate.
4. They will have in common in their oratory prayer, meditation, the particular examination of conscience and other exercises of piety such as praying the Divine Office, the Rosary, etc.
5. The lay sisters will only share in common with the choir sisters the Holy Mass, visits to the Blessed Sacrament, common lectures, greetings and meals.
6. They will have their recreations separately under the supervision of the sister in charge or Reverend Mother Superior.
7. It is the Reverend Mother Superior who will assign work to be carried out and who, each day, will notify what work is to be undertaken. The sister in charge of the Novitiate will have carried out whatever is to be done in the novitiate work-room; she will have under her control a work mistress. The first class novices or those responsible for manual work in the house are directly responsible to Mother Superior.
8. The sister in charge, and in her absence her assistant, will not allow entry to the Novitiate, without special permission, of any choir sister or associate who is not doing work there or, with a still stronger reason, any outsider, not even the Sacred Heart priests, whoever they may be, except the Superior General, the Bishop, or his Vicar General, and even these must always be accompanied by the Superior or Vice-Superior.
9. The novices will go to the common room as little as possible, always accompanied by a sister. They will stay there only for a little while. The common room is that of the community and is available to all the sisters.
10. It is the Reverend Mother Superior who will provide direction (counselling) to the novices: she will see them every 8 days, but if in the meantime someone needs to speak to her privately, she has complete freedom in this respect.
11. It is the Reverend Mother Superior who will explain the régime and provide conferences on the religious life; she may have herself replaced by the Mother Assistant if she considers it appropriate.
12. The Reverend Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, founded by the Archbishop of Bourges [sic!], as Superior of the house, may provide particular talks or address the community as often as he judges it, before God, to be helpful.

My Dear Bishop,

You should at the time I write to you be in Sydney together with your travelling companions. I hope you are in good health and that you had a pleasant journey.

Bishop Navarre had left Marseilles on the Caledonian, June 27, 1888, with three priests, two scholastic students, five lay brothers and four Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, reaching Sydney on August 6, 1888.

I have just now had a letter from Fr. Bontemps who has arrived at Nonouti. His journey was a pleasant one and they are in good health. I believe that Fathers Buisson and Gaillard were to meet on Thursday Island where there is scarcely anything to do.

I wrote to Fr. Couppé to say that you would be sending him to New Britain as Superior. Send along with him some pious and serious-minded confrères in order to build up this mission which is deserving of all our care since it is our very first; and dear Fr. Vatan is buried there.

Vatan died on May 31, 1888.

I shall send to the Sydney Procure all the mission funds. It's there each head of mission must have recourse, and not any longer to Issoudun, when looking for money. Fr. Bontemps has written that he wrote a cheque in your name for 4,232 francs (about 13,540 euros).

Dear Father Vaudon,

1. Fr. Védère has written to tell me that you have been laid up, without any appetite and as yellow as a lemon, and that you need rest and a change of air. I replied to him stating that I was giving you permission to go and spend such time as was necessary to restore your health with your family in Normandy. What do you think of this remedy? If you think it would help, do so, although your absence creates a big gap in Rome and I don't know by whom it can be filled.

2. I sent 5,000 francs (about 16,000 euros) to Father Védère some days ago in cheques to pay the most urgent bills and claims. Money is short. I don't know any longer what to do! Let me know before we have our Council meeting the measures you think would help in order to avoid the arrival of a financial disaster.

3. I shall send on to you in a few days the new scholastic regulations for the year and the holidays. It is out of the question that they should be left to their leisure (during the holidays).

a. These young men must revise during the holidays what they have studied during the year and to this end they must have a one-hour class three times a week.

b. They must occupy themselves with linear design, ornamental and head design, in the case of those who have the aptitude for it.

c. They must make a study of the principles and requirements of the different types of architecture, draw up plans for ground, height, façade, etc.

d. They must learn about surveying and put it to use during their walks when on holiday.

e. Learn about botany, geology and the natural sciences.

f. Familiarize themselves with plain chant, not so much the music but Gregorian chant itself, which none of ours knows, and it's a deplorable gap. They must, then, learn the rules, the principles, the notes, their value, the different procedures, and apply them practically.

There you have, most certainly, something with which to occupy them advantageously, without any exhaustion, during their holidays. There should be lectures in these different subject-matters two or three times a week. Tell them from me that I expect them to do this.

If the answer is in the affirmative, I would ask you to ask for permission to lift the interdict. You say nothing whatsoever in reply to the very pressing and important issue of Fr. Kütter's request to come to Issoudun, which I approve of. I asked Fr. Védère to have the matter clarified and send the reply by telegram.
3. Fr. Klotz has moved much too quickly as regards Salzburg. I nevertheless advised him in keeping with all you said to me in your letter. Write all this to Salzburg yourself.
4. I wrote to dear Canon Caseneuve. Read my letter before passing it on to him. I cannot make any decision about it until it has been placed before our Council. I foresee friction. It is quite impossible to set ourselves up in Marseilles shortly. You know as well as I do that we haven't got enough members. All our houses need replenishment and we haven't people available. Proposal to have at least two Assistants residing in Issoudun.

The Very Reverend Fr. (General), having mentioned the difficulties he faces given his isolation, asked the Council to consider carefully some way towards having with him (at Issoudun) at least two Assistants to support him in general administration, and, otherwise, in carrying out his demanding role. All were in agreement about this proposal and committed themselves to reflect on it before the Lord in order to reach a satisfying result, regret being expressed that the course of events had scattered the Assistants and left them at a distance from the Superior General. It was decided to take all necessary measures to end this state of affairs as soon as possible.

Letter from Fr. Klotz: A novitiate at Salzburg

Next Fr. General read a letter from Fr. Klotz, Superior in Salzburg, asking him (Fr. General) to approve the setting-up of a novitiate in the house, basing his request on the special recommendation of the Archbishop of Salzburg and the kindness of this venerable prince of the Church. The resolution of this issue was left over to another day.

Authorization to build at Glastonbury

3. Next the Very Reverend Father General presented Fr. Tréand's request to start building at Glastonbury, Fr. Tréand being Superior there, and also to provide a chaplain for a community of religious sisters near London.

4. Watertown: the cooking régime

Different houses were then discussed, especially that of Watertown, about which it was mentioned that representations would be put to Fr. Ramot about the quality of the food which would appear to be much too poor in quality and likely to damage the health of those there.

5. The Father Kütter issue

The situation as regards Fr. Kütter was then dealt with. He had left his post on Thursday Island without permission, and against the wishes of his Superiors, in order to visit his family. Following this statement it was decided to consider again the new Constitutions and Rules so that changes, where needed, might be made.

Rules and Constitutions: debate and acceptance

The Superior General made known some observations made by his Assistants or others, and they were immediately considered. Some changes either in content or words came about as a result. With the ending of the work on the Constitutions and Rules, all the members of the Council definitively accepted the new Constitutions and Rules, expressing the wish that they be promptly approved of by the Sacred Congregation.

The Council's Wish

It was, moreover, agreed that all suitable measures be taken to make not alone possible but easy the observance of these Constitutions and Rules. Among the proposals agreed was that of having no new foundation without making the existing houses sufficiently, and seriously, staffed, without which several recommendations of the Constitutions could not be observed. This decision was unanimously agreed on.

Following this decision the issues brought forward on the first day were considered. First of all different proposals were put forward to compensate for the separateness of the Assistants. These proposals did not meet the advantages sought which are support for Fr. General, in fulfilling the duties of his office, and satisfactorily meeting the requirements of members who live at a distance and have had to accept delays in replies. Following a long discussion, the following arrangement was arrived at which appeared to offer what was less inconvenient and had more in the way of advantages.

Frs. Jouët and Delaporte to live in Issoudun

- a. Fr. Jouët, Procurator General of the Congregation, Superior of the Rome house, and Fr. Delaporte, Superior of the Paris house, will from now on live in Issoudun with Fr. General and be available to him.
- b. Both one and the other will be replaced in their present roles at the opportune moment. Meanwhile, they will keep the titles of their offices, whether Procurator General or Superior.
- c. In keeping with the needs, and in accordance with the wishes of Fr. General, they will go to their respective houses, meanwhile, to deal with important issues.

Secretary to the Procurator General

- d. Fr. Jouët will as Procurator General have a secretary who will represent and replace him in day-to-day matters. His successor as Superior will be Fr. Vaudon of the Paris house. The Rome house, then, will be constituted by Fathers Vaudon, Moncorget and Védère, the bursar, the scholastic priests and brothers, and the Petite Oeuvre. Meanwhile, Fr. Suchet will be called there to teach.

Fr. Guyot, Visitor

- e. The Paris house will consist of Fathers Deidier, Miniot and Carrière. Fr. Delaporte will go there from time to time as needed, and Fr. Guyot, who is nominated official Visitor of the varied houses, will replace Fr. Delaporte in Paris as often and as long as possible. All expressed the wish that the Congregation's houses should be regularly visited each year in accordance with the regulations. Fr. Visitor promised to bring to this role all his well recognized zeal and concern.

The Salzburg Novitiate

The above decisions having been reached, a novitiate at Salzburg was put forward for discussion. The advantages and disadvantages being weighed, it was decided to take advantage of the Archbishop of Salzburg's overtures and good disposition in order to petition for a novitiate in this house.

The opening of the novitiate temporarily postponed

The Council decided to wait on an opportune moment for the opening of this new novitiate. Accordingly, the Salzburg priests cannot accept novices until they have received special permission to do so.

New building at Glastonbury

The question of a new building at Glastonbury was considered. Since it appeared that this new construction was already in progress, the Superior General and all the Council members expressed both their amazement and disappointment that a request was being made to them about permission to build whereas in fact it was about to be occupied and, consequently, the Council could neither grant or refuse permission because the issue was (literally) an accomplished fact (a fait accompli).

A letter of Disapproval

A letter of disapproval will be sent to the Superior of this house. His request for financial help towards paying for the construction of this house cannot be considered.

Refusal to authorize acceptance of a Chaplaincy by Glastonbury

One cannot authorize, either, the provision by Glastonbury of a chaplain for a sisters' convent near London as the distance is too great and one cannot approve a priest's isolation at such a great distance.

Duty to be in residence

Likewise it will be pointed out to the Reverend Superior that he should not be absent from his house neither too often or too long.

Fr. Kütter: Salzburg

The issue of Fr. Kütter, who left his Thursday Island posting to visit his family against the wishes and advice of Bishop Navarre, and in his absence, was brought up. While the issue in itself was quite serious and deserving of very severe punishment, nevertheless it seemed to the Council that, given the circumstances and Fr. Kütter's submissiveness, late though it was, there was a need to be understanding with him. He cannot, however, any longer be sent to the missions, and must be subjected to severe disciplinary measures so that he can renew his earlier manner of living the religious life. He will be handed over to the care of Fr. Klotz, Superior at Salzburg, who will supervise him and make use of him at his (Klotz's) convenience within the house. But he must not allow him to become involved in any ministry outside the house and he will need to make him revise his theology.

Brother F. Bormann appointed to Salzburg

Brother F. Bormann, presently a novice, will, on taking his temporary vows, go to the Salzburg house to work at the Petite Oeuvre when it opens.

The report of the Novice Master was then read and with 23 novices ending their year on October 4, and a 24th on November 1, consideration was also given to those who might be admitted to temporary vows. Twenty-one novices were considered suitable to make their three-year vows. They are: Brothers James Galway, François Boudin, Jean Sauley, Bernard Bley, Emilio d'Amore, Josephus Laurenti, Moïse de Luzio, Joseph Guis, Georges Bazot, Paul Bouellat, Richard van de Wouver, Théodore Okhuijzen, Frédéric Bormann, Daniel Lehane, Louis Gotteland, Jean-Marie Cochard, Genaro Lacoste, Gabriel Coltrée, Alain de Boismenu, Egidio Ruggeri, Nicolas Nicolo.

Two brothers put back for further assessment

Brothers Henri Possenti and Palombo Cagno, not having shown sufficient evidence of generosity, regularity and solid religious virtue, have not been permitted to make their vows with the others. The Council agreed that it would be good to submit them to further assessment, after which, if considered satisfactory, they can be accepted.

Brother Cornelius Joseph Karsseleers, who ends his novitiate on November 1, has also been considered acceptable for vows, following which he will remain attached to the Antwerp house and be given to Fr. Reyn to help him in his responsibilities. He will also study philosophy with the other scholastics who will be staying in this house.

Scholasticate: The teachers who are scholastics should not study either philosophy or theology

The Council then proceeded to consider a scholasticate for the newly-professed and those older who haven't finished their studies.

Father General expressed his view that the teachers at the Petite Oeuvre should not engage in philosophical and theological studies while teaching, since it is generally speaking impossible to prepare well one's classes, look after the pupils and at the same time study advantageously philosophy and theology. It was decided that as of now those teachers who hadn't completed their studies (philosophy, theology) should suspend them during the years they would be engaged in teaching. Normally a scholastic should not be engaged to teach for more than three years. Afterwards he will return to the scholasticate to begin or complete his courses in philosophy and theology.

A Scholasticate projected for Antwerp

It was then discussed where the scholasticate would be for those who could not be sent to Rome. Following a lengthy discussion it was decided to leave at Antwerp for the time being the newly-professed who could not be sent to Rome or become teachers.

Fr. Vandel, Director

Fr. Jules Vandel will be the Director (of the envisaged Scholasticate), and some lecturers will be made available to him. Fr. Meyer, who is in charge of the Petite Oeuvre, will provide a course in dogmatic theology. The Superior General will see to the organization of this scholasticate in association with the Antwerp Superior.

Fr. Chopin, Socius

Fr. Chopin was chosen to replace Fr. Vandel as Socius to the Novice Master.

Teachers

Fr. General will take the necessary measures, having consulted the Director of the Petite Oeuvre and the Novice Master, to replace the teachers needed in the different houses, and provide new ones where needed.

Final Vows

Several members, ending their three years of temporary vows, were put forward for perpetual vows. Brothers Augustine Kicken, scholastic, teaching at the Antwerp Petite Oeuvre, (Alexandre) Marie Cochet, scholastic, teaching at the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre, (Augustin) Marie Pillet, scholastic, teaching at the Tilburg Petite Oeuvre, having all demonstrated zeal for religious perfection, are admitted to perpetual vows. Brother Louis Dezpresse, not having proved satisfactory for some time, and giving cause for unease due to the state of his health, will be put back to a later date (for profession), in the course of which his Superior will seriously take note of his piety and regularity no less so than of his health.

Renewal of Lay Brothers' vows

The Brothers Casmir Leroy and Joseph Moores are called to renew for three years their temporary vows [sic].

Accounts

Next Fr. General put before the Council the Issoudun accounts as well as those of several other of the Congregation's houses. The incomplete and faulty manner in which the different accounts had been presented could not provide the Council with a satisfactory presentation of the Congregation's financial state in general, and of each particular house, and, consequently, the issue could not be further pursued (to any advantage). To remedy this seriously irregular state of affairs, and ward off any danger which such a state of affairs could lead to, it was decided unanimously at the request of some members:

1. To prepare each year during the month of December the budget for the following year. A copy of the budget will be sent to the mother house. It will include ordinary and particular receipts which can be envisaged, and likely intake and budgeting for ordinary and extraordinary expenses, as well as the unexpected (unforeseen).

Forwarding of a budget for receipts and expenses

2. An account sheet for the budget will be drawn up by the mother house and forwarded to the Superior of each house who will complete it carefully, or have it done so.

3. Each Superior will send two copies of this account sheet (to Issoudun) by the beginning of January at the latest. Following approval or correction, if this last is required, a copy will be sent back to the house whence it came, and another will remain at the general bursary to build towards assessment of the half-yearly accounts.

Two Yearly Meetings of the Council

4. The Council will normally meet twice a year, first of all before Lent, and then during the holidays, either at the end of August or the beginning of September. All the Council members should be invited to the meetings. At the first, the budgets of the current year will be considered, and the accounts for the last months. At the second meeting the accounts for the first part of the current year will be considered.

Two Council meetings each year

5. The budgets and accounts will be thoroughly examined and revised by the General Bursar before being submitted to the Council. The latter, the General Bursar, will take care to offer his assessment of each budget and each sum, and the Council will decide if there is reason to approve or not, or require that matters be put right.

A copy of the accounts and budgets to be placed in the General Bursar's archives

6. A copy of the budgets and of the agreed, or corrected, accounts should remain in the Bursar General's archives to be consulted when needed by the General and his Council; the other is forwarded to the Superior who drew it up, together with the comments and corrections called for.

Finally, several of those present not being available for different reasons, it was decided to leave responsibility for other issues to Father General and the two Assistants who will be with him and, accordingly, Fr. General brought the meeting to a close. He will, later, fix the date of the next meeting.

Dear Father,

Thank you for all the documentation you have sent on to me for the Annals and for me personally. The appointing of Bishop Navarre to the Archbishopric of Cyr made us overjoyed (titular Bishop of Pentacomia). Fr. Jouët is writing an article about it. I share your view about Mr. de Mendoza; we shall have to wait. The Council meeting began this morning; nothing has yet been decided. I foresee problems, pray... Issoudun, September 15, 1888

Confidential

For yourself alone, at least for the moment.

Dear Father,

The General Council has decided that Fathers Jouët and Delaporte will remain in Issoudun as Assistants. At the same time Fr. Jouët will remain Procurator General of the Society and will go to Rome whenever serious issues require his presence. He will be represented by a secretary who will familiarize himself with the issues so as to replace him later if the Council considers it opportune.

The Council has named you Superior of the Rome house and Director of the Scholasticate. Fr. Védère is appointed Bursar under your direction and responsibility, overseeing the sacristy and the office for the different associations. We are going to send you Fr. Firmin Moncorget who will be in charge of the Italian Petite Oeuvre; he will go to lectures with the scholastics because he himself will be attending them in order to take his degrees.

Moncorget did not in fact go to Rome, being named curate in Issoudun in November, 1888, and then he was at the Sacred Heart School in Issoudun before leaving for Quito in April 1890. Sadly, he died in Ecuador two months later, June 28, 1890.

Get someone to help him out at the Petite Oeuvre. You will do the same as regards the Association's office, helping out Fr. Védère. Try and get rid of all the lay people employed in the office, and in the church, whether priests or not. We need to economize.

Get your budget ready for the year about to begin. On the one side you will set out your likely resources, invoices of all kinds, etc., and your likely expenses; you should set out matters in such a way that your expenses do not overshoot your intake. You will send this budget on to me which I shall return to you approved or modified.

Towards the middle of October, Fr. Piperon will send you the Italian novices who will have made their vows. This will increase your personnel. Once you have organized your plans and the running of your house, you can go (home) to Normandy and set about restoring your health. You can go back to Rome for the feast of All Saints, November 1. Fr. Guyot will be replacing Fr. Delaporte in Paris. He is appointed Visitor for the north and Fr. Jouët for the Midi (the south).

You will let me have your receipts against what you and Fr. Védère will be paying out.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours, and to all, in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

You will continue as editor of the French Annals, and Fr. Jouët will continue with the Italian Annals.

The following is Vaudon's letter of September 18, 1888, in response to the above and to which Chevalier replied, September 20.

Rome, September 18, 1888

Dear Reverend Father,

I am dismayed by your letter. I implore you with joined hands to go back on your decision. It cannot be doubted that I do not have the requisite qualities to take charge of a house such as the Rome house.

Here in two words I give you the thrust of my thought: with God's grace and the favour of the Sacred Heart, I would, perhaps, direct reasonably well our young scholastics. But the very idea of financial responsibility plunges my spirit into a trance which I cannot contain. Given the present set of circumstances, and the continuing likelihood of mediocre resources, I would need a master economist with me. Now such a one is simply not dear Father Védère. Do with me whatever you wish, Father, but I implore you (while remaining within the limits of the obedience I vowed to you) not to continue with this decision.

Bless me more than ever, and permit me to kiss your fatherly hands.

Your most humble and affectionate son in C.J.

To Father Jean Vaudon, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, September 20, 1888

Dear Father Vaudon,

Do not in any way be disheartened. The grace of the Sacred Heart will be with you and God will bless you. Now when you are somewhat aware of what's going on, you alone, more than anyone else, can raise the level (quality) of your poor Rome house.

If in the light of experience you find that Fr. Védère is not suitable as bursar, you might associate with him in this work Fr. Moncorget, who is serious-minded and positive.

You may announce to your community your appointment as Bursar and Director of Scholastics.

As soon as your arrangements are made, you will go to Normandy and recover your health; you will, before you return to Rome, come and see me and we shall discuss things.

You will make an attempt to balance your budget in keeping with your accounts. I think that changes for the better can be made through economizing:

1. In the sacristy by disengaging from paying salaries to outsiders.
2. At the Association's office.
3. Making the Petite Oeuvre youngsters pay where it's possible, and by taking no more of them than the undertaking can support.

As for the scholastics who are not yet priests, we shall consider if it's necessary to allocate a sum for each one. Do not become frightened yet again. Our Rome house, and our situation there which is so important, requires good organization and serious-minded guidance. Give this impression, which is so much a prerequisite, and you will have merited well of everybody.

Once things are well under-way, nothing should prevent your coming to France from time to time whenever it will be necessary.

I am sending on 3,000 francs (about 9,600 euros) to Father Védère against payment of the forthcoming invoices. The remainder will arrive later.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

L 18880926

Issoudun, September 26, 1888

Dear Fr. Védère,

1. I am sending you another 8,000 francs (about 24,000 euros). I don't know what to do any longer about finding money to send to you.

2. Your budget is not right.

A. You put down in globo for the Petite Oeuvre a receipt for 95,000 francs. You need to tell me what is involved in that figure. How much money have you received for the upkeep of the youngsters? And how much have you received as offerings from the faithful? Will the contributions towards the upkeep of these youngsters continue when they are in the scholasticate? Do the parents and benefactors meet their upkeep? A youngster, everything included, food, upkeep, etc., should at least cost you 600 francs. It is imperative then that you control the youngsters' admission according to your receipts. I believe that through more active and shrewd promotion you could add to the (financial) intake of the Petite Oeuvre.

B. The resources of the Rome house should nourish and support the Italian scholastics who come from the Petite Oeuvre; it is absolutely imperative that it should be so. I am saying to you what I am saying to the other houses with financial problems: "You must try hard to manage, but avoid getting into debt. The mother house is too over-burdened to be counted upon."

3. You put down 3,000 francs for mass offerings. If the offering is two francs, as is customary, you cannot have received, then, more than 1,500 masses. This is very little for a church which is the centre of three archconfraternities. Here once more there's a problem. You must find out:

- a. how many masses you receive in total
- b. how many do our confrères say
- c. how many you have said by priests elsewhere
- d. what is your allowance because you have special permission from Rome (the Vatican) to say mass for a 1 franc stipend?

4. You must see to it that the receipts from your Annals cover, at least, the expenses. You do not mention your other printed matter: books, pamphlets, promotion sheets, prints, pictures, notices, etc. All this must mount to considerable expense. Every item should be noted, and the same applies to receipts, since otherwise you will find yourself with the complete disorder which was there before (with Jouët).

Your candles (in the church) only bring you 460 francs; are you going to spend 900 francs on them? This is madness. Where you should be getting financial gain, you have double the expense. The number of candles removed and burnt out should be put aside. On both your candles and lamps you should have a double gain. Here again there's need for serious re-evaluation. Now that you are aware of what's for and against, rewrite your budget for 1889; I am forwarding Fr. Delaporte's comments which will be of help to you.

6. You will inevitably, then, need to reduce your expenses since otherwise you will still find yourself faced with a debt of 10 to 15,000 francs each year, which is unacceptable. Weed out your Petite Oeuvre and cut back on the numbers, and if there are scholastics who are inadequate or ill-disciplined, make a request to Fr. Vaudon, the Superior of the house, to get rid of them.

I also think that you could economize as regards, a, the personnel employed in the church, and church expenses; b, the staff employed in the Annals' office, beginning from the 1st of January next, and the number of your Annals that could be reduced from 3 a month to one starting from January.

- c. the kitchen
- d. the care and upkeep of the house
- e. the wardrobes
- f. the feast days in the church, etc.

- g. the mass offerings
- h. the lighting and candles
- i. your pamphlets and printed matter, as well as the promotion of your undertakings, etc., etc.

7. As for Fr. Moncorget, Fr. Vaudon will appoint him Director of the office if he thinks it more feasible, and you will stay in charge of the Petite Oeuvre, the finances and the sacristy. You will not hear women's confessions; this is Fr. Jouët's recommendation. This will be Fr. Vaudon's responsibility.

If you are over-burdened, Fr. Moncorget could be made available to you as assistant bursar.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: Fr. Jouët is of the view that the Italian Messenger of the Sacred Heart is threatened to cease publication, in which case the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will have every good reason to continue. Can this really be true?

Dear Venerable Father of the Sacred Heart,

How pleased I am, likewise my colleagues, to hear that you are feeling much better. Come to Issoudun as soon as you can to have yourself completely cured. We shall take care of you so considerately that you will be restored to health in no time.

You will find here the very sunshine of Marseilles itself, and all the warmth of our hearts to make you forget your absence (from Marseilles). Bring with you Mr. (Fr.?) Voter (wording uncertain) whose acquaintance we shall be so pleased to make. Fr. Jouët has told me so many good things about him, so many indeed! We shall speak about our Marseilles foundation when you come to Issoudun. We shall make some arrangements in order to profit from the opportunity which presents itself. It is true that our new Paris and Salzburg foundations make it really impossible for us to take on another undertaking at present. We are short of members...

But it is possible, hopefully, that there will be some way found to take advantage of the situation being offered to us so that we can be assured about its future and later on, when we have some missionaries available, we can place them in Marseilles. In any event, when you are in Issoudun, we shall consider the issue under every aspect.

Cheerio, dear Father of the Sacred Heart. Receive both for yourself and your good family the assurance of our respectful good wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: Our dear Fr. Jouët's health is much better. We shall keep him with us for the time-being. As Assistant he will be a great help to me; it's he who has the role of local Superior at the Sacred Heart where he lives; he will continue to be Procurator General of our Society in Rome. His stay in France is only provisional.

To Father Jean Vaudon, MSC, on holiday in Normandy.

Issoudun, October 9, 1888

Dear Father Vaudon,

I thank you for your letter and the news you have for me. Take care of yourself and quickly get better.

The Archbishop of Bourges was at Issoudun yesterday and spoke to me about you. He is absolutely adamant on having you for Advent, and doesn't want to make any arrangements whatever about replacing you. He says that he has already made it known and will take good care of you. You will have no more than one sermon on the Sunday, and then the panegyric for the Jesuit, St. Calver, whose feast will be celebrated, so I gather, at Bourges on the 4th Sunday of Advent. You will have, in addition, a three-day retreat before Christmas with the devout parishioners. In any event write to the Archbishop and find out the exact details of your programme.

Dear Fr. Delaporte tells me that you are not keen on having Fr. Carrière in Rome with you, and Fr. Carrière doesn't want to be there with you either. Fr. Maillard has an important role in Issoudun; it would be quite impossible to replace him. I have no one suitable enough to give you. There's Fr. Giroux who has returned from America (Watertown) where he was bursar; he would willingly go to Rome. Do you want him? Could you not make use of Fr. Gressin?

Fr. Jouët says that at least for one more year the 3 numbers of the Annals must be kept on since, otherwise, he claims, the suppression of one or two issues would have a damaging effect. How embarrassing!

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

If you think that Rome would suit better your nephew, you could accept him. I think that Issoudun would suit him better. I have heard no more about Mr. de Mendoza. Fr. Deidier should know where he is.

Dear Fr. Védère,

Thank you for your kind letters.

1. Fr. Jouët wants his three Annals to continue coming out as before. We shall look at this again in a year's time.
2. Have your three issues printed by the least expensive printer. The printer of the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart costs you much more than the others. You should only have one printer.
3. As the financial resources of your Petite Oeuvre cannot provide for the upkeep of your youngsters, send away those who do not offer you any promise; it's better to have but 12 rather than a larger number who cannot be given bed and board. Make every effort to add to your Petite Oeuvre's resources and balance your budget.
4. Keep all your Italian scholastics with you, and only send the two to Antwerp, Guillaume and Michel. Do whatever you can with Annibali. If he doesn't get by (academically), you could use him as a lay brother, and, if not, you may send him home to his family.
5. Fr. Giroux, whom you know, is in Issoudun at the moment, and he would willingly go to Rome; would you like to have him as assistant bursar, and a help in the office and sacristy?

Cheerio, my friend. I bless you; wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, October 16, 1888

Dear Father Védère,

1. I am forwarding 1,000 francs to you to help you meet payment of the bill you are expecting. I cannot give you more than this. Through force of circumstances Issoudun has nothing left. Try and put a request to generously disposed people who would help to meet the Rome debt.

2. Be careful in your letters and do not get Fr. Jouët worked up against Fr. Vaudon. When writing to him about his room, it's enough to say that you were acting for the best in attempting to put his room in order and, thereby, saying nothing whatsoever about being given formal orders to do so by Fr. Vaudon. Moreover, there is no need either to say that it was on Fr. Vaudon's orders that changes were introduced to the time table. Be straightforward and prudent.
3. You mention again in your letter that my wishes are that no youngster be accepted unless he pays a fee of 300 francs. That was not what I was thinking. I said, and I repeat, that the expenses of the Rome house must not exceed intake. Take in youngsters for nothing if your resources allow it, and I won't ask for any more. But do not spend more than you take in. There's the regulation to abide by since I do not want it to be so that each year a deficit of 20 or 30,000 francs is presented to me. I refuse to pay it. Consequently, you should adapt to your situation.
4. It is you, yourself, my child who said that Guillaume and Michel could not satisfactorily follow the Rome courses (curriculum) and that they would need to be recalled. This is what we are about to do, and you give the impression of complaining about it in your letter to Fr. Jouët. Have them sent off, then, and you will have less mouths to feed since you say that you cannot meet expenses for everyone.
5. Do not forget, Father, that Fr. Jouët is no longer Superior of the Rome house, and that it is to Fr. Vaudon or myself that you should address yourself. Fr. Jouët remains Procurator General, that's all.
6. Have your Petite Oeuvre organized in keeping with your resources and lessen, in consequence, the expenses of the house. Make some pleas for financial help. Examine closely the situation up to the month of January and then send me a budget for 1889 in which intake necessarily matches outlay. You will find out if your intake is much too low and in what area you must economize.

To Father Jean Vaudon, on holiday in Normandy.

Issoudun, October 22, 1888

Dear Father,

1. Yes, stay on, taking care of yourself until you make your retreat in Issoudun which will precede your Advent mission in Bourges.
2. Clearly Fr. Védère lacks understanding and judgment and needs to be led along delicately, but firmly. I shudder when I think of him in control of the Rome house. Sometimes he says a thing is black and sometimes he says it's white. I don't know any more what to make of him because he muddles everything. He has to be led forward, then, because he is so light-headed (lacking in solidity).
3. I sent Fr. Giroux to Rome with express instructions to do nothing on his own initiative and only to carry out what you or Fr. Védère would ask him to do. Make yourself conversant with all that's going on and let them know, forthrightly, that expenses must not exceed intake.
4. Fr. Guyot, also consulted about your little nephew's presence in Rome, came to the conclusion, likewise, that it could lead to a number of problems:
  - a. The youngster would have to do all his primary and secondary studies in Italian and this would be a great pity.
  - b. How would Fr. Védère take to the presence of this youngster?
  - c. The other youngsters would be envious of him.
  - d. It would be a regrettable precedent for other confrères.

I bring this up to you, my friend, as a father who is concerned for you.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Fr. Védère,

1. I am sending you a further 1,050 francs (about 3,300 euros).
2. Fr. Jouët was due to write to you about sending away some of the youngsters, wishing to tell you to postpone this until Fr. Vaudon returns.

3. You have written to Fr. Vaudon that Fr. Giraux, who was sent to help you, was empty-headed. Why did you not let me know this beforehand? It would have been more appropriate to do so. Keep an eye on him and make sure that he does nothing on his own initiative!
4. Yes, accept any priests who ask to join us if they provide guarantees. You will assess them and if you are satisfied we shall require them to make their novitiate in Rome.
5. Convey my thanks to Fr. Giraux for his letter, and also to Brother Mathieu for his. I hope they will make excellent religious.

Dear Father,

1. I hope that from now until your return to Rome Fr. Giraux will not compromise anything; he is made available as a helper to Fr. Védère and nothing more. You will judge the situation for yourself.
2. The unfortunate Fr. Védère has lost his head as regards the Petite Oeuvre youngsters. I asked him, since that's how it is with him, to wait until you returned before sending them away.
3. I have again sent 1,050 francs (about 3,360 euros) to Fr. Védère. Forbid him to borrow. Could he not in the Annals, or otherwise, appeal to the good-will of the Italian associates?
4. It is agreed that you accept in Rome any Italian priests offering guarantees who ask to enter our Society. When one is sure that they will persevere, it will be easy to arrange that they make their novitiate with us. You are the only one who could look after them. You will have picked up fairly quickly sufficient Italian to explain the Rules and Constitutions to them. Be confident, my friend, the Sacred Heart will bless your efforts.
5. Build up your health and become strong, like the beeches of your dearly loved Normandy.
6. Dear Fr. Delaporte who was adamant about returning to Paris has gone and done it again there. He rebuffs promoters and those who give donations to the house. It's heart-breaking!

1. I am again forwarding 1,050 francs to you (about 3,360 euros).
2. Do not allow Fr. Giraux to take part in any official function. Once again I ask you to await Fr. Vaudon's arrival. Meanwhile let Fr. Giraux work only under your instructions and as being responsible to you. Why are you always returning to this issue (of Giraux)? You must have a copy of your letters, and at the very least you must remember what you wrote.
3. As regards all the matters you mention, wait for the return of Fr. Vaudon; it's he who is Superior.
4. Yes, accept the priests who come forward with satisfactory credentials.
5. Follow Fr. Jouët's advice as regards the Brothers Giovanelli and Annibali.
6. As regards typists, keep in mind the interests of the house which has such a great need of economizing.
7. If the young Pole has a true vocation, and his references are good, get in touch with Fr. Vaudon. I give my approval to what he will have to say to you.

2. Fr. Ramot is looking for one or two lay brothers, stating that he absolutely needs one for the kitchen and for the house. See if you can meet his request. There's nothing new to report from here other than Fr. Delaporte, becoming bored with Issoudun, wanted to go back to Paris where he thinks his presence is indispensable. Issoudun, November 24, 1888

Dear Father,

The falling off in your intake doesn't surprise me. Business is at a low ebb everywhere; families are in financial straits and generosity is tailing off. This is the main reason. Being cut off from Bavaria is only a secondary factor and of little or no importance. Double your efforts, my friend, and make propaganda among your supporters. Try and see if you might not be able to cut down on some of your expenses. I think that there may be some which you could well, perhaps, reduce. See to it that you supervise the kitchen, the cellar, clothes and anything else. Is there not a lack of supervision or a little wastage? A house of this kind greatly needs to be supervised. As for the Scholasticate, at our general Council meeting for the month of January we shall closely look into this important matter.

1. I fully approve of the sub-diaconate for Brother Dezpresse if you accept him.
2. You should have received little Jean as a novice whom you would have seen working in the presbytery. I believe that I should inform you that he is light-headed, a lively character, stubborn like a Breton, lazy, lacking in discipline and the proprieties, a gourmet and given to quaffing wine. You will do well to keep him under observation and handle him carefully.

3. Fr. Morisseau has sent Brother Juste back to France, or rather to Antwerp. According to his (Morisseau's) letter he should be back by now; have you seen him? It seems that he hasn't a brain in his head. Try to get him to mend his ways and make a good religious out of him.

B 18881209

Issoudun, December 9, 1888

My Lord,

I have gathered from Fr. Piperon, the Superior of our Antwerp house, the quite legitimate dis-satisfaction he has occasioned your Lordship in opening to the public, without your prior approval, the chapel for our community's worship. The disappointment which I am experiencing, my Lord, is all the more keenly felt in that I was not told about it, and I would most certainly have given a negative reply (not to allow the public worship without informing and asking the Bishop's permission). Fr. Piperon, however good intentioned he may have been, now greatly regrets his serious short-coming. I come then, your Lordship, asking you to overlook what he has done and to assure you that for the future our Antwerp house will endeavour to make you forget the pain which it so involuntarily caused you. We cannot forget, my Lord, the kindness with which your Lordship received us in the diocese, and we wish nothing better than to acknowledge this most wholeheartedly.

With deepest regards, I have the honour to be your Lordship's very humble and most devoted servant.

Tres facieunt Capitulum. I ask you, then, to take yourself there immediately. That house is in dire need for quite some time. All our undertakings are under-developing, lacking someone who knows how to propel things forward and create publicity. You will have the role of Bursar there under the direction of Fr. Casas who is Superior. Our Association, Annals, Petite Oeuvre, etc., are virtually unknown in the country, which is, for all that, very Catholic.

You will take off for Barcelona, then, by the shortest and most economical route: Lyons, Sète, Perpignan and Barcelona.

Issoudun, December 26, 1888

Dear Father,

1. I thank you for your good wishes and those of your community. Convey my own to all the confrères, scholastics, novices, brothers and youngsters of the Petite Oeuvre. It is pointless that each group should write to me. Your letter is enough. If the good Lord accedes to my wishes the Sacred Heart will bless your house both spiritually and temporally.

2. Try to get rid of your debts by every means possible. Lower your expenses if possible and undertake a campaign to increase your intake; this is imperative.

3. I am delighted to hear that the issue (with the Bishop) involving the church has had a satisfactory outcome. How much by way of thanksgiving do we not need to repay the divine Heart of Jesus, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart? (But as well, what a lesson to be drawn from it!) (Chevalier is here referring to Piperon's faux-pas with the Bishop – see 1635 above.) The good Lord, so I believe, wanted to punish and humiliate you for acting precipitately in many instances without consulting me and, as well, for having acted against my advice. At Antwerp you started off on the wrong route. You identified Issoudun as your enemy, as happened with the issues of Averbode and Sittard, when attempting to make us believe in all your books and French printed matter that Antwerp was the universal centre of our archconfraternities and our undertakings, and not just the centre, but the cradle... look again at your prospectuses, your views, etc. In many instances there was a lack of openness, even in the prayer manual you published in French. The novena of Remember Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart week, the little novena to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, etc., you seized on all of these as if all these writings saw the light of day first at rue Terloo (Antwerp). You had me sign a letter approving of your manual without submitting its proofs to me, something which is against the Constitutions, and Fr. Jouët, who read it, maintains that there are theological errors in it.

As regards your Annals which are supposed to be the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, and St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, our very own devotions which we are committed to propagate, you do not mention them other than very inadequately, and sometimes you do not refer to them at all. Moreover, you emphasize other devotions to the disadvantage of our own. What I want in future is your Annals, like all the others, to reproduce those of Issoudun, at least insofar as the principal articles are concerned, with a local item for each different country; in that way there will at least be some common unity. This is what happens with the Jesuits as regards the Sacred Heart Messenger which is published in 28 languages, and all reproduce the Toulouse Messenger. Going about it in this way, you will not need so many editors. I am sending on to you our latest issue (of the French Annals), and you may see for yourself how there is mention of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph.

I beg you: rid yourself of the advice from inexperienced youth and its criticisms.

Cheerio, my friend.

L 18890000

To Father Léopold Hartzler, MSC, Superior at Tilburg.This circular letter has the address and date only in Chevalier's writing.

Issoudun, January 4, 1889

Dear Father,

It gives me great pleasure to send you at the beginning of the New Year our new Rules in Latin and French. I hope they will stimulate fervour in your community. Simultaneously with the book of Rules you are also getting a register to mark down your intake and outlay. Obviously such a register does not put aside the day book wherein one notes each day the community's intake and outlay; only at the end of each month should the intake and outlay be reported under the different headings noted in the book sent to you. We enclose three sheets to go with this register, 1, that of the ordinary account, and which has been there until now, except that this new edition has been placed in full conformity with the book of intake and outlay.

The second sheet is that of the budget, and it's an innovation because we felt the need to set up something like this to prevent our houses from contracting debts which they could only with difficulty meet later.

This last sheet will be sent to you each year as a double copy at the end of December. It should be filled in during the first fortnight of January and then returned to us; the others will be kept in the archives of the bursar in each house.

Two copies of the accounts will, likewise, be sent on every six months, that's to say at the end of June and December, and should be returned the following month as one copy, the other staying in the community. Finally the 3rd sheet deals with personnel which will be forwarded to you every six months to be completed and returned to the Mother House immediately and in this way we can keep in order the register of the Congregation's personnel.

To these preliminary remarks, I add two observations. The first is relevant to our archconfraternities. Issoudun being the association's centre, it is here the list of associates, their suggestions, their acts of thanksgiving, etc., must be forwarded from all over the world. And at the end of the year, or for the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart (May 31), we can show more interest in the report about the universal archconfraternity.

Nowadays almost all our houses have become centres of the archconfraternity in the countries where we have set up houses. Several, however, have up to the present failed to send their annual report to us. This is unfortunate. You would do well, then, Father to send as quickly as possible to us this report which would provide us with information about the progress of the archconfraternity in your house from its foundation until the end of the year, 1888. Then each year during the month of May you will, likewise, send to us an annual report on the activities of the association. You would do well to take as exemplar the Annual Review of the Archconfraternity to be found in our January 1889 Annals (p.54.). If you edit the Annals it will be in order to print each year (the last ten words in Chevalier's own writing) the report of your association in the May issue when we shall add it to those of the other houses, and present it, or part of it, in the June issue (of the Annals). The second request I am asking of you is about forwarding to us at the end of each year a summary of the important events which took place in your house during the year. It would be helpful, then, if each Superior had a notebook in which he set down for each day what was the most significant event for his community (the story of its beginnings, the works it undertakes, the events experienced, etc.), and it is the summing up of all these events which will make up the Society's general archives.

Please accept, Father, my respectful good wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The book for intake and expenditure will be sent on within a few days. See to it when handing out the new Rules that the former Rules are brought in as well as those (in a Latin edition) presented sometime ago.

Issoudun, January (mid to late), 1889

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Dear Fr. Piperon,

I am sorry I couldn't write to you since my December 23 letter from Finschafen (German New Guinea); I am certain in any event that you have had regular news of me from Issoudun where I have written a number of times. Once again I do not have the time to expatiate on the details of our life, our activities, our problems and our hopes. I have discussed all this in my letter to Very Reverend Father General.

In a few words, you will come to know the main events. We are just now in very good health having been hit by sickness in the persons of two good brothers and particularly dear Fr. Gouthéraud whom I had begun to despair of. While getting on with our study of the language, we are now committed keenly to our missionary work; the rebuilding of the church, Sunday catechism well attended, schooling for youngsters begun again, 12 infant baptisms, good-will on the part of the natives. The divine Heart of Jesus would appear to bless our efforts and heighten our hopes for the future.

The following is the main reason, Father, why I am led to write to you: the Very Reverend Father Superior General wrote to me on January 19 informing me that the Sacred Congregation of Propaganda wished to set up a special Apostolic Vicariate which would include New Britain, the Admiralty and Solomon Islands. Having had to present an individual for this undertaking, he asked me if I would consent to what he was offering to me. Here is an extract from his letter:

"Propaganda (the Congregation) has it in mind to set up an Apostolic Vicariate of New Britain, etc... and to name a titular (bishop) to deal with the German plan to cut off all these islands from the administration of New Guinea.

Before naming someone, I come officially, and as a true father and friend, to enquire of you if you continue to persist in your refusal. Having reflected on this before the Lord, I believe that you would be most suitable for this post, better than anyone else. Moreover, you are on the spot and know the manners and customs of these countries. Think about this at the Lord's feet. Do not be frightened by this responsibility; from the moment you accept it in obedience, the good Lord will support you and give you all the help you will need. I would not wish to do anything which is contrary to your wishes. I promised you to undertake nothing in this matter which would be outside your own will; I shall keep my promise. But if you accept what I am offering to you and become Vicar Apostolic, I believe that you are doing something agreeable to the Sacred Heart since this new Vicariate will be the Sacred Heart Vicariate."

So then, Father (Piperon), it is to you as my spiritual Father (and former Novice Master) I come to address myself to take me out of this cruellest of dilemmas.

The above extract comes from Couppé's very lengthy, somewhat agonizing letter to Piperon, 24 pages in all.

To Father Charles Piperon, MSC, Superior, Antwerp.

Issoudun, January 1, 1889

My Dear Father,

I am very happy to be sending you at the beginning of this year our new Rules in the Latin and French texts, and I hope they will be a stimulant towards fervour in your community. Simultaneously with the Rules you are also in receipt of the register to incorporate your intake and outlay. Clearly this register does not exclude the day book in which the intake and outlay of the community must be noted each day; only at the end of each month must the daily intake and outlay be recorded under the different headings shown in the book which is being sent to you. To this register we add three sheets.

1. That of ordinary accounts which has been in place up to now, except that this new edition has been made to conform perfectly with the book of intake and outlay.

The 2nd sheet is that of the budget. It is new, but there is the need to set it up to prevent our houses from contracting debts which they could only with difficulty meet later. This latter sheet will be sent to you as a double copy each year at the end of December. It should be completed during the first fortnight of January, and one of the copies forwarded to us immediately; the other kept in the archives of each house's bursar.

The account sheet should, likewise, be forwarded in a double copy every six months, that is to say at the end of June and December, and should be returned to us the following month as one copy, the second one remaining with the community.

Finally there is the 3rd sheet which comprises personnel and which will be sent to you every six months to be completed and then forwarded immediately to the mother house, so that we can keep up to date the register of the Congregation's personnel.

I add two observations to what is above. The first is relevant to our archconfraternities. Issoudun, as the association's centre, should have the number of associates, the suggestions, the expressions of thanksgiving, etc., sent to it from all over the world. And at the end of the year, or for the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart (May 31), we could give more attention to an assessment of the universal archconfraternity. At the present time almost all the houses have become archconfraternity centres in the countries where these houses have been founded. Several, however, have up to now failed to send us their yearly report. This is disappointing. You will favour us, then, Father, by sending as soon as possible to us this report which will let us know about the archconfraternity's progress in your house from its foundation until the end of 1888. Then each year during the month of May you will, likewise, send us an annual report on the state of the association. You will do well to take as prototype the annual review of the archconfraternity which is to be found in our January Annals for 1889 (p.54). If you edit the Annals, it will be desirable to print each year the information about your association in the May number (of the Annals), from which we shall take it and put it together with the contributions from other houses, inserting it wholly or in part in our June number (of the Annals).

The second request I make of you is to send us at the end of each year a résumé of the most important happenings in your house during the course of the year. For this purpose it would be appropriate if each Superior had a notebook in which day-by-day he noted all the most important events relevant to his community (the history of its foundation, what's being undertaken there, what has been happening, etc.), and it is from the summary of all these facts that the Society's general archives will be built up.

The letter so abruptly ends.

Issoudun, January 3, 1889

Dear Father,

1. Thank you for your kind letter. I am pleased to have news of the good trip you had with Fr. Suchet. The house will have been in need of your presence.
2. There is not one word of truth in all Fr. Védère's statements about me. In no way whatsoever did he consult me. He is a liar; that's the word to describe him. You can quite frankly reject everything he brings forward. What trust can one place in a man who lies with such complete impunity in order to justify himself! Be on your guard and make sure that he buys nothing or undertakes any expense without your approval. For the rest, if you could involve yourself with the bursary side of things, and in making him help you, it would be much better. Allow no initiative, whatsoever, to this pathetic man who hasn't a spark of sense, or anything straightforwardly sincere about him.

Jean-Pierre Védère was born at Azereix on September 19, 1859; he became a priest on December 22, 1883; died in Rome, August 28, 1924.

3. Fr. Jouët is giving me a headache with all the talk he has about his picture; send him on a snapshot of it and I shall have some peace... but, then again, that is not at all certain.(!)
4. The article about the three jubilee feasts is finished; the proofs have been done; tomorrow Fr. Jouët will send them off to you. This will be the article for the Italian Annals. I find it good. You will let me know what you think of it. It will also be the first article in our Annals. (French)
5. Do you try to keep your calendar always on the first page of the Annals? One could put it elsewhere or leave it out – we have so little space already anyway. See what you can best arrange.
6. Fr. Jouët is writing an article on St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, for the month of March in which he will vindicate our rights. But the Messenger of the Sacred Heart claims to have initiated this lovely title. Pathetic humanity.
7. You are about to receive our new common Rules, and you will see to it that they are observed as faithfully as possible.
8. Yes, forbid all contact with Fr. Giraux since I have expelled him from our Society.

Giroux had left the Society in June 1882, returned on May 20, 1887, following three months in the novitiate. He had spent some time as bursar in Rome before going to Watertown. He finally left on January 17, 1889.

My Dear Lord,

1. I thank you most sincerely for your New Year good wishes, and I forward my own to you. But when will you get them? In any event, I ask the divine Heart to preserve you for long to come in your beloved mission, to bless your undertakings and convert a great number of the poor pagans.

2. I am sending you on a letter from Fr. Merg. You will be pleased with it. He asks me for permission to start up the Annals and begin a Petite Oeuvre, etc. I replied asking him to get in touch with Your Lordship and follow his (your) advice... You are the mission Superior and Provincial of Australia-Oceania. It is for you to arrange all these matters, as well as everything which concerns the Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart

There is a gap here in Chevalier's letter. It then continues.

To Fathers Hartzler, Thomas, Toubanc, etc. I send good wishes for the New Year; I pray each day for them. Their kind letters give us great pleasure. Tell them to write often to us, and send us artefacts for our museum. Convey my good wishes to the kind, dear, Sisters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart whose zeal is so much to be admired; they favour us greatly by writing from time to time some nice letters for our Annals and which would attract vocations to them.

Please accept, Your Lordship, my best wishes in C.J.

Dear Father,

Thank you for your kind letters.

1. You did well to add to Fr. Bontemps' letter: St. Joseph's Mission, friend of the Sacred Heart. It is the wording which Fr. Bontemps himself first formulated. This letter has been sent to the Propagation of the Faith. Fr. Morel has promised to put it in the February number and we ourselves shall do so in the March number (of the Annals).

2. The Rules will only be given at profession. They are explained to the novices; they have their own special Rules which you shall be receiving shortly.

3. From the moment the Italian novice provides the requisite guarantees, you may admit him to vows.

4. Your property will be sent to you by post. The railway company prefers that it be registered.

5. Bishop Navarre has written to me from New Guinea where they all arrived in good shape. We are only making this item of news public, and the reinforcement of New Britain. Famine is prevalent at Yule Island following a terribly dry bout of weather during which, over the last 8 months, the natives have virtually deserted their villages to go in search of food in the forests.

6. You did well to send the Pole away since he wasn't suitable.

7. If you think that Brother Mathieu is well disposed and deserving of the sub-diaconate because of his piety, you may put him forward and Brother Benedetti as well.

8. Avoid the damp. You do well to put mats under your feet, and one in your room. If the weather is too sharp, get a stove. Health is a primary consideration.

9. Fr. Jouët is presently in Paris for the very special retreat which ends on Sunday.

Cheerio, Father.

Good wishes to you all in C.J.

L 018890118

Issoudun, January 18, 1889

My Dear Lord,

1. I wrote to you some days ago, forwarding your letter to Thursday Island at the address of Fathers Gaillard and Buisson. You tell me that Fr. Gaillard is staying in Sydney and that Fathers Buisson and Toublanc will stay at Thursday Island. You also inform me that Fr. Verjus is laid up with a leg wound; take care about this since this could become dangerous (infected). Take good care of this dear missionary who is your right-hand man. His loss would be irreparable for our mission.

I see you poorly supported. Take issue with the intemperate activities and indiscretional ardour of Fathers Hartzler and Thomas. Keep an eye on them and take note of everything they do and where they take themselves. Keep them under the strictest obedience and committed to genuine piety (something in which they were lacking). Otherwise they could become very much a nuisance in the mission. Challenge their proposals and their inclination to spend. From the beginning get them accustomed to complete availability and only carrying out what you tell them to do. Make sure that they do not have anything to do with the sisters if you want to avoid any serious consequences. Moreover, do not set up more (mission) stations than you can manage, because that would only exhaust you health-wise and you would create nothing solidly lasting.

2. Consider also the importance of New Britain; if you were to listen to Fathers Hartzler and Thomas you would be best doing everything for New Guinea, and that would not be right. New Britain is our primary mission where you have worked and suffered, and where our dear Fr. Vatan is buried; it is imperative that we continue with it and support it.

3. Do not lose sight of Sydney. I don't think Fr. Merg is suitable (fitted) to become Superior of our confrères. His abrupt and authoritarian manner alienates him from everybody's good will. He has his own ideas, wanting to do things his way without taking into consideration whether he has what is needed to achieve his purpose. He wants to rid himself of the Botany Bay parish in order to return to Randwick and grab (take over) all authority. His mismanagement does not endear him to the Cardinal, it would appear, and it is very annoying because he could create a lot of problems for us. He claims that he is under me rather than yourself. I made known to him that the contrary was the case, informing him that you were the Superior of all the missions and all our houses in Australia and Oceania, and that, moreover, you were the Provincial and Visitor of all these countries, and that he was subject to you and could do nothing of a serious nature or undertake anything whatsoever without your approval. He also seems to have no interest whatsoever in our missions, and would even be deaf to their appeal. He claims that the Randwick house should not be involved with the missions, not having any obligation to meet so far as the missions are concerned; this is outrageously untrue.

The Randwick house was set up for no other reason than to aid financially the missions through the financial resources it sought to provide, and be the Procure for this. Undoubtedly an effort must be made to found a house in Sydney seriously involved with the works of our Society, although always aimed at a more effective contribution to the missions. If we can in time have a Petite Oeuvre and novitiate there we would do so in order to have the resources and the personnel to expand our Society in these countries.

I need to ask myself if Fr. Merg should not be relieved of the Superiorship and his role as Mission Procurator, and be attached only to Botany with responsibility for the foundation of the Annals in order to make known the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and draw financial resources to the mission.

But to whom would you give the position of Superior and Procurator of the mission? Fr. Michael (Tierney), while remaining parish priest of Randwick, would, very likely, make a better Procurator than Fr. Merg. You would keep for yourself the title of Superior for the Sydney houses, and would not leave to Fr. Merg anything other than the title of Vice-Superior, with the injunction to undertake nothing without your express authorization. Fr. Tierney would only be answerable to you. What do you think of this arrangement? It will necessitate your having to go to Sydney from time to time.

Please accept My Lord our respectful good wishes in C.J.

L 18890119

Issoudun, January 19, 1889

Dear Father,

I received the accounts for your house and I note that with you over 6 months there is a deficit of 9,982 francs, 25 centimes (roughly 31,300 euros, or 62,700 euros for the calendar year). It is impossible that things should go on like this since it would lead to disaster. It is absolutely imperative that each house should become self-sufficient. Accordingly, in the 1889 budget, which you are about to send on to me, you must see to it that expenditure does not exceed intake. Accordingly, try to increase your intake or cut down on your expenses – something which is elementary – since there is no possible outcome otherwise. If you cannot provide for all your personnel, have less of them or raise the fees (especially for the Petite Oeuvre). There is also that expenditure which I find excessive: that of the butchers, for example, shoes, laundry, the chapel, chaplains, the Association's office, etc.

I painfully note that orderliness and economies have never characterized the Rome house; it has always gone ahead without asking if it had the resources to meet its obligations; so it is that a hole has been dug each year and all our resources have disappeared into that abyss, leading the mother house into financial embarrassment from which it cannot extricate itself. No, things cannot go on like this any longer; consequently I await your budget.

Fr. Jouët claims that these two late masses in your church were sought by the Cardinal Vicar, something I strongly doubt, especially when so few people frequent them. See His Eminence, therefore, and explain the situation to him; if despite this he wants these two late masses to continue, you will have them said. I am sending you the 4,081 francs (about 12,790 euros) which remain outstanding on former debts. Try to make do with as little money as you can, try to pay what is owed by the house and do not have recourse any longer to the Issoudun coffers which are more than dried out; I am sick and tired of it all.

Do not forget that beginning on the 15th of August last we owe the Pope 12,000 francs (about 37,620 euros), and it will be the same from the 15th of this coming month of August. It's very upsetting: what are we going to do? Try to find some ingenious way of coming by these sums.

Article 1657
To an MSC priest in Belgium.

L 18890119 A

Issoudun, January 19, 1889

Dear Father,

The letter you have sent on to me greatly pleased me because it tries to regularize a situation which is not in keeping with the regulations which govern our archconfraternity. If we wish by means of our dear archconfraternity to work advantageously for the glory of the Sacred Heart and Our Lady, as well as for the well-being of the faithful, it is absolutely imperative that there be unity of action between the confrères and the general centre, just as there must be unity of direction in order to abide by Roman decisions. What is offered in what follows are the basic premisses on which this unity is provided for. I have no doubt the Averbode priests are not prepared to accept this agreement.

1. Among the questions to be clarified as a reply to remarks made to us by Belgian promoters, one of the main ones is the following:

"What is to be thought of what the Averbode priests say in their publicity?"

In paragraph VI they state that their confraternity is independent and, nevertheless, almost on every page they refer to the close links which they share with Issoudun, something which draws a lot of people to doubt their links with the general centre.

The following are the principles which set forth the legal reality in this issue:

No confraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart can assert that it is independent of the archconfraternity whose direction has been confided by the Holy See to our Congregation. What would happen, in fact, if each of the confraternities set up in Belgium, at Brussels, for example, at Antwerp, Louvain, Tournai, etc., wanted to set itself up as a particular and independent association, claiming for itself the power to enrol associates in the whole kingdom, naming promoters everywhere independently of the centre general, changing on their own initiative the propaganda literature edited by the general leadership and, thereby, stamping on the regulations drawn up by the overall direction of the undertaking? Instead of an association devoting itself to the well-being of souls, we would have an undertaking which would only lead to its collapse by the very fact that it was nothing other than a divisive force.

Lately, a distinguished Belgian priest expressed his disappointment to me when he noted Averbode promoters trying to recruit new associates while there was in the parish itself a confraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart canonically erected, and working normally under his direction with a committee of male and female promoters. Does it not follow from the above that there is an absolute need for our archconfraternity to have only one person to take it forward, to have all confraternities acting in dependence on it and in conformity with its regulations? It was precisely these problems which the Holy See wanted to avoid when making over the universal archconfraternity to the complete and total control of the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. What follows here about enrolment of members, the means of propaganda, the appointment of promoters, male and female, is no more than a practical consequence of this principle.

1. All the propaganda material of whatever nature – entry cards, pictures, prints, prayer leaflets, etc. – must come from our Society. Monsignor Salua, secretary of the Holy Office, has formally made known his views in this respect, making it our duty to be watchful about this most conscientiously, bringing to his attention the abuses which we would be unable to check. I have made known, Father, that most of the material edited by the Averbode Fathers without my permission was full of short-comings, and in no way could I endorse such promotion. It is enough for me to mention the different texts of "Remember Our Lady", in the French and Flemish languages, as being quite different from the two texts approved by the Sacred Congregation.

Moreover, the new picture of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, as being our property, was presented as such in Paris, as number 2049, on November 12, 1875, not just for France but for Belgium also. If there is then a requirement on the part of every ordinary dealer, as an issue of justice and accordingly of conscience and honour, not to have this model reproduced in any way whatsoever, what are we to say, therefore, about those priests and religious who feel free to do so without any permission? I intend to write to the Averbode priests and express to them my total amazement about the different reproductions they have been making of this picture, and at its base I read with as much amazement as regret their use of the word proprietor(s). By doing this, I am only meeting the regulations laid down by Rome. I absolutely insist that all the materials relative to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, edited by them, should be withdrawn from circulation.

I would then ask you, Father, for practical purposes, to take on responsibility from our side for all these (devotional) objects and have them replaced equivalently by the Averbode priests in Belgium. Half the proceeds from the voluntary promoters will be put into our hands at the end of the year to be used for promotion of the Annals, sending without charge to each promoter as many subscriptions as his offering will entail, that is to say a subscription for each contribution of 5 francs (about 15.60 euros).

In order to facilitate awareness, you will ask the (Averbode) priests to be good enough to send us at the end of each month the list of new promoters, honorary or active, who asked to join. All the certificates of the honorary and active promoters will be sent to, and signed by, the Director General, and counter-signed by the Superior of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart house who will send them back, having written the names with full address on a special register.

To all promoters, wherever they are, whether honorary or active, whether already enrolled or to be done so in the future, we shall forward each month the Flemish and French Annals, in keeping with the language spoken in the area. It is, in effect, absolutely imperative that the promoters be kept informed about what is happening in the archconfraternity if it is desirable that they fulfil their roles prudently and devotedly. The Annals will be at the same time one of the most important means for boosting their zeal and guiding them in the spirit of the work. In the case of the honorary promoters, this subscription will be met by the very fact that half of their annual contribution, which according to the Averbode statutes cannot be less than 5 francs, will be sent to you by the (Averbode) priests. In this way we shall avoid all the inconveniences which exist at the present moment much to the detriment of the work, and of which the following are the most significant:

- A. Far too many active promoters in the same area.
- B. The encroachment of promoters on each other, especially so when they are appointed by different centres (not in liaison); this gives rise to unfortunate rivalries which stirs up jealousy which is so natural to people of that sex.
- C. The appointment of promoters who are far from worthy of the title and who speculate on what could be advantageous.
- D. The meddling of these promoters in parishes where the same confraternity exists already under the guidance of the clergy and with its own promoters.

These considerations, Father, are well calculated to prove to the Reverend Fathers how unified action is absolutely imperative for the well-being of the archconfraternity under the sole and complete guidance of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

The Annals

Since the Annals are the link which unites the associates with the archconfraternity, and a powerful means for promoting devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, we would appeal to the Reverend Fathers to promote them as much as possible. We shall give them 20% commission on subscriptions which they will procure for either the French or the Flemish edition (of the Annals). For our part, when the circumstances will allow it, we shall find a place in the Annals for acknowledgement of benefits (blessings) received, for descriptions of feasts which the Reverend Fathers think appropriate to share with us, with the proviso nonetheless that these different contributions contain nothing contrary to the unity of the archconfraternity, in which case the articles will undergo those changes deemed to be necessary.

Due to these enclosures, any circular sent directly by the fathers to their promoters, male and female, on issues relating to the archconfraternity, become pointless because the same promoters will already know about it through the Annals.

If giving honour to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart draws us to favour pilgrimages to special sanctuaries which have been particularly favoured, this same honour imposes on us the obligation to maintain in their integrity the rights conferred by the Holy See, and fulfil in all their integrity the duties which these confer on us. I do not doubt, Father, that the Averbode Fathers will be pleased to accept these behavioural procedures, which are meant to bring order as regards what happened in the past and guarantee for the future the smooth functioning of the archconfraternity.

Please accept my warmest good wishes in Corde Jesu.

L 18890120

Issoudun, January 20, 1889

Dear Fr. Védère,

Since I can understand that Fr. Vaudon doesn't know enough Italian yet to hear women's confessions in the church, you will continue to do so for the time-being. Follow his advice and come to an understanding with him about it. It isn't a very agreeable task, and I can understand that you do not greatly like it; besides, do not give the impression that you dislike it every time you have to undertake it.

Being by yourself in Rome, I could well say to you to take responsibility for the sacristy, the bursary, and the Petite Oeuvre. Now, when you have a Superior, make yourself available to him and do your best, my friend, to carry out the tasks he allots to you since it is he who is responsible for the leadership, and functioning, of the house. You will reach a good understanding with him, and he, like you, wants what is best for our undertakings to prosper. I doubt if he will undertake anything serious without mentioning it to you. As for reforms, if there's anything to be carried out, he will move slowly and only introduce those which promote good order, discipline, economizing and the success of the undertakings. It is unacceptable that the house should remain in debt every year. It is absolutely imperative that it be economically self-sufficient, and for this to be so it is imperative that expense should not exceed intake. I hope that the budget from Rome, to be sent to me shortly, will meet these requirements. Add to the intake if there is any possibility to do so, and cut down on the expenses. There must be balance.

When you come across something which causes you concern, go and see Fr. Vaudon straightaway, and you will easily come to an understanding with him. Oh! how blessed you are having only to obey from now on (with Vaudon's return). You have responsibility no longer; what peace.

I bless you wholeheartedly as I am wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

I am forwarding confidentially to you Fr. Védère's letter which I have just received. Do not mention it to him. Here is something solid to build on. If you are introducing reforms, go gently because of Fr. Jouët whose susceptibilities you are aware of. Confer with Fr. Védère so that he may contribute as in today's letter. This consultation can be resorted to quite often.

I approve of his confessing the women if you are in favour. Fr. Jouët said that, given his (Védère's) lack of judgment, and the problems which often are experienced in Rome, it would be much better if he did not hear women's confessions, while the sacristy itself might be a burden for him. Keep your eyes open and do what you think best. I replied saying that he was completely in your charge, and should only do what you engaged him to do. For the rest, read my letter, and you can go on from there.

Issoudun, January 20, 1889

Dear Father,

1. It was because of my forgetfulness that I didn't reply to your question; I very willingly consent to your lay brothers taking of vows.
2. Could you provide Fr. Ramot (Watertown, USA) with two good lay brothers? They are greatly needed and if they don't know English they will learn it in America. Fr. Delaporte would also need two lay brothers, certainly one at the moment since a woman for the house and a domestic in their church (Paris) are creating a less than satisfactory impact. The Sacred Heart, Issoudun, and the presbytery will come up for consideration later.
3. The town (Borgerhout, Belgium) does not, then, supply drinking water like Issoudun. It should be the most primary consideration for a municipal administration, particularly so when the normal water is bad. If the town supplies water, you could take out a subscription and this would be less costly. If the town hasn't its own waterworks, something which surprises me as regards Antwerp, undertake the expense of having a well which will provide good water.
4. I note with regret that my comments about your Annals have produced no affect. Your last issue again makes no mention of the Sacred Heart, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart or St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart (and it's altogether as rare to find them in Piperon's Annals as it is to lay eyes (Chevalier's phrase) on the Great Turk (the virtually invisible Sultan)).

One would never think that it was the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart who were the editors (of Piperon's Annals). If your publication continues in this way, it is pointless continuing with it as there are enough, otherwise, of the same kind. Or you may well efface "Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart" and put in its place (for title) "Miscellaneous".

You have already been left behind by the Sittard Sacred Heart priests, and you are about to find that they will once more do you a bad turn as did the Averbode religious. They are setting up a magazine called "The Reign of the Sacred Heart". The centre is at Saint Quentin, but it will not take long for it to spread into Holland, Belgium, and, perhaps, Germany. Then you will be deprived of your subscribers and financial resources, and going backwards. If you do not want to mention Our Lady of the Sacred Heart in your Annals, nor devotion to the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph, say so since we shall then send our Issoudun Annals to Belgium.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

No specific date

My Lord,

While making it my dutiful need to congratulate Your Lordship on his elevation to the Archbishopric of Cambrai, I come to share humbly with you an issue which concerns both your brothers and your religious family. Over some time a printed circular, which I did not know of until last week, was sent to different seminaries in and outside France to recruit vocations to the Congregation of the Priests of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, Soissons. This document makes statements which deeply trouble us and, by their very nature, lead to a regrettable confusion between the new Congregation and our own, whose aims are, for the rest, identical. It is said:

1. That works of reparation are multiplying. Several female religious communities have been founded for this purpose. The same undertaking directed at men hasn't yet come about. God has blessed our humble efforts. This Society is scarcely eleven years in existence and already has ten establishments promising for the future, of which two are outside France, one in America.

If one were to read these sentences, which can be textually reproduced, the only Society of Sacred Heart priests which there is, is that of Soissons..., the rest, and they are many for all that, are looked upon as non-existent. Ours, while still a young Congregation, already can count itself as being thirty-five years founded, has worthy canonical approval briefs and would appear to be continually blessed by God, just as we hope it will always be.

Here is another quotation from the circular.

2. Holland, Novitiate, Apostolic School.

Some years ago in the shadow of the famous basilica of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Sittard, in the Dutch Province of Limbourg, a special novitiate was set up for Dutch and German candidates who came there in mass, and where there was also an apostolic school already well filled where the youngsters expressed a special interest in the foreign missions. A beautiful and huge church was built where there would be special worship of the penitent Heart of Jesus.

This Dutch foundation, in a country where we ourselves have a house in Tilburg whose purpose is absolutely the same as that of the Saint Quentin Fathers, creates confusion, all the more so when we are known most particularly for the devotion to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, founded by our Society, propagated by the Annals and, through a Papal decree, directive of a Universal Archconfraternity. Several of our male and female promoters have in all good faith taken the foundation of the Saint Omer priests in Holland to be ours.

3. Next spring a second initiative will be undertaken by way of supporting two other foundations in America, notably that of Quito where we shall be given responsibility, in association with Fr. Matovelle, for the building of the Sacred Heart basilica. This last statement is even yet more amazing with regard to us. Together with this letter I am pleased to send Your Lordship the June 1887 issue of our Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart where there are to be found printed the official statements of the contract agreed between the Archbishop of Quito and ourselves as regards the future basilica, and this with the official approval of the Sovereign Pontiff. Our priests are in Quito for the past two years. Our Annals for this month, which, likewise, I forward to Your Grace, contain the sermon which Fr. Matovelle delivered in a Quito church about the Sacred Heart (basilica). Nothing is to be understood about handing over to the Soissons priests of the Sacred Heart an undertaking which was made our responsibility.

I submit this humble plea to Your Grace who will, with his shrewd intelligence and paternal good-will, find the means of getting the Saint Quentin Fathers to cease from creating confusion which is prejudicial to our two undertakings at one and the same time, and particularly so in this way it greatly damages our little Society.

I thank in anticipation Your Grace for everything he deems it necessary to bring about as regards this issue and with the assurance of my deepest regard...

(Signed) J. Chevalier

Dear Fr. Barral,

1. Thank you for your letter; it opens my heart to hope and confirms my viewpoint. I have always believed that our Barcelona house, well led by men of zeal, practical intelligence and commitment, could be established on solid foundations, making it truly successful. I am pleased to know that you get on well with Fr. Casas who needs to be encouraged and have someone to share his concerns; he cannot look after everything, that's obvious. Get him to observe the Rules faithfully and have regular Council meetings. I am forwarding the new particular Rules to you. You have already received the common ones. They need to be perused and put into practice.

2. Yes, Father, it is incumbent that there should be among you a true spirit of unity, charity, fraternity and mutual sharing. Nothing is more dangerous than mis-information and a partisan spirit. It's the open door... Our Rules map out things for us in this regard and, as in so many other ways, they are an admirable way forward.

Let me know what you think about this issue in your next letter and ask Fr. Roger to do the same. Come to an understanding with each other so that the Barcelona house can become a model one.

This letter was written by Fr. Jouët in Chevalier's name, on February 22, 1889, and on paper carrying Chevalier's signature.
February 1889

The under-signed, Jules Chevalier, Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, whose mother house is at Issoudun, in the Archdiocese of Bourges, its General Procure in Rome, its Novitiate at Antwerp, diocese of Malines, prostrate at the feet of Your Holiness, humbly presents with regard to an appeal sent to the Sacred Congregation of the Council in Rome, numbered 712/733, stating that "in the neighbourhood here a house was built for the Reverend Fathers of the Sacred Heart, to which was annexed a chapel open to the public, but closed on the orders of the Archbishop of Malines", and now asking that it be re-opened. The closure was carried out without any involvement or awareness on the part of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, contrary to their wishes. This was despite the submission given in our name to the main signatory not to request in any way the re-opening of a chapel to the public without the previous approval of the Ordinary, and without reference to what concerns ourselves, and myself as the Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart who built the chapel, and despite the formal commitment from us to the Archbishop of Malines not to use this chapel for the faithful in the area, but only for those who are part of the (MSC) community.

Such was, in effect, the condition laid down and accepted by both parties in 1886 when Archbishop Goossens was in charge of Malines, he being quite favourable to our humble request, which Your Holiness himself was pleased to support through the letter of His Eminence Cardinal Simeoni, Prefect of the Congregation of Propaganda Fide, most kindly granting us permission to open our Novitiate and Mission Seminary in his diocese. The chapel, referred to above, opened to the public by the local Superior, without the requisite permission, was justifiably closed after some weeks, and the under-signed humbly asks Your Holiness to consider as non-negotiable and without validity the appeal which has been made for its re-opening.

Dear Father,

1. I am sending 6,000 francs (roughly 18,500 euros) for the Pope; tomorrow you will receive the 5,000 francs completing the 11,000 francs owed. You will add 200 francs. I had to borrow this money. How much more must be paid after this lodgement – 200,000 francs, I believe? Try, then, to get a remission on this from the Pope. The Rome house, and the missions, have financially drained us. Try to make them understand this.
2. Please do as much as you possibly can not to have recourse any longer to the Issoudun cash-box. Print money. Have recourse elsewhere to financial sources. It's quite impossible to continue coming to your financial aid.
3. Make your budget tally or develop your financial resources, but don't count any longer on Issoudun.
4. Yes, include yourself in the album of Rome's Catholic colleges.
5. I think that you would do yourself a dis-service to have Mr. Baglan in your house. He is a holy 'operator' who could be an embarrassment and later a burden, unless the Sacred Heart could miraculously do something with him.
6. With reference to the Sacred Heart I note that in Rome for instance (Chevalier uses the Latin 'verbi gratia') Bishop Falepi, and others elsewhere also, habitually calls us: Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of of Issoudun. Make a protest about this and have them simply say (write): Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. It's our official title; we belong to the holy Catholic Church and not to Issoudun.
7. I am sending on to you the particular Rules. They will help you to set up what is customary and what is best. It would help if you could present an elegant translation of them in French, but I dare not ask you given your many tasks.

Cheerio, Father.

I am forwarding the 5,200 francs I mentioned to you yesterday to complete the 11,000, since my last letter had 6,000 francs for you. In order to be excused from the remainder owed, stress our expulsion and the closure of our basilica (in Issoudun) which always remains a (financial) disadvantage to us. Dear Father,

I am so sorry to hear that you are laid up. Get rid of your temperature as soon as possible. I am pleased to read that you received the 11,200 francs (about 35,120 euros). What a gaping hole the Rome house makes in our impoverished finances! It's now three times since I enquired from Fr. Védère about the request I made to the Pope for some indulgences on behalf of our apostolic workers in Paris and elsewhere (who, as noted above, made vestments or apparel for the missions), and I have had no reply. These ladies are eager and keen on having this favour. At the very least, while waiting for something better, could you not get straightaway an apostolic blessing for these missionary workers on behalf of the Sacred Heart? Once a month for example.

There you are; Baglan has written to me saying that he is returning to his family in France. That's the best thing for him to do. We shall see later if his health is restored.

Issoudun, February 14, 1889

Dear Father,

1. This appeal to Rome by the people who live in our area makes me very unhappy. You are not at Borgerhout for ministry work, nor to engage in converting the parish, not even to help towards their salvation since this is none of your concern, but rather that of the Archbishop and parish priest.

By opening your church to the public, you have already forsaken your duty by breaking the promise made to the Bishop and dug an abyss into which the Antwerp house could well fall. If you do not resolutely desist in every way possible from this appeal to Rome, either through your efforts or your approaches and appeals, all the complaints of the Archbishop against your house will be stirred up again with his displeasure reaching a climax, having his hands forced to get Rome on his side. Who could not foresee the regrettable consequences which would follow from this for our Antwerp undertakings?

2. I am unhappy to note that your debts again soar to more than 500,000 francs (about 1,560,930 euros). Who will meet this? What are you doing yourself to ease it? I beg you to do something about it... Start making an appeal in Catholic Germany. Emphasize the work of the German missionaries in Oceania and the needs of our Antwerp Seminary. It is absolutely imperative that you come by contributions to take yourself out of the unfortunate pit into which you have fallen. Send off Fr. Reyn with a German scholastic to make appeals for the benefit of your house.

3. Your budget for 1889 presents a deficit of more than 70,000 francs (about 219,500 euros). This is dreadful. It is out of the question that we can continue like this because, assuredly, total calamity is facing us.

4. Towards the end of this month, we shall be having a Council meeting. I shall let you know beforehand.

5. Let Fr. Reyn follow the régime (health) about which he was advised.

6. As for Brother Robin, he must return to his family just like the other novices who are not in good health. Otherwise, all our houses will be encumbered with the sick as they already are. I say once again to you that there has to be good health, without even any normal exceptions, in the novitiate. Pauca sed bone (few but of quality).

NB: The Brussels house makes me very happy, but will the Archbishop ever consent to it in the present circumstances? See straightaway Fr. de Molder who is genuinely interested in us. Dear Fr.,

1. The postponing of the payment on what we owe to the Pope is, already, quite something; it must mean that the interest is also suspended. Don't rush things in any way as regards this matter. Go gently with the Vatican Monsignors who can be awkward or helpful according to the way they feel; in the present circumstances one must try to win them over and have them on our side through the correct procedures.

2. How much more do you have to pay the Pope? You do not let me know this. I don't myself remember very well how much it is. Monsignor Tolchi should have sent you the account to be paid which I signed for 1888. You will send it on to me.

3. You did the right thing to send away the 5 youngsters who didn't offer guarantees.

4. Let me have the names of the 3 scholastics mentioned, their ages, the courses they are following, the views expressed (in writing) about their vocation, character, the assurances to be offered about their health, etc., and I shall, thereafter, let you know what you should do.

5. I haven't anybody to make available to you at the moment. Those you mention must stay where they are. Make the best use you can of your personnel, and at Easter, if I can take someone away from elsewhere to help you, I shall do so. Would Fathers Merg or Audouy, who will soon be priests, go to your help?

6. Yes, certainly you may ask for help (financial) from the Count de Beaurepaire. You are all the more entitled to do so because the house never asked (before) for anything. Emphasize your extreme lack of financial resources and your urgent need of the same. Do not mention in any way your Italian Petite Oeuvre, but rather your French priests and scholastics hit by miserable conditions due to the expulsions in France, etc. You will send on your appeal statement to me which I shall endorse.

7. We shall, obviously, consider a novitiate in Italy.

8. I am pleased to know that the troubles in Rome have quietened down.

Bring these letters back to me. J.C.

According to this letter, from the beginning of 1888 Fr. Matovelle was negotiating the arrival of the Saint Quentin priests in Quito, and on the 6th of July, this same year, the Archbishop of Quito, even before I could reply to his April 21 letter, already wrote that we were giving up the basilica - something which is not true. There is something wrong here - clear it up. J.C.

A letter from Fr. Léon Dehon to Bishop Thibaudier.

My Lord,

I have received the Very Rev. Fr. Chevalier's letter. I have a high regard for and appreciate the saintly founder of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, and I want to answer him as satisfactorily as possible.

His first two comments centre on the inconvenience resulting from the similarity of name in both Congregations. This problem will be, I feel, only temporary. The undertakings are well known to the public. One knows very well, for example, that the Toulouse priests of the Sacred Heart and those of Marseilles are distinct from the Issoudun Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. The Holy See approves of these different Congregations and is not worried by the likeness of their names. We shall always make obvious the centre of the Congregation in our propaganda literature.

Fr. Chevalier's third observation deals with the Quito foundation. Over the past year I have received eight letters from Fr. Matovelle, an Ecuador priest, about this issue. On July 6 last he saw Archbishop I. Ordonez of Quito and he informed me that the Issoudun Missionaries had given over being in charge of the basilica. On September 6 he forwarded proposals to me from Archbishop Ordonez. On October 16 he wrote to me stating that everything had been arranged and agreed with Archbishop Ordenez. There is here, then, a problem which needs a solution. I am going to write to Fr. Matovelle and he will deal with the Archbishop of Quito in order to clarify this matter. I think I have acted properly in every respect.

Dear Father,

I replied to your letters about the Papal debt. No, don't draw anything out of the 11,200 francs (about 35,120 euros). This amount is meant in its entirety to pay the annuity (the reimbursing of capital borrowed and payment of interest). As for meeting payment of debt on the Rome house, the creditors will be waiting for you. I am very pleased to hear that you are much better. It is impossible to make available to you the men you need. Try to make the best of things. Give me an answer to my last letter as regards the 3 or 4 scholastics who were causing you problems. Since we do not have a scholasticate (now) in France, I do not see how we could take them from you. What could they do in Issoudun? Could you make use of them in your office, etc.?

Issoudun, February 19, 1889

Dear Father,

1. My letter had gone when yours came. I understand that it had been agreed that you should give the Pope these 11,200 francs, with the rest payable when we were in a position to do so. On reflection I think it would be better to pay the annuity for 1888 immediately and we shall pay the remainder when we can. This is the way I advised you to act. My insistence on getting the 1888 receipt proves it ("ask how much more we must pay following the last instalment of 11,200 francs. It should not be more than 20,000 francs"). You will send it (the invoice) on to me as soon as Monsignor Tolchi sends it to you following the payment of the 11,200 francs. The 3,000 francs which remain over, as owed by Fr. Jouët, will come later.

2. We must meet in Council on Wednesday next week and I shall make a case for you to have someone to support you, but where is he to be found? All those you mentioned are needed where they are and there's nobody to replace them. Most of the teachers at the Petite Oeuvre are preparing for the second part of their Baccalaureate which they will only undertake at the July and August sittings. One cannot in fairness overburden them. I am as much embarrassed by all this as you are.

3. I do not think it is helpful to send us your young Italians. As they are in Rome, they should stay there. You will try and do the best you can.

4. It is imperative that we find a Superior for Quito where Fr. Morisseau has compromised everything by his lack of energy. The Saint Quentin priests, the Oblates of the Sacred Heart, have established themselves there, beating loudly a heavy money-box and wanting to take over from us. I firmly believe that I shall be obliged to send a Visitor there (an official Chevalier representative, see below). The Archbishop, so it seems to me, has greatly compromised himself.

Cheerio, Father. I keep quite well.

Warmest regards to you all in C.J.

Dear Father,

1. Be kind enough to convey once more to Bishop Goossens the regret which I feel, arising from all the trouble we have caused him. He may change my letter to the Pope as he thinks fit. Our dearest wish is to satisfy him in every way. Convey once more my apologies to him and petition him once again to favour the Antwerp house with his good-will, asking him in my name, as a token of his good-will and readiness to over-look, to permit us to take over the Schaarbeek house if it is suitable for us.

2. On Tuesday evening we shall have a Council meeting in Issoudun; try to be there.

3. I am sending you on the document you were looking for, with my signature, in case you need it.

3. Chevalier has 3 twice. I am also sending you on Bishop Thibaudier's reply together with that from the Oblates of St. Quentin Superior. Fr. Dehon, with his Doctor's title, skirts around the issue and he does not, so it seems to me, answer the serious issues which have arisen. So, for example, he doesn't breathe a word about their letting it be understood they are the only priests of the Sacred Heart since, according to his circular letter, all the attempts of other religious have not succeeded. Whatever he says about it, I cannot see that he acted with much right on his side. I fear that you are not going to meet Bishop Thibaudier in Soissons.

18890226 X

Council Meeting, 26-28 February, 1889

In attendance: The Very Reverend Father Superior General, Reverend Fathers Piperon, Guyot, Jouët, Delaporte.

This meeting of the Council was specially convened for a review of finances and an examination of the budgets in the Congregation's different houses. Before this last was undertaken, Fr. General presented the following issues to the Council:

Quito: The Quito house situation in the Republic of Ecuador.

On the one side problems have arisen between His Grace the Archbishop of Quito and the priests in our house concerning the Sacred Heart basilica in this city; on the other hand Fr. Morisseau, despite his admirable qualities, given his age, the state of his health, his unfamiliarity with the language, would appear to lack the necessary qualities to meet the needs of such a difficult foundation and, besides, there is also his wish to return to France to be considered.

Fr. Jouët: Visitor of this house.

The decision has been taken to send Fr. Jouët to Quito as Visitor. He will have to assess the situation and consider its needs; he will report on his findings to Fr. General, pointing out what measures he thinks should be taken, and he will await instructions.

The Priests of the Sacred Heart, Saint-Quentin.

2. The Congregation of the Priests of the Sacred Heart, Saint-Quentin, Soissons Diocese, have shown a tendency to take over from our Congregation as regards work it has undertaken; these priests have already in a number of instances through their propaganda or work tried to establish themselves and profit from the similarity of name which creates a regrettable confusion among the faithful, and this in order to take to themselves offerings intended for the Missionaries (MSCs). The decision was taken to study carefully the situation and, if needs be, the matter would be referred to the Holy See. Fr. Jouët was also given responsibility for this matter.

3. The Council was then brought up to date on the problem involving the Premonstratensians of the Averbode, Malines Diocese, Belgium, who, against the rightful claim of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, alone made responsible by decree of April 20, 1879, for the Universal Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, have set up in their church a new Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Since this state of affairs gives rise to anxiety and creates division among the faithful, it was decided to have yet further recourse to Rome about this in a process already undertaken some years ago by Fr. Jouët, Procurator General. He was again made responsible for the new initiative.

The Sittard Ursulines.

The Sittard Ursulines, in the diocese of Roermond, Holland, are creating the same problems (as the Premonstratensians). The same decision as in the case of the Premonstratensians was reached about them, and the two issues will be pursued simultaneously or following on each other.

Financial Accounts and Budgets.

4. The Council then proceeded to examine the accounts and budgets of the Congregation's different houses. Several accounts and budgets having been considered unsatisfactory or badly prepared. Fr. Maillard was asked to take note of these accounts and budgets and return them to the bursars of the different houses asking that they be satisfactorily rectified or presented with the necessary clarification.

The Antwerp House.

5. Since the Antwerp house in the diocese of Malines, Belgium, has incurred a considerable deficit in its accounts over the past six months, with the same foreseen for the year 1889, the Council deliberated on what was needed to avert such a catastrophe and put this house in the way of meeting its liabilities. Founded three years ago without any financial resources, this house was in a position over three years to provide for the lodging and upkeep of its members until the month of June, 1888. After that the financial resources became considerably diminished for various reasons, the number of personnel having also considerably increased, the deficit now adding to the debts undertaken when setting up a house for 190 people.

Decisions Taken.

The Issoudun Scholasticate.

The Council, following a lengthy discussion, decided that:

i. The scholasticate presently at Antwerp should be provisionally moved to the mother house, Issoudun, and that it would be set up in the old buildings, some of which were visitors' rooms. In any event, the Antwerp house cannot any longer be used as a scholasticate, being no longer large enough.

Financial Support of Novices and Scholastics.

ii. Each house which has a Petite Oeuvre should not only provide for the upkeep of its youngsters during their literary studies, but also as scholastics right up to the priesthood. One must not, then, take in youngsters other than within a prerequisite financial constraint, not at the pro rata rate of annual intake. The houses which send these youngsters to the novitiate will pay for their upkeep during the novitiate; the same holds for the scholasticate.

Ways of Increasing Resources.

iii. The Antwerp house should take all possible steps to aggrandize its resources, appeals, subscriptions, promotions, gatherings of supporters, etc., etc.

Sacred Heart Bulletin.

6. It was next proposed that the size of the monthly bulletin for the diocesan priests of the Sacred Heart, entitled Sacred Heart, should be expanded. Having examined the proposal, it was agreed that it should be 32 pages instead of the present 16. It was further agreed that the magazine should continue as before, the 16 added pages comprising articles on spirituality, the care of parishes, a bibliography, a review of Catholic activities and books. Fr. Delaporte was asked to make arrangements with his confrères about the planning and carrying out of this new programme manual for diocesan priests.

It was decided to publish a new edition of the diocesan Priests of the Sacred Heart Manual, with some changes and editions made to it. The Council members gave this careful consideration and expressed their views on the matter.

Almanac.

7. The publication of an Almanac was then proposed, which would favourably boost the Sacred Heart Annals, Our Lady and St. Joseph, and be a résumé of all our works. This almanac was agreed on in principle and Fr. Delaporte was made responsible for it, putting before Fr. General the practical and detailed issues involved.

Letter to Salzburg.

8. Finally Fr. General proposed that a letter be sent to the Salzburg house in his name requisitioning the priests of that house to put themselves at the disposal of the Antwerp house, to which appertains the editing of our German Annals published at Düsseldorf under the name Monatshefte, with three pages made over for articles which are specific to Salzburg. The Salzburg house should also come to an understanding with the Antwerp house about the publication of a German Almanac.

Issoudun, February 28, 1889

Dear Father,

I am sending you the 3,000 francs you wanted to pay the remainder of former debts. This is an issue which now becomes closed; let us discuss it no further, putting Fr. Jouët and his administration to rest. Let's try to do better.

You do well to add to your resources and lower your expenses since this is the only way to balance the budget. We shall have to achieve the impossible in all our houses to get thus far. Otherwise, we shall be so burdened by debts that we cannot shake them off. I can tell you, frankly and confidentially, that the Antwerp house carried a debt of 552,600 francs and a deficit of 72,000 francs for this year, 1889. That's what I call madness. It was the measures I undertook to have the accounts and budgets made available which led us to discover this rotten apple.

What are we going to do yet again in order to extricate ourselves again from such-like situations? We shall be obliged to cut down on personnel and increase propaganda initiatives. We are obliged to bring the Antwerp scholastics to Issoudun next September. If at the end of the year, despite your efforts and good administration, you are some millions of francs in debt, we shall make every effort to come to your help. Courage, therefore, and confidence. I shall also attempt the impossible and give you someone by Easter. Fr. Jouët tells me that the administrators of the Pius IX tomb have made the same appeal to him ten times, and there's no need to become concerned about this.

You are aware, Father, that contractually we are obliged to publicize every month the house of Daniel in our Annals. Now it appears that over a number of months this has been dropped. I did not become aware of this until today. Daniel (a Jew) is within his rights in asking us to compensate him. Very likely he will do so – and we shall be caught. A space must be left, then, every month for this advertisement above the summary of the contents (the second page of the cover). It's ten times better to leave out the calendar which brings in nothing than to lay ourselves open to the payment of several thousands of francs in indemnity. I know the man.(!)

I hope that you have recovered from all your illnesses.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Thanks for Mgr. Tolchi's receipt.

Issoudun, March 6, 1889

Dear Father,

1. Fr. Piperon, in charge of the novitiate, the house, and its activities, cannot go to Rome for anything longer than fifteen days or so. What could he do in such a short time? If you think that Fr. Guyot would be a better prospect I could sound him out since he, maybe, could stay longer (than Piperon) in Rome. What do you think?

Guyot at this time was Superior of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun; Chevalier, as parish priest, resided at the presbytery.

Do you think that Fr. Carrière (of the Paris community) might not take over in Rome during your 4 or 5 months' absence? I believe he could since he knows Italian and would get on well with Fr. Védère and the others. Unless, that is, you think it more opportune to leave Fr. Vaudon there during these 4 or 5 months. But as for leaving Fr. Védère alone there, it's simply out of the question since you and I know that our Council colleagues would in no way agree to that. I would very much like to write to the Assistants to ask for the recall of Fr. Vaudon, even before you leave (for Quito). But who is going to be vice-Superior until you return? Either Fr. Guyot or Fr. Carrière...?

2. Yes, I shall certainly go to Paris to see Monsignor Macchi if you cannot get him to come to Issoudun. It is very appropriate that you travel with him, and visit rue de Calais, 21, together.

3. I am forwarding 300 francs (about 940 euros) to you.

4. Yes, we must hold on to our Micronesia vicariate as well as that of Melanesia.

5. Fr. Morisseau writes to me today saying that rumour has it in Quito that the resignation of Archbishop Ordonez has been accepted, and a new Apostolic Delegate is awaited to put everything in order. Fr. Morisseau proposes to take himself off on his own to Guayaquil as a community chaplain while waiting to take on a posting or have a procure. He mentions that Fr. Barriga, secretary to Archbishop Ordonez, who has been in Issoudun, is presently Vicar General of Guayaquil, and because of this he could easily get a posting which would be useful in undertaking our initiatives. I replied saying that he can initiate approaches without coming to a decision before you arrive in the country.

6. Yes it is regrettable that the expression "Queen of the Sacred Heart" has been allowed to get by even though this article is by an outsider.

7. If a mass cannot be celebrated in your church at 11 o'clock because the time is too late, there is nothing to prevent its being celebrated each day earlier in the morning for the succour of the souls in Purgatory. I cannot believe that the Cardinal Vicar insists that there should be a mass every day at 11 o'clock for the 4 or 5 people who are present at it, assuredly not. Do not impose on the house, my friend, anything other than the changes which are justifiably necessary. If, then, you can arrange to have the morning mass at 8 or 9 o'clock, do so. Act for the best.

Cheerio, Father.

This letter, written by Fr. Jouët, carries Chevalier's signature.

Your Grace,

I have received the kind votum (promise) which Your Excellency presented to Our Holy Father the Pope, the purpose of which was to obtain the definitive approval of the Constitutions of our Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. I hasten to express to Your Grace my very grateful appreciation, while again assuring you of my complete dedication to you and as regards everything associated with the Sacred Heart in the Quito Archdiocese. I read with the keenest attention your letter to Fr. Jouët on the measures to be taken in order to promote advantageously the little Sagrario community, providing the parish and the diocese in which the ministry takes place the greatest possible opportunity for development. Given this fatherly support on the part of Your Grace, I hope a satisfactory result can be arrived at. The problems and difficulties inseparable from a new foundation at such a great distance from the mother house, and in a country whose language, life-style and customs were completely foreign to us, are presently all behind us. My intention is to send one of our priests as Visitor during the month of May, bringing with him a new priest for the Sagrario community, and he will deal with Your Excellency on my behalf in order to come to an agreed decision about everything, and arrange, if Your Grace deems it necessary, for Fr. Morisseau's return to France.

In the name of..... of .....

I am forwarding to Your Grace, at your request, the plans for the new basilica and the architect's final statements on the matter. Not having heard, up to now, from your side, anything about mail reaching you, I am beginning to think that all the letters haven't been received by you; something which greatly concerns me. All the more so when a young Congregation, totally distinct from ours, but carrying the title Priests of the Sacred Heart, Soissons, has publicized in a printed circular, which has been sent to me, the following text: "Next spring a second departure of (our) priests will take place by way of setting up two further foundations in America, particularly so that of Quito where we shall be given the responsibility, together with Fr. Matovelle, for the building of the Sacred Heart basilica, etc."

This statement, altogether strange and wholly contradicting the undertaking confided to us by Your Grace, with His Holiness Leo XIII approving, and concerning which up to now we have occupied ourselves with the utmost zeal in drawing up the plans and putting into effect the model presented to the Holy Father, Leo XIII, by His Excellency the Ecuador Republic's Ambassador to the Holy See, accompanied by Fr. Jouët, our Procurator in Rome. The claim referred to above was immediately challenged by us, and I believe that Your Grace approves of my not allowing a rumour to be taken seriously which could have no solid foundation.

If Fr. Morisseau, in the midst of his problems, couldn't take in hand this undertaking, I have not, myself, stopped being concerned with it. You have kindly acknowledged this in the letter you sent to him stating that the contract had become a matter for Your Excellency and myself, and that it was between us that everything should be arranged. I shall shortly write to you at greater length and I shall provide the Visitor (Jouët) with my full instructions so that, in tandem with Your Excellency, and to the best of our own endeavours, we can bring everything to a successful conclusion...

With all good wishes...

JMJ

Issoudun, March 10, 1889

To the Rev. Fr. Superior,
Sacred Heart House.

Dear Father,

You are aware that the Council met to examine the accounts and budgets of each house in the Society and, in this respect, it had several observations to make, some, in general, meant for all the houses, others relating to each house specifically.

I
General Observations

1. The sums listed on each page of the budget account should be given in French currency. Accordingly, before these accounts are completed, the bursar in each house must make the necessary calculation to provide in francs and centimes the sums at his disposal if they are calculated, in the first instance, in the country's currency.

2. The Superior or the bursar in every house must forward to me as soon as possible a statement showing the prices of foodstuffs in the country and the price of the clothing costs of what is worn by the priests, brothers and youngsters. For example, bread, meat, vegetables, those of these last most used, then: coffee; sugar; drinks; milk; cloth for soutanes, capes, trousers, cardigans, shoes; laundry.

NB: Such data are needed if a judgment is to be formed about the cost of personnel upkeep.

3. All the houses which publish the Annals must reproduce as much as possible the mother house's Annals, at least the principal articles.

4. As far as admittance of youngsters to the Petite Oeuvre is concerned, it would appear from a perusal of the accounts that in those houses which have a Petite Oeuvre, the number of youngsters is incessantly raised, often without sufficient likelihood of their costs of living being met, and always without any thought being given to what must be spent on these youngsters when they are in the novitiate and scholasticate. It is not, then, right to inflict upon the Superiors of these two houses responsibility for the upkeep of all the young men confided to their care.

The conclusion which must be drawn, then, is that from the fees and bequests made available to the Petite Oeuvre, a third should be put aside in the first place for the general upkeep of the house, and the remainder should go to meet the expenses of the youngsters during their academic studies, their novitiate and scholasticate, a time-span lasting at least 12 years. If one assesses the expenses of a youngster in the Petite Oeuvre at 600 francs per annum, that of a novice at 700 francs, a scholastic at 800, there will be an average sum of 717 francs to be met each year over 12 years, or, in effect, an overall sum of 8,600 francs.

Each house can, then, accept each year as many youngsters as there are 8,600 francs in the two levels of its takings for the Petite Oeuvre. But an objection may crop up here: if a house only takes in 16 or 17,000 francs annually for the Petite Oeuvre, it can only take in two youngsters each year. But what is it going to do, then, with what is left over having provided in its accounts for these two youngsters, presupposing that in the novitiate and scholasticate there will be a sufficient number of personnel to make use of the annual resources available? Reply: it will put by as interest the amount of money left over in the early years and, when what is put aside is enough for the upkeep of a youngster, it can then meet the expenses of an additional student.

5. The decision has been taken that the Congregation will no longer accept foundation masses in perpetuity. If a house for serious reasons considers that it should accept them, it may do so only with the written permission of the Very Rev. Father Superior General.

II Particular Observations made to the Sacred Heart House, Issoudun

The number of youngsters at the Petite Oeuvre (Issoudun) is too large; it should be reduced and made relevant to the decision reached and given above.

Please accept my good wishes and regards in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

PS: In those houses where the Petite Oeuvre is recently established, there will be exceptions as regards what is said above in number 4 of this letter.

Issoudun, March 10, 1889

Dear Father,

Thanks for your kind letter and your accompanying explanations, which I accept and candidly believe without any reservations. Do not have any worries. It's a lesson for us all when we have to deal with children or young people whose imagination enlarges things and draws them to exaggerate. Be cautious just the same to the point of excess. Be kind and paternal, my friend, to everyone without exception; you will, in consequence, have merited the regard of big and small, your house a mirror of paradise.

Fr. Védère has written me a nice letter just as you said he would. This dear little priest, whose judgment falls short, fears that you do not take him into your confidence and that you do not warm to him. Reassure him by your kindness; he is very committed; draw on him to help you. Show confidence in him; consult with him, even if only for the formality of it. You would make him happy and have in him a friend for yourself, as well as with your other young priests and brothers. Try to draw him gently into administration and the economy (of the house). There has, hitherto, been no notice taken of him. Do not make any threat about sending away Petite Oeuvre youngsters who are presently with you, or certain scholastic brothers. You will be careful about admissions for the future, accepting only as many as you can provide for as regards the priesthood. It is better to take on fewer and achieve more.

I notified Mr. Gagnault, our printer, not to count any longer on having our Annals for the next year because we want to have our own printing set up at the Sacred Heart. This unexpected news was like a thunder-bolt for him. His whole office was alarmed. You are aware that we are paying him 1 franc, 70 centimes for each subscription, all found. I proceeded to offer him 1 franc, 25 centimes.(!) Following two days given to its consideration, he has agreed to accept (the offer). We shall enjoy then annually an economizing of 8 to 9,000 francs. That's quite something. Mr. Chatain is allowing me the use of his alphabet at 1 franc each letter. You must let me know what it's best to do.

Our Constitutions are ready; Fr. Jouët will shortly go to Rome to seek approval for them. He will also request the setting up of a number of vicariates in our missions and various privileges for our Society.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

While Fr. Jouët is in Rome you remain all the time Superior of the community and responsible for it. The Reverend Father as Procurator General and Assistant has precedence and is independent of your authority; that's all. But you have authority over all your personnel. You will directly give him, or he will directly receive, his letters, in keeping with his wishes. Do not be in dread of him; far from lessening your authority, he will confirm it. Be confiding in him and everything will go very well.

Dear Father,

Would you be good enough to fit in the wise injunction in our new Constitutions with reference to the General Procurator, and which forbids him to engage in other people's affairs (problems) without special authorization; we have enough of our own (problems) to cope with.

To Rev. Father Jouët, Rome.

My Dear Friend,

I come to put our old friendship to my advantage. I would like to come by a souvenir for my poor parish, financially crushed by supporting schools and a curate. But from the splendours and gifts of the Holy Father, a little mite (something) will be enough for me.

Saint-Menet (Vien's parish) has already a cope and chasuble. Could you not get me something for this parish where you worked (pastorally) and where Fr. Cayrol – more pleased than I am – wishes to thank you. I have assured my old friend (Cayrol) that Fr. Jouët will meet the request; send it on and I will not relax until he has got a gift for a parish in the diocese for which he was ordained. I rely on you and on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to whom I have made known my project.

On you, my friend, and your undertakings, God's blessings and the gratitude of a poor parish priest.

Your most humble servant,

Fr. Vien.

I thank you most sincerely, my dear child, for the kind letter which you have sent to me; it gives me great pleasure. If you think of me, be assured that I have in no way forgotten my missionary of yesterday. I would hope to see its renewal in the dear little one called Raoul. But there he is now, grown up, living in Orange, seeking to set himself up in a career...

Farewell, then, to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart; it was a nice dream both from one side and the other; isn't that so? In any event, may he be an excellent Christian in the world and God will bless him. I am pleased to hear that dear Fr. Guyot is appreciated, and that his words do people good to hear.

I also, my dear child, am sorry that you are so far away from Issoudun. Might you not come sometime on a pilgrimage...? Try to go and see Fr. Guyot who will be happy to meet you. You will talk about Issoudun to him, which he likes very much, and he will speak to you about me.

Dear Friend,

Pluck up courage and be hopeful since this is a trial from which the Sacred Heart will draw glory as well as being to your own advantage. Dear Fr. Védère is well known; do not torment yourself any further. Do the best you can as regards your role as Superior and I shall support you as best I can. Be kind, but firm, wise and shrewd, and I promise you all sorts of blessings. This precious house needed order and regularity. Work towards providing it with one and the other.

The presence there, at the present time, of dear Fr. Jouët should not worry you; he is the Society's Procurator General, and you are the local Superior of the Rome house. Our regulations lay down your rights and duties. If some difficulty crops up, you will quickly bring it to my attention. Do not worry in any way; Fr. Jouët will do nothing which could be against your wishes. You have, I repeat once more, the leadership of the house, its personnel, activities, and Fr. Jouët's function is that of dealing with the Society's general interests in relation to the Holy See. Dear Fr. Védère is as obliged by the Rules as everyone else; it is time that he so commits himself and I hold him to that, both in his own spiritual interest and for the edification of the community. If he continues disregarding the Rule, let me know about it and I shall write to him.

If I can send someone to you by Easter I shall gladly do so.

Mr. Baglan is presently here in Issoudun; he appears to be recovered and is making a retreat. Perhaps we could see to it that he does his novitiate in Issoudun. I sent Fr. Jouët the new Constitutions for submission to the Holy See and I hope this revision will quickly go through. If we could have them approved by the feast of the Sacred Heart, I should be very pleased.

Issoudun, March 20, 1889

Dear Father,

I received your kind letter from Marseilles; many thanks for all your news.

1. I am happy about what you tell me as regards Lyons. Once Bishop Morel wishes us to have the African priest staying with us in Rome, I shall freely go along with it even if it will be a problem... Let Fr. Vaudon know about it.
2. Like yourself I want to see a house in Marseilles also, but who have we to send there? Nobody. Quito, Barcelona, Sydney and even Rome are short of priests. Indeed, we should have a serious-minded priest in Rome, a good bursar and confessor... Where is he going to come from? The Marseilles project, however desirable it may be, is not yet ready to be acted on... Let us wait over, then, for the time being.
3. I have nobody available for Antwerp. Fr. Vaudon just cannot leave Rome to give a couple of sermons; if you cannot meet the request yourself, get in touch with Fr. Deidier or Fr. Delaporte (both in Paris), if you think it worthwhile. Might not Fr. Mayer, preparing to go to Quito, take it on? This would avoid any moving about of people. You could let him know what is expected of him. See what you can do.

4. I have already sent a parcel to Rome with six copies of the new Constitutions. Today I am sending you on six more. Engage yourself seriously with this as it is the most important issue of the moment and then deal with the other issues, about which I have written to you on a separate sheet. Leave aside all other matters which have nothing to do with our Society.

5. You will not go without hearing about Fr. Vaudon's problems. Be kind and confiding in him; support him, pardon him, at least in good-will. See to it that there is no misunderstanding between him and yourself about the exercise of authority. The two roles are quite distinct. You are the Society's Procurator General to the Holy See, and Assistant General. You are answerable alone to the Superior General; Fr. Vaudon has no authority over you. In all meetings where you are present you have precedence.

Fr. Vaudon as Superior is in charge of the house, its direction and all its personnel; it's he who is responsible for its spiritual and material needs. If you think that he is not adequately meeting his responsibilities you might mention it to him, and if he doesn't take any notice of your suggestion, you will let me know. Let there be unity, peace, good-will, regularity, piety, good order and economies prevailing in this house and the Sacred Heart will continue to bless it.

6. The Universe mentioned some days ago that the Apostolic Delegate for Ecuador and Peru, etc., has been changed, and he will be replaced by Bishop Macchi; try and see him if he hasn't already left.

Issoudun, March 25, 1889

Dear Father,

1. My profuse thanks for the report you have sent on to me. Like you I think that he has left Antwerp, but I also think that some people in the Paris house are not unaware of the situation. Light will be shed on this. As always the Sacred Heart will bring good out of evil.

2. Since you cannot go to Antwerp, ask Fr. Vaudon to replace you. Ask Fr. Delaporte if he might not have someone to replace him preaching during the month of May; I am not adverse to this.

3. Once Fr. Vaudon has left Rome, who is going to look after finances, without mentioning the scholastics and the Petite Oeuvre? It cannot be yourself since you are not cut out to be a bursar. And it cannot be Fr. Védère either since experience has shown that he is quite unsuited for anything like this and he would again leave us with a debt which would be the (financial) ruination of the house. This dear priest is adequate for the sacristy and even there he should be supervised. The question of bursars is of capital importance in a house such as that of Rome; it must necessarily be resolved before Fr. Vaudon is bade a final farewell. I understand the problems which you mention to me, but again we must find out who is to replace Fr. Vaudon! And while you are away in Quito or France, who will look after the house, the Petite Oeuvre, the scholastics, the office for our Annals and our Association? If there's only Fr. Védère, it would be best to close the place. You know that yourself. I would not take upon myself alone the definite recall of Fr. Vaudon without having someone serious and intelligent to put in his place. Consult with the Council members, placing before them the difficulties inherent to the situation. I shall do whatever is called for.

You tell me, my friend, that at the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, there is only one person in charge while in Rome there are two. Why two? These two must only constitute one. It seems to me that at the present time these attributions are quite distinct. You are not lacking involvement at the Procure just now; be happy with that, and make every effort to bring things to a successful conclusion while waiting until we can get a replacement for Fr. Vaudon. Your presence there will prevent the latter from abusing his powers and will keep things in check. You mention that at the French seminary, and with the Oblates, Marists and Sulpicians, the bursar is also Superior. I entirely agree with that, and I very much hope that we, ourselves, shall do the same, but we must not speed up matters too quickly. The French seminary, the Sulpicians, etc. have serious, able, men to help the Superior-Procurator... But whom do we have? Nobody, nobody!!!

It seems to me, since you think it absolutely necessary, that you might ask Fr. Vaudon for the key of the mail-box, acting on my instructions, and if he refuses you will write to me and I shall myself ask him to do so.

4. You know quite well that I have authorized you to receive Bishop Morel's envoy in Rome.

5. Do not pay any great importance to the rumours being conveyed to you; keep yourself above all that and present yourself as magnanimous and generous. All these little problems end up collapsing from themselves and disappearing.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: I am writing a word or two to Fr. Vaudon asking him to provide you with a letter-box key. If you think he is ruffled by this request, have a box made for the use of Fr. Jouët, Procurator General. You will have your own key and he will have his own mail-box and key. Give consideration to what you think is best. Read my few words to Fr. Vaudon. Whatever Propaganda does for the new vicariate will be worthwhile.

To Fr. Victor Jouët, MSC, Procurator in Rome.

A copy of the Very Rev. Fr. Jules Chevalier's letter as Superior General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart to Fr. Jouët with relevance to an anonymous memorandum sent to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

Issoudun, March 25, 1889
Feast of the Annunciation

Dear Fr. Procurator General,

The news you share with me only half astonishes me since I am aware that the devil puts everything in place to inject a divisive spirit among the most united religious families. God is my witness that in drawing up the Constitutions and our common Rules, I sought no other than his glory and the good of our dear confrères. Following 35 years' experience and aged 69, I felt a need before I died to put the final hand on our dear work and keep it free of problems and arbitrariness in the future.

Our Constitutions, leaving aside two or three issues which I refer to and which I thought it opportune to introduce with the agreement of the Assistants, all the Superiors of our institute and the most elderly priests, are no more than an exact replica of the former Constitutions. As for the common Rules already in practice, I have shown respect for all of them, the additions I made were already to be found in germ in the former Constitutions. The developments I undertook seemed to me to be necessary in order to make precise what was not decisive enough and clarify what was unclear.

The above being stated, I would like you to thank particularly on my behalf the Monsignor Secretary of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars who has kindly made available to us the report at issue, providing us with the opportunity to provide the necessary explanations. I shall be lastingly grateful to him for this kind gesture of his.

Let me now, Fr., send you my comments, requesting you to pass them on to His Excellency.

To Fr. Jouët, Procurator General of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, 32 via della Sapienza, Rome.

I. First of all I am greatly astonished that these anonymous writers of the memorandum never said even one word to me about the different issues which they found to be objectionable in our common Rules. The proprieties, understandably, would have made it a duty, and I could have checked their enthusiasm, providing them with the explanations they needed, wanting no more than what's best for both sides, and, thereafter, peace would quickly be restored to them, and, if otherwise, they could address their complaints to the Assistants and, thereafter, to the Sacred Congregations, if they were still not satisfied.

II. They are deeply mistaken when they assert that I alone drew up these Rules and didn't share them with the Assistants and the Superiors of our houses, imposing the Rules as from myself. In the first place these Rules are not new, but rather our former ones which had many deficiencies, and which I improved upon in keeping with the spirit of our Society. This development seemed all the more needed to my mind when our institute was growing, extending itself afar, its members increasing more and more, no longer having the same characteristics, the same way of life, interpreting in different ways obscure issues, changing, withholding, adding where things were not precise enough (vague) and such-wise that confusion was already affecting us. I attempted to remedy this situation and, thereby, provide valuable service to our Society by way of clear, precise Rules which would check what was arbitrary and create uniformity. The proofs of these Regulations were made available several times to all the Society's Assistants who read, changed and approved them.

I also sent them to the Superiors of all our houses, Issoudun, Paris, Rome, Antwerp, Tilburg, Salzburg, Barcelona, Watertown, Quito, Glastonbury, Sydney and to Bishop Navarre. Everywhere they were carefully examined, and I took careful note of the comments and observations, presenting them as well to the elderly priests, the most judicious and experienced members of the Society, and it was the same for our Constitutions. This general consultation was the equivalent of a Chapter because our dispersal, following my being expelled (from France), didn't make it possible for us to come together.

III. They are not, moreover, right about the habit which His Holiness Pius IX sanctioned for us on June 3, 1874. You were, as it happens, present at the audience; on our return from Rome we came together in a General Chapter and all present, virtually unanimously, accepted it (the habit) without dissent.

IV. The harshness attending certain parts of the Rules about which there are complaints, is more about surface than depth. In any event, the French translation, now with everybody, has taken away this apparent severity. Before I drew up these Regulations, I entered into discussion with those Religious Orders which are very well disciplined, and who share a common aim with us, and I need only mention the Jesuits and the Redemptorists. Indeed what would our opposing confrères say if I made use of the same words and wrote them in as such without any softening of the Rules they complain about? The faithful observance of the vows seems an absolute requisite to me in order to maintain a religious spirit in our Society. It is for this reason that I laid such strong emphasis on this point in our Rules. The secret of our impact and our future is completely found there. The Sacred Congregation, whose experience is so complete, could not think otherwise. It will adjudicate, on surveying our Constitutions and Rules, submitted with confidence for its lofty approval, whether they meet its standards. We are prepared, in any event, to withdraw whatever is asked of us, and accept what it wants us to add on. Without genuine obedience, without poverty rigorously observed, and without the most demanding measures taken to safeguard chastity and combat the worldly spirit which threatens more and more the holy tribe [sic], religious communities will become more nuisance than help to holy Church. It is more worthwhile that we are less numerous at first, but solidly religious. Serious candidates truly keen on being perfect will come, by preference, to us. The undisciplined ones will lead sooner or later communities to their ruin.

V. When looking through the Rules, one will easily take note of the fact that we have avoided imposing corporal punishment as is the case with other Congregations such as the Redemptorists, for example. We set ourselves to mortify the spirit, heart, will. These activities wouldn't be injurious to health, but are very salutary for the soul and favour the religious perfection which we aim at – this is the purpose of the religious life. What these complainants look upon as minuscule has, properly understood, more importance than they in their inexperience associate with it. They complain that the Rules require one to have nails cut short, etc., etc. In the first place these regulations, and many more of the same kind, are to be found literally in the rules of the Redemptorists. They (the critics) seem to forget that many priests and religious make it a thing of vanity to have long nails, well manicured, and hair stylishly cut like men of the world, something which makes them look ridiculous and paralyses their ministry.

VI. Again complaints are made that the scholastics who are obliged to pray the Breviary, must say the office in common. First of all those who follow public (academic) courses may say it privately, N.29. This usage (of saying the office in common) is to be found in most religious scholasticates (Marists, Oblates, Redemptorists, etc., etc.) and, generally speaking, in all the major seminaries. To challenge this custom is to question, so to say, the Church itself, which recommends prayer in common.

VII. The monthly retreat laid down by the old Regulations is carried out as each one thinks fit, since no exercise was specified. So what has happened? Nobody, or hardly anyone, does it. I can verify it and it is, then, an abuse which needs to be rooted out. The prescribed religious exercises are much less in number than those among the Redemptorists in particular, and also in other Congregations. One must truthfully be committed and not be wanting in seeking one's own perfection. These dear confrères (his critics) have not, then, read this observation which I placed in the French translation: "Religious involved in activities which are part of their responsibility, such as teachers, will perform the spiritual exercises of the retreat on the occasions when they are free, and as best they can manage. What more can be done unless, otherwise, one leaves out this exercise which is practised in all the Congregations. Silence during recreation is only recommended.

VIII. Complaints are also expressed about the need to get permission to visit confrères' rooms to chat with them. But this is a rule adhered to everywhere, even in the major diocesan seminaries. If things were otherwise, there would be disorder.

IX. Not to look a woman in the face is prescribed by the Holy Spirit; one cannot exaggerate this ban as it's prudent measure which is good to keep in mind.

These are, Father, the main replies to the memorandum sent to the Sacred Congregation, and it can only have been drawn up by young priests without any experience of life, their observations only going to show that they have a greater need than many others of a strongly disciplined religious life since, otherwise, virtue will quickly become feeble among them, and God knows what will happen in the future. For the rest, these Regulations are not unchangeable; they are something being tried out and can be changed in a future Chapter if the fathers think it appropriate. The Chapter, which the difficulties of the present moment do not allow us to convene at this time, will hold us to carry out whatever has to be done. Besides, the approval of our Constitutions, which we seek, and the observations which will be made, can only throw light on the Rules themselves.

You may, then, quite simply, share this letter with anyone who is entitled to it, take seriously those observations which will be made to you and which we shall take into consideration with religious respect.

Please accept, Father, my good wishes in C.J.

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

Fr. Jouët, responsible for all the Society's affairs, by way of avoiding anything being held up and thereby sometimes creating confusion, wishes to have directly available to him those letters addressed to him. I only see one way to do this, either giving him the key of the mail-box or his having a mail-box for his own use, in which case the postman, advised beforehand, will place there all letters addressed to Fr. Jouët. Come to an understanding with him and do what is best.

I am writing to you with a toothache which has left me without any sleep for the past 6 days. Be sorry for me; pray for me.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Article 1688To the Cardinal Prefect of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.*

D 18890325 C

Issoudun, March 25, 1889

To His Eminence the Cardinal Prefect of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

May we be permitted to accompany the request for definitive Approval of our Constitutions with a presentation covering the disciplinary, personnel, economic and material circumstances of our Institute and its Novitiates?

I.

Report on Discipline

By God's grace and the manifest protection of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph, discipline is being upheld in all our little Society's houses. The religious persecution, to which we have been subjected, far from weakening the bonds of our religious discipline, has, on the contrary, only advantageously, boosted it. Truly we are delighted to confirm that a good spirit is prevalent among us and, specifically, that each one works daily towards religious perfection by faithfully putting into effect the Rules and Constitutions, and, particularly so, by meeting those obligations which Religious Vows place on us. The vows of obedience, poverty, chastity are held in great esteem by us. All are aware that here one finds the strength and future of our Society. Consequently, everyone commits himself to keep intact and even add this triple treasure so dear to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

II.

Our little Institute has 80 priests, 59 scholastics at the present time, of whom several are deacons and subdeacons, and there are 48 lay brothers, making a total of 187 religious in the Congregation's different houses.

The following are the number of the Congregation's houses at the present time:

France

1. Issoudun, Archdiocese of Bourges. Residence of the Superior General, centre of the Society and, also, its cradle; pastoral care of the parish, an apostolic school, Petite Oeuvre (70 youngsters), a college for the town's youngsters and a centre for the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association.
2. Paris, house with church open to the public; a priests' association.
3. Vichy, Moulins Diocese, house, available to priests, chapel open to the public.

Belgium

5. Antwerp. Residence; scholasticate; novitiate, apostolic work, seminary for our foreign missions; the direction of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association, and the Annals.

Holland

6. Tilburg, Bois-le-Duc Diocese; residence; Petite Oeuvre (50 youngsters).

Spain

7. Barcelona. Residence. Chapel open to the public; direction of the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and the Annals.

8. Glastonbury, Clifton Diocese. Chapel open to the public; apostolic school (24 pupils); direction of the Annals of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and her Association.

Austria

9. Salzburg. Residence; apostolic school (10 pupils); novitiate for lay brothers; direction of the Association of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and the Annals.

USA

10. Watertown, Ogdensburg Diocese. Residence; responsibility for a parish, a college, an apostolic school (12 youngsters); a novitiate; the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association and the Annals.

Ecuador

11. Quito. Residence; responsibility for a parish, the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association, etc.

Australia

12. Sydney. Residence. Mission Procure for the missions; responsibility for two parishes, Randwick and Botany Bay; the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association.

Oceania

13. Thursday Island, Torres Straight. Residence; parish, school.

Melanesia

14. Yule Island, New Guinea; several other stations within the interior.

15. New Britain. Residence at Volavolo, Maputo, among the natives.

Micronesia

16. The Gilbert and Marshall Islands. Residence of Nonouti and several other stations.

III. The Society's Properties and their Valuation:

Country	Property	Valued at Francs
France	Issoudun, Archdiocese of Bourges
	Mother house	600,000
	Furnishings	120,000
	Benoit, Archdiocese of Bourges	50,000
	Paris, rue de Calais 21	300,000
	St. Priest, Limoges Diocese, demesne	50,000
	Vichy, Moulins Diocese	150,000
Italy	Rome, Piazza Navona	550,000
Belgium	Antwerp, Malines Diocese	550,000
Holland	Tilburg, Bois-le-Duc Diocese	150,000
Spain	Barcelona	150,000
England	Glastonbury	70,000
Austria	Salzburg	250,000
USA	Watertown	200,000
The value of the goods owned by the Society		3,140,000

It reaches, then, three million, one hundred and forty thousand francs, or 3,140,000 francs.

On the other hand the Society is a debtor with respect to the following houses and properties:

1.	The Paris house	125,000	francs
2.	The Vichy house	50,000
3.	The Rome House (borrowings from the Pope)	30,000
4.	The Antwerp house	300,000
5.	The Watertown house	60,000
6.	The Glastonbury house	25,000
7.	The Salzburg house	128,000
		715,000	francs

The Society owes seven hundred and fifteen thousand francs. It holds properties, without any debt attached, to the value of two million four hundred and twenty-five thousand francs.

IV.

The Society's economic state, or annual revenues.

France
	Issoudun. The house has an annual intake of	150,000 francs
	Paris	15,000
	Vichy	5,500
	St. Priest	1,500
Italy
	Rome	20,000
Belgium
	Antwerp	120,000
Holland
	Tilburg	30,000
Spain
	Barcelona	20,000
England
	Glastonbury	15,000
Austria
	Salzburg	25,000
USA
	Watertown	20,000
Ecuador
	Quito	10,000
Australia
	Sydney	15,000
Oceania
	Missions (Melanesia, Micronesia)	67,000
		514,000 francs

The total annual revenue of the Society comes to five hundred and fourteen thousand francs, provided by the contributions of the faithful, revenue from publications, missions and preaching, mass offerings, etc. This financial intake meets the cost of living for all the Society's members, the novitiates and scholasticates, the different works which engage us and, moreover, our different Petite Oeuvres (apostolic schools) which at present have 250 youngsters who are the financial responsibility of the Society since we educate them without fees to make missionary priests of them.

Following our expulsion from France, by decree on November 5, 1880, our main novitiate was transferred to Tilburg, Holland, Bois-le-Duc Diocese, and later to Antwerp, Belgium, where it is at present. The Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, June 23, 1881, provided us by rescript all the authorization we needed.

The Antwerp novitiate currently has 60 novices of whom 32 are destined for the priesthood (some already having become diocesan priests), and 28 lay brothers. This novitiate is in the care of a Novice Master and Socius (assistant), both men of proven quality and wide experience. An excellent spirit prevails among the novices and all are animated most zealously to perfect themselves.

The Society has also another novitiate at Watertown in the USA. It has only 6 novices, all destined for the priesthood. They live in a dedicated way, practising all the religious virtues. Because of the apostolic school the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart are setting up in Watertown, the novitiate will develop more and more.

Our apostolic schools continue to provide us with vocations. We need a much larger number of novices. If the persecution eased off a little in France, it would be easy for us to re-establish a novitiate there. This foundation is all the more necessary because in our temperate climate, when so many young men come from the South of France (the Midi), Spain or Italy, many young men cannot put up with the cold and fogs of the northern countries (like Belgium and Holland). We have already asked the Sacred Congregation for permission to open a novitiate at Issoudun for the time being, or elsewhere in France.

Our Society, with houses in ten different countries at the moment, as far away as the ends of the earth, requests that it be divided into a number of Provinces. Four would suffice for the time being:

1. The French Province made up of the French houses and the Watertown (USA) house.
2. The Midi (southern) Province, comprising Rome, Barcelona, Quito.
3. The North Eastern Province, comprising Antwerp, Glastonbury, Tilburg and Salzburg.
4. The Oceania Province, comprising Sydney and the missions of Micronesia.

The foregoing, Your Cardinal Eminence, is the summary which I considered should be made in conscience for submission to your august majesty, and these are also the facts and expectations I believe I should express in the interests of our dear Institute of the Sacred Heart.

Issoudun, March 26, 1889

Dear Father,

1. Try and do what you can about Averbode.
2. You should, then, set in motion all the Society's undertakings for which I have made you responsible: the Constitutions, their approval, Provinces to be established; novitiates to be set up in Issoudun, Rome, Barcelona, Salzburg and wherever. While the Roman Congregations are dealing with all of this, you could take yourself off to Ecuador with Bishop Macchi. The opportunity could not be more favourable. I take the view that you would benefit from it. You would be away for 4 or 5 months, 6 at the most. But while you are away Fr. Vaudon would have to remain in Rome and only on your return from Quito could he be definitively changed. You will give him instructions, map out his line of conduct for him, or if you prefer I shall do so myself taking your suggestions into account. You will take him into your confidence about the trip to Quito and the reasons which make it imperative for you to go there. Such confiding will boost him. I don't believe he will make too many blunders during your 4 or 5 months' absence. In any event I shall try to go to Rome in May. By taking all these measures I don't believe that we have too much to worry about.
3. Yes, ask the Quito Ambassador to request two free tickets immediately. This is a worthwhile undertaking. Be ready to leave with Bishop Macchi by the 10th of April. If you decide not to leave until May 10 this would be better for you. You might make him aware that the sea is much better (calmer) then than in April. What travelling companion should I make available to you? Should one sound out the feelings of Brother Bouvier (then a scholastic at Issoudun)? In which case he would need to be ordained to the priesthood. If he doesn't accept, I shall have to get in touch with Fr. Barral in Barcelona or with Fr. Roger, also at Barcelona, or Fr. Fermin Moncorget (Sacred Heart, Issoudun). I expect to be turned down by the last one. I think your arrival at Quito with Bishop Macchi will have an excellent impact and one must make the most of this opportunity.

Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.

To Father Jean Vaudon, MSC, Rome.

Issoudun, March 28, 1889

Dear Father,

1. I am sending on to you the first three issues of the Saint- Quentin publication. You would do well to subscribe directly to this review. You will judge for yourself.
2. Since Brother Ruggeri is at home, one must wait over until Easter to get him back. Arrange this with Fr. Jouët.
3. You have done very well in being considerate and prudent with the good Father (Jouët). Act as if you didn't understand his allusions. Like you, I also think that he would not be displeased if he again became Superior. It's the Council which is responsible for what has been arranged. I hope that the well-being of the house will come well out of all this. Be courageous and hopeful. Remain on the best of terms with him (Jouët) always. Be cautious and, in particular, consult with him. I hope that little by little confidence will come back, and that there will be a pleasant relationship between you both. Each one of you in his role can only do good. It is particularly important that our young men, the youngsters in the Petite Oeuvre, but particularly so the priestly public, do not notice anything strained between you, if there is such.
3. (again) You do not need the approval of Fr. Védère in order to visit the French communities, women and men. It's your duty.
4. Come to an understanding with Fr. Jouët about organizing the committee of helpers you mention.

4. (again) If Fr. Jouët has to absent himself shortly from Rome, as I expect, it is out of the question for Fr. Védère to be left on his own in the house. Fr. Jouët should ask Fr. Delaporte or Fathers Deidier, Carrière or Mayer to preach at Antwerp. (The first three named were at the Paris house.)

5. Marseilles is merely Utopia for the time-being as we have nobody to send there.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father Verjus,

I find that you are greatly neglecting your friends in France and, in particular, at Issoudun. It's a long time since I had a nice long letter from you. The confrères are very eager to have one, also the readers of the Annals.

Send us then a good, boosting, account of things as you are well able to do. We think of you all the time and we pray earnestly for your success.

Copy of my letter to Fr. Merg. J.C.

Issoudun, March 27, 1889

Dear Father Merg,

I got your letter and like you I regret the misunderstandings which hold between Bishop Navarre and yourself. Having thought about it and consulted the assistants, the following is what we decided:

1. Bishop Navarre is appointed Superior of all the Australian and Oceania houses, and Visitor General of the said houses.

2. You will simply be Vice-Superior replacing the Bishop in his absence, undertaking nothing without his approval. You will be parish priest of Botany Bay and you will involve yourself exclusively with this parish and the undertakings which concern it alone.

As regards Botany (Bay), it appears that Fr. Hartzler has imprudently contracted a debt in his own name with a banker involving the Botany school and other work. Being on mission, and not having adequate resources, he could not meet this debt. It is for you, my friend, as his replacement, to meet this debt; appeal to the parishioners and make every effort to repay it as soon as possible. The good name of the Society is involved.

You will continue as Mission Procurator; make sure to pay serious attention to this important work, doing everything Bishop Navarre requests of you; he is your Superior; don't forget that.

The Bishop tells me that the Randwick parish brings in an annual revenue of 25,000 francs (about 78,390 euros), and that it's only right that half of that amount should be put into the Procure's mission account. Effectively, Father, you must understand that in the thinking of the Holy See as well as our own, likewise that of Cardinal Moran, Randwick parish has been entrusted to us as a mission resource. From the parish intake put a third, at least, aside for the missions; later we shall see if there's a case to be made for increasing it.

3. Fr. Tierney remains parish priest of Randwick, in charge of the parish and its activities. He, also, should not undertake anything important without the approval of Bishop Navarre.

4. Make yourself liked, my friend, in your relationship with the public and your confrères. In particular, be less abrupt, less authoritarian, less set in your ideas; one must know how to accommodate (give way); a rope too stretched finishes up broken. Give consideration to these words of Our Lord: "Discite a me quia mitis sum et humilis corde", and these other words: "Ama mesciri et pro nihilo reputari". Undertake everything by way of obedience alone, and you will be absolved of all responsibility.

Since you replace Bishop Navarre in his absence, see to it as best you can that all the Rules and Constitutions are kept, but be kind, supportive, accommodating, with your confrères.

Cheerio, Father; my regards to everybody and good wishes to the dear Sisters. Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Procurator, Rome.

Issoudun, March 30, 1889

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. I sent you four or five days ago a registered letter, my reply to the memorandum along the lines you suggested to me. The letter has gone amiss if you haven't received it. Consequently, if it hasn't reached you, telegraph me and I shall straightaway make enquiries at the post office.
2. All your letters, my friend, are no more than a prolonged indictment of me with regard to Fr. Vaudon. You want to make me completely responsible for his title of Superior and presence in Rome. You know as well as I do that it was the Council which appointed him as your replacement, just as the same Council appointed you to be with me here and Superior of the Sacred Heart at the same time. All the Council members unanimously named Fr. Vaudon to be Superior in Rome. You, yourself, agreed, and I don't recall any protestation to the contrary on your part. The register presents nothing about it either. You are, then, totally unjust in making me alone responsible for this appointment, as well as also blaming me bitterly as you do for leaving him in Rome despite your protestations.
3. I have already told you, and I now repeat it, that I do not have, as from myself alone, the authority to change a Superior appointed by the Council. I would need the assistants' approval. I advised you in one of my recent letters to write to the assistants asking them to have Fr. Vaudon recalled and making known to them the reason for this request. There's the right way to go about it; have you done so? If in the affirmative, the replies will not be slow in reaching me, and then I can act. But one must find out if you will be appointed again as Superior in Rome, and if I shall continue in the intolerable position with which I am faced in Issoudun (where Jouët is Superior). If the Council (members) want to reappoint you, I shall not ask for more, and I shall agree wholeheartedly. But who is going to be at my side in Issoudun? I need someone; you are, have been, a witness to that yourself. So many questions to put before the assistants.
4. Meanwhile, on the supposition that you become Superior in Rome once again, who would replace Fr. Vaudon as bursar? And who replaces you as Vice-Superior during your trip to Ecuador? You make no reply whatsoever to these practical, and indeed essential, questions.
5. In one of your letters you tell me that you would make me part of your plan to organize (better) the Rome house. I am still awaiting on this plan! What is it you are planning? Fr. Védère has heard nothing about it at the bursary and there's nothing from yourself. That kind of bursar, then, is absolutely needed who would at the same time be an adequate replacement for you during your absences. And since you claim yourself that Fr. Védère cannot do other than make blunders, let me have the name of someone who is a serious candidate!! Would Fr. Burnet be acceptable to you or Fr. Carrière? Burnet was at this time a curate in Issoudun; Carrière a curate in Paris.
6. I have written to you about your letters (Jouët's insistence on having his own delivery box), and my letter conveyed a little word to Fr. Vaudon in this respect. You give too much importance to this letter issue which is no more than a secondary matter anyway. Up to this moment it has always been Fr. Vaudon, as Superior of the Rome house, who looks after things administratively. In principle, he has every right to take hold of his subjects' letters and take note of them. The Constitutions state this formally. You, as Assistant General, are independent of his authority, and you have the right of precedence, entitled to demand that your personal letters be directly given to you. In any event, I, as you know, gave orders in this respect (to Vaudon).
7. You have, like Fr. Védère, a way of acting with regard to the Superior General which I do not understand; all your letters carry the heading "Strictly confidential and under the confessional seal. For yourself alone – to be returned to me." What do you expect me to do with such-like injunctions? Having to keep my hands tied and my mouth closed!!! And if I don't act as quickly as you want me to, you shower me with complaints... You threaten me with new horrors, etc., etc. Listening to you one would think that I was your enemy and only rewarding you with ingratitude. My dear friend, can it be possible that you are drawn to think and write like that? I, your enemy, I the most ungrateful of all? Oh never! God well knows that the contrary is the case. You could not more forcibly break my heart. I don't count this to be happening to you. I am well aware that the presence of Fr. Vaudon as Superior in your place upsets you and has gone to your head. You cannot leave Rome without this issue being raised and solved. Write immediately to the assistants, and I have no doubt that their replies will be in favour of changing Fr. Vaudon, who, given the circumstances in which he finds himself, will not greatly wish to stay on in Rome, the change not likely to displease him.

When you see Bishop Macchi it will be possible for you, I should imagine, to put back his departure until May 10. You make a complaint to me that I haven't been replying to all your letters. You are mistaken. All your letters discuss nothing else except Fr. Vaudon, generally speaking this is your 'idée fixe' (obsession), your nightmare fantasy. I summed it up in one of my recent replies when giving you the same advice I offer you again today, stating that before he can be changed we must know who is going to replace him. Your letter today provides me with no answer to this question.

8. You are in no way near the truth, my friend, when you claim that I forbade you to appeal for funds in the Rome Church (Piazza Navona). No, no, never! Quite the contrary, I gave you full authority not only to appeal for funds but also to write specifically to supportive people in France and elsewhere whom you know. You requested permission to continue appealing in our Annals, and I refused you permission because of the serious consequences which might arise. It is wholly wrong to say that I stopped you fund-raising or writing letters in favour of your work. You have full permission for that. Please, do not keep on saying the contrary. Oh! How difficult it is, Father, to make you give up an idea, however false, when it has got into your head.

For the past 8 days I am affected by a neuralgia which makes it impossible for me to sleep night or day and along with that I haven't peace or quietness. I am returning your letter to you; read it again and you will regret having written it.

Cheerio, my friend; I forgive you and bless you.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Assistant and Procurator, Rome.

Issoudun, April 3, 1889

Dear Father,

1. I am forwarding to you the Society's general report as requested by the Sacred Congregation and as required by our Constitutions. At the end I express two requests about the novitiate and the dividing up of the Society into Provinces. You will read it for yourself. Make any changes you consider necessary and with this in mind I am sending you a blank sheet of paper with my signature.
2. What's important is that the current Constitutions with their changes and additions be submitted as soon as possible to the Sacred Congregation who, quite obviously, will make changes which we must take note of, but at the very least this new edition will have approval, if not definitively at least for some years and will be a basic point of departure for the new common and particular regulations which are but its development and unfolding.
3. The occasion will arise, in consequence, to come together in a General Chapter to bring the new regulations into conformity with the approved Constitutions and have them promulgated. These new regulations, against which several (members) have taken exception, are no more than on trial until the definitive approval, or otherwise, of the Constitutions. We shall, then, revise them at the General Chapter and add the changes which the Chapter thinks are needed. In these circumstances everybody, and everything, will calm down.
4. I keenly regret that the Sacred Congregation does not allow the Superior General to stay in office for life. As a consequence we shall be faced every 12 years with intrigues and insurmountable difficulties involving our distant houses. Let us hope that the Sacred Heart will make it possible for this favour to be granted to us. I would put aside a hundred times the issue of the habit in favour of this.
5. I appreciate the irregularity of my position. It is absolutely imperative that it should be remedied as soon as possible. You did well to write about it to the assistants. Get on with this matter as quickly as you can so that it can be resolved before your departure for Quito, since otherwise the objectors will make more difficulties. If the assistants, in agreement with the Sacred Congregation, think it to be in the best interests of the Society to appoint me for life, being the Founder, but without prejudice to the issue as affecting other Superiors, I would accept, even if I feel I badly need a period of rest. The Chapter, when it has come together in order to approve the Constitutions, will only need to ratify the nomination without its being submitted to a vote. In this way everything will go through smoothly, and for the Society's greater good.

6. I met Brother Bouvier and it is agreed that he will accompany you to Quito. He is well disposed and full of good will, about to be ordained to the priesthood on Holy Saturday, the 20th of this month. He is going to spend some days at home before returning to join us at Issoudun, if you come here, or be at Bordeaux for the 26th. May 10, as the departure date, would be more preferable. Otherwise, April 26. Make arrangements with the Apostolic Delegate. Find out the steamboat's Bordeaux address and write to the company requesting two 2nd class reservations. Find out the price and I shall make the money available to you. Since the journey from Rome in order to get to Bordeaux or Saint Nazaire will be by way of Paris, try and get the Delegate to come to Issoudun, accompanied by yourself. It is as short to come by way of Tours, and its impact would be marvellous.

7. When writing to the assistants, bring to their consideration Fr. Vaudon's position; if they agree to a change for him in the better interests of the Rome house, with my role as Superior General further approved, I shall nominate you to take up again your role as Superior-Procurator, and I shall see to it that someone is sent to Rome to look after the house during your trip to Quito. I think that Fr. Carrière would be satisfactory, Fr. Vaudon replacing him in Paris. This situation must be speedily resolved.

8. Before you leave Rome, have the following initiatives taken, and well under way:

- a. the issues involving our Constitutions, etc., etc.
- b. put as much in order in the house as is possible with regard to the offices of the different associations, the supervision of the Annals, the editing, the distribution, etc.
- c. put in order, also, correspondence involving your associations, the forwarding of items requested;
- d. the promotion of your devotions and the Petite Oeuvre in order to come by financial resources.

It's the delay in replies and forwarding things, carelessness, or lack of order in material matters, too many undertakings which cannot have a successful outcome, the lack of supervision and follow up, which are detrimental to the advancement of our devotions and make them moribund in Rome or in Italy itself.

9. I would advise you, during your long absence, to give Fr. Carrière the bursarship, direction of the scholastics and responsibility for the associations' office. It's he who will be Vice-Superior and replace you. What do you think yourself? Do you think that Fr. Védère can look after the Petite Oeuvre and the church?

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, April 9, 1889

Dear Fr. Piperon,

1. You will again be giving rise to something seriously lacking in discretion by asking your Archbishop for permission to open your church to the public for three days while celebrating the archconfraternity's jubilee. You should declare a moratorium on this for the time being and do nothing about it, unless you want to draw upon yourself yet more problems.

2. My friend, I should have never overlooked the fact that the Antwerp house, which, for all that I had saved it twice from collapse, would repay me with such a monstrous show of ingratitude by taking such little notice of my concern and the good-will which inspires me.

What your letter brings to my notice, as well as the enclosed document, was already sent on to me from Rome, since these good confrères, thinking no doubt that the Society was in danger, had sent a lengthy memorandum to the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars.

The "anonymous memorandum" was written by the young priests of the Antwerp community and sent to the Congregation from Issoudun post office! The Sacred Congregation received the letter on February 20, 1889, and Jouët, the MSC Procurator, was notified about it on March 5.

Isn't it sad to find young religious, nurtured and warmed at your hearth, turning against their father to poison his life which is already full enough of embittering experiences.

I would have quite understood it if these good young men addressed themselves to me in the first instance, making me aware of their concerns, their fears, in pointing out to me the Rules to which they took exception, as being irritating, too harsh and unacceptable. And if my reply had not satisfied them, I would quite understand if it they took their complaints to the Society's Assistants, and in the event that they took no notice of their comments I would perfectly understand why they had recourse to Rome. It would be the appropriate route to follow; good sense, reason, wisdom, respect for their superiors, would have made it their duty. But not so, leaving aside all their reasons for appropriately acting, they took themselves off into shadowy, round-about ways, to get to the Holy Father when stating their grievances and setting out their accusations against their benefactor. These dear friends set themselves against a Society totally complete in its structures, having had for quite sometime its Constitutions and Rules, as proven from experience and stabilized by the Holy See's definitive approval. I now understand the thinking of Dr. Boux and the great Suarez, the conclusions they draw. But is this really the case? Our Society is not yet rooted in its definitive foundation. It's the founder himself who has given it that on which it rests at the moment. This founder is still alive, and God, who has granted him the graces and mission to give rise to this Society, who has showered it with blessings, will not permit it to happen before his death, when 12 years of experience (as General) will have gone by, that the revision of the Rules and Constitutions will have anything other than one objective: God's glory, the salvation of souls, and the greater perfection of religious...

Marcel Boux, 1806-1889, was a French Jesuit who popularized the writings of the spiritual masters. Suarez was the great Jesuit 17th century Spanish theologian.

Before setting out on this undertaking (the establishment of the Society), I sought the Constitutions and Rules of the most fervent religious orders, the Jesuits and the Redemptorists in particular. I added nothing which was not to be found in the Rules of these splendid institutes, and to these I added quite a measure of softness (as against harshness). It seems to me that in place of being blamed I should be congratulated for inserting in our Constitutions the essence of what is enclosed in the Rules of the most fervent communities who have formed so many saints, and whose aim is identical with ours. But, so it is said, this work is improper since it is the Chapter which should be doing it. In principle, I say, yes, if the founder is no longer alive. But I agree and this has been my thinking. What have I done? I consulted Rome and Rome replied that a General Chapter could not be called in times of persecution (contemporary France; Church and State turmoil) and I could then, myself, engage in the revision of my Constitutions and Rules, submitting this work for the consideration of the Assistants, the Superiors of the different houses, the elderly members of the Society whose comments I would take note of, and then I would submit the new Constitutions to the Sacred Congregation who would be the final arbiters, and following which I would get a Chapter together, insofar as this was possible, conveying to it the observations of the Sacred Congregation, and this same Chapter would make its own observations about the new Rules on trial up to this moment, and it (the Chapter) would add to or take out of these common and particular Rules what experience would have suggested, and all this would be made to conform to the new Constitutions. I followed out these instructions to the letter. If in place of direct referral of the problems to Rome I had myself been consulted (contacted), this is how I would have replied:

1. The new Constitutions do not oblige anybody until Rome has approved them.
2. The new common and particular Rules are not definitive, but simply in a state of trial until the next Chapter meets which will take out or add whatever it considers opportune or contrary to the approved Constitutions. Thereafter, these Rules, being revised and accepted by the Chapter, will become officially promulgated and obligatory.
3. These Rules, in general, are no more than a making explicit of the previous ones and their natural outcome; they have the advantage of making indeterminate issues more precise, offsetting anything arbitrary and forestalling abuses, setting up as much as possible the uniformity which was beginning to disappear.
4. I straightaway ask the confrères to point out to me the seriously unacceptable innovations in these Rules, the new elements which lay down an insupportable weight, much too burdensome, opposed to Canon Law or the life of perfection which religious should lead. I only ask to be enlightened by those to whom God gives more enlightenment so that these Rules, which are only provisional, may be accepted by everyone as a gift from heaven.
5. The new Constitutions, if approved, contain two or three propositions which will not apply to those who made their vows according to the former Constitutions, as, for example, the two-year novitiate, the third year of formation. The law does not have a retroactive effect. Here, then, Father, is my response, and I like to think that it is such as to give satisfaction to the most demanding critics. But while the process is being forwarded to Rome, we wait on its decision. I have a copy of the memorandum sent there. St. Vincent de Paul used to say that he was afraid of certain people among his members who described themselves as theologians since with their theology they would not be slow in proving that they were not bound to any perfection!!!

As for your novices, follow the former Constitutions, making use of the new ones where they conform to the previous ones. The same holds for the new parts of the common and particular Rules. I believe that you will find little which is in serious opposition to the former Rules. If so, let me know about it.

Fr. Jouët leaves for Quito on the 26th of this month with Bishop Macchi, the new Apostolic Delegate of Ecuador. He (Jouët) will meet Fr. Morisseau and deal with all the problems.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father,

Issoudun, April 6, 1889

Fr. Jouët has been writing letter after letter to me saying that Fr. Vaudon's presence in Rome is no longer acceptable and that it is absolutely imperative to recall him at Easter. And since Fr. Vaudon was appointed Superior in Rome by the Council, it's for the Assistants to decide this issue.

1. Is it your view that Fr. Vaudon should be recalled? You are aware of what happened? Fr. Jouët tells me that this good priest is no longer supported, his presence among our young men more disadvantageous than helpful. What then if this is also your view?

2. Who is to replace him? Fr. Jouët leaves for Ecuador with the new Apostolic Delegate, Bishop Macchi, on the 26th of this month. They need to leave Rome on the 16th or 20th of this month for Paris and then on to Bordeaux for embarkation.

Fr. Jouët seems to think that no-one should replace Fr. Vaudon, leaving it to be understood that Fr. Védère would on his own meet the need, something which is unthinkable. In any event, if someone is sent there, Fr. Jouët is asking, even beseeching me, not to give him the title of Superior, but simply that of sub-prior(!), reserving the title of Superior or the Procurator General of the Society in Rome (Jouët himself). It would be helpful if you would go and replace him (Vaudon) for a period of time. Do you think that it's possible for you... and who would replace you while you were away? I think myself that it's Fr. Guyot who is best suited to spend two or 3 [sic] months in Rome, or Fr. Carrière, until the arrival of Fr. Jouët who will return to France at the beginning of October or the end of September. What are your thoughts on this? Do you see other possibilities? Let me have your observations and those of your colleagues on the new Rules. Underline the parts contrary to the former Constitutions, or in conflict with them, those, that is, which are obnoxious and unacceptable not only to a religious drawn to perfection but even to a mainstream religious. I was not aware that Antwerp had made complaints. Our Tilburg confrères who live among clergy who like to take it easy perhaps share the views of rue Terloo. I ignore it.

Cheerio, my friend.

Issoudun, April 13, 1889

Dear Father,

1. You have but one thing to do, and that is to wait for Bishop Macchi and embark with him from Saint Nazaire on the 10th of May.
2. I see no point whatsoever in travelling on to Micronesia, Melanesia and Australia. If the Holy Father had a confidential mission for you to undertake, that would be something else. It's already quite a lot that you are away for 5 or 6 months while going to Quito. The Rome house and the business of the Procure will be greatly affected by your absence. In any event, I haven't myself any right to give you permission for a world tour; the Assistants would need to be consulted.
3. Fr. Piperon has written to me saying that he cannot leave his novitiate and his responsibility for the house in the immediate future since he has nobody to replace him. I haven't had a reply from Fr. Guyot. Bring forward by one day the departure of Bishop Macchi and I shall call the Assistants to Issoudun to examine the issues weighing on us.
4. I would very much like to recall Fr. Vaudon to Issoudun for Easter, and we shall see what the Council decides on his position. I am not in any way against his being changed, but, again, one must see to it that everything is done according to the regulations.

5. My friend, why are you so obstinate in making me responsible for all your problems in Rome? Your letters are full of the following remarks: "I do so much for you and you do absolutely nothing for me... on the contrary... You turn down everything I ask, etc.". These complaints from your side are unfair... You know that I am alone, left to myself, crushed by the weight of terribly burdensome work, sacrificing myself night and day for the good of the Society... and you want me to undertake and deal myself alone with the most serious issues which are the remit of the Council.

6. I am forwarding a further 200 francs (627 euros supplementing the 200 masses at 4.70 euros) to complete the 200 masses at 1 franc, 50 centimes which you want to give to the Secretary for Indulgences. I would have thought that the Rome house would have contributed sufficiently.

7. I don't any longer know how to deal with you. I said to you that if 9 o'clock is not a convenient time for your mass for the dead you might care to advance it to 11 o'clock if you thought it suitable. What do you want more clearly stated than this?

8. I want to thank you for initiating the Constitutions' issue (approval), and for achieving success against the anonymous memorandum. You tell me to send you on my reply to the anonymous memorandum, your own and the memorandum in question. I don't have any of these; I cannot understand you. When sending on to you my reply to the memorandum, I asked you to make a copy of it as I didn't have another one; consequently you have your reply to the memorandum and a copy of the memorandum itself. I cannot understand why you are asking me again for it. You state that it will again be necessary to send here ten copies of the Constitutions; are they the new or old ones? I have already sent you twelve copies of the new Constitutions. Try and find out if the anonymous memorandum came from Belgium. I hope that you will come to know before you leave (for Quito) the name of the consultant involved in our Constitutions – you would need to see him.

9. Try before you leave to get my powers (of government) and bring them with you if it's possible; this matter will, at least, have been seen to.

10. If you can also bring along with you the copy of my reply to the anonymous memorandum, I shall be greatly pleased. I haven't had the time to take up the issue again.

I thank all your Rome confrères, and yourself also, for your good wishes on the feast (that of St. Jules, April 12).

Dear Fr. Vaudon,

1. I sincerely thank you for your good wishes (in relation to Chevalier's feast day of St. Jules); thank on my behalf the good scholastics and Petite Oeuvre youngsters for what they have written to me.

2. I understand, my friend, your worries and disappointments. The situation in which you find yourself at the present time in Rome is difficult if not to say unsustainable. Fr. Jouët cannot believe or accept that he is no longer Superior. He absolutely wants things to become again just like they were before he left. The Council needs to have this issue clarified; I foresee a meeting during Easter week or the week after the first Sunday after Easter (Quasimodo). Come and rest yourself in Issoudun where the change of air will do you good in every respect; we shall chat together and you will clarify quite a number of issues with (for) me. If your Rome posting is boring, disagreeable and damaging to your health, I shall do my utmost to have you stay with me here if that is to your liking. Please, do not in any way feel discouraged; you know how much I like you, respect you and appreciate you; that's enough to reassure you. You will leave Rome on Easter Monday (April 22) and come directly to Issoudun unless you need to stop over in Paris or elsewhere.

This letter is strictly confidential and for yourself alone. You simply need say that you are tired, and asked to come and rest at Issoudun, and I gave you permission or, indeed, that I asked you to come here to do some preaching during the month of Mary (May).

Until shortly, then. Cheerio, my friend.

Fr. Jouët wrote to me saying that it seemed appropriate for Brother Mathieu, already a sub-deacon, to be ordained to the diaconate on Holy Saturday and that I should send him a telegram in the affirmative if I saw no obstacles to the contrary. I thought that this matter had been already agreed with you and had sent you a telegram stating "Yes". I was under the impression that it was all about shortly having an additional priest to help out in the house. I am sorry about all this. Pathetic humanity...

Dear Father,

Mr. Mendoza's letter to you takes me aback. On three occasions this worthy gentleman has written to me to say that he is coming to Issoudun and thrice he writes that he cannot come. Then I wrote to him saying that I was going to Paris at the end of March; he came to see me at rue de Calais where he told me that his brother and sister were conspiring against him and wanted to withhold his fortune from him and that his father, at the age of 85, could not live much longer and, accordingly, he enquired of me if it wouldn't be better to await his death, following which, in control of his fortune, he would, nevertheless, join our Society and achieve some good for it. I replied that as he was not yet baptized and hadn't learned a word of Latin, he should immediately prepare for baptism and take instructions while waiting for his father's death, following which, now being a Christian and knowing some Latin, he would no longer be held back from the study of philosophy and theology and could become a Missionary of the Sacred Heart. He accepted this decision as meeting his wishes, promising me that he would set himself to work straightaway.

Meanwhile, his letter which you have passed on to me defies explanation. Here's a pathetic young man who doesn't know what he wants.

2. I am very sorry to hear about Fr. Védère's illness. I am praying a great deal for him and will continue to do so. I hope it will not be anything serious.
3. You assert that I continue to run things from afar, even the Rome house in details. Could you disengage from the nonsensical on this issue?
4. As I said to you yesterday, I am recalling Fr. Vaudon from Rome to Issoudun. I told him to leave Rome on Easter Monday. Once he has left you will arrange matters in the house as you think fit and then, at least, you will no longer level reproaches at me. You can take it that the departure of Fr. Vaudon is definitive since I am certain that the priests who are Council members will not vote for his return. It is, then, a settled issue.
5. See to it that you are in Paris or Issoudun no later than May 7 or 8 since the departure from Saint Nazaire is on the 10th. Do your utmost to persuade Bishop Macchi to come to Issoudun.
6. The Ecuador Consul, Doris, avoids mentioning that his Government will meet the costs of the two bookings (Jouët and Macchi), simply stating that he has made the bookings and the price will cost so much... It's his way of saying that we are not getting anything.

Issoudun, April 15, 1889

Dear Father,

1. I am not asking you to replace Fr. Vaudon in Rome definitively as Superior, but I am simply submitting to you Fr. Jouët's request since he would like to see Fr. Vaudon recalled and you to go to Rome for a month or, for example, in order to restore morale and study the situation.

2. Aware of Fr. Jouët's likely displeasure if he wasn't satisfied in seeing Fr. Vaudon recalled, whose presence in Rome would be unacceptable to him during his trip to Quito, and on the other hand knowing how the position of Fr. Vaudon in Rome is difficult and weakened in the face of this opposition from Fr. Jouët, I asked Fr. Vaudon to come to Issoudun for the Easter holidays for a rest and also to bring us up to date on the Rome house. We shall then come to a decision; the poor man must in no way return to Rome.

Fr. Jouët, who embarks for Quito on the 10th of May, will be at Issoudun during the first week in May. I am about to ask Fr. Guyot to come here, and also Fr. Delaporte, and you will be here as well. We shall discuss what's for and against, and we shall offer our views. I shall let you know the exact date of this meeting.

3. Fr. Klotz (in charge of the Salzburg house), in order to ease things for you, only wishes to have the German scholastics and novices, as well as the brothers who are natives of this country. We shall consider this matter at the Council meeting.

4. I would like the Receiver of Properties to accept your proposals for the exchange of ground; if not, do the best you can.

5. The memorandum sent to Rome about the Rules was not signed, remaining anonymous. Its authors, then, could deny all knowledge of it. There is nothing loyal about this. But the thrust of this memorandum, and the arguments on which our young confrères base themselves in order to reject these Rules, are identical, leading one to think that the document's source was rue Terloo.

It is a sad and unhappy augury for the future when young inexperienced religious challenge the authority and the rights of the Society's founder to perfect his work where it is not yet fully achieved, and counter what is uncertain in order to forestall arbitrariness, improve on what is imperfect, or provide new ways of attaining perfection more assuredly.

What will it be like when I am gone and also the pioneer priests of the Congregation? And, indeed, my friend, the opposition of these young men, so full of themselves, makes me repeat what one of the fathers at the last Council (Vatican I) said to the opponents of Infallibility: "That which seemed to be no more than opportune has become necessary." Indeed, it is more a necessity than ever that we set out things very well, and have serious, well defined, regulations which will assure the future of our Society...

Yes, my friend, the Rules are definitive and promulgated until the next Chapter, which is to say that one must loyally put them into practice. And then the Chapter will, in its wisdom, weigh the comments passed to it and take into consideration what it judges to be pertinent. And, thereafter, the new edition of the Rules, harmonized with the new Constitutions, will be officially promulgated by the Chapter, everything there is to say taken into account.

I shall reply tomorrow to our dear confrères' letter. Keep on, Father, having the new Rules observed, having in mind that it is a serious undertaking and there's no going back.

6. If you think so, take in the young man from Seraing (the town near Liège where the first steam railway engine on the European Continent was built and saw service from 1835).

7. Many thanks for your good wishes and thank on my behalf all the confrères, the scholastics, novices, brothers, as well as the Petite Oeuvre youngsters.

8. The Pope has appointed Fr. Verjus Vicar Apostolic, with episcopal status, of New Britain, the Solomon Islands, etc. Praised be the Sacred Heart!

But what is to be done because Fr. Jouët doesn't want anyone, writing to me saying that the Rome house can get by. We shall see how that goes, especially while he is away in Quito... Reverend Father,

This letter is in two parts, the first written by F.X. Maillard, the second by Chevalier.

We need for the ordinations in Issoudun on the 26th of May next the dispensations 'extra tempora and interstices' (approval of the intervals between ordination to different orders). The Very Rev. Superior General would like to have general indults for these purposes and if it isn't possible to have them in perpetuity, to request them for five years, and they will be renewed when that time comes. If what Fr. General would like cannot be granted, ask, then, for the extra tempora dispensation on May 26, the 5th Sunday after Easter.

As for the 'interstices' dispensation, if the names are required let us know immediately; the petitions will be made and we shall let you know the number of dispensations to ask for.

The printer is fretfully waiting for the proofs of the 'Little journey by way of Purgatory'.

Please accept, Father, my renewed avowal of my deepest regard in C.J.

F.X. Maillard, MSC.

Seen and approved.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I am pleased to gather that Fr. Védère is getting better. Since Fr. Vaudon is leaving Rome next Monday, and yourself twelve days or so later, who is going to replace Father Védère if he is still laid up? Who will look after the finances, the scholastics, Petite Oeuvre, the sacristy, the Association, the Annals, the administration and direction of the house?... This is a serious issue no matter what happens, and you need to give it serious thought.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father Barral,

Thank you for your good wishes for the feast (Easter). I am pleased with the news you have for me about our Barcelona house and its good future prospects. May the Lord be praised! I have always wanted and hoped for a serious undertaking in Spain. May you shortly have 30 or 40 youngsters! I am happy to tell you that the Pope has appointed dear Fr. Verjus as Vicar Apostolic of New Britain and the Solomon Islands; this dear child never doubted his elevation. Fr. Jouët is sailing to Quito on May 10 with Brother Bouvier who will be ordained to the priesthood on Holy Saturday. He (Jouët) is going there on visitation and Fr. Bouvier will stay there. They will be accompanied by Bishop Macchi, the new Apostolic Delegate to Ecuador. Fr. Védère is quite ill. Pray for him.

Dear Father,

1. I wouldn't wish it more than that Fr. Miniot go to Rome, but I can foresee strong opposition coming from Fr. Delaporte. We shall discuss this when you are in Paris.
2. What day do you think you will be in Paris? Monday, May 6 or Tuesday May 7th; later?
3. Should I get a return ticket for you?
4. Do not be overly persuasive about getting Bishop Macchi to visit Issoudun. Let him be at ease. I can meet him in Paris if you think it worthwhile.

Write to Fr. Delaporte letting him know the day of his (Macchi's) arrival.

Dear Father,

1. I am forwarding an apostolic supplication from the Archbishop of Bourges for the (ordination) indult extra tempora et interstices (see above, article 1707). His Grace thinks that with his supplication we shall be more favourably answered.
2. You tell me, Father, to send Fr. Miniot to you straightaway so that you can bring him up to date on everything before you leave. You know well that by myself alone I cannot bring this change about, or by myself take from Fr. Vaudon his title as Superior which the Council conferred on him. You would want me, then, to put myself in danger once more of being denounced to Rome; the Assistants are jealously conscious of their authority as you know better than anyone else. Why should we act outside the Rules when it is easy to attain the same aim by acting in keeping with the Constitutions? When we meet again for a Council meeting in early May you can put forward your reasons for introducing the changes which you deem necessary for the common good, and I have no doubt that the Council will agree. Fr. Miniot will not leave for Rome, then, until the Council has discussed the matter. You will give him your instructions either at Paris or Issoudun.
3. I have never been against, and now less so than ever, Fr. Védère's visit over a number of days to his elderly father. But he must wait until Fr. Miniot arrives in Rome. When Fr. Védère visits his family he will go straight from Rome to Lourdes without travelling by way of Paris and Issoudun, this being the prudent thing to do.

L 18890517

Issoudun, May 17, 1889

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I am forwarding a letter from Fr. Piperon to you, and the translation of another written by Brother Nicolas. He presents in his letter a serious accusation against Fr. Derichemont since it is only to him that he can be referring, so it seems to me. Deal with it in keeping with your role as Visitor, following procedures. Then make a serious investigation about the relationship Brother Nicolas speaks of, and try to save the vocation of this poor Brother Nicolas and also Brother Xavier who must equally be in danger. If the behaviour of Fr. Derichemont is what I take it to be, it is quite impossible not only to have him as a Superior, but even to leave him in the parish; he would damage himself there, the others also, and lastingly damage our reputation. What is to be done? I am very embarrassed. Discuss it with Fr. Morisseau. Fr. Roussel is also a pathetic character, lacking in judgment, pretentious, unmortified (ascetically), no great friend of the Rule. For the rest, the outrageous behaviour of Fathers Roussel and Derichemont with respect to Fr. Morisseau, for whom they have no regard and obey insolently, merely proves that they are pathetic religious, since for all Fr. Morisseau's drawbacks and problems, he is, nevertheless, the Superior and the repository of authority.

Nicolas Reichert, from Wurzburg, Germany, went to Quito with Fr. Morisseau in May 1887; he was still there when he left the Society on January 22, 1892.

It has to be said that these two young men and, particularly so, Fr. Derichemont have lost all religious, indeed Christian, feelings when so behaving, habitually infringing their Rules and Constitutions. It must be so, especially with Fr. Derichemont, that there is some hidden moral weakness which, if what Brother Nicolas says is true, could explain everything. These young religious are in need of a good retreat, a total conversion. Can you arrange it for them? And a serious return to proper religious life. They need a firm Superior, with discipline to be taken seriously; that is to say taking it upon themselves to keep point by point our Rules, with the utmost fidelity. It's all there! If things go on like this, it would be so much better to give up the parish and be satisfied with lesser involvement where the religious life can be seriously lived, or else leave Ecuador altogether since, otherwise, everything will end in public scandal and our Sacred Heart Society will be lastingly disgraced in South America. Who can be appointed Superior in Quito? Fr. Derichemont might, perhaps, have been suitable if his behaviour had been more religious and moral; but what can one do with him?... How worthwhile would Fr. Barral be? (François Barral, in Quito, as distinct from his brother Pierre, formerly at Salzburg, recently at Barcelona.) Is he a better, more serious, wise and prudent religious?... Would he have sufficient authority, control, to have the Rules respected and observed? How many question marks come to the fore! Would Fr. Heriault be suitable as Superior if Fathers Derichemont and Barral are not acceptable? Or, indeed, should we leave the parish and make do with a little college (school) where our confrères would have no close contact with people, especially women?...

Convey my good wishes to Bishop Ordonez, and my regards to all.

Cheerio, my friend. Here there's nothing to report.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Father,

In my circular letter of last March I asked you to forward an account of the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart's progress from the foundation of your house until the present time.

I asked for:

1. the number in the Association;

2. insofar as possible the number of petitions and acts of thanksgiving. Since the feast of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart is drawing near, and as yet we haven't received anything, I am requesting you to send us as soon as possible as complete a statement as you can manage. If among your acts of thanksgiving you have quite remarkable presentations, would you kindly provide a description of them and include them in what you are sending on.

I would like to have at the same time, or later for the feast of the Sacred Heart (June 28), an account of the development of the St. Joseph Archconfraternity as this will be needed for the Jubilation feasts.

Please accept my kind regards in C.J.

Issoudun, May 21, 1889

Dear Fr. Henri,

1. It will give me pleasure to go and see the kind Venray Sisters when I am in Tilburg. I shall do my best to be there for the first week in June.

2. I am about to write to the parish priest of Winssen (Winsum) to thank him for his lovely gift. But when will Bishop Verjus get it?...

3. I am sorry that Fr. Hartzler is so exhausted. He must take care of himself; it is imperative that he does so and I am appointing you as his infirmarian. Look after him.

4. The last outline (of the plans) sent from Tilburg, and which I am returning to you, does not look well organized to me. The entry from one side to the other through this long cloister is not happily realized; it makes it so that one can touch with a finger the unevenness of both cloisters. This is disgraceful, and with respect to a new building and an overall plan, this should not be happening. Cloister 'A' is too narrow, it is lacking in both air and light and will give rise, for this reason, to humidity. If you look at the overall plan, which I am returning to you, it seems to me that the community chapel should go down to the basement, 'C', and intersect the two cloisters.

You need at least 5 altars. Do not forget that your lecture rooms, your halls of study and recreation, refectory, etc., should be on the ground floor. To have it otherwise would be a mistake. In returning your plans I have drawn up the lineaments of a general plan for you which presents my views. Meanwhile carry on as best it seems to you. I shall not be held responsible for the drawbacks which you will be pointing out later – just as at Antwerp.

Cheerio, Father.

Issoudun, May 26, 1889

Dear Father,

Our venerable Fr. Superior has received Fr. Peeter's letter giving a report on the progress of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Archconfraternity since the foundation of the Tilburg house. Fr. General is very happy with the number of members and, particularly so, with the number of subscribers. Your Annals have truly been marvellously successful, for which we thank the Sacred Heart and Our Lady, and it is our hope that there will be more and more progress.

From Fr. Peeter's letter it is to be gathered that he is very busy, and one cannot in all fairness ask for more from him. Nevertheless, Fr. Superior's wish is that the Annals of each country, following the example of the Issoudun Annals, should provide each month:

1. the number of members;
2. the number of thanksgiving acts;
3. the number of intentions.

Then, at the end of the year, Issoudun has no more to do than bring together the Annals of each country and add the total figure. Could you not, perhaps, find among the brothers someone who can read and write Flemish, and help Fr. Peeters? This is the way things are done in Issoudun: Brother Alexander (Délimoges) puts aside all the separate printed sheets or the notifications enclosed in the letters containing the intentions; at the end of the month he adds them up. Since these separated sheets, however, do not convey all the petitions because in almost all the letters there is an admixture with other things, he doubles the figures he finds when adding up everything. By this means we have a figure which approximates very closely to that reality which cannot be mathematically calculated.

As for the acts of thanksgiving, the number given is quite correct since at the top of each letter (of thanksgiving) the a.g. is written, and one puts all these aside, following which each week these letters are sent to someone whose role it is to make a résumé of these acts of thanksgiving on a register ad hoc. (Specifically for this, such a register can be seen at the Issoudun Chevalier Museum.) Where the writing is of interest or worthwhile, the transcription is complete and as such can be (are) read from the pulpit each Sunday.

Try then, Father, to do the same thing yourselves; the good Lord will bless this endeavour which, if performed in the same way in each of our other houses, would help better to follow the progress of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Archconfraternity. Here included you will find my authorization for the sale of your house.

With my most warm regards in C.J. On behalf of Fr. Chevalier,

I am returning to you the prospectus changed in keeping with the suggestions of Fr. Superior (Chevalier). Your ideas are very good and for quite sometime I have thought myself that, effectively, there should be a difference between associates, promoters, supporters and foundation members, but I never set out to change things and set up something quite distinct. You have done this work. It is excellent; I am quite happy about it and Reverend Father Superior approves of your modified plan which I produce in your letter which I am returning to you. Could you not consider adding to your proposal something specific about the ordinary promoters? Try to put down something, and then send on to us the translation of your prospectus such as you are thinking of printing; Fr. (General) will add his signature and it will be returned to you. I am about to write to the parish priest at Bourges Cathedral asking him to preach on the evening of the feast of the Sacred Heart. B 18890615

To His Grace Guisepe I. Ordonez, Archbishop of Quito.

Issoudun, June 15, 1889

Your Grace,

I hasten to inform Your Grace of the arrival of the letter which I am honoured to receive from Your Grace and for which kindness on your part I wish to thank you. Your Grace's letter contains a number of issues to which I cannot but reply.

1. You say, Your Grace, that Fr. Morisseau acted in agreement with me by refusing to engage in the work on the basilica, or, at least, that was your understanding of it. I regret that I have to say to Your Grace that you were misled since I never advised that work should cease on the basilica's construction, and this in keeping with the terms agreed on in our contract. It is certainly true, Your Grace, that I sent on to you through my confrères on their way to Quito a plan for the basilica which I had set out both as regards area and height, leaving it to the committee to examine and consider if it could be realised or not. That was the situation when you received the snapshot of the reliquary offered by Ecuador to the Holy Father, being the new basilica in diminutive form. Your Grace was so happy about this that you wrote on April 21, 1888: "We are intent on taking up this plan, but on condition that Your Reverence... has this plan executed in exact detail, and with detailed instructions. We need in miniature, moreover, an adequate plan of the whole basilica either in wood or concrete such as it should be carried out, with all problems solved, and being so presented piecemeal that the architect can study it..."

I sent these instructions straightaway to our architect in Paris to get his advice and find out the price which their miniature would cost, because Your Grace had said to me that you would meet the cost of the preparatory expenses, and that I should let you know the amount of money you needed to send me. I immediately replied to Your Grace making known the approximate price. Moreover, I informed you that our architect, prior to drawing up a definite plan and model, needed to know the nature of the ground on which the basilica was to be built, the type of materials to be used, the price, the cost of labour, etc., petitioning Your Grace to send me on all this necessary information by return of post. I received nothing, and I still await Your Grace's reply.

According to your letter of April 21, 1888, Your Grace, work on the basilica should have begun within a month or two and we were given to understand, according to the conditions of the contract, that the work would take place under our supervision. And now Your Grace, without reference to me, calls on another Congregation to undertake this work. You inform me that Fr. Morisseau absolutely refused to co-operate in this undertaking; in the first place it would be appropriate to ascertain whether or not the co-operation called for is actually that specified in the contract, or if it isn't more demanding, but in any event Fr. Morisseau's refusal was not a sufficient explanation since I should be involved also. And in the event of a misunderstanding, the issue should be submitted to the Holy Father (Article 12 of the contract); but so far as I am aware nothing of this nature was undertaken.

2. You inform me, Your Grace, that you brought to the attention of my confrères, and particularly so Fr. Morisseau, the obligation which was theirs by contract to undertake work on the basilica, but the Superior as well as the others expressed on several occasions their firm conviction not to be made responsible for it (the basilica). The contract, Your Grace, imposed no obligation on my confrères to take responsibility for the building of the basilica. Here are the terms of the contract signed by Your Grace:

Article 6

A control committee will be set up under the direction of His Grace and with the involvement of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart to be responsible for the building of the national basilica of the Sacred Heart at Quito, having as its purpose the choice of a site for the basilica, drawing up the plans, putting forward a model, and having the work carried out in keeping with the resources which such a work nationally inspired could provide.

Article 7

Through the above mentioned committee, His Grace would provide all the requirements needed for the organization and successful outcome of this work.

Article 8

The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart whose Superior will be by right a member of this committee, will involve themselves as well with the spiritual side of things, that is to say any correspondence as regards devotion to the Sacred Heart, the promotion and editing of their Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Annals, and St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, these Annals being focused also on a work of national interest, that of setting up and overseeing the Petite Oeuvre of the Sacred Heart for missionary vocations.

Article 9

All the contributions received by the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart towards the construction and decoration of the basilica will be registered and forwarded to the Archbishop who will pass them on to the committee's treasurer.

There, Your Grace, are all the prerequisites for the building of the basilica. And I nowhere find a word laying an obligation on my confrères to undertake the construction of this colossal undertaking. It is the responsibility of the committee set up by Your Grace, and your own responsibility. The Missionaries of the Sacred Heart are held to do no more than give their support, and this within the terms laid down in the contract. It is not their responsibility, then, to take the initiative with regard to this undertaking, or take the responsibility for it on themselves.

In keeping with the contract, they are required to co-operate with Your Grace in setting up a committee and I very much doubt if they were consulted about this. Moreover, the Superior should be as of right a member of this committee... Has this proposal ever been put to him? This, I would very much doubt also...

According to Your Grace's letter, our confrères would appear to have caused nothing but annoyance to Your Grace without providing the services you were entitled to expect. If this complaint was well founded, I should be greatly disappointed, but the problems which you experienced, Your Grace, and indeliberately without doubt, could have had their explanation through insufficient knowledge of the country's language, the customs and life-style, likewise in their isolation and, particularly so, in being inexperienced. As for what they contributed, it seems to me that it is difficult to overlook it. On Your Grace's own admission, the Sagrario was a broken down, forsaken parish where nobody, so to say, came, whereas presently, under the direction of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, this very parish has begun to flourish, being one of the most frequented and best looked after in Quito. My confrères spend the whole day hearing confessions, catechizing, visiting the sick of every kind, even in times of epidemics, and during the night, unsparing of their health in the service of the Archbishop's city. I believe, Your Grace, that this devotedness is very much appreciated. I am not referring to Fr. (François) Barral who gives himself so wholeheartedly, without any holding back, to the 1,500 pupils of the Brothers of the Christian Schools (De La Salle), so much so that the good Brother Director wrote quite recently a letter to me extolling the zeal, piety, wisdom and able leadership of this young confrère who knew how to restore morale and attendance at the Sacraments among these youngsters, something no other chaplain up to now had been able to do. It occurs to me then, Your Grace, that you have with all this many contributions made in a short amount of time to your good diocesan people.

What beneficial outcome is there in all this for our mother house? Nothing. The Quito foundation has cost us at least 12,000 francs (about 37,630 euros), and without anything by way of compensation and, indeed, it would be very appropriate if we were repaid for this expense. Several of my confrères have been sent to Quito at the request of Your Grace. I myself paid the expenses of the trip, and yet according to Article 2 of the contract, these expenses should be shared on both sides. The undertakings to which my confrères have committed themselves up to now are all to the advantage of your episcopal See, Your Grace, and this is something which must be frankly recognized.

But what is most difficult for me to accept is that, despite commitment to every challenge, the problems, the exhaustion, the sickness, the privations of my colleagues, their selflessness and commitment to do as much good as possible, we do not have Your Grace's good will or support. This state of affairs, if things don't improve, cannot be allowed to continue much longer.

Fr. Jouët, whom I am sending out as Visitor, and it's a great sacrifice on my part, Your Grace, to do so, will appraise himself of the situation on the spot and will discuss with Your Grace, knowing your good will and conciliatory spirit, the resolution of the issues, and establish for us a respected position in Quito so that our Society of the Sacred Heart can carry out successfully the worthy mission entrusted to it.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's deeply respectful, very humble, obedient servant and son in C.J.

Dear Father,

I thank you appreciatively for the letter sent to me from Martinique, and for the lines written by dear Fr. Bouvier. I gather that the rest of the journey went very well.

Bouvier, born La Fliche, France, February 8, 1864, ordained priest April 20, 1889, just before he left for Quito. He died at Angers, February 23, 1937.

At the same time as yours I had a letter from Archbishop Ordonez who tries to justify himself for calling upon another Congregation to take charge of the basilica. The reasons adduced are not what they claim to be, being unacceptable. I am sending his letter on to you which you can keep as well as the reply I sent to him; you will take note of it and make a copy of it if you think it opportune. At the end of his letter the Archbishop says that he will suggest other work of great importance for the glory of God and which our confrères could take charge of. One must first of all find out what these undertakings are. Commit yourself to nothing, then, without informing me first.

The Archbishop is only concerned about his own interests, and is not particularly concerned about those of our Congregation. He has already fooled us and behaved cavalierly where we are concerned. We must, then, stand up to him. In any case we haven't any new priests to make available to him. We must try and have an undertaking of our own which will serve the interests of our Congregation and have, if possible, a foundation of our own so that we can become independent. And if our situation becomes intolerable we shall try and go elsewhere in South America. Just the same I hope that we shall end up with a secure foundation in Quito. I am sending you on the letters I have had from Fathers Morisseau and Derichemont.

My good wishes to all.
Cheerio, my friend.
Wholly yours in C.J.
Look after yourself.

Dear Father,

1. I would very much like to be present at your ordinations, but the first Sunday in July seems quite difficult for me. I shall be with you wholeheartedly.

2. You tell me that with expenses between 2,000 and 3,000 francs (about 9,480 euros) you could set up at Antwerp a place for your scholasticate. I believe, as it so happens, our scholasticate would be better placed at Antwerp than at Issoudun for the time being. Send on to me, then, the plans and proposals you are thinking of carrying out. I shall look at them and send you a reply.

I am depending on you for the preaching of our annual retreat, either in August or September, whichever is more convenient for you. I have it in mind to bring together the Superiors of our houses which are not too distant, such as, for example, Tilburg, Salzburg, Glastonbury, Barcelona... What do you think?

Issoudun, June 24, 1889

Your Grace,

You will not have forgotten the promise you so kindly made to me about coming to celebrate with us on Friday next the lovely feast of the Sacred Heart which this year betokens a double solemnity, being the second centenary of Our Lord's appearance to Blessed (now St.) Margaret Mary (Alacoque) and the 25th anniversary of the foundation of the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association, while Tuesday, July 2, is the anniversary of the consecration of our basilica of the Sacred Heart and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. You have kindly agreed, Your Grace, to add these words: "If I cannot be present at your feasts, the Bishop of Synope will take my place." We look forward anticipately to this visit so longed for.

Archbishop Marchal, conscious of his failing health, was making use of his brother, Bishop Auguste, both for functions and in running the archdiocese. See Guy Devailly, Le diocèse de Bourges. Paris, Letouzey & Ané, p.200 and following.

I have already had the privilege of drawing Your Grace's attention to the necessity in which we find ourselves of setting up a serious and proper scholasticate for our young confrères since we cannot continue sending all of them to study in Rome. They are becoming too numerous, and the expenses involved would be quite considerable; 25 of these young men coming to the end of their novitiate makes it absolutely imperative that we see to this matter.

May I allow myself to ask Your Grace if I might not, with the permission of the Government, put up for sale the Benoît house and we would present ourselves as purchasers? This, perhaps, in every aspect, would be the most desirable solution to the problem; if not we would try and have our scholasticate set up either at Antwerp or Barcelona.

I have the honour to be, with deepest respect, Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant and son in C.J.

Issoudun, June 30, 1889

Dear Father Piperon,

1. I am so sorry to hear that Fr. Hartzer is quite seriously ill. He has been coughing a great deal for quite sometime. If urgent measures are not taken, the illness will get worse and we are going to lose him. I think that we should send him to take the waters at Cauterets or at Eaux-Bonnes. (The first is in the Eastern Pyrénées, the second in the Atlantic Pyrénées specializing in respiratory ailments and rheumatism.) See the doctor as it's time to act and he should leave as soon as possible.

2. We cannot, without building, conveniently set up a scholasticate at Issoudun. Our young men would be living too much on top of each other; discipline and religious life would greatly suffer. Meanwhile, while awaiting Chezal-Benoît to be ours, and I am optimistic that we shall not have to wait very long, the scholasticate should best stay with you. If you could take over the old house with little expense, it would provisionally suit us for one or two years. Then, afterwards, it could be useful to you for something else.

3. So long as you have not met your debts, do not think of building something. Those 60 or 70,000 francs (about 188,150 or 219,510 euros) which you are about to receive in compensation, should go towards paying what you owe. Despite this meeting of debts, you will still have a considerable sum to pay.

4. You might, perhaps, put your lay brothers in the buildings which are beside your gate, since it seems to me that with some repairs carried out you could set up a likely place there.

5. Yes, we shall try and send you the postulants the eve or the day before the eve of the Assumption so that you can have more time during the month of July.

Cheerio, Father.

We shall be praying for those being ordained. Fr. Jouët has written to me from Panama. Things are going well with them.

Issoudun, June 30, 1889

Your Grace,

Again I feel obliged to thank Your Grace for all your kindness to us. Your presence among us on Friday last brought us all great pleasure. That evening our huge church couldn't hold the numbers who wanted to be part of the ceremony. I hope it will be likewise next Tuesday for the closure of our Jubilee feasts. If Father Poternault were to come to Issoudun on Tuesday we could go together on Wednesday to Chezal-Benoît. I hope that the undertaking which Your Grace has so kindly approved of will come to fruition.

I have just at this moment received a letter from the President of the Propagation of the Faith Committee in Paris and it completely takes me aback. All the financial resources for our poor Oceania confrères are exhausted. Bishop Navarre is depending on a considerable allocation of funds for the two, perhaps the three, Vicariates; 74,800 francs are specified, but it is to be noted that from the sum 29,000 francs has to be deducted, what the committee had allocated to pay the costs of the journey when the Bishop left (France) with 12 or 15 new missionaries and religious of Our Lady. As well, a further 9,400 francs is deducted, what the Propaganda financial office sent me last October for the mission, and, accordingly, only 36,000 francs is being placed at my disposal. I say thirty-six thousand francs when these unfortunate deprived people, succumbing to the burdens of fatigue, devastated by fever, experiencing only privation, need at least 100,000 francs at this time.

I am shocked and upset. This is how one of the biggest missions, most difficult and needy, is regarded. What will the Council (for the Propagation of the Faith) be doing when our confrères will be dying one after the other through lack of resources, and we cannot send anything on to them...?

I have the honour to be with deepest respect and great appreciativeness, Your Grace's very humble and obedient servant and son in C.J.

I have been told that at the Sacred Heart one doesn't know whom to vote for and that people will be abstaining tomorrow. It seems to me that it wouldn't have been too much of a problem to come and discuss things with me. It would be downright foolish not to vote.

One should vote for Boulanger, and in voting for him one votes against those wicked people who ran us out, who ran Christ out of our schools, who enrolled our seminarians, etc., etc., etc. And eight days later you will vote again, this time for Mr. Martin, a Conservative, who will take Boulanger's place. This is a protest vote. Be good enough to read this letter to your confrères and let nobody hold back from voting.

Issoudun, August 3, 1889

Dear Fr. Barral,

I know Canet-de-Mar and the property to which you refer; it is well situated and very attractive. When there was a discussion 5 years ago about buying it, we found ourselves faced with serious difficulties. In the first place it was weighed down with hypothetical issues, its ownership not obvious and its handing-over still less so. Before I bring it to the Council it is imperative:

1. that you clear up all these issues (as given above);
  2. that you send me the complete plan of the property, the amount of ground, the number of buildings;
  3. that you let me have a snapshot of the house since there must be one at Canet;
  4. that you inform me if the houses lived in at the present time by the Da Ana and Da Elemora families with their little gardens are included in the sale being arranged with us, and if, later, we shall be the owners;
  5. that you present in the overall map the positioning of the houses owned by these two women;
  6. that you let me know exactly if these buildings belong to Don Fernando or if they cannot be, as I believe, taken over or put to other uses by other buyers.
7. What is the condition of the buildings and what repairs need to be made? I do not think they are solid; these buildings have been built with very light materials.
8. You will find out if this 5-acre property will be made over to us open-handedly, that is to say without any legal expenses and registration fees for us, for 60,000 francs (about 188,150 euros), and if things are to the contrary what would the expenses of the sale come to?
9. I believe there are hidden rents weighing on this property which would have to be paid (in the public interest). Have yourself informed about this.
10. Shall we have in perpetuity the use of, and responsibility for, the pilgrims' chapel without any dependence on the local authority, or the parish church? This concession needs to be obtained since it would greatly improve our situation.

As soon as I have your reply to all these queries, I shall put the proposal to the Council and I have no doubt about its (their) acceptance.

Cheerio, Father.

Article 1734

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Visitor in Quito.

L 18890804 A

Issoudun, August 4, 1889

Dear Father Jouët,

I received your second letter which completes the interview you had with the Archbishop. Thanks a thousand. His Grace in the reply you forward to me declares... that he no longer has any problem about renewing the contract which makes us responsible for the running of the basilica.

The contract doesn't mention anything quite like that. The direction of the basilica is not our responsibility, but that of a diocesan committee to which we contribute insofar as it is possible. Read over the contract again and weigh fully all its elements. Let us not become involved over and above the terms of the contract. For the rest, in the last letter I sent to you I gave you my reply to the Archbishop's letter. You should take note of my letter in which I set out, according to the terms of the contract, the kind of co-operation which concerns us. Take care to make this clear. Only under these conditions can things go ahead.

Since I only sent on the plan for the basilica and not the finished one, I asked the Archbishop to change it, cut down and reduce it if he thought it was too ambitious, and do whatever he considered best, and then proceed to give me his final thoughts, together with the type of materials to be used, the price of these materials and that of the work to be carried out, following which I would draw up a complete appraisal of the plan definitively presented by the committee, making available to him an approximate summary of this presentation. I have had no reply, and I still await it.

I am not at all surprised by what you tell me about Fr. R. (most likely Rousset). This young man has never inspired much confidence in me following his idleness (farniente, Chevalier writes in Italian) in Barcelona and his excessive propensity to take things easy. Yes, he (R.) will be best placed with Fr. Ramot (in Watertown) who is crying out for a bursar; you might take him to Watertown with you when you are leaving Quito. But when can you leave? You cannot do so before this house is set up, and with serious regularity of discipline, since it would be much better to leave the place altogether than to give rise to the same scandals. Your presence there is very much needed for some time to come in order to set the work going successfully and be morally sure of its success.

You might, also, take Fr. Derichemont with you to Watertown where he could be of some help to Fr. Ramot, or else have him sent back to Issoudun. You will judge for yourself what is the better course of action to take. I cannot for the time being tell you who will be Superior of Quito. I wrote to Fr. Casas (in Barcelona) asking him to come to see me in Issoudun. I would very much encourage him to accept, but I cannot, although hoping, answer for him. I shall write to you about it. But who can be appointed to Barcelona now that the work there is going ahead? What will the Council Fathers say when they will be meeting in Issoudun on September 20? Might Fr. Deidier (then in the Paris community) replace Fr. Casas in Spain? Fr. Morisseau seems agreeable to accepting the post which the administration (in Quito) is offering him, and so much better for the good of our Society and its future in Guayaquil! But the good Father would be very isolated; if Brother Xavier (Meyer) were to go with him it would be a better outcome for him than leaving the Congregation. You can see for yourself, then, that your continuing presence in Quito is very much a prerequisite for the time being under many considerations.

Before making any pronouncement about the basilica, we must find out, affirmatively or negatively if we can set up a serious foundation in Quito with a Superior who is able and about whom we can be confident, thereby avoiding any repetition of the unhappy experience we have just passed through. I shall write again as soon as I shall have further details. The distance is great. Fr. Léopold Hartzler in Tilburg is seriously ill with a pulmonary complaint; the doctors have given up hope for him, only giving him some weeks to live. We can only pray – this is disastrous.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I gather that Montfort which is next to the little MSC church has been bought by Fr. Jullien on our behalf as a residence. The price was 65,000 francs (about 203,830 euros), but he is only giving 50,000 francs (about 156,790 euros).

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Visitor in Quito.

Issoudun, August 16, 1889

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. Your latest letter made me very happy. Fr. Roussel would be of no use to Fr. Morisseau. Moreover, what would there be for him to do at Guayaquil, given that he has compromised himself? He would only annoy and compromise us once more; it would be much better, then, to send him to Father Ramot as you have anticipated, and he will provide more of a contribution than that to be had from Fr. Grom who is returning to France in order to renew his religious life which has become very weak. As soon as the Quito issues are put right and provide assurance for the future, you will go on from there to Watertown in your role of Visitor as in Quito, in keeping with the requirement of the new regulations. Fr. Ramot has been informed about this.
2. Meanwhile you will judge for yourself if Fr. Morisseau should stay as chaplain to the Picpus Sisters in Guayaquil; what services is he offering there to the Society? What advantage is there in it for us? Or if indeed it might not be better for him to return to France, or go to Barcelona where he might be of some use.
3. Don Fernando of Canet-de-Mar has handed over his property to our confrères in Barcelona, or rather to our Society, in very advantageous conditions. I am bringing Fr. Casas to Issoudun in order to discuss Quito with him. Fr. Guyot will also be at the meeting. Fr. Casas, while placing himself at my disposal for Quito, offered two points to reflect on which are worthwhile: the first being that he does not consider himself to be suitable as a parish priest and certainly not that of a parish as important as Sagrario; secondly he says that the Barcelona house, which begins to make progress, is likely to be disorganized because there is no longer anybody there to look after the association, or take charge of the Annals, deal with the Spanish. Moreover, who will take charge of Canet? Nobody. In the face of all these problems, we would hesitate to insist on anything.

This is what we have agreed on:

1. Send your Fr. Carrière as Superior and parish priest of Sagrario, knowing Italian he will quickly learn Spanish.
2. Send on to you with him Fr. Barral, brother to the one in Quito. You know him for being intelligent and energetic, and his savoir-faire will be made available to the Archbishop and the committee for the construction of the basilica, tapping resources, promoting the Annals and other propaganda undertakings, etc. The Archbishop will have Fr. Barral available for work on the basilica, dependent on him (the Archbishop) and responsible to him, being neither involved with the parish confessions or the youngsters and, therefore, wholly engaged with the work on the basilica.

Fr. Barral will be flattered by this gesture of confidence in him, aware that for this undertaking he is directly under the Archbishop and committee, whose orders he will carry out and advice he will follow. He will avoid any pitfalls and will set about justifying the confidence these gentlemen placed in him, I believe, and so also Fr. Guyot, that he (Barral) is the only one we have who can lead to a successful outcome the building of the national shrine, and in South America offer a real and efficacious thrust to the Sacred Heart devotion, to that of Our Lady and St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, and the souls in purgatory.

Fr. Barral knows a little about construction, architecture, and I am convinced that he will be greatly helpful towards building the basilica. If this arrangement is acceptable to you, and also to the Archbishop, send me a telegram saying YES, and I shall send the personnel on to you. I hope that you can persuade the Archbishop to meet the expenses of the trip, since, otherwise, Quito will be financially ruinous for us.

I am sending on to you at the same time FR. (sic) Peyrot who is currently a deacon; I am having him ordained priest, and he should not be involved in the parish, but with youngsters. Would not this be a moment to open a little college, offering French, Latin, Spanish and, perhaps, German? If Brother Xavier wanted to stay there, this could become an undertaking of the Society which could end up, perhaps, as a Quito foundation making us independent. The work of the Brothers of the Christian Schools (De La Salle) is not a work of our Society. We work on their behalf, and not for ourselves, although without doubt for the good Lord and for ourselves at the same time. There you have it, my friend, consider the situation and do your best.

4. August 18.

I received just now your second letter and also one from Fr. Derichemont. I have written a number of letters to you, one registered at the post office. I have had all of yours. I am pleased to know that Fr. Derichemont has not compromised himself. I have an enormous weight lifted from my heart. One has confused matters. It's Fr. Roussel who is the individual in question. If, following a good retreat, Fr. Derichemont wishes candidly and religiously to accept Fr. François Barral's authority, whom you are about to appoint as Superior, and which I wholeheartedly approve of, and if you think it best it would then be, perhaps, pointless to send Fr. Carrière there as Superior whose absence creates a void in Paris. Nevertheless, if you deem it to be necessary, I shall let you have him (Carrière) just the same.

But in the event of our leaving (having) Fr. François Barral as Superior, how would his brother, five years older, take to him as Superior? Would he seriously give way to him in that which has to do with his religious life? I hope and I am convinced that there will be good understanding between them. But it must not be the case that François weakens and is wanting in the exercise of authority over his brother, allowing him to do anything which comes into his head. Speak to François Barral. If matters can be advantageously arranged, there would be fewer changes, and this would be for the best, but before you come away you must be satisfied that all goes well and we are not likely to be faced once more with new disappointments. If you think it imperative to send me a telegram, judging that it should be Carrière, Barral, Peyrot, you will say: Yes. Or if you think that you should forego Carrière, you will send a telegraph: Barral, Peyrot. If the situation is not so urgent, you might write me a letter explaining your thinking on all this, instead of sending me a telegram.

5. The departure of the Saint Quentin priests is an embarrassment less for us. May the Lord be praised! God is good!

6. As for the Quito basilica, I am awaiting the replies to the questions I put to you in my last letter about the quality of the materials being used, and whether it is brick, stone, cut stone, which will be used. What is the cost of each material as it leaves the workers' hands? Are there sculptors (masons) on the spot, able tradesmen who can carry out this work, etc.? I am also waiting on the ground plan of the area where the basilica will be built. What are the dimensions envisaged for this basilica? Should the proposals in the plan I already sent to the Archbishop be followed, or are they to be changed as regards shape and dimension? What total length and size will it be? Is there iron to be found in the country or is it necessary to get it from America and France? What is likely to be the total cost of the basilica? Will one have to pay out a million or five million? It would be good to know this.

7. If Canon Metavelle wished to be associated with us and joined with us in a unified manner, we might have a better opportunity to succeed. What do you think?

8. I am forwarding you a long letter from Fr. Reyn about the Averbode issue. Here is something quite important, but Fr. Piperon is not in the least concerned about it, not even informing me that the Archbishop of Malines had received instructions from Rome about this issue. It was then I decided to make Fr. Reyn responsible for this matter. Let us hope for the best!

9. Fr. Hartzler is coming near the end, and there's no hope, so I am informed from Tilburg. He is a great loss! Nothing else of interest here.

Cheerio, my friend.

Wholly yours and greetings to all in C.J.

Very Reverend Father Superior,

I am sending you my accounts without the bills which I await. We are then 3,600 francs in debt, but we still have two or three months to pay this amount. You will see from my cash reserve that I have 1,436 francs, so I shall very likely need your help to pay this debt.

I hope, Father, that your wish to come and visit us after the Council meetings will this time become reality. Indeed, the best time for such a visit would be this very month itself. At the Council meeting, Father, I would like to think that you would not forget our house. Since I returned from Issoudun I took in some youngsters – 6, all paying a fee of 450 francs and the care of their clothes included. Here we are then with 33 youngsters and no English teacher! Last year I was promised Brother Lehane, but he left for America. (For Lehane, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late.) Fr. Piperon led me to expect two brothers from among the five English and Irish novices who are about to make their profession and a lay brother in addition, since our three brothers are fully occupied.

The fathers and brothers are making their retreat. Here our holidays end on September 15.

Please be kind enough, Father, to overlook my long delay in writing; and bless our little community.

Your humble servant in Corde Jesu.

Thank you for the permission granted for our novice. He is presently in Antwerp.

Dear Fr. Peeters,

I wrote a nice little letter to our dear invalid (L. Hartzler). We continually pray for him. Fr. Reyn has written to me that you have put up for approval the building of our new house for 106 florins, that is to say about 212,000 francs (about 664,800 euros). This sum appears outlandish to me. Is it the case that you have 212,000 francs in ready cash for such an undertaking? For I insist on your taking on no debts. I want you to build only within the limits of your resources. Moreover, not having, presently, a Superior who can concern himself with these undertakings, I would ask you not to begin anything, or suspend operations for the moment until there is a new Superior in charge of the house.

Be good enough, my friend, to forward to me immediately a copy of the finalized plan for these buildings, together with the estimates. I shall examine them with care. Please let us move slowly, avoiding any compromise by being excessively precipitate. In any event, I intend to go to Tilburg and examine things on the spot for myself.

Cheerio, Father. My regards to all.

Issoudun, August 21, 1889

Dear Father,

I note with pleasure that the good Lord is blessing your apostolate. Continue to be a good apostle of our works.

On the 27th of this month, at 8am, we are awaiting an Alsace-Lorraine pilgrimage of 1,660 people. The Bishop of Nancy will preside. They will spend the whole morning at Issoudun. The Archbishop of Bourges will, very likely, receive them. What a pity you cannot be there.

Fr. (Jouët) has written to me saying that agreement has been reached with the Archbishop of Quito. One would not want the issue going through judicial procedures in Rome. All our rights are being restored. The link between the Saint Quentin priests and Fr. Matavelle has crumpled like dust. They are in complete disarray; Archbishop Ordonez disengaged from them and threw them out on the street. They are coming back to France. The Archbishop and his committee have returned to the first proposal for the basilica. It's a big undertaking.

Cheerio, Father.

Dear Father Peeters,

1. My concern was that you would carry out your whole plan straightaway, and that was the reason I asked you if you had money in the bank.
2. I asked you to change the plans. You yourself from the beginning had foreseen my requirements. Send me, then, the overall plan indicating what is being done at the present moment. As for the estimate, I know the overall figure and that's enough.
3. I also fear that given the advancing, later, time of year, you will let yourselves be overtaken by the winter and your masons will be handicapped. That's why I asked you to suspend operations until next spring. I have my reservations about construction work done in Holland during this (winter) season. I think you will yourself have no regrets about this.
4. I continue to pray for our dear invalid (L. Hartzler).

L 18890826

Issoudun, August 26, 1889

Dear Father Jouët,

I am replying to your July 20 letter, as I have to all the others.

1. Yesterday I met Mr. Tarlier, the Bourges architect who built our Sacred Heart church, a very distinguished and able man. I showed him the plans for the Quito reliquary which are the same for the basilica; he was very pleased with them. The whole idea appeals greatly to him and he thinks it very achievable, convinced that it will result in something lovely and worthwhile, being an undertaking unique of its kind up to now, a prototype for all which will come after it around the world. This undertaking, he added, needs to be considered very carefully from the architectural point of view and in its execution. The plans of the reliquary which I presented to him are no more than a sketch of the building and not the finished plan; this is correct. Given the likelihood of earthquakes, Mr. Tarlier thinks that the foundations, the vaults, should be in iron if the building is not of massive size. And he wants to find out from you if there are iron mines in Ecuador. He wants to know for his estimate of the cost of the material. He asks that you find out if brick or stone is used in building, and if there is available cut stone or malleable stone easily cut, or hard stone such as in the Rome bridges, or marble and granite as at St. Paul's

Outside the Walls (basilica). He wants to know exactly the dimension of the basement. The plans I showed him measure 5,000 metres or half an acre; he finds these calculations quite considerable. To put these plans into effect, he says, would cost a good 15 to 20 million (francs; 47,040,000 to 62,720,000 euros). If Ecuador can in time find this amount of money, it would be marvellous, and one could build little by little as the financial resources became available. If, on the other hand, the committee considered that this amount of money was unrealistic (to find and spend), it would be better to hold back and remain within the confines of more modest plans (given the amount of money realistically available). While awaiting the completion of work on the basilica one would follow the same procedures as at Montmartre, having mass in a wooden chapel which would be also a pilgrimage centre.

The Sacred Heart Basilica, Montmartre was built between 1876 and 1910, approved legally in 1873, financed by national contributions; the interior is rich in mosaics.

2. Yes, the house you refer to would be very suitable for us. Try to find some benefactors, benefactresses, who will help you to purchase it; or let our confrères purchase it themselves if they are hopeful about being able to pay for it. It would be in a nice position on its own suitable either for a Petite Oeuvre, which is something which must be absolutely undertaken, or for a little paying college, etc. Do not leave Quito, my friend, without all of this being definitely arranged and beginning to get under way, since if you leave and nothing is done, everything will remain as the status quo. Yes, see to it that Fr. Roussel leaves for Watertown. This pathetic priest writes to me from Guayaquil saying that he has been calumniated, that the Bishop has believed these calumnies, and that he asked to go to Guayaquil to vindicate himself, but he very much hopes to return to Quito in a little while, a place he likes, to take up once more his ministry. What hypocrisy!!!

You have done well to clear out the dissidents; keep on, my friend, with your pacifying work. If you think you should accept the offer, and contribution, of Fr. Carrière, he will gladly go to Quito.

Cheerio. All good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, September 1, 1889

My Lord,
Your Lordship,

Your letter dated June 19 saddened me. If you only knew how disturbed I am in coming to know that you are in such perplexity... The setting-up of the New Britain Vicariate happened much more quickly than I had led myself to believe. The news that Bishop Verjus had been chosen for this new vicariate disappointed me because I thought that you would not have wanted it. I forwarded to you about 6 weeks or two months ago the bulls sent to me by Rome so that his ordination by you could go ahead.

I make two proposals to you:

1. You should make a report to Cardinal Simeoni, making clear to him the circumstances in which you find yourself and the need to keep Bishop Verjus as your coadjutor whom you are about to ordain if it hasn't been done already. You suggest that Fr. Couppé should be Vicar Apostolic of New Britain and the Solomons. I believe that Fr. Couppé will repay well the confidence placed in him by the Holy See and that we are not likely to regret our recommending him. You will suggest Fr. Bontemps at the same time as Vicar Apostolic of Micronesia. This is absolutely imperative since he is too distant from you and contact is much too difficult. These two confrères will come to Yule to be ordained by you either in Yule or better still, Sydney. As we have named you Visitor for our houses in Australia and Oceania (men and women) you will take occasion from this trip to relax and make a visitation in keeping with the new regulations. Afterwards you will send me your report.

2. The second proposal, if the first is not acceptable, would be to send Bishop Verjus to Rome following his ordination and he would present to the Holy See your proposals which seem very good and even necessary to us. Bishop Verjus would present a report to the Holy See on the state of your missions and also to Cardinal Simeoni. Then he would come to France where he would warmly promote your missions with the Propagation of the Faith in Lyons, also in Paris, and with the Committee of the Holy Child which only allocates you 8,000 francs instead of the 30,000 it is supposed to give you. The Propagation of the Faith and the Holy Child do not give a penny to the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Sisters who are also heroically dedicated to their tasks. There are sisters in Asia and Africa who receive 20 or 30,000 francs. I think that a trip to Europe by Bishop Verjus would be very worthwhile. He should bring one or two natives with him. The effect would be marvellous in getting contributions and for the success of the missions.

I received, as I told you, 36,035 francs from the Propagation of the Faith for you and 8,000 francs from the Holy Child. I have always in mind that the Committee of the Propagation of Faith held back for you the 25,000 or 29,000 francs allotted to you for your journeys... I myself went to Paris to claim the money, but they didn't want to listen to me. Frequently send on a report on your missions, baptisms, schools, children, to the two Presidents at Lyons and Paris. Stress, stress, your needs in every respect, emphasize your requirements, and you will finally be heard. You do not insist nearly enough. Also write frequently to Archbishop Marchal of Bourges who will be flattered to hear from you; he complains that he doesn't hear from you.

It isn't necessary for Fr. Thomas to come to Europe to have a native grammar and dictionary printed. He could easily go to Thursday Island or Sydney to have this work printed since the expenses involved in longer trips are very great and we should have a concern about economies.

I have contacted Fr. Merg to write a cheque on my account for the amount to which I referred above. He has sent on to me a cheque for 5,000 francs in mass offerings; it is virtually all that is due, so Father Moncorget confirms. You should bring to Fr. Merg's attention the amount of money he should send to Thursday Island, New Britain, Micronesia. Otherwise, if, as you know, you leave Fr. Hartzler (and his confrères) the freedom to ask what they want, funds will run out very soon. Give your instructions, then, to Fr. Merg.

I shall attempt the impossible and send you towards the end of the year some missionaries and our Lady of the Sacred Heart sisters. If Bishop Verjus comes he can return accompanied by them.

Keep poor Fr. Cramaille with you; you could make good use of him in looking after domestic affairs; in counselling and supervising him you will draw a lot of good out of him, whereas if he leaves where does he go? What will become of him? Do not forget that he is a child of the Society; he must be boosted by extending the hand to him. Do not give up on him unless it is that he causes a repetition of what happened in New Britain, which I do not think likely. If otherwise, however, send him back to me.

It is quite impossible that you should pay 10,000 francs to the Customs. This would be outrageous. Make a report to the Governor, and if it has no effect send it to the Queen of England through Cardinal Simeoni who will pass it on to the English Ambassador in Rome. If the Catholic papers were to become aware of this behaviour by the head of Customs they would be outraged. Your plan for catechists is excellent. Avoid as much as possible becoming exhausted. Couldn't Mr. O'Rouck (O'Rourke?) pay for some wooden houses? Try and draw, then, on his generosity. Ask our New Britain confrères not to send any more snapshots of men in the nude. It's disgusting. Send us items of interest for our museum.

Cheerio, my Lord. Take good care of yourself.
Wholly yours, and to all our dear confrères and sisters in C.J.

L 18890903

Issoudun, September 3, 1889

Dear Father,

I have just received your August 3 letter letting me know that you had my June 18 letter containing a copy of the Archbishop of Quito's letter and, as well, Fr. Dehon's letter. This latter had been preceded by an important letter which I sent in reply to the latest letter from Archbishop Ordonez and also including other documents which I sent to you. For greater security I registered this letter at the Issoudun post office and sent it to your address. You should go and get it. As I forgot to send there the letters which you received on June 18, I made it my business to send you those two letters next day. I replied to all your letters. The postal delivery is very unsatisfactory. Can you do something about it?

I also received your 27 July letter enclosing the ground plan of the land bought for the basilica, its measurements: 80 metres long, you say, all told. You are looking for a reproduction of our Issoudun basilica, but much larger. However, our basilica, as built, leaves much to be desired, being carried through after diverse attempts without any overall plan. There must be something more uniform, larger, better planned. Mr. Tarlier, our architect, finds the first plan in the shape of a heart very much a possibility, escaping the ordinary and much to his taste. He is going to consider both plans and I shall submit them to you. What is the amount of money which must be put up, a million (francs - about 3,135,870 euros), two or three millions – this is something we have to know? Will the façade be in stone or in bricks like the rest (of the basilica)?

Fr. Pierre Barral, if you agree to have him together with Fr. Peyrot, will take out the plans. If you think Fr. Carrière is needed, together with Fr. Barral and young Fr. Peyrot, you should telegraph me: YES. If, on the other hand, Fr. Carrière is not needed, at least for the time being, you will simply telegraph me: Barral, Peyrot. I am not happy about Fr. Derichemont's outlook, and I am confidentially sharing with you the letter he wrote to me. Try and win him over in order to make a good, obedient, submissive, religious out of him and he can be of service in Quito. Read the letter I wrote to him. As for Brother Juste, do the best you can. In this, as in everything else, I approve of what you decide on. The distances are too great to be awaiting a decision.

Melchiade Juste, born Marseilles April 15, 1861, had spent two years in Ecuador; in November 1889, shortly after Chevalier wrote to Jouët about him, he left the Society.

Fr. Morisseau has written to me saying that he is happy and that Guayaquil has a future for us. That is to be seen.

Cheerio; greetings to the Archbishop, and good wishes to all our confrères.

Issoudun, September 3, 1889

Dear Father Derichemont,

You give me the impression of being discouraged... Why? You placed your confidence in Fr. Jouët. You have done the right thing. Continue to do so, I would ask you; he is worthy of it. What does he want, what do you want? The glory of God, the salvation of souls, the well-being of our Congregation in Quito and Ecuador. On this level one can always be in unison. It matters little, my friend, that you engage in this or that, provided you obey your Superiors; there you have the essential, there you have the essence of the religious life. The good Lord will take your good intentions into account when you will not be accepting things in a spirit of submission, rewarding you a hundred-fold for what you do when obeying your Superiors.

I would make a plea to you, my child, not to think that there are complaints being held against you. Commit yourself to the Quito undertakings, the well-being of our Society, according to the paths traced out for you by your Superiors; the Sacred Heart will bless you and you will do marvels. Leave aside your personal views, your own way of seeing things, and follow generously, wholeheartedly, joyfully, the way mapped out for you, following which you will have peace of heart, the satisfaction of a good conscience, and then you will do a great deal of good, contributing greatly to a solid foundation for us in Quito.

Cheerio, dear Father.

Issoudun, September 3, 1889

Dear Father Morisseau,

I am replying to your letter of July 31. I am pleased to gather that you have great expectations of Guayaquil relative to our Society's well-being. When writing to you 8 days ago I enclosed in your letter a letter for poor Fr. Roussel. I would ask you to look at it before handing it on to him. Give it to him, I would ask you, so that he comes to know with certainty that I am aware of everything. I would not have approved of it if you kept one of my letters addressed to Fr. Derichemont. May such a thing never again happen with you!

Meanwhile, if it occurs to you that Fr. Roussel has really changed his ways, wait awhile before sending him to Watertown and be careful how you deal with him. In particular, forbid him to be confessor to young girls, even little ones, and women, and see to it that he has no recourse to them. I forbid this absolutely. Keep him under surveillance and be strict with him. He is shifty, dissimulating, hypocritical, and given to hiding his real motives. He will outsmart you; be on your guard; for the rest what grips him cannot be curbed short of a miracle. Sooner or later this individual like the unfortunate Fr. Caër will give rise to unhappy circumstances for us; the climate and morals of Ecuador are not set up for him. Try and see to it that more escapades do not come about involving him in Guayaquil. We would be ruined. I am depending on you.

The Church and the work of the Sacred Heart of Mary which the good Canon is offering us is very much preferable to Bishop Barrigo's proposal. Assess the situation and the advantages before you draw a conclusion. Write often to me.

The outcome of the affair involving the Saint Quentin Oblates is really bad. I am pleased to gather that your health is good. Good wishes to Fr. Roussel. My regards to Vicar General Barrigo and thank him from me for the lively interest he has in us.

Cheerio kind Fr. François Morisseau.

Dear Father,

1. I would very much like it if your programme was carried out. But when can it be put into practice? May it please the Lord if it can be in the very near future. Let us hope so.
2. Bishop Verjus has written to me to say that he has sent a full report on our missions and their requirements to the Propagation of Faith. I am about to write to the President who will have my letter on Tuesday. You could go and see him on Thursday.
3. The Bishop also says that he has written to the President of the Holy Child. Likewise, go and see him.
4. I don't know the real reason for the dismissal of those two youngsters from the Rome Petite Oeuvre. Fr. Védère writes that their dismissal was necessary because they didn't have a vocation.
5. Reverend Father Visitor, while acknowledging that their shortcomings, without being very serious, are attributable to lack of experience, arising from the best intentions on the part of your administration, offers however, but all too briefly, a praiseworthy assessment. He states that you have brought order, tidiness, discipline, regularity, to the house, as well as piety and economies. Be free, then, of worries, my friend, and do not be misled by false reports.

You are liked, well regarded, appreciated more than I can put into words – and very much so by your humble servants, myself. I regret not having you with me to share my concerns and help me to support the burden which weighs me down. If you could see into my depths, you would observe how great and unlimited is the faith I have in you and your devotedness. I look upon you as another self. Euge serve bone et fidelis. (A good and faithful servant carrying out his master's wishes.)

6. What you have to say to me about Fr. Deidier does not in the least surprise me, being by nature inquisitive and suspicious. (For a fuller treatment of Deidier see Twohig Late But Not Too Late, passim.) Write to good Father Del. (Delaporte) asking him to take firm action to have such-like abuses, which are unacceptable, stopped. Let him install a safety key in the mailbox as something vitally needed and only he himself should have the key, or else he closes altogether the mailbox and he himself will then give the letters to the confrères as the Rule lays down. (Deidier was living in Paris with Delaporte at this time.)

7. I wish you a speedy return to health. Take care of yourself.

8. I remain much the same, health-wise, myself, all the medication taken bringing no improvement. Pray, especially, for me.

Cheerio, my friend.

More than ever yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

A happy feast day. Nothing will be taken out of your important article. Thanks.

Council Meeting, September 18-21, 1889

In attendance: Very Rev. Fr. Superior General; Fathers Piperon, Guyot, Delaporte, Assistants. Fr. Jouët in Quito, Republic of Ecuador, could not take part.

At this meeting the overall state of the Congregation and the needs of the different houses were considered.

The Issoudun House

Having considered the present situation in the Mother House, regret was once more expressed that the Assistants through present circumstances were kept away. Such a serious issue should be remedied once conditions make it possible to do so.

1. Superior of the House

Father Batard will as in previous years be in charge of the overall direction of the house, and continue as bursar.

2. The Petite Oeuvre

Fr. Lanctin will continue in charge of the Petite Oeuvre.

3. The Day School

Fr. Carrière will be brought from Paris to take charge of it, replacing Fr Lavielle.

4. The Petite Oeuvre Teachers

The Petite Oeuvre teachers come under the guidance of the Petite Oeuvre director as regards their religious life. It is from him they will get permission to go out or whatever else. Nobody can go into the town without permission, and without a companion, as required by the Rules. Fr. Batard must be informed about any going out, or at least made aware of it on coming back.

5. Spiritual Exercises

The Petite Oeuvre teachers will carry out their spiritual exercises in common under the leadership of the Director of this work. Other community members will come together in the meeting room for this function under the direction of Fr. Batard.

6. The Issoudun Community Council is made up of the Very Rev. Fr. General, and Fathers Batard, Lanctin, Lavielle, Carrière, Maillard.

7. Personnel on the Petite Oeuvre Teaching Staff

Fathers Comte, Suchet; Brothers Cochet, Bernard, Martin, Sauley, Guis, Mamignon, Dickx.

8. Teachers at the Day School

Fr. Grom and Brother Gotland, together with the lay staff.

9. The Maitrise (auxiliary) School

Fr. Perriot remains in charge, together with Brother Bouvier.

10. The Office

The Association's office, under the direction of Fr. Maillard, will have as helpers Brothers Laliaux and Lacan, Alexandre and Hinard. Brother Coltée will be sent to the scholasticate.

11. Fr. Maynier, Curate

Fr. Moncorget will be replaced at the presbytery by Fr. Meynier.

12. Perpetual Vows

Brother Alexander Delimoges is called to perpetual vows.

The Antwerp House

Having looked at issues concerning the Issoudun house, attention was next focused on Antwerp.

1. Father Reyn, Superior

Father Reyn was named Superior of the Antwerp house, replacing Fr. Piperon.

2. Assistants

His assistants are Fathers J. Vandel and Meyer.

3. Director of the Scholasticate and Professors

Fr. Vandel will continue in his role as Director of the scholasticate. He will have available to him as staff Fathers Moncorget, Jullien and Audouy, while Fr. Meyer will continue with his Dogma course.

4. Petite Oeuvre

Fr. Meyer remains Director of the Petite Oeuvre and will have as teachers Fr. Linckens and Brothers Megret, J-B. Perriot, Cochard, Bley, Bouellat, as well as some newly-professed as they are needed.

5. The novitiate will be moved to Tilburg.

Tilburg House

1. Superior and Assistants

Fr. Léopold Hartzler, now being too ill to continue as Director of this house, Fr. Piperon presently Superior at Antwerp is appointed Superior at Tilburg, having Fathers Peeters and Offermans as assistants.

Director of the Petite Oeuvre

Brother Kicken, sub-deacon and to be ordained to the priesthood as soon as possible, will be Director of the Petite Oeuvre.

3. Teachers

Brothers Mathieu, Neyens, Okhuijzen, Van der Aa will be the teachers, to whom will be added one or two newly-professed.

4. Rhetoric at Antwerp

Those doing the rhetoric course at Tilburg will be moved to Antwerp where they will follow the literature course.

5. Novitiate

The novitiate from now on will be attached to the Antwerp house. Father Blanchet, a novice, will aid Fr. Piperon who remains Novice Master, Fr. Blanchet replacing Father Socius who has been called away for other functions.

6. Father Piperon, Father General's Delegate

Fr. Piperon in his role as assistant to the Superior General and his delegate, will act on his behalf for the Antwerp and Tilburg houses. Everything which concerns these houses will be referred to him and nothing important can be undertaken without his approval. It is through him that the Superior General gives orders, and requests made to the Superior General should in the first instance be addressed to the said Father (Piperon).

The Rome House

Fr. Védère will continue in charge of this house in Fr. Jouët's absence, as has been the case up to now. Brother Delmas, a deacon, will be made available to him and he must be ordained to the priesthood as soon as possible. Brother Delmas, together with Fr. Mathieu, will make up Fr. Védère's council, both continuing their studies at the Apollinaire (university). Brother Delmas, once he knows the language (Italian) will be in charge of the sacristy.

Salzburg

Brothers Lotter, Rascher and von Hasselt will be sent to Salzburg.

Glastonbury

Brother Field, together with the young Denis O'Mahony, will be sent to Glastonbury to teach at the Petite Oeuvre.

Paris

Fr. Chopin, presently socius to the Novice Master, will go to Paris replacing Fr. Carrière who has been called to Issoudun.

Barcelona

Brother Félip and a newly-professed will be sent to Fr. Casas at the Canet house.

Watertown

Fr. Benjamin Grom, presently in France, is being appointed to this house. Fr. Roussel, who cannot remain in Quito, is appointed to the Watertown house. Orders will be given to Father Ramot to buy the land between Main St. and Leray so that the new Canadian parish can be set up there.

Quito

Following all these concerns about appointments and the arrangements for the different houses, prolonged attention was paid to the Quito house and its problems. It was decided:

1. That Fr. Jouët should prolong his Visit to give him the requisite time to deal carefully with every issue and restore discipline as fully as possible.

2. Fr. François Barral, temporarily appointed Superior of this (Quito) house by Fr. Jouët during his Visitation, will remain in this role until such time as an older Superior can be sent there.
3. Father Derichemont will continue in his office as parish priest, but submit himself to the requirements of the regular life.
4. National Shrine

Father Pierre Barral

Father Pierre Barral will be appointed to Quito in order to take charge of the Sacred Heart Basilica. His specific role is to liaise with the basilica's committee, of which the Archbishop is Chairman, as regards everything which concerns the building of the votive church of the Sacred Heart and the procedures for fund-raising. Fr. Barral must in no way involve either the Quito community or the Congregation, and he will carry out exactly the clauses of the agreement reached with the Archbishop. If there are expenses to be met either as regard the plans or the promotion, or with anything else having to do with the basilica, it is the committee (involved with the basilica) who will have to meet these expenses. Father (Barral) should have freedom of action with regard to this undertaking, and he should be respectfully submissive to his Superior in everything which relates to his religious life.

Fr. Perriot

Fr. Perriot will accompany him (Barral) in order to restore his health in this climate, such a climate on the admission of the doctor being the only one which might restore his health. He will not while ill have any ministry to take care of. He might be made available as socius to Fr. Pierre Barral for some needed undertakings, but only to the degree that his health would allow it. What free time he has should be availed of to complete his theological studies.

Issoudun, September 18, 1889

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. Thanks for your August 10 letter. I am amazed that you haven't had more than one letter from me so far, as I have replied, and more, to all your letters.
2. Fr. Pierre Barral will embark, with Fr. Peyrot, from Saint Nazaire for Quito on the 10th of October. As for Fr. Casas, one cannot, as I said, expect him since his presence is needed in Barcelona, while Fr. Carrière, as well, cannot go to Quito. If I could let you have Fr. Roger (then in Barcelona) I would do so with pleasure; I shall do my utmost to bring this about since, like you, I think he could be helpful in Quito. But who would replace him in Barcelona?
3. I fully agree that Brother Juste should return to the Society; either send him to Watertown or keep him in Quito; do what you think best. You have full authority.
4. Fr. Derichemont makes me unhappy; I thought that he might have returned to ways of acceptable behaviour and, having recognized his problems, got down to serious work, making a significant contribution in Quito. Send him either to Watertown or back to France in accordance with what you think best.
5. I cannot understand at all the complaints you level at me when presuming to write that I upheld Fr. Derichemont against Fr. Morisseau, when, as it happens, I never stopped writing about the imperative need to obey the Superior who is invested with authority, and that nothing could condone the lack of respect shown him as well as the insubordination directed at him, all this verified by the sharp letter I wrote to Fr. Derichemont in which I complained bitterly about his disgraceful attitude towards his Superior. Poor Fr. Morisseau, on the other hand, to whom I wrote about taking this serious issue in hand, hadn't the courage to hand him the letter, writing to me that he was afraid that he might upset him. Your complaint against me, then, falls short on the facts. Yes, I have always been opposed to the idea of leaving Quito, contrary to what Fr. Morisseau would wish. If this is what you complain about, I am guilty, but it is nothing I can be sorry about. If, nevertheless, you take the opposite view, have all our personnel return to France, and there will no longer be a Quito issue.
6. When Fr. Barral and his companion arrive in Quito, you will see if it is possible to provide the Carmelites with a chaplain.
7. I am delighted about your climb to the summit of Pichincha and the views you had from there. I shall be waiting on your article for our Annals.

My humble respects to the Apostolic Delegate and the Archbishop.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours and regards to all in C.J.

Issoudun, September 25, 1889

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I hasten to reply to your latest letter which came just now, despite the telegram I sent to you.

1. We have had our General Council, and we considered the Quito situation. The departure of Fathers Morisseau, Roussel and Derichemont have thrown our appointments into disarray. We are short of people in all our houses. What can be done by way of answering your request? We are setting up a scholasticate in Antwerp and we shall need new people there. Fr. Hartzler at Tilburg is dying and a new Superior is needed. We shall send Fr. Piperon there, together with his novitiate, and appoint Father Reyn as Superior of the Antwerp house. It is, then, quite impossible to let you have Fathers Heriault, Maillard and Védère.

2. We are sending you Fr. Pierre Barral to become involved in the building of the basilica under the direction of the Archbishop and committee. He will do no more than carry out the decisions of the committee. Neither the Quito (MSC) house or our Congregation will be responsible for the expenses likely to be incurred. He, Fr. Barral, is the only man we have available who can work at building the basilica. If the committee is able to make use of him, he can play a major role. Fr. Peyrot, just recently ordained to the priesthood, once he knows Spanish, can be used in the brothers' chaplaincy and in helping Fr. Barral. He is a good little religious. His health is weak, but he can get by taking care and precautions. I shall add Fr. Maynier to their number when he, likewise, is ordained to the priesthood. He enjoys very good health, and is a good, pious, obedient, religious. He is not very intelligent, though very helpful. Once he learns Spanish he can officiate at baptisms, marriages, funerals, take communion to the sick, look after the sacristy, provide catechism for the boys, in a word, become involved with so many things. He must not for the time being hear women's confessions as he has no experience. If despite these reinforcements you need Fr. Roger, write or send me a telegram, and I shall send him to you.

3. It is quite impossible, my friend, for you to leave Ecuador for the time being. Quito has too great a need of you. Stay there as long as it takes to consolidate this poor house (mission) already so rocked. You will not feel free to return until you think the Sagrario Community is getting on well because of the understanding and supportive good-will among all its members, morale, religious life, restored in effect through unity, peace, good relations, obedience and love; all this is a prerequisite. Otherwise, once you leave, disunity will return among the confrères, former scandals will return and we shall become submerged under the public's disapproval. The situation is serious; we are dicing with fate. We must aim, then, for success at any price, and be sure that there's perseverance. In the best interests of the Society, for the successful outcome of its undertakings in Quito, I call on you to remain on as long as necessary. Your presence there, prolonged by 6 months or a year if required, seems imperative to me. I am aware that I am asking a great sacrifice of you, but your devotedness to our dear Society, and the concern you bring to this poor Quito house, which is your principal preoccupation, will make you accept it, I am sure. Moreover, it is necessary that the basilica enterprise should have begun, providing hope for the future. Only you, given your influence with the Archbishop and the Apostolic Delegate, can achieve success. Likewise, it's yourself who can negotiate the gift to our Society of the Mulalo property to which you refer in your letter. Do not return until this matter is settled. It has been providential that you journeyed to Quito, since without your being there our Sagrario house would have gone forever. My son be blessed a thousand times and keep on with your visit so well begun already.

Try in every possible way, motivated by faith and charity, to win over dear Fr. Derichemont towards having a better attitude, and have him settled in our Quito house where he could be of considerable service. Your extended stay could well be very helpful to him. Then when the reinforcements promised will arrive, you may consider if you could make use of Fr. Derichemont to found a Petite Oeuvre of the Sacred Heart. Like you I am also convinced that we can in time set up important undertakings in Ecuador very beneficial to our Society.

Our Council colleagues are agreed that Fr. Morisseau should return to France, and that Fr. Roussel goes to Watertown. It is impossible for us to establish a house at Guayaquil for the time-being when we do not have the necessary personnel even for Quito itself. The architect who is drawing up the detailed plans for the Quito basilica is entitled to 2% for his fees, that is to say 20,000 francs if the cost comes to a million. I am hoping to lower his price, only taking 1%, 10,000 francs more or less. Should the plan include a crypt? We need to know the cost of the work and the different materials used. Is the stone hard or soft to cut, and does it lend itself to sculpture?... We are sending Fr. Delmas to Fr. Védère (in Rome) to help him with the administration, either as bursar or in charge of the Petite Oeuvre. Fathers Suchet and Gressin are here in Issoudun.

Cheerio, Father: wholly yours in C.J.

(Issoudun) September 29, 1889

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. I am amazed that you haven't as yet received more than two of my letters; I answered all your mail on the day itself or the following day.
2. Yes, when I wrote my letter to the Archbishop you were already en route to Ecuador. I still do not know how things turned out. We were still faced with the petition by the Saint Quentin Oblates to Quito. In all the letters I wrote to our confrères, I unceasingly supported the Archbishop, insisting on loyalty to him and having the deepest respect for the Bishop who is God's representative.
3. I should have firmly thought that I was making serious religious available with Fathers Morisseau, Caër (who later became a Benedictine at Notre Dame, Lérins), Derichemont, Barral and Roussel, whom I thought were good, judicious, dedicated. But we were mistaken. What can be done! Who do you think I can send to replace these? Priests do not come from anywhere... We have too many houses for the short supply of subjects at our disposal. You know this very well, yourself, and then our priests who are somewhat older do not want to go to Quito; I don't know why this is so. Fr. Morisseau and the others have all belittled Ecuador, deprecating the country as if it were like New Guinea. What can one do?

I am sending you Fr. Barral to take charge of the basilica and the association; Fr. Peyrot, who will deal with the youngsters taught by the brothers (De La Salle); and Fr. Meynier for work in the parish. But all these young men, and Fr. Barral himself, need to be supervised, well led, seriously supported in their religious life and exercises of piety since, otherwise, they will go the same way as the others. You see, then, my friend, where it's necessary that you stay longer in Quito in order to put the house on a sound foundation and successfully train the subjects who are there, since, otherwise, the same scandalous stories would surface once more and there would be a collapse. Try to induce good-will in Fr. Derichemont, making a good religious out of him, getting him to stay on in Quito. I don't see anybody among the younger age group to send you except Fr. Roger. He could hear confessions in the parish and look after sisters. If you would like to have him let me know. I shall try to have him replaced at Barcelona and sent to you. Try also to hold on to Brother Xavier (Mayer), whom I like very much, and also Brother Juste (Melchiade).

4. Oh! my friend, how grateful I would be to you if you could consolidate this good work in Quito and how deserving you would be of the Society. Then you would return to the Rome house where your instructions are faithfully carried out. Your presence there would be also no less needed, but, then, one cannot do all things at once.
5. I bitterly regret, together with you and the Archbishop, that the sad escapades of Fr. Roussel have become common knowledge in Quito. It's very sad. Let us pray and make reparation to the Sacred Heart for such like outrageous behaviour. Indeed, your presence was both necessary and opportune!
6. We shall place your article in our Annals as soon as we get it.
7. If we could have Fr. Genocchi, he would be very suitable for Quito, but... I note that the make-up of the Quito house continues to remain unbalanced. Fr. Hériault, besides not in the least wishing to go there, remains a narrow-minded Breton; Fr. Casas is needed in Barcelona, Fr. Védère in Rome.
8. Bishop Verjus has written to me; he is well, but he is not aware yet that he is Vicar Apostolic. People like him also need heartfelt support.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Fr. Piperon,

I approve of all you are looking for, but I have to say that it is pointless having Council meetings in Issoudun when everything we decide on there becomes defeated in its purpose a short time later. Coming to Issoudun becomes a waste of time and money. I am so sad to hear about dear Fr. Hartzler's condition – what a blow! I fear for Fr. Meyer – who is so young and not sufficiently mature enough yet to be Superior... but there it is... May the Sacred Heart have pity on us!

I have been in touch with you about the teachers which you must dispatch to Issoudun. I await a reply to the letter I sent to Fr. Guyot.

Issoudun, October 2, 1889

Dear Fr. Piperon,

Having discussed matters with Fathers Batard, Maillard and Lanctin, I am of the view that we must go along with the decision of our General Council, which is to say that you go to Tilburg as Superior together with your novices and Fr. Reyn stays in Antwerp with his lay brothers. We were also in agreement that the rhetoricians in Tilburg should go to Antwerp to make more space available to you. Indeed send the second or third (classes) there if necessary. I am led to believe that it will be less inconvenient for you to set yourselves up in Tilburg for 8 or 10 months because the house which is being built will be fit for habitation at this time if not, perhaps, earlier. From the moral and disciplinary perspective your novitiate will be better placed at Tilburg than at Antwerp. In Antwerp there is too much activity piled on top of the other; it's necessary to keep them separated. Who are you going to have as bursar in Antwerp if you take Fr. Reyn away? Who will be meeting people in the recreation rooms? Who will have responsibility for meetings with the Flemish? Moreover, you are taking away from the Antwerp house the one Belgian native who is capable, and well regarded by the clergy and the Archbishop. Fr. Reyn is able, intelligent, good at negotiating, an excellent religious, highly regarded by all who know him. Besides, my friend, the sad business involving your chapel and the notorious request, makes you frowned upon and not well regarded (favoured) by the Archbishop, whose Council as well as himself have no great liking for you. The contrary state of affairs is the reality; you are opposed and the diocesan administration will not easily see you in a different light. And meanwhile the Antwerp house greatly needs, given its precarious financial situation and the variety of work on which its future depends, to have in charge somebody who is well thought of by the priests (diocesan) and well regarded by the Archbishop, whose support and goodwill are indispensable to us. Moreover, there is the big problem arising from Averbode which daily strikes a mortal blow at our Antwerp house, the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Association. Nobody more than Fr. Reyn can bring the matter to a successful outcome. Since he has begun, it seems imperative to my mind that he keeps going right to the end. It is obvious that one novitiate for our Society is not enough, situated, especially, where it is in a cold, humid, country. We are all in agreement about this. Drawing inspiration from such agreement I asked Rome for permission to open another novitiate at Issoudun or somewhere else. Everything leads me to believe that my request will be met. If this is so we can release from the Tilburg house some of its novices. You will be receiving shortly Fr. Audouy as professor of science at the scholasticate, as mentioned to you already.

Audouy, recently ordained, April 20, 1889, ministered in Antwerp, Glastonbury and Paris before he left the Society, November 29, 1898.

Meanwhile if Fr. Jullien is needed, he can be sent to you, despite the reservations made about him. If we can let you have other teachers, let us know. If Brother Laliaux cannot be a teacher, put him in the scholasticate until he is required for Issoudun.

Laliaux was ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Navarre on October 22, 1893. He left the Society in 1901.

Within a few days you will be contacted about teachers who will be needed here.

Let me know what you have decided. Cheerio, Fr.
Wholly yours, greetings to all in Corde Jesu.

Dear Father Barral,

I haven't at this moment the money you are looking for. Simply ask that a reservation be made on our behalf; there will readily be a place, and one can pay at Saint Nazaire when departing. This is what happened with Fr. Jouët, it would be best to book only as far as Panama because there are a number of companies plying the route from Panama to Guayaquil. Mr. Tarlier, the architect, is coming to Issoudun on Saturday by the evening (sic) train at 3.38; it is imperative that you be there. Leave Paris on Saturday morning at 9.30 and you will meet up with Mr. Tarlier at Vierzon, arriving with him at 3.38pm. He sends me a list of questions; go and meet Mr. Ballen, the Ecuador Consul, at 19 avenue de l'Opera. Perhaps he will advise you; he is very kind. Give him my regards.

Until shortly, therefore.

Issoudun, October 7, 1889

Dear Father,

The Council, on examining the accounts of the different houses of the Society, considered that it should make the following observations:

1. The recommendations of the last half-year have been, generally speaking, better understood and, consequently, better fulfilled than those for 1888. Nevertheless, there still remains much to be desired, and we encourage all Superiors and bursars to pay special attention to the management of the account books sent to each house at the beginning of this year, since the exact up-to-date quality of these books will be due to the exactitude and clarity of the budget statements and the accounts which must be forwarded to us, the budget every year, the accounts every six months.

The Council considers this part of our regulations particularly important.

2. Houses in receipt of contributions for the missions must send them on to the mother house, or enter them into its account when funds are being sought for the mother house. The same holds for those houses which, while not having a Petite Oeuvre, are in receipt of contributions for this purpose (the missions).

Other Observations

1. At the end of last year we had a document printed called: Change in personnel at the house of... and every six months we send a copy to local Superiors to be completed, and in this manner we are brought up to date about the state of personnel in the Congregation. Up to now either the significance of this document was not grasped, or else care was not taken to complete it fully and return it to us. I would ask all the good Superiors to take better care about this in the future. They must not think they are dispensed from doing so because in personal letters to me they have provided certain details about, for example, ordinations, professions, or even departures, since such letters cannot be forwarded to those who have responsibility for the register of personnel. There must, then, be an official document for administrative purposes.

2. According to our holy rules each Superior must forward twice yearly comments or observations on each one of the priests and brothers in the house. I strongly uphold the exact observance of this regulation. Printed sheets will be sent in this respect to each Superior who will take it upon himself to fulfil this requirement conscientiously and proceed to forward them to me personally.

3. Finally, call to mind once more the two observations I made at the end of my March circular, 1889. The first is that each house must send us during the month of May an annual survey of the state of the Archconfraternities of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart and St. Joseph, friend of the Sacred Heart, stating exactly the number of former and new associates, and, insofar as it is possible, the number of thanksgiving acts, and petitions, presenting where possible some of the more remarkable happenings. The second observation to which I bring your attention is that each Superior must forward to me at the end of the year an official summary of the most important events that have taken place in the community during the course of the year. This exercise will be very helpful to us in adding to and completing the general archives of our beloved Society.

Please accept, Father, the renewed expression of my warm regards in Corde Jesu.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

PS: I would ask you to keep and make a collection of my circulars.

Dear Father Derichemont,

I take occasion from Fr. Pierre Barral's departure, to send you another word. I can only repeat to you our feelings of most warm appreciation, asking you to continue your so appreciated dedicated work at Quito. This unfortunate Sagrario house has been, as you know, taken to pieces by the devil, and it is absolutely imperative to consolidate it and restore its name: the Sacred Heart expects this from us all. Accordingly, my child, I count on your piety, good spirit, obedience, virtue, your deep attachment to the Society, your impact on the parish, to make your wholehearted contribution available so that discipline, obedience, the religious spirit, understanding and good-will may be found among you. The success of our undertakings in Ecuador and South America depend on good dispositions and being discreet in a serious and edifying manner. I place my trust in you, then, as in all the other confrères. Cheerio, Father. I bless you in Corde Jesu.

Wholly yours,

L 18891008 A

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Canonical Visitor in Ecuador.

Issoudun, October 8, 1889

Dear Fr. Jouët,

It's Fr. Barral who will give you this letter together with a letter for the Archbishop whom I thank for his kindness to us and for all the good-will he shows us.

1. Fr. Meynier, the young priest whom I had hoped to send you in order to strengthen the Quito community, refused outright to go to Ecuador; there you have commitment from our young confrères! I am sending him to Barcelona to learn Spanish and help... (illegible) when he has learned the language. I shall send him if possible... (illegible) or dear Fr. Roger. The latter, although somewhat elderly (59 years old) would be very useful for confessions and care of the sick. Let me know if you would like to have him. Only Fr. Peyrot will be accompanying Fr. Barral.

2. I note that despite our best endeavours it is still quite impossible to set up serious-minded personnel in the Sagrario house. We haven't capable personnel of mature age available to us. What few we have are needed where they are. Then, let us admit it, it is devotedness and generosity of spirit which are, as you know, wanting. What can we do in the face of such a lack in suitability? The best thing would be to keep in Quito those who are there, since we cannot replace them, and try to make them into good religious, people who abide by the rules, have faith and are conscientious, are prudent administratively. That's why, my friend, your continued presence at Sagrario is still very necessary. If you were to leave Quito too quickly, this young community would again be in a mess, disunity and scandal not so slow in reappearing and we would sink under the disgrace (disrespect) in which we would be held, and for quite sometime, in South America where, for all that, the Sacred Heart wants us to be and where we could have a wonderful future if our Quito undertakings were to prosper. Try, then, in every way possible, to strengthen Fr. Derichemont in his vocation, making him a good, devoted, religious, associating him with the good parish of Sagrario where he could do a lot of good. I hope that under your capable guidance he will become more flexible, submissive, dedicated and, effectively, steady-going. Let him be docile under your control and that of his Superiors, whoever they may be, and he will work wonders. The Sacred Heart would want no more from him, then; given ground, a Petite Oeuvre or college could be set up... and for this he (Derichemont) would, hopefully, be a great help... (original text difficult to read). Take charge of this house and parish while you remain in Quito, restoring order, peace, respect for authority, and thereby you will have restored our reputation and our role in Ecuador.

3. Try to animate the lay brothers, affirming them in their vocation. I am amazed the Brothers Juste (Melchiade André) and Mayer (Xavier) have allowed themselves to be swayed by false prospects and want to enter other communities; try to hold on to them and make good religious out of them. The behaviour of the Dominicans and the 'Mercédares' seems to me as insensitive as it is unacceptable. Could not the Apostolic Delegate intervene? If, following all this and after all your efforts, you are not able to hold on to them, you have full authority to release them from their vows. As for Fr. Roussel, the Quito religious who want to lure him to them, cannot now wish it so given all that has gone on. The Delegate or the Archbishop could be against him; what is best is that you get him to leave immediately for Watertown. Fr. Ramot has been informed and awaits him. Fr. Morisseau cannot stay on his own in Guayaquil, cannot stay on there; what's best is that you send him back to France where he can be of some help.

4. Meanwhile, since it is impossible for us to replace both Fr. François Barral and Fr. Derichemont, it is absolutely imperative that you make matters up between themselves and Archbishop Ordonez. They must, quite obviously, acknowledge their mistakes, since nothing can justify their insubordinate behaviour or the hostility they think they must show to their Archbishop. I have always placed the blame on them. Having well engaged with them beforehand, you will take them to the Archbishop in order to make a full apology to him. His Grace will forgive them, peace will be made, and they can continue with their Quito ministry.

5. It's a good thing that the Saint Quentin priests have left. The basilica undertaking is left with us, and it's for us now to take it positively forward. We have done well in sending Fr. Pierre Barral to take charge of it. I gave him firm instructions. I hope he will not shirk from it; he will be acting in dependence on the Archbishop and the committee, taking no initiative of his own, being no more than the executant of orders given to him, taking neither responsibility on himself nor for our Quito house, nor for our Society. He is energetic, intelligent, quite able (I have had him study architecture), and he can, then, offer a valuable contribution. He is taking out to you a new plan for the basilica in keeping with the indications you provided for him. It is no more than a project; the gentlemen of the committee, of which, according to the contract, you are part since you are presently in charge of our house, can change it as they so wish. It is only when the plans are made available to our architect, Mr. Tarlier, that he will draw up the definitive sketch with all the requested details, and then one can carry out the project on the spot without problems. It is impossible to make a plaster-cast of the basilica, without being tied to the plan in a definitive manner. This small replica of the basilica, cast in plaster, only covers the exterior; to include the interior as was requested, would take too much time and be very expensive (30,000 francs or thereabouts) (roughly 94,000 euros). The architect states that given all the details of his plans, the building could be done quite easily and straightforwardly. Fr. Barral has been brought up to date on all this. There are, besides, however, the architect's fees to be considered: one and a half or 2% for the plans and the detailed supports.

The following is what was decided about Fr. Barral at the last Council meeting: "Fr. Barral will be sent to Quito with responsibility for the Sacred Heart Basilica. His special role will be to engage with the committee of the Sacred Heart Basilica, of which the Archbishop is President, with regard to all that concerns the building of the votive church of the Sacred Heart, as well as the methods employed to collect funds. Fr. Barral must not in any way involve either the Quito community or the Congregation. He will carry out exactly the clauses of the agreement reached with His Grace the Archbishop. If there are expenses to be incurred concerning either the plans or promotion, or anything else involving the basilica, they will be met by the committee. Fr. Barral must have the requisite freedom of action for this undertaking. He has to remain humbly submissive to his Superior in everything which pertains to the religious life. Fr. Peyrot will accompany him (Barral) for the purpose of restoring his health in this climate, this being the only possibility, so the doctor says, of saving him. He will not have any ministerial commitment while laid up. He may be a help to Fr. Pierre Barral in going out at needed times, but only so within the limits of Fr. Peyrot's possibilities. He will use his spare time studying the Spanish language and completing his theological studies.

6. You will do well to get to know the letter I wrote to the Archbishop, and the one I sent to Fr. Derichemont.

Cheerio, Fr. Jouët. May you be blessed a thousand-fold.
Wholly yours in Corde Jesu.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

NB: I have replied to all your letters. I continue to regret that I could not complete the plan for the Sacred Heart (basilica) for which I provided the rough sketch. For myself, I always thought it possible – in any event, long live the Sacred Heart! Extend my warmest greetings to dear Fr. François Barral and to dear little Fr. Bouvier whose letter greatly pleased me. If you think I should offer my respectful good wishes to the Apostolic Delegate, and my great appreciation of the interest he has in us, do so on my behalf.

To Father Charles Piperon, MSC, Superior at Antwerp, Belgium.

L 18891009

Issoudun, October 9, 1889

Dear Father,

I am grateful for your kind letter and all its contents. Like yourself, and the rest of the Council fathers, we are concerned with all the Society's interests. We can be mistaken, however! Who is not at fault sometimes? But I do believe that we are all motivated by the best intentions. If an undertaking decided on, or undertaken, shows itself to have what is seriously inconvenient and was not foreseen, the Assistants, and myself in the first instance, are prepared to relinquish it and try something else.

1. It is not, my friend, because you are a difficult personage at Antwerp that consideration was given to you for Tilburg; not at all! What was thought of in the first instance, I myself the first to think so, envisaged your presence at Tilburg where there is a great deal of construction work being undertaken, and a prudent and serious man like yourself would be very helpful there. Moreover, the inclination of the Dutch priests to make very Dutch-like straightaway the Petite Oeuvre and the house, a tendency which you consider premature and dangerous at the present time, and with reason, could be offset by your presence.

2. It was you, yourself, my friend, when you believed that I wanted to change Fr. Reyn from Antwerp, who wrote on a number of occasions to me saying that if anyone should be moved from Antwerp you would prefer it to be yourself and not Fr. Reyn whose presence was needed there because:

1. he was a Belgian,
2. he alone went to the parlour,

3. he alone knew Flemish,
4. he was Bursar,
5. he was favoured with general approval.

These are the reasons you gave me, adding that if Fr. Reyn was taken from Antwerp the house would be dealt a mortal blow and you could not be answerable for its future.

In appointing you to Tilburg, Father, I thought I was acting in keeping with your own thinking, creating something helpful for the Society by conferring on you all my powers and all the rights of a Provincial over the Antwerp house. You point out to me all the inconveniences, which are most likely shared by Fr. Guyot. I willingly accept them, but for the moment it's a matter of finding a Superior for Tilburg, excluding Fr. Reyn since his presence, as you say, is necessary in Antwerp. Discuss the matter with Fr. Guyot, find someone who is acceptable and I shall wholeheartedly approve. You will have at Tilburg the same rights which you enjoy at Antwerp.

3. Give instructions for a novitiate area to be set aside in the new building going up at Tilburg; the novitiate can be placed there next year. Fr. Védère has written to me stating that an agreement in writing is needed from the Bishop of Bois-le-Duc for the transfer of the novitiate to Tilburg. When you have time go to Bois-le-Duc to request it; one is not committed to use it straightaway; it would be for later when considered appropriate.

If Fr. Guyot agrees, and you think it right, appoint Fr. Meyer as Superior or Director at Tilburg, or Vice-Superior if you like for this year while we await greater clarification of the situation. You might, perhaps send the rhetoric class to Tilburg, or the second class, or the second and third classes of the Antwerp Petite Oeuvre in order to economize on teachers.

4. Fr. Gressin is a good little religious, pious, serious; his sojourn in Rome has done him a lot of good. I think that he will successfully provide lectures in the scholasticate, whether in philosophy, sacred scripture, or the sacraments. One can get a scholastic to replace him at the school (the 'externat', the lay Sunday school distinct from the Petite Oeuvre as in Issoudun); his health is poor.

Fr. Jullien is ordered by the Dr. to have complete rest for a month; he coughs like someone very ill. Fr. Moncorget will replace him for rhetoric, he himself being quite exhausted (poorly) for the past fifteen days; he has got thin, and says that his chest is affected.

5. Dear little Fr. Vandel has written to me about his scholasticate; he wants to keep all his good students, and only send as teachers to the Petite Oeuvre his less able students. He is wrong. The teachers in our apostolic schools need to be intelligent, pious and serious, since otherwise they will educate inadequate students which the scholasticate will have to deal with later. It appears to me that it is better to keep the less intelligent scholastics, not likely to be teachers, this year. They will improve themselves better in the scholasticate, and within a few years they can be availed of as teachers. I am going to meet soon the Director of the Sacred Heart to examine this matter, and I shall give him a decision. We shall do everything to meet his wishes without compromising in any way our apostolic work, all the more so when next year he can take from the scholasticate those young men he is looking for at the moment. Have a word with Fr. Guyot about this.

6. Fr. Guyot has so far provided me with no account of his Visitor's role; he may not have, perhaps, yet finished his visitation.

7. Draw a cheque in my name for 10,000 francs, payable on being presented. This money will be very useful to you. I sent 1,000 francs to Fr. Klotz. Fr. Barral is about to leave with Fr. Peyrot for Saint Nazaire, and they will be embarking on Thursday. I gave them 2,500 francs. It's always Issoudun which has to pay. I am late in sending to the Pope 11,000 francs owed to him since August 15. What is one to do?

Cheerio, Father.

Reverend Father,

I am very surprised not having heard anything from you as regards my letter of September 20 last. I believe that since May 14 last I had completed enough forms for them to be returned to me, being that which belongs to me. For, and note well where I have underlined it, I am only asking you for that which belongs to me, and I am shocked to think that Superiors can act like this when dealing with their subjects.

I am advising you, therefore, that I am only giving you 48 hours to reply to me. If those 48 hours go by and you haven't replied to me, I shall be forced to act with force, and I shall have you note that, if I am not accorded the right to have back what belongs to me, I have the right nonetheless to reclaim from you seven salaried years, since I was with you as a domestic for seven years. This procedure displeases me, but the poor benefit from a supplement of one thousand francs, and in this way I shall come by what belongs to me.

I have the honour to greet you.

From Our Mother House
Issoudun
Archdiocese of Bourges
October 15, 1889

Most Holy Father,

The under-signed Superior General of the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, whose mother house is at Issoudun in the Archdiocese of Bourges, France, humbly prostrate at the feet of Your Holiness, has the honour to present what follows:

The persecution which continues being stirred up in France against religious compels us to send abroad many of our subjects. As a consequence of this fact, our Antwerp house, in the diocese of Malines, Belgium, has become too small and we are obliged to transfer the novitiate which takes up a part of this house to our Tilburg house in the diocese of Bois-le-Duc, Holland, where it already was between 1880 and 1886.

I humbly beseech Your Holiness to be kind enough to approve of this transfer, and to bless our little Society and him who has the honour to be Your Holiness' most humble and devoted son in Corde Jesu.

Dear Father,

I note what you have to say. I hope that one will be more prompt sending letters to you in the future. The Jesuit fathers are replete with members; I understand well that they chase up vocations. How do you think we can be like them in accepting only those young men who have degrees? We cannot even have those with baccalaureates, and then where would we put them? When the Jesuits find a young man suitable for their Society, they get him to take a vow of entry, even before the novitiate. This vow obliges (the individual) in conscience, but it does not oblige the Society to accept them. This vow is approved of by Rome. We do not have anything like that.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in CJ.

NB: I am appointing you, my friend, procurator of our missions in Paris. Go and see the Propagation of the Faith. Ask that their contribution be increased; this is the time to do so. You will take care of all the contributions given for the missions and send them on to me.

In addition, 2,000 francs given to Mr. Daniel. Information added on.

Dear Father Védère,

1. I am forwarding 500 francs to you (about 1,565 euros) to meet your most urgent expenses. I have already paid Mr. Daniel. When I know the cost of the necessary repairs to be carried out I shall send you on the bill.

You know that Mr. Amati asked me to translate the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart book into Latin by way of compensating for reducing his costs by 5 francs for every 20 pages. I gave him 6 francs so that the work might be beyond reproach. You would do well to supervise him and have the translation looked at by someone who knows French and Latin quite well, Fr. Mathieu for example or another French priest in Rome who knows Latin well; I shall pay him. I want this translation to be as perfect as possible because it is the one which will be used as the primary text for all other translations in the future into whatsoever languages. Since this book will be printed in Rome, the Master of the Sacred Palace must revise, or have the text revised, before giving it his approval. He may, then, take out, add, or change anything which he judges opportune, because I want this work to be above reproach doctrinally and benefit from the Holy Father's brief. This work is absolutely identical with that which Fr. Bausa, OP, Master of the Sacred Palace approved in 1883, the book entitled 'The Sacred Heart of Jesus in relationship to Mary or Our Lady of the Sacred Heart', which you must have. I took from this book everything in relation to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart to bring about the volume which I am now having translated into Latin. I add all the worthwhile comments which appear in the edition approved by Fr. Bausa. I want them to be fully reproduced in Mr. Amati's translation. I am forwarding in a registered parcel to you half of this work which I have revised and completed by adding all the footnotes where they should be. If Mr. Amati is puzzled, he will consult you. As soon as he has translated a section he will hand it to the printer and correct the first proofs. Then he will send on to me the same section, printed and corrected, together with the original corresponding text, which I am forwarding to you today, so that I can see for myself that everything exactly conforms. I shall then send it back to him so that he can pass it on to the Master of the Sacred Palace. (Chevalier wrote 'Master of the Sacred Heart'.) Tell him in particular to be careful with the material I am sending you today because I haven't got another copy, this is of the utmost importance. Let him begin this undertaking straightaway, and hurry up with the work.

Cheerio, Father.

I shall forward the latter part of the volume to you later when I have finished revising it and putting it in order.

Issoudun, November 14, 1889

Dear Father,

Your letters and the different items of news about the Guayaquil national college you sent to me have arrived. I read all of them carefully and I was not a little moved by the kind offers of His Excellency the Minister for Public Teaching. I greatly wish to reply acknowledging the confidence shown in us, since our Society owes a debt of gratitude to the Ecuador Government for the kind gestures with which it favours us. However, in the present circumstances, I would consider myself lacking in a sacred duty if, through premature involvement in the project, we compromised the undertaking.

The period assigned to you, October 1890, will appear to be too close in order to be sure-footed. The Guayaquil College, according to information I had not sought but which appears to be correct, could not be in a very healthy position at the present moment. The Jesuits, who were in charge before their expulsion in 1875, have refused to take it over once more. The Augustinians, to whom positive offers had been made, did not, having closely examined the situation, consider it a prudent undertaking. The greatest problem is that which has arisen through a virtual lack of discipline. In these circumstances it would not be providing a service to a government so worthy of our respect to accept without more ado, purely and simply, its offer. We would be facing a set-back which would only lead to making the situation worse. It seemed more prudent to the members of my Council, who have been discussing this issue, to wait until I can send one of our confrères to Guayaquil who, while making use of others involved, will study in depth the language, the customs, the teaching methods, the disciplinary measures and, in particular, the character of the youngsters. It seems to me that the seminary, an undertaking whose nature is less official, would not be unfavourable to the project. At the right moment we would enter into discussions with the Ecuador Government, and I would like to think that if the intentions of His Excellency the Minister remain the same, he will not hesitate to reimburse us for the expenses of our confrères sent there to prepare matters as has been said; otherwise these expenses would be undertaken by us at the risk of achieving nothing, but with the good will and the wish to guarantee the success of this undertaking. And in the event that we would agree to the conditions of a contract, the Ecuador Government will readily agree that prudence and loyalty alone dictate this approach from our side. When conveying these thoughts to His Excellency, dear Father, do not forget to offer him our good wishes and deepest respect.

As for yourself, Father, accept my sincere good wishes in Corde Jesu.

Issoudun, November 15, 1889

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. I am forwarding a letter to you which, if you think it opportune, you may give to the Minister of Public Education. I agree with Fr. Guyot (Superior of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun) that the setting up of a national college at Guayaquil is premature. If possible, it would be better for us to accept, as Fr. Morisseau maintains, the direction of the seminary, and train there our young men in the country's language as well as in philosophy and theology; these are young men subject to (France's) military law and who would agree to expatriate themselves. Perhaps by the month of January I could send you four or five with a priest. Is it a major or minor seminary at Guayaquil? Fr. Morisseau hasn't made it clear.
2. There isn't any great feeling (concern) among us for faraway lands. Bishop Navarre is seriously ill. I heard about it by telegram. I don't know anything further about his present state of health. If anything happened the New Guinea mission would be seriously set back. There are only Fathers Toublanc and Vitale at Yule Island, together with some brothers, and that's not enough. The Protestant catechizers are making frightening progress due to our lack of numbers. Bishop Navarre is upset because of Bishop Verjus' departure. He was due to be ordained (Bishop of Yule) on the feast of Our Lady of the Seven Sorrows, the second Sunday in September, and then leave immediately for New Britain where the German Government does not want to acknowledge our confrères because it thinks they are affiliated to the Jesuits. You can see for yourself that problems are not wanting there, and I cannot see any one of our confrères in Europe prepared to go and share the labours of our poor missionaries who are being overwhelmed by the load of work and privations. It's very sad! Fathers Hartzler (Ferdinand) and Thomas (Eugène) did more harm than good on the mission there through their independent spirit, demands, insubordination. Bishop Navarre bitterly complained about this; they made him suffer greatly. Fr. Hartzler is at Thursday Island and Fr. Thomas in Sydney, having his dictionary and grammar in the native (kanaka) language printed in French as well as 'kanaka'.
3. You should have by now Fathers Barral and Peyrot; it is indeed a small number, but I couldn't send you any more as Fathers Roger and Meynier refused to go to Quito. Our members in Quito who wrote to their confrères in Rome, Issoudun, Spain, Antwerp, etc., have painted such a dark picture that nobody wants to go there. Superiors should supervise correspondence more adequately. The same holds for the missions.
4. We find, Father, that we are, perhaps, moving a little too rapidly with regard to the foundation of a Petite Oeuvre in Quito where our circumstances are far from being assured for us. A failure in the construction of the basilica could, moreover, compromise our position. On the other hand, the problem of finding a man able to lead our members in this (Quito) residence compels us to do nothing hastily. All our houses and missions are suffering through lack of subjects, and how are we going to find the man we want in order to take on seriously this new undertaking? Compelled by necessity we are placing all too soon young men in posts which absorb and damage them, prevent them from studying, and compromises, as you are aware, their vocation. Many of them at the present time still continue to give us cause for serious concern. It is only prudent not to move too quickly since, otherwise, we could compromise our whole Society. As far as Quito is concerned, it is not less wise to wait until we have rid ourselves of the unfortunate impression created by our presence there up to now. Before taking on anything else, we must first of all appoint capable and serious-minded personnel in the parish, people, as you know, we do not have at the moment.

Cheerio, my friend.
Regards to the Archbishop and everybody.
Wholly yours in Corde Jesu.

Dear Father Jouët,

I am sending on to you straightaway the letter sent to you by Bishop Verjus. A letter I received today from him, dated October 2, informs me that he has been ordained (Bishop). Bishop Navarre had to get up from his sick-bed and be helped to the altar. Poor Bishop Navarre is very ill; all the letters I get tell me so.

Bishop Verjus has sent me a lengthy report on our Oceania missions on behalf of Bishop Navarre. The conclusion drawn is that the Gilbert and Solomon Islands, which through shortage of members we cannot evangelize, should be relinquished, and that we should keep only New Guinea and New Britain, concentrating our forces there. It is likely that Bishop Navarre will send a report to Rome in this sense. In a previous letter I advised Bishop Navarre:

1. to ask for Bishop Verjus as his coadjutor as he cannot go on as things are with him at the moment;
2. to put forward Fr. Couppé as Vicar Apostolic of New Britain; and
3. Fr. Bontemps as Vicar Apostolic of the Gilbert Islands.

Bishop Navarre, very likely, would not have yet received this letter. I do not know what he will do. Oh! how we need the Sacred Heart to come to our aid, Our Lady and St. Joseph as well!

I forgot yesterday to forward you a number of Cosmos (magazine) where there is mention of a new substance of granite and artificial marble with clay. See page 393. Point this process out to Fr. Pierre Barral and to the committee of the basilica. If one can use this in Quito, as I believe you can, you will have a splendid edifice at no great cost. Fr. Issoudun, November 16, 1889

Dear Father Morisseau,

I am replying to your letter of October 17 and that of October 4.

1. Fr. Derichemont sent word to me from Watertown telling me of his arrival and that he had a good journey.
2. I am pleased that Fr. Roussel has returned 'to the straight and narrow'. I am going to write a little word of encouragement. You can look after him until further notice, and, while keeping him under supervision, make as much use of him as you possibly can.

3. I replied to Fr. Jouët requesting him for the time being not to take on the Guayaquil College as it would be seriously imprudent, compromising again our reputation which is already well tarnished. I said to him that it would be preferable to set up our own seminary in Guayaquil and send those of our young men there who would be likely to come under the military law (of conscription) on the 1st of January, and who would like to expatriate themselves (in order to avoid it), in which case there would be 4 or 5. They would complete their studies under your direction at the seminary, and on knowing well the country's language and its customs they could be put forward for orders, and then after some years one could undertake the direction of the national college at Guayaquil if it would be considered advantageous. Every year we could, perhaps, send you 2 or 3 of our young religious. This state of affairs is not feasible in our houses abroad which border on France because the French Government could extradite them and create problems for us, whereas in Ecuador there would be nothing as inconvenient as that. It is something to be tried, and if it succeeds with Guayaquil we could, perhaps, in a few years send some of our young men who have become priests either to the missions in Oceania or to our other houses abroad. Moreover, the French Government, hopefully, will not always be the same as it is now. If I could send you next December or January a priest with some young men, Fathers Carrière or Roger for example, it would greatly please me. But I very much doubt if it will be possible. I had selected Fr. Maynier to accompany Fathers Barral and Peyrot (to Quito), but he refused to go and I sent him to Barcelona; perhaps he will later have a change of mind. I wrote to the Administrator, the Vicar General. You can read this letter and then return it to him.

Issoudun, November 17, 1889

Dear Father Piperon,

You can be at ease as I have no intention of taking away Fr. Peeters from you; the thought never occurred to me. Otherwise, in similar circumstances, I would never act without consulting you. The good man (Peeters) had a pleasant journey; it's he himself, so Fr. Guyot tells me, who expressed the wish to come to Issoudun for his retreat.

Fr. Morisseau is at Guayaquil with Fr. Roussel, sub-Director of the seminary, and Fr. Roussel, chaplain to the brothers. Monsignor Barriga, the Diocesan Administrator whom you met at Issoudun when he was secretary to the Archbishop of Quito, would like to give us the direction of the seminary, and Fr. Morisseau greatly encourages me to take it on. There are only 30 students. The following are his reasons, and those of Fr. Jouët.

Military regulations will force many of our young religious, they say, to expatriate themselves to avoid the barracks which could lead to the loss of their vocation; to send them to our other European houses would expose us to investigations by the French Government which would forcefully bring them back, or close our Issoudun house. So long as these young men expatriate themselves, especially to Ecuador, they will be left in peace, whereupon once accepted by the Guayaquil seminary they would finish their studies there, become priests, and if the French Government has not changed between then and now one could make use of them either by sending them to the missions or to other houses of ours.

Fr. Guyot goes along with this suggestion, which greatly amuses me. He is casting his eyes on Fr. Offermans to lead, direct, take charge of the Guayaquil Seminary, saying that you have there in Tilburg a vice-bursar who could very well replace Fr. Offermans. What do you think of this? In any event, it is absolutely imperative that we give consideration to assuring the future of our young confrères who are due to be called up for military service at the beginning of next year. Those who agree to expatriate themselves cannot stay in Antwerp, Tilburg or Barcelona, because of being close to France, and still less so in Rome. I do not think either that it is possible at Salzburg or Glastonbury. There only remains then their being sent either to Watertown or Guayaquil, Quito or Sydney. It is absolutely imperative that we make a decision before the month of January. What is your view on this? I believe we have 5 or 6 young men who are due to be called up the next time.

I am sending on to you the indult for the transfer of the novitiate and another which authorizes us to make use of Fr. Blanchet for another house of ours if we so want it.

Eucher Blanchet, born February 20, 1860, at Ruffec, was ordained to the priesthood on July 5, 1885. He became assistant (socius) at Antwerp first, then Tilburg from October 1, 1889 to October 22, 1890. A curate at Saint Cyr, 1890, in 1893, October, he went to teach at Chezal-Benoît. Next year, 1894, 1895, he was at the Sacred Heart, Issoudun. He left the Society in 1896.

Bishop Navarre has written a sad letter to me, downcast because of his illness, and particularly so because of Bishop Verjus' departure. The New Guinea mission only now has Fathers Toublanc and Vitale. The Bishop asks us impatiently to send him one or two serious-minded priests with some well-chosen scholastics and brothers. Bishop Verjus supports his request most wholeheartedly, mentioning Fr. Henri Van Grinsven as very suitable. Would Fr. Blanchet like to go on the missions? Would he be suitable, also Brother Hubert? He would also very much like to have Fr. Meyer (the future General) who, so it appears, had written to him (Navarre) that he would join him with the greatest pleasure. But... but... My regards to good Fr. Hartzler and to your edifying group.

Cheerio, Father.

Issoudun, November 19, 1889

My Dear Lord and well-loved Father,

I thank you for your kind letter and all the details you have given me. The picture you present to me about the state of the New Guinea mission does not surprise me as I was already aware of it. Yes indeed, you cannot have there, unlike elsewhere, anything less than true missionaries, men of zeal and piety, obedient and truly apostolic, otherwise not at all. You and Bishop Navarre must lead with authority and be sometimes threatening to those who need to be so dealt with. If you come across them in the future, it is imperative that these individuals, religious in name only, understand that the heads of the mission represent the Pope and Jesus Christ, and see to it that things go rightly forward and with complete submissiveness. The more one deals lightly with them, the more arrogant and insubordinate they become. If it is necessary over time to impose some censure, to correct, heal, then, as St. Paul says, one must not hesitate. If they have the faith and appreciate the value of souls, they will not hesitate to sacrifice themselves. Kindness is a prerequisite, but so also firmness, since, otherwise, the mission would quickly come to ruin and our Society become discredited. I advised Bishop Navarre to ask for you as his coadjutor and put forward Fr. Couppé to replace you as Vicar Apostolic in New Britain. I also advised him to put forward Fr. Bontemps as Vicar Apostolic in Micronesia. As for petitioning the Holy See to take from us Micronesia and the Solomon Islands and give them to other Congregations, this seems premature to me. We shall always have time to return to that later if we see for ourselves that we cannot maintain these missions. The Holy See gave them to us and the Holy See will take them back from us when it considers it appropriate; it is not for us to take the initiative. Divine Providence has its ways; let us leave it to work out things. We have in the novitiate and scholasticate many young men who want to go to the missions; after a few more years we shall have, I hope, apostolic workers (on the missions). I think that I may be able to send you shortly Fr. Henri Van Grinsven and Brother Hubert who will be ordained priest at Christmas; I shall send some lay brothers and novices, perhaps some sisters.

When Bishop Navarre gets better, I shall advise you to come to Rome to provide an account of our missions, and meet the President of the Propagation of Faith and Holy Child Congregations. You will make a convincing case for your wonderful undertaking and promote it in France and Belgium. You will generate vocations, take in abundant financial resources, and stir up a great deal of interest. But do try and bring one or two little natives with you, and you will make a marvellous impact. Begin this trip as soon as possible and, believe me, our mission will be safeguarded.

Cheerio, my dear Lord and dearly-loved Father.
Wholly yours in Corde Jesu.

My regards to all. Let me have news of the Bishop (Navarre) as soon as possible.

Your Grace,

I hasten to thank Your Grace for the letters for which I am honoured to be the recipient. That from Bishop Navarre provides such interesting details that Catholic Missions (6, rue d'Auvergne, Lyons) or the Propagation of Faith Annals would be pleased to publish if you consider it appropriate, Your Grace, to send the material on to them. Its publication would help our mission. Following that demanding trip, Bishop Navarre fell gravely ill. The news of Bishop Verjus' appointment as Bishop brought him great sadness as the thought of his being deprived of his help only made him feel worse, Bishop Verjus being the only one there who knows well the native language and has a big influence on the natives. Bishop Navarre wants to have him as his coadjutor. As a consequence of Fr. Hartzler's illness, who went to Thursday Island (Torres Strait) to recuperate, and the departure of Fr. Thomas for Sydney to have his grammar and dictionary of the native language printed, truly a valuable undertaking, this left Bishop Navarre alone in his sick bed with two young priests without, as yet, much experience and 4 lay brothers. The Bishop with superhuman courage got up from his bed on the 22nd of September and ordained Bishop Verjus. It was, then, in the early days of October he sent me a telegram letting me know of his serious illness and asking me if he should straightaway do without Bishop Verjus, whose presence nevertheless seemed absolutely necessary, as he, Navarre, saw it, for the well-being of the mission, or have him staying on until his (Navarre's) recovery. I sent a telegram asking him to keep him, and I immediately wrote also to Cardinal Simeoni.

In a letter dated October 2, Bishop Verjus wrote to me: "Bishop Navarre continues to be seriously ill. His illness is effectively a series of illnesses. His kidneys are continually affected, the liver also. His stomach can scarcely hold down anything; his bowels are also affected. There is a considerable wasting away and very obvious weakness. In the view of us all here, the Bishop should be in a better (untropical) climate, that of the interior, for example, or Thursday Island. In any event, the Bishop should have a dependable coadjutor since it is particularly the administrative work, so demanding in this country, which damages and plays havoc with His Lordship's health..." I replied that the Bishop himself should deal directly with Rome and ask for Bishop Verjus as his coadjutor, requesting the Holy Father to appoint Fr. Couppé as Vicar Apostolic of New Britain, he already being Prefect Apostolic of these countries. I wrote in the same vein to Cardinal Simeoni. I don't know what's likely to happen. What's lacking are apostolic words. This mission, as you know, Your Grace, belongs to the Berry which has the right to appropriate it. Oh! If Your Grace might commend it to the zeal of your priests and prompt some good vocations, it would truly be a blessing.

I have the honour to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant and son in Corde Jesu.

Issoudun, November 22, 1889

Dear Father Vaudon,

I feel sorry for you, but how are all the problems you tell me about going to be remedied? Twenty times I drew the Reverend Father's attention to this. All my advice got nowhere. Health before everything else; the meat which could be off (bad); are you quite sure about the wine? Might it not be adulterated? This is to be kept in mind...

You are within your rights, my friend, when seriously insisting on, even demanding, observance of the Rule. A house led in an arbitrary fashion has no future. Consultation is necessary. The good Father (Delaporte) nonetheless promised me that he would regularly have Council meetings. Tell him that you will be in contact with me about this. I can understand the embarrassment of poor Fr. Chopin (who left the Society the previous year) having such a Superior as an old-fashioned bursar. Train him and get him to be aware of the way things are done since he is motivated by the best intentions. Welcome him warmly, come by his confidence and you will do him good. Dear Fr. Delaporte doesn't want to lose his propensity for good language, which diminishes him, nevertheless, by demonstrating the emptiness of his spirit. So, for example, in the presence of several women he said quite recently: "We are meant to live in the middle of flowers; before we had a rose, and now it's a daisy," referring to his cooks. This is shocking!

If it isn't too much to ask of you, Father, I make you responsible for the Petite Oeuvre promoters in Paris, the gateway to our missions which has been abandoned. These women, nevertheless, need to be encouraged; go and see them then, from time to time, and provide them with a little word of support. I would like to think that it's you who will preach the retreat to the women in the rue de Calais Chapel. Father (Delaporte) gets on their nerves by going on so long.

I am going to give a serious bit of advice to Mr. Gagnaret (difficult to decipher) and Fr. Maillard. There are 8 to 10 excess pages in our Annals. One needs to take out the article on St. Joseph and that dealing with the Sacred Heart Gospel which has already been presented many times. I believe that we should not return too often to our personal work (activities) since, otherwise, critical jealousy would focus on it.

I very much hope that Fr. Deidier will prepare well the December number of the Sacred Heart Review for which I have given him responsibility since Fr. Delaporte hasn't the time to deal with it. I hope Fr. Deidier chooses well his helpers so that this Review becomes quite interesting!

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Father,

It is already long since that Fr. Barateau has deserved to be given the interdict which strikes him down today. It is only after, so to say, exhausting their patience and good-will that the Bourges ecclesiastical authorities have undertaken this latest measure. How many times has it (the authority) tried to draw back from the abyss the unfortunate character whose fate now stirs us? I do not think that there will be any unanimity in the near future about taking him back into the diocese he has scandalized so often!

Nothing is said about his morals, but it appears that he is given to drink. Giving him money, only whets his appetite. I paid for his trip to Paris, and I was taken aback that he got off and remained at Orléans. I hope he will stay with Mr. (Fr.?) Migné or in some educational establishment in charge of studies and, thereafter, if his behaviour is in keeping with his promises, perhaps he could be re-admitted later.

I have the honour to be, Father, your most humble and obedient servant.

Dear Father Jouët,

1. I am somewhat late in replying to your letter enclosing the contract with regard to the Guayaquil College since I shared it with my colleagues on the Council, all of whom were unanimous that it was impossible for us in the present circumstances, however advantageous it would be otherwise, to take on this work. Like us you well know that we are totally lacking in personnel. Where would we find men with the requisite ability to run successfully this college? We haven't got them. One needs people who know Spanish well, are proficient in teaching and have the necessary expertise. Our own houses do not have the desirable personnel. Quito itself lacks an able and experienced Superior. I have looked about everywhere and I cannot see anybody I could send there. If we were foolhardy enough to take on Guayaquil we would be the recipients of the most severe criticism on the part of those opposing it, indeed rightly meriting it, creating for ourselves a complete fiasco which would discredit our Congregation for good in South America. Perhaps in 5 or 6 years we might be able to take on this undertaking, but for the time being we must pass it up despite the advantages offered us in the contract by the Minister for Religious. Extend to him our great regret, together with our keen acknowledgement. We are very embarrassed over the military regulations; several of our young religious, influenced by their parents, do not want to leave the country, preferring the barracks (conscription).

We have bought the Montfort house, rue Thiers, Marseilles, to establish ourselves there one day, but through lack of personnel we have been obliged to rent it to a family for one year.

For the past three months I have been affected by a bout of bronchitis which is not going away. I think that I am compelled to go and have a session at Amélie les Bains. This decision will cost me a great deal. Pray that I get better. You should by now have Fathers Barral and Peyrot with you.

My regards to all, and a Happy New Year.

Cheerio, my friend.

Wholly yours in Corde Jesu.

Dear Father,

Thanks for your kind letter and the good news you have for me about dear Fr. Hartzer. May the Lord be praised! I am pleased to hear that your community is very well; it boosts morale. Take care of those who are coughing. Fr. Guyot has gone to visit our Spanish houses. Canet-de-Mar needs leadership; on Father Guyot's advice I appointed Fr. Carrière Superior of this little college. Fr. Casas could not do everything. I hope that you will approve of this appointment.

Fr. Guyot is astonished by the salubrious climate of the country; while we have 5 or 6 degrees of frost, he tells me that down there they have 10 or 12 degrees of heat. He assures me that with some construction work it would be easy to set up an independent novitiate there holding up to 25 novices; if it is possible I believe it would be advantageous. Fr. Hartzer would, perhaps, find the place suitable and his health, due to the climate, would be very much better. What do you think? My bronchitis is not going away; it seems that it is tending to stay with me all the time. It tires me out considerably, particularly so because of my demanding work. And yourself, how are you? I have heard that you have been feeling exhausted. Do you feel better?

2. You will gratefully thank the Bishop of Marseilles for being so kind to us, and let him know that as soon as it is possible for us to do so we shall take up residence in the Marseilles house we have bought (at rue Thiers).
3. Yes, it would be appropriate that we arrange at the very least a feast day in honour of Blessed Chanel; arrange the date. You will give the panegyric at Issoudun, and also for the centenary of Blessed (now St.) Margaret Mary (Alacoque). You will be the animator and preacher for this centenary. Set out your programme; I give it my approval in advance.
4. I don't know if I shall be at Issoudun in January. If I do not get better between now and then, I shall go and take the waters (thermal baths). Tell him to write to me in complete freedom and I shall reply to him. Support him and encourage him as much as you can (Védère?).
5. I am sending you on a letter from Fr. Toublanc describing the ordination of Bishop Verjus. You will judge for yourself if following that (letter) from Sister Madeleine it merits a place (also) in our Annals. In any event, you will need to revise it and rewrite its French.

Dear Father,

1. Thank you for your comments. I am not surprised that a good spirit prevails in the Tilburg community. It couldn't be otherwise under your wise leadership, and if there are some difficult and awkward characters you will not hesitate to see them off; we need those who are truly religious.

2. Yes, the Canet-de-Mar climate agrees much better with Fr. Hartzler than any other. His particular condition puts him at the mercy of the weather's caprices. There (in Canet-de-Mar) it is really spring-like during the winter and the hottest weather does not get beyond 19 or 20 degrees. Besides, apart from the enormous expense, we are creating a bad precedent for ourselves in sending our invalids to pass the winter in nice hotels or elsewhere in the middle of a frenzied world. Religious, for the most part, should avoid such-like procedures as our Rule states. In Canet one is in our own place which is very different. Make sure, then, that the doctor never speaks to whomsoever is laid up about these ways of being cured without first contacting the Superior. Our new regulations again lay down this most prudent course of action.

Again convey all our good wishes and thanks to your dear community. Cheerio, my friend.

Wholly yours in Corde Jesu.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

The shortest route for Fr. Hartzler would be to go first to Paris, where he will rest, and from there to Issoudun, where he will stay for a few days, and go on from there to Perpignan and Canet.

Issoudun, January 5, 1890

Dear Father Jouët,

Thank you for your letter which I have just now received and also for your own good wishes and that of your community. I hope they bring me good fortune. I convey my own to you and, if the good Lord wills it so, you will all be pleased with things. Our undertakings at Quito and Guayaquil adding to the glory of the divine Heart of Jesus. Two days ago I had a telegram from Rome informing me that the Pope, in his latest consistory, has appointed Fr. Couppé Vicar Apostolic of New Britain to replace Bishop Verjus as coadjutor to Bishop Navarre, with the right of succession. Bishop Navarre, as you are aware, has been very well, but he is getting a little better. His strength is exhausted, but this news will add 20 years to his life. May the Lord be praised! You write, my friend, about sending you new confrères to Quito, together with a Superior. You know as well as I do that we haven't anyone, absolutely nobody. Fr. Carrière has been appointed Superior of the little Canet-de-Mar College; he is in absolute horror at the prospect of Quito. The confrères who have been there have painted such a frightening picture of the place that nobody wants to go there. I hope that this dislike will not be permanent. Accordingly, Quito will have to make do as best it can with its present personnel. Our good confrères there must not take on more work than they can readily cope with. There is talk of a Petite Oeuvre, an excellent idea in itself, but who would look after it? It is better to wait since, otherwise, we could have another fiasco on our hands.

As soon as you consider the Quito house to be getting along quite well, a spirit of fervour, zeal, regularity of life characterising the place and offering, thereby, serious prospects for the future, you may return by way of Watertown (USA). You are a big loss to me, my friend, and to the Rome house. In your absence I am afraid that in Rome more than one section is being slashed from our Constitutions. I firmly believe that Fr. François Barral has made up by his regret, zeal, devotedness, for his previous foolishness, and that the Archbishop will overlook his past and pardon him for allowing himself to be led astray by others. When you are about to return we shall consider who we might send there as Superior. Prevail upon Fr. Pierre Barral to be prudent and go about his work efficiently. Fr. Morisseau has written to me saying that the people of Guayaquil in no way whatever want the college to be in the charge of ecclesiastics, even those of Ecuador, and even less in the charge of religious. Freemasonry has its tentacles in this issue. I myself would like Fathers Morisseau and Roussel to stay in Guayaquil because they like being there, and they are trying to establish a foothold there.

Cheerio, Father.

Regards to yourself and everybody in Corde Jesu.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Dear Father Vaudon,

Here's a letter from Fr. Fromm which could be put into our Annals. You would need to make it more expressively French, improve certain phrases, before inserting it. I think it will interest our subscribers. (For Fromm, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, passim). Accompanying it, you might insert one or two snapshots of New Guinean natives which Bishop Navarre took. These characters with their mass of hair appeared in the Annals some years ago. Give thought to an article coinciding with the appointment of Bishop Couppé to the Vicariate Apostolic of New Britain. He will be very surprised if one is to judge by his enclosed letter (with Fromm's).

Dear Father,

1. Fr. Offermans may leave one day earlier. He should then be with you on Monday morning. Since he gave no money to Fr. Comte who was accompanying Fr. Hartzler, I had to give Fr. Comte 200 francs (about 660 euros) for their journey.

Offermans was at this moment Tilburg's bursar and director of the brothers. For quite sometime he had been looking for a benevolent bishop. He did become secularized on September 2, 1903, dying at Utrecht on May 28, 1911.

2. You all too readily make your helpers indispensable to you and, accordingly, I fear that you do not attribute to these young priests any great importance. They are too taken up in themselves with their own opinions. This is the big weakness of our young priests.

I cannot let you know as yet if we shall have a novitiate in Canet-de-Mar and when this might be. For that to happen we need much more than what we have at the moment. Besides, there are many formalities to be met, and things don't happen quickly in Rome. Consequently, you should carry on as if you still had a complete novitiate.

3. I am taken by complete surprise when you inform me that there are 120,000 francs (about 397,340 euros) to be paid on the spot for the work in Tilburg. The letters written to me, when approval was being sought, gave me to understand that there was money in the bank and that debts were not being undertaken. My good faith has been once again taken by surprise!!! I am taken aback that in order to favour your young men and make their ideas win out you hide the truth. What embarrassment would a loan yet again create for you? It would be best to send out one of your confrères in Holland to collect money for your Tilburg house.

Issoudun, January 21, 1890

CONFIDENTIAL

Dear Father,

I return to consider the circumstances created for our young French members by the diabolical military law.

1. Each one of them must produce a document in which it is stated that it is fully voluntary on his part and with the consent of his parents, uninfluenced by anyone, that expatriation is preferred to conscription.

2. It is absolutely imperative that they avoid saying or writing that they belong to a religious Congregation whose mother house is in France. Otherwise, the Superior of that Congregation will be sought out by law, and condemned to two years in prison, fined 2,000 francs (about 6,620 euros).

3. Let them simply say that they either belong to the missionary house in Tilburg, Holland, or that they are free (untied) and are studying at the Antwerp Seminary for foreign missions. This outrageous French law has no impact on those who live in foreign countries. Consequently, neither the Tilburg or Antwerp Superiors have anything to worry about.

4. Both the Tilburg and Antwerp houses must then cease, either in the Annals or other printed material, which could fall into the hands of the public, to make any reference to Issoudun, or leave it to be understood that there is any dependence whatsoever on us or on myself. Take my name out of your Annals, putting instead that of Fathers Piperon, Reyn or Offermans. It is, therefore, very necessary to us to be careful and act as if externally we had no dependent relationship. Pass on this letter to Fr. Piperon. (!)

This last sentence leaves it to be understood that the letter was not originally addressed to Piperon, but perhaps rather to Fr. Reyn at Antwerp. Alternatively, it may well be that Chevalier wanted to address the letter to Reyn instead of Piperon. There is nothing so personalized in the letter that it could not have been written to either.

1. I am pleased to gather that you have at last returned to Quito in good health together with your travelling companions.
2. I myself have written to you that since the beginning of October I was laid up with a bout of bronchitis which was not going away. The Dr. told me that I would only be rid of it with the coming of fine weather. I have then still a lot of time to wait. If the outbreak of influenza was not prevalent all over France I would have gone to Amélie-les-Bains for a month, but this is impossible for the time being. Pray for me.
3. I am amazed that you have had no letters from Rome, yet Fr. Védère has written several times stating that he was in correspondence with you and kept you up to date about everything that was happening in Rome. Yes, Brothers Mathieu and Benedetti have been ordained priests.
4. I had, indeed, suggested to Fr. Védère that Brother Delmas (a sub-deacon then at Issoudun's Sacred Heart) could help him out in some ways, and he replied that he didn't need Brother Delmas or anybody else and, consequently, Brother Delmas remained in Issoudun. I wrote yesterday to Fr. Védère asking him to write to you and present his candle on February 2 in your name. I hope he will do so.
5. Fr. Védère has written saying that entry forms for the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart are being requested from the Republic of Argentina and elsewhere, and he says that you didn't leave any instructions with him and he doesn't know what to do.
6. I can assure you, my friend, that nobody has it in mind to cause you any embarrassment about what has been overlooked. You promised an article about Quito, describing your departure, journey, and our undertakings in Ecuador. The article hasn't yet arrived. Hurry up, send it on, and all will be forgiven.

Cheerio, Father.
Convey my greetings to everyone.
Wholly yours in Corde Jesu.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Madame du Quesne, Issoudun, is very ill and without any great hope for her. Fr. Batard is exhausted; Fr. Vaudon is in bed with influenza. Fr. Hartzer, from Tilburg, presently with Madame Caseneuve in Marseilles, is much better, and will go on to breathe the warm air of Canet-de-Mar (Spain). I repeat once more just in case you didn't get my last letter, that Fr. Couppé has been appointed Vicar Apostolic of New Britain in place of Bishop Verjus who remains coadjutor to Bishop Navarre with the right of succession.

J.C.

The Saint Quentin priests of Sittard and elsewhere are experiencing bad times. They are appealing for funds everywhere; trying to pass themselves as missionaries of the Sacred Heart. Fr. Reyn in Antwerp has drawn up a dossier against them with genuine citations. He is leaving for Rome to make a personal complaint against them and compel them to keep to their title of Oblates of the Sacred Heart. He will also bring up (in Rome) the Averbode problem which is becoming more and more threatening, troublesome, for us.

The mass is taken care of, and this gentleman has been informed that one will try to have the contribution (offering) mentioned in the Annals.

Dear Reverend Father,

I have the honour to inform you that at the first meeting of the committee I shall take responsibility for setting aside for you five francs, specifically intended for those Missionaries of the Sacred Heart working in Australia. In return one requests a mass in honour of the Blessed Virgin (2 francs) and masses for the souls in Purgatory. Likewise it is requested that the name of Mademoiselle Morin be mentioned in the Annals.

Please accept, Father, my respectful good wishes and appreciation.

Ct. G.S. Beaurepaire

Have you read in the Universe of January 16 the article by Mr. Roussel about the collection for those expelled? Also the reply on the 24th by Fr. Maurille? If this procedure was followed by the greater part of religious, it would be very advantageous to the undertakings.

Chevalier comments: I do not know exactly what he wants to say – but I think he wants the Universe to publish letters from our priests supporting his work.

Undated, possibly February 8, 1890

A letter with reference to Fr. Pierre Barral's role in the construction of the basilica.

Your Grace,

My confrère, Fr. Barral, has sent me what seems to be a compromise document bearing the signature of your Vicar General in which it is laid down that the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart are responsible, leaving aside any architect and any contractor, and with the help alone of a master tradesman, for the supervision of the workers and the carrying out of work at Quito's national basilica. My confrère, likewise, requests me to intervene with the appointed architect to obtain the most advantageous conditions and requisite answers to our request, in order to facilitate the work on and from our side at such a considerable distance away. All our commitment is at the disposal of Your Grace. I shall exactly fulfil everything which will depend on me with regard to the architect. But as regards carrying out the work, you will permit me, Your Grace, to submit some observations to you which you will, I am confident, graciously accept.

The only articles in our contract which call for our initiative in the construction of the basilica are 6 and 9.

Article 6 is so expressed: "As regards the building of the national Basilica to the Sacred Heart at Quito, a central committee will be set up under the guidance of the Archbishop and the support of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart for the purpose of choosing the basilica's site, drawing up the plan, presenting a model, and having the work carried out in accordance with the financial resources which could be provided for the national shrine."

Article 9 stipulates that: "All the offerings which the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart receive for the building and decoration of the basilica will be registered and sent to the Archbishop who will hand them on to the committee's treasurer."

Article 9 doesn't give rise to any comment; its carrying out is easy, and entails no responsibility. Article 6 limits the co-operation of the missionaries to a choice of committee acting in agreement with His Grace, the Archbishop, setting it down that it is the committee which will choose the siting of the basilica, draw up the plans, present a model, and have it carried out as proposed, etc. At the present moment, Your Grace, the site is chosen, the plan agreed upon, apart from a detail involving proportion (balance) which will be easily modified.

There remains the carrying out of the work.

Given the terms of the contract, the committee is responsible. The compromise mentioned above places responsibility on the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart. It's here, Your Grace, that big obstacles present themselves. My Council and myself freely consented to send Fr. Pierre Barral to become entirely involved in the basilica's construction with respect to all that lay within his competence. He would be, if you so wish it, Your Grace, the committee's agent:

1. to inform you about the nature, price, quantities of the different materials being employed; 2. he will deal with those providing materials and make official requests, but only with the approval of the treasury or any ad hoc representative of the committee.
3. He will receive the materials; take careful stock of the quantities and make available each time this information to the member of the committee appointed for this purpose, unless the said individual, in order to avoid being over-taxed, only wishes to have such information periodically, each week for example.
4. He will present the different schemes, setting out the requirements involving the stonework in keeping with what is required and as set out by the architect.
5. He will supervise the building site so that the materials are available and carefully looked after to avoid anything rotten.

I have had to do a lot of building during my career, Your Grace. In conscience I do not think that we can advantageously reach beyond our situation in these circumstances; what's involved goes greatly beyond the undertaking of the Oblate Fathers at the Paris national shrine.

There are responsibilities which we cannot take upon ourselves without being dangerously imprudent and thereby exposing ourselves to public ridicule. The work involved in the building of a great church, Your Grace, is very hazardous, and workers set on earning as much money as possible are normally not greatly engaged. It needs only very little to compromise the solidity of a scaffolding, causing the death of one or several men. Again it only needs a lack of care among the masons about a certain height to bring about a collapse of considerable portions of walls and vaults. With respect to all these matters, Your Grace, it is necessary to have a man of expertise, intelligent, experienced, having real responsibility in facing up to accidents which can come about. In taking on the supervision of the work without an architect on the spot, and without a go-between, we are taking upon ourselves this kind of responsibility, and we cannot reasonably take it upon ourselves. Your Grace in his wisdom will weigh all these considerations, and have recourse to an expert. Permit me, Your Grace, to add: where Your Grace considers this last proposal impractical, he may wish to take upon himself all moral and material responsibility for accidents which would come about, and let us be informed in advance of our being discharged of responsibility in the circumstances here outlined. Our confrères would then be no more than simply employees carrying out your orders, free of all responsibility while committing themselves to the work.

NB: There will be something to be added to Fr. Jouët's letter if one is conveying some significant piece of information to the Archbishop. It could be added on at the presbytery. Well understood, what I propose is a simple plan which can perhaps be modified or left aside. If the latter course is chosen, I disclaim any responsibility before God with respect to anything which will happen. (Chevalier had written, though crossed out) We would prefer to abandon the undertaking.

Issoudun, February 3, 1890

Most Holy Father,

The under-signed Superior General of the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, whose mother house is at Issoudun in the Archdiocese of Bourges, France, has the honour to present to Your Holiness what follows:

By decree of the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences, dated April 26, 1879, the Universal Archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart was established in Rome at the church of the same name under the protection of His Eminence the Cardinal Vicar, being exclusively placed in the care and direction of the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, which Society is declared in this very same decree to be closely and indissolubly linked to the aforementioned Archconfraternity.

In order, then, to safeguard the work's unity and avoid anything such as two archconfraternities of the same name functioning simultaneously in the same diocese or even in the same country, the under-signed petitioner very humbly requests that the confraternities and archconfraternities of the same name which have been set up outside of any affiliation to the universal archconfraternity uniquely granted to the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, and in consequence at variance with the privileges granted to them (the MSCs) by the same decree, such as those which are at Sittard in Roermund diocese, Holland, and Averbode in Malines Diocese, Belgium, should be placed under the direction of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart.

Prostrate at your sacred feet, I have the honour to be, most Holy Father, your holiness' most submissive and obedient son in C.J.

J. Chevalier,

Sup.Gen., Mis.SC.

The Archbishop of Bourges, humbly prostrate at the feet of the Sovereign Pontiff, requests His Holiness to take into consideration Rev. Father Chevalier's supplication, as the Superior (General) of the Society of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Issoudun, and to preserve for this Society the privilege which has been so helpful to its development and to the growth of the laity's piety, and the direction of the universal archconfraternity of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for which it is exclusively responsible.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I am getting a little better, but I am not yet free of the bronchitis which has now lasted 4 months. For the past 10 days I am threatened with influenza, but I firmly hope I shall escape it. Madame du Quesne in Issoudun died from it when she got pneumonia. Her funeral took place ten days ago with a massive number of people present. She is a great loss to Issoudun.

The Superiors you request for Quito cause me great embarrassment. I do not see anybody capable I can send to you. All our houses are short of personnel, and those in them are very much needed. Fr. Ramot wants to leave Watertown because of the problems he has been faced with. Do you think he would be satisfactory as Fr. Barral's Superior? I doubt it. In any event, who is there to replace him? Would Fr. Chétail in the Glastonbury house be of the stature to replace him? I do not think so. You say to me: why not send Fr. Tréand there? But Fr. Tréand is the lynch-pin of Glastonbury... Fr. Moncorget is very laid up with his chest, and the Dr. thinks that the Quito climate would be good for him, but our dear patient doesn't want it mentioned. Yet this dear little father would be very suitable as Superior of Sagrario, but it would take a miracle to make him decide to leave. If Fr. Peyrot were to write a nice letter to him praising the climate and telling him that his health would improve, it would, perhaps, be helpful.

Your prolonged absence, my friend, is disadvantageous for the Rome house, for the approval of our Constitutions, which is not going ahead, and for all matters for which recourse to the Procurator is necessary. I think, then, that if you feel matters in Quito are sufficiently stabilized, you might think about returning. You will go direct to Watertown where you are expected and make a canonical visit in keeping with our regulations. You will smooth out the problems arising from the building of a new church, and you will deal with Fr. Ramot's difficulties. You will then return to France as I am so keen to see you.

Since it is likely that on your return, or a little later, we shall be having a Chapter, you should ask your colleagues in Quito, Guayaquil and Watertown, to put on paper their views on the subject of the new rules, both general and particular, since because of the vast distances you will be their representative at the Chapter. I shall also make use of the same general Chapter to name a Vicar General with the right of succession. I am adamant about this as I feel that I am worn out, and I shall be very happy if, before my death, my successor has been decided on in order to avoid any problems created at such a time. You will, therefore, also ask them to put in writing their views on this issue or, better, provide a name.

You will read the letter I wrote to the Quito Vicar General in reply to him. I consider that we are being given too much responsibility for the basilica project. Advise well, and carefully, Fr. Pierre Barral. Make sure that he remains keen, and does nothing which would be imprudent! Otherwise, we would lose out for ever more in Ecuador!

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in Corde Jesu.

Issoudun, February 5, 1890

Dear Fr. Barral,

Our Very Reverend Superior, unable to do so himself, has asked me to inform you that he received your letter and the enclosed documents, according to which you have agreed to take on yourself the direction of the work without architect or contractor. Fr. General looks upon this last as seriously tempting fate in work so dangerous as that of building a huge church. You must abide by the instructions contained in article 6 of the contract, and those just now forwarded to Fr. Jouët.

You must be very cautious, my friend, as only the experience of qualified people provides the desired competence for the organizing and development of such an undertaking, either from the economic point of view in buying materials, or from the dangers to be met within setting up and taking down scaffolding, or the use of machinery. All this is new to you and, generally speaking, the workers can be careless, inept. A normal foreman has very seldom the requisite competence in these matters. A businessman responsible in the face of accidents involving deaths and other injuries of a lesser nature, is alone competent in expertise to provide technical assurance as regards those minute technical details which need to be undertaken by those in the trade. Such knowledge you do not have, and your fiery temperament does not offer the desired guarantee for an undertaking of such a nature. Many very qualified people have often had cause to regret what overtook them. It is best then to keep within the role and limits assigned to you, and stay where, and as, you are, despite any appeals being made to you and, also, despite your natural inclinations which give you so much to cope with, since, generally speaking, you are too sure of yourself (given to knowing it all!).

I pray that the divine carpenter will move and guide you, my friend, as I say.

Wholly yours in Corde Jesu.

Guyot, MSC.

Our Very Reverend Father (General) will arrange with Mr. Tarlier everything which he can do to help matters along.

Fr. Chevalier here intervenes with his own letter to Barral.

February 8, 1890

Dear Fr. Barral,

Mr. Tarlier (the architect) cannot arrive in Issoudun until tomorrow, February 9, and the boat leaves St. Nazaire on the 10th. There will not be time for us, then, to make known to you what passed at our meeting. I do believe, however, that he will be favourable to, and in agreement with, your wishes. It's the boat which leaves Bordeaux on the 26th which will bring you all the recommendations.

Yes, Brother Perriot would have been very helpful to you, but the dear boy, following bad advice given to him, thought he could present himself to the French Consul in Antwerp and ask that he be considered an ecclesiastical student in France and as such be exempted from military service. Kind words were spoken to him. He was advised to take himself to Nantes where the military authorities sent him to the Claretians where he is kept under surveillance. One learns from this escapade. Although a deacon, I firmly believe that he will be made to do his military service. Everything goes against us.

Cheerio, my friend; be prudent, circumspect, very proper and live as a good religious should. I bless you in Corde Jesu.

Wholly yours, and good wishes to dear Fr. Peyrot also.

Dear Father,

I am in a hurry to send this letter to you.

Yesterday I informed Fr. Thomas that he was no longer a member of our Society because of what has led up to this decision; his return to France against the wishes of his Superiors being responsible for this verdict. I shall only accept him from now on as being affiliated and a secular priest of the Sacred Heart. We have no responsibility, then, for his activities. If you think it appropriate let Fr. Caseneuve and Fr. Granvalle know about this, and the Bishop also if you think fit.

Eugène Thomas de Lence had been ordained eleven years previously, September 20, 1879, and worked at Chezal-Benoît, Arles, Paris, Papua; judged by Chevalier to be "independent, unsubmitive, not greatly given to regularity". Chevalier and his Council removed him from the Society on January 9, 1890. Thomas died at Fécamp in August 1902.

Since Fr. Thomas is very preoccupied about doing something, instead of setting up something or other which he wants to, I advised him to make himself available as a teacher to Mr. Barnovo (uncertain spelling), for example. Calm down! Brother Jean-Baptiste Perriot is not yet free of his problems. He was forced, contrary to my wishes, into an inextricable set of circumstances when put in the clutches of the French Consul in Antwerp. Thinking they were doing the best thing, they couldn't have made things worse.

I do not agree, my child, with the thrust of your letter. If you need a lecturer, see the director of the scholasticate who will replace Brother Perriot with someone else.

Your Superiors have enough problems to face in meeting all the concerns of the Society's houses. You only see a little part of the picture, that which concerns you. Your Superiors have overall concern and perspective. Leave them to guide the ship to the best of their ability and accept their decisions. February 24, 1890

Dear Father,

I am here at Amélie-les-Bains for the past 4 days. I think my health is all the better for it. Fr. Laviaille is with me.

1. Yes, you may write a cheque for 3,966 francs. But we need to reach an understanding about the future. What was the money used for which I sent to you when you were still at Antwerp? You know that with all the expenses facing the mother house, itself crushed by the founding of houses abroad as well as those of Paris and Vichy, etc., and besides there's the 10,000 francs which has to be paid every year to the Holy See in addition to the interest, bringing it to 12,000 francs, without taking into consideration the annual debt of the Rome house which is considerable, you must, I say, be aware then that the mother house, with all its commitments, cannot meet the full costs of the upkeep of novices and scholastics. It is necessary, therefore, that the other particular houses come to its aid, as happens in all the other Congregations. This would be by way of an annual contribution which we shall decide on at our next Council meeting. We shall, then, set out a reasonable sum for each contribution. I think that for Tilburg, as for Antwerp, 500 francs should be enough; that which would three-monthly support 17 students at 2,125 francs, and not at 3,966 francs which it would be for 66 students, and if one raised the fee to 600 francs, the cost of the three-monthly term would come to 2,600 francs. (The French editor justifiably remarks that he cannot see how these figures make sense!) Issoudun will not contribute anything further; Tilburg and Antwerp must not exceed these calculations and can do so by keeping a close financial watch over everything.

2. Your civic Society could be really advantageous, but I find that there's too much that is Dutch in its make-up. If within 30 years the Dutch groupings want to cut themselves off and form a group of their own, or on your death, nothing will be more easy (this is confidential). The Dutch section should not have a majority. What do you think? I would not dare to take on myself alone such responsibility, but at the very least in the understanding that each member of the Society puts his signature either to a private deed or a solicitor's draft acknowledging that the moveable and immovable goods of this civil Society belong in full right to the mother house of the Congregation of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, whose centre is at Issoudun, and of which the members of the said Society are sons and representatives, and in case of conflicts the Holy See will be judge and sovereign arbiter. This precautionary measure appears, I think, to be judicious and necessary.

Amélie-les-Bains, March 2, 1890

Dear Father,

Here at Amélie I got your letters. Thanks a thousand.

1. Yes, it is in order, very much so, that Fr. Pierre Barral should not hear confessions; I so informed him ever so emphatically in Father Guyot's presence and that of all the other Council priest members. He hasn't gone to Quito for anything other than overseeing the basilica's construction, the propagation of our devotions and the Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Annals. If you think that he be allowed to hear men's confessions so much the better and I approve what you decide in this regard. As for that of women and youngsters, he must stay clear of this since it's not his role there.

2. When he (Barral) left, there was only the question of one community, that of Sagrario, where he would take up residence. Little Fr. Peyrot accompanied him, being meant to be his assistant. It was understood that he (Barral) would not go out on his own. He himself understood the appropriateness of this regulation. I informed him that while living at Sagrario he would not be Superior of the house, and would obey whoever was Superior of the house in whatever had to do with the religious life and its obligations, even his own brother if appointed to be in charge of him, but he would have a certain independence as regards the work on the basilica. Otherwise, the letter I wrote to you on this issue, and what I gave to Fr. Barral himself, stated nothing different. Here now there's the proposal to set up another community at Balen for which three people are being sought, one a Superior. Nothing such as this was foreseen. Where do you think we are going to find adequate personnel when our houses are lacking subjects? Fr. Delaporte says that Fr. Miniot cannot leave Paris where he is the only confessor, and, moreover, all our Council members consider him to be unsuitable as Superior; it would be a repeat of the Fr. Morisseau episode, and, very likely, a repetition of the same goings-on. Quito has already cost us 6 members and has a great deal of monetary expense attached to it, being truly a mill-stone around our necks which we keep going on with. Yet in today's letter you say that Fr. François Barral should be moved, and you mention replacing him with Fr. Grom. This would be the seventh. (Grom at this time was in Watertown, USA.) In the first place, do you really know what Fr. Grom is like? I find that the American way of life has made him very independent. Does he offer much in the way of guarantees? Get in touch quite frankly with Fr. Ramot about him. My friend, we have taken upon ourselves too many undertakings in Quito in relation to the small number of subjects at our disposal. Together with the Brothers' (De La Salle) chaplaincy, we have three different undertakings for which we need specialist staff, something we haven't even got for Sagrario. I very much fear that we shall be unable to hold on to Quito despite all our good will, and that everything will end in a fiasco. Between ourselves, let it be said that I am not too disappointed if the serious problems brought up by the architect postpone for years the construction of the basilica. At least this would give us time to consolidate ourselves in Sagrario. I do not see how it is possible, or even prudent, for us to take immediate charge of the Balen parish since this doesn't come into the conditions laid down. We can get ourselves too caught up and end up choking ourselves in Ecuador. You can see for yourself that this little Balen parish creates problems with Fr. Barral which would not have otherwise come to the fore. Oh! My friend, what concerns (nightmares) this Quito undertaking is giving me! My health is getting a little better. Pray for me. I pray very much for you as I miss you.

Cheerio, Father; wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

If Fr. François Barral is getting on well in Quito, why change him? The Archbishop is not an ogre. If Fr. Barral asks his forgiveness for what has happened in the past and promises to be most submissive for the future, the Archbishop will forgive him. Fr. Moncorget has decided to go to Quito. He would make a good Superior at Sagrario. Fr. François Barral could again take on the Brothers' chaplaincy. If the issue concerning Fr. Perriot ends satisfactorily to his advantage, I shall also make him available to you. If work on the basilica is adjourned, Fr. Pierre Barral could engage himself in spreading our works in Ecuador as well as propagating the Annals.

For the renewal of my jurisdictional powers, I sent on from here (Amélie-les-Bains) your request to Fr. Piperon, together with your letter.

Amélie-les-Bains, March 10, 1890

Dear Father Jouët,

I am leaving Amélie next Monday and I shall be back in Issoudun for the feast of St. Joseph. Since I came here the weather has been dreadful, rain and snow, six degrees of frost, fierce wind, heavy snow over 3 days, and today the mistral (the cool sweeping wind specific to South Eastern France through the Rhone Valley) blows strongly. This season of taking to the thermal waters, from which I had hoped for a great deal, has done nothing for me. I am returning to Issoudun without any improvement, so I hope the fine summer days will cure me. What makes me tired, tense, and made ill are the headaches created for me by Quito, and the problems arising from our other houses. You ask me for men, and where do you think I can find them when all our other houses are in need? There should only be one community in Quito, and it's now being claimed that there should be another with its own personnel, and yet we are lacking in personnel. As I said to you in my last letter, Quito has already had 6 or 8 people whose travel tickets had to be paid for, and these people have done more harm than good, creating gaps in Europe which need to be filled. Several have left the Society; the two who are at Guayaquil are of no use. The newly-arrived whom we have sent to Quito have also left gaps to be filled, and we haven't been able to replace them in relation to what they were doing, which means an added burden for the houses where already each one has more to do than he can cope with. And now you are asking me to replace Fr. François Barral, and that in addition I send on 3 or 4 priests when I don't have any. Really, this makes me despair. I foresee something: given the personnel problems in Quito, once you have left, divisiveness will spring up among the young inexperienced confrères without leadership and we shall have a repetition of what went on at Sagrario. This is a concern. And, as well, my friend, your being away from Rome and France for more than a year has been a disadvantage to the Society, has it not? Our Constitutions suffer at the hands of the Congregation. Nobody, like you, can succeed and bring about a happy solution on an issue like this.

Averbode and the Saint-Quentin priests are still posing great problems for our confrères in Belgium and Tilburg. Fr. Reyn has gone to Rome to protest, but he is not your equivalent, and it continues to be Quito which explains your prolonged absence, and which itself creates so many problems. Again, if only at the cost of so many sacrifices, the house was solidly established and the undertakings definitely set up with the likelihood of success! But not so! Everything will return as a problem following your departure and what are we going to do? Try then to have the work on the basilica postponed given the problems raised by the architect, and let us simply concern ourselves with Sagrario, which is more than enough (at the moment).

You tell me that I should rest! And how can I do that when all the assistants are away, and I am left with such an amount of correspondence that I am overwhelmed. I thought I could have some rest at Amélie, but each day I had ten letters to write in answer to all the problems which were arising from our houses. No, I shall not put up with such a situation any longer when, and where, everyone wants to improve the situation in words when, in fact, it's getting worse all the time.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

To Father Jean Vaudon, MSC, presently at Marseilles.

Amélie, March 10, 1890

Dear Father,

I am limited as to the time available to me. I have only 28 days' leave. I must be back in Issoudun by March 18. Moreover, in order to pass through Tarascon, I am taking the school-train, which will give me 12 more hours in the train. My journey goes through Toulouse, Limoges, etc. During my time here the weather has been dreadful, and today there's a gale. It has been a wasted visit for me. Next Monday I leave Amélie. It's not possible to go to Marseilles.

I really thought the Montfort house was rented out. Mr. Caseneuve had a priest get in touch with me who offered to rent it for an undertaking. I gave him (Caseneuve) full permission to negotiate the deal, and now you tell me that the house is closed all the time. Obviously we ourselves do not have the required personnel to open it at this moment and the best thing, then, is to rent it. What you tell me about Bishop Robert greatly pains me. The little pilgrim's guide has worked out very well, but not so that for the Rosary of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, a copy of which I sent on to you yesterday. The printing is dreadful, the illustrations must be looked at again because the blue colour is detestable. I wrote to Mr. Paillard saying that I couldn't accept such work. It's you who dealt with him about the guide. The plates belong to us, and it was only on this understanding that we pay so expensively.

I am exhausted and overwhelmed by these letters. Thanks a thousand from me to dear, kind, Mr. Caseneuve. The reply I have made to you is in keeping with his kind letter which I have just now received.

Cheerio, my friend.

Every good wish to you in C.J.

C 18900319

To different local Superiors of the Society.

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be everywhere loved!

Issoudun

Feast of St. Joseph, March 19, 1890

Dear Reverend Father,

Given the extent to which our little Society is expanding and our houses increase, we feel the need to lay down serious and secure traditions which will be the strength of our institute and contribute in a powerful fashion to the maintenance among us of a cherishable unity in the same spirit.

1. It was for this purpose, as we already mentioned to you, that we modified our earliest rules in certain detailed respects. In order, however, for the rules to bring about the results we expect from them, it is necessary that each individual should apply himself to a requisite knowledge and practice of them. That is why I am asking our dear, respected, local Superiors to see to it that:

1. All the normal rules and Constitutions are publicly read each month either in the refectory or as spiritual reading, and that the particular rules are read also, if not in public at least privately by the religious to whom they are relevant.

2. Each and everyone one faithfully fulfils what is prescribed by the Constitutions and Rules. If there are some requirements which cannot be undertaken without serious inconvenience, one should write to us asking for the necessary dispensation. But if the Superiors are obliged, by virtue of their office, to see to it that the Rules are followed, they themselves are also obliged to give good example in following out themselves all that is required of them. In this respect, I would like to draw the attention of our dear confrères, the local Superiors, to a specific point in our Rules, that which is formulated in numbers 203, 207, 208 of the particular regulations, page 88 and following. This matter is of very great importance, for the following reasons: through our vow of poverty we are all required to look after what we are responsible for in administration in a spirit of submissiveness and dependence. Now each local Superior has, with the co-operation of the bursar, responsibility for all the community's property. How can we reconcile, given the distance of the major Superiors, the advantageous promotion of things with the holy dependence and submissiveness to which he is bound by the vows of poverty and religious obedience? He does so by giving a good example of his accountability, in drawing up as carefully as possible his budget each year, and conscientiously making available his annual accounts. (Up to now the accounts were only asked for once a year at the end of December, a time also when one must budget for the incoming year.) The budget is the official requirement made by the Superior for those financial contributions which meet the material needs of his house during the forthcoming year. These accounts are the written statement indicating that he (the Superior) has judiciously remained within what he has been allowed (budgeted for), and has not exceeded his limits. The accounts are in some way, if I may use a comparison which explains my thinking, the accounting by conscience of that which relates to the vows of poverty.

It is also our resolve, rightly understood, not, morally, to allow for expenses other than those foreseen in the budget (other than those specific matters because of which Superiors have to ask us in writing for special permission), and also to ratify the accounts only insofar as they are in order.

Up to now some of our good and respected Superiors have not paid enough attention to those aspects of the Regulations to which we are referring and they haven't, we believe, fully understood their importance from the point of view of poverty and, as a consequence, conscience. From this there follows badly presented accounts and, in consequence, budgets and accounts badly compiled or of little value because they offer fictitious sums, placed there to fill up the (financial) columns, aimed in advance at giving rise to a specific figure.

Last year we tried to make the accounts of all our houses uniformly easier by having printed the receipts' and expenses' books in complete uniformity with the budget sheets, and the accounts such as we require from each Superior.

Arising from this new method, a little good-will suffices to bring about perfect accountability and, in consequence, budgets and accounts which are correct and up to date. Accordingly, we are confident, indeed convinced, that our good Superiors, drawing on their spirit of faith of which we are well aware, will provide us from now on with accounts and budgets above reproach, thereby gaining for themselves all the blessings and merits of well observed poverty and obedience.

2. This initial observation on the local Superiors' financial planning leads us to make another. Number 83, page 88, of the same Regulations, says that each house must have a safe locked with three different keys. Up to now this Regulation was a dead letter so far as the majority, if not all, of our houses was concerned. We very much insist, however, that this Regulation be put into practice from now on. That is why each Superior must, within a month beginning from this moment, get a safe which is closed and opened with 3 different keys. The cost will not be great; one can for upwards of 50 francs (about 165 euros), or thereabouts, have little strong safes, to which it is easy to add two locks if one is there already.

As the Rule states, this safe must hold not only the important documents and papers pertaining to the house, but also all money under whatever title. Accordingly, once or twice during the week, in keeping with the significance and volume of the house's receipts and expenses, the Superior, the bursar and the first assistant must meet to put in the safe whatever money is received since the last opening of the safe, and draw out the amount needed by the bursar to meet the normal expense requirements. There will, then, be in the safe an account book in which one will jot down: 1, the amount deposited and, 2, the amount taken out by the bursar; and it will be made sure each time that the cash in the safe is exact, the difference between what has been put in and what has been taken out being precisely the amount left in the safe.

We take occasion from this circumstance to encourage local Superiors to supervise their bursars as closely as possible and make sure that they keep up to date the account book in which what is put in and taken out is jotted down, with dates for everything. Canonical Visitors have noted serious negligence in some of our houses and, otherwise, the produced accounts' pages have confirmed this fact.

Without a doubt there will be some problems encountered at first in meeting these requirements, and one will be tempted to identify them with minutiae, but before practice begins to make it easy, the spirit of faith will be drawn to see God's will in this procedure laid down by our holy Rules, and which is followed by all communities of whatsoever order which are efficiently run. One is very impressed when reading the life of St. Chantal by a story naively spoken by herself. When having to pay a debt of three sous, she went to open the three-key safe with two companions, they found there neither more nor less than the three sous they needed... these are the elite souls who understand the obligations arising from the vow of poverty and the importance of being regularly observant in the smallest details.

These two important issues having been set out, it remains for us to make some observations which in addition are worthwhile.

a. To safeguard unity of doctrine in our Society, we have set up a commission with responsibility for examining the books required for the teaching of church doctrines in our different scholasticates. The teaching in philosophy and theology should be 'ad mentem divi Thomae' (in fidelity to the teaching of St. Thomas Aquinas, OP); as for other courses the Roman teaching must be scrupulously followed, and one must not diverge from it. All our local Superiors and directors of scholasticates must, then, send to the President of this commission the list of books they want to get hold of for themselves, and whose cost will be foreseen in the budget; it is only after this list has been approved that one can get the books which are named in the list. The President of this commission is Fr. Delaporte, helped by Fathers Guyot and Deidier.

b. In one of our previous circulars we stated that from now on each house should meet the living costs of youngsters sent to the novitiate or scholasticate. Accordingly, the Superiors of scholasticates and novitiates are authorized to charge every term the houses which have provided students, for the expenses arising from their training. However, they cannot set down the amount until they have forwarded to each Superior the list of subjects and the likelihood of the amount payable every three months, that is to say, on the first of October, the first of January, the first of April, and the first of July. For reasons of uniformity, we have decided that the fee for the novices and scholastics should be stipulated at six hundred francs yearly.

c. The mother house, financially drained by all the advances it has been required to make to particular houses, cannot any longer go on like this. To help towards meeting the considerable expense it has to face, each particular house must come to its aid by contributing a sum to be set out by the next Council meeting. This is, in any event, something which is customary in all religious Congregations.

d. Lastly, ending this letter, I entreat all our local Superiors to get themselves a register in which they will transcribe the present circular as well as three which have preceded it, or those which will follow, giving to all a number and date. These circulars, in effect, deal with serious and important issues relative to the efficient administration of the Society, and they should be consulted from time to time by our dear local Superiors, and we ourselves could refer to issues which are mentioned in them. This is the fourth (circular). The first was sent out in early January, 1889. The second dates from March 10, 1889, the third from October 7 of that same year. If some of our esteemed local Superiors haven't the complete collection, ask them to let us know the numbers missing and we shall send them a new copy.

In some of our houses, the 'Remember St. Joseph' is still said with these words "Chaste spouse of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart". From now on these should be replaced by these words: "Chaste spouse of Mary".

Please accept, Father, my warm devotedness in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MissduSC.

Explanatory document.

We have noted with surprise that several of our members in certain publications continue, despite our warnings to the contrary, to use Queen of the Sacred Heart: Rome does not want this wording to be used as it can be wrongly interpreted.

Already on a number of occasions we had cause to send circular letters like this to our Superiors, but up to now we hadn't thought it necessary to have them printed. On reflection, however, we think it would be worthwhile to preserve these letters because they contain helpful advice towards good administration in the Society's houses, and the recommendations, when put into practice, could greatly help to create uniformity in the administration of our different houses. We recapitulate briefly here the recommendations given in the previous circulars so that they are not forgotten.

1. Our first circular letter dated January 1, 1889, accompanied the dispatch of new cash registers with the relevant accompanying advice on their effective use. Generally speaking, these recommendations were followed. Accompanying them we sent a formula dealing with personnel changes in a community. This document has not yet been fully understood. Several of our Superiors present us every three months with a full list of their subjects. They need only put on paper the names of community members with respect to the situation when there have been some changes, for example departure, arrival, temporary or final profession, ordination. Finally, we request that in May of each year the annual report of the archconfraternity's progress in each house be sent to us, and in January a summary of the principal events which were a feature of the community's life during the previous year. We again insist on these two requirements.

2. The second circular (March 10, 1889) made some observations about the way accounts and budgets were prepared and they emphasized the requirement for each house to accept for the Petite Oeuvre only that number of youngsters which could be provided for from the resources made available to them for this purpose; and in addition, the need to foresee the fees required to be met later for these youngsters on arriving at the novitiate and scholasticate. Several of our esteemed Superiors considered this recommendation to be too harsh and either refused to go along with it at all or scarcely so. The serious involvement with accounts and budgets proved to our satisfaction that it was a measure which needed to be taken, and we appeal to all the houses to be prudent in this regard. Finally, we end with a recommendation to accept no longer foundation masses in perpetuity; we repeat this warning which is based on serious considerations, thoughtfully weighed up.

3. On October 7, 1889, a third circular letter did no more than call to mind the issues treated in the two preceding ones, insisting that they be carried out. It was also mentioned that the money received by the different houses for the missions and the Issoudun house should be forwarded to us; the same holds for the money received for our Petite Oeuvre by the houses who do not have one (a Petite Oeuvre). These recommendations have not, generally speaking, been observed. We nevertheless want it so in order to respect the wishes of the donors. Accordingly, each year, when the accounts are received, they should inform us as to whether or not these offerings were sent to us and we shall make a claim for the money on the houses, the Superiors being advised in time.

Please accept, Father, my warmest good wishes in Corde Jesu.

J. Chevalier
MisSC.

NB: 1. We would ask the local Superiors to discuss with their counsellors those different aspects of the new Rules whose application causes great problems so that they can be considered at the next Chapter.

2. This circular and the others which will follow should be carefully kept in the archives of each house.

Issoudun, March 31, 1890

My Dear Lord,

It appears that you haven't had the letters I wrote to you. I regret this all the more when I had replied to all of yours and also when you had been appointed Vicar Apostolic. Your appointment pleased me all the more since it was I myself who recommended you, knowing your piety, indefatigable zeal, your commitment before every challenge. Aware of the illness affecting Bishop Navarre, I put your name forward straightaway to Propaganda as his coadjutor, and when the news reached me I sent it on immediately to you with a congratulatory letter, letting you know at the same time of Bishop Couppé's appointment as Vicar Apostolic of New Britain. Do not put your life in danger too precipitately, my friend, either at sea or among the natives. The mission's success depends on you. Keep an eye on your confrères in the New Guinea mission stations; they are young and inexperienced, especially Fr. Vitale. See to it that Fr. Toublanc does not act imprudently among the natives since he could compromise the mission.

See to it that the priests, brothers and sisters live an essentially religious and edifying life. The blessings of heaven are its reward. I want the priests and brothers to be respectful with regard to the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, only having recourse to them when it is necessary, and never being given to familiarity with them since human nature is so weak. Fr. Thomas has returned to France from Sydney despite my forbidding him to do so; I have expelled him from the Society. These kinds of people are more a problem than a help. Keep an eye also on Fr. Hartzler as regards his dealings with the sisters and his unbalanced undertakings. Thursday (Island) belongs to your Vicariate. I would like to send you out some good missionaries, but no chance! Commitment is not to the fore. Little Fr. Hubert is a light-headed character with little judgement. I wouldn't dare send him to you, but he would very much like to go; he is with Fr. Piperon. Ask the latter what he thinks about him. He (Piperon) is now Superior of the Tilburg house and Fr. Reyn Superior at Antwerp. Fr. Léopold Hartzler is getting better; he is in Spain; we gave him a change of climate.

Cheerio, my Lord. Wholly yours in C.J.
Give my good wishes to the sisters; my regards to all the priests and brothers.

Issoudun, April 6, 1890

Dear Father,

I received your second letter; thank you. Before sending you on anybody, I would like to know how the committee reacted to Mr. Taulier's letter and if there was agreement with his requirements. Since the new site for the building of the basilica is nearer to Sagrario (the MSC residence) a second community will not be called for, something, anyway, outside our plans and agreement, making the situation more simplified for us, not having a second parish to look after. Sagrario is quite enough.

Since the General Chapter will very likely take place on your return, take account of the confrères' views in Quito and at Watertown on the new Rules so that we can be aware of the issues which need to be re-assessed and formulated.

Bishop Navarre has gone to Sydney in order to regain his health and will stay there for some months. He is much better. He is looking for reinforcements and would like a good Superior in Sydney. Where can one be found?

I thank you for your good wishes for the feast and for the nice snapshot. I wrote to you 15 days ago at the time of your departure for Thursday (Island). I have been greatly pleased by the good impact you made in Sydney and by all the support you stirred up there. The Lord be praised no end!

I asked Bishop Navarre to remain in Sydney as long as possible and take charge of the community. His presence will keep evil at bay and do good. When all the Randwick and Botany Bay undertakings are well set up, the Bishop can once more have his freedom of action. I have appointed him Provincial for all our Australian and Oceania houses and Visitor General for all the houses. When he cannot pay a visit himself he may delegate a confrère to do so, someone he thinks suitable.

But he would like you to let us know the total number of masses, if all must be celebrated, and how many of them are for Fr. Jouët, your brother... The Archpriest of Brive-la-Gaillarde wants to know if you could preach the next Lenten retreat for him.

Issoudun, April 20, 1890

Dear Father,

1. I thank you most sincerely for your good wishes and those of your confrères, the brothers, novices and Petite Oeuvre students. Give them all my appreciative thanks.
2. Yes, I freely grant permission to Fr. Blanchet and all the others you put forward for their vows.

Euchar Blanchet was professed on May 15, 1890. He was at Antwerp before going to St. Cyr and Chezal-Benoît as a teacher; by October 1893 he was at the Sacred Heart, Issoudun.

3. I would ask you not to admit: a, those who aren't healthy enough; b, those who do not have convincing piety; c, those lacking in judgment. These types are more troublesome than useful to the Society, becoming sooner or later a serious embarrassment and a bad example. It is best to have fewer of this kind and that those we have are good religious, pious, edifying, obedient to the point of sacrifice, renouncing their own will, prepared to do everything asked of them and prepared to go wherever the Superiors judge it best to send them.

4. (Father) Ilge at Salzburg worries me greatly; he is a sad individual.

German-born Ilge, already mentioned above in connection with the Salzburg foundation, had been ordained to the priesthood six years previously, December 20, 1884; he would eventually be expelled from the Society on February 19, 1897. See below, passim!

5. Keep a close eye on the Antwerp house, something which is greatly needed since we do not have other than very young Superiors and directors there.
6. On the 26th of this month Fathers Moncorget and Gressin are embarking for Quito at Bordeaux. The first-named has a chest condition and the other isn't strong (healthy), but on the doctor's advice it's the only way to keep him alive as the climate in Quito is wonderful for those with chest problems. Fr. Bouvier is getting on marvellously there and Fr. Peyrot has regained his strength and health.

Cheerio, my friend. I hope to pay you a visit when the weather gets better.

With whom can we replace these two who are leaving (for Quito)?

Article 1808

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Quito.

L 18900421

Issoudun, April 21, 1890

Dear Fr. Jouët,

Thanks a thousand for your feast-day good wishes and those of your community, bringing me much pleasure. Since my return from Amélie-les-Bains I feel much better, but I do feel exhausted, and I am too stretched, the demands on me at the present moment 10 times beyond my resources. Thank your kind confrères on my behalf, and particularly Fr. Bouvier for his kind letter. Remember me to Fathers Barral, senior and junior, to Father Peyrot and to the good brothers.

I am sending out to you two young pious, zealous, intelligent, confrères, Fathers Moncorget and Gressin. Fr. Moncorget would make an excellent Superior at Sagrario if you think Fr. François Barral is not suitable, since he is wise, prudent, judicious, well educated. He is still a little youthful and his health is not very strong. Fr. Gressin is less level-headed than Fr. Moncorget, his zeal needing to be curbed and directed, but he is obedient and pious, likes youngsters, but wants to be led forward and guided. He is a good little religious.

Since the ground for the basilica is now nearer to Sagrario, see to it that there is only one community involved there, this being preferable in every respect. You yourself are so aware. Fr. Pierre Barral, being taken up with the supervising of the work on the basilica, cannot be Superior; he will enjoy, without the responsibility or authority of Superior, that independence or latitude he will be in need of.

Here then (going to Quito) are two people of whose services we are deprived in Issoudun, and it's a burden for us to bear. They are going to Quito only to work for the Archbishop since they are doing what he wants, and it would only be right if he met all the expenses of their trip. It's already too much for us to be deprived of the services they would provide in relation to the immediate good of the Society.

The dear Brother Visitor from Quito (De La Salle) who accompanied them there visited Issoudun. I chatted a lot with him, and he assured me that we have a lovely site there which cannot but become more and more important, but on condition that our confrères be above all good and pious religious, prudent, reserved, edifying. Try my friend before your return to form and establish them as a fervent, disciplined, community. It's all there with that, and the Sacred Heart will, through them, and with them, work marvels. What a wonderful future we would have in South America if our dear Quito confrères were all that they should be! The good brother assured me that once our Society becomes well established we shall not be lacking in vocations, and good vocations especially in Cuenca (the centre of the Azuay Province, 2,000 metres in altitude, an area rich in culture). The Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, if there was a suitable place available for them, would not turn down the opportunity to go there, on condition that the Archbishop, or the Government, would meet the expenses of the journey and their installation. This would have to be considered later.

The Brother Visitor also stated that another house would be very worthwhile, if not to say necessary, in Ecuador, or in such an area as Columbia for example, where the Government is very Catholic and very supportive of France. Fifteen days is what it would take to get there, and at no great cost. Instead of allowing Fathers Morisseau and Roussel to return to France, since they know the language and are acclimatized could you not, if you think it worthwhile, while working with and enjoying the support of the Apostolic Delegate, set about getting a place for us either in Bogota (Columbia) or at Caracas (Venezuela), or otherwise anywhere in these countries? We would need something worthwhile and in a politically balanced country.

How did the committee react to Mr. Taulier's last letter about the basilica? Let us take on no responsibility for this undertaking. Let Fr. Barral be so persuaded, and act cautiously! Nor should he have anything to do with the committee so far as expenses are concerned! He has no other role than to follow his orders and act on them.

Come to an understanding with Fr. Morisseau about the foundation referred to above, and if the appropriate conditions cannot be met he will return to France where he can still be of good use to us. If the foundation does not come about, Fr. Roussel will ask to go to Watertown. You will judge for yourself if this is opportune.

You have mentioned Fr. Grom in connection with Quito; now it so happens that Fr. Ramot writes to me saying that this poor man is totally unsettled, doesn't any longer obey the rules, living by his own whims, a religious only in name. What would such a one be doing in Quito? He would very likely recreate the scandals associated with Fr. Caër there. (Caër left the Society in 1887.) Your presence will be sorely needed in Watertown.

Cheerio, Father.

All good wishes to yourself and everyone in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Herman Kliem, born March 11, 1857 in Berlin, left the Society at the beginning of 1892, refusing to ask that he be released from his vows.

Bernard Bley, born November 19, 1862 at Haltèrn, Germany, had been a teacher at Antwerp and left from Salzburg for New Guinea, April 26, 1890. He died at Vunapope on February 14, 1944, killed by a bomb in a Japanese air-raid.

Issoudun, April 26, 1890

Dear Father,

1. The Archbishop of Bourges fully approves of the meeting planned for Issoudun. He hasn't yet forwarded the programme to me. I am sure that he will not include any changes.
2. I am pleased to gather that Fr. Garnier will come and preach the preparatory novena for the feast on September 8. The Lord be thanked for this choice!
3. I fully approve Fr. Deidier's book, on the second centenary of the Blessed (now Saint) Margaret Mary, being printed with illustrations, but beforehand I would like to have the bill for the expense involved in this undertaking. If you want it to sell well, it is necessary to have it favourably priced and promoted in all the papers.

Cheerio, Father.

Wholly yours in C.J.

4. I regret very much that you are unable to be present at the Lyons congress. I had placed great store in your promise but, in the event, we shall do the best we can.

Please accept my best wishes in C.J.

To Father Théophile Reyn, MSC, Antwerp.

Issoudun, May 6, 1890

Dear Fr. Reyn,

Your letter amazes me as much as it depresses me. When the Rules first came out the Antwerp priests cried aloud. When I explained that these Rules were not meant to be definitive in any way, but rather part of a trial run until the upcoming Chapter when they would be changed, modified, taken out as regards anything thought to be excessive, useless, inopportune, those opposed wrote to me saying that they were loyally agreeable to their acceptance under those conditions and, accordingly, there would be no more problems. I accepted their word and now you inform me that these Rules have never been tried out and, given the opposition which you represent, you did ask for them to be put into practice.

Let us see then! What are the specific Rules which have given rise to so much opposition? They are not those contained in Chapters, I, II, III, IV, V and VI, about the Society's General Administration and the Superior General. Do those who having experienced the Rules in practice want them to be changed or not at the next Chapter?

There are those Regulations which deal with particular houses and with individuals. But these Rules are no more than the former ones translated in Latin, leaving aside some changes of little significance. The Visitor's Regulations were put before the last Chapter 12 years ago and approved by it.

The regulations for the Novitiate, Scholasticate and Petite Oeuvre are already there. New undertakings have been set up in keeping with the former regulations and many regulations are needed for their requisite direction. If some of these are found wanting, this should be made known at the next Chapter, but in the meantime they should be put into practice in order to do them justice. If particular rules do not create any serious problems, they are then like common rules. Consider that! The common regulations are no more than the older regulations, developed and a little changed as regards a small number of obscure issues not sufficiently explicit, and leaving too much to arbitrary interpretation, something which would take away from houses the characteristic of uniformity.

Would it be wrong on my part to include a number about our sick and dear dead, as well as the way funerals are carried out? I do not think so. The common and particular rules, so also our Constitutions, were drawn up when we were only 10 or 12 in number and had only one house, that of Issoudun. Who would dare to maintain that given the continuing expansion of our Society, the revising of our earlier Rules and Constitutions was not called for?

Looking towards the next Chapter, was it not wise on the part of this Society's founder to put his hand, before death, to such an undertaking where the experience of the past 35 years has made him well aware of the shortcomings? Requesting his confrères from the four corners of the world to share their loyal experience with him in relation to changes which he feels there is a need for in the general interests of the Congregation and such wise that each one can, knowing the situation, bring his observations to the Chapter.

There you have the situation such as it is, and I cannot understand how a house, whichever one it is, can reasonably oppose this recourse to Rules. Accordingly, if our good critics find certain elements (in the Rules) pointless, damaging, impractical, for the Antwerp house, let it be made known and I shall provide an exemption if it is called for, and the issue left at that.

Please, Father, share this letter with your confrères, together with my best wishes in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Issoudun, May 7, 1890

Dear Father,

1. I got your letter just now, and I am replying straightaway so that the letters can leave on the 10th from Saint Nazaire.
2. You will have had letters brought by Fathers Gressin and Moncorget; they are in reply to a lot of questions.
3. I have already written to you about the good and saintly girl who wants to be a Sister of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart; she can come and will be gladly welcomed at Issoudun. But who would look after her lodging while she is away if she would like to hold on to it for the Daughters of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart when she goes back to Quito with some companions?
4. The ceremony which you describe must have been splendid. I am awaiting your latest letter which you mention before I refer to it in the Annals.
5. I never substituted Fr. Védère in your place since it would be unthinkable. This unfortunate fellow is, then, idiotic. If I wrote to him saying that during your absence he was replacing you in the house in all matters of detail; that was quite understandable and necessary. But from there to becoming your replacement in everything is something else entirely. It is necessary for this pathetic boy to have his head well adjusted. What you tell me about Saint Andrea-della-Valle is ridiculous.

This good Father with his limited outlook could be the cause of a lot of harm for our Rome house, while believing himself to be doing a lot of good. It's outrageous to have both a wrong and narrow outlook at the same time.

6. Return to Rome as soon as possible. You will stop-over in Watertown only as long as it's needed to make a Visitation there. You will then come back through Issoudun.

7. With so few members who are serious candidates to become Superiors, I do not see any likely possibility of having two communities in Quito. Our resources would be too thinly spread without advantage to, and to the detriment of, each house. Experience lets us know this.

Cheerio, Father.

I salute your heroic devotedness and give you my best blessings.

Dear Fr. Piperon,

1. You should have received the articles you asked for. Shortly I shall be sending on to you a little work similar to the others treating of the 7 sorrows and 7 joys of Saint Joseph. I wrote these little booklets during my 'exile' in Amélie-les-Bins. In regard to some things, sadness has its good uses!

2. I surprisingly gathered from Fr. Reyn, at the time of the circular letter, that the new Rules, however new they may be, haven't yet been put into practice in Antwerp despite the promise made by those opposed to them. The good Father (Reyn) says that, given the continuing opposition, he did not dare to introduce them. All this is devilishly motivated. The divine spirit is a mystery to me because it was understood that these Regulations are no more than a trial-run before the General Chapter. I expressed my regret and astonishment to him (Reyn). Today he replies that the confrères, out of regard for him, at last have agreed to try out the new Rules. It's sad!

It also appears, so Fr. Guyot informs me, that these opponents have written to Fr. Tréand in Glastonbury asking him if it was his wish to accept the new Rules. He, a man of piety, replied that he only knew how to be obedient. Up to now, Salzburg had the same spirit of insubordination as Antwerp. It is very likely that the Antwerp fathers wrote in the same vein to them as they did to Glastonbury, and here (at Salzburg) their views were echoed. How true St. Paul's words are: scientia inflat (knowledge can make one pretentious).

3. I gave you all the authorization you need. You may put forward Brother Hubert for the priesthood. He asked me to be allowed to go on the missions with Bishop Verjus. There is no hurry; we shall see about this when Bishop Couppé returns to France; he (Hubert) wants to be ordained in Antwerp.

4. I have considered asking all Superiors to come to our Issoudun retreat this year, Fr. Ramot (Watertown) included. What do you think? Would it be better to wait for the next Chapter which most likely will take place next year? This will, perhaps, be best. I have decided to name, on the occasion of the Chapter, my Vicar General with the right of succession. I am giving way under the burden of duty. Think about this and consider before the Lord who might be chosen, whether from the older or the younger members. If one were to consider somebody young, Fr. Genocchi, so it seems to me, would be well suited (to take over). I should also be given 2 assistants, at least until the Chapter. I can no longer easily cope with things. Every minute serious decisions, as regards our houses, have to be addressed, taken, followed through. I am alone with my decisions presently; it's not possible to go on like this.

Article 1816

To Father Pierre Barral, MSC, Quito.

L 18900515

Issoudun, May 15, 1890

Dear Fr. Barral,

I read your letter very carefully and shared it with some members of the Council, who haven't changed their minds. You were sent to Quito to help the committee members in building the Sacred Heart Basilica by way of your commitment, devotedness, advice, but without immediate control or responsibility, that being a matter for the gentlemen there for whom it is their concern if they do not want to have an architect directing operations on the spot. They take on themselves all the responsibility.

Living as you do amidst the work going on around you, being with the workers practically the whole time, how could you take charge of the community in spiritual and temporal matters? It's simply not possible. A Superior has to be on the spot to survey everything that is happening in the house, meet with his confrères when they need him, preside over the exercises, meet with visitors, be responsible for the running of the house, etc. Otherwise, abuses would prevail, Rules would not be observed, and the religious spirit would soon disappear. It is not without serious reason, then, and of a higher intent, that your Superiors have taken from you the leadership of the house where you live in order that you be provided with such freedom of action that you can give over all your time to the basilica. This, my friend, is so acceptably normal that I am amazed by your insistence. The two issues are incompatible, being quite obvious to any reflective person. As for confessions, the same holds. If the confessional were to take over, the work on the national shrine would suffer. You went to Quito to work on the building of the basilica, organize contributions, find financial resources as best you could and work towards spreading our Sacred Heart apostolate by promoting it as best you could; but no confessions, something which has been said again and again to you. Indeed, my friend, as between us (entre nous), should you really want to hear confessions? You know well all that has gone on in Rome, since without the signal grace (mercy) of the Sacred Heart, and the commitment of Fr. Jouët to the Congregation and to you, where would you be? Consider yourself, then, as being gratefully happy to be involved with work on the basilica of the Sacred Heart and without any responsibility for the running of the house or for pastoral care. Instead of blaming your Superiors you should be praising them, and find beneath their severity, which is only so in appearance, that extreme kindness and good will is being shown to you.

When you left, dear Father, there was only meant to be one community there, that of Sagrario; that was agreed with the Archbishop, and it was our unanimous position also; so it remains, since to have two communities there would take from our strength, already quite weak, adding to administrative difficulties and creating problems. We simply haven't got sufficient personnel to set up two separate houses in Quito. That's why I wrote to Fr. Jouët asking him to see to it that there should only be the one community, that of Sagrario, where you will live, and each day you will go and visit the construction site and supervise the work. The distance is not very far, particularly so since the new site chosen is nearer the city. You will be independent in everything having to do with the basilica, but dependent on your Superior in all that pertains to the religious life. From what has been said above you will understand yourself, my friend, the wisdom of this measure. When the basilica is built and pilgrims are arriving there, and you are happy in Quito, then you might, perhaps, have the title of Superior and confessor, since there would no longer be the same problems (as those existing now). I cannot understand, Fr. Barral, why you make so much of the title of Superior and confessor; these are heavily weighted responsibilities from which you have been released by your Superiors. Be grateful to them for this concern on your behalf, and do not complain about it any longer.

I am depending on you, my friend, and your commitment. Give witness through obedience, self-denial, and the Sacred Heart will reward you!

Cheerio, dear Father Barral.

To Father Victor Jouët, MSC, Quito.

L 18900516

Issoudun, May 16, 1890

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I have had a long memorandum from Fr. Barral with regard to all you mention yourself. I replied to him, and read my letter before passing it on to him. It represents in fact the Council's thinking. I do not understand this unfortunate man's intemperate thinking. The fact that he only sees his own obstinate point of view provides the clearest evidence that he is not fit to take charge of a house or guide people's consciences for the immediate future. If he wants to cause a scandal or leave the Society, so much the worse for him, something he cannot but come to regret. Oh! my friend, you well know that the supervising of men, particularly so priests, is fraught with difficulties. Fr. Carrière has said straight out that he would not go to Quito other than with reluctant distaste if I told him to go. Fr. Miniot, whom I saw a month ago in Paris, acknowledged to me that he was too old (60 years) and that kind of a trip was beyond his physical capabilities. Fr. Deidier spoke in the same vein; you are aware of Fr. Brunet's refusal. All this is explained by the unfortunate letters written by Frs. Morisseau, Derichemont, Caër, etc., describing Ecuador, Sagrario and its activities.

What do you want me to do, then? Force these people to go? It's quite impossible. What they lack is the religious spirit, that of obedience and sacrifice. All our confrères are aware that the New Guinea and Micronesia missions are lacking in personnel and languish rather wretchedly. Nobody is offering to go there, and if I make suggestions they are rejected. Sydney needs a Superior. Fr. Merg's whole personality, his aggressive authoritarianism, has led to disagreements with everyone. Bishop Navarre is looking for another Superior at any cost. Those confrères who could take on this post present a thousand excuses for not going there. Poor Fr. Tierney who is parish priest of Randwick is disappointingly light-headed. He calls to mind Fr. Fernand Hartzler, recreating his imprudence.

For a fuller, more rounded assessment of Tierney, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late, passim.

Who is going to take over? I have no-one but, for all that, the position is one with a great future. No, indeed, my good friend, I cannot do what I want to do. I suffer more than anyone else because of all this and add to this continuous state my very isolation. I have nobody, absolutely nobody, around me whom I can consult. With the heavy burden of the parish, I have, as well, to face up to all the problems which come at me from every side. Those appointed to help me have taken off, leaving me alone in coming to grips with the weight of administration at its most demanding, and they are the first to complain. I am weighed under by work and problems. It doesn't seem to matter – it's always I on whom the blame lies and on whom responsibility falls.

It would be unwise for you to leave Ecuador before the Quito undertaking is quite solidly set up, and the Fr. Barral issue well sorted out. When telling you to hasten your departure, I was taking it for granted that all was going well at Sagrario and at the basilica, but if there was no hope of consolidating this work, I would say to you: return together with your confrères, and let there be no more about Quito. Meanwhile, I would still like to think that the Sacred Heart who has led us so far away has his reasons, and will keep us in Quito despite the problems and the demon's fury, and that we end up triumphant in a serious situation. You make me sad when you say that it is through ill-will that nothing is being mentioned about you in the Annals, since you expressly asked me not to mention Quito or yourself before I had received your official report. I am waiting on it. I have 20 times more work than I can cope with. I haven't the time to engage myself with what is printed in the Italian Annals, and, anyway, I don't know Italian. I have said many times to Father Védère to send me an account in French of whatever happens in the house which is of interest, and in the Piazza Navona Church, so that we may put it in the Annals. It's as if I was speaking to somebody deaf – and together with all our problems I have to put up with your bad humour, which I cannot take any longer, but why do you make Issoudun responsible for the omissions in the Ordo? It's Antwerp which has the responsibility for sending it out to all our houses. I am forwarding my Ordo to you.

I hope everything will go well and that Fr. Barral will make no faux-pas. I hope that he will have fully understood my letter. 18900701 X

Council Meeting, July 1-4, 1890

In attendance: Rev. Fr. Superior General; Fathers Piperon, Guyot, Delaporte.

Fr. General began by presenting to the Councillors the different issues he wanted to submit to their deliberations and which were relevant to the needs of the Congregation's different houses.

The Law on Military Service

1. The situation created for our French nationals by the military service law was first considered. An article in this law, notifying the ministry about the recommendation of the Council to dispense provisionally from military service all French nationals outside Europe who request it before they are aged 19, led to the resolution to make use of this clause by sending all those who could be called to military service to Watertown (USA) or another house which Fr. Ramot would be asked to find in the USA. He would need to get the house in a milder climate than that of Watertown.

Novices could be sent to America.

The present novices are old enough to profit from the above-mentioned clause, being: Louis Cochard, Jean Pouvreau, Anatole Quoirier, Marie-Pierre Courbon, Louis Jourdon. Several youngsters at the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre are in the same situation so that they too can do likewise.

Temporary Vows and Military Service

2. There followed an appraisal of temporary vows for those called up for military service. Fr. General, having made enquiries in Rome as to the procedures which should be followed as regards novices coming under the law, received an official reply that this did not present any obstacle to the vows. The Council, accordingly, decided to call to vows all those who were placed in these circumstances, being of the view that subjects faced with such a challenge would find in their vows a means of persevering more easily.

The Salzburg House

3. There followed a discussion about the Salzburg house. Following Fr. Guyot's report, arising from his canonical visit to the house, and his explanations to the meeting, the serious material situation of this house calls for better direction. As well, the Superior in charge needs to commit himself more fully to looking after this house and to the formation (improvement) of its members.

Fr. Offermans, Bursar

The decision was taken to make available Fr. Offermans, presently bursar in Tilburg, to Salzburg in the same role, despite the needs of the Tilburg house, and its serious present problems which he (Offermans) could well solve. Fr. Offermans will be in charge of finances and the administration of the farms at Salzburg.

Fr. Ilge being Recalled

It was also decided that Fr. Ilge, whose religious spirit (attitude) leaves much to be desired, would be recalled to Issoudun.

Brother von Hasselt

Brother von Hasselt, whose health causes anxiety, will be sent to Canet-de-Mar in Spain where it is hoped that he will find the climate more to his liking.

The Petite Oeuvre: bringing together the upper classes.

4. Given the shortage of teachers for the upper classes, it was decided that:

a. The local Petite Oeuvres at Issoudun, Antwerp, Tilburg and Salzburg would cater for these youngsters as far as the third year only.

b. Beginning with this third year, the above-mentioned houses would send their youngsters to Chezal-Benoît. It is thought that the Archbishop of Bourges will give his approval to this proposal.

c. Fr. Lanctin will be in charge of the upper classes of this Petite Oeuvre, and he will be given as teachers the following: Fathers Ilge and Jullien, Brothers Field, Crocket and those others who will be needed.

d. It was thought that it might be helpful to open also a novitiate in this house for the more delicate in health, and it would be in the charge of Fr. Léopold Hartzler who would be given a socius.

The Issoudun House: Fr. Vaudon, Superior; Fr. Morisseau recalled (from Quito); Fr. Maillard, General Bursar; Fr. Compte, Direction (in charge) of the Petite Oeuvre.

5. There followed the organization of the Issoudun house. Fr. Vaudon was appointed Superior, Fr. Morisseau General Bursar, and in the absence of Fr. Morisseau until he returns to Issoudun (from Quito) Fr. Maillard will act as General Secretary. Fr. Comte will be in charge of the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre.

The Barcelona House: The Petite Oeuvre lessened in size with youngsters, now in Canet-de-Mar.

6. Further comments will be addressed to the Superior of the Barcelona house about regularity, the material circumstances, and food. Furthermore, the Petite Oeuvre in this house finds itself in very inadequate, unacceptable conditions, lacking in resources and directive personnel and, as a consequence, it was agreed that the number of youngsters should be reduced to eight, or at most ten, and that from now on they would be sent as fee-paying to the Canet-de-Mar College.

The fees for the Petite Oeuvre youngsters:

The Barcelona house needs to charge a fee of 600 francs for each youngster who will on entry be issued with a complete trousseau in excellent condition. The father in charge of the college must provide very special care for these youngsters as regards their three-fold circumstances, material, intellectual, moral. Fr. Casas was given authority to buy the field alongside his house, one which he had asked permission to buy.

The Canet House:

Fr. Meynier, presently at Canet, Brother Genaro at Barcelona, Brother Félip, expelled, Brothers Assunto and Von Hasselt.

7. Fr. Meynier will be transferred from the Barcelona house to Canet where he will help Fr. Carrière in bursarial matters. Brother Genaro will be appointed to Barcelona and Brother Félip, given the unsatisfactory attitude he has shown this year, will be expelled from the Congregation. Brothers Assunto and von Hasselt are added to the community of this house.

The Antwerp Scholasticate and the Petite Oeuvre:

8. The Antwerp scholasticate will be given Fr. Mathieu, recalled from Rome, and another professor. Fr. Linckens will be in charge of the Petite Oeuvre. The professors will be chosen by the Antwerp priests.

Tilburg:

Responsibility for the organization of the Tilburg house will be left in the hands of Fr. Superior.

Glastonbury: Permission to build.

The Council authorized Fr. Tréand to carry out the construction plan he submitted to Fr. General. There will, however, be a number of changes to be taken into account, and Fr. Guyot has been given responsibility to have them forwarded to him (Tréand).

1. I am sorry that Fr. Moncorget doesn't take better to your proposals; it seems to me that an individual, following drawn out discussions, hasn't the right to refuse the responsibility assigned to him by the Superior. Try and do the best you can, then. As for a new Superior of mature age, with the characteristics you suggest, I understand the need, but we do not have anybody at present. On your return to France you will help us to find someone. You will meet Fr. Jean-Baptiste Perriot who is a good, serious, and understanding man. If Fr. Pierre Barral is not suitable to take charge of work on the basilica, Fr. Perriot could advantageously replace him, he being now released from all military service, and being, moreover, an excellent religious. On your return we shall consider this matter since we cannot have the law laid down for us by Fr. Pierre Barral.

No, we cannot take charge of the basilica's construction, even when we are being given it. It's a colossal undertaking beyond our resources. Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes (I fear the Greeks even when they come with gifts). Let us keep to our contract as being simply overseers. My belief is that the building of this basilica is beyond the capabilities of the Ecuador Government and that, short of a miracle, it will remain unfinished for a long time, if it ever will be.

Watertown is impatiently expecting you. Do not try to make other foundations in this far away country where the bishops are only looking for what is advantageous to themselves. Fathers Morisseau and Roussel will indeed find an appropriate place for themselves in our French undertakings.

Cheerio, Father; regards to all.

Wholly yours in C.J.

Issoudun, July 26, 1890

Dear Fr. Jouët,

1. Yesterday I received your letter informing me of Fathers Bouvier's and Moncorget's illnesses. I am shattered, and we are anxiously praying to Our Lady of the Sacred Heart for their speedy recovery.

2. What you have to tell me about Fr. Barral greatly saddens me; I can see that he is uncontrollably head-strong, and will create, what can you expect, problems for us. It's he himself who will be the victim of it all. The pathetic fellow, for whom so much was arranged and so many sacrifices made on his behalf, must it then come to this that he has to be expelled from the Society?

From your letter I gather that he wants things to reach this extreme through his lack of judgment, obedience, religious spirit, and in particular aggravating all this through his uncontrollable pride, whereby he accepts neither complaint or contradiction. It would be best to let him know straight away that he should leave our Society if he doesn't blindly (sic) accept the Council's orders which I passed on to you, as well as the respectful obedience owed to the Archbishop of Quito and the committee set up by His Grace. Present him, then, with an ultimatum, and if he refuses, meet with the Archbishop, and then in writing convey to him his dismissal, getting it all done as soon as possible. This unfortunate priest will end up creating a scandal which will reverberate on our Society, causing a depreciation of our institute throughout Ecuador. If you are forced to resort to this extreme in order to safeguard the honour of our Congregation, do not hesitate to do so. You will keep me informed, and I shall let you have immediately Fr. Jean-Baptiste Perriot who will replace him to good effect in the basilica. He is a good, pious, intelligent, religious, who will carry out all that obedience asks of him.

Cheerio, Father.

All good wishes and my warmest regard and appreciation of your zeal and devotedness beyond limit.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

I have received this very moment a letter from Bishop Couppé who only found out about his appointment on the 21st of May. He tells me that he will come to Antwerp for his ordination, accompanied by two little natives. I am expecting him towards the end of September.

Dear Father,

It saddens me to bring you the news of Father Firmin Moncorget's death in Quito on July 3 from typhoid fever. It's a great tragedy. Put the news of his death in the Annals.

I am sending on to you for the next Annals letters from Frs. Couppé and Bontemps. Again in a little article mention our September feasts and invite people to come on the pilgrimage. Why doesn't Normandy get itself moving? Try and do something.

I am depending on you for the Assumption or the following day. Yes, you can spend according to your discretion the sum of 600 francs (about 1,980 euros).

Dear Fr. Delaporte has sent us a bill for 1,000 francs one could also read 1,900 francs, reclaiming what you owe. It's unbelievable.

Issoudun, August 6, 1890

Dear Fr. François Barral,

I am sending Fr. Jean-Baptiste Perriot to Quito as your brother's replacement for the construction (of the basilica) since he had made things impossible through his insubordination, his haughtiness, his obstinacy and lack of religious life.

A letter which has just now reached me informs me that your brother is completely changed, bitterly regrets his past behaviour, and that the Archbishop has forgiven him and is keeping him in office. So be it! But in any event, Fr. Perriot will be very useful in Quito, either at the basilica, in the event that your brother does not remain there, or at Sagrario to help you in the ministry. It was not at all agreed in our contract with the Archbishop that we would be providing chaplains to the Brothers (De La Salle) for their pupils, or for other communities. We went to Quito for our own undertakings, and we do not have enough priests for your Sagrario parish which must come before everything else; set aside the chaplaincies.

I want there to be, since we are lacking in personnel, only one community in Quito, that of Sagrario, and only one Superior, he of Sagrario, yourself, since you are the one appointed. Let the meals and religious exercises take place in common! Be vigilant, and see to it that the Rule is kept, watching out that our confrères do not behave imprudently. Keep an eye to the parlour and relations with persons of the opposite sex. Let no woman into the house, and let there be always a companion during visits to the city. And if you notice anything which is not quite right, let me know immediately.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

J. Chevalier, MSC.

Accompanying Fr. Perriot I am sending along Brother Hubert who is an excellent religious. Have their trip paid for by the Committee, or, otherwise, let your house do so. We cannot afford any further financial sacrifices. It's a good 30,000 francs (about 94,330 euros) which the Quito house has had from us. Read your brother's enclosed letter before handing it on to him; you will keep from him that you have read it. If Fr. Jouët is still in Quito, you will let him see the letter I sent to you and that for your brother, Pierre, as well.

Your Grace,

You will agree with us that trials have not been wanting to us in Quito. I hope it is a good augury for better things. I am aware how good Your Grace has been in all these instances, and I take occasion once again to express my gratitude. The last letter from Fr. Jouët, which was the occasion for a telegram in relation to Fr. Barral, deeply affected me, forcing me to take a decision. Accordingly, I hadn't the slightest hesitation to ask Your Grace to take leave of Father Pierre Barral, who has created too many problems for us, and send you his replacement, who is a suitable choice, Your Grace, from every point of view. Your Grace and the committee cannot but be pleased, as he (Perriot) is soundly pious, as prudent as he is judicious, very knowledgeable about building; he has a lot of tact, and his obedience matches his kindness and goodness. The committee can rely on him with total assurance. I shall have Fr. Perriot accompanied by a lay brother of proven virtue, intelligent, a good religious. I hope the committee will favour us by meeting the expenses which this departure of two people creates for us.

I have the honour, respectfully, to be Your Grace's most humble and obedient servant.

J. Chevalier.

NB: At this very moment I have received a second letter from Fr. Jouët informing me that Fr. Pierre Barral, affected by the death of Fr. Firmin Moncorget, is a changed man and that Your Grace has accepted his apologies. I hope that the change of heart is really sincere, but in any event Fr. Perriot's presence will be no less helpful and appreciated. This good man offers much more of a guarantee in every respect than Fr. Pierre Barral.

Issoudun, August 13, 1890

Dear Father Piperon,

1. I read your speech with a great deal of interest. You well said everything which needed to be said.
2. You will have few novices from Issoudun as we have a good number who are in poor health. I shall send on to you those from elsewhere and those who are in good health. All this will not occur until after our September feasts.
3. During the first week of September you will advise us about the choice and placement of our teaching personnel. If it's at all possible, you will indeed find them...
4. Let me have the names of your novices who will shortly be making their profession so that we can find out if some of them could be teachers.

5. How many students in the third, second and rhetoric classes could you let us have for Chezal-Benoît? Everything will be in readiness by the end of September. How many would Antwerp be able to send us? I would like to be informed as soon as possible.
6. You may send Brother Hubert on to us, and I shall have him ordained priest in September.
7. Yes, send Brother Marie to us; he can help out in the secretariat. From the moment that you are satisfied (assured) about him, and believe that he is acceptable, it would be better if he takes his vows with you before you send him on to us. If he comes before he makes his vows, it would so discredit him as to weigh on him, and that would be hard for him to take. In any event, if after some experience of him he is not suitable, I could release him from his vows.
8. Yes, you may send Brother de Bary to Fr. Tréand when he has finished his novitiate. As for his vows, I should say the same holds as in the case of Brother Marie. He must set about making them. (In the event, he did not take vows.)
9. As regards Brother Carlos Molinos, you may send him to Fr. Carrière after his novitiate and having made his vows, or let him stay in the scholasticate to become more mature if you think it best.
10. We need to have three or four scholastics of quality to send to Rome to keep up traditions. Besides Brother Bernard who is here with us, who are the ones whom you would think of sending there after the Feast of All Saints which is the time lectures begin in Rome?
11. When your young men will be coming to Issoudun, give each one of them the vestments and banners which belong to us. These different things cannot remain away from us for good. As they are not new, the custom duty will be either nothing at all, or little, or nothing; a priest could very well bring his vestments with him. You will do the same thing with regard to our carpets.
12. It seems that Fr. Moncorget offered himself up for the conversion of Fr. Barral. You will read with great interest the two letters I have just received.

We have at this moment serious matters to be dealt with as regards the Society. Fr. Klotz, contrary to what Fr. Guyot says, does not wish to be Superior any longer. I have written asking him to reconsider, but he replied saying that he could not go back on his decision. We do not have any more personnel to avail of for our houses.

I have written to Fr. Guyot asking him to be at Issoudun on Wednesday or Thursday at the latest. Be there yourself without fail as your presence is absolutely necessary, and I want Fr. Issoudun, September 24, 1890

Dear Father,

I am replying immediately to you:

1. Yes, advise Fr. Pierre (Perriot) about the opening of the school (the 'externat' school for students other than those at the Petite Oeuvre in Issoudun). He will be under your orders. It's you who will deal with the families and visit, from time to time, the classes in the school, seeing to it that the discipline on the part of students and teachers is well observed. You will make sure that religious practice is faithfully observed by the teachers of the externat school and the Petite Oeuvre.
2. You will also be in contact with Fr. Compte (Superior of the Issoudun Petite Oeuvre) and come to an understanding with him. It is absolutely imperative that discipline should be maintained and it's on you all this rests. Nobody should go out without your permission and without letting you know where he is going and the reason for it.
3. You will be informed where one is going on a walk with the youngsters, and it should never be more than 3 or 4 kilometres, walking slowly and without any mischief. Many of our youngsters and teachers have caught up rheumatism (sic!) while out walking. See to it that supervision is as strictly maintained outside as well as within the house. You will read out their regulations to the youngsters, and then those which apply to the teachers. Be strict, do not allow them to go into rooms nor talk in areas where it's not allowed. At all costs discipline and religious spirit should prevail among us, and I am counting on you for all that.
4. I wrote to Fr. Lanctin to let him know (following his request) that he will have to ask in Rome for release from his vows, and find some place for himself within the space of three months. While waiting over, he will neither be at Chezal-Benoît nor Issoudun, and will no longer have to concern himself with the Petite Oeuvre; this is the definitive decision of His Grace (Archbishop of Bourges). While awaiting the first of January, I am appointing him to the Paris house where he can provide some services by preaching. In this way the confrères and the youngsters will think he has been given another posting where he can give himself over to preaching, which he loves. His departure, then, will have no harmful impact, particularly so if it's carried out discreetly. We shall continue providing his mother with 100 francs (about 330 euros) a month until the first of January and no more after that.
5. As for adoration, the Archbishop approves it during the month of October, so long as there are at least 4 adorers before the Blessed Sacrament and it should take place at Saint Cyr, in the holy Rosary Chapel during the whole month of October. Please mention this to Mademoiselle Tamisier and thank her from me for her kind letter. I haven't time to answer her myself; I am up to my eyes in work.

Emilie Tamisier, 1834-1910, founded with Fr. Chevrier the International Eucharistic Congresses.

6. Ask Fr. Batard to inform Jean, the cook, and his nephews that we can only keep them on until All Saints (November 1) because they will then be replaced by (lay) brothers.

Wholly yours in C.J.

2. Ask him to be good enough to go tomorrow, the 29th, to the mayor's office with a Saint Cyr curate. The reception takes place between 10 and 11am. I wrote to the mayor that I shall see him towards the end of this week.
3. Fr. Lanctin must leave on Wednesday at the latest for our Paris house where he will be taking up residence! I absolutely refused his request to stay on in Issoudun. It's (the Paris option) to be taken up or not. He has taken leave of his senses and is full of himself. I don't know if he will ever return to the order!

As it happened, he would succeed Chevalier as Superior General!!

4. Fr. Hartzler should shortly leave for Salzburg!
5. The Tilburg and Antwerp youngsters' retreat should take place at Chezal-Benoît with ours!
6. Let Fr. Piperon be advised about the date of the retreat and be at ease while waiting!
7. That he request Fr. Piperon to bring from Antwerp all the decorations which are there and belong to Issoudun! Help you with the Annals. Request the panegyric of the blessed from whomsoever you wish: the parish priest of Chabris, or, if unable, Canon Grandhomme or Fr. 2. Fr. Lanctin leaves for Paris tomorrow where he will be staying. He is waiting to see if there is any giving way before his calculated demands. It's farewell. We shall find out on the first of January what decision he is going to take. He needs to make a good retreat. I am not sure if he can well do so in Paris.
3. Fr. Hartzler leaves for Salzburg tomorrow. Fr. Klotz is making himself available to you.
4. I cannot attend Bishop Couppé's ordination. You will go there with the confrères you deem should go with you. I am returning to Issoudun on Thursday. In Vichy like everywhere else I am all the time being crushed by the need to do this and that.
5. Fr. Delaporte doesn't like having Brothers. He has written an unacceptable letter to me on this issue. Having asked for them, here he is now jibbing at the idea, which is ridiculous. I am so disenchanted with his capricious administration that I have written to him saying that I no longer wished to have anything to do with his house. Vichy, October 1, 1890

Dear Fr. Piperon,

With all the changes taking place, I note that the parish priest of Issoudun (Chevalier) has only one curate, Fr. Hériault, since Fr. Bizeuil is so much a stranger that he is scarcely to be counted. Fr. Pierre is to return to the externat school and will be hospital chaplain.

Bishop Navarre is looking for missionaries, and Bishop Couppé, who is in touch with the situation, tells me that he should have Fr. Hubert sent to him immediately as well as the priest from Savoie (Louis Janet; he died on April 15, 1891) who is with you in the novitiate. I absolutely need another curate who can look after the sick, hear confessions, teach the catechism, since otherwise I shall be succumbing to all the pressures of work.

Since the Tilburg novitiate is not large, could you not bring about some arrangement whereby one can make use of Fr. Blanchet and have him sent to me to work here in the parish. This is urgent, as you can see for yourself. When you come to Issoudun do not forget to bring with you, you and the others from Tilburg and Antwerp, all the things which belong to Issoudun, mats, ornaments, albs, etc., etc., or sacred vessels.

I have received your kind letter and I can understand somewhat your feeling pained, as well as your comments; but believe me, Father, it wasn't possible for us to do any better. You are as much aware as ourselves of our shortage of members and we have been forced to have a little surcharge relative to the members of each house. But the good Lord who sees our dilemma will come to our help and yours, my friend.

Fr. Klotz with his intelligence and his abilities will soon be Dutch enough to help you, and then, Father, your own activism will do the rest. The house, having less people in residence, will mean there will be a little less work than hitherto. It will in a short while become more populated again since it is one of our houses which would appear to have the brightest of futures. But by then, I hope, we shall as before be able to help you out. Courage, then, my friend, and lay great store by Providence. I shall, in any event, pray especially at Mass for your house.

Please receive, Father, my warm regards in C.J.

Look after your health...

Check your enthusiasm... Do not needlessly expose yourself to danger or to extreme exhaustion. I am sending you two missionaries. Fr. Hubert whom you know; he is a pious boy, obedient, zealous, but very childlike and without much judgment. Look after him and guide him along as if he were only a 3-year-old. The other one, Fr. Janet de la Savoie, is an excellent religious who will be of great help to you. Then there are 2 lay brothers (likely Joseph Moorees and Gabriel Weryken) who are very pious and with whom you will be very pleased. I gave them 10,000 francs for your mission which I asked for from good, willing, people, on your behalf. I hope to receive in December a contribution from the Propagation of the Faith as its allocation for 1891, which I shall send you straightaway.

Issoudun, November 8, 1890

Dear Fr. François,

Thank you for your kind letter. I am pleased to hear that Fr. Perriot and Brother Hubert have safely arrived and that all goes well in Quito. I hope that from now on there will be peace, unity, agreement, charity and good example among yourselves. Yes! May your double community always provide an example of regularity, and the very best-run religious life! I had hoped that there would be only one community there, with those working on the construction of the basilica going there in the morning and after the mid-day meal; returning to sleep at Sagrario. If I had known, however, from the beginning, when the Archbishop first suggested this undertaking, that there should be two communities, I would not have accepted, given the impossible situation we find ourselves in, having to provide double personnel. And, besides, there was never any question of providing chaplains for the good brothers of the Christian Schools (De La Salle). We only went to Quito for Sagrario and the basilica which is being built nearby, as has been stated, and in order to set up our own undertakings.

The big mistake then is that we have too quickly scattered our forces, something which has damaged our religious life, and as such the source of all our problems in Quito. Let this be an important lesson for the future! Try, then, to concentrate so that the religious life be given witness among the rest of you as perfectly as possible. Present yourselves before the laity as a focus of great edification, and see to it that your confrères are prudent, do not compromise themselves and always live as good religious. I very much hope that the Basilica's Committee will meet the costs of Fr. Perriot's and Brother Hubert's journey, that's to say, 3,000 francs (about 9,930 euros) or so for both. You will let me have this money. I forewarn from now on that I shall send no-one, either to Sagrario or the basilica, if the money needed for the journey is not sent to me in advance. The Quito house owes the mother house at least some twenty thousand francs (about 66,220 euros) for all the expenses it has occasioned. When are you going to start paying back this debt?

Cheerio, Father. My regards to Fr. Barral (the recipient's brother), to Fathers Bouvier, Gressin, Perriot, without forgetting our dear lay brothers.

Dear Fr. Jouët,

I would like to think that you are back in Rome. I hasten to forward a letter to you which I received from the Superior of the Saint Quentin Fathers. I replied to him stating that the behaviour of his confrères in Belgium and Holland was not right and that all the problems began with them. I advised him to go back to their original title, Oblates of the Sacred Heart. I strongly protested against the name which was identified with you in Quito (original difficult to decipher here). I intimated to him that I would forward to you his letter and you would send a reply to him.

Is Bishop Couppé in Rome? Madame de Bonneval has been asking me if he will be returning to Issoudun for December 8, as she would like to organize a big display by Paris artists on that day for the promotion of our missions. But she wants to make sure that the Bishop will be there.

Cheerio, Father.
Wholly yours in C.J.

Send Fr. Dehon's letter to Fr. Reyn who will see the Saint Quentins priests' 'good faith'. It's the story of the wolf and the lamb.

1. Yes, put forward the name of Fr. Bontemps as Prefect Apostolic.
2. Yes, write a cheque for 200 francs (about 660 euros) in favour of Mr. Amati, and stop the Latin publication of the book on Our Lady of the Sacred Heart.
3. Hurry up with the approval of the Constitutions, and the Averbode issue.
4. Here's another letter from the Saint Quentin Superior. These people are impossibly confrontational!
5. I shall have inserted in the issues of the Annals your left-over articles and that about the departure of our four confrères from Marseilles.
6. I am sending on Brother Kuntz's letter to Strasbourg.
7. As regards the German and English parts of our missions, get in touch with Propaganda.
8. I have already replied to Fr. Roussel, who wrote exactly the same to both of us, asking him to get in touch with Fr. Morisseau to provide me with a report about (the Lima issue?, uncertain text) which I shall submit to the Council Fathers.

Extend my warmest regards to Bishop Couppé.

Issoudun, November 23, 1890

Dear Father,

I have read through the Consultor's report where there are observations which are very appropriate and which I accept most willingly in order to obtain the definitive approval, something I regard as absolutely essential at the present time.

I

1. It is requested that a distinction be made between Rules and Constitutions, which is very understandable. The Constitutions, alone, are prescriptive, the Rules simply directive. That indeed is our thinking on this whole issue.
2. What the Consultor has to say about the overseeing of parishes and seminaries is quite right. The changes he suggests in his appendix and the additional observations he makes do not seem necessary to me. I do not believe, in effect, given what he says, that we require a special Indult from the Holy See to look after the parishes of Watertown, Glastonbury, or Burnham (-on-Sea, Somerset, see Twohig, Late But Not Too Late; Glastonbury), Quito, Randwick, Botany Bay, Thursday..., except that Thursday is not a parish, being a mission area under the jurisdiction of Bishop Navarre. You must, then, ask for a sanatorium (Chevalier wrongly wrote 'sanatorium'; he meant 'sanatio', making legal what was not so) to bring this about, as well as an Indult for the future.
3. It is easy to erase that part of the Constitutions where it is stated that the electors at the Chapter should write their names in the margin of their ballot papers, on being made aware that it is not in keeping with the sacred canons. But I came across this procedure in other Constitutions.

4. One can also change that which is said about the chapter on faults. I only added here what I saw being done elsewhere.

5. Yes, most certainly, one may add that we owe obedience to those bishops in whose dioceses we have houses; it's something one forgot to mention.

II

1. If it is considered that the support given by the Assistants, the local Superiors and their Council, and the senior members of the Society, is not adequate, this issue may be brought to the Chapter. I believe that all the members will be of this persuasion since all who have been consulted about this issue, and are in favour, will be, for the greater part, called to the Chapter. Acceptance seems definite to me. Why will the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Religious not go along with it? It seems to me that the reasons I put forward are peremptory. The Superior General must be there for life, something I deem absolutely necessary. Obtain an affirmative reply on this issue; insist on it; it is of paramount importance.

2. I wholeheartedly accept that the novitiate be of one year duration everywhere, something which has held since our foundation. The scholasticate will be like a continuation of the novitiate for our young members. This will, in effect, be comparatively easy to put into effect.

3. As regards a third year, everybody is so persuaded. One may, if one wishes, refer it to the Chapter, but all the members will vote for it...

Should I return this copy of the Consultor's observations to you? It is unacceptable that diocesan bishops where we have houses should be made arbiters of the changes being introduced to our Constitutions. This would be calamitous and have a deplorable impact; you must prevent this happening at any cost. If the Congregation itself doesn't want to lay things down according to the thrust of the letter I have written to you (since on reflection, one novitiate year is enough), it would be a hundred times better to bring the Chapter together for deliberation on these 3 changes. It would be more simple and rational.

I asked Fr. Védère to change nothing and leave things as they were while you were away, reserving to myself the right to speak to you about anything. Now will you let me know how you would like things to be organized in relation to our Rules? You need a bursar. I think that Fr. Védère who has filled this post would be suitable. I don't see anyone else. Is this your view? A head of the Petite Oeuvre is needed. But who? A director of the scholasticate is also needed. Again, but who? A director of the Annals' office is also required, who? One needs a serious man to be sacristan. Who?

In keeping with the Regulations, you should necessarily have a Council. I can only see Fathers Védère and Benedetti who could fit the part with you. Get them together, in keeping with the Regulations, in order to make the effort, and let the issues be taken seriously. Choose a secretary who will take note of the decisions. See to it, my friend, that the Rules are well observed and the exercises of piety carried out with regularity. Do not tire yourself out to excess; take carriages when you think it the proper thing to do. It's you, and not the bursar, who best judges the situation. I appeal to you to look after your health, and don't be in any way careless about this.

Yes, let me have an account of your audience and I shall have it placed in our Annals. Next month you should treat at length about (the late) Fr. Moncorget and the Marseilles ceremony.

Fr. Ramot has written to me saying that your Issoudun letter has confused him, and if he doesn't succeed in establishing a foundation in New Jersey we shall be discredited. He is looking for two Italian priests to accompany him. I have nobody to send him and neither, so I believe, have you. Fr. Ramot is under the impression that I have a whole legion of missionaries to hand when I have no one at all.

Cheerio, Father. Our best wishes to Bishop Couppé. Cheerio, wholly yours in C.J.

Dear Father François,

It is absolutely imperative that the basilica committee pay Fr. Perriot's and Brother Hubert's travel expenses; it's only just and fair. And from now I shall no longer send anybody to Quito either to your house or to the basilica without having in advance the funds needed for the journey sent on to me. It's 1,500 francs (about 4,963 euros) for each one. I am sorry that you are so financially put upon! One might say that the devil is let loose against this Ecuador mission. Some become wayward; others either die or fall sick. No house more than that of Quito has claimed so many people.

For quite some time I have not been able to send you anybody because all our houses are looking for someone and I have nobody available. I say once more to you: if you are not able to cope for yourselves at Sagrario, leave, give up the Brothers' chaplaincy, because for us the parish must come before everything else. We didn't go to Quito to become chaplains to the good brothers! I am pleased to know that the work goes well despite your lack of funds. Meanwhile make the most of your strengths and concentrate on the parish.

Issoudun, December 1, 1890

Dear Father,

In face of the new problems which are springing up, I think it would be best to keep to the old Constitutions, since otherwise we shall never be able to move forward. We shall submit in writing the request for a life-long Superior (General) if the Chapter so approves, about which I have no doubt, and we shall accept what the Sacred Congregation will decide.

We shall do the same about the year's study for those priests who need to refresh themselves in peace and quiet, having spent several years in ministry. If this second addition to the Constitutions experiences any difficulty, we shall wholeheartedly make the sacrifice. Is it even necessary to put it in our Constitutions? Could not a General, deeming it appropriate, introduce it? At first hand I should think so. Ask for advice about this. The only new addition is that about the Superior General being elected for life, something which seems essential to me, a necessity for the reasons I have given above. You know the confrères as well as I do. You will let me have, then, the names of the Superiors I could call to the Chapter. Yes, indeed, get the official reply as soon as possible from the Sacred Congregation about the composition of the next Chapter. Time is short so hurry up with this and we shall be freed of serious concern. I await your reply.

In asking you who you think might be suitable for the Petite Oeuvre, the scholasticate, the sacristy, etc. In no way whatsoever was I thinking of sending you new priests whom we haven't got, but rather to ascertain your views on those personnel available to you (in Rome) who might be considered for these posts. Like yourself I understand that there should not be new factors at work involving your community so that the problems which arose before can be avoided.

If you can do without Brother Giovanelli when he becomes a priest you might suggest him to Fr. Ramot so that he could begin work at Hammonton (New Jersey, USA).

Cheerio, my friend.
All good wishes in C.J.

Issoudun, December 3, 1890

Dear Father,

I have just received your letter and I am greatly taken aback by it.

1. Fr. Maillard, when replying to Fr. Védère looking for print negatives for your Annals, slid, so it seems, into his letter another letter concerning the German brother in order to avoid postage. How improper this is since you are the one to whom letters must be handed and then looked at by you before being sent, unless they are being sent to, and received from, major Superiors. Fr. Maillard assures me, however, and I believe him, that he had no ulterior motive, but I do blame him for his failure to show me his letter. That's all. He also informed me that being at catechism he could not show me a letter which he was sending to Fr. Védère asking him to have his faculties for granting indulgences renewed. In this respect, might it not be possible to get on behalf of the Superior General, either for 5 years or for 10 years or more, the requisite powers (faculties) so that he may then share them with his confrères who might need them? If one needs to have recourse to Rome on every occasion, it becomes a considerable expense. These faculties are granted to all Superior Generals; the Jesuits, the Redemptorists, the Marists, the Oblates (OMI), etc. Try then to get them for me also.

2. You are aware, my friend, that the new Regulations, which we faithfully put to the test until the next Chapter, call for an annual Visitation of our houses. And it has already been very helpful for a number of our houses. Fr. Guyot, who was appointed for this work, has already taken up his office, beginning with Tilburg, going from there to Antwerp, with Paris to follow. Then he will go on to Spain and, afterwards, to Rome. Your house can only benefit from this Visitation. My friend, in all its ramifications, read the article about the Visitor in the new Constitutions, page 95, and with regard to the new particular Regulation, page 45, and you will become aware of that to which you are obliged. Since you are Assistant General, Father, and older than Fr. Guyot, I shall tell him to leave you the leadership role in your community's common exercises. You should reach an understanding with him; he is not going to Rome to cause you unease, certainly not!, but rather to find out, with your co-operation, if everything is done in keeping with the Rules.

What issues will crop up, do you think, due to Fr. Guyot's presence in the house while you are there with him? Let me have your views and concerns and I shall give instructions, in so keeping, to the Visitor. When he is with you, share your thoughts with him and get along with him as if you were two friends, two brothers engaged in the same enterprise and wishing each other well.

You pain me greatly, dear friend, when you say that I abandon, give up on, you, whereas, on the contrary, it is I who supports you, justifies what you do, always comes to your defence in every respect. It's I who on all occasions praises the zeal, in the face of every problem, you have without limit for the Society, your commitment going as far as being heroic, etc. I look upon you as my other self, and one in whom I can confide with the utmost assurance. I do not withhold anything from you, and I confide in you my concerns, my hopes, my most secret thoughts. Oh! I would ask you never to doubt me. And, henceforth, do not worry about things which are not there at all, or are not against, aimed at, you.

Cheerio, Father.

Concerning a letter from His Grace Joseph Marchal, Archbishop of Bourges.

The Archbishop offers to take our young religious into the Archdiocesan Major Seminary. He is not in favour of their being expatriated.

Bourges, December 7, 1890

Dear Father,

We have a certain number of students at Saint Célestin and Saint Gauthier who will be part of the next selective process, and I think that we shall arrange that they enter the Major Seminary so that we can assess their appropriateness to be there. This requirement would appear to follow from the certificate requirements of the ministry. If you would like it so, we could do things in the same way with your young men, as it seems to me that in the first instance it would be better not to have them expatriated, and there is less inconvenience involved when they are called up for a year in the army before vows or subdiaconate. And since you happen to be the parish priest of Issoudun, it will be easy to get a certain number released (from military service) by being curates or chaplains.

What I have been saying is relevant to those of your students who are 19 years old, and for whom there is no time left to go abroad. For the others, that is to say the younger ones, I do not know the issue well enough to offer an opinion. All I can say is that expatriation is of itself a very serious matter which might create for you an equivocal set of circumstances, or create problems abroad for you, particularly so when you may experience the activities (intrigues) of the French Government.

Council Meeting, December 18, 1890

In attendance: Very Rev. Fr. Superior General; Fathers Piperon, Guyot, Jouët, Delaporte, Assistants.

Following the customary prayers, Fr. General made known to the Council the reasons for this special meeting.

The Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, having by letter dated... 1890, asked Fr. Chevalier to decide, together with the Chapter, between the new and old Constitutions, he has called his Council to make a choice, effectively, of six members from Superiors exercising office or not, who will, in accordance with the Constitutions (chapter 10, article 11, p.41; article IV,1,p52), take part in the General Chapter with the Assistants and those other members there by right.

After the customary prayers, each Council member wrote and placed in the urn his choice, and the two scrutineers appointed for this purpose, Fathers Victor Jouët and Jean-Baptiste Guyot, gathered the votes which were then collected and announced by the Council's Secretary, Fr. Piperon. His Lordship Bishop Couppé was unanimously nominated, together with Fr. Tréand, Superior of the Glastonbury house, and also Fr. Léopold Hartzler, Superior at Salzburg, Fr. Reyn, Superior at Antwerp, both of whom received four votes. Fr. Ramot, Superior at Watertown in the USA, and Fr. Klotz, Superior at Tilburg, each received three votes.

Having discussed different issues concerning the Congregation, the meeting ended.

Homily on the occasion of the General Chapter.

Undated, possibly early January, 1891. So former archivist, Paul Brennan, MSC, Australian.

"Ubi enim sunt duo vel tres congregati in nomine meo, ibi sum in medio eorum" (Matt. 18,20).

My Dear Fathers,

If these words of Our Lord find their application among the faithful, in keeping with the interpretation of the Holy Fathers, we need with good reason to appropriate them to ourselves in the serious set of circumstances which brings us together at this time. It is in the name of the Holy See, that is to say of God Himself, that we are here gathered. And since the aim we set ourselves is of the utmost importance, namely that of placing the structures of our little Society on solid and lasting foundations, in order to meet the challenges of the future, we need Jesus Christ in his supportive grace to be found in our midst to help us to be enlightened, His spirit consolidating the closest unity among us, as well as the most intimate and supportive love.

Do not forget that the future of our Congregation greatly depends on this Chapter, as something so favoured from heaven and by the Heart of Jesus. You as well as I know that it is not a human endeavour. You are aware of its beginnings, and the marvellous set of circumstances which occasioned it. It comes entirely from the wish of Mary, the adorable Heart of Jesus, source of every blessing. This is what sustained our courage in the midst of infernal assaults and a thousand difficulties with which we had to contend. God Himself only knows their number and extent. Here also, in consequence, is the basis for our limitless confidence.

Yes, Reverend Fathers, I repeat it: heaven loves our little Society; the many, unexpected, blessings which have not ceased being showered on it, despite our unworthiness, are a transparent witness. It was scarcely approved of by Rome when it became the focus (in France) of persecution, when what was due to a demonic impulse and should have led to its ruin became a source of fresh blessings. Then, my dear Fathers, is it not from this humble Society there came the wonderful devotion, that of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, which has led to so much good in the world, has worked so many wonders, and which the Church has approved of through its infallible authority?

Divine Providence has, then, confided to us a work of capital importance. We are only of yesterday, and already we are making the Gospel's light shine in the most remote continents and among the most primitive of peoples. Apostolic zeal has been lit among us from the breath of the Sacred Heart, and I must in all justice declare that each of us is inspired by the spirit of the most heroic sacrifice and the most committed devotedness.

It is a call to fraternity, understanding, peace and charity.

Council Meeting, January 7, 1898

Present: Father General; Fathers Piperon, Guyot, Jou  t, Delaporte; Assistants: Frs. Morisseau, Secretary General, and Maillard, General Bursar.

Procedures as regards the Chapter.

The Council engaged itself with the preliminaries for the General Chapter due to open next day. It was decided that in accordance with the Constitutions, which are binding on us in this respect, the Chapter would come together, following a preliminary Eucharist and the Veni Creator. It would begin with the election of two secretaries, three scrutineers and four adjudicators whose role would be that of making decisions about any irregularities noted during the Chapter procedures. There followed the announcement of the different official notices relative to:

1. The authority of the Superior General extended by Pontifical Indult;
2. The purpose of the General Chapter as made known through a letter from the secretary of the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars;
3. The choice of elected members as designated in line 1 of number 7, chapter X of the aforementioned Constitutions.

Some elected members, to whom a consultative voice was given at the beginning of the Council, complained about the election of Bishop Coupp   as a delegate under the pretext that his rank withdrew him from the authority of the Superior

General and the Chapter, and he should, therefore, be excluded from these deliberations. This proposal, however, is no more than that, and does not have in its support any formal legal text, while, for the rest, it is incorrect that a religious, or congregation, bishop is absolutely withdrawn from the authority of his Superiors, as one sees in the case of Bonix. He (a bishop) is not relieved of his religious obligations except insofar as they are incompatible with the duties and dignity of his episcopal office.

There followed a discussion about procedure which would have to be presented to the whole gathering for acceptance. It would relate 1, to the introductions, 2, the order of the sessions, 3, the ending (date) of the Chapter.

I. Preliminaries

1. The Chapter opened, as has been mentioned, with the Eucharist at 8am, followed by the Veni Creator, and a prayer to the Holy Spirit.

2. At the end of Mass all the Chapter members proceeded to the room designated for the meeting where the President spoke with relevance to the occasion.

3. Then, in keeping with line 8, article 11, the above-mentioned two secretaries, the three scrutineers, the four judges, were made known.

4. A reading of the issues mentioned above took place.

5. The proposed plan for the Chapter was then submitted.

6. Then the Chapter proceeded to elect three commissions or groups with responsibility for submitting issues for the assembly's consideration, the first being that which was pertinent to worship of the Sacred Heart, religious discipline, and the missions; the second being that of the Society's government; and then the third comprising whatever was relevant for consideration, as well as the different ministries and involvements. These groupings would be made up of four members who would be elected by secret ballot. As there are 12 Chapter members, once the first two groupings are elected, the remaining four members would form the third group. The president, since he is part of no particular group, may freely join any group as he thinks fit.

7. The Congregation's sessions will last from 9am to 11.30am so that the particular examination of conscience can take place, and in the afternoon from 3pm to 5.30pm.

8. At the first session each group elects its president and secretary, at which the oldest by profession will preside and, in the event of a tie in votes, it is he who will be elected.

9. Any proposal not included in the agreed programme, and which certain individuals might wish to submit to the Chapter, should, on being committed to writing, be presented to one of the presidents of the particular groups who, with the other three, will make up a fourth group to examine proposals of this kind and, following which, they will be submitted to a competent group who, if they consider it opportune, will bring it to the Chapter's notice. In the event that, contrary to the commission's opinion, someone continues to insist on bringing a proposal to the Chapter, the matter will be referred to the Chapter's deliberations.

10. The particular groupings will follow in their deliberations the procedures commonly agreed on.

11. As regards all this work, as well as the general discussions at the meeting, everybody will keep in mind that there is an obligation to strictest secrecy binding in conscience with regard to whomsoever is not a Chapter member.

II. The sequence of sessions.

1. Each meeting of the groups, as well as the General Chapter, will begin with the Veni Sancti Spiritus, and end with the Sub Tuum, with the customary invocations.

2. After the Veni Sancti, the session opens with a verbal presentation of the previous session, concerning which each one is entitled to make his observations.

3. There follows a discussion about the issues arising during the day; however, nobody at the main sessions will speak without first having had permission from the president who may have him withdrawing when he deems it necessary.

4. When an issue arising from the order of the day does not appear to be adequately dealt with, it may at the request of three members be sent back to the relevant commission to be freshly examined and submitted to the Chapter.

5. All decisions are taken by majority voting, and in a situation where there is a tie the president's vote will prevail.

6. Where there are more important issues to be considered, a second round of votes will take place if three members ask for it.
